Millions facing possible loss of utility service

By The Associated Press

For nearly 2 million customers who are behind on their utility bills, the start of spring could bring an end to the comforts of home heat and lighting.

In Ohio. utility officials estimate as many as 300.000 customers could lose service Thursday, when a state law that prevents utilities from cutting off service to delinquent customers during the winter expires

In New York, the day of reckoning for 424.000 past-due customers is April 15. An Associated Press survey shows

The problem could have been bigger if not for the unusually mild winter in much of the nation. The weather. coupled with a recent slowing of the escalation in utility rates, has meant smaller-than-expected electricity and gas bills in many regions.

Twenty-two states have moratoriums - most imposed by law, some by the utilities themselves - on the cutoff of service to delinquent customers during the winter, the AP survey found. The moratoriums already have expired in five states, and are scheduled to end this month or next in the 17 others.

Most utilities said they intended to cut off service to customers who do not make arrangements to pay at least part of their bill now. Officials also stressed. however, that in most cases they would prefer avoiding cutoffs.

That's like shutting off the cash register." said Ken Hedrick of Cheyenne (Wyo.) Light. Fuel and

As utilities struggle to collect overdue bills, many have experimented with funds designed to assist their neediest customers. In most cases the money is donated by the utilities, their other customers and community groups and are administered by charity foundations.

Anita Stowell of the American Association of Retired Persons said her group estimated that 60 utilities nationwide had started or planned to start such funds.

Oklahoma Natural Gas Co.'s "Share the Warmth" program donated $123,135 to more than 91,000 customers this past winter. Oklahoma has no state moratorium on cutoffs.

But even the most successful assistance programs have not solved the problem of people falling behind on their bills.

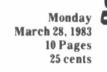

Some officials said the breathing space offered by a state moratorium on utility cutoffs actually leads to an increase in delinquent customers.

"Some people just stiff us." said Walter Salvi of Boston Edison Co.

The AP survey shows that more people are behind on their utility bills this winter, in part because of the sharp rise in unemployment since the winter of 1981-1982. But some utilities said the amount of delinquent debt is smaller this year.

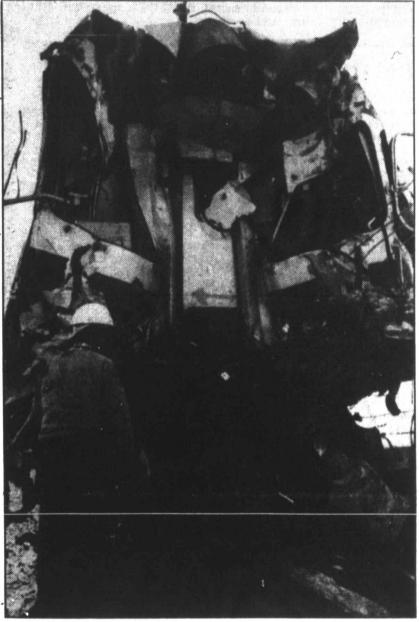

All across the nation utilities reported higher numbers of past-due accounts. and the reason most often cited was the long and deep economic recession.

Over Reagan defense plans

U.S. officials, Soviets swapping charges

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's call for a new missile defense system has touched off a verbal exchange between the two superpowers, with Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov accusing Reagan of lying and the United States charging that Moscow is distorting the truth.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger entered the fray Sunday. calling Andropov's attack "the simple standard Soviet disinformation that has been poured out for years.

We regret the tone and content of Soviet Communist Party Leader Andropov's response to the president's speech on defense policy." the State Department said over the weekend.

Andropov, in an interview for the Communist newspaper Pravda published Sunday, said Reagan told a 'deliberate lie" in asserting that the Soviets have not kept to a moratorium on deploying medium-range nuclear

The Soviet leader also said Reagan's proposed missile defense was part of an extremely perilous" strategy that laymen might find "attractive as the president speaks about what seem to be

"In fact, the strategic offensive forces of the United States will continue to be developed and upgraded at full tilt and along quite a definite line at ... acquiring a first nuclear strike capability," Andropov said.

Reagan outlined his missile defense strategy, and defended his proposed $1.7 trillion defense budget, in a nationally televised address last Wednesday.

Weinberger defended the proposals in an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press Sunday

"The defensive systems the president is talking about are not designed to be partial. What we want to try to get is a system that will develop a defense that is thoroughly reliable and total." Weinberger said.

"I would hope and assume that the Soviets, with all the work they have done and are doing in this field, would develop at about the same time we did the same kind of effective defense," Weinberger said, "which would then have the effect of totally and completely removing these missiles from the Earth

In his speech. Reagan asked the American public to lobby for his defense program. "Tell your senators and congressmen that you know we must continue to restore our military strength," the president urged viewers.

His appeal was too late in the House. A half-hour before the speech, the House approved a fiscal 1984 budget blueprint that calls for boosting Pentagon spending by 4 percent after inflation, compared with the 10 percent increase Reagan had sought.

The fight now moves to the Senate. where the Budget Committee agreed to a White House request to delay voting on a Pentagon figure until after the current Easter recess.

While the Senate panel, and eventually the entire Senate, is expected to approve higher defense spending than the House, the figure is likely to be an increase of no more than 5 or 6 percent.

In addition to his proposal for a stepped-up research program to find a technological shield for the United States. Reagan again warned about the growing Soviet military threat and said the United States needs his $1.7 trillion plan to "rearm America.

"If we stop in midstream." Reagan said, "we will not only jeopardize the progress we have made to date we will mortgage our ability to deter war and achieve genuine arms reductions.

Initial congressional indicated the president had changed few minds.

Some of the sharpest criticism from Sen. Mark Hatfield. R-Ore., who said he was "deeply troubled by the president's statement

Hatfield is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, which will have the job later this year, after an overall figure is set, of approving money for the Pentagon and other agencies.

House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel was unhappy, arguing that Reagan's appeal on defense took away from Michel's effort to concentrate public opinion on Democratic tax and domestic spending policies.

'For me, it (the speech) couldn't have come at a worse time." said the Illinois congressman.

"I don't know that what he said was all that convincing to members of Congress." Michel said.

Some of the loudest critics of Reagan's defense proposal are Republicans on the Senate Budget

Herpes disease hits famed dancing horses

 PIBER, Austria (AP) — Healthy horses at the stud farm for Austria's famed dancing Lippizaner stallions have been evacuated to contain a deadly herpes virus which has killed 31 mares and foals and infected 23 others.

the Agriculture Ministry said today. Gertrude Worel, a ministry spo'teswoman, said six brood mares and 25 foals have died from the disease since the beginning of March. She said six pregnant mares and 17 foals have been infected and are showing such symptoms as coughing and pneumonia.

The epidemic was reported Sunday

On Friday, January 21, 1983, at 7:40 p.m. a white male in his late teens or early 20s. about six feet tall. wearing a white cap, army jacket, faded jeans and white tennis shoes with red stripes. kicked in the glass door on the north side of B and B Pharmacy and then entered the business.

The suspect left the area in a white over blue, two door 1965 or 1966 Chevrolet. There was a second person in the car, police report.

Approximately 250 syringes were taken from the pharmacy. Police think this burglary was drug related, and the suspect had to leave the scene before he was able to take the items he came for.

by a government veterinarian, Dr. Othmar Schmehlik. He identified the disease as rhinopneumonitis and said there is no known cure once it strikes.

The farm normally is home for about 220 fillies, mares and their foals, but the healthy horses have been moved to other farms. Mrs. Worel said A farm official who asked not to be identified said the foals killed thus far represented about half of this year's expected births.

The Lippizaner stallions, selected from horses bred at the farm in this southeast Austrian hamlet, are famed for their precision ballet maneuvers and aerial feats. They are one of Vienna's prime tourist attractions and last year made their first U.S. tour in nearly 20 years

In London, the owner of a Lippizaner mare which had the herpes virus disease said the horse was cured by intensive injections. But we still don't know the cause. said Sally Fox, whose 8-year-old mare was bought from an Englishman who obtained it from the farm at Piber.

Mrs. Fox said her mare was cured by antihistamine and cortisone injections. although two intensive series of shots were needed because the disease reappeared.

The mare came out in lumps and bumps all over in March last year." she said. "None of the other horses or cattle had it and perhaps the disease only affects Lippizaners.

The herpes strain that hit the Lippizaners is specific to horses and is not directly related to the human herpes strain that has spread among the sexually active population in the United States

Schmehlik said stalls at the stud farm are being disinfected and healthy horses inoculated against the disease.

The disease has caused a rash of stillbirths, deaths shortly after birth. and miscarriages which have led to the death of the broodmare, Schmehlik said. "Thank God that the virus hasn't spread to the Royal Spanish Riding School," he said.

Governor finds out size of a Texas polar bear

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just how big is a Texas polar bear, anyway?

Texas Gov. Mark White says he has been given an estimate by Alaskans irritated at his recent remarks questioning why anybody would want to live in such a cold and barren state.

"The fact is, I got a little white rat the other day that they had mounted, and (they) said that was a Texas polar bear." White told about 500 people attending the annual meeting Sunday of the Texas State Society

White said the rat was part of a "hip deep" deluge of mail from Alaska responding to his comments, which revived a friendly rivalry between the two states over the issue of size.

China looses interest in U.S. tie

WASHINGTON (AP) - The latest round of Sino - Soviet talks provides additional evidence of China's steadily diminishing interest in maintaining a strong identification with the West. according to U.S. officials.

The consensus here is that China's waning enthusiasm for its four-year-old American connection would be taking place even if there were no differences between the two over Taiwan, trade and other issues

"Chinese foreign policy is maturing and coming of age." said one U.S. official, adding that this evolution is borne out by China's more realistic appreciation of the limits of its relationship with Washington.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said China recognizes that by its reopening a limited relationhip with the Soviet Union, the United States can no longer take Chinese friendship for granted. This, in turn, gives Peking additional leverage with Washington. the official said.

Nonetheless, there is broad agreement here that the trade and diplomatic ties Washington and Peking have established are irreversible. Officials believe China's goal of modernizing its economy over the next generation requires it to maintain its links to the United States and the West The most recent Sino-Soviet consultations took place during the first two weeks in March. While the atmosphere between the two countries has improved greatly, there has been no progress on three highly divisive substantive issues, the officials said. These differences center on the long-standing border dispute between the two countries and adamant Chinese opposition to the Soviet military occupation of Afghanistan and to the Vietnamese military presence in

According to press reports, the two latter issues were not even discussed in the Moscow talks because the Soviets did not wish to broach subjects involving third countries.

As American officials see it, the Soviets themselves find renewed contacts with the Chinese helpful in their efforts to curtail Sino-American cooperation. "Anything the Soviets can do to retard that effort is useful to them. one official said. "The overtures to Peking are aimed at decoupling the United States from China.

That effort is being supplemented on the Soviet's western flank by Moscow's attempt to loosen American ties to Western Europe. Moscow's "peace offensive" among the European members of NATO began shortly Soviet leader Yuri Andropov assumed power

The first high-level discussions between the two countries after more than a decade of only limited contact were held in Peking last fall.

The most recent round of talks produced agreements on student exchanges and increased sports and cultural exchanges. In addition, an agreement was signed recently calling for a substantial increase in trade

Bumpers seeking Interior probe

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Dale Bumpers is seeking a congressional investigation of reports that the Interior Department dropped 10 scientists from a non-partisan advisory board after the Republian National Committee objected to their appointment Interior Secretary James G. Watt on Sunday denied any effort to purge the scientific advisory boards of Democrats, but said he sought advice on selecting their members from a wide range of sources — including. "I would hope." the Republican Party

Bumpers, who obtained a copy of an Interior Department memorandum on the subject, said Sunday in Little Rock that he has asked for a congressional hearing. He said he asked Sen. Lowell

Weicker, R-Conn., chairman of the subcommittee on energy conservation and supply of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, to conduct the hearing.

What it is is a blatant effort on the part of the Department of Interior to make sure the scientists put on that committee make some kind of ideological test." the Arkansas Democrat said. "When you do this. you're guaranteeing that you're not getting the best scientists. Watt. appearing on the CBS interview program "Face The Nation," said he chose scientific advisers based on expertise, but he also defended his right to change board members. 'You don't have a birthright," Watt said. "Once you've been appointed to a committee doesn't mean you have a right to be their forever. 'Let's change it over," Watt said.

"Let's get new blood in there ... and Republicans are qualified contrary to what you might believe.

Watt denied the changes amounted to a purge

'We don't use that word, and we don't carry on those activities," Watt said. We believe there ought to be input from all segments of society.

According to news reports, the secretary's office sent the GOP national committee a memo last year ... entitled "Appointment Clearance Request." The memo contained the names of 14 scientists being considered for appointment to the department's non-partisan advisory committee on offshore oil leasing.

The committee returned the memo with four names marked "yes" and 10 marked "no." Congressional sources said the 10 were not appointed. although seven were past members who had asked for reappointment at the end of their term

Watt said he did not know if the accounts were accurate, saying "I just don't take the veracity of everything that's printed. But assuming the story was true. Watt said, he saw nothing wrong with checking with the party.

"We have lots of input from a lot of people," Watt said, including senators.

Trio operates Texas monkey sanctuary for wayward chimps

By KAY POWERS The Austin American-Statesman

LEON SPRINGS. Texas (AP) -Monkey business is such a serious matter to Wallace Swett. Greg Miller and Kenny Oberg that they have built a shelter for unwanted primates.

When their phone rings. Miller said, We never know what kind of monkey someone will be screaming for us to take off their hands, but we always say

Saying yes has filled the cages on their eight-acre Texas Monkey Sanctuary northwest of San Antonio with woolly monkeys, spider monkeys, gibbons. capuchins. baboons. macaques, squirrel monkeys, lemurs and tiny marmosets - more than 60 primates in all.

Most had been pets who grew up and outgrew their welcome. Zoos won't take them because their owners had some of their teeth removed or had them castrated in attempts to tone down their behavior. Swett said, "and without this sanctuary. these monkeys have no place else to go.

Bobby, a white-handed gibbon raised as a "surrogate child" became aggressive as he matured. Swett said. and his owners had some of his teeth removed, had him castrated, and finally "just shut him in a closet.

"When he came to the sanctuary. Bobby was afraid of everything that moved, even leaves and butterflies, but now he is adjusting nicely." Swett said. as the gibbon swung from a tire in his

Phoebe, a baboon, would have died in a crib-death experiment, but a researcher became attached to her and took her home. When a baby was born to the family, the researcher asked the sanctuary to take Phoebe

'She's doing fine here and she's just a darling, a real love," Swett said, leaning close to the cage so that Phoebe can "groom" him, an important social activity for primates.

Ernie, a stump-tailed macaque, was abandoned in a boarded-up house in Detroit with nothing but Cheerios to eat and water from the toilet to drink. Now he is 50 pounds of muscle and delights in scaling the bars to shake his cage

Bobo. a cinnamon capuchin, was raised in a cage so small it had to be cut open to get him out when he came to the shelter. Bobo has no love either for humans or for other capuchins, and he squeezes to the edge of his cage, baring his fangs while he pelts a passing human with orange peelings and excrement

'Many of them don't know they are monkeys when they come here and we have to teach them," Swett said. Newcomers to the sanctuary are usually placed in a holding cage near others of their species. As they become accustomed to the others, the cages are moved closer until the monkeys can touch each other.

Swett said some of the monkeys' neurotic behavior is difficult, if not impossible, to overcome.

'Sexual behavior in primates is learned from other primates," Swett says. "But many of these monkeys have imprinted sexually on humans instead of their own kind and they end up wanting to mate with humans instead of monkeys. It's really funny, but it's also very sad

Cricket, a squirrel monkey whose mother died when he was born. is one of the few animals at the sanctuary who can be handled safely. Since squirrel monkeys cling to their mothers the first weeks of their lives and Cricket had no mother. Miller devised a sling with which Cricket clung to him

Now Cricket is learning to be with other squirrel monkeys. "But at night he screams until I come and take him into bed with me." Miller said with a laugh. "He thinks I'm his mother." Oberg, the only one of the three friends with a full-time job, pays the living expenses for all of them. Swett said. "But don't think we don't work.

too. It takes two people full time from daylight to dark to do what needs to be done around here.

The sanctuary operates on donations. including leftover fruit and vegetablesfrom supermarkets and veterinary

"People wonder why we do it," Swett " * said. "Well, really, the animals are a lot of fun and they are exciting to be

"And seeing an animal that was intentionally or unintentionally abused begin to trust humans again, or watching one that came to us undernourished and crippled become healthy and active through good diet and care - well, that's why we do it and as long as we can afford to, we'll keep it

DALLAS (AP) - At the University of Texas, admissions University. "It's fine for the university, but I'm not sure it's in officials spent $100,000 last summer recruiting prospects in a high-stakes game to attract the best and the brightest of high school college classes

At Texas A&M University, admissions officials attracted 190 National Merit Scholarship finalists - more than any other school except Harvard University. Some charge A&M didn't do it all ethically.

Texas college admissions officials say recruiting of bright students has reached an intensity once reserved for star athletes, and some education experts are predicting "bidding wars" for scholars if the trend continues.

College administrators say the intense recruiting of gifted students during the past year has caused ill will among Texas

And officials at rival schools charge that A&M is not playing the college admissions game fairly because it tries to get National Merit finalists to commit to its scholarship offers before students get a chance to consider other offers.

Most colleges give high school seniors until May 1 to decide where they want to enroll, but A&M has refused to adhere to that date, the officials say.

What you have here is A&M being a maverick and trying to buy away from those other institutions those students who perhaps are better suited for their academic needs ... at other institutions," said Dr. Charles A. "However, they did question the tactics being used in enticing kids by additional scholarships." Healy said. "And there really is no organization that has authority (to monitor recruiting) ... This has gotten to be like football recruiting and these (National Merit scholars) are the stars

Exotic boots demand opens smuggling market DALLAS (AP) — The last

students said

The plight of the iguana is shared by kangaroos. anteaters, sea turtles, pythons and monitor lizards and a host of exotic animals whose hides are prized for chic footwear

That demand has opened a lucrative market for hide smugglers, experts say.

And it has caused conservationists to fear that some rare wildlife species may be threatened.

Ten years ago it was just alligators and crocodiles. Now they're making boots from anything that can be skinned," said David Mack. assistant director of Traffic USA. a Washington group that monitors international trade in wildlife products.

Boots made of the exotic leaters cost anywhere from $100 to $35,000. They range from delicate eelskin to durable elephant "Paying $1,000 for a pair of boots is nothing to these people; they blow that much on lunch." said David Kleinz, who inspects ships and airplanes for wildlife contraband for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Houston.

Manufacturers say exotic hides account for about 30 percent of Western boot sales and are becoming still more popular.

*Ostrich hide is so scarce that South Africa, the sole supplier of farm-raised ostrich, rations shipments to Texas boot companies, some of which have been forced to turn away customers.

And federal agents at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, where $20 million worth of imported animal products arrived last year, admit some illegal hides are slipping into the state.

'I'm not naive enough to think we're getting all of it." said Vicki Wakefield, one of three inspectors for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at the airport.

Federal law prohibits the import of some skins - such as the sea turtle and the Indian python — because the animals are endangered

An international treaty signed by 81 nations strictly regulates trade in endangered species. But some species are legally hunted in some nations and protected as endangered in

'The demand for some of these species is so new that scientists haven't had time to assess the impact." Mack said.

But smugglers continue to circumvent the law. commonly through 'laundering' hides. or routing them through a nation where export laws are less strict, say conservationists.

Traffic USA officials say Paraguay. Bolivia and Colombia are the most common stopovers for smuggled hides.

We often see documentation of species exported from Bolivia or Paraguay when the animals simply are not found in those countries." said Peter Brazaitis, superintendent of reptiles for the New York Zoological Society.

Smugglers also falsify documents or claim to be importing a look-alike subspecies that is not endangered, Traffic USA records show.

Welcome action by the President...

President Reagan has initiated welcome action to end the Environmental Protection Agency controversy. He has replaced three EPA officials, ordered a Justice Department investigation and decided against invoking executive privilege.

His actions should help get to the bottom of the charges of political favoritism and cover - up that are too serious-

The administration should take whatever actions are necessary to assure the public it is committed to environmental protection - that the EPA is fulfilling its responsibility to clean up toxic wastes.

The investigation ordered by Reagan should shed some needed light on the shredding of copies of the documents sought be a congressional committee. The committee wants to know how EPA has used the $1.6 billion "superfund" created to clean up the most hazardous of the nation's 14,000 toxic dump sites.

We had endorsed the president's decision against surrendering the documents on the grounds of executive privilege. And, we critized the citing of EPA Administrator Ann Burford for contempt of Congress. Questions subsequently raised about EPA operations, however, need answers. A compromise granting Congress limited access to the documents surely should Americans are entitled to know whether the EPA delayed using the superfund to clean up the toxic dumps.

The superfund is far too small to clean up all but the most dangerous toxic waste sites, but its use should not be delayed for political, or other reasons. The spector of thousands forced to abandon their homes to escape deadly, seeping poisons is all too real a possibility as demonstrated by the Love Canal tragedy.

How exactly has the superfund been used? Have companies been made to pay their fair share of the cost of cleaning up poisons they dumped? Were superfund grants timed to aid the political campaigns of Republicans candidates?

Questions about other aspects of EPA operations also

Did the agency deliberately delay releasing the results of test of dioxin poison sites in Missouri?

These questions are of particular significance viewed against the backdrop of sharp decreases in EPA enforcement activities.

The health of thousands of present and future Americans is in the hands of those who decide the course of EPA. If officials in the agency, or elsewhere in the administration, take issue with environmental protection laws, they should seek amendments, or repeal by Congress. Laxity in implementing the laws is a disservice to the president elected of their office.

Reagan should ensure that those he selects to protect the environment fulfill the obligations of their office.

America's strength is in resources

By JAMES G. WATT

As the Reagan Administration took the reins of leadership in January, 1981, we found a hurting nation. The economic situation was most discouraging. Inflation was tearing the country apart. Military power had been allowed to sink to a dangerously low level. Unemployment was critical. At the Interior Department, we found too much pollution in our air and our waters. The National Parks system had been allowed to deteriorate. The wildlife refuge had been ignored. the forest mismanaged, the public lands abused. And we knew that there must be change.

But those who had held privileged positions, with access to power, wanted no change. They refused to open the doors to the rest of America. They wanted to continue controlling and distributing the scarcities that excessive government perpetuated upon our people, even though that course weakened cur national defense and lowered our standard of living and our national quality of life.

President Reagan promptly addressed the issue of those special interest groups that wanted no change. He said from the beginning. "We must do what is good for America, whether at the moment it is popular or not. For, in the long run, it will be successful... and it will be popular too!" And that is our driving commitment. In facing up to the problems that were oppressing America, we recognized that we had two fundamental tasks: 1. The greatness of any country is determined by how that nation deals with its hun an resources; will it allow freedom for its people? Will is follow fair and equitable taxing policies? Will it have the right spending policies? Will we be equal to our responsibilities for the benefit of all our people?

2. The second part of our task, in the quest for greatness. involved our policies in dealing with our national resources. In early 1981, this nation was importing almost 40 percent of the crude energy needs that people depend on to sustain life in the 20th century. Our country was importing most of the strategic minerals on which our military power is based. These minerals are essential for jobs, for industry and for our national security. We were importing them from two main sources: Russia and Africa! We were indeed vulnerable to a country with an overwhelming military structure and the stated objective of denying freedom to the

And the quickest way for an aggressor nation to take over the globe would be to strike at the heart of the strongest country in the Free World, and to snuff out the resource potential of that country! America cannot survive as a free nation without abundant quantities of energy; that is the Achilles heel of the U.S. today.

It is no wonder that the intensity of the the Secretary of the Interior - the man responsible for the majority of our natural resources. I am indeed "at the eye of the storm". America's strength and her ability to defend freedom throughout the world will depend on how we handle these resources.

The Secretary of the Interior manages one - third of our land in this country. On those lands, we have the beautiful parks, the grandeur of the forests, the opportunities for fishing and hunting. But we also have on the public lands the energy and the minerals to save us from dependency on the Russians, the Arabs and the Africans.

Do we have the heart and the will as a nation to manage this great wealth for the best interest of the American people? In the past, we have not had that will. We have yielded to the special interest groups that would deny America's future as a sovereign nation. We have yielded to those who manipulate the media. We have yielded to those internationalists who don't want America's strenght to be supreme above all. Now that we have made changes in those past policies, now that we've opened up the energy resources so that America can have a future, that is why the battle swirling around the Department of the Interior is so intense!

Recently, I said publicly - and actually I've been saying the same thing for two years - that you need not go to Russia to see the failures of socialism.. you can go to an American Indian reservation and see socialism at its worst. The press caught up the statement and made a big ruckus about my comments, and abuse and criticism were heaped on me, although what I said is absolutely true.

One of my friends said to me, "Jim, you are right about the Indian reservations. But today in America, if you want to maintain your popularity, you cannot criticize socialism or

That is absolutely sick, and yet I think it is true. So, we must gather together in the Americanism Educational League - and in other patriotic groups throughout our country - our Sunday schools, our churches, our home fellowships, our Scout troops - and we must preach Americanism. We must not be intimidated by the press or the politicians or the special interest groups. We must take our stand against socialism and Communism

We must recognize and proclaim that Communism seeks to destroy our political liberty and our spiritual freedom. We must fight every day of the year to champion those fundamental principles and to keep American free!

A day spent with Foster Whaley

By BARBARA LANE

For the purposes of this article State Representative Foster Whaley of Pampa, Texas, allowed me to be his visitor for the day

Foster Whaley served his country under General George S. Patton, earning the Bronze Star and Purple Heart. He finished Texas A & M as a distinguished student in 1949. He served twenty seven and one - half years as County Agricultural Agent in Armstrong and Gray Counties. receiving a Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of County Agents in 1968. He served as a State Representative since January, 1979.

The day was March 2, 1983. The time was 7:00 a.m. at the Capitol. Representative Whaley spent some time, between calls he was returning for the previous day, explaining to me his schedule and some of the activities he is involved in. For instance, he is authoring a bill against dog - fighting. I later learned he is also a member of the powerful appropriations committee as well as other committees. At 7:30 a.m. two breakfasts were scheduled. This means the Representative is on time for one, leaves early, and is late to the other one. One might ask, why not miss one? Impossible! Matters of importance are to be discussed at both. At 9:00 a.m. the appropriations committee was meeting, pausing at 10:00 a.m. when the House of

The Meeting of the House on this particular day. Texas Independance Day, was very significant. Several Representatives has visitors and groups of visitors. The Visiting Choir sang several selections, including 'Texas' and 'The Eyes of Texas are Upon You'. The resolution (printed elsewhere in this publication) reaffirming the Texas Declaration of Independance was entered on record. There were several House Bills referred to Committees and the Senate had sent word to the House of some of the actions they had taken care of in session. This all happened within about a thirty minute period of time and then.

...on to another committee meeting for about fifteen minutes and then back to the appropriations committee meeting. When this meeting adjourned it was noon. After spending an entire morning attending meetings with Representative Whaley, also noting other Representatives in attendance at meetings or rushing to get to a meeting: I fully expected there wouldn't even be time for lunch. Wrong! There are also luncheons to attend.

After lunch, back to the Representative's office, to check on appointments and the schedule for the afternoon, a few items are taken out of his correspondence basket to sign while, at the same time he is returning some of the morning telephone calls and answering my questions at the same time. Representative Whaley has two Legislative Aides, Melba Gasaway and Leslie Harrah. Melba, who is his Administrative Legislative Aide, told me he likes to look at all the matters that come in and take care of all these matters and telephone calls that he can himself. Representative Whaley tells me he couldn't make it without Melba and his wife, Lois, who also helps him some. From observations. I would think that his position certainly requires a lot of teamwork.

During the afternoon we also attended a Caucus. This meeting was rather long, as there were individuals being allowed to speak that were not actually members of a committee, but interested parties to the subject at hand very interesting. Then back to the signing basket and telephone calls.

On the agenda for the rest of the day were two receptions. which Rep. Whaley remarked "he needed to attend this one". The Rep. told me from the amount of work he had on his desk he expected to be there until 10:00 p.m. I had intended to stick it out for the entire day, but with sore feet and a plane to catch, your editor had to call it a day. The Legislature is not in full session yet, so I understnad the pace was not as bad as it will be later. Rep. Whaley and everyone I met in Austin was very hospitable. Each time I go to the Capitol I feel I learn a lot more about how our State Affairs are run. I had the chance to observe several of our Representatives in these meetings and they impressed me as being intelligent, sensitive to the needs of the people and agencies and in general take their positions seriously. I firmly believe they would like to know your position on any matter that might be coming up and will welcome a visit from you anytime. The trip is worthwhile and your Representatives have no way of knowing how you want him to represent you without you telling him. If you can't visit, write a letter. Representative Whaley reads his mail and I'll wager the other Representatives to also.

We often hear about the complications which unemployment, inflation and serious physical and emotional illnesses do to a family. The struggles each of us face from time to time are serious, and most of us endure. The outcome is usually to our advantage. We learn to cope with these matters in successful ways.

What is unnecessary is the intense pain some of us suffer needlessly. There in not one reason for anyone of us to be damaged over and over. These confrontations arise periodically. We seem to hurt more each time.

A particular complication I want to focus on today is a problem too many families suffer. It destroys. Very little anyone would want to try it out. It is a tragedy

Sometimes it appears to be the only choice for some families. The changes and major complications it causes are phenomenal. I do not recommend it. Divorce is a last ditch effort to save lives from devastating destruction.

What does divorce do to a family? Parents subject their children to fearful exchanges of verbal abuse. Children are seldom prepared for the parting of the way and are cheated by coverups in order not to upset them.

Children are sometimes used by parents as mediators for spying, bribery and trickery. Children are deprived of their total family. One parent often disappears. realistically, and the other confusion and turmoil profoundly. Other signs are bedwetting. isolation and withdrawal. moody attitude, thumb sucking. holding onto anyone or anything and uncooperative action. These may cause life-long grief children are hurting and the pain will not go away. "Help me." they cry.

What can parents do to help their children through a truth. Sit together and explain yourselves. Children need to know it's not their fault. They will be protected and loved as usual. The divorce is not punishment for mistakes the children have made in the past.

Tell them in a clear, distinct and simple way what divorce means and the reasons you have chosen it. Assure them you will continue to care for and love them. Share ways in which routines will change: schedules will need reorganized and there will be two households instead of Blame no one. Divorce is an adult decision which is made when every other possiblity has failed. We have decided on this alternative.

Reassure them that even though disorder is present. problems will be worked through and a comfortable homelife will be restored. Impress on them that their relationship with each parent does not change and no one will try to take either parent's place. Stress the fact that divorce changes the parent's relationship and nothing more on that level.

Leave the unpleasant details leading to divorce out. It isn't best to lie, but omit information that may cast doubt on someone's character or mistake. We each make errors, poor judgments and costly decisions. If in doubt as to what to say, praise the other person and be kind. Divorce is a mutual decision, not a death decree. Tell the whole family that you want each one to be happy. You want happiness. too. Visitations and other arrangements will be discussed openly. Give the children a right to state their feelings and ask questions. Be patient and clarify as horoughly as possible. Help them feel confident that their opinions are respected. There is too much agony in divorces. The information shared should help make it less awkward and fearful.

Work together to solve the problems divorce present and no one has to suffer needlessly. Keep the home fires burning, even in two houses. Family unity will continue if everyone works together. The children need reassurance of your love for them and they deserve the best you can offer - you as their father or mother. That's half the battle

Growing Child:

Learning about "No"

"No, no!" is an automatic response to babies who grab at glasses or poke curious fingers in your eye.

A firm but loving "No. no!" can also be a tool to teach toddlers to control their own activities and to respect the rights and possessions of others, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter

Toddlers can be taught that 'No!" means "Stop what you are doing - NOW!" When they learn this, "No,no!" provides a way of controlling their activity when they are out of immediate reach. Their response will give you time to get them when they are headed for trouble

If "No, no!" is to be something. If you stop them use "No, no!" firmly effective and useful, parents from doing one thing you consistently and wisely.

must be selective in the use of it. The anxious parent who says "No.no!" to everything only confuses a child. Nor is it enough just to say No.no!" Parents must follow through at first by actually stopping the child by removing him from the hazard - or by removing the endangered object from him. Follow - through every time is important until a toddler responds consistently

Don't expect miracles! It is not enough just to teach a toddler that "No.no!" means Stop!" That is important to his safety and is necessary for that reason. But it is only a negative approach, because toddlers are always doing

They must learn what objects may be touched safely and which ones can be handled, thrown. pulled. pushed. squeezed. sat on or jumped on. Young children must learn all this and much more

Parents can help children learn by naming objects, by using them properly and by talking about actions and activities. And they must help children learn to control their own actions. A good start is to

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) - The fight was dragging and promoter-champion Larry Holmes thought it needed a little

So with about a half-minute left in the fifth round of his title defense against Lucien Rodriguez of France, Holmes let out a war whoop that would have made Tarzan proud.

"I was bored." Holmes said later after pitching a shutout with a unanimous 12-round decision over the European champion Sunday in a National Guard Armory. "This guy doesn't talk English. I couldn't talk to him. I wanted to put some excitement in the crowd.' It worked. The fans started chanting "Lar-ry, Lar-ry," saluting the man who had promised to bring the heavyweight championship back to this town where he began his pro career and fulfilled the pledge, even though he had to promote the fight himself. Don King, Holmes' regular promoter, didn't want the Rodriguez fight now with the champ set for a May 20 defense of the World Boxing Council crown against Tim

Witherspoon. But Holmes was determined to have it "I figured I got as much money as any promoter so why can't I do it myself?" Holmes said. And if it required pumping up the fans with some extracurricular howling in mid-fight, he proved he could provide that, too. King must have been proud. Holmes certainly was

Ten years ago, he earned $63 in his first pro fight here and he remembers his roots. He promised to come back one day and he did.

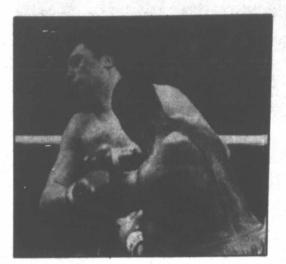

"I just wanted to give a fight to the people I love," said Holmes, who lives in Easton, Pa., about 85 miles south of here. "I wanted to do something for the city. A lot of people around the world never heard of Scranton. But they will now. Everytime they mention Larry Holmes' career, they've got to mention Scranton.

The fight - what there was of it - turned out to be significant because Rodriguez took Holmes to a decision. only the third time in 14 title defenses that has happened.

"I've told you a thousand times, style makes fights," Holmes said. "He moved his head a lot, moved his hands different ways, kept moving out. He's a durable fighter and he takes punches well. Most fighters I hit that hard go out. You'll see that with Witherspoon.

Then Holmes, who usually stays out of the prediction business, said he would knock out Witherspoon in the May 20 defense. "It won't go seven rounds," he said.

Rodriguez seemed more intent on surviving and going the distance than taking the crown away from Holmes. He was stung often and appeared to go down from a stiff right uppercut in the sixth round. But referee Carlos Padilla ruled it a slip. And when the fight ended, the Frenchman raised his hands, almost the way he might have had he won the fight

Number one Houston rolls to Final Four Blocks another

(AP) - The Houston Cougars team lost a basketball game way back in December to Virginia in Tokyo - and it seems as if they've been making everyone pay for it since.

Playing as well as they have been all season, in Coach Guy Lewis' estimation, the nation's top-ranked team rolled into the Final Four of the NCAA playoffs with a clinical 89-71 rout of Villanova Sunday in the Midwest Regional final.

"They played tremendously well," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino. "They're the best team we've seen all year and (Akeem) Olajuwon is every bit as good as Patrick Ewing." the Georgetown All-America

"- Houston's 7-foot center had 20 points, 13 rebounds and blocked eight shots in the contest, one of two regional championship games played Sunday. Georgia upset defending national champion North Carolina 82-77 in the East Regionals.

On Saturday. Louisville won the Mideast championship by dispatching Kentucky 80-68 in overtime and North Carolina State edged Atlantic Coast Conference rival Virginia 63-62 in the West.

The national semifinals will be played this Saturday in Albuquerque, N.M., with Houston meeting Louisville and North Carolina State facing Georgia. The winners will play for the NCAA championship next Monday night.

conference championship, was the Cougars' 25th straight and put their record at a nifty 30-2.

The Cougars broke the game open with a 16-6 run during the first 4:39 of the second half, climaxed by a slam dunk by Alvin Franklin. Houston led by 20 points. 53-33. with more than 15 minutes to go.

Villanova. 24-8. could muster only one final run, cutting the deficit to 11, 62-51, on a basket by Ed Pinckney. But the Cougars regained control with a 19-point lead in what has become for them a typical fashion - Michael Young hit from outside and Larry Micheaux, who scored 30 points, made a follow shot for a 66-51 lead.

Lewis said Olajuwon, who led the Cougars with 21 points in their semifinal victory over Memphis State, is playing better than ever.

These are the best back-to-back games he's had this year." said the 27-year Houston coach.

While Houston was winning as expected. Georgia's 18th-ranked Bulldogs continued to surprise people. The Bulldogs had upset third-ranked St. John's 70-67 in the regional semifinals before their big victory over No. 8 North Carolina Sunday. And the Bulldogs did it with their leading player, Terry Fair, in foul trouble.

"I was scared because we lost Terry." said Georgia's James Banks, a 6-6 junior who led the Bulldogs with 20 points and was named the Houston's relatively easy victory over No. 13 regional's most valuable player. "But everybody Villanova, a Big East power that tied for the was playing so good. (Vern) Fleming and (Gerald)

Crosby were playing great. Terry was a big loss. but Richard Corben more than did his share.

Fair, the tallest Bulldog starter at 6-7 and the team's top scorer, picked up his third and fourth personal fouls one second apart with 18:08 remaining. He never returned to the game because the Bullogs had momemtum.

Georgia turned the game into a rout with a 12-2 spree and led by as much as 15 points, 80-65, with 1:38 to play. The Tar Heels, 28-8, got close at the end with some easy baskets before time ran out

Georgia, which finished in a four-way tie for fourth in the Southeastern Conference and got into the NCAA playoffs only by winning the SEC tournament, has a seven-game winning streak and the 24 victories are the most in the school's history. The Bulldogs, 24-9, have yet to be beaten this season outside their conference.

'It's a great credit to Georgia," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "It's the best shooting exhibition I've ever seen them play.

Georgia outshot the Tar Heels 56 percent to 49 percent

"The book when you play Georgia is to zone them because they're not supposed to be a good outside shooting team." Smith said. "But in the second half after two or three bombs by Crosby, I said no more

They grow melons and play basketball in Fresno

NEW YORK (AP) -Fresno State isn't exactly UCLA. Washington State. Nevada-Las Vegas or Oregon State - but the Bulldogs are somewhere the others aren't.

They're in a tournament and they're still alive. 'I want you to know that we represent the west — the only team left in the west. So I want you to know we think we're the power of the west." Coach Boyd Grant said with a sly smile before leading his Fresno State team against Wake Forest in tonight's semifinal opener of the DePaul plays Nebraska in the other semifinal tonight. The winners will meet Wednesday night for the championship.

Someone mentioned to Grant that Fresno State has been called the Princeton of the West. "I don't think he was talking academically.

the coach said with a laugh. "I'm sure what he meant was that we're conservative on offense, always have been. But the foundation of our game has always been the defense.

Grant is concerned that the Bulldogs may have more on their minds than Wake Forest on Monday night

"I think maybe because we didn't look ahead - because we concentrated on Texas El-Paso (71-64) and then on

Michigan State (72-58) and then on Oregon State (76-67) - that's why we're here." Grant said. "I hope they'll be able to concentrate only on Wake Forest and not think about where they're playing. I hope when our kids get their first look at Madison Square Garden that they won't tighten up.

Desi Barmore says he won't, even though he'll have his own rooting section.

estaurant employee were called in to help two Japanese women who were stranded at a motel here after missing their tour bus, but it took an interpreter from a local church to get the visitors back on the road again. The women, identified as H. Ishimatsu and Y. Nakanishi

A long afternoon

were part of a delegation of 120 Japanese members of the Success Motivation Institute. They were found wandering the corridors of the Holiday Inn here Sunday afternoon after they missed their bus for an SMI convention in Fort Worth.

Motel clerk Bunny Doss said chartered buses taking the delegates to the Fort Worth convention left the hotel between 2

They counted all the luggage, and all the luggage got on. but they left some people." Miss Doss said.

Miss Doss said she walked into work Sunday with a 'crashing' headache faced with two women who could not speak English trying to take a taxi to Fort Worth.

"It's no telling where they would have ended up," she said. Trying to calm the women in sign language, Miss Doss and a housekeeper, Enith Murray, attempted to locate the bus and find a Japanese interpreter.

Waco police were contacted and Department of Public Safety officers were told to watch for the group's buses, which were scheduled to stop at Texas Safari, an amusement park located north of Waco in Clifton.

In their attempts to find an interpreter, the clerks first called Baylor University, but couldn't reach anyone. They tried the Oriental restaurants in Waco and found a man fluent in Chinese at the House of Chen, Miss Doss said.

He wasn't any help, she said. Having exhausted her first flurry of ideas. Miss Doss called her parents and her boss, an Egyptian.

"You'll try anything when you have this type of problem

Mrs. Murray decided to solicit help from her husband, a

Texas State Technical Institute student. He knew of a Korean woman who attended the school, and she told the Murrays to call a Buddhist church in Waco. Their search eventually ended with the Calvary Baptis:

Church, where a Japanese-speaking member was found. The interpreter told the women that the motel would help them find their party and not to worry.

"At first they were frightened and scared, and then they relaxed after they talked to someone," Miss Doss said. "Now it's getting kind of funny

Defense presents case in ex-cop's murder trial

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - A defense attorney has refused to say whether a former Amarillo police captain, accused of killing an oilman, will testify in his own behalf.

The defense contends L.R. Wynne, 53, shot Erle Winston Mathis in a moment of insanity after seeing his wife making love to the man in a pickup truck.

Mathis, 63, was shot five times last Oct. 15 while waiting in his truck for a traffic light to change, police said.

Wynne was overcome by a fit of passion after discovering his wife and Mathis engaging in sexual intercourse on a country road west of Amarillo, less than an hour before the early afternoon shooting, defense lawyer Travis Shelton said.

However, Shelton would not say if either Wynne or his wife would take the stand during the trial, which is expected to end Tuesday or Wednesday.

Prosecutors rested their case Friday

Wynne was captain of the detective division of the Amarillo Police Department until resigning in the early 1970s to operate a private security firm.
