Bandits Hold Up Tire Station At Ranger Wed.

Three men held up the Hall Tire Company at Ranger Wednesday night and carried away a safe containing $85 in cash and a number of checks.

The three men entered the driveway of the station in a Chevrolet sedan and Frank Penn, who was in charge of the station, went to the car to see what they wanted. One man covered him with a shotgun without seeing the safe. While one man covered Penn the other two loaded the safe into the car, loaded in some tires and drove away, coming toward Eastland on the Bankhead Highway.

Police Chief Jim Ingram, who was at a meeting of the American Legion Rifle Club, pursued the bandits, as did the Legion members. Thinking that the three men might have turned off the highway they turned off at the side road leading toward Staff. After following this road for several miles without seeing any trace of the bandits they returned to Ranger.

This morning a farmer who lives about two miles from Staff found the safe in his field. The bandits had taken $85 in cash and a check for $52 on the Lone Star Gas Company. Several small checks were left in the safe.

Alfonso Johnson Speaks Here On Wednesday Night

"One great trouble with a lot of merchants today is that their customers are smarter than they are," Alfonso Johnson, director of the Trade Extension Department of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, told his hearers in an address before a meeting of Eastland business men at the Chamber of Commerce rooms last night.

Mr. Johnson explained that what he meant by the customer being smarter than the merchant was that often they were better informed about the merchant's merchandise than the merchant was.

"Study your merchandise, learn everything you can about it and then impart this knowledge to your salespeople in order that they may know how to present the goods to purchasers to the best advantage," Mr. Johnson told the merchants.

Many times a buyers "makes a splendid buy, but falls to make any money on his goods because his salespeople fail to make sales due to their lack of knowledge of the article," he declared.

ACREAGE REDUCTION THE ONLY SOLUTION
Cotton is the main reliance of the south. Dependent as we are upon it, there should be more intelligence exercised in its production and marketing. Price and production are determining factors in the success or failure of the crop. A perfect balance between the two must be maintained to insure prosperity. A small crop and a high price usually means a good crop and prosperity in some sections and complete failure and ruin in others. A large crop and a small price usually means production at less than cost and loss to the producer everywhere. These are general propositions applicable to any hit or miss system of crop production. The obvious deduction is that the problem can be solved by the application of a simple policy of universal acreage reduction that would result in the maximum benefit to all concerned.

The government report indicates a crop this year of 14,360,000 bales. Add to this a probable carry-over of 7,000,000 bales, half an average crop, and the question arises: What are we going to do with it and what are we going to get for it? Trade conditions abroad being unsatisfactory, and in addition to the favor shown foreign growers, and no indication of increased consumption, the answer is obvious and the necessity for doing something about it is emphasized. We suggest an organization be perfected at once to conduct a vigorous campaign for acreage reduction in 1931.

We believe the Federal Farm Board, the Federal Reserve Banks, southern bankers, the United States Department of Agriculture, can outline a policy so impressive that a reduction of 10,000,000 acres can be accomplished next year.

The southern farmer no longer can afford to plant a big acreage in the hope that disaster to his neighbors' crop will result in a high price for his own. The farmer must adopt methods that apply to all alike and insure prosperity for all alike. The demoralization in price, quantity and distribution are not the farmer's making, but the result of circumstances which he cannot control alone.

The situation can be adjusted through intelligent assistance of the agencies to which the farmer looks for direction and who rely on the prosperity of the farmer for their own.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

ROBBING A CHURCH.
The tribe of "meanest men" is pretty extensive. The latest member to come into public notice is the man who robbed the cornerstone of a church in Syracuse, N. Y. He pried it open with a crowbar, scattered the church records which had been sealed in a copper box, and took $25 of consecrated money deposited there when the church was dedicated. That seems just a little meaner, somehow, than stealing the pennies from a Sunday school contribution box.

Our congratulations to the 312,337 students in Chicago who have been studying Shakespeare, no doubt learning about "the insolence of office, and the spurns that patient merit of the unworthy takes."

TABLES FOR SCHOOLS.
A new school in a rather large city has just been opened, with no desks at all for the children. Instead there are tables throughout. Six pupils sit at each table. There is also a soundproof room on the fourth floor at the foot of a tower in which the school band and school orchestra can practice without upsetting the scholastic rhythms of the other rooms. Education is looking up. There may be something still to be said in favor of the individual desk rather than the six-child table, though the latter means a six-child class and more individual attention from the teacher. But as long as school authorities keep their minds on trying out new things in the direction of a better and sounder scholarship, the schools will continue to improve.

Nimrod Fair Exhibits Are Good This Year
Splendid exhibits of agricultural products, canned fruits and vegetables, needwork and old relics and antiques, featured the Nimrod Community Fair, which was held today. Attendance was not so large, but was all that was expected.
The exhibits were arranged in the Nimrod school building and were supervised by County Agent J. C. Patterson of Eastland, County Agent Cooper of Calhoun, county and Miss Ruth Ramey, Eastland county Home Demonstration Agent.
County Agent Patterson stated that the agricultural exhibit at this fair was the best that has yet been seen at the rural community fairs this year. Only a few livestock were on exhibition.
The relics department attracted much interest, especially among the old timers. In this department was noted some old handmade quilts that were more than 100 years old. An army musket with bayonet attached, that was used in the Civil War and an old styled cap and ball pistol. An old Bible which dated back 134 years was also among the items.
At noon luncheon, which had been prepared by the County Agent of Nimrod, was spread, picnic fashion under a tabernacle on the school grounds and everyone enjoyed the splendid feast.
The Nimrod Women's Home Demonstration Club has a nice club room, which was built, furnished and paid for through the efforts of club members. Electric lights and power is obtained for the clubhouse, the school and church buildings and such private residences as want it, from a high power line that traverses that section of the county.
Eastland was represented at the fair by Dr. H. B. Tanner, secretary of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, T. J. Martin, manager of the Connelley Hotel, and P. A. Jones, editor of the Eastland Telegram.

Committee To Make Survey Of State Hospital
AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 11—Members of the house committee in charge of a legislative survey of state hospitals will begin a tour of inspection here Monday. After looking over the Austin State Hospital, they will later go to Abilene, Wichita Falls, Terrell, Rusk and San Antonio.
The committee will draft a report to the next legislature regarding needs of the institutions, fireproofing requirements and, necessarily for additional facilities.
Members are Mrs. Helen Moore, Texas City, chairman; Penrose B. Metcalfe, San Angelo and W. K. Hopkins, Gonzales. R. B. Walthall member of the state board of control, will accompany the committee.

Democrats Are Called Party For John J. Raskob
WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—A charge that the Democratic National Committee is the "personally unwritten organization" of Chairman John J. Raskob was made today as part of the state-making battle between Republican and Democratic publicity forces here.
Republican floor leader Tilson of the House made the charge, citing reports filed with the clerk of the House by James W. Gerard, treasurer of the Democratic committee. These reports showed, Tilson said, that Raskob advanced $40,000 to the committee during the three months beginning June 1 and that other contributions totaled only $150. Gerard's report, Tilson added, showed Raskob's "loans" to the committee amounted to $199,000 up to August 31.
Meanwhile, the Democratic publicity organization countered with a statement by Senator Fletcher, Dem., Fla., ridiculing Republican claims of progress in Florida. Fletcher declared that in the last registration throughout the state the Republican votes do not exceed 20 per cent of the total.
Another statement issued through the Republican committee today pointed to the growth of American ship building and credited the policy inaugurated by the merchant marine act of 1928 for the increase.

Town Goes "Wild West" at Convention
DEADWOOD, S. O., Sept. 10—Roulette, Faro and other gambling games were a part of the recent "Days of '70" celebration here when the town's male population grew whiskers and went wild west. All gambling layouts, however, were for atmosphere. Judge C. E. McHugh in police court this week fined Morris Ventling, a concession worker during the celebration $25 and costs for "playing for keeps."

Bobcat Goes To Bed With Man
COLORADO SPRINGS, Sept. 10—Dinky Moore an employe at the Summit house on Pikes Peak, reached down at the side of the bed to turn off the alarm clock. He felt the fur of an animal's back. A bobcat had entered through an open window and gone to sleep under the bed. The animal clawed Moore's arm and then escaped through the window.

Brucker Nominated Michigan Governor
DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 11—Nomination of Wilbur M. Brucker, as Republican candidate for governor was conceded by Alex J. Groesbeck, former governor and his chief rival, today as interest, both state and national, swung to the prohibition angle of two important congressional battles.
Almost complete tabulations showed also that Frank Murphy had defeated Charles Bowles for mayor of Detroit. The margin of victory probably will exceed 15,000, observers said. Bowles was recalled by voters several weeks ago from the mayor's seat after charges were made that he was protecting gambling, bootlegging and vice interests.

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930, by NEA SERVICE Inc. by ERNEST LYNN tried to smile. "Anyway, that's the way I feel—if you make any sense out of what I say. And that's why I've been afraid of your saying what I had hoped you wouldn't say. You understand, I like you, Dan—I like you awfully. But I'm not at all in love with you."

He said, with a shrug and a little smile: "Well, if you're sure, I guess you're not. I would know, all right, if you and he pulled out a cigarette lighted it."

He looked at Anne, watching his face, and the set look about his eyes and his hands and his feet. "You understand, you, Dan?" she asked anxiously. "We needn't be so utterly sure about it, need we?"

"No, we can always be sure," he blowing on the end of the cigarette, and the irony of it was like a blow to Anne.

He said nothing, and Dan felt that she was hurt, and he felt sorry, Anne, really. That was a nasty thing to say. I didn't do it at all."

He saw her eyes then and they were unshed tears, and he put his arm rest lightly around her shoulders, and he spoke lightly and jokingly of other things.

It presently the ocean laid its hands on them again and they fell on them, and when Anne stirred, Dan asked her if she had time to go.

He nodded. Dan started the car, swinging up the hill to the road, he made a remark about their "celebration" not having been much of a success. "Sort of flat tire, wasn't it?"

He spoke cheerfully enough. "Well, we'll just let it go. Anne, and try it again. We'll just forget what happened. He leaned toward her and Anne smiled back at him.

Presently he began to whistle, out of the corner of his eye looking slyly at her to see if she was taking notice of the song. He thought you're horrid," she said to him.

"Come on, Anne, sing for me," he said. "I don't want to hear you sing that one." She shook her head.

"Come on," he pleaded, "for my sake, Anne," and he looked so persuasively and so earnestly that finally she consented and closed her eyes and sang:

"Why was I born? Why am I living? Do I get? What am I giving? Do I want a thing I don't hope for? Can I hope for? I wish I knew."

She sang straight ahead on the road, grimly he pressed his foot down on the accelerator, and the night wind tore past them in a hurried accompaniment to Anne's song, and it almost seemed a stifled sob from his throat.

"Do I try to draw you near me? Do I cry?—you never hear me."

It's Pasture Drilling Time In Texas

Four-horse drill sowing small grain for winter pasturage. Much of this kind of winter feed is now being planted in Eastland county. Rye is also being planted on sandy farms to prevent blowing of soil.

"I'm a poor fool, but what can I do? Why was I born to love you?"

Anne opened her eyes then and looked at him, and in alarm she glanced at the speedometer and called his attention to it.

Dan smiled and released the pressure of his foot somewhat. He thanked her then for singing, "Just for old times." And then he talked so rapidly, told her how much her voice had improved. "I wouldn't have believed it. That fellow must be a marvel."

He said he wondered when production would start on his picture. "What do you think of Lester Moore? Think you'll get along with him all right? Phillips tells me he's a regular guy—no temperament or anything—so you're going to get a chance to do something."

To all of this Anne, knowing that he was acting unnaturally and worrying about him, murmured short replies, but when they reached the bungalow she was strangely reluctant to let him go, and she found things to say that would serve as an excuse for him to linger.

And when he did leave, with a promise to see her at the studio on the morrow, she waited at the open door until he had climbed into the car, and then she waved to him and called goodby to him again.

Mona was not yet home and the place suddenly was cheerless. Anne sat down to wait for Mona and she found herself, for some strange reason, wondering what she would have done if Rorimer had again kissed her. She had not expected him to try it, but she wondered nevertheless, because Dan had said something about "old times," referring to their first evening at Santa Monica, and she had not forgotten that it was that night that Dan had kissed her.

Perhaps, she argued to herself, she had not been fair to Dan. If he really cared as much as he seemed to—and she knew that he had been trying to hide part of it from her—she had done wrong in not saying something long before this. She was forlorn, feeling that she had lost a gay comrade.

Mona came in presently, loud and breezy and cheerful, and they talked; but Anne followed Dan Rorimer home in her thoughts. And Dan, finding the apartment empty when he got there, left immediately and walked down Hollywood Boulevard to Henry's. There he found Paul Collier and Johnny Riddle and a couple of very pretty girls, lingering over coffee and sandwiches; and he joined them. He talked a great deal, and laughed boisterously at Johnny Riddle's newest stories; and when the others left he remained and ordered more coffee.

And finally he went home and went to bed.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Mona Morrison frequently observed, with her customary flippancy, that Anne Winter needed a secretary, but to Anne letter writing was a form of recreation and had been since childhood. There was a not inconsiderable amount of fan mail these days, which she attended to personally and briefly; but the weekly letter to her mother and father was fat and invariably required extra postage.

About Rorimer she wrote: "He's as sweet, and considerate as he can be—a wonderful friend. I feel that it's my own fault in a way, but I'm rather helpless to do anything about it. If I loved a man enough to want to marry him, I think I'd know it, don't you?"

It was her father whom she really appealed to in telling of Dan's proposal. Her letters always were addressed to both parents, but Judge Winter knew his daughter much better than her mother did. Mrs. Winter was beset by maternal doubts and misgivings; she expected the worst to happen. Her husband argued that Anne had a mind of her own and could use it. He rarely counseled his daughter, offered specific advice only when it was asked her.

His reply was about what Anne had expected, and so was the comment of her mother. The judge believed she had done exactly right, and he expressed his faith in her; but Mrs. Winter was horror-struck at the notion of Anne's even considering for a minute the thought of marriage with a young man she had never seen. Anne smiled.

She was not very busy these days. A lot had to be done before production started and she was marking time. Johnny Riddle occasionally had her to lunch with newspaper friends, and someone in the Grand United publicity department made an appointment for her with one of the studio photographers, so she spent several hours one day before a "still" camera.

That was the day Garry Sloan asked her to dinner. He was showing some visitors around the lot at the time and he saw her and introduced them, explaining to his friends that she was to have the feminine lead in his next picture.

When they had gone Sloan continued to talk with her. Of late he had been quite friendly. He said he would like to take her to the Embassy Club that evening if she was not busy, and mentioned that his visiting friends were in the party.

"I'll be glad to go along," Anne said. Mona saw his car draw up before the bungalow and she would have run off if Anne had not insisted on introducing her.

"Don't be foolish," she counseled smilingly. "Make an impression before he gets away."

Mona's ever-ready wisecrack deserted her when she shook hands with him. The vast area of white shirt front against a black dinner coat was overpowering. She could accomplish little more than a smile.

Sloan said they were to pick up his friends at the Roosevelt, and on the drive downtown in the im-

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Either Uncle Sam is a fine boss or else a lot of people are easily satisfied.

Periodically one opens one's eyes in more or less astonishment here as the Civil Service transfers a few old federal employes to the retired list and one discovers men who have been on the same job or almost the same job for half a century or more.

Although the government's pay is comparatively low, its jobs are seldom arduous, and in most cases they are much more secure than the general run of jobs to be found elsewhere. That's one reason men and women stay in the federal service for so many decades. Government workers, here, unless especially distinguished in certain lines, do not find many opportunities for change in the capital. Sometimes they can switch to other bureaus, but the limited commercial and industrial life of the District of Columbia offers few possibilities within easy jumping distance. That's another reason.

Take Pride in Service

But the government service also breeds, an interesting type of worker who takes a deep personal pride in the fact that he is part of the government. He takes immense pride in the performance of his own job and acquires, with long service and assured security, a sense of vested property right in it which is seldom felt by employes of private business. A newspaper correspondent who browses around among the bureaus encounters many of these proud old men who pressively long pheasant, gleaming with black and silver, he began to tell her of his plans concerning the forthcoming picture. Grand United, he informed her, intended to spend a lot of money on it; Lester Moore would have the greatest role of his career.

And he smiled and said, "For that matter, it will be yours too, won't it, Anne?" His smile faded. He said, "I'm serious, though. You're going to do something pretty big. I know it."

Anne murmured something in grateful reply. Sloan talked on. He said something nice about her voice and his intention of having a song written for her.

You didn't know that, did you? "Why, no. That's a real surprise. I didn't know there was to be any singing whatever."

"Just one song—for you. There's a spot for it."

At dinner he was an attentive host. His friends, Easterners, a New York real estate man, a classmate of Sloan's—and his wife and daughter, a girl about 16, who was getting the thrill of her life at the sight of screen celebrities in the flesh.

Sloan took pleasure in pointing some of them out to her, chuckling over her rapture; and afterward he drove them through Beverly Hills to show her the homes of some of the stars.

And when he left Anne at her door he said he would like to go somewhere with her sometime when there were "no visiting firemen wanting to see the sights."

"How about, a little swimming, you'll like her?"

Anne went with him. Later in the week the Moores invited her and Sloan to dinner.

Dan Rorimer's visits to the bungalow were less frequent now. Anne said nothing about this to him; she did not urge him; and he supposed she felt that under the circumstances things were better this way.

Between them had come a slight restraint, though both had sought to avoid such a thing. Dan's manner was more deferent of late and hers was somewhat lacking in its old comradeship.

Mona inquired about him often, and once or twice she had remarked to Anne that she wondered where Dan Rorimer was keeping himself; but it did not take her long to sense something had happened, and she refrained from asking questions that might seem pointed.

Paul Collier, too, felt that things were not exactly as they should be, but Paul had a blunt way of finding out.

"What's the matter with you and Anne?"

"Nothing. Why?"

"You can't kid me. You haven't been out there for two or three weeks."

"What of it? I see her every day on the lot, don't I?"

Paul grinned and dropped down on the piano bench. His fingers struck a chord. "There's a lot of satisfaction in that, I guess. Come clean; what happened? Did you propose to Anne and get turned down?"

Dan was silent, and Paul struck another chord. "Did you?" he insisted.

point in hiding the truth from him, so he admitted that that was what had happened.

Paul said, "I thought there was something the matter. Well . . . He got up from the piano. 'Sorry if I was too curious.'"

"Don't be silly. It's nothing to keep locked up in your vest, is it?" Collier smiled. "Well, you should worry. Think of Johnny Riddle and all of those swell clients of his. Johnny's proposals, if laid end to end, would reach all the way from here to Denver. I think if Johnny threw his heart out the window it would bounce."

He moved over to the window, rested one long leg on the sill. "Anyway," he said presently, "Anne's just a kid. Give her time, my boy."

"You're a great comfort," Dan told him with a chuckle. "She's old enough to know what she wants, I guess."

The little calendar on Romer's desk shed its top leaf daily, and September came to Hollywood. With it came the start of production of his picture.

He was having his opportunity now to observe the famous Garry Sloan at work—and Sloan worked. The man's vitality was terrific and it somehow communicated itself to others around him, so that, though they smarted at times under his ruthless exaction and the lash of his criticism, they responded, as he demanded they respond, in what had come to be spoken of around the Grand United lot as the "Clean tempo."

There was no other just like him, Romer learned. "He was a tyrant, lordly and impatient and difficult to please. But he knew what he wanted."

And for that Dan respected him. Between the two there had been a number of conferences, from each of which Dan emerged with more chances for script. Garry Sloan dominated the picture; it was his; but Romer did not clash with him. Despite the curious resentment he felt toward the director—a feeling that he had never been able entirely to shake—Dan was fondly and admiringly admiring him.

He said to Paul Collier: "I give him credit. He knows what'll make a picture good, all right. He had me write a couple of new lines for Lester Moore today. I'm a son of a gun if he doesn't know more about what Moore can do than Moore himself."

Collier said, "The best in the business, my boy."

"I guess you're right, But," stubbornly, "I still say that Martin Collins is the buy to work with. Collins manages script, Garry Sloan is a king, a giant blond-headed king in soiled white flannels on a canvas throne. And Sloan did not suggest here; he commanded."

He could smile when something pleased him, and he would praise with a brief word or two when praise was someone's due; but more often in the picture's early stages Romer would see him frown or shake his head in disapproval at something not quite right, and everything would stop instantly and a scene would be done over.

"Cut!" Sloan would command. And then, heartlessly: "That's lousy; that won't do at all." But he got things done.

A difficult production schedule had been mapped out, necessitating, because of the director's exacting demands and the heavy daily expense, a good deal of work in the evenings. Often the cast was kept until a late hour at night, and Dan thought Anne Winter was beginning to look a little tired.

Policeman And Washboard Save A Woman's Life

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—A rookie policeman and an old-fashioned ironing board combined last night to save Miss Annie D. Jennings, 25-year-old nurse, from a threatened death.

For two hours and 50 minutes, Miss Jennings had been held prisoner in a small, second-floor room with her captor, Howard R. Carson, a jealousy-crazed youth of 25, covering her with a revolver. He threatened her with death unless she promised to marry him.

Young Carson had dragged the girl to the upstairs room after chasing away with the gun another suitor. The latter, Joseph M. Jackson, summoned police.

Outside, the police debated whether to shoot the youth whom they could see plainly. Carson's parents pleaded for his life, saying he was merely drunk. And the police were reluctant to shoot, yet fearful of harm to Miss Jennings.

The ironing board idea then was conceived by policeman Earl L. Baker, youthful and a newcomer to the department. The board was extended from a second-story window of the next-door house to the home where Carson held the girl prisoner. Baker walked across the board, entered the room unobserved while Carson was making another "for the last time" threat and overpowered the youth.

Carson is to be given a mental examination today. The girl is recovering from the nervous strain.

Memphis Will Play In Dixie Series

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 10.—The Memphis Chickasaws will meet either Fort Worth or Wichita Falls in the annual Dixie series between the winners of the Southern Association and Texas League pennants.

The Memphis team clinched the southern flag by winning from New Orleans second-place team in New Orleans yesterday 9 to 0.

The chicks returned here today to play the final six games of the season and to get into shape for the Dixie series against the Texas league winner next week. Meanwhile Fort Worth, winners of the second half of the Texas League split season, meet Wichita Falls, victors of the first half, in a play-off to determine the Texas champion.

Mother Natures Curio Shop

A BROOKFIELD policeman found Eller, crushed and broken, on the right of way. In the man's pocket, Chief Edward O'Connor of the suburban force found the letter.

It was from Eller's wife, and said the authorities were going to send her and the children to the county home and that rather than go she would kill the children and herself.

There are only eight men on the Brookfield force, but they raised $20 quickly and sent it to Mrs. Eller. Now the police are going to pay Eller's way back home.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 10.—Elocution should be taught in the Swedish schools by means of specially prepared phonograph records, asserts Dr. Nils Hanninger, councillor of the Board of Education. Republicans Are In Accord At State Convention

SAN ANGELO, Tex., Sept. 10.—Their political pow-wow ended Texas Republicans departed for their homes this morning carrying with them the lumber for a new political platform, from which George C. Butte will reach for the governorship of Texas.

Not a single dissenting vote marred the balloting yesterday which adopted the Republican platform. It contains fourteen planks, some of which are believed to be the carpentry of James E. Ferguson. It supports the two party system in Texas, speaks better treatment for education and maintenance of eleemosynary institutions, and demands specific governmental reforms.

The attack of Smith W. Brookhart, Iowa senator, on R. B. Creager, Texas national committeeman, was labeled malicious and unwarranted at a session of the convention Tuesday afternoon. Moody's administration, lauded by the Democrats at Galveston, was called the greatest failure of state and civil government in history by

Police Arrange For Funeral of Hobo Killed By Train

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Herman Eller, 26, who rode into Chicago six weeks ago as a hobo, will leave the city in state. He is dead. Eight policemen will pay his fare home.

Out of work and money, Eller left his wife and four children in Cheyenne, Wyo., a month and a half ago and came here on a freight train. He looked for work, but found only promises.

Last Saturday he received a letter. His hands trembled as he finished reading it. He ran several blocks to a railway right of way. Excited and unerved, he attempted to board the first train that passed going west. It was a fast train.

Shinplasters Are Found In Cellar

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—Eugene G. Hill, 38, who claims to be a second cousin to President Hoover, was held in jail today on suspicion of forgery.

Hill allegedly forged a $55 check in a Palm Beach, Fla., bank and a $30 check on a Memphis, Tenn., bank. One of the checks, it was said, was cashed by a Los Angeles hotel.

Hill was arrested here at the home of his aged parents. His father, Henry L. Hill, 85, said he was a first cousin of the president.

Second Cousin of President Hoover Is Held In Jail

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Sept. 10.—Relics of the past years, a framed collection of fractional currency, called "Shinplasters," was found along with a portrait of George Washington in the basement of Okee County National bank building here, reveals John D. Stocker, cashier. The Washington portrait carries a date of 1868 showing it was obtained about three years after the bank was organized. The pictures will be cleaned up, Stocker says, and an exhibit made in the bank window in the future.

SWEETWATER IS PEPPED UP AT PROSPECTS

SWEETWATER, Sept. 11.—To date the Sweetwater Mustangs have been unable to get any practice game before going in the 1930 football season of the Oil Belt district against the San Angelo Bobcats here on Friday, September 26 and some seem to think the reason is that the game would be a set-up for the opponents of the Mustangs.

Well, maybe it would, but after one look at the bunch of huskies Coach A. Hennig has at Swatter Park twice daily, a different impression will be formed. Last year the Mustangs failed to win a game in Oil Belt play, even the lowliest of the group, the Mineral Wells Mountaineers and the Big Spring Steers scored wins over the Ponies but one look at the 1930 candidates and a different idea will be formed in one's mind.

Not Even the Bucs. But the Mustangs of Sweetwater high school are not going to be a "set-up" for anybody's team in the Oil Belt this year. Not even the Breckinridge Buckaroos, state champions of 1929.

Going on two weeks now and the Ponies have been working out twice daily at the Swatter Park and they are going to keep that up the rest of this week and when school starts next Monday they are to have daily afternoon drills and on Saturday's may be two workouts.

Coach Hennig has not said much about the team but if one goes out and watches them rehearse there'll be different tune about Sweetwater high school gridiron representatives.

NEA Cleveland Bureau "Gilmore," shown at the left with his master, Captain Roscoe Turner, noted airman, is a rip roarin' lion cub now, but he's all set to join the Caterpillar Club family whenever it's necessary to leap from Turner's plane. "Gilmore" stole the show when he tested his special parachute at the Gordon Bennett International Balloon Races at Cleveland. Another feature of the air show was the resurrected 1910 Lincoln Beachey, pusher-type airplane, shown at the right with Dewey Noyes, of Cleveland, at the wheel. Noyes used the parasol to shield himself from the glaring sun, in the absence of a cockpit.

about 45 of them, the largest group of candidates ever to come out for football here, went through two hours of stiff practice. They did not let up but Coach Hennig is going to cut down on practice periods to little more than one hour and during that hour he is going to give them everything. Where the bunch came from that was on the field at the Park Monday is something for the fans to determine but they were there and everyone on the field in uniform showed plenty of stuff when they were called into scrimmage.

Redlich says: "The 'Perfect Retention Shields' hold the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief and contract the opening in a remarkably short time. The secret of their success is in their simplicity. An expertly adjusted device seals the opening without discomfort or detention from work. It is practically everlasting, sanitary, comfortable and actually holds ruptures which heretofore were considered uncontrollable. IF YOU WANT TO HAVE IT DONE RIGHT—SEE REDLICH." Doctor J. W. NOW is the time to learn how 1 match can heat your home all winter

LIGHT YOUR GAS FURNACE THIS FALL
..... TURN IT OFF NEXT SPRING

WHY LIVE in one or two rooms of your home during most of the winter? You can just as easily have every room comfortably warm. If at your winter parties you spend half of the time adjusting fires... opening and closing windows... wondering if everyone is comfortable... then automatic heating will be especially interesting to you. One match ends all of your winter heating problems when you install a gas furnace. You merely light the furnace in the fall and it heats your home automatically all winter until you turn it off next spring.

Your husband will be bragging that he tends his own furnace. Then with a smile explain that winding an 8-day clock is all the attention his new gas furnace requires. He will proudly invite friends down to the furnace room on a tour of inspection—a furnace room spotlessly clean.

When questioned about the mechanics of the furnace, he will naively admit that he doesn't know a gasket from a gadget, but why should he? There's not a single moving part to get out of adjustment, become noisy or wear out. Why, it "orders its own fuel as it needs it," makes its own adjustments to changes in outside temperatures... holds the temperature inside comfortably uniform... and never varies over one degree!

You already know that natural gas is always clean... always cheap and easily handled. Now learn the extra convenience of heating your home with a modern gas furnace. Enjoy the new warmth... safety... dependability... and efficiency that it brings you. Give your family the luxurious comfort of a perfectly heated home this winter. We invite you to make an appointment for our representative to call and discuss your heating problem now—without obligation, of course.

First Photos Of The Sinking Of The Tahiti

Here are the first pictures of the sinking of the passenger liner Tahiti, which went down south of Raratonga Island, in the South Seas, to reach the United States. At the left is an unusual picture showing a lifeboat full of passengers and sailors being lowered from the main deck of the sinking ship; note that the boat has not yet touched the water. At the right is a final view of the Tahiti; taken from a lifeboat, showing the big ship settling by the stern preparatory to its final plunge. These pictures were rushed to NEA Service by the Matson Liner Ventura, rescuer of the survivors.

ILLNESS ALMOST FATAL TO WELL KNOWN OIL MAN

A blood transfusion saved Col. Robert D. Gordon's life when it was almost despaired of, friends here have learned.

The well known oil operator was stricken with a serious illness several weeks ago but was recovering when he suffered a relapse and his condition was very grave.

He has sufficiently improved to be able to leave All Saint's hospital in Fort Worth.

The well he was drilling on the Hunt lease in Eastland county is shut down at 3,060 feet, it is announced.

Why, Mr. Balding!

AFTER all the trouble we took to make the international polo matches with Great Britain fine and clean and honorable, everything is spoiled. The fair name of polo has been shattered beyond repair. The ugly truth has leaked out at the last. Gerald Balding of the British team was for several years a professional at the Rumson Club.

Here Gerald Balding has been going around trying to give everybody the impression that he is a gentleman and a sportsman. He has insinuated himself into our good graces. A wolf in sheep's clothing! And we hadn't suspected it.

So Much Expected

THE polo matches with Britain might have been wonderful sport. There is dashing devil-may-care action every second during a polo match, with mallets flashing, ponies wheeling, riders leaning far out of their saddles for the dancing ball. It is intense sport. Sometimes it is so intense that it is rough. One of the riders occasionally takes it (the mallet) on the chin, and it's not exactly like being slapped on the wrist.

A sport replete with vim and fire, with the best riders and most accurate shots of two nations pitted against one another—and then this had to happen! Investigators found that it indeed was the truth, Gerald Balding had given polo lessons at the Rumson Club. It was pretty well understood, too, that he received money, or at least "gifts," in return for his instruction.

Think of Ourselves

THERE isn't much left to do, of course, except to lynch Gerald Balding. He has come among us like a snake in the grass. We, lovers of amateurism to a point where the amateur is not even supposed to let anyone pay the check for luncheon, must not be contaminated by the menace of Gerald Balding's sin. Think of your growing sons and daughters. They will probably hear that Gerald Balding once gave lessons at the

OIL NEWS

VAN, Tex., Sept. 11—The Forey Oil Corporation's independent well in Van Zandt county blew in Wednesday afternoon with 1,200 pounds pressure. Potential production is placed at 35,000 barrels per day. Oil was blown 250 feet into adjoining woods, and in fifteen minutes 60 barrels of oil filled the storage tank.

The discovery well extends the proven field east several hundred yards. It has been watched with acute interest by scouts for large companies. Two other wells are located in the vicinity, completion of which should define the new field.

The new producer is located on an eight and a half acre tract owned by the Sanger Investment Company of Dallas.

SAN ANGELO, Tex., Sept. 11—Daily initial production by three wells, all in Pecos county, totaled 16,938 barrels last week, although dry holes exceeded producers five to three.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 11—Announcement that the Penn Oil Company is to drill a wildcat test in southern Dewitt county is attracting considerable interest among southwest Texas oil scouts.

Late estimates on the Simms Oil Company's new wildcat southwest of Normanna, De county, place it at 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily.

NACOGDOCHES, Tex., Sept. 11—Brother-in-law of John No. 3, near Henderson, has revived oil activity in this county. Two wild cat wells are to be made one near Garrison and the other near Chireno.

Latest Fall Fashions From Paris

These sketches are the first to be made from actual models exhibited at the fall openings of the French capital's fashion houses. Left: This evening ensemble shows an original interpretation of the fall and winter mode. The ermine-bordered perleum attached to the black velvet dress is wide enough to stand out from the figure. The dress is form-fitted to the knees, where it flares out according to the latest style dictates. The collar also is of ermine, with a Medici collar so high as almost to hide the wearer's head at the back. Right: The fur-hemmed cape, shawl collar and belt of this tweed model are distinctively new. The material is a black and white woven with the design horizontal, which allows for the lacustrations at the back of the pockets. The trimming is seal fur.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 11—Bee county today possessed nine oil or gas pools opened since Feb. 1. The Quincy Beach well of William F. Moran and Independent Oil and Gas Company blew in Wednesday, a wild gasser with sings of oil. Production sand is about 4,350 feet.
