James Franklin Neely, left, and County Solicitor Claud D. Scruggs, of Guntersville, Ala., photographed as Scruggs started back from Texas to Alabama with Neely to put him on trial for the 47-year-old murder of TYLER, Tex., Sept. 30.—For 47 years James Franklin Neely ran away from his past. Then, when he least expected it, he casually turned a corner and plumped straight into retribution.

Forty-seven years ago, when he was a young man living in Guntersville, Ala., Neely suddenly disappeared. A neighbor, Hiram Cooley, with whom Neely had quarreled, had been found by a lonely roadside, beaten to death, and Neely had been indicted for the crime. Neely's presence, notified the authorities. Now Neely has just been taken back to Alabama in charge of County Solicitor Claud D. Scruggs and other officers to be tried for his life. Two witnesses to the killing are still living. "Be sure your sins will find you out," said Neely as he left Tyler. The 70-year-old man would not discuss the case. "Never was much of a hand to talk," he said. "That's the reason I've been able to do what I have." If Neely is convicted and sentenced to death a gallows will have to be erected for his hanging, for that was the penalty for murder in Alabama at the time of the crime. Several years ago all the gallows in the state were torn down and an electric chair at the Montgomery penitentiary substituted.

Heart Hungry

LAURA LOU BROOKMAN AUTHOR OF "RAGS ROMANCE" © 1930 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Celia Mitchell, 17, faces a new life when she leaves the home in Baltimore where she has lived with her seamstress mother, Margaret Rogers, to join her father, John Mitchell, and her grandmother in a stately New York dwelling. The girl had not even known her father was living until the day he came to the Baltimore apartment. Celia had supposed Bob Rogers, her mother's second husband, to be her father. Mitchell offered Celia a life of wealth and immediately everything changed. She left her mother, unaware that Margaret Rogers was seriously ill and would die within a few days. Later that evening he calls a telephone number and says, "Evelyn, I must see you."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV Evelyn Parsons' boudoir was like a turquoise jewel box in which the owner's ivory and golden beauty was set off as craftily as the jeweler designs settings for rare gems. Mrs. Parsons was sitting at the dressing table inspecting the clasp of a strand of pearls. "Here, Rose, will you fasten these?"

The maid fastened the pearls about a throat which, under lamp light, failed to show a trace of age. The jewels hung half way to Evelyn Parsons' waist. They were perfect, evenly matched pearls, and, as Mrs. Parsons was well aware, harmonized with her blond coloring and added delicacy to her mature charms. "That's all now, Rose." The maid disappeared. Evelyn Parsons drew the stopper from a heavy vial of perfume. It was heavy perfume, too—spicy, exotic and sophisticated. Mrs. Parsons be able to get out of it."

She leaned forward, hands held together, smiling gullelessly. Mitchell's face was serious. "Well, it's a big favor to me, and I appreciate it. I'm up against a problem—well, to tell you the truth I don't know what to do. Tonight I felt that I needed to talk to someone. You were the only one I could think of who would understand."

"Then I'm glad you came!" Mitchell moved impatiently. Before he could continue Mrs. Parsons poured a beverage into a glass half filled with ice. She held it toward him. "You'll have some?" she asked sweetly. "It will make you feel cooler."

The man took the glass, drank deeply. The interruption had been nicely timed. Mitchell surveyed his hostess. "But you look cool! How do you manage it?" Silvery laughter was the answer. "Something more than laughter spoke from Evelyn Parsons' eyes, but she was quick to avert them. She had decided it was high time her appearance won attention. "Never mind my looks, John," the woman said quickly. "I want to hear what this is that is bothering you."

"Well, I'll have to tell you a story," Mitchell put down the empty glass. "Mind if I smoke?" "Do, by all means!" "I think you knew," the man went on slowly, "years ago about my—marriage. I was in Chicago. Met my wife out there. We didn't come home because of—parental disapproval. That was at first. After four years we were divorced. You remember?"

Evelyn nodded. "I guess you didn't know, though, that there was a child. She's always been with—her mother. Seemed to be the place for a girl. Margaret wanted her, of course, and I didn't contest. Had no place to take her anyhow. She's here in New York now."

He did not hesitate at her slight exclamation. "Yes, she's here at my mother's house. Been here three days. I want to do—well, what a father should for her, Evelyn! I've got the money. I want to give her her chance. You see she's never really had anything."

"How old is she?" "She'll be 18 next month. Celia's her name. Of course she's gone to school, and her mother did everything she could, I guess."

"Has her mother—married again?" Mrs. Parsons asked. Mitchell shook his head. The merest shadow of displeasure crossed Evelyn Parsons' face, but she said nothing. "I'm telling you the whole thing so you'll understand," the man continued. "Mother was opposed to the whole plan at first. I had to talk her into it. You see, Evelyn—well, you see, when a man gets to be my age he feels differently. Things you've worked hard for don't look like so much. Do you—understand what I'm trying to say?"

"I think I do, John." "I hoped you'd understand. But you see the trouble is she ought to meet young people, have a good time. I thought mother could take care of that, but I see she can't. Mother's behind the times. She thinks the world is still ruled by the "Four Hundred." Wants to take Celia abroad this fall. That's all right, but what is she going to do in the meantime? Tonight I found her—I mean Celia—crying."

"The poor dear!" Mrs. Parsons' voice was honeyed softness. "You were right to come to me, John. Now here's what we'll do—"

It was an hour and a half later that the door of Mrs. Parsons' apartment closed behind John Mitchell. In the turquoise boudoir Evelyn Parsons laid aside her pearls. "It's going to be easy!" she whispered exultantly. "Easy!"

Car Thieves Get More Than They Bargained For

HARPER, Kan., Sept. 30.—Motor car thieves apparently got more than they bargained for when they stole the car of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Quigg here. The five small Quigg children were sleeping in the car's rear seat. After an hour's agonized search the parents found the stolen car near the town's outskirts. The children still slept.

Hoover To Make First Of Series Of Talks Soon

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—President Hoover will present the problems and hopes of his administration to the American people and next week in the first series of speeches he has made since his mid-western tour nearly a year ago.

While the topics Mr. Hoover will discuss are known only to a few, it was said today by a close associate that prohibition would not be among them. The addresses will be at Cleveland, Oct. 2; Boston, Oct. 6; and Kings Mountain, N. C., Oct. 7.

Mr. Hoover has remained silent since the action of the New York state republicans in adopting a wet stand. He has not answered claims of wets that the republican party is receding from the dry position assumed in the presidential race in 1928. His associates say he will continue this silence.

Despite the president's attitude, other republican leaders are showing some concern over the New York situation as they look forward to the next presidential contest. The state's 45 electoral votes are regarded as a highly important factor in any candidate's success. Mr. Hoover had them in 1928 as a dry. Politicians are wondering if a dry candidate can get them with a wet state organization.

On the trip, however, Mr. Hoover will make no bid for New York state support. Both en route to Boston and returning from there he will pass through the state early in the morning.

With prohibition ignored, the president is expected to deal extensively, and in an optimistic note, with economic problems. His appearance before the American Federation of Labor in Boston will give him an excellent opportunity to outline what the administration has done or hopes to do for labor. The farmer and the business worker, likewise, may get their particular message.

Mr. Hoover will leave the capital Wednesday, stop in Philadelphia en route to Cleveland to see the opening world series game. He will address the American Bankers' Association Thursday night, and return to the White House Friday. Sunday night he will entrain for Boston, speaking Monday before the American Legion and the A. F. of L. He will leave Boston that night for Kings Mountain.

Houston Calls Cardinals "The St. Louis Buffs"

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 29.—The baseball fans of Houston were putting their money down the line on the St. Louis Cardinals today. They call them St. Louis Buffs here, for of the men eligible for world series play on the Red Birds' team Wednesday, ten formerly played with the Houston squad in the Texas league, and an eleventh was once on the Buff roster but didn't report.

The ten former Buffs are: Ray Blades, Jim Bottomley, Al Grabowski, Chick Hafey, Bill Hallahan, Jim Lindsey, Gus Mancuso, Ernie Orsatti, Flint Rhems and Watty Watkins. Herman Bell was on the Buff roster.

Aside from these, Tony Kuffman and Dizzy Dean, two pitchers, joined the Caris too late to qualify for the series.

Sweeten Acid Stomach This Pleasant Way

National Banks as of Sept. 24.

When people experience distress two hours after eating—suffer from heartburn, gas indigestion—nine times out of ten it's excess acid that's causing their trouble. The best way—the quickest way to correct this is with an alkali and Phillips Milk of Magnesia is an alkali, in the harmless, most pleasant and palatable form. It's the form physicians prescribe; which hospitals use; which millions have come to depend upon in over 50 years of steadily increasing use. A spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water neutralizes many times its volume in excess acid; and does it at once. In five minutes, the symptoms disappear. To know this perfect way is to be through with crude methods forever.

Be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. A less perfect product may not act the same. All drug stores have the generous 25¢ and 50¢ bottles. Full directions for its many uses are always in the package.

HOOVER'S SON, NOW ILL, IS MUCH LIKE NOTED DAD

PALO ALTO, Calif., Sept. 29.—The illness of Herbert Hoover, Jr., at Washington, has recalled to friends here a career and a romance singularly like that of his distinguished father.

President Hoover married a co-ed whom he courted while attending Stanford University here... thirty years later his son did likewise. President Hoover decided to become an engineer... so did his son, who has won distinction in the radio field.

President Hoover has two children... so has his son, who is the father of Herbert Hoover III, now nearly three years old, and Peggy Ann, four years old.

Herbert Hoover resembles his father's youthful portraits; Allen Hoover, his younger brother, favors his mother's side of the family. As youngsters, both boys saw many strange lands and places as they traveled abroad with their parents. Herbert went to school in England for a time and then both boys returned to the United States and entered public school here.

In high school, Herbert met Margaret Watson, daughter of an old California family. The attachment continued when they became university students and two days after their graduation from Stanford—on June 22, 1925—they were married in the university chapel.

The bride was girl athlete of the girls' athletic association in college and young Hoover was vice president of the student body. In school, she helped him with his studies because for several years he was quite deaf and unable to hear the lectures of professors. This ailment was caused by a fall from a playground slide

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The George Washington Bicentennial Commission, which is vigorously applying itself to the task of working the country up to a white heat of patriotic emotion by 1932—the 200th anniversary of George's birth—has undertaken an informal compilation of still existent stores, companies or firms which were doing business back in Washington's time.

Apparently there are hundreds of them. Banks, insurance companies, newspapers, and drug stores are most numerous among those which the commission has heard about since it sent out a call for information on such institutions.

Already there are a couple of firms which claim to have been established back in the sixteenth or nineteenth centuries, and Boston, thus far, have offered the largest number of interesting exhibits.

Congressman Sol Bloom of New York, an associate director of the commission, suggests that there be some kind of a meeting or organization of old establishments dating back to the eighteenth century and that their records be preserved and examined for their historical value.

Someone will doubtless propose appropriate tablets for such emporiums as can prove that George Washington himself used to be one of the customers. The commission is especially anxious to learn of places where the Father of His Country bought his razor blades, radio tubes, cracked ice, bromo-seltzers, kodak rolls, ginger ale and other day-to-day necessities.

Store Opened in 1792
One such place is to be found over across the Potomac in Alexandria, Va., where the Alexandria Gazette, born in Washington's time, still flourishes.

One refers to Leadbeater's drug store, whose ancient records show that Washington and members of his family often sent slaves or came themselves to buy castor oil and other remedies. The Washingtons apparently never ate ham sandwiches and drank chocolate malted milks over the counter, however. Leadbeater's didn't serve them and they ate at home, anyway.

Leadbeater's was opened in 1792 by Edward Stabler, who borrowed 500 pounds for the purpose, and is still in possession of his descendants and those of John Leadbeater, who married one of his daughters in 1835. Stabler was an accomplished pill-roller and mixer of liquid concoctions. Having no chain store competition, he made plenty of money at his corner on King and Fairfax streets.

Included in the files of the old drug store is a note from Martha Washington, dated from Mount Vernon in 1802, as follows: "Mrs. Washington desires Mr. Stabler to send by bearer a quart bottle of his best castor oil and the bill for it."

Washington Got Credit
Apparently Leadbeater's considered the Washington family's credit to be good. George Washington Parke Custis, one of Martha's grandchildren who had been adopted by George, explained as follows in a note dated 1818: "My Dear Sir: Not being able to command cash at this time from the heavy expense of my building, I enclose my note agreeable to promise. I am duly sensible of the politeness and liberality I have always received from you and I have to express my acknowledgement, also for the very excellent articles always received from your house and with perfect esteem for your personal character. I am, Your humble servant, George W. P. Custis."

And Judge Bushrod Washington, who inherited the Mount Vernon estate after the death of his Uncle George and Aunt Martha, wrote in 1820:

"Respected Friend: Above is a check for 77.9, amount of your account, which ought much sooner to have been attended to. In future I will thank you to send it to me at least once a year. Respectfully,

Seven generations of the Washington and Lee families, which became related by marriage, traced at Leadbeater's.

Augustin and Lawrence Washington learned the drug business there and later established themselves in West Virginia.

Lefty Grove And Grimes To Start First Game

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—It is "Lefty" Grove against Leigh Grimes in the opening game of the world series between Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals here tomorrow.

From a source close to the Athletics, Cornelius McGillicuddy, says the national pastime and manager of its defending world's champions, the United Press learned that Connie Mack has decided to use the expert who has been his pitcher for him and send him out after the all important first game.

Mack is being himself and saying nothing for publication, but an umpire-in-chief George Mott says the boys to order him some 35,000 excited fans to see the game. It will be tall, "Lefty" who will saunter to pitcher's box to start zipping fast ball past the challengers in Missouri.

It is part of Connie Mack's plan to conceal his bats until the last minute, but the Cardinals were convinced today that they would win Grove in the opener and as they went out for their first pre-season behind barred gates at the park they confessed to being that they are going to knock same Mr. Grove in the neighborhood Schuykill.

Cardinals Peppy
The national league champions a refreshing lot, in that they brimming with confidence, blood in their eyes and pep in their strides. National league winners of recent years have gone into the big series with rath-bang-dog air. These Cardinals may be spending the long end of the heavy world series sugar.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS

"Sergeant" Gabby Street, who was somewhat of a "pusher" among major league managers earlier this season, apparently has his boys on their toes, which is half the battle in any series. Burch Grimes, his choice for the pitching staff assignment, is willing to have the entire baseball world know that he expects to set the heavy hitters in the A's lineup down in most undignified disorder.

"I only hope it is Grove in there against me," said Grimes.

"He'll have to pitch a shutout to get an even break," Burch's spitball is figured by national league partisans as just the proper medicine for the American league champions.

While the Cards are going into the series minus the services of James Wilson, their first string catcher, they otherwise are fit and ready. Gus Mancusi will be on the receiving end for the visitors tomorrow and probably throughout the series.

Philadelphia Confident
Philadelphia took on the festive, excited air of a world series today, after warming rather slowly to the approaching event. Around the hotel lobbies the talk was all of baseball and of how to get tickets. All the reserved seats were disposed of in the first rush yesterday, and the bleacher line is forming, with the grey haired old gentlemen still holding his own at the head of the queue.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of the national pastime, was a most popular figure around baseball headquarters at the Bellevue Stratford today, the theory being that the judge might be able to get you a ticket, if so inclined.

"It should be a great series. St. Louis made a wonderful finish," said the commissioner.

Fair weather and cool was predicted by the local forecaster. The games play here Wednesday and Thursday and spend Friday journeying to St. Louis to continue the series at Sportsman's park.

With Grove slated to mound duty, the odds favor the Athletics to win the opening game, 10 to 7 being the quotation for this contest as well as for the entire series.

Despite a series of blood transfusions, scant hope was held that Mrs. Louis Reifsnider Creevy would survive the three hatchet wounds. Lieut. Col. Richard Bennett Creevy, assistant commandant of the Marine guards in Haiti, died from a revolver bullet through the heart as he closed with a brilliant career of 27 years in the Marine Corps.

Many aspects of the case puzzled the investigators. The couple had been here on leave since last Thursday, staying at the fashionable Mayflower hotel, rendezvous of statesmen and distinguished visitors. No difficulty between them was known. They were to have sailed from New York for Haiti Wednesday.

One explanation was that Creevy might have suffered from tropical fever and been tortured by the idea of a return to the scene of its inception.

The hatchet was new, apparently purchased for the savage purpose to which it was put. It was a mystery why, with a revolver in his possession, the officer should have selected another weapon.

Deputy coroner Joseph D. Rodgers, who issued a certificate of suicide, said there was no doubt that Creevy had attacked his wife and then killed himself. He placed the time of the tragedy as Saturday night or early Sunday. The bodies were not discovered until late yesterday. A maid for a time kept away by "do not disturb" sign hung on the couple's door finally called the manager when she was unable to gain admittance.

THE American menu of today shows a decided tendency to hold the heavy meals of our grandparents. They too heavy and too rich, desserts made of herb teas and "bitters" of being necessary to repair the worn bodies of their families. Our menus are made with attention to a balanced diet. Caloric, mineral and vitamins are carefully considered. Age and reputation of members of a family also play an important part in the planning of meals.

Modern shipping facilities make choice of food independent of season. Our closer contacts with other countries have taught many new dishes to give increased variety to menus.

The excellent commercially prepared products have lightened the preparation of meals for the housewife. Canned fruits and vegetables are an economical measure toward maintaining a balanced diet. The broadening knowledge of home-makers regarding the value of various foods has a significant influence on the selection of the daily bill of fare.

The following dinner menus are usual, reasonable and perfectly planned. Planned for adults, a minor change in serving will make them suitable for children.

Quiet Prevails At Scene Of Alabama Mob

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Sept. 30.—Quiet prevailed around Madison county jail here today with national guardsmen in command of the situation which last night forced them to use tear gas bombs and bayonets to handle a menacing crowd.

Within the jail lodged G. E. Henderson, a negro originally held on suspicion of murderously assaulting G. E. Ross, Huntsville business man, and Mrs. Ross, during an attempted robbery here Sunday night.

Authorities announced yesterday Henderson is not the man sought in the affair and reiterated the announcement today.

The crowd which menaced the jail last night had completely dispersed today and officials at the jail said the situation was "thoroughly calm."

During the clash between members of the mob and the militia, stones were hurled into the guardsmen's ranks, tear-gas into the mob, one member of which was felled by a gun-butt.

Fire hose effectively was played on the mob to lead it back from the vicinity of the jail.

Henderson originally was suspected because a hat left by the murderer of Ross in the Ross house fitted him, and because he carried a gun at the time of his arrest.

He insisted he had nothing to do with the crime.

Hearst Explains Published Records In Radio Talk

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—William Randolph Hearst, speaking over a national radio hook-up last night, denied that the secret Anglo-treat his newspaper obtained and published two years ago were obtained by theft or bribery, or that he intended injuring France in publishing them.

Commenting on his recent expulsion from France as a result of the incident, he explained his failure to more active protest by intimating he had believed there was some official at Washington "with independence enough and backbone enough to defend the rights of law-abiding American citizens sojourning abroad, and to vindicate the validity of an American passport, and to maintain the liberty and dignity of American citizenship."

Hearst pointed out that the two alternatives received copies of the treaty were acquired by French courts of having committed any crime.

Eastland Artist Welcomed As Head Of School
