CARS WITHOUT A TAX

The new numbers of license plates of cars touring the great highways of the country show that there have been tremendous purchases of automobiles since the tax was lifted by Congress. Evidently lots of people who wanted automobiles held off until the Federal tax bill was passed. This patience netted each automobile buyer from $25 to $125.

ABILENE, Texas, June 20.—
Simmons Cowgirls have decided to visit the Leuders Baptist Encamp-

The directors believe that the greatest good the encampment can do is to teach church leaders to perfect the organization of the respective churches that they will be materially bettered.

Children's Day Dreams May Have Injurious Effect

Authorities on health matters and children's hygiene are not inclined to pass over lightly and dismiss the subject of children's day dreams. Most parents have marveled at the vivid imaginations of their children. A physician tells of an experience with a four-year old youngster who insisted that her grandmother was dead, and then philosophized optimistically in order to lessen the sting of the family sorrow. There are thousands of such strange cases every day.

This physician believes that fabrications of children in the shape of day dreams should be carefully checked up by parents.
"It is neither necessary nor desirable to make the child admit the lack of reality in his dreams," he says, but he thinks that it is a good plan to let the child know that the parents do not believe that the child is recounting actual conditions. It will be helpful to the child if it is impressed upon him that the day dreams are considered an interesting story which amuses you," but which at the same time the child is made to know are not accepted as the truth.

Healthy exercise for the child's mind is desirable and the physician calls attention to the helpfulness furnished by the great variety of new toys that are made in cellulose products, which are light, strong and entertaining to the child, and increase the spirit of play.

S. V. P. ARTIST-PUPIL MEETS REAL APPRECIATION The community clubhouse music and assembly hall was filled to the limit Monday night on the occasion of the presentation of his artist-pupil, Miss Bernice Johnston, by Grover C. Morris of Cisco, in a varied piano program of both difficult and naive compositions. The program as published in the Eastland Telegram, was given in full. Although Miss Johnston received hearty encores, on several appearances, she did not respond, owing to the many numbers given. The background of music hall was charmingly supplied by many bouquets of roses. A border of ferns completed the break from the grand piano to the sides, making a pretty reservation for the young artist, delightfully arresting in an evening frock in rose shades. The difficult program was memorized, and the work of Miss Johnston shows sympathetic insight as well as wonderful technique.

TWO WRESTLING MATCHES THRILL A BIG AUDIENCE

Edwards and Cook Struggle To Tie, Leon Gets Two Falls From Chastain.

Bert Willoughby and Jimmie McLemore of Dallas held their second match at the Elks Arena at Eastland last night and the fans were certainly thrilled and surprised at the appearance of Bobby Edwards and Bernard Cook in a one fall or twenty-minute time limit bout. Bobby Edwards is one of the top notch welterweights of the world and Monday night at Dallas had wrestled the champion of the world, Jack Reynolds, to a finish match and the match was so close that the promoter held up Reynolds' end of the purse, pending an investigation of the methods used by the champion, Edwards, who is the leading contender for Reynolds' crown, had wrestled the champion off his feet and with over 25 headlocks had him out and over the first fall in one hour and 2 minutes. Reynolds, it was claimed, greased his head during the next two falls and made it practically impossible for Edwards to use the headlock. If Edwards is successful in his claim he may be the real champion of this division and at any odds he is the leading contender. It was a real treat, therefore, for the fans to see Edwards and Bernard Cook battle and when the time was up and referee Hinton called the match the men were so even that the fans were on their feet calling for just a few minutes more. The match was undoubtedly the most sensational match ever held in Eastland and the fans hope to see these two men battle it out to a finish. Edwards demands a finish match with Cook and these two men will undoubtedly be matched for a finish either here or Waco or Beaumont or Houston or Dallas. Willoughby and McLemore have offers from other places with big purses for matches of this calibre and it is not definite as yet if these two men will be matched or where, but since Bert Willoughby and Jimmie McLemore have known Ted Hinton for Breckenridge for over fifteen years and also because of the loyal support the Elks at Eastland give to clean sports of all kinds as well as wrestling, the promoters believe Eastland should have the first shot at this match if the boys can be signed. The last match was a finish bout between Kid Leon and Joe Chastain. Chastain won the first fall with a series of body slams and headlocks in 4 minutes and 30 seconds. Leon came back and fought furiously against Chastain's wicked headlocks and vicious body slams, and was able to slip under Chastain and, with a mighty effort, raise him high above his head, whirl and slam him to the floor, winning the second fall. This bout lasted 12 minutes and 10 seconds. Chastain came back with all his power and was able to get in his headlocks and body slams to good effect and had Leon almost out and Leon was knocked to his knees with a double arm drag. At the same time Leon dived for Chastain's feet and quick as a flash clamped on his famous double Japanese toe hold which won the third fall and the match. It was a tough and wonderful bout and had every one of the fans on their feet at the finish.

RADIO TO PLAY LARGE PART IN "ROMA" FLIGHT

Essential to Flight.

In a recent newspaper statement Major J. C. Fitzmaurice, co-pilot of the Bremen, which made the first east to west trans-Atlantic flight, said: "We consider wireless absolutely essential for all future undertakings of this nature." That the Bremen carried no wireless "was the one weak point in the organization of the flight. "As we now realize," Major Fitzmaurice's statement continues, "had we had a wireless set on board, upon our estimated arrival in the neighborhood of Newfoundland we could have given almost our exact position by direction finding stations along the coast, have been informed of the precise direction and velocity of the wind over the sea, and would have made New York easily with our objective accomplished."

It has been estimated that if a pilot flying at a height of 10,000 feet found it necessary to make a forced landing, he could, by capable management, maneuver his plane so that it would be fully 20 minutes before it reached the surface of the water. When it is considered that the full 20 minutes be utilized in sending out radio calls for assistance some idea of the value of radio in such an undertaking may be had. Vessels carrying a radio compass and intercepting these messages could determine the position of the disabled plane if no position had been given, relay the appeal to other ships and speed to the rescue.

have to be hoisted up and set on its struts and after the few necessary repairs had been made it would be as good as over. He shut off the gas as the plane touched the ground, so no fire resulted. "I have flown over a large part of the country from the Pacific coast to the east and this is the first accident I have ever been in," said Mr. Jones. "I am glad it is no worse. Had there been a landing port in Eastland it would not have happened."

Mrs. Hudson appeared calm and composed as she told her story while seated on one of the cushions taken from the plane. "I did not enjoy the flight as much as I would had I not dreamed last night that the plane would crash," she said. "I was nervous all the time even since we left Fort Worth this morning. In my dream I saw a crash as we landed, but the dream was much worse than the reality, so I suppose I should be thankful that it did not come so true as it appeared."

Two hours after the plane had turned turtle it had been lifted by a wrecker and placed again on its struts, and workmen were going over repairing what damage had been done and searching out other possible injuries.

CHAPTER XIV

Virginia wheeled in a flash and stared at Dean as though he had aimed an arrow at her head. He stood, hands in pockets, and returned her wordless gaze with an air of victory that tortured her.

"What do you mean?" she man aged finally to gasp from lips grown lifeless.

Dean motioned her to a chair. "Sit down," he directed with a quiet note of command in his voice. Virginia found herself re-luctantly obeying him. Her need for support was imperative. Reac-tion from the shock of his thun-derbolt was turning her body to fluid, it seemed to her.

From the depths of the Sleepy Hollow chair she continued to stare at him, gripped with fear of a nameless evil.

"If you weren't such a roman-tic little fool I could have spared you this," Dean snapped im-patiently, turning away from her stricken expression. Virginia did not answer him. She could not. Her throat was constricted until she felt she would choke if she could not soon draw a free breath.

Dean waited. "You remember, do you not," he said at last, "that your father's lawyer told you he could not account for the money that was raised on your Glen Cove estate?"

Virginia nodded.

"Well, I can tell you what be-came of it," he went on, talking fast. "Your father lost it in a bootlegging deal."

At this amazing statement some thing seemed to break through the thralldom in which Virginia was held. "That's not true!" she exclaimed fervently. "My father wouldn't have had anything to do with bootlegging."

Dean smiled wryly. "Bootlegging is not so bad, my dear," he said pleasantly. "In fact, it's a thrilling business. I know, because I was in it with your father—at his invitation. I might add."

"Do you expect me to believe that?" Virginia challenged.

"I shall prove it to you. But it isn't merely to tell you that your father engaged in a rum-running venture that I asked you to listen to me."

Virginia pulled herself erect in the big chair. "If you intend hold-ing such a ridiculous charge as that over my head to make me listen to your insinuating proposals you are making a mistake," she stormed hotly. "No one would believe you any more than I do."

"I do not imagine we will have occasion to test the faith of the world at large," Dean remarked soberly. "I expect your loyalty to your father to save his memory from slander."

Virginia's lips curled in con-tempt. "Say what you like, Fa-ther's friends will never believe you."

"That is not the point, I, my-self, should not care to advertise my little adventure to the public, but the fact that your father cheated me is another matter."

"Oh," Virginia cried, sharply, "how can you say such a thing about the man who was your closest friend?"

"Because it happens to be true; and the fact that he was, as you say, my closest friend, is what makes it all the more bitter to me."

Virginia made a move to get out of the chair. "I won't listen to you any longer," she declared through trembling lips.

"In that case I shall have to admit that I've underestimated your loyalty," Dean assured her. "I thought you would prefer to clear your father's name. You can do that by consenting to become my wife," he added abruptly.

"But I don't believe what you say; you're just trying to trap me!"

Dean turned to his desk. "Wait!" he said curtly, and opened a drawer from which he quickly drew out two envelopes. One he handed to Virginia.

"Open it," he directed shortly. She drew a folded sheet from the envelope and spread it open. The handwriting was her father's. "Read it," he ordered.

Virginia wet her lips with the tip of her tongue and began to read:

"Dear Frederick:

The failure of our first venture in B. L. was an overwhelming blow up to me but I shall not give up. As you know, I raised the bet-ter part of one hundred thou-sand dollars on my property at Glen Cove. It was the only un-encumbered real estate that re-mained to me. I do not know where to raise another such sum immediately, but if you will give me time I will try to get the money for you.

Sincerely yours,
Richard Brewster."

When she came to her father's signature Virginia bent her head low over the paper and sobbed softly.

"Does that satisfy you that I've told the truth?" Dean demanded unsympathetically.

Virginia raised her head. And behind the tears that brimmed in her eyes, the man saw that there was still a fighting spirit shining there. It irritated him excessive-ly, almost to anger.

"It only proves one thing," she said slowly. "That father was in some kind of business with you. But it doesn't prove that he cheat-ed you in any way."

"Perhaps this will help to con-vince you," Dean flashed back and proffered her the second en-velope. Virginia took it mechan-ically. It was nothing more than a simple agreement between Dean and her father to the effect that each was contributing $100,000 to an unnamed enterprise.

"In the first place," Dean be-gan when Virginia finished read-ing the paper, "doesn't it occur to you that the business wouldn't be 'unnamed' if it were legiti-mate?" He paused for an answer but Virginia remained silent.

"And why, when we had en-tered into this venture fifty-fifty should your father be willing to return my hundred thousand? Why, if not because he had trick-ed me and been found out?"

"You lie! Oh, you lie!" Virginia cried frenziedly.

"You know I'm telling the truth," Frederick Dean returned with steady emphasis. "But would it matter if you didn't? Would it change the facts at all, if you persist in your blindness?"

"I can never believe that fa-ther deliberately tricked or cheat-ed anyone."

He shrugged. "As you wish," he said coolly, "but it is still true, nevertheless, and you are giving up the one chance to make good for him. He wanted to do it him-self. Can't you see that in his letter? He asked for time, but he knew he couldn't raise the money."

Through Virginia's mind shot a perplexing question, one that strengthened her faith. "But if father cheated you why didn't he have the money to pay you back when you found it out?" she asked cunningly.

"A very bright idea, my dear, but not so confounding as you think. He hadn't the money for the simple reason that he himself was double-crossed after he had double-crossed me. It goes that way in B. L." He flipped his hand in a negligent motion and smiled. "It was rather a joke on Richard, an expensive one. He informed me that he'd been hi-jacked and so he was, later. I got in touch with his lieutenant and found out for myself, because I don't allow any man to owe $100,000 for me with-out looking into it."

His voice was hard as steel now and Virginia felt the first pang of genuine doubt creeping into her heart. But she fought on.

"He was ready to try again," she said. "Would he have wanted to do that if he had been—hi-jacked?"

"Richard would, yes. He was always a fool about money. You can see for yourself in his letter that he admits failure and still expresses his willingness to take another chance. All his life he'd been wrecking the Brewster for-tune because he didn't know how to handle it. And at last he was driven desperate to keep up ap-pearances. His doctor and his lawyer both advised him to put on the brakes, but he hadn't the faintest idea of how to do it."

A tortured cry rose in Virgin-ia's throat but she stifled it, de-termined not to show her fear and grief to his detractor.

"But I can say that I believe he wanted to return my money," Dean went on, his tones a little less sharp. "Perhaps he would have done it, too, if he had lived. And I dare say he never would have taken advantage of a friend if he hadn't been fighting with his back to the wall. Adversity is a great leveler of character, you know. But your refusal to ac-knowledge the debt is a greater sur-prise to me, Virginia, than your father's dishonesty."

"He wasn't dishonest! No mat-ter what you say I know my fa-ther never cheated you. But if you believe it, if you want your pound of flesh, you shall have it!" she was on her feet now, hands clenched at her side and her whole body trembling with emotion.

For an instant Dean's gaze wav-ered under the lash of her scorn, but only for an instant. Then he was coolly assuring her of his whole-hearted desire for the last ounce of the proverbial pound.

"And you must change your mind about leaving the house," he added. "We will arrange to be married quietly in a few weeks and slip away to the Mediterran-ean for our honeymoon."

"Married!" Virginia cried. "Mar-ried! I'd rather die!"

Dean's face darkened instantly. "How then, may I ask," he said frigidly, "do you propose to pay the debt?"

We are wondering if Mrs. Levine is one to be asking Pilot Levine where he has been when he comes home late for dinner. Of course, he always might answer, "Oh, up in Mabel's plane."

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men

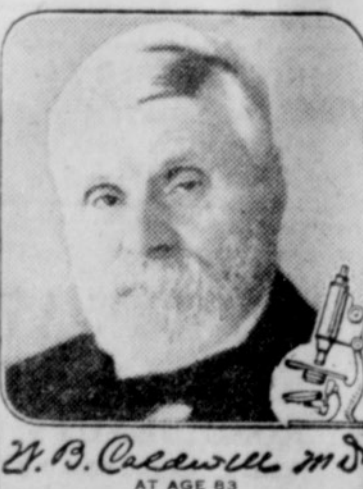

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with psyllium. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly

J. C. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 93

people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. It is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home—where many live, someone is sure to need it quickly. We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

Texas-Pacific Coal and Oil Company Enters a Ryan Brougham In Fourth National Air Tour of American Cities

West Texas will be represented in the Fourth National Air Tour leaving Detroit June 30 by The Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Company, of Fort Worth, who will enter the Ryan Brougham which they recently purchased for use in selling TP Aero Motor Lubricating Oil, according to F. D. Bostaph, an official of the company.

Sister ship to Lindbergh's famous Spirit of St. Louis, the Mahoney Aircraft Corporation have announced that this plane will have the distinction of being the only Ryan Brougham entered in the tour. It will represent the Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Company and the Mahoney Aircraft Corporation, of San Diego, California, with George B. Fredell, manager of aero oil sales for the Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Company in charge. Al Henley will pilot the ship with V. N. Johns relieving him.

Making the trip in 12 hours and 34 minutes flying time, the plane arrived in Fort Worth from San Diego last week. Before taking off for Detroit, where the fifty entries in the tour will assemble, the ship will make short flights into Texas and Oklahoma. Thirty of the principal cities of America will be touched in the thirty days allotted for the tour, covering approximately 6,000 miles. Texas is one of the two states that will be host to the fleet for three days when the plane reaches Fort Worth on July 6, leaving July 8, according to present schedule. Spokane, Washington will be the only other city on the itinerary where the fleet will stop for as many as three days, all other cities being visited no longer than one to two days. After leaving Fort Worth, the fleet will move on to Waco and San Antonio.

The Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Company's Ryan Brougham is credited with being one of the few airplanes in practical, everyday use in furthering the sale of lubricating oil to airports. The product that this plane will represent is stated to be the first oil developed for the specific summer and winter needs of aircraft motors, and is unique in the respect that it is the first and only wax-free paraffin base oil. It is now being sold in airports throughout the United States.

The company's nation wide hookup was in operation 20 hours. It was estimated a similar amount would be spent in broadcasting the Democratic convention at Houston.

GRISHAM GOES ON OLD-STYLE CAMPAIGNING

Visits Many Small Communities and Calls on Farmers Along the Way.

Special to the Telegram.
COLEMAN, June 20.—A territory in which many hundreds of voters live and which had not been visited by a single candidate in the Congressional race was invaded by Judge R. N. Grisham of Eastland, on the first day of his intensive canvass which will carry him throughout the entire 19 counties, into the remote places as well as the large cities. Fisk, Gouldsk, Shield, Rockwood, and Whon were the towns he visited in a strenuous day.

Not only did he meet the people in these busy communities, but whenever he saw a farmer reaching the end of a furrow near the road Judge Grisham stopped his car, clambered through a barbed wire fence, introduced himself and briefly stated his mission. In every such instance except one, the farmers expressed themselves as favoring the Eastland man.

The territory through which the Congressional aspirant traveled was southern Coleman county. "The shifting panorama that unfolds before the eyes is one of the most beautiful imaginable," Judge Grisham said. "Wheat fields with golden sheaves; the deep green of milo maize and kafir corn, the pasture lands of lighter green, the rolling hills and valleys with blue mountains at the horizon's rim, provided a spectacle of colors that a Turner or a Michael Angelo could not paint."

That section is a splendid farming region, he added, and the homes are attractive, with flowers blooming in the yard, trees nearby and in almost every instance there were a few beehives. At Gouldsk, he met Postmaster Carl Cheney, for whose grandfather the town of Cheney in Eastland county was named. Mr. Cheney moved from there when he was only a small boy. Incidentally, the postoffice at Gouldsk is unique—the rent-boxes are not inside a building, they are in the wall of the building facing on the street so all the patron has to do is stand on the sidewalk and open his box. Another citizen of Gouldsk is Mr. Neeley, formerly a resident of Gorman and Desdemona. He operates a garage.

Living in Coleman are several former residents of Eastland—Curtis Mays, formerly with Fagg's; Mr. Hilton, who was one of the most ardent baseball fans in the history of Eastland, and Mr. Boyer, formerly representative of the Puitra Mills with headquarters in Eastland, now the representative of the Gulf in the Coleman district.

JUNE-TEENTH IS CELEBRATED QUIETLY HERE

Colored Folks Have Family Parties and Barbecue In Memory of Emancipation Day.

BY ELVIE H. JACKSON
The historical June 19 was celebrated in a pleasing, homely fashion by the colored citizenry of our home town by the quiet element, that took their families with them for the day's outing beneath the trees, on the open grassy ground near their schoolhouse; and that were provided with big baskets of delicious foods, for their several meals through the day. Hard, horny hands, laid aside the spade and plow and the toilworn mammy hands folded in rest, or were busy for their own kind, for one whole day!

And that barbecued beef, rich, simmering in juices; hot from the pit, cooked by Della East, and helped out with potato salad, cake and pie, served by George Eason. And made possible by their white friends, who contributed the coin for the good things. A timely talk on "June-teen" and what it stood for, by Eason, was pointed by memorized verses recited by the young children. Emancipation day—and historic tales, of Abraham Lincoln—subjects of the readings and talks.

A far cry from the day of the yoked oxen, and the ragged tattered pikaninny with his whip, gounding his patient team in the narrow furrows of the field, to the many colleges for colored boys and girls, their public schools for their own benefit, and the schools for training, turning out competent chauffeurs, in charge of high-powered cars. Learning to read by laborious effort beneath the fluttering rays of a tallow dip, in 1860 and going to colleges for finishing courses, to fit them to be helpful brothers to their kind—in ministry, in medicine, in verse and in music, in 1928.

Crooning the Spirituals in abandon of body and words—in 1860! And, in 1912 writing their camp meeting songs, setting their spirituals to pointed notes, writing operas in magnificent music! witness, "Heawaha," musical score written 16 years ago, by Coleridge Taylor, a graduate of three conservatories of music, and who lives in London, England. And remember, Paul Dunbar, modern American poet, who wrote tender scenes of the old South and of the old-time mammy and her love for her white fosterling.

The more venturesome of the local element sought the celebrations in Cisco, Breckenridge, or Ranger. But the patient family parties of the Eastland "June-teenth" celebration was the most satisfying of them all.

Lampasas Attracts Many Visitors To Enjoy Its Baths

Special to the Telegram.
LAMPASAS, June 19.—Hundreds of vacationists are flocking into Lampasas, the health and recreational center of a large section of Texas. The 40-acre shaded Anderson park, with its 50 cottages for rent is a place of beauty. There are two swimming pools and an abundance of fresh and sulphur water.

For those coming here by rail, there is a special round trip rate of a fare and a third during June, July and August.

Each summer the Camp Marlinton school for juniors and high school students is held, for 10 weeks, under auspices of the San Marcos Baptist academy and is a splendid place for the boy or girl to combine study and vacation in the open air. The Texas Baptist Encampment is held during July. The encampment of the Church of Christ is held in August. Boy Scouts hold a summer camp. Early in August, the Lampasas County Fair, one of the best in the State, is held. The artesian sulphur water from the Abney well is noted for its health-giving powers.

Judge N. N. Rosenquest of Eastland, district governor of the Lions of Texas, stopped in Coleman en route to Sonora, Big Lake and Rankin to deliver chapters to new Lions clubs. He saw Judge Grisham while here. "Rosy" has broken all records for a district governor as, during his term of office, he has organized exactly 50 new clubs.

School Histories Are Called False, Stupid and Absurd

COLUMBUS, O., June 19.—"It's a lot of foolishness," Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Dickson of Washington said of the system of historical teaching prevalent in the public schools of the United States. "Not only that," added Dickson, while visiting here, "but the future peace of our nation is endangered and America is likely to be made the laughing stock of the world because of thousands of false, stupid and absurd statements contained in school histories."

he continued, "that in teaching American history, the city of Washington has reached the zenith of educational stupidity and there is no country in the world that has followed suit. We have violated a proposition of Euclid, made the reasoning of Jevons meaningless, and overruled Grenleaf as to what is evidence."

"We teach that during the world war trained dogs were used to search for the missing soldiers who had been so badly hurt that they could neither move nor call for help and when the dogs found such cases, to go back and get aid."

"We also teach that the German army was delivered to the allies without firing a shot. We teach that the four great German drives failed. That 1,200,000 men fought on a tract of land three by five miles in area in the Argonne and that the Americans advanced from seven to 14 feet every hour for 47 days and nights."

"Few facts are left for the pupils of the modern school to discuss, according to Dickson. The meaning of the league of nations and methods whereby another war might be averted might be taught school children today by giving them a few unadorned truths to discuss and study for themselves, he said. "After the school child of today is done digested and poppycock about the intelligence and American there is no country in the world that has followed suit. We have violated a proposition of Euclid, made the reasoning of Jevons meaningless, and overruled Grenleaf as to what is evidence."

"Some of the things in these books are fabulous that if the story classes all their would not hesitate to ride them."

American histories ed to want the press can armies, five the allies, and belittling army, Dickson should be stated, for ther they are favored country or another."
