Man Still Must Bow To Power of Nature

The drouth in the northwest, coming as it does in a year when the rival parties are preparing once more to "do something for the farmer," is a timely little reminder that the old proverb is still true. Man proposes, but God disposes.

We can make plans, arrange finances, and erect protective walls until we are blue in the face, but in the end Nature has the last word. Whether the farmers of a given territory are to have a good or a bad year depends, in the last analysis, on mysterious forces which we cannot control and which we only begin to understand.

A great deal has been written about the extreme aridity of the last few years in the northwest. We have very properly been reminded that our use of our soil has been unwise and imprudent, that we have removed our forest cover too fast, and that we have given erosion a helping hand by faulty methods of cultivation.

But the wind, as a writer in ancient Palestine remarked, bloweth where it listeth; and if it blows dry and hot, week after week and month after month, with never a rain cloud to ride on its crest the people underneath it are going to suffer, whether they have farmed their land wisely or foolishly.

And perhaps it is not altogether a bad thing for us to rediscover this old truth. It may take a little of the twentieth century cockiness out of us.

We have a habit of talking these days as if our destinies were entirely in our own hands. We see the millennium just over the skyline, and although we may differ violently about the way to get there, we are pretty well convinced that a way does exist and that we can find it if we just hunt hard enough.

We may be right. But underneath all his modern science and invention, man is fundamentally what he was in the days of Abraham; a lonely and rather helpless creature bent down beneath a high sky through whose blue emptiness his vision cannot pierce.

He takes what the world lets him take and no more; and now and then Nature smites him with a tornado, or shrugs her shoulders in an earthquake, or bakes and parches him with a long drought, to remind him of that little fact.

When such things happen, our modern civilization can pick up the pieces and repair the damage faster than the civilization of our forefathers.

But it can do no more than they could do to keep the damage from being done. Like them, we are here on suffering.

At last the identity of the group who march off with grid goal posts is explained. They're delegates keeping in midseason trim.

Those who are pondering what to send that bride who will be married under water might try some divers gifts.

Pastor Recalls Early History of Church In County

By REV. DICK O'BRIEN

In the early spring of 1874, C. H. and C. B. O'Brien landed in Eastland county from Grant county, Arkansas. He had left his native state of Georgia soon after three and one-half years under "Fighting Joe" Wheeler, with the intention of coming to Texas to make his home. He often said that he got water bound in Arkansas for three years during which time he met the girl who later became his wife and they came on to Texas together.

They first settled on Long Branch. C. H. O'Brien was the first man to hold a title to the land upon which the present Long Branch church and school are built. After he had "improved" this place somewhat he sold it and moved about four miles southwest of where Gorman now stands. Here on the banks of Currycomb Creek he took up another quarter section of land, built a log house, cleared a small field and began farming. Some years later he removed with his family to an improved farm on the banks of Savannah Creek, about one mile nearer where Gorman now stands.

Weatherford was the nearest railroad point and it would require three or four weeks to make a trip there and back. Indian raids were not uncommon, and "night riders" and "mobbs" frequently visited and warned or often beat and sometimes killed citizens whom they considered undesirable. The Indians killed few people but did much stealing of horses, meat, grain and other things, and kept the newcomers in a constant state of uneasiness. Under these difficult conditions the O'Briens reared a family of eight boys and four girls.

Back in the eighties an arbor was constructed and a revival conducted within 500 yards of the O'Brien home. This revival resulted in the organization of a church which met during fair weather under the arbor and in the homes of the members in cold or wet weather. Later the organization was moved to Elm school, where worship was carried on for several years until a house of worship was erected halfway between the arbor and schoolhouse, and for that reason was called Midway.

This is still an active church organization in the Cisco Baptist Association. As far as the writer knows this was the first Baptist church organized in Eastland county, and Mrs. C. B. O'Brien is the sole surviving charter member. Ten of the children are still living, each married and with families ranging in numbers from one to eight children. Of the eight boys living, two are preachers, five are deacons, and all are active church members. Two of the girls married deacons. Mother O'Brien proudly boasts that not a member of the family has ever spent a night in jail, nor been accused of crime in the 62 years of family history in Eastland county. Now 80 years of age, she is making her home with her baby girl, Mrs. C. B. Bibebe, at Carbon, within less than 15 miles of the spot where she landed with her husband and first baby girl 62 years ago. C. H. O'Brien died at Cisco in February, 1920, at the age of 74 years.

Q. When and by whom was Sam Houston defeated for governor of Texas? G. G., Crystal City.

A. Hardin R. Runnels of Red River county, then lieutenant-governor, the Democratic candidate, defeated Houston, independent, in 1857, by about 9,000 majority. Two years later Houston defeated Runnels for re-election by about the same majority. The slavery and Indian questions were issues in both campaigns, which were bitterly fought. Runnels was named for Governor Runnels.

KENDRIDGE.—After hard one test and failure in Pitzer & West of Breckwell have faith that a new area can be opened in the Breckwell lime on the DeLafosse ranch, and to preparing to start their drilling in that section, just over Schleford county line west

Pitzer said Monday the being cleared and derrick reworked. The third test is located 600 feet southeast of original well. The test, if successful, will open for development a new oil section near the center of the north half of T. survey No. 1,550, and 650 feet east of the No. 1 De-drilled by Pitzer & West a year ago.

First test showed an initial flow of 300 barrels of high gravity oil in the Ellenberger before shooting off the casing. The lime saturation was at 4,453 feet, making an average of 53 gravity crude, green.

Second test on the same well drilled a half-mile to the east winter. It encountered alpha water in the Ellenberger and was plugged. Pitzer originally blocked 5,400 acres in the eastern Shackleford, and around the 2,500-acre De-ranch.

The original hole was a Humble bought a half-in in the block. Magnolia Petroleum company and O. H. Chapin Waxahatchie are the only holders inside the block.

Texas Oil Tax Nearly Eight Cents For Each Barrell

By H. J. STRUTH
Texas oil producers actually pay a total production tax of seven and three-quarters cents per barrel of crude oil produced, which tops the tax rate of every other oil producing state, according to data collected by The Mid-Continent Oil and an Association of Texas. This fact is accurately revealed for the first time through the collection of tax statistics from Texas oil producers by questionnaire, the returns from which have thus far accounted for sixty per cent of the State's crude oil production in 1935.

Production taxes paid within the State during the past year, by more than 4,000 Texas oil producers, aggregated to $30,175,317 on a total production of 391,097,000 barrels, or an average tax per barrel of 7.72 cents. This makes it evident that the gross production tax of two cents per barrel on crude oil is only one of many taxes imposed upon the producing branch of the Texas oil industry. Last year, the gross production tax paid by Texas oil producers and royalty owners amounted to $8,126,995, which constituted only about one-fourth of the oil production taxes collected in the State. In addition, $22,048,322 was collected in State, county, city, and school ad valorem taxes, franchise taxes, regulatory taxes, gross receipts taxes and various other State levies on the producing branch of the oil industry.

Texas oil operators are shown by these facts to be at a decided disadvantage with those in other oil producing states. In Oklahoma the crude oil production tax is five per cent of its market value, which makes the average tax per barrel about this and one-half cents, and this is in lieu of all other taxes. In Louisiana, the crude oil tax ranges from four to eleven cents per barrel, depending upon the gravity of the oil produced, while the average tax is not more than six cents per barrel. In this connection, it is pertinent to note that the Louisiana legislature realizes that present oil taxes are too high and have actually proven disadvantageous to the state's oil development, since it voted down proposals to increase state oil taxes and reduced the tax rate of certain of the state's oil operations. In New Mexico, the oil tax has averaged less than two cents, also in lieu of all other taxes. Kansas levies no oil production tax, while their ad valorem tax averages less than two cents a barrel. California has no gross production tax on oil, while their ad valorem taxes average but 3.75 cents per barrel. No other oil producing state imposes as high an oil production tax as Texas.

Cast iron dutch ovens, the very thing for that camping trip, at Mickle's, "The Friendly Store."

This huge tax bill does not by any means cover all branches of Texas oil industry. It represents only the taxes paid by producers of crude oil on production and operating equipment of leases. Additional millions of dollars in taxes are paid to the State and various counties by oil refiners, natural gasoline plant operators, producers and distributors of natural gas, transporters of petroleum and its products and marketers of refined petroleum products. Altogether, the Texas oil industry is the direct source of sixty per cent of the tax revenue collected in the State. Additional data received from Texas oil operators by questionnaire shows that expenditures in 1935 for payrolls, lease rentals, lease bonuses, royalties, freight charges, materials and supplies, teaming, etc., aggregated $440,418,175. Payrolls alone amounted to $161,682,479; landowner rentals and bonuses; equipment manufacturers reaped a harvest of $126,449,009, spent in the purchase of last year's oil field operating equipment.

Cool Millions

Mark Twain lamented the fact that everybody talked about the weather, but nobody did anything about it. Mark Twain died in 1910.

TODAY:

Most movie theaters are air-cooled. Modern furnaces heat your house in winter . . . cool it in summer.

Refrigerators take just five minutes to make ice for long, tall, cooling drinks. Railway trains cross deserts in midsummer with air-cooled sleepers and coaches. Office buildings, cafes and restaurants are air-cooled.

Even the ships at sea carry air conditioned salons.

If you don't believe anybody has done anything about the weather, just glance through the advertising columns of this newspaper and see how many ways you can defeat the weather-man's whims—today.

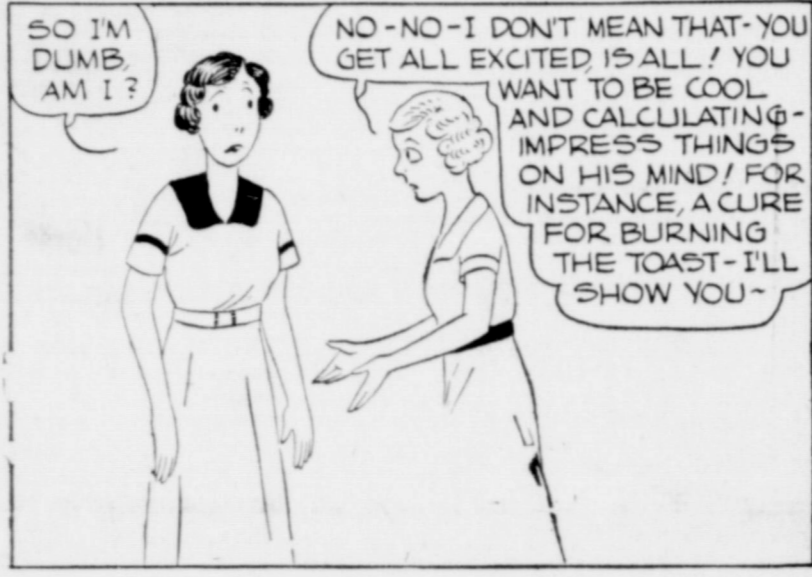

As these and other new ways of living are devised, tried and proved, they will be offered to you through newspaper advertising. Keep an eye open for them, and—along with millions of other Americans—keep cool!

So Much for Love

JOIN HERE TODAY
HELENA, youthful and the women's sportswear at Helvig's store, received an invitation from one of her friends, SANDRA LEIGH, to a week-end party at Crest in Lodge.

Also a member of the party is handsome PETER HENDERSON from a nearby town. It is a case of love at first sight between Helena and Peter. Immediately he asks her to marry him. Helena hesitates, however.

Helena confide in and it is decided that the wedding shall take place at the station.

ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER III
 Sandra Leigh herself who for the minister, using the down roustabout set by the caretaker of the house. She was to return with all before noon, and in the Crest Mountain Lodge a beehive of activity. Sandra and her friends delightedly decorated the main room of the lodge with boughs, and strips of paper which the lodgekeeper resuscitated.

Excited than any were Henderson and Helena. For part they kept close to respective rooms, trembling at the time when Sandra returned with the minister. Helena, stricken by panic, debated whether to go to the station. Suppose it a horrible mistake? There a hundred things that could happen. She might discover that was imprudent and given ink; for Helena had heard these evils often went with it. And she might learn—too that Peter was one of those who found all women attractive and was in turn admired by them.

There came back to Helena a remark of Sandra's: "No woman can resist charm of his. . . . What he meant by that? Perhaps is a calculated statement, a trick designed to warn a friend, like her think.

The morning wore on, she began to dress herself for the wedding. Sandra had told her that she might wear simple sportswear for the ceremony, and she had been mildly amused by the suggestion. In her week-end she had packed only three things: one for swimming, one for fishing through the woods, and a outfit adaptable to whatever normal affair might take place. She had never dreamed that "informal affair" might turn to be her own wedding!

As she completed dressing she heard Sandra's familiar voice he veranda.

She couldn't find a minister—but and a justice of the peace, and insists he can marry people!

MOMENT later came Sandra's excited rap on Helena's door. She had been invited to the wedding. "You've no idea of a perfectly ghastly time I'm finding someone who could marry you and Peter!"

Helena laughed shakily. "May—that's a bad omen."

Nonsense! I didn't mean that. goose. But this is a wild entry up here. They don't exist marriages, you know. Though did find a justice of the peace, can't see very well, and he has a slakers, but I'm sure you'll adore him. He was a little suspicious first. Said he wouldn't have anything to do with what he called a "gin wedding." But finally I managed to assure him that nobody had taken a drink at Crest Mountain Lodge for at least 10 hours.

Almost before they realized that Peter had climbed the tree, he dived from its topmost branch.

"Maybe you shouldn't have done that," Helena faltered. "I feel as if I might do well with a cocktail."

Sandra put her arm about Helena's shoulder. "Buck up, baby. Girls get married every minute—and live. It's the bridegroom who really needs a drink. He takes all the responsibility. Sandra grinned mischievously. "And I'd be willing to bet that Peter has had one or two."

When Helena accompanied Sandra out into the giant living room with its roaring fire she discovered that the Leigh girl was right. Peter had taken a drink or two, although he did not show it. Helena would never have realized it had she not detected the sweetish odor of liquor. She didn't blame him. The fact was that she rather envied the false assurance the alcohol had given Peter. How did a man feel when he was about to agree, before God and the world, to take unto himself a woman and support her for the rest of their natural lives?

She would never, as long as she lived, forget the next few moments in that tall-ceilinged room with its hewn fir beams. Always she would remember the smiling faces of Sandra's friends—Ruth Sutter and her husband, Fain Platt, after a tour of Ceylon and Malaya on behalf of the Society for the Preservation of Empire Fauna.

evening train, if you don't mind. I know you won't expect us to stay over Sunday. I mean. . . . He stopped, as embarrassed as a boy. "Well, after all, there's been a marriage, Sandy."

"Of course there has," the Leigh girl laughed. "We all expected you'd leave on the night train. Good heavens, Peter, you didn't think we all expected to stay with you the remainder of your married life, did you?"

Helena had a sudden, frightening thought. "I'd forgotten to telephone Miss Landes at Helvig's that I won't be at work Monday."

"Skip it," Sandra told her. "I've wired her, and she'll get it Monday morning!" She turned toward the group around the table where the cocktails had been set out. "A toast to the bride! And then everybody into their swim suits."

It was over an hour before they really got into their swimming togs and were headed toward the shore of the lake. And meanwhile there had been more than a toast to the bride. A toast to the bride had called for a toast to the bridegroom—and this had been followed by a toast to Helena for her bravery. After that, there were cocktails consumed without any particular reason; and Helena nervously saw that Peter took even more than the rest.

Despite his drinking he remained sensible and courteous, and she thought in sudden panic: He's used to drinking a lot.

The last cocktail finished, Sandra gave them all 10 minutes in which to get into their suits. Nervous and trembling, Helena took longer—and when she appeared on the lodge veranda she discovered that the rest were already down on the shore.

"Hurry," Sandra called to her. "We've begun a diving contest. I'm putting up a secret prize."

Peter's blond head poked up from the lake. "Hello, Mrs. Henderson!" he called. With a few swift strokes he was ashore. "I'm cutting this contest short right now, he announced. "I'll dive from that tree—it's higher than the top rung of the diving platform."

"Don't be a fool," Jack Gose told him seriously. "It's at least 10 feet higher."

Peter answered him with a glance slightly alcoholic in its bravery. "After all," he said, "it's my wedding day—and if I feel like diving from a tree top I'm going to do it!"

No one considered, then, just what was happening—not even Helena. More with pride than with fear, she watched Peter climb recklessly, swiftly, to the topmost branch of the tall fir which stood by the shore of the lake. Almost before she realized it, he had dived. She saw his body hurtling, saw it strike the water and disappear beneath the surface.

There was cheering laughter from the crowd. Then silence. Silence during which the surface of the lake smoothed itself. Suddenly Helena knew that something had happened to Peter. She knew it even before Fain Sutter said in a queer voice, "There might be submerged stumps at the bottom . . ."

Life of the Saint Of the Day

By REV. S. E. BYRNE

St. Alexius was the only son of noble Roman parents, preeminently known for virtue, birth and wealth. On this wedding night, by God's special design, he secretly left Rome, and journeyed to Edessa in the far East, where he gave away all that he had brought with him, content hereafter to live on alms begged at the gate of Our Lady's church in that city. It happened that on one occasion that the servants whom his father had sent in search of him, arrived at Edessa, and passing him but not recognizing him gave him alms. Whereupon the man of God, rejoicing, said, "I thank thee, O Lord, who hast called me and granted that I should receive for Thy name's sake alms from my own slaves. Deign to fulfill in me the work Thou hast begun." After 17 years when the people began to discuss his great sanctity, he once more sought obscurity by flight. It was thus while he was on his way to Tarsus that contrary winds drove his ship to Rome. There no one recognized in the thin and ragged man the heir of Rome's noblest house; not even his sorrowing parents, who had in vain sen throughout the world in search of him. He begged of his father and was granted a small corner of his palace as a shelter, and lived on the leavings of the table. It was in this way that he spent 17 years, bearing patiently the mockery of his own slaves. At last, when death had ended this cruel martyrdom, they learned too late, from a writing in his own hand, who it was that they had unknowingly sheltered. Many miracles were performed as a testimony of his sanctity. He died early in the fifth century.

New Program at School Detailed

(Editor's note: The diversified occupations program to be inaugurated in Eastland High School at the next term is today in the first of a series of articles by C. M. Allen, who has been named coordinator.)

Diversified Occupations will be offered in Eastland High School for the coming school year for students desiring the program. This program is becoming extremely popular over the state as a training agency in cities from five to twenty-five thousand population.

The chief reason for its popularity is the fact that it renders invaluable service to serious-minded students who are desirous of learning an occupation by actual experience on the job. This program is a new-born educational frill; it embodies the chief virtues of the time-honored apprenticeship plan of training, but the student earning two credits for the student to graduate from high school, opportunity for the student far earning two cred each year with the opportunity to subjects.

Million Dollar Bill Is On Exhibit at The Centennial

DALLAS, Texas.—I saw a $1,000,000 bill today at the Texas Centennial Exposition—But: The million dollar "bill" or note slab of glass, in the Federal Building.

The treasury department exhibit is one of the most interesting in Uncle Sam's $325,000 permanent structure. The exhibit contains bills from $1 up to $1,000,000. You can see "money" printed, or to be correct, partly printed.

Practically all major departments of the federal government are represented on the 80,000 square feet of exhibit. The alphabetical groups have their displays, the department of commerce, the army, navy and marine corps.

All of the displays are interesting. And, whether you're interested in air lanes, how to tie intricate knots, the HOLC, or how the government tests the strength of silk stockings, you can find something to hold your attention for hours.

To the inland Texan, and the Midwest and Rocky Mountain visitor, probably the most entertaining exhibit is that sponsored by the Navy. Twenty-foot replicas of fighting craft, complete in every detail, constitute an attraction that is hard to beat. Handwork of sailors also is on display.

The Department of Commerce exhibit features the air mail, and has model planes and displays that show how aircraft are tested.

The Federal Building, easily located because of its high, gold topped central shaft, is to the right of the Texas Hall of State, at the south end of the Esplanade. It contains the most expensive exhibits on the grounds, some of which are priceless. Total value of exhibits has been estimated at more than $20,000,000.
