Where Will City's New Standpipes be Located?

MULTING ENGINEERS ARE VERY POSITIVE

Original Site In Park For Big Water Standpipes Ill Advised.

Bids were asked by the Eastland for one new standpipe and the removal to a new site of the large standpipe now on the shadow of the city hall. It was the intention to place the new standpipes at the point of the Eastland park hill, which is in the rear part of the grounds from the kitchen.

The Terrill Bartlett Company of San Antonio employed as consulting engineers, the objection was raised by the city against the proposed location of the two standpipes to be rejected and new bids asked when new plans and drawings have been prepared.

World Damage Park consulting engineers gave chief objection to the proposed location of the two standpipes. The highest point of the park hill was that it was to be destroyed or damaged by the appearance of the standpipes. It was not necessary to place the standpipes at the highest point.

Consulting engineers suggested one standpipe be placed on the brow of the hill at its northern slope, out of view of the surrounding city, and to place the other on top of the high school hill standpipes. It was stated that the city would not with efficiency equal to be expected to result from the higher location. It was stated that the city would be bet-

HOUSTON, July 31.—John Henry Kirby, Houston millionaire and Texas finance director for the Democratic party, today announced his candidacy for the state senate.

DAIRY COWS DISCUSSED AT SHORT COURSE

Quality of Cattle First Consideration, Feed and Care Get Results.

COLLEGE STATION, July 31.—Discussing the "Dairy Situation and Problems in Texas" before the dairy and swine section of the nineteenth annual Farmers Short Course here, J. A. Clutter, professor of dairy husbandry of the A. and M. College of Texas, cited numerous facts tending to show that the dairy industry of this state is developing rapidly. "Cattle prices have advanced, new markets have been created and a general wave of enthusiasm and optimism is prevalent," he said.

Texas has 978,000 head of milk cows and heifers two years and more of age valued at $43,785,000, Mr. Clutter pointed out. While being sixth in cow population rank in the United States, however, the total valuation rank is tenth. California ranks below Texas in number of dairy cattle, having only 596,000, but the valuation is $78 a cow as compared with $45 for Texas. In consequence California ranks ahead of Texas in total valuation of milk cows.

Improve Quality
"This data emphasizes the importance of improving the quality of cattle," the speaker said. "While the production per annum to the cow is low, probably being under 3000 pounds, a gradual improvement is manifest. Field men, county agents and representatives of other educational agencies are working industriously and intelligently on this problem. This is proven by the number of bull circles being organized, the development of dairy herd improvement associations and increased interest in official testing. There are at least a hundred active bull circles; four cow test associations are functioning and many are contemplated; the number of cows on official test has increased from 310 on July 1, 1927 to 424 on June 1, 1928, and at the same time the breeders have increased from 46 to 63."

Mrs. Clutter stressed the need of quality and quantity going hand in hand. "The necessity of increasing volume of dairy products has been stressed in the past," she said. "That was due to the very

Judge Funderburk Prepares To Enter Run-Off Campaign

Judge O. C. Funderburk, candidate for Associate Justice of the Court of Civil Appeals, who a few months ago was appointed by Governor Dan Moody to fill an unexpired term on the court, made a statement today with reference to Saturday's primary.

"I am exceedingly grateful for the earnest and faithful interest manifested by my many friends in behalf of my candidacy for the Court of Civil Appeals for the Eleventh District. In many places throughout the district I received a clear majority of all votes cast for that office, clearly revealing a spirit of fairness on the part of the voters in recognizing the fact that I gave up my law practice to accept the appointment of Governor Moody last February, and in being willing to permit me to fill out this unexpired term in order that I may have the opportunity to make a record by which I may fairly be judged. I have every assurance that my friends over the district will be more active than ever to see that my appointment is not repudiated by the people."

BEGINNERS IN DAIRYING HAVE MUCH TO LEARN

Urged To Begin With A Few Good Cows and Develop Herd Carefully.

COLLEGE STATION, July 31.—For the beginner in dairy farming, the yardstick of quality rather than quantity should be used in measuring the size of his herd, according to J. L. Thomas, dairy specialist, extension service, A. & M. College of Texas, as set forth in his discussion of "Problems Confronting the Beginner in Farm Dairy Work" before the dairy and swine group at the nineteenth annual Farmers Short Course in session here.

"One good cow that will produce 300 and more pounds of butterfat a year, will produce ten times as much profit as will a cow that produces half that much butterfat," he added. "It is far better to start into dairy farming with two or three good cows on which some profit can be made and from this start develop a larger herd than to try to go in big at the start, stock up with a lot of poor cows, lose money and have to quit dairy farming because there is no money in it."

It generally prevails that dairy cows will fit into any farm program when farm crops are grown, Mr. Thomas said. The character of the farm will determine the number of cows. Most farmers on small areas will find that from five to eight cows can be kept to advantage while on some highly specialized farms of greater acreage there may be need for only enough cows to supply the needs on that farm.

As to the breed to be selected, it is generally best to select that breed that predominates in the community, the speaker suggested. By selecting such a breed, he can get his herd into bull associations, exchange animals and sell his surplus stock in a way that would not be possible if he were the only man in the community with a particular breed. If only one or two cows are used as a foundation these should be pure bred in most cases, but herd most of them may be graded with a few pure breeds for use as foundation cows for building up a future herd, the speaker advised.

NOBILE AND COMPANIONS ON WAY TO ROME

Return of Arctic Explorers Marked By Absence of Enthusiasm.

By United Press.
VERONA, Italy, July 31.—Commander Nobile and his companions—survivors of the dirigible Italia were back on Italian soil today after their tragic adventure.

A train bearing the party's special car that has proceeded direct from Narvik, Norway, arrived here just after noon and continued on to Rome.

The train is due at Rome at 11 p. m. There will be no official reception at the railway station there, in contrast to the scene that marked the departure of the Italia from Italy for the north pole last spring.

Newspapers throughout the country welcomed the party back to Italian soil and there is expected to be a popular demonstration in the survivors' honor when they arrive at Rome.

NEW ORLEANS, July 31.—The 26-foot gasoline launch Bogie was believed nearing Natchez, Miss., early today in its attempt to beat the 19-hour record for a run between New Orleans and St. Louis on the Mississippi river. The small boat left New Orleans at 5:58 p. m. yesterday.

Smith Enjoying Last of Vacation Before Campaign

By United Press.
HAMPTON BAYS, Long Island, July 31.—Governor Al Smith was winding up his vacation today preparatory to the opening of his Democratic campaign for the presidency.

Swimming and golf will keep him busy until tomorrow, when he will start back to New York for conferences with party leaders before returning to Albany to complete his notification speech.

Although Smith declined to discuss politics while on his vacation, his friends say he is waiting to see what kind of ammunition the opposition has before opening his counter barrage. He is sizing up the attacks made on his legislative records by William Allen White of Kansas and may reply to them upon his return to New York.

New International Naval Agreement Being Discussed

LONDON, England, July 31.—A new attempt at an international naval agreement—a sequel to the proposals that failed in the Geneva disarmament conference in February—is under way now with France and England already in accord.

Sir Austin Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, in the House of Commons last night announced that Great Britain had reached a preliminary agreement with France. "I am about to communicate the compromise to the other principal naval powers and I am hoping that it may be acceptable to them," Sir Austin said.

Sir Austin would discuss the matter no further than to make this announcement.

CHAPTER I
Lila stood on the brink of a new adventure. She had been thrilled to the core of her little body. And she had known how to be a girl. She had not been behind the mask of a woman, she wore to conceal her soul. And she had known how to be a girl. She had not been behind the mask of a woman, she wore to conceal her soul. And she had known how to be a girl. She had not been behind the mask of a woman, she wore to conceal her soul.

knowledge that they did. But Bertie Lou knew Lila had known her for years. Lila was a menace. She'd always played the game by her own rules. She never gave another girl a sporting chance. Bertie Lou wasn't going to be jealous of Rod's past. But his future belonged to her, at least insofar as Lila was concerned. Lila had had her chance. She'd turned Rod down because he wasn't making enough money. And she couldn't see any chance for a bookkeeper in Wayville to leap into a fortune.

Of course it was all right for Lila to send a present. Bertie Lou conceded that. But why a dagger? From anyone else it would have meant nothing. But coming from Lila it might mean anything. That was the rub. Bertie Lou didn't know. Lila hadn't gone steadily with any boy since Rod. But she wasn't lonely by any means. She was popular. What if she wanted Rod?

her covered had been her mother's chief concern and activity for several years. Her dad grunted at her, lingered a bit over his second cup of coffee, and then took himself off to his carpenter shop to work until time to come back and dress for the wedding. He wanted to say something to Bertie Lou. He didn't know what it was but a man didn't have a young daughter getting married every day. He felt he ought to say something. And he said nothing because these half naked young animals of the present day confused him.

Observations

Governor Fuller: "I purpose a pledge that we encourage by word and deed and prayer a closer union of the English-speaking people of the world in accord with the Latin phrase inscribed on the coinage of this country—e pluribus unum (one out of many.)"

Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair: "We must feed the children with a belief in the greatness of their destiny, in being the generation that will cause wars to cease by making effective the tenets of the Sermon on the Mount between nations and between individuals."

Maj. Gen. F. B. Maurice: "I went into the British Army believing that if you want peace you must prepare for war. I believe now that if you prepare for war you will get war."

Sir Robert Baden-Powell: "We profess to call ourselves Christian, and then we use those talents God has given us to discover the worst methods of man-killing."

Kenneth C. M. Sills: "Youth today is clearly in need of spiritual discipline, and in this age of individualism it needs such spiritual discipline more than ever."

Bruce S. Wright: "The world owes me a living. No, it does not. I owe the world a life."

Cost of Public School Education in United States Discussed By Teacher

AUSTIN. — "Expenditures for public education in the cities of the United States approximate two per cent of the total income of the people of those cities and in these cities approximately two-fifths of total expenditures are for public education," Dr. J. O. Marberry, professor of education and director of the extension teaching bureau at the University of Texas, said in the preface to his treatise on the Administration of Public Education in centralized and co-ordinated school, recently issued in bulletin form by the University division of education. "Serious attention is being given to the various problems of public school education," he continued. "Studies are appearing in increasing number regarding the types of school districts the authority of boards of education under these types, the relation of the superintendent of schools to the boards of education and the way in which these matters relate to educational efficiency. "Public school districts are not organized on a uniform basis. These organizations vary widely in different sections of the country and as widely in a given section. The relation that school districts bear to the political unit, such as the municipality, the town, or the county, is of great importance. Whether the administration of education is centralized in the superintendent's office or divided between the superintendent and a business manager, each responsible directly to the board of education, is of great significance. "And yet the type of district and the kind of organization may be of minor importance if excellent results are obtained. The taxpayers wish efficiency in school administration. The school pupils deserve the best opportunity possible to reap the greatest degree of profit from the years spent in getting an education. The teachers, principals and supervisors should have desirable conditions under which to do their work. When we consider that approximately twenty-five per cent of our total population is engaged in attending or teaching or supervising and administering the public schools and that another substan-stantial percentage is directly and definitely interested in what these schools are doing, then it is that the enormity of the problem impresses us."

What Should Be Published?
"Anything that the good Lord will permit to happen we will publish." Such in substance was the terse statement of policy advanced years ago by one of the pioneers in sensational journalism. It has stood too long, we believe, as a standard or excuse for the publication of lurid or nauseating reading matter that makes the front pages of many large papers extremely distasteful to intelligent readers. Editors who are more interested in the circulation statement than in the social consequences of their work, have long considered it ethical to publish all the news, whether it is fit or unfit for publication. But we feel that this is a distortion of the very meaning of the word ethics. It is a simple rule to substitute for good judgment and common decency. Every intelligent editor must suppress much news. Details of crime that are suggestive, or repulsive, that stimulate unbalanced minds to deeds of violence, have no place in a well-managed journal. Accounts of the indiscretions of youths, details of brutal acts that serve no purpose other than to satisfy the morbid curiosity of immature minds—these and many other things that do happen in

Rod, who kissed her as if he'd been hungry all his life for her lips

Bertie Lou had openly subscribed to that overworked declaration about keeping no strings on any one. "If he wants to go, he may. If any other girl can take him, she's welcome."

That was before she fell in love with Rod. Now she knew that a possessive, fighting strain ran side by side with her pride. She would keep Rod if she could. And she couldn't see how any girl could stop loving him. She didn't believe Lila had. Lila had instilled the idea by a pose of sadness, and frequent wistful references to a great mistake.

Bertie Lou slammed the door of the dining room with a bang. Lila had spoiled her night.

When she offered the lemonade to her mother Mrs. Ward said: "Your hand is hot, honey; don't you feel well?"

"It's awfully cold, Mums; do you think it will rain tomorrow?" Bertie Lou evaded.

"Maybe it will rain before morning and cool things off. Can't you sleep?"

"I'm too excited!"—that was a slip—"I mean there are so many darned things to think about when you have a wedding. I

At six her mother woke her, scolding. "You'll be as stiff as a ramrod. Go and take a hot bath, real hot. Yes, I know it's a hot day, but you do as I say. Cool off with a shower if you like but don't stand there rubbing your eyes out."

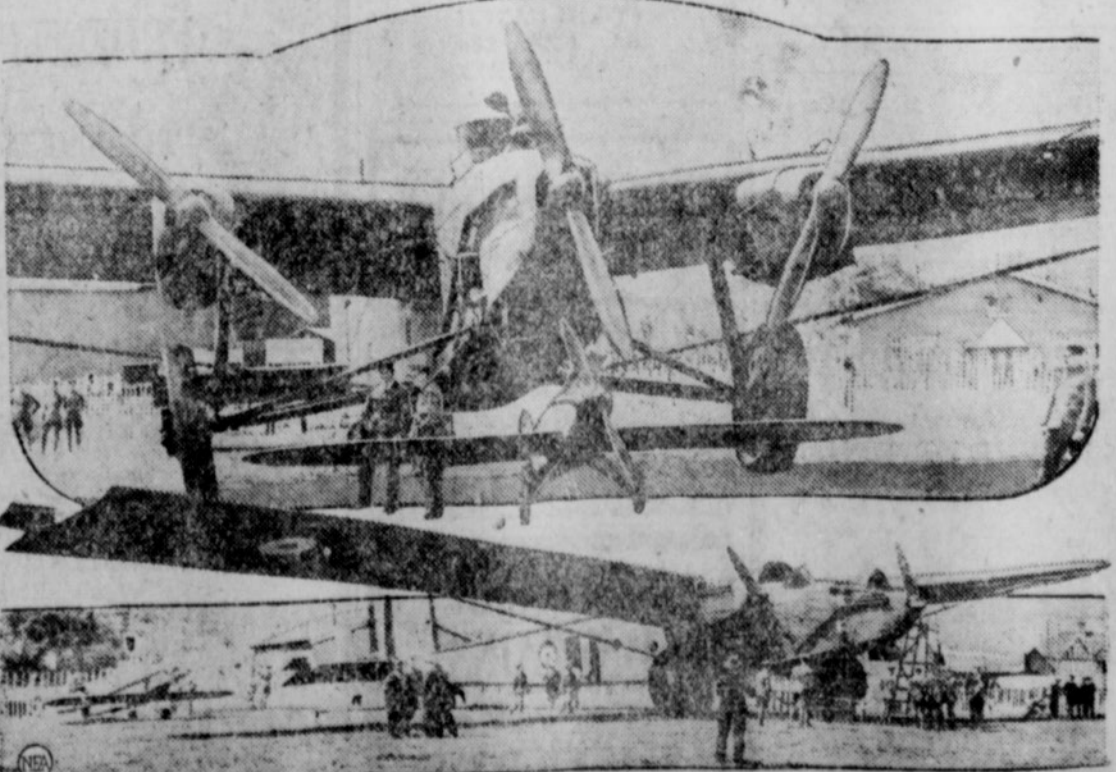

Mother feelings hiding behind butling authority.

Bertie Lou had a better idea. She went down and put on a phonograph record and limbered up with the Black Bottom and a stomp. Then she took the hot bath and poured the last quarter bottle of bath salts into the tub. Her mother didn't like them. She might as well luxuriate. Couldn't pack a nearly empty bottle.

She was well seeped in rose perfume by the time she was ready for the cold shower.

Then came breakfast. It was slightly cooler on the shaded porch and Bertie Lou's mother had provided lead honeydew with lemon. No one "jawed" her for being half dressed this morning. Her old organdie house coat was left unfastened over her limited underthings without rebukes. Bertie Lou's sweet little body was no mystery to her family. Keeping
