Gray inmates stage short-lived hunger strike

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

What may have been the shortest hunger strike ever staged by prisoners was over in 24 hours, according to officials in the Gray County Jail.

The Pampa News received a letter Saturday morning from inmates confined in the jail who said they were going on a hunger strike because the food is cold, the meals are always the same and some meals are stale.

Daisy King, the owner of Patrick's, a local restaurant which provides the prisoners' meals, said all nine of the county's prisoners ate their meals Friday night and Saturday morning.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said the prisoners had refused their Friday morning and afternoon meals, making the hunger strike about 24 hours long.

The letter to the News was signed "Inmates of Gray County Jail, Jaime M. Meza." Meza, 24, has been confined in Gray County Jail since his arrest on a murder charge in September, 1982. Jordan estimated that Meza has been in his jail about seven months and eight days.

Jordan said Meza has been in jail too long and that problems such as the ones he was having with the food should be expected after such a long stay in jail. He also cited the fact that Meza is Mexican and may be used to food other than the food served in jail.

Meza said Jordan has brought him some jalapeno peppers on occasion and lets Meza's mother bring him burritos and other Mexican food. Meza cited monotony of the food plans, such as a honey bun and coffee each morning and hot dogs three times a week.

The letter claimed the honey bun was stale each morning, but a honey bun bought at Patrick's Saturday was not completely stale. Meza said sometimes the buns, which are sealed individually in plastic packages, are stale.

Saturday's afternoon meal was a piece of fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, broccoli, sliced yellow squash, a biscuit, a corn muffin, tomato slices and iced tea. The food arrived at the courthouse hot on styrofoam plates covered with plastic wrap, and the tea arrived cold in a large metal pot.

"But the guys on the east side, they just got here so they probably think it's pretty good food, and they decided to eat, so we ate too."

There are currently three prisoners in the "felony ward," including one who will be sent to the Texas Department of Corrections next Tuesday. Donald Ray Hill has been in the county jail for four months, and he said that although sometimes the food is cold, it's generally tasty and nourishing.

Meza said no milk, cheese, eggs or fish are even included in the prisoners' meals. They are given coffee to drink in the morning and tea at their other two meals.

Mayor's husband sues her opponents

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

CANADIAN — Backed by the local newspaper here, which carried the advertising, the mayor's husband is suing his wife's opponents in the last election for $1.5 million.

Dr. Malouf Abraham Jr. filed the libel suit last week against people who opposed Mayor Therese Abraham in the city election April 2.

Abraham was re-elected in a tight three-way race. Abraham received 384 votes. Pearl Teague, a former city clerk, was second in the mayor's race with 313 votes. Ray Byard, president of the Canadian Rental Association, was third with 121 votes.

Teague, Byard, members of the rental association, newly-elected Councilman Joe Schaefer and others who opposed Abraham and defeated council member Pat Waters, are named as defendants in the lawsuit.

The suit claims a political ad in the Canadian Record during the campaign libeled Mrs. Abraham, because the ad said city officials were "fleecing" taxpayers. The suit said the ad was paid for by Barbara Riley on behalf of the rental association.

The suit also says the defendants conspired to spread false rumors about Mrs. Abraham, including one that she was having a love affair with City Manager Van James.

The Abrahams, a wealthy couple with ties to oil and gas fortunes, want $1 million for "injury to their character and reputations, to their feelings, and for mental suffering and anguish."

The doctor and mayor want punitive damages of $500,000 because the defendants did not apologize for their alleged statements. After the election, Dr. Abraham took out a full page ad in the Record demanding the apology. In the same April 7 issue, Publisher-Editor Ben Ezzell hammered the defendants on both the editorial and news pages of his newspaper.

About the association's alleged campaign charges, Abraham's ad said, "The one I found most offensive was in large black letters proclaiming to the taxpayers that they are being fleeced."

"That is a very, very serious charge to make about a public official. Let me assure you that this unjust and defamatory statement was very hurtful and upsetting to Therese and to councilperson Pat Waters. I am holding you accountable as a group and also as individuals for this contemptible action."

"Further, I demand a public apology from your group, also to be a full-page ad in the Canadian Record. At the bottom of this apology is to be a membership list of the Canadian Rental Association. (Your cost on this ad will be money well spent.)

"Believe me when I tell you that I do not intend to let you or anyone else make libelous statements about my wife, not now and not in the future. If this public apology is not forthcoming immediately, I will then take what could be referred to as 'appropriate action.'"

The paid-ad is signed by Abraham, a practicing Canadian medical doctor.

In the same issue of the newspaper, Ezzell wrote an editorial saying it was an "ugly campaign on the part of some of the dissident candidates." The editor wrote that Abraham's opponents tossed about "irresponsible and unfounded charges" and that those who voted against the incumbents were casting "hard-core negative votes."

In the same issue on another page, Ezzell wrote in his news story about the election: "The campaign against the incumbents in the city administration was frequently scurrilous, with a variety of charges ranging from waste of city funds to 'fleecing' of taxpayers."

Despite the attack from Abraham and Ezzell, Abraham's opponents refused to apologize.

In the next issue of his newspaper,

Car crash kills Shamrock golf pro

ALANREED — A 24-year-old Shamrock man was killed early Saturday morning when the car he was driving rolled over on Interstate 40.

According to Department of Public Safety Trooper Ronnie Shank of McLean, the car David J. Thayer was driving ran off the road on the eastbound side of I-40, skidded onto the median and ended up on the northern edge of the median, narrowly missing the westbound lane about 1:25 a.m. Saturday. The accident occurred 7.4 miles west of Alanreed under an overpass.

A passenger in the Thayer car, Keith Atkins, 19, of Spearman, was admitted to Shamrock Hospital with facial lacerations.

Thayer was born Nov. 15, 1958 in Atlantic, Iowa, and moved to Shamrock from Garden City, Kan. two years ago. He was the golf pro at the Shamrock Country Club.

Rosary was scheduled for 9 p.m. Saturday at the Richerson Funeral Home in Shamrock. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Thayer of Garden City, Kan.; two brothers, Mike Thayer of Shamrock and Sean Thayer of Garden City, Kan.; and one sister, Nanetta Thayer of Garden City, Kan.

Former dogcatcher accuses City of Canadian of inhumane acts

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

A former animal control officer has accused the dogcatcher in Canadian of inhumanely killing ten puppies and dumping them into a pit at the dump with many other dog bodies in various stages of decomposition.

Benny E. Fain, who had been an animal control officer in Garden City, Kansas, said Tuesday the animals had been dumped and left to rot when he came on the scene at the dump, and that several of the pups were still alive.

He claims he took pictures at the scene, and went home to get his wife as a witness, then took the still-living puppies to a local veterinarian to be mercifully destroyed. The pups died before the veterinarian could see them, and Fain said he paid for an autopsy on one of the pups. The veterinarian concluded the puppy died from a severe blow on the head.

City ordinance in Canadian says all dogs will be destroyed by lethal injection. Fain also said the dead animals had been dumped and left to rot, without immediately being covered with a layer of dirt, in accordance with the Texas health code.

He said when he took his complaints to the Canadian City Council meeting and presented them along with another witness and photographs he'd taken, he was laughed at by City Manager Van James. Repeated attempts to make contact with James failed, as he was at an undisclosed location in Amarillo for several days.

Fain wrote a letter to the editor of the Canadian Record, that community's weekly newspaper, but he claims Editor Ben Ezzell refused to print it without even reading it. He then brought his story to The Pampa News.

"I thought we could get this all cleared up in Canadian," Fain said. "I know a lot of the town leaders think I'm a troublemaker, but I just wanted to bring this to their attention so it wouldn't happen again. I got nowhere. Mr. James wouldn't even look at my photographs and laughed at me in the meeting."

The photographs showed an open pit with the bodies of many dogs at the bottom.

Benny E. Fain

Lester Hodges, said, "Anyone could have dumped the dead animals into the open pit. It is outside the city dump fence, and anyone in the city or Hemphill County could have dumped them there."

Fain's letter continues:

"Now I'd like to get to the saddest part of what I saw. Three puppies were still alive, crying and whimpering in pain. I was crushed."

"My first thought was to go get a witness. Back in Canadian, I stopped at the vet. I asked if they had put many dogs to sleep for the city 'today' (April 15th)."

"You see, although rare, sometimes a dog will live a little longer after being injected with the serum, and perhaps that was the case. The secretary advised they had" (put a dog to sleep).

"I asked her if one was a black-and-white puppy. The secretary then said, the vet hadn't put any puppies to sleep for the city, only two adult dogs. She asked if I checked by the shelter yet, that the dog catcher told her he had puppies at the shelter. He said he was going to try and adopt them out. I told her I hadn't been to the shelter."

"Now you're probably wondering why I didn't get the puppies out at the time. But one thing I learned working for the police department in Garden City, Kansas, as head Animal Control Officer, was never to tamper with evidence unless you have a witness. I tried to come up with one. I tried to get hold of several council members because that kind of witness couldn't be disputed."

"I couldn't find anyone, so I found the best witness possible, my handy camera. I returned to the landfill and found two of the living puppies had died. One was still whimpering in pain. I took my pictures, then went down into the pit, removed the puppy and took it to the vet to have it put to sleep properly."

"The doctor wasn't in at the time. The secretary on duty noticed the decomposed smell on the puppy and commented on it being alive and having that decomposed smell. The puppy died before the doctor arrived, but upon my request, performed an autopsy and found the puppy died of a concussion and hemorrhage as a direct result of a fractured skull."

One of Fain's co-workers for two-and-one-half years in Kansas, dispatcher Marilou Hacker, said, "I have never known Benny to be anything less than a most honest, truthful and reliable person. There have definitely been times when situations have arisen where a lie from Benny could have saved him many problems."

Another co-worker for two and one half years, Professional Standards Officer Lt. Roger A. Schroeder of the Garden City Police Department, said of Fain, "As an Animal Warden, Benny has been confronted with many of the same challenges which face our patrol officers. Greater demands are placed on an individual when one must combat public apathy and/or misunderstanding. Benny has met these challenges for 2 1/2 years. He has developed or initiated several new programs designed to increase public awareness and compassion for the animals within our community."

"I then called the Texas Department of Health. They advised me a city could have a separate pit for the disposal of dead animals, but they are to be covered upon receipt."

Hodges said the situation at the dump has been corrected. Now that the ground has dried after the wet winter, the open pit containing the decaying carcasses, mostly dogs, has been covered. Another pit has been dug inside the fence surrounding the city dump, he said.

Fain said he was asked to sign a cruelty complaint against the city by the Panhandle Humane Society in Amarillo, but decided to try and settle the complaint in Canadian before taking such drastic action. This led him to address the council in Canadian first to see if the situation could be corrected from within.

"I can't tell you how upset I was at the council meeting when I presented all I had - and this same story I've written you about," Fain continued, "Not upset with the council members, they all listened intently, looked at all my pictures, my autopsy report, and showed genuine concern over the whole thing."

taking a living puppy to the vet, he claims.

Fain was disappointed with the results of the council meeting because he felt Van James did not pay serious attention to what he was saying.

"I was mad enough to tell him, he 'may think it's funny - but I don't find it funny at all.' I was more crushed with what I saw in the city manager's response than with all of it."

"As of this date, the same dogcatcher is still on the job, and as of yet, I haven't signed a complaint. But there is only the city council members to thank for that, because I know they care and are concerned about it...genuinely concerned."

The Pampa News called the Canadian City Hall several times between Wednesday and Friday afternoon and were unable to make connections with the city manager, the dogcatcher, or Mayor Therese Abraham to hear their side of this story.

Ezell convicted those responsible for the campaign charges against Mrs. Abraham of libel with malice and threatened them that "the consequences could be serious."

On the Record's editorial page April 24, Ezell wrote: "A deadline has just passed. In last week's Record, Dr. Malouf Abraham Jr. took the unusual step of publishing a letter to members of the Canadian Rental Association inviting a public apology for libelous accusations in the name of the organization against his wife, Mayor Therese Abraham, and members of her city administration in re-election campaign statements.

"The scurrilous charges accused city officials, among other things, of 'fleecing' the citizens of Canadian... a libelous charge obviously made with malice toward the accused (a factor which enhances the gravity of the offense) and totally unfounded."

"The deadline for that signed apology has just passed with no response, and Dr. Abraham has assured this newspaper that he plans to pursue his suggested alternative."

"The choice left the Dr. is obvious, and the consequences could be serious. We believe apologies were certainly in order, and we're sorry that some of

The 'Boys' are a handful of local men who can cough or grunt a three million dollar bid and make it stick and...

The Boys came to buy

By JEFF LANGLEY

"We want to sell this property. If you want to steal it, you come to the wrong place."

Former Congressman Bob Price walked around outside his unfinished "dream house" and chatted with neighbors as they waited for the auction to start. The 9,000-acre spread Price's granddaddy bought back in 1907 would be sold to the highest bidder. Price's debts on the property mounted to $2.3 million. It was time to sell the land worked by four generations of the Price family.

The "Boys," a handful of local men who can quietly nod or grunt or cough affirmatively to a $3 million bid and make it stick, sat on folding chairs inside or milled around the dream house. They waited for Big Bill Reavis and Colonel Ralph Segars to start the action.

Annoyed that boys' bids were a little slow in coming, Big Bill would later bellow, "We got all the stinkin' money in the county here, and they're sittin' on it!"

A cool, morning wind blew through openings in the frame and flapped the tar paper on the roof of the dream house. The temperature Thursday was supposed to hit 80 degrees, but when the auction's announced 10 a.m. start time passed, clouds covered the sky. The morning chill swirled through the dream that ended when the money ran out.

The foundation, frame and roof were nearly finished. The house was wired. Sheets of paneling were partway up the walls to the 20-foot ceiling, but they never reached the top. Price sank $130,000 into the 9,000-square-foot house built to replace the little white wood house nestled in some trees at the bottom of the hill. Price stopped building. A Pampa lumber company demanded the millionaire pay his bill.

The boys and about 150 of Price's neighbors drank coffee from a sandwich truck called out to the ranch for the auction. "I'm nervous," Price said.

Parked around the dream house on a hill overlooking Price's huge spread were 38 pickups and more than a few Lincolns and Cadillacs.

As far as the eye can see in all four directions from the dream house was the land: 8,071 acres of yellow grassland, 200 acres of dry land and 1,400 acres with a lush green carpet of wheat created over the dry scrub by a million-dollar sprinkler system.

Price's grandfather, H.B. Price, bought the land touching four counties from salesman M.K. Brown of the White Deer Land & Cattle Company in 1907. Price's father and mother, Ben and Gladys Price, took over the land and worked it until 1960 when Ben died. That year Bob bought out his mother and brother's share of the ranch he hoped to pass on to his son.

"Maybe I didn't have the best managers," Price said.

Maybe Bob's laying out $1 million for the sprinkler system was a mistake, said a banker at the auction. The cost of pulling water up from five good wells was too high. The high price of natural gas to run the irrigation pumps and low prices for wheat made it next to impossible to make a profit, he said.

Four more pickups in convoy kicked up dust as they wound around the maintained caliche road toward the ranch, about 14 miles northwest of Pampa. The auction's start was now about an hour late, and the boys were getting anxious.

Nobody works a crowd of buyers like

Big Bill: "How much will you give for this tarp? I know you got something to cover up." Bill bought the coffee when the stakes were at $3 million. When the Price auction moved on to broken refrigerators, Bill said the lookers could buy their own.

Big Bill Reavis pleads for a buyer to give just a little bit more: "Come on, boys. You're not workin'."

"We got all the stinkin' money in the county here, and they're sittin' on it."

"We're sorry we're late. We're gonna get started in about two minutes," shouted Big Bill. Bill Reavis, broker for the American Auction Company of Duncan, Okla., never says anything quietly. He and his partner, auctioneer Colonel Ralph Segars, work a crowd into a buying fever over anything from a roll of rusted barbed wire for a buck, to a parcel of land for millions more.

A portable loudspeaker and a color map of the ranch were set up along a wall facing the crowd inside the dream living room. Big Bill and the Colonel tested the microphone and amplifier plugged into an uncovered wall socket. Prepared brochures about the Price ranch were stacked on a table in the next room.

"We're just about ready. Bob's outside talking to the media," boomed Big Bill.

"It's just like a member of the family dying," Price told reporters.

The politician talked about his hoped-for appointment to a seat on the Commodity Futures Trading Commission in Washington. The appointed position pays $67,000 per year. The CFTC regulates all commodities trading in the United States. Earlier this year, the former U.S. representative and state senator traveled to lobby among his Washington friends for a CFTC job.

"I expect to hear something in 30 days. The FBI's conducting a background check. A man's gotta go where he can make a living," Price said.

He walked inside where the Boys were waiting.

"Now Bob's gonna say a few words before we get started. He's a good man. Let's give him a hand," Big Bill said.

Price thanked his neighbors for coming and talked about his land and the many improvements he made. He gave the mike back to Colonel Segars and walked into another bare room where his family was waiting.

Price's wife Marty drove up to the rear of the house and jumped out of her car. She had tears in her eyes and went to

'I thought I was dreaming' Reagan stops to help injured cop

HOUSTON (AP) — A policeman says he thought he was dreaming when a "very kind" President Reagan appeared at his side, just after the officer was knocked to the street in an accident with his motorcycle.

"I don't think I was in my right mind," Sgt. Ralph Gonzales said at a hospital Friday, hours after being injured in the crash. "I do recall seeing Mr. Reagan, the president. I didn't realize I'd actually had a wreck until I was in the ambulance."

Gonzales, 32, and motorcycle officer Harold Prothro collided early during the presidential motorcade from Hobby Airport to downtown Houston. Police spokesman Larry Trout said both apparently tried to close the same intersection.

Reagan, accompanied by aides and Secret Service agents, got out of his armored limousine, retrieved a police service revolver from the street and handed the weapon to a bodyguard. He then walked about 100 yards to where Gonzales lay with ambulance workers tending his injuries.

Reagan had landed minutes before at 2:20 p.m. He was in town for a fund-raising dinner for Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

Deputy White House chief of staff Michael Deaver told reporters that Reagan insisted on getting out of the limousine when it stopped.

When the president reached the officer's side, "I thought I was dreaming," Gonzales said.

Home Country U.S. custom cutters band to fight back Canadian threshers

By MICHAEL BATES

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — American custom cutters, fearful there isn't going to be enough wheat to keep them busy this season, are fighting to keep Canadian crews from coming south for the 1983 harvest.

The federal government's Payment in Kind program will reduce this year's wheat harvest to somewhere between 59 and 63 million acres, according to unofficial government estimates. The 1982 harvest totalled about 78 million acres of wheat.

"It's going to break a lot of guys if they let the Canadians in this year at all," said Mel Dosco, a Tribune-Kan., custom harvester.

He and 65 other custom cutters met in Canyon, Texas, April 9 and formed U.S. Custom Harvesters Inc. to press the Canadian immigration issue and other matters.

Dosco said Canadian crews undercut American harvester prices by as much as $4 an acre because of the higher valuation of the U.S. dollar and not having to pay federal highway use taxes or trade duties.

Phyllis Weiss of Canyon, secretary-treasurer of the new organization, said the calls she has been getting indicate most of the custom cutters will lose about half of their normal business this year.

"We've cut for some of our farmers 15 or 20 years," she said. "Some of them that might normally have 700 or 800 acres planted only have 200 to 300 this year. Some of them have reduced even more and are in the PIK program 75 percent or even 100 percent of their normal acreage."

Custom cutters follow the wheat harvest north from its start in south Texas in mid to late May. They charge by the acre for cutting the wheat and hauling it to storage.

In January and February, before the new custom cutter organization had been formed, individual harvesters, including Dosco and Mrs. Weiss, were asking the Immigration and Naturalization Service and others to alter the rules under which Canadian harvesters have been admitted to the U.S. About 500 custom cutters have signed a petition seeking the change.

Since a 1942 agreement aimed at overcoming World War II manpower shortage, Canadian cutters have been allowed across the border under B-1, visiting businessman, status. That meant they didn't have to show they already had specific harvest jobs that couldn't be filled by Americans.

INS responded to the complaints by deciding the Canadian crews should be made to meet H-2, temporary worker, status requirements. The H-2 rules require proof farmers already have hired the cutters. H-2 regulations also require the foreign crews to get certification from the Department of Labor that there isn't a large enough U.S. work force to handle the harvest jobs.

Duke Austin, an INS spokesman in Washington, D.C., said to keep from causing hardships for Canadian cutters and U.S. farmers who already have hired them for the 1983 season, INS decided to allow an 80-day grace period this year. He said Canadian crews will be allowed to work with an H-2 application pending for 80 days. During that time they must apply to the Labor Department for certification of a need for additional harvest crews. If the department rules there isn't such a need, the Canadians must leave.

Mrs. Weiss and Dosco don't feel the INS rules change will help American cutters much.

"The harvest only runs about 120 days border to border," Dosco said. "So all that will be left will be the Dakotas."

He said the cutters will continue to seek immediate unconditional implementation of the H-2 status rules as well as state-by-state bans on Canadian crews.

Austin said about 600 Canadian crews crossed the U.S. border last harvest. About 200 American crews went into Canada, he said.

Key voter on horse racing goes to people

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Al Edwards is talking to his constituents this weekend, and supporters of legalized pari-mutuel gambling hope Edwards hears something that will change his mind about horse racing.

"My vote on horse racing right now is no," Edwards said Friday. "I've got some things working, of course."

Edwards, D-Houston, could be a key player in the horse racing scenario because he is one of eight members of the 15-member House Urban Affairs Committee who oppose legalized gambling.

But Edwards has indicated his vote could be swayed. It would take just that one change of heart to get a horse race bill to the House floor. The Senate has approved a bill calling for a statewide vote on whether communities should be allowed to decide on pari-mutuels.

Edwards, a black, said he'd spend the weekend talking with his constituents about what he might be able to get in exchange for his vote.

What he wants is a commitment that legislators would support three minority-interest measures — congressional representation for Washington D.C., banning state universities from investing in companies that do business in South Africa, and a state affirmative action employment plan.

Edwards said clergymen and other constituents in his district "might feel" that promises of support for those measures "would warrant" an Edwards vote for pari-mutuels.

"I've got about 12 or 13 meetings lined up," he said of his weekend schedule.

Edwards said he might be able to convince "some of those leaders who are opposed to it in my district" that a change of heart on his part would help move "some issues that would directly benefit blacks and minorities."

Committee Chairman George Pierce, R-San Antonio, called a committee meeting for Friday, but canceled it when the votes were not there to send the bill to the floor. Pierce supports legalized horse race gambling.

Reagan pledges 'Phi Slama Jama'

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS

HOUSTON (AP) — President Reagan cheerfully accepted membership into the mock fraternity Phi Slama Jama, created around the dunk-mad University of Houston basketball team, in a meeting with the players Saturday morning.

"I'm very proud to be a member of this fraternity. You don't have anything like hazing or paddling, do you?" Reagan inquired.

The president attended a fund-raising dinner for U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, Friday night. He left Houston for Washington at 9:35 a.m. CDT.

The Cougars lost 53-52 to North Carolina State in the finals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Tournament in March.

Reagan shook hands with 10 players, assistant coaches and athletic director John Kasser. Kasser gave him a copy of the T-shirt most of the players were wearing, which said "Phi Slama Jama" in red letters.

"It'll help you slam-dunk," Kasser told Reagan.

The joke organization, billed as Texas' tallest fraternity, was conceived by Houston Post sports columnist Thomas Bonk and served as the Cougars' theme throughout the year. Houston was one of the few teams in the country that kept statistics on the number of slam dunks each player made.

"You were the top team in the United States for all but the last two seconds of the season," Reagan told the team.

Reagan said he was happy to meet the team and "also to find out what Phi Slama Jama means."

Head nudist marcher says he was once a bigot

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A self-styled nudist says he used to be a Ku Klux Klan sympathizer until a black man saved his life. That's why he plans to march almost au naturel when the Klan comes to town today.

Omar Kirk, 35, has obtained a city permit for his semi-naked march to offset the Klan's planned gathering in downtown San Antonio.

"Parading naked down city streets is no more ridiculous than walking around with a sheet over your head," Kirk said.

Kirk, who cannot swim, said he once accidentally fell into a pool and was rescued by a black man.

"He didn't look to see what color I was before he pulled me out so I haven't looked to see what color anyone else was since then," he said.

Kirk said he expects about eight people to join his unusual protest — wearing "as little as possible" without breaking the law.

"To provide a counterpoint for the Ku Klux Klan march, I had to do something outlandish," Kirk said.

"After all, what is more outlandish than a bunch of grown men parading around town with white sheets over their heads screaming that they hate everybody in sight?" he said. "Those uniforms they wear are a bit dated."

Kirk said his march will provide a "positive counterpoint" for the Klan's "message of hate."

The Southwest Sunbathers' Association, a local nudists' group, has disavowed any connection with the march.

The Klan's initial request for a march and vigil at the Alamo was denied by city officials. The white supremacist group said it wanted to protect the Texas shrine from "Communists."

The city and Klan members finally settled on an alternate route through the streets of downtown.

Kirk also changed his original marching route.

He didn't think it was appropriate, he said, for his group to be walking by several churches Sunday.

State sues smelter

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox and the city of Dallas filed suit together to force the owners of a west Dallas lead smelter to reduce air emissions and remove contaminated soil near the plant, or cease operations.

The suit, filed Friday in state court here, contends that the RSR Corp. smelter has created a public health hazard by emitting unsafe levels of lead into the air and that the lead has contaminated soil in neighborhoods surrounding the plant.

Diana Parsell, an RSR spokeswoman, said the company would have no comment until officials had an opportunity to review the lawsuit.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP 'O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Printed lies on our front lawn..

Last Sunday evening, just after dark, someone from our community drove quietly through some of our neighborhoods tossing small newspapers on our lawns. I took mine in and read it.

The paper is The Thunderbolt, a white racist lying rag regurgitated from Marietta, Georgia, and is dedicated to a war of half-truths and outright lies about Negroes and Jews.

My first instinct was to sit down and pound out an editorial blasting these people for cluttering up our lawns with such tripe. I was mad as hell, and thought we ought to gather all the copies up and burn them.

Then I realized what a hypocrite I would be if I suggested that.

"Randles," I said to myself, "you have spent nearly 20 years of your life arguing for freedom of the press, and here you are contemplating muzzling someone just because you disagree with him."

So I have changed my mind. Pick up a copy of The Thunderbolt and read it. But PLEASE don't believe anything in it but its so-called Code of Ethics on the last page.

Read it thoroughly. It's an education in what ignorance and fear can do to someone. It claims to be totally American and Christian, but is neither.

Our founding fathers were not in favor of wiping out entire ethnic groups because they wear funny-looking beanies each Friday night; and Jesus, who founded Christianity, not only preached tolerance and love for those who were different, but was himself a Jewish rabbi.

No, this publication, supposedly the mouthpiece of the National States Rights Party, advocates hatred, fear, suspicion, and violence. It sees Blacks, Jews, homosexuals and illegal aliens behind every bush...and behind every problem we now face.

In fact, please read it.

It is important to understand the type of twisted logic that tells us that Hitler was kind to the Poles in World War II, that the Soviet Union loves Jews and secretly supports Israel because Yuri Andropov is part Jewish, that the Rev. Jerry Falwell isn't a Christian because he likes the Israeli people, that New York Jews are deliberately going to Haiti to consort with homosexuals so they can poison American blood banks with A.I.D.S. (a fatal blood disease), and that General Alexander Haig is a paid stooge of the Tel Aviv government.

Just what is the National States Rights Party, and who are its leaders?

For $4 you can send for a color snapshot of the founder and former chairman of the party, J.B. Stoner. He can't really fulfill his office at this time because he's a fugitive from the F.B.I., charged with bombing a Black church in Alabama and killing two young girls. But of course he's still venerated and quoted in the newspaper.

And the editor, "Dr." Ed Fields, admits to being a Grand Kleagle in the Georgia Ku Klux Klan.

And on the back pages of the little sheet there are books you can send away for: learned tomes entitled "Jewish Ritual Murder," "God Wrote the Law of Segregation," "The Jews and Their Lies," "I.Q. and Racial Differences," and "Who's Who in the World Zionist Conspiracy."

And if you have children who enjoy coloring, why The Thunderbolt hasn't forgotten the kiddies...no sir.

For four bucks you can fill your kid's idle hours by helping him color in the pictures in "Yid Kike," an anti-Jewish coloring book. Fields describes it this way: "A comic coloring book for children. The funniest, most hilarious jokes about Jews' inherited traits you ever read."

If this mentality weren't so tragic for these poor people, it would be comical. But we can't afford to laugh on a subject this deadly. Ignorance leads to hatred, and hatred leads to violence.

It is sad that there are so many of us who are so afraid of handling our own problems that we need to look around for someone else to pin the blame to.

That is not only an incorrect assessment, but a pitiful one.

I feel genuinely sorry for those poor frightened people in Pampa who threw that copy of The Thunderbolt on my lawn last Sunday night. It must be pure hell to live in such fear.

And if it weren't fear, why did they wait until after dark to throw them?

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, May 1, the 121st day of 1983. There are 244 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 1, 1945, German radio announced the death of Adolf Hitler in Berlin.

On this date:

In 1707, a union between England and Scotland was formed under the name Great Britain.

In 1898, an American naval force under Adm. George Dewey destroyed a Spanish fleet in Manila Bay in the Spanish-American War.

In 1931, the Empire State Building was dedicated in New York.

And, in 1961, the first political hijacking of an American plane to Cuba took place.

Ten years ago: Defense Secretary Elliot Richardson was nominated to replace Richard Kleindienst, who had resigned as attorney general in the wake of the Watergate scandal.

Five years ago: It was announced that a Japanese explorer had reached the North Pole after a 600-mile trip by dog sled over the frozen Arctic Ocean.

Old senators never die; just hold seminars

By PAUL GREENBERG

If old generals don't die but just fade away, old politicians just hold seminars. That common practice keeps their ideas in museum-quality, as stale as the day they were first proposed. It's a comforting ritual in American politics; it assures the populace that even in this fast-changing, ming-bogging, swift-moving society, some things don't change.

Time is a great healer. Perhaps that's why the re-emergence of some once familiar figure, or even once exasperating figure, fails to inspire the old vexation. In its place there is something akin to nostalgia. It's like watching a rerun of "The Wizard of Oz" after one is grown, and experiencing, yes, a fondness for the Wicked Witch of the West. Richard Nixon, who still needs impeaching, may not have reached that stage but perhaps someday he will. Jimmy Carter can now appear in public without inducing the old dismay with his administration - at least as long as he doesn't actually say anything.

Like children, rejected politicians ought to be seen but not heard. They're a lot easier to take that way. A certain forgetfulness about the details of their public performance enhances their return to stage center. There is no need to go into detail on such occasions. The sensible and kind thing to do is to treat them as one would a distant cousin with a checkered career, trusting that everyone at the family reunion will be less than explicit about a past that is best left the past. A tactful amnesia is highly recommended in these circumstances.

Unfortunately, the involuntarily retired politician may not tire of explaining, in detail, how unappreciated his wisdom was. He may even roll it out one more time, inviting the original revulsion it inspired to return to full force. All of which brings me, regretfully, to J. William Fulbright.

Every time J. William Fulbright is heard from, the more, alas, he sounds like J. William Fulbright. The former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee materialized in Arkansas the other day to deliver a keynote address that would have been appropriate for a scholarly conference of poor losers. For it's not just J. William Fulbright who was decisively rejected by the voters some time ago, but the pretentious political type he came to personify. Having been turned out by the people, this type tends to conclude that it was the fault of the people - those misled, uneducated masses.

That message came through clearly in the former senator's more bitter comments on the decline of national leadership since his time in office. In a not very oblique criticism of Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, Mr. Fulbright fulminated: "When you have governments that are utterly inexperienced - you bring in people off the farm and off the movie set and make them president - my goodness, what do you do? It's incredible. No other country in the world has leaders with no experience when they come into that office." The last elected president who met Mr.

Fulbright's standard of experience for the job must have been Richard M. Nixon - which shows where his standard may lead.

"We need an exceptional effort in education," Senator Fulbright continued, "because if our leaders aren't educated, and they're not, then the populace has to be. Of course, if we were educated, we wouldn't elect such leaders." If that sounds bitter, Mr. Fulbright has a reason to be. It wasn't bad enough that, at the end of his political career, his towering testaments should be the Southern Manifesto and the Tonkin Resolution. What ought to hurt is that, in his moral confusion, he repudiated the wrong one - and wound up making obeisance to the forces of repression at home and abroad. That might be enough to embitter anybody.

If signing the Southern Manifesto, or repudiating a treaty, argues for great education, then a strong case could be made for ignorance. But it's not really education that the Fulbrights of American politics advocate when they make speeches like this, but sophistication - a word with its root in Sophist. That they are offering last decade's sophistication doesn't make it any the more persuasive.

When J. William Fulbright comes back home to upbraid the people for choosing leaders who are "utterly inexperienced," it may not occur to him that one reason for that choice may have been the people's long exposure to utterly experienced leaders like J. William Fulbright.

There is nothing new or secret about Grenada's new airfield

By DON GRAFF

The subject under discussion in this space the other day was whether the administration is leveling with or conning the American public in its depiction of the military threat to this country.

It still is. We're returning to it at another point, one raised by the president in his televised effort to rally support for his military budget.

If you were watching, you'll remember the detailed aerial photograph of the airport under construction on the Caribbean island of Grenada, a mini-nation so small it must make do without its own air force.

For whose use then, the president asked us ominously, is the 10,000-foot runway really intended?

Very effective, particularly so if the existence of the runway - and for that matter of Grenada, only 1,300 miles from the Panama Canal and 1,500 from Miami - came as news.

It didn't here, however, and we did a little research on the subject. It didn't take much, because Grenada's new airport is a matter of public record going back several years.

Briefly, the project was launched shortly after the March 13, 1979, coup that brought Maurice Bishop and his New Jewel Movement to power in the former British possession. The idea was that Grenada, economically dependent on exports of a few agricultural products, should cash in on tourism, as numbers of its neighbors were doing.

For that, a modern airport capable of handling the big jets was deemed desirable, on the order of the 11,000-foot runway on next-door Barbados. Grenada had plenty of outside help in developing the project, including a World Bank feasibility study.

Construction began in January of 1980, with public and private assistance from Cuba, Venezuela, Mexico, Canada, Britain and the U.S. Contracts have gone to U.S. firms for, among other things, design of fuel storage facilities.

But nothing has been forthcoming from the U.S. government. Washington does not like Bishop, who immediately upon taking power had declared himself Fidel Castro's most devoted Caribbean ally.

From the very beginning, the airport was publicly tagged potential Cuban - Soviet base and a threat to American interests. Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig is on the record to that effect and so is present Undersecretary of Defense Fred C. Ikle.

So is Lt. Gen. Wallace H. Nutting, Panama-based commander of U.S. forces in Central and South America. But asked, during House hearings last year, whether a runway built to accommodate tourist jets automatically had the capability to handle military aircraft "such as MiG 23s," Nutting backed off. His response comes from the Congressional Record:

"Not necessarily. There would be required other facilities for petroleum storage, ammunition storage, if it were to support military operations. The runway length itself is only one factor to be considered... I can't tell you that evidence (of support facilities) exists, no sir. I would only recognize that I am showing a potential that has yet to be fulfilled, if ever, and would refer only to the open statements of members of the (Grenadan) government that aircraft of those nations are likely to use that facility, whether they are military or not certainly remains to be seen."

Let us not misunderstand each other. Maurice Bishop is no friend of the U.S. His Grenada is a one-party authoritarian state with a controlled press. He has lined up with Cuba, with Sandinista Nicaragua, with the Salvadoran rebels.

He may well be attempting to con us in claiming his new airport is solely for future hordes of tourists, who may not find his country particularly relaxing.

But there is nothing new or secret about the airport, contrary to what the president so dramatically implied.

If he wants the American public to back his massive military program, he owes it a more candid explanation of his supporting evidence.

According to an inspector general's audit, the accounting department of the Bureau of Mines, after five years of planning and preparation for a new computerized system in Denver, "spent about $3 million to produce a giant step backward." What happened were dozens of mistakes, late billings, late payment of bills and a discrepancy of more than $2.5 million between the books of the Treasury Department and the BOM. Oh, well, it's only money, and the taxpayers have deep pockets.

I have worked for many years with the geriatric population in this community. I worked first as a nurse, and for the last year I have worked as an Activity Director at Pampa Nursing Center.

I cannot find words to express the gratification I feel when a smile lights the eyes of these elderly residents when they have accomplished a task that they thought they could no longer perform. They are so grateful for just a few moments of your time. If you have just one hour, a month, week, or day to give to these precious elderly people as a volunteer I urge you to do so. You don't have to have special talents if you can just help them write a letter or sew on a button or just sit and talk; I can promise you your time will be paid for "ten-fold" by the love you will receive from them.

Each one of us have a need to be needed. I think you will find there is no better way to fill this need than working with the elderly. Many of these people have given so much to our community I urge you to repay them with a few minutes of your time now. If you can give some of your time, please call me at 689-2551.

I would like to put in a good loud word for this big-hearted-just-right-sized-small-town and its up-town community hospital with those two excellent physicians, Dr. A.L. Juan and Dr. V. K. Mohan.

There would be very little difference between production and consumption, including that used for capital, if we were governed by an unhampered market. If we were, our standard of living would be much higher than it is now. In fact, we cannot even conjecture how high it would be if we really had an unhampered market, free competition.

The reason America has so much higher a standard of living than any other country is simply because in the past the government more nearly respected human initiative than any other country in history. Our long periods of unemployment, and our being in one war after another, are primarily due to the government abandoning the policies set forth in the Declaration of Independence.

'If the dust was white, it came from Colorado; red dirt was from the Dakotas; black from Kansas'

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

As the big black cloud rolled in from the North, Stanley Kretzmeir and his helper hurried to finish the evening chores. They had first noticed a sky-high black cloud across the horizon earlier in the afternoon and now it was so close they could see the "thick cloud of birds flying in front of it," trying to escape the devastation.

It was Sunday, April 14, 1934. Stan and his wife, Theresa, watched from their back porch as the air-borne earth rolled up from the ground into a black wall. Theresa remembered there were so many birds flying in front of it, they almost blocked out what sky might have been seen.

They had put a wet sheet over the crib to filter the air where their infant daughter was sleeping. Theresa had put dinner on the table before she and her oldest daughter had gone out on the porch to watch the approaching dust storm. When they came into the house, the air was so thick with dust, a bright lamp appeared as a tiny glimmer. There was a layer of dirt on everything, including the food and dishes, a quarter of an inch thick. Theresa said she had to throw the meal out, wash the dishes and start over. Instead of sweeping, she used a scoop to remove the dirt the dust storm had left.

The dust storms came about every other day that spring. Stan said they could tell the origin of the storm by the color of the earth which settled out of the night sky after the winds died down.

If the dust was white, it came from Colorado; red dirt was from the Dakotas and black earth blew in from Kansas.

Stan said he could adjust to most anything, but not a dust storm. The big Grandfather's clock, made of wood from the Black Forrest in Germany, chimed in mellow tones from the corner of the Kretzmeir living room. Stan leaned back and remembered the feelings of depression that overwhelmed him during the devastation of the 1930's dust storms.

He was born to a family of farmers and has farmed most of his life.

"Granddad Kretzmeir came to the United States from Germany in the middle 1800s to escape compulsory military service," as did his mother's father. "Granddad Baer. My mother was only six-months old when they came over," Stan recalled the family history.

Granddad Kretzmeir first settled on a 160-acre farm in southern Indiana. The Baer's went to Kansas. A few years later Kretzmeir visited some relatives in Kansas, near Fort Riley. He liked the looks of the land, so he sold out his Indiana farm and moved his family to another 160-acre farm close to Clay Center, Kansas, where, in 1906, Stanley Kretzmeir was born to Otto and Elizabeth (Baer) Kretzmeir.

Stan has many memories from his youth. Stan was only six when the "Blizzard of 1912" struck the Great Plains. Because Stan's father was in Pampa on business, Warren Cole, a local high school boy, helped Stan's mother with the farm work.

"I remember how Warren had to dig tunnels so we could go from the house to the out buildings to take care of the livestock," he said. His father was stranded in Pampa for two or three months that winter.

In the early 1900s the Panhandle area opened up for farm development.

Two men attracted by the prospect of cheap, good virgin soil were Otto and Chris Kretzmeir. According to Stan, his grandfather Baer accompanied the younger men on their trip. "He was not all that impressed by the blowing sand dunes in the eastern Panhandle," Stan said.

Stan said the sight of nothing but the grass waving in the wind for as far as the eye could see was awe-inspiring. Only an occasional windmill could be seen for miles in any direction. The land sold for $12 an acre in those days, Stan said. His father and uncle divided the 640 acres equally.

During the years before his family moved to Pampa, Stan and his family learned about his new home through the weekly newspaper, The Pampa Weekly. "We wanted to know who was doing what. We wanted to learn about our new home and the best way was by reading the newspaper."

Forging a life

Hard work and school were not Stan's only boyhood memories.

The summer Stan was about 12 and his brother, Roy, 10, his grandparents were away for a few days. The boys decided to hitch their half-Indian pony to "Grandad's best buggy." He said they were fooling around and started throwing corn cobs. One of the cobs hit the pony, startling him into a run.

When the pony pulled the buggy under some trees, the low-hanging branches caught the top, and off it went, followed by the seat, he recalled, grinning. "Well, Granddad didn't let us get away with that one." The boys had to stand up to eat for a couple of days.

Picante sauce makers pepper competition with lawsuits

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — To live up their already sizzling blend of jalapenos, tomatoes and onions, hot sauce makers in this city have been tossing in another spicy ingredient — lawsuits.

The competition in San Antonio's lucrative picante sauce market has been liberally peppered with litigation and, along with the companies' legal fees, demand for the eye-watering, mouth-parching product is growing.

Texans just plain like hot sauce — slathered on most everything — and the rest of the country seems to be catching on.

"Down here, it's always been used like salt and pepper," said Kit Goldsbury, president of Pace Picante Inc. "Now, a lot of people are making it part of their daily diet."

Goldsbury has presided over much of the family-operated company's expansion, which mirrors the boom in the $350 million Mexican food business.

Mexican sauces rake in about $135 million annually and Pace makes the nation's best-selling sauce, even though it concentrates its efforts mostly in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arizona and Colorado.

Pace is moving to a new manufacturing complex from its current cramped facilities, where the sauce's pungent smell of success permeates even the business offices.

That aroma of success, the company's lawsuits say, has drawn imitators.

Larry Amstutz and Brian Loranger left Pace about 1½ years ago to form Sauces Unlimited Inc., which manufactures a generic-labeled picante sauce marketed in a three-state area.

Amstutz and Loranger had been mixing their sauce for less than a year when Pace obtained a temporary injunction, contending the pair pirated the Pace recipe.

Sauces Unlimited filed a counterclaim charging Pace with antitrust violations.

A jury acquitted Sauces of the pirating charges, but Pace's appeal still is pending before the 4th Court of Civil Appeals here. Sauces Unlimited's suit is pending in federal court.

Both Amstutz and Goldsbury refused to discuss the litigation in any detail.

Asked about the supposed similarities in sauces, Goldsbury answered only, "Just taste it."

Amstutz limited his comments to "Pace is a fine company and makes a fine product." He said his split with Pace was amicable.

High-tech moves into New Amsterdam

By SUSAN LISOVICZ
Associated Press Writer

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — In this colonial settlement named by the Dutch, Japanese engineers teach high technology to the unemployed and video game cartridges are made in 19th-century brick buildings that still dominate the city's landscape.

Three decades ago, this bustling textile city rolled to a stop when the mills moved South in search of lower labor costs, fewer union troubles and proximity to raw products.

But thanks to $175 million in state and federal aid, an aggressive redevelopment program and the area's work-oriented people, Amsterdam has swung itself around and plunged into the age of electronics.

At the forefront is Coleco Industries, maker of recreation and entertainment goods and the nation's No. 3 manufacturer of video games. The Hartford, Conn.-based company, whose products include the "Donkey Kong" game and table-top version of "Pac-Man," acquired its first vacant building here in 1964.

There were plenty to choose from. Some three million to four million square feet of manufacturing space lay empty when Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co. announced in 1955 it would end production in "Rug City" after more than a century of carpet making.

"It was without any question the most devastating news that this city ever received," Mayor Mario Villa recalls. "You have to take into consideration the fact that people had spent a lifetime in the carpet industry."

Industry's exodus south "started a cycle of psychological and economical depression" that still lingers, according to Henry Bray, executive director of Amsterdam's Urban Renewal Agency.

The economic slide hit retail businesses hard. Bray says J.C. Penney, Woolworth and Sears left downtown Amsterdam in the 1960s and early 1970s.

And as stores left the area, so did residents. Amsterdam counted a populace of 33,329 in the 1940 census. The figure has dropped by nearly a third since then, with a 1980 count of 21,872.

The Urban Renewal Agency was created in 1965 to entice businesses back to the Mohawk Valley, a year after the city's prize catch, Coleco, first put down roots in the area.

Today, Coleco is firmly entrenched in the Mohawk Valley with eight plants and a workforce of 3,000. The company had record sales of approximately $550 million in 1982.

Coleco has helped to cut the unemployment rate from a high of 17 percent in the 1970s to 12 percent in January, Bray says. Says Coleco spokesman Bob Freedman, "There's a mutual benefit of us being in the area."

Now, downtown Amsterdam has been completely revitalized, Bray says. A 45-store shopping mall is the community's center for commerce. Hospitals, schools and sewers have been modernized.

But many old mills remain, reminders of Amsterdam's industrial past.

Pace filed suit against another local sauce maker in 1981, contending Jimenez Food Products Inc. imitated the bottles and label shape used by Pace.

Jimenez turned around and filed an antitrust violations lawsuit against Pace.

Jimenez agreed to change its bottles in an out-of-court settlement in April, and lawyers said the company would drop its countersuit against Pace in exchange for an undetermined amount of cash.

Now the South Texas sauce makers face heated competition from a new source — national companies with virtually bottomless bank accounts, mammoth marketing campaigns and a thirst for a chunk of the picante profits.

Campbell Soup Co. and Chesebrough-Ponds have jumped into the Mexican sauce business in the past several months, with Campbells pushing La Especial and Chesebrough-Ponds, Montero.

"We've got our hands full just keeping track of the competition," said Rod Sands, Pace's vice president of marketing. He said 67 brands of Mexican sauces currently are on the market.

"We've got an advantage being headquartered in San Antonio," Sands said. "We know what good picante sauce ought to taste like."

Goldsbury said Pace, which was founded in 1947, cannot compete financially with the larger companies. Chesebrough-Ponds' $20 million advertising and promotions budget alone outweighs Pace's profits, he said.

Jury analyzed before, during murder trial

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — A Harlingen attorney who defended a young farmer recently convicted of murder says he knew the chances were slim of drawing a jury that could put aside the "gouge sounds" of a tape-recorded slaying.

So attorney James Mardis tried to improve his odds by employing a jury selection technique tested only a few times in the state, including wealthy Fort Worth resident Cullen Davis' murder and contract-murder trials of the late 1970s. Davis was acquitted of all charges against him.

The technique involves interviewing residents of the area beforehand to determine a general attitude and then zeroing in on those potential jurors who could understand why a person would commit the crime he did.

"We needed all the help we could get in this case, just to get a fair jury," Mardis said following Paul Wolf's widely publicized trial in state district court in Brownsville.

The 21-year-old La Feria farmer, who testified he killed in a moment of uncontrollable rage sparked by love for a child, was convicted of murder April 20 in the slaying of schoolteacher Leticia Castro, 26.

Miss Castro's fiance, Billy Staton, was carrying a concealed tape recorder the night the two were killed.

The tape recording, introduced as evidence during the trial, captured the sounds of the fatal blows to Staton's head and of his final dying gasps.

Wolf was sentenced to life in prison and fined $10,000 for Miss Castro's slaying, the maximum sentence possible in the case.

He faces trial July 25 for Staton's death.

Margaret Covington, a Houston psychologist and attorney who specializes in jury selection, was called in by Mardis and the wealthy Wolf family to help on the case.

"There was always the chance that a jury could have just understood what Paul was going through," she said after the trial. Ms. Covington surveyed 1,000 potential jurors in Cameron County by telephone in January to "determine a profile of the type of person we wanted on the jury," she said.

Respondents were told they were being questioned about the Texas judicial system.

"You're looking for a jury that can understand why he did what he did in a case like this, where there's no question he did it," Mardis said in a post-trial interview at his law office.

Witnesses testified during the trial that Wolf was a warm, loving, law-abiding citizen who killed in a crime of passion caused by stress over seeing his wife's daughter cry.

The survey revealed that jurors most sympathetic toward Wolf would be Mexican-American males about Wolf's age who had attended high school, but had not graduated, Ms. Covington said.

The technique didn't work for Wolf, mainly because of the emotionally overpowering sounds of "that poor man living and breathing on and on and on," Mardis said.

"Hearing 23 minutes of murder on a tape... would be impossible for any jury to ignore," Ms. Covington said.

The survey showed that the worst possible jurors were women about the victim's age and people in law enforcement or associated with someone in law enforcement, she said.

Of the jurors selected, seven were women, one was a retired Anglo male and four were Mexican-American males. One juror had a law enforcement connection, Ms. Covington said.

She noted that defense attorneys were allowed to strike only 10 potential jurors in a group that included an extraordinary amount of young females and people with law enforcement connections.

Ms. Covington, who worked with celebrated attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes during the Davis trials, said her Cameron County survey showed that nearly 90 percent of the potential jurors called in Wolf's case should have admitted having determined he was guilty, based on pretrial publicity.

Only about 10 percent of the 60 prospective jurors said they thought Wolf was guilty.

Ms. Covington said she's done enough surveys to know they are accurate within a few percentage points.

"I just don't understand why no more than six people said they had formed an opinion," she said. "Perhaps on some level they felt they hadn't."

Ms. Covington noted

several reasons why prospective jurors did not acknowledge they had prejudged the case, including that they wanted to be on the panel to write a book, that they were overcome by public pressure to convict Wolf or they didn't consider the fact that they had formed an opinion important.

Still, Ms. Covington said she believed the jury selected "would be a little more receptive and at least hear (Wolf's) side of the story."

But after the tape was introduced, and the "23 minutes of murder" was played, Ms. Covington said jurors would not even look at Wolf, an indication they were tuning him out.

"How could they even understand the pressure he was going through or what his life was like," Mardis said.

Ms. Covington, who stayed on during the 6½-day trial to read jurors' body language said it was "just virtually impossible for 12 caring human beings to overlook those sounds."

"Without the tape it would have been a different outcome totally," she said.

Another factor working against Wolf was his insanity defense, according to Ms. Covington.

Investors see better times ahead

The stock market's latest surge — setting records in eight of 12 sessions — is a sign that investors see better economic times ahead, analysts say.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 11.12 points Thursday to 1,219.52, surpassing the previous record of 1,209.46 set only two days earlier.

Other measures of the stock market also spurred to new records.

Recent indicators of a strengthening economy include reports of rising industrial production and home building, a pickup in corporate profits and a modest increase in automobile sales.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—The Labor Department said new applications for unemployment benefits fell by 18,000 in mid-April to 488,000. Those figures have fluctuated in a narrow range in recent months, indicating that job markets are stabilizing. The unemployment rate for April is scheduled to be released by the Labor Department next week.

—The five major U.S. automakers said 230,000 autoworkers are on indefinite furlough this week, down from last week's 232,600, because of callbacks at the Big Three.

—Automotive News, a trade journal, said major U.S. automakers built the year's 2 millionth U.S. car about a month earlier than last year. It also said the automakers planned to build 136,072 cars this week, down 0.3 percent from last week but up 9.6 percent from the comparable week a year ago.

—Four U.S. airline companies — representing United, Air Florida, Delta and Northwest — reported losses for the quarter totaling $164.8 million. They partly blamed fare wars for eroding industry profits.

Oklahoma cowboy longs for space

By GLEN SEEBER
The Duncan Banner

MARLOW, Okla. (AP) — He looks like he would be at home on the range. He wears a well-worn cowboy hat, faded blue jeans and dusty boots, and he spends his days in a feed store. But in the evening, this Oklahoma-grown cowboy leaves the feed store behind him and turns his thoughts to space exploration and the future of mankind. Through his growing library he reads fictional accounts of strange new worlds and reforms, and he reads facts and speculation about space exploration and commerce.

Mike Bates, owner of Marlow Seed and Grain, grew up in Addington and attended Waurika High School. He worked on the Price Ranch at Addington, dealing with cattle, hogs, farming, hay and horses. He studied business and agriculture at Oklahoma State University.

"I love horses," Bates said. "If I could figure out a bookholder that would fit on a saddlehorn, I'd love to read while riding."

Paperback books lie in little piles in various parts of his office. Photos of the space shuttle share the walls with the drawing of a bull, customer orders and a Future Farmers of America calendar.

But his reading is only one aspect of his far-flung interests. Get him started talking about space exploration, and he practically radiates excitement.

He's a member of the L-5 Society, which was formed in September 1975 to promote space development in government, industry and private sectors. "I'm a charter member. As far as I know, I'm the only charter member in Oklahoma."

The "L-5" refers to the Lagrange libration point No. 5, which is a point in the moon's orbit around Earth which is stable. In other words, had Skylab been placed there, it would still be there, instead of scattered in pieces across the Australian Outback and Indian Ocean.

"L-5 is a lobbying, education group," Bates said. "If we educate the public more about the space program, they'll put more pressure on our representatives (in Washington). And if we lobby the representatives, it in turn comes back and educates the public. We need people at the top applying pressure, and people at the bottom applying pressure."

"Space is not a Buck Rogers deal. We have never said anything about military use. We feel private industry could pick up the lead and run off and leave NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration) behind."

The L-5 Society believes in free enterprise in space, Bates said. "We can get power from space, and knowledge." The space program has resulted in hundreds of improvements in medical science alone, he noted.

Although one might view farming and space activity to be as far apart as the Earth and stars, space research can help the farmer, Bates said. A laboratory in space can come up with new, hybrid seeds without worry of cross-pollination ruining the hybrid, he said.

"It will benefit all of mankind for us to have an active space program," he said.

"I'd like to get people interested," he said.

He noted that used book stores in the area have large science fiction sections, which indicates a heavy readership in that genre. "I want them (the readers) up and doing something. If they enjoy what they read, and think it's worthwhile, I'd like to see them do it."

Bates wants to form a local chapter of the L-5 Society, and wants to recruit members for the growing organization. Yearly dues range from $15 for students and $25 for regular members to a life membership for $500.

The dues include a subscription to the monthly "L-5 News," a publication that covers the social, political and economic developments as well as the technical aspects of space industrialization, he said.

Prospective members can join through Bates or by writing to the L-5 Society at 1060 E. Elm, Tucson, Ariz. 85719. The L-5 Society is a non-profit organization, and donations are tax-deductible, he said.

But how did a small-town boy who grew up working on a ranch and who now owns a farmers' supply store get interested in space and science fiction?

"When I was a fourth-grader in Waurika, I enjoyed reading. I've always loved it," he said. One day he saw a copy of Edgar Rice Burroughs' "A Princess of Mars," and "I picked it up and read it. I was immediately enchanted."

Racial tension surrounds sentence in death

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — This quiet town has been torn by racial tension since a soldier who got "stumbling drunk" received probation for running over and killing a Mexican-American family of four.

Demonstrators carry picket signs, three jail inmates have launched a hunger strike and this week a largely Hispanic group led a march — all to protest what they consider excessively lenient treatment by authorities.

Comal County District Attorney William Schroeder prosecuted Pfc. William Dale Savage only for the death of the father. The Hispanic community in this town, which was settled by German immigrants, demands that he be tried for the other three deaths.

"If this had been a Mexican-American man running over a German family of four, there's no doubt they would have tried all four cases," Hispanic leader Mack Martinez said.

Savage, 23, assigned to the Army's Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, had downed several beers the night of Oct. 30 at New Braunfels' Wurstfest, an annual celebration of its German heritage.

Ruben Saucedo, his pregnant wife, Hortencia, and their two young children were crossing a highway just outside town when Savage's yellow Volkswagon plowed into them.

Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMio testified that Savage was "stumbling drunk" and registered almost double the legal limit of intoxication.

But Schroeder steadfastly has refused to prosecute Savage further and now he enters the courthouse through the back door.

"There's such a thing in this country as cruel and unusual punishment," Schroeder said. "What's the point of putting that man through four trials? A jury has spoken. A man has been convicted of involuntary manslaughter. If justice is not that jury's verdict, then what is justice?"

The jury, which included one Hispanic, recommended a probation sentence, and the trial judge accepted that recommendation on April 15.

Hispanic leaders bitterly contend there is no justice in New Braunfels for Mexican-Americans, who make up about 30 percent of this picturesque Hill Country town's population of 22,400.

"There's a long tradition of racism against Mexican-Americans in New Braunfels," said Martinez, an Austin lawyer representing a group called the Committee for Justice for All.

Several years ago, U.S. Rep. Henry Gonzalez of nearby San Antonio, a Hispanic, was denied entrance to a city park. Justice for All has asked State District Judge Robert Pfeuffer, who presided over Savage's trial, to call in a special prosecutor from the Texas attorney general's office, insisting that Savage be held accountable for all four deaths.

Pickets tote signs outside the courthouse every day now, and most placards include references to a fifth death — Mrs. Saucedo's unborn child.

Savage, of Burlington, Iowa, cried when telling the jury how he tried mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on Saucedo, who died along the edge of the road.

Schroeder pressed for the maximum penalty, 10 years in prison, after Savage was convicted April 14. But he said he could tell the jury was sympathetic to the private.

"He was really very pathetic," Schroeder said of Savage. "He was absolutely in agony about it."

Savage, who had no previous record, also was fined $5,000. He since has returned to the Army base and has had no comment on the case.

Suzanne Hildebrand, president of the San Antonio chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, began crusading against the private's probation but left a march in tears Monday when she said she felt the uneasy undercurrent of racial animosity among the 300 protesters.

Lions to sell light bulbs

The annual light bulb sale of the Pampa Evening Lions Club will begin Monday and continue until the club's supply of bulbs is exhausted, according to Richard Morgan, club project chairman.

Lions will be going from door-to-door in Pampa's residential areas during the evenings offering the light bulbs to residential owners, he said.

Proceeds from the club's light bulb sales will be used in the Evening Lions Club's various community projects and club activities, including support of the Lions Hi-Plains Eye Bank at Amarillo, Girls Town, Lions Crippled Childrens Camp at Kerrville and the local Meals on Wheels program.

Mark White is disappointed after 100 days

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he "didn't worry much about being governor" until he was elected in an upset over Republican incumbent Bill Clements last year.

Now, after 100 days in office, he worries about only two things — time and money.

White faces the unhappy prospect of being the first governor in 12 years to preside over a state tax hike. Two of his campaign promises — to raise teacher salaries and not increase taxes — are on a collision course.

Reduced revenue predictions, which play havoc with the state budget, have been issued three times since Jan. 1 by Comptroller Bob Bullock, a fellow Democrat who says he can do White's job better.

Lawmakers faced with a potential tax increase on their records have been less than enthusiastic about the new governor's suggested solutions to the state budget crunch.

Time is his other crisis — he has little of it, for his young family, or to come up with details of a long-term agenda that he has yet to bring into focus.

He blames post-campaign debt-paying and a system that forces a new governor to "play catch-up" with a Legislature already in session.

White can be witty and charming, but he has moods. It was obvious during a car ride to yet another personal appearance, this time in San Marcos, that it had already been a long day.

"As governor, I guess the big disappointment is just the incredible drain on time," White said.

"You don't have an opportunity to sit down and spend hours and hours working hands-on with various agencies trying to get them to do the things you want them to do, because your time is constrained by meetings with members of the Legislature, meetings with so-and-so and so-and-so, the schoolteachers and administrators and various groups that are interested in legislation that's pending, plus you've got your roommate from 1958 who comes in and wants to say hi and you can't say, 'No, I can't see him today,' because he'll leave and say, 'You know, he wasn't so hot when he was my roommate. Now he thinks he's a pretty big deal.'"

He finally pauses and adds, "But very few people impose on you for more than a reasonable amount of time. What is difficult to understand is when you add up all those reasonable people, it almost becomes unreasonable."

"Other than that, it's been a very exhilarating time." Despite the challenges of his first 100 days in office, White still revels in his victory over Clements, whom he calls "the $15 million man" or "that guy."

But the future holds hard philosophical choices for White, seen by some of his colleagues as an accomplished politician who is still an unknown quantity as a leader.

When he is asked what he considers his biggest accomplishment thus far, White ponders for several seconds before answering.

He decides on the Public Utility Commission that he virtually bullied into resigning. The three-member board now is made up totally of White's appointees, including the "housewife" he promised to appoint after Clements said he knew of no such person qualified to serve.

White is unhappy about suggestions that he made some campaign promises he will not be able to keep.

"If you look back at the promises I made, I promised to abolish the fuel adjustment clause, I promised to raise teachers' salaries. I don't know if I made any other promises of significance," he said and shrugged.

What about the one he made in Longview last year, when he told an audience, "I'll assure you we won't have to raise taxes while Mark White is governor?"

"There were no new taxes needed with $5 billion in surplus revenue," White said. "I was just dealing with the reality back at that time."

He predicted the Legislature will be "very close" to his tax proposals by the end of the session. He has suggested raising "sin taxes" on cigarettes, liquor and arcade games to pay for the 24 percent teacher pay raise he supports.

He has gradually shifted his position on other taxes, however, indicating he will stand by the teachers who helped elect him and swallow a general tax increase "if necessary" to give them a raise.

Previously opposed to an increase in the state gas tax, he recently said he would consider doubling the 5-cent-a-gallon tax to fund highway bonds — but only in a proposed constitutional amendment which would be put to a referendum.

"I'm not going to impose any increased taxes," White told reporters in Houston last week. "The people are going to have a chance to vote on it."

White's win over Clements — Texas' first Republican governor since Reconstruction and a supporter of Ronald Reagan — has put him on some "comer" lists in Washington. White has already been mentioned as a possible Democratic vice presidential candidate. His record as governor will not be scrutinized only by Texas voters.

"Not many people knew about Mark White in Washington," said a presidential candidate's campaign manager who asked that his name not be used. "He came out of the election viewed as a good campaigner, so they're watching. Some good candidates are lousy elected officials."

Also watching is Bullock, who told reporters that he plans to run for governor in 1986.

"My lord, I'd take a test with him any day of the week about government," Bullock said of White in a recent interview. "He's had no legislative experience, and that's being reflected at this time."

"He could have run last time," said White of Bullock, "a little while back when I stood up and said I'm willing to run. I don't know if he missed that last election or not. We just got through with one. He could have been in it if he wanted to be governor. Maybe he would have won. But we were successful against a $15 million man, and whatever Mr. Bullock wants to do he's free to do."

White, a protégé of former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, was considered the conservative among the field of Democrats who did seek the gubernatorial nomination last year. Since assuming office, he has shifted to a populist image.

He became the first governor to go to the voters via television commercials. White asked Texans to send him letters supporting his utility regulation reform proposals. The campaign was billed by White's office as successful among voters, but legislators so far have rejected White's call for an elected PUC.

As soon as he was sworn in on Jan. 18, White led reporters and well-wishers to the Governor's Mansion where he cut from the front gate a chain and lock installed just for that purpose, then invited everybody inside.

In February, he received a summons for jury duty. Instead of quietly disposing of it, White flew to his hometown of Houston to wait with the panel of other prospective jurors. White was not selected for service, however.

During a February trip to Washington, White took on the Reagan administration's economic policies, telling the Democratic National Committee, "All you have to do is walk a few blocks from our Capitol here in Austin, as I did two days ago, to find people living in makeshift shacks of cardboard with a piece of plastic the only roof over their head."

After the Dallas Times Herald ran a story saying Austin officials could find no such shacks, White interrupted his weekly news conference to lead reporters on a brisk walk to the creekside shanties, actually about a dozen blocks from the Capitol, and visited with the people living in the camp.

He has traveled to Chicago to try to persuade Micro Electronics Corp. to locate a new manufacturing plant in Texas. He sees high-technology industry as the key to long-term economic prosperity and was not shy about telling a recent meeting of oil workers they should seek new training in computers.

His speeches are not always totally convincing, however. Last month, he expounded at length to a visiting group of community business leaders on the virtues of Wichita Falls. One man finally called out meekly, "We're from Sherman."

White said Sherman was nice, too.

He told an audience in a "little bitty hotel in College Station" that Alaska's tourism advertising campaign was very effective, but added that he didn't know why "anyone would want to go to a cold, barren place like that."

White said the comment was offered in jest, but it reached Alaska, and Alaskans responded by writing insulting songs about White and sending him a small, stuffed white rat. "They said that was a Texas polar bear," White told an audience in Washington.

White will vacation, not in Alaska, but in Europe after the Legislature completes its work.

The immediate budget quandary may be behind him when he returns, but other serious problems for Texas which have been pushed into background will re-emerge.

A fluctuating oil market continues to affect Texas' economy from Odessa to Beaumont. Meanwhile, the Rio Grande Valley remains at record unemployment following repeated devaluations of the Mexican peso.

The emotional and politically touchy problem of dealing with an influx of illegal aliens will fall on White's shoulders as governor of the state with the longest U.S. border with a foreign country.

White candidly told a news conference in March that he "can find no consensus" for any solution and appointed a task force to wrangle with the issue and make recommendations to Congress, where immigration policy is formulated.

White said those problems and his own "program development" in such areas as school discipline and crime prevention will not give him any more time after the Legislature completes its work to spend with his three children, Wells, Andy and Elizabeth.

That bothers him, he said.

Clements: White has deceived public, must pay

By GARTH JONES
AP Political Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Bill Clements says Gov. Mark White has deceived the people of Texas "and he'll pay the price for that." "I think he has lost his credibility," said the former Republican governor in his first interview since leaving office. "When is he telling the truth? Does he really want more taxes or does he not want taxes?"

"I don't think the people of Texas believe him, one way or the other."

Clements, a 65-year-old multi-millionaire, upset all political speculation in 1978 when he became the state's first GOP governor this century, but then was upset himself in 1982 by Democrat White.

Now, the outspoken former oilfield roughneck is recuperating from hip joint surgery that eased the pain of a 16-year-old handball game injury which caused him to limp in recent years.

"I feel real good," he says and proudly tells of walking almost three miles every morning, with the occasional aid of a cane. He spends the afternoon in his Dallas office at SEDCO, the worldwide drilling firm he founded in 1947.

There is only one item in his office to remind him of four tumultuous years in Austin — a bronze plaque of the Texas governor seal on one wall.

But he still keeps a close eye on Austin and Washington — and does not hesitate to comment in his usual no-holds-barred manner.

"I am not a bit surprised at the (White) administration's start. They're doing about what I thought they would do," Clements said.

Clements recalled White's campaign promises of a 24 percent pay raise for schoolteachers and an elected Public Utility Commission.

"They're not going to fly. I think everyone else who had any knowledge of the Legislature and the general scene in Austin realized they wouldn't," Clements said.

"So, he deceived the Texas public, the Texas taxpayers, the Texas voters and he'll pay the price for that."

Clements also recalled that in his own "state-of-the-state" message to the Legislature, just before leaving office, he urged that the state's 1984-85 budget be "cut to a pattern to fit the cloth."

"I think it is incumbent upon our state government to live within our means and to acknowledge that a revenue increase of approximately 12 percent over the past two years is sufficient, and make it be enough."

"I don't think the public understands we do indeed have 12 percent more money for his (White's) budget than we did the last time around."

What would Clements do if still in the governor's chair? "I would veto any kind of a budget that exceeded that 12 percent revenue. We do not need any new taxes."

Clements said he is puzzled, like others, about White's various statements on taxes.

"I suppose he's lying about that like he has a lot of other things," Clements said, and chuckled.

"He gives off the noises that 'Yes, we do want new taxes' and in his words we are going to have 'sin taxes,' more tax on gasoline, an increased tax on oil and gas severance in order to raise additional funds so that he could pay the teachers a 24 percent salary increase and so forth. Which story is correct?"

"Does he really want more taxes or does he not want more taxes?"

Clements has some definite predictions of how the budget-taxes controversy will end.

"Just from where I sit and from listening to a lot of people I'm of the opinion there will be no new taxes in Texas," he said.

"I don't think it is going to happen."

Furthermore, he said: "If I had to render a judgment, I'd say they (the Legislature) will get their business done in the regular session and the governor will not call a special session, because he knows it would not accomplish anything."

Before leaving office in January, Clements told a group of reporters that his main political aim of the future would be to make White a one-term governor.

"Right now, he doesn't need much help," Clements said in an interview during the past week in his Dallas office. "He's doing a good job of being a one-term governor."

Clements made it clear he would not personally oppose White in 1986.

"I won't run for public office again," he said. "I want to clear the air so far as that."

And Clements said he, and his wife, Rita, definitely will have a part in the 1984 GOP presidential campaign in Texas. He was President Ronald Reagan's state campaign chairman in 1980.

ARMYWORMS IN WHEAT

According to Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist in Amarillo, considerable armyworm activity is being reported in wheat south of us. Although he has not seen any armyworms in Panhandle wheat, local wheat producers should be watchful for this pest during the next few weeks.

Armyworms often go undetected until they have stripped most of the foliage from the wheat. By that time they are almost full grown and have completed most of their larval development. Armyworms do not like direct sunlight; therefore, during the day inspect the base of the wheat plant, particularly beneath the dead foliage. During night-time or overcast conditions, the armyworm may be observed actively feeding on the upper foliage.

When checking fields for armyworm, inspect the rank or lodged wheat first, for the armyworm selects these areas to lay eggs. Eggs are oviposited in rows of 10-50 on lower leaves of wheat plants.

Control measures should be applied when four to five armyworms per square foot are detected. There are several insecticides suggested for armyworm control and the choice may depend somewhat on whether wheat is being grazed and time before harvest. If you should encounter any armyworm problems, give me a call for insecticide possibilities.

PROGRAM TO FEATURE VISUAL EVALUATION OF STEERS

The Steer Evaluation and Production Symposium at Texas A&M University May 20-21 is designed to teach youth and adults how to evaluate steers through the eyes of the show judge.

Carcass traits along with performance characteristics are the principles that a successful judge uses in selecting steers in the show ring.

Accurate visual appraisal of market steers requires a thorough understanding of the factors affecting carcass quality and composition. Carcasses are the primary unit of trade in the meat industry, so a great deal of importance is placed on them in evaluating market steers. In essence, carcass value (dressing percentage, weight, quality and cutability) determines what a meat buyer would be willing to pay for live steers.

Differences in body composition as they relate to visual evaluation of market steers will be demonstrated at the symposium. Dr. Dennis Stiffler, Extension meats specialist and others in Texas A&M's Department of Animal Science, will show this by "freezing" steers of different composition. Sections will be cut away from the "frozen" steers to demonstrate differences in fatness (amount and distribution) and muscling (size of ribeye and thickness of quarter).

Indicators of quality and composition are related to the relative amount and distribution of fat, muscle and bone. Fat is the most variable tissue and has the greatest impact on percentage yield of retail product. Some fat is necessary for an acceptable level of quality, but excess fat must be trimmed away and is costly to the industry. Muscle reflects the amount of saleable product while bone—structure, soundness and type—is functionally important and fundamental to optimum production efficiency.

Most individuals have trouble relating the live steer to its carcass and the symposium is designed to help in this effort. Use of "frozen" steers and carcasses will make it easier for individuals to identify differences in muscle and fat and to associate these differences to those of the live steer.

For further information on the steer clinic and registration forms, contact the Gray County Extension office.

TREATING GARBAGE FED SWINE

Food waste to be fed to swine in Texas should be treated properly before feeding to prevent disease problems.

Dr. Bruce Lawhorn, swine veterinarian with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, says that recent regulations by the U.S. Department of Agriculture are designed to prevent the introduction and spread of domestic and foreign animal diseases through the feeding of raw or improperly treated food waste to swine. Foreign diseases such as hog cholera, African swine fever, foot-and-mouth disease or swine vesicular disease are real threats to the swine industry.

Regulations prohibit the feeding of garbage to swine unless heat treated at a licensed facility, says Lawhorn. Treatment consists of boiling food waste for at least 30 minutes.

Applicants for a license will have to demonstrate that their premises, facilities and equipment comply with the regulations. Facilities will have to be constructed to prevent access of swine to garbage handling and treating areas. And the garbage will have to be covered until treated. Regulations also spell out how licenses can be suspended or revoked.

Under the Swine Health Protection Act, states have primary responsibility for enforcing regulations on treating garbage to be fed to swine. USDA and state officials usually have a cooperative agreement that coordinates the administration and enforcement of regulations.

Garbage is defined as all waste material derived from or associated with the meat of any animal, including fish and poultry, resulting from handling and preparation of food. Food waste from ordinary household operations fed to swine on the same premise is exempt, notes Lawhorn.

While a number of states specifically prohibit the feeding of garbage to swine, the practice is permissible in Texas if the food waste is treated properly, Lawhorn says.

Farm Bureau against taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Farm Bureau Federation says it is prepared to wage an all-out effort to head off proposals in Congress that would raise taxes or postpone scheduled tax breaks.

Robert B. Delano, president of the federation, said he delivered that message Wednesday at a White House meeting with presidential adviser Edwin Meese.

Delano said Farm Bureau members are "well aware of the apparent consensus in Washington that more taxes are needed" but insisted that "it is not the consensus of the American people."

"Congress will be hearing from the people on this issue very soon and it will be a genuine grassroots response to recent House and Senate actions suggesting increased taxes to reduce the federal deficits," he said in a statement.

Rural interest rates down

Interest rates on Land Bank variable rate loans will be reduced to 11 percent on farm loans and to 11.5 percent on rural residence loans effective May 1, according to Robert R. Williams Jr., president of the High Plains Federal Land Bank Association of Pampa.

In other changes, the Land Bank has reduced its closed loan fees to one percent on farm loans and two percent on rural residences.

The High Plains Federal Land Bank Association of Pampa makes long-term farm and ranch real estate loans in Gray, Roberts, Hemphill, Lipscomb, Ochiltree, Hansford and Hutchinson counties.

APHIDS ON EVERGREENS

I have had several calls from homeowners about their pine and evergreen trees that have a shiny look and a sticky substance on the leaves. This is due to an infestation of aphids. Many aphid species excrete a sticky substance known as "honeydew." This secretion falls onto leaves and other plant parts.

Aphids are insects that draw sap from plant tissue, which in this case would be the leaves.

Close, frequent inspection of trees and shrubs is important in detecting and controlling new aphid infestations as well as in determining overall aphid population. Since aphids reproduce so rapidly, damage often occurs before large populations are noticed.

Insecticide applications destroy beneficial insects as well as pest and leave trees or shrubs unprotected if pest resurgence occurs. Since beneficial insects play an important role in natural aphid control, try washing aphids away with a forceful stream of water before using insecticide sprays. Use the water during early morning or late afternoon to prevent sun scald of plants.

When insecticides are the only means of controlling aphids, use products containing diazinon, diazinon, malathion, Meta-Systox-R or dormant oil. Some formulations injure tender ornamental plants, the manufacturer generally includes precautions on the label when phytotoxicity is a danger. To avoid unnecessary damage, apply the insecticide only to plants specified on the label. Mix according to directions and apply the recommended dosage.

SCALE INSECTS

Also, a few calls have been received about scale insects. Many species of scale insects attack Texas landscape plants. Homeowners have difficulty controlling insects because they often are not aware of the problem until both the infestation and the damage are extensive, or they may apply insecticides improperly or at the wrong time.

Scales weaken or kill the host plant by sucking plant sap through piercing-sucking mouthparts. While feeding, some scale species also give off a sweet, sticky substance called "honeydew," which drips down on the lower leaves and attracts ants and flies. Mature scales never move once they firmly attach themselves to branches, twigs or foliage.

Parasites or predators such as small parasitic wasps, ladybird beetles, other insects and some fungi can attack and significantly reduce scale insect populations. When few scales and many ladybird beetles are present, or if there are many dead scales with tiny holes which indicate parasitization by small wasps, you should delay insecticide treatment.

Insecticide sprays may reduce or eliminate these beneficial insects. Observe closely the progress of scale infestation and, if scale numbers decrease or stay at a low level, avoid treatment.

If scale populations increase and damage to outdoor ornamental plantings, treat them with conventional sprays (including summer oils) in the spring and summer. Make spring and summer applications when the young crawlers are actively moving over the plant. You will need a magnifying glass to see the tiny, pale-yellow scales which generally move outward and upward on the plant toward the most recent growth.

Egg hatch and crawler emergence are usually complete within a seven- to 14-day period, so check your scale infested plants at least weekly until you spot these crawlers. Control of some scale species may require two to four applications at seven- to 10-day intervals beginning as soon as crawlers appear. No matter which spray schedule is followed, thorough coverage is essential for effective control.

Applications should cover both sides of the leaves and all twigs and branches. Emulsifiable concentrate (EC) sprays are preferred. Summer oils alone or in combination with other insecticides may be used. Apply when temperatures are below 90 degrees F. for 24 to 48 hours. Dimethoate, disulfoton, acephate and oxydemeton-methyl are systemic insecticides which can be applied to foliage or the soil. Soil applications can give two to three months control. Be careful of phytotoxicity caused by systemics. Not all insecticides listed are labeled for each kind of scale. Malathion is also another insecticide helpful in controlling some scale.

GREEN UP YOUR BERMUDAGRASS
Home lawns of bermudagrass need a boost to get them off and going. Three operations can get a lawn off to a good start—scalping, fertilizing and applying weed killer.

Scalping a lawn in the spring serves to revitalize it and promote spring and summer plant growth. Begin the operation by lowering the blade of your lawnmower one-half inch below the normal setting. Then mow the lawn in two directions that are at right angles to each other. Remove the clippings after each mowing. Keep the lawnmower blade lowered until about mid-summer.

After scalping the lawn, apply fertilizer to promote leaf and root growth. If you have used a "complete" fertilizer containing nitrogen and phosphorus for several years; then, prior to spring growth, broadcast six pounds (six pints) of ammonium nitrate (33-0-0) or 10 pounds of ammonium sulfate (21-0-0) per 1,000 square feet of area when the grass is dry.

After the fertilizer is applied, irrigate your lawn with one inch of water (630 gallons per 1,000 square feet) to move the nitrogen down into the root zone. To maintain desired color and vigor, apply an additional four to five pounds per 1,000 square feet at 30 to 40-day intervals, if needed. After three to four years, begin the season by applying 12 pounds of 16-20-0 instead of the ammonium nitrate; then, during the growing season, apply the maintenance rate of ammonium nitrate (four to five pounds per 1,000 square feet at 30 to 40-day intervals), if needed.

To keep crabgrass or other unsightly weeds from appearing, apply a preemergence herbicide (weed killer) containing benefin, dacthal or bensulfide in the spring. Combinations of herbicides with fertilizers are available and convenient to use but should only be used according to instructions on the label. Formulations containing atrazine should not be applied around trees or shrubs.

Proper maintenance is essential for a healthy lawn, and these practices will give new life to a dormant, weedy lawn.

DISTRICT ROUND-UP

Several 4-H'ers will be traveling to Canyon Saturday to participate in the District Method Demonstration Round-Up. The juniors are Becky Reed, Kelly Harris, Sherri McDonald, Heather Kludt, Stacie McDonald, Billy Payne, Eva Jo Isbell and Jennifer Follis. The seniors participating are Swasey Brainard, Bryan Smitherman, Shelly Cochran, Cari Furrh and Beverly Payne.

If you see any of these 4-H'ers, wish them good luck at district.

GRAY COUNTY 4-H RIFLE TEAMS PLACE IN CONTESTS

The Gray County rifle teams traveled to Amarillo on April 9 to participate in the Texas State Rifle Association Galley Match. At this competition both the junior and senior teams placed third. Some individual awards were also received as Matt Hinton placed second in the senior level and Whitney White placed fourth in the junior level.

A week later, on April 16, the Gray County teams returned to Amarillo to take part in the National Rifle Association Junior Sectional. At this match, both teams placed second with Hinton placing second high individual in the senior division.

Members of the senior team are: Monty O'Neal, Derreck Woodard, Shaun Hon, Charlie Land and Hinton.

FOR STATE CONTEST

The Senior Livestock Judging Team earned a trip to Texas A&M this summer to compete in the State Livestock Judging Contest. They earned this trip by placing second in the district contest which was held in Canyon April 21. The top two teams at the district contest are eligible to participate at the state level.

Members of the senior team are Mindy Romines, Mistie Greer and Cody Rice. The Gray County team placed first in the Sheep and Swine divisions, but failed to place in the steer division which cost them first place in the contest. Members of the team also took home some individual awards.

Greer was high scoring individual in the Sheep Division and Rice had the second highest score in the Swine Division. Greer had the highest individual score of the contest with Rice following with the fourth highest individual score.

A junior team consisting of Leslie Leggett, Bobbie Pairsh, Eric Cochran and Mark Norton also participated in this contest, but they didn't fair so well. However, Leggett had the highest score in the Lamb Division and the second highest score in the overall contest in the Junior Division.

If you see any of the 4-H'ers on the senior team, wish them luck at A&M in June and don't forget members on the junior team need a pat on the back too.

HORSE JUDGING COMPETES IN DISTRICT CONTEST

The Gray County 4-H Horse Judging Teams traveled to Canyon April 21 for their district contest. Coached by Jim Reeves, they have spent many hours in preparation for this contest. Both teams had some tough luck as the senior team placed sixth and the junior team placed fifth.

Members of the senior team were Curt Duncan, LaGayla Larkin and Laura Horne. Members of the junior team were Tammy Greene, Marj Ekleberry, Cydney Morriss and Eva Jo Isbell. Some of these 4-H'ers did receive individual awards though. Ekleberry placed second in the performance classes and also had the fourth highest total score of the contest. Morriss had the fourth highest score in the halter classes.

If you see any of these 4-H'ers, pat them on the back and maybe they will get after 'em next year.

Cowboy Visitors

Mike Hegman (left) and Robert Newhouse of the Dallas Cowboys visit with S.W. Dougherty in his Pampa home following the Cowboy Hoopsters basketball game earlier this month.

Cowboys visit M.S. victim

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

A smile as wide as a Texan's 10-gallon stetson crossed S.W. Dougherty's face when Robert Newhouse and Mike Hegman of the Dallas Cowboys ambled into his living quarters at 2105 Lea.

Dougherty, who is bedridden with multiple sclerosis, will never forget the 40 minutes the two Cowboys' stars spent with him.

"It was really a thrill," Dougherty said. "I've been a Cowboys' fan ever since I can remember, but this was the first time I've ever met any of the players."

Newhouse, a fullback, and Hegman, a linebacker, were in Pampa April 22 for the Cowboy Hoopsters basketball game with the police department.

When told about Dougherty's condition and his loyalty to the Cowboys, Newhouse and Hegman were more than happy to visit him following the game. The meeting was set up by Dougherty's niece, Kay Hagar, who is an officer with the Multiple Sclerosis Society in Canyon.

"They (Newhouse and Hegman) were just like common people," Dougherty said. "They talked and joked with me."

Newhouse left behind the jersey he wore at the basketball game and both autographed a Cowboys' helmet that Dougherty's brother had sent him. Coming soon to the Dougherty home will be a football jersey autographed by all the Cowboys' first-teamers.

"I think the Cowboys are going to make it to the Super Bowl this year," Dougherty said. "They've just missed by one game the last three years and the players promised me they wouldn't let me down at the end again this time."

To show his appreciation for the visit, Dougherty made a donation to the Cowboys' scholarship fund in his name to benefit needy Dallas area high school students.

Have glove, will travel
Is Paul Molitor ready to settle down?

ANAHEIM, Calif. (NEA) — As a major-league ballplayer, Harvey Kuenn, the manager of the Milwaukee Brewers, played six different positions in a 14-year career — everywhere but pitcher, catcher and second base.

It didn't seem to matter where Kuenn played, he always hit the ball, leading the American League once in batting. He finished with a career average of .303.

"Never did I let where they put me in the field affect what happened when I went up to the plate," says Kuenn. "They're two different phases of baseball."

Ostensibly, Paul Molitor, who is one of Harvey's minions, should feel the same way.

In five seasons with the Brewers, Molitor has toiled at five different positions. He hit over .300 in three of those years. As a leadoff man in 1982, he hit 19 homers, batted in 71 runs, stole 41 bases, whacked 201 hits, averaged .302, and scored more runs (136) than any player in the American League since Ted Williams.

But Molitor, who now occupies third base for the defending American League champions, doesn't mind telling you that it has bothered him to shift from position to position.

There is a lot of similarity between Molitor and Kuenn.

Both came out of college as highly touted, big-bonus prospects — Harvey from the University of Wisconsin, Paul as the number one choice in the 1977 free-agent draft from the University of Minnesota. Both reached the majors quickly — Harvey after 63 games with Davenport, Paul after 64 games with Burlington. Both became regulars immediately. Both were shortstops. Neither wound up playing that position.

And that's where they diverge, philosophically.

Molitor started 1978, his rookie year, at shortstop only because Robin Yount, the Milwaukee incumbent since 1974, was injured. When Yount returned to the lineup later that spring, Molitor was moved to second base, a strange position to him, and made the transition without a hitch.

In fact, Molitor was voted the starting second baseman in the 1980 All-Star Game, which he missed because of a rib injury.

By 1981, Molitor was in center field. The Brewers wanted his speed out there and felt they could move veteran Gorman Thomas to right field. They also had Jim Gantner ready to step in as a regular at second.

That May, Paul stumbled over first base running out an infield hit and tore ligaments in his ankle which required surgery. When he was ready to play again in September, Thomas was solidly in center again. Molitor, still stepping gingerly, was put in right field, still another position.

In the spring of 1982, the Brewers had a void at third base. Sal Bando had retired. Don Money, no kid, was having problems. Roy Howell, used mainly as a designated hitter, didn't seem to be the answer. Back to the infield went Molitor.

Did it bother him? Was his concentration affected? "I don't know if you actually feel it," Molitor shrugs, "but it's something that's undermining."

Sure. He fielded the new spot slickly, and hit more home runs, batted in more runs, stole more bases and played more games (160) than he had in any previous season. In the World Series, he collected five hits in the opening game, a record, and batted .355 for the seven-game set.

So, is third base a good position for him? "I wasn't sure at first," he answers. "It'll be two or three years before I find out if I'm going to be an average third baseman or a great third baseman — that much time to decide how good I can become there. On this club, it's where I belong right now."

"If I had my druthers, I would have been a major-league shortstop. My college experience and all my minor-league seasoning was there. That's where I feel I could probably have been at my best. But there's a guy in front of me."

A guy named Robin Yount, merely the Most Valuable Player in the league.

Says Molitor: "I feel Robin's going to stay in Milwaukee, and I had to find another position if I'm going to stay. This past winter, I signed a five-year contract. I decided Milwaukee is where I want to be, and they want me to stay."

For their money, the Brewers are getting a versatile player with the type of ability that could win an MVP award some day. Articulate, with Gallic good looks, Molitor also does some promotional work for the club between seasons.

Molitor has no obvious flaws. Although not big, at 6 feet and 175 pounds, he hits with power because of fine bat speed. At 26, he hasn't even peaked.

Lendl, McEnroe advance to WCT tennis finals

DALLAS (AP) — Defending champion Ivan Lendl and No. 2 seed John McEnroe advanced into the finals of the $300,000 WCT Finals tennis tournament here after semifinal wins Saturday.

Lendl, top-seeded, beat No. 5 seed Bill Scanlon 6-1, 6-7 (2-7), 6-3, 6-3 and McEnroe defeated No. 6 seed Vitas Gerulaitis 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. The two will meet Sunday at Reunion Arena for the $150,000 first prize of the WCT Finals, the last tournament on the WCT circuit.

Last year, Lendl beat McEnroe in four sets for the title.

Lendl broke Scanlon's serve twice in the first set for a 6-1 win. Scanlon, 26, came back in the second set to force a tie breaker. He took a 5-0 lead, then fired a serve that Lendl returned into the net to give Scanlon the set.

Scanlon pressured Lendl early in the third set with accurate approach shots, tying it at 2-2. Lendl fought off two break points to win the next game, then took another service break to lead 4-2. Scanlon escaped one set point before Lendl served an ace down the center line to win the set.

Lendl broke Scanlon's serve to open the fourth set, then scored two of his 16 aces to go up 3-1. With a 5-3 lead, he hit a diving service return winner for the match.

McEnroe, who now has reached the finals of each of the five WCT Finals he has entered, will be looking for his third win. He won the tournament in 1970 against Bjorn Borg and in 1981 over Johan Kriek.

The 28-year-old Gerulaitis, who reached the semifinals with wins over Jose-Luis Clerc and Guillermo Vilas, both of Argentina, fell behind in the first set 3-1. McEnroe lost only one point on his next two service games for a 5-2 edge.

Gerulaitis survived three set points to take the next game but McEnroe used an overhead slam at the net to win the next game in the set.

The second set was a display of McEnroe's dominance as the 24-year-old left-hander gave up only six points in taking a 4-0 lead. Gerulaitis, who during one stretch lost 10 straight points on his own serve, picked up two games before McEnroe took the set.

McEnroe, who has won five tournaments in the past year, finished the match with an easy 6-2 final set to shoot up his lifetime record over Gerulaitis to 7-4.

McEnroe has lost only two of the 14 matches he has played in the finals of WCT tournaments, one to Jimmy Connors in 1980 and the other to Lendl in 1982.

Gerulaitis won the tournament in 1978.

Reds edge Expos

MONTREAL (AP) — Johnny Bench homered then singled in the go-ahead run as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Montreal Expos 4-3 Saturday.

The Reds trailed 3-2 entering the sixth but took advantage of the erratic throwing of Montreal catcher Tim Lincecum, replacing Gary Carter, who has missed the last three games with a strained elbow.

Eddie Milner drew a walk against Expos starter Charlie Lea, 2-1, stole second and took third when Cesar Cedeno singled. Cedeno stole second and Blackwell's throw sailed into center field, allowing Milner to score and Cedeno to advance to third.

Bench, who homered in the second, followed with a single, giving the Reds a 4-3 lead.

Padres win
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sixto Lezcano drove in three runs and Steve Garvey hammered four hits and knocked in two runs as the San Diego Padres defeated Pittsburgh 8-4 in the first game of a doubleheader Saturday.

Andy Hawkins, 1-1, scattered 10 hits, struck out four and walked none. John Candalaria, 3-2, was the loser.

Statebound Golfer

Mona Jennings, Wheeler, will be teeing off in the Class 1A state high school golf tourney Thursday and Friday in Austin. Miss Jennings, a Wheeler High senior, will be making her second consecutive state tournament appearance. She placed third in the state meet last year. She won the Region 1-1A medalist title last week in Levelland.

Wheeler golfer bids for state tournament medal

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

A state tournament championship medal would be a nice keepsake for Wheeler's Mona Jennings. It would be a great way to remember an outstanding high school golf career.

Miss Jennings shoots for that medal when the Class 1A state tournament opens Thursday in Austin for a two-day stand.

"I've been hitting the ball better than I ever have this year," she said. "My mental game has also been better than it has been in the past."

Miss Jennings won eight tournament titles this year enroute to the Regional 1-1A medalist crown with a 36-hole total of 167 last week in Levelland. She beat defending regional medalist Cathy Caddell of Sundown by eight strokes.

Despite her string of victories, Miss Jennings admits her putting game still needs improving.

"My putting has just been average," Miss Jennings said. "It's something I need to improve."

Miss Jennings has been improving steadily since she started playing golf nine years ago. She placed third in the state meet last year after a runnerup finish in the regionals. She placed third as a freshman in the regional tournament and then fourth as a sophomore in a higher classification.

Miss Jennings was also a starter on the Lady Mustangs' basketball team and was an all-district selection this year.

Athletic ability runs in the family. Her uncle is Richard Ellis, who has won the Top Of Texas Golf Tournament in Pampa five times.

Miss Jennings has been Wheeler High's lone representative on the golf course. The school does not have a high school golf program.

Miss Jennings' career won't end at the high school level. She hopes to play college golf.

"Right now, I'm looking at Texas Tech, North Texas State or Texas A & M," she added.

If she comes away with that state medal, those colleges and others will be looking for her.

Elia blasts Cub fans after loss to Dodgers

CHICAGO — Manager Lee Elia's tirade against the fans and media that have been riding his 5-14 ballclub — the worst record in the major leagues — almost cost him his job, says his boss, General Manager Dallas Green.

But even though he had to apologize for the outburst, Elia makes no apologies for his team's effort.

"Rip 'em, rip those country suckers (fans) like they rip my players," Elia fumed in front of reporters after Friday's tough 4-3 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Eighty-five percent of the people in this country work and the other 15 percent come out here and boo my players," continued Elia, in his second season as a major league manager since moving with Green from the Philadelphia Phillies organization. "It's a playground for them."

But two hours after the outburst, sprinkled liberally with profanities, Elia turned around and apologized.

Cub General Manager Dallas Green called a news conference in his office after hearing a tape of his field manager's tirade and a subdued Elia said, "I get frustrated because a lot of positive things have transpired around here in the last year and a half, and that doesn't show on the record."

"There's no way to condone my actions. I lost it," he continued. "Yes, this is an apology."

Green said that after hearing the tape that Elia's job "was in jeopardy. I'll guarantee that. He called me before he got in the shower and he didn't know what he had said. We played the tape back so he understood at the time how bad it really was. It was not handled professionally and Lee has told you his feelings about that."

"There is no way to blame the media or the fans for a lack of performance," concluded Green, "but it will change."

What won't change immediately is the Cubs' dismal record, which was the focal point of a television commentary Thursday that set Elia off in the first place.

Unfortunately, Elia wasn't the only frustrated man wearing a Cub uniform Friday. Outfielder Keith Moreland, the target of some fans' obscenities himself, tried to go after the group on his way to the clubhouse.

"I saw it," said Green, who indicated the fans had been drinking. "Three guys with a pitcher full of stuff. Keith tried to go over the dugout, which he couldn't do."

THE NEW TESTAMENT PATTERN

"And look that thou make them after their pattern, which was shewed thee in the mount" (Exodus 25:40). Moses was warned to make the vessels of the old tabernacle, and the tabernacle itself, according to the pattern which God gave him. The Hebrew writer emphasizes that point in Hebrews 8:4, 5. Jesus Christ is the minister of the true Tabernacle, the church (Hebrews 8:1-3). Even as Moses built the tabernacle in the wilderness according to the pattern of God, Christ built His church according to the Divine pattern (Matthew 16:18).

The church of the Lord is made up of sanctified or saved people (Acts 2:47; 20:28-32). You cannot be a part of the true tabernacle, the church, without being saved. The worship of the church; singing, praying, communion, giving, teaching (Acts 2:42; Ephesians 5:19; Colossians 3:16; Acts 20:7; I Corinthians 11:17-34; I Corinthians 16:1-3, likewise must conform to God's pattern with Jesus Christ as the exclusive Head and authority for the church (Ephesians 1:22, 23; Matthew 28:18). The organization of the church, elders, deacons and saints (Philippians 1:1; I Peter 5:1-3; Acts 20:28; 14:23) is clearly given and so are its functions (I Corinthians 14:25; I Thessalonians 1:8; I Corinthians 16:1-3; I Timothy 5:16b).

To depart from God's pattern is to invite His wrath in the day of Judgment (2 Thessalonians 1:9; 2 John 9). We must be sure that we are a part of the right church and that its every part and work conforms to the New Testament pattern.

Wadkins regains lead in Nelson Classic

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Lanny Wadkins capped a closing burst with a 15-foot par-saving putt on the final hole and regained the lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Byron Nelson Classic.

"The best putt I hit all day," said Wadkins, who birdied three of the last six holes. "It's a nice way to finish the day."

Wadkins, gunning for his second victory in a row and third in five weeks, took over the top spot with a wind-blown round of 3-under-par 68 and a 54-hole total of 204.

That's nine shots under par on the new Las Colinas Sports Center course, 7,002 yards of rolling hills in the Dallas suburbs, and one in front of Tom Purtzer and Hal Sutton. Sutton, rookie of the year last season and winner of the Tournament Players Championship a couple of months ago, closed with a 67 that matched the best round of the day. He was tied at 205 with Purtzer, who had to one-putt the difficult 18th for a par that gave him a 70.

Brad Bryant, with a 69, was next at 206.

Ben Crenshaw, who holed a hooking, uphill, into-the-wind 2-iron shot from the rough for an eagle-2 on the 16th, Ed Flori and Mike Donald were another shot back at 207. Crenshaw's eagle helped him to a 67.

Flori matched par 71 under the overcast skies. Donald, who shared the 36-hole lead with Purtzer, slipped to a 72.

Dan Pohl, Bruce Lietzke, Mark Hayes and PGA champion Ray Floyd were at 208, leaving 12 men within four strokes of the top going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

Lietzke had a 69, Floyd a 70, Hayes 71 and Pohl 66.

Tom Watson, a four-time winner of this event when it was played at Preston Trail, its home for 15 years until it moved to this new site this year, shot a 69 and was at 211. Jack Nicklaus had 70-213.

Wadkins, who won the Greensboro Open five weeks ago then took over the season's money-winning lead with his triumph in the prestigious Tournament of Champions last Sunday, was a single stroke off the pace when the day's play started. But, with his putter again turning balky, he could do no better than a par 36 on the front side and fell two shots back at the turn.

Over the front nine he missed a 30-inch birdie putt and failed on four others from 8-12 feet.

But his patient, steady play began to pay off over the back nine. He got a 9-iron shot to within three feet of the flag on the 13th and made birdie. He flipped a little sand wedge shot to about the same distance and birdied the 15th to gain a share of the lead.

On the par-3 17th, playing into the prevailing winds, Wadkins lashed a 3-iron to within 12 feet of the flag and made that putt for sole control of the top spot.

He had to work hard to preserve it, however, on the 18th. His drive caught the left fairway bunker. It was short and right of the green in two, played a difficult little pitch to about 15 feet and made the putt that left him in command.

Lead deadlocked in Legends golf tournament

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Australian Peter Thomson copped a four-footer for birdie on the last hole and Miller Barber missed a short one on the same green Saturday to knot their teams into a tie after 54 holes of the $485,000 best-ball Legends of Golf Tournament at 14-under par.

Thomson and partner Kel Nagle shot a 4-under par 66 while Barber and teammate Julius Boros shot a 5-under par 65 for identical 196 totals over Par 70 Onion Creek Golf Club.

The team of Roberto De Vicenzo and Rod Funseth could manage only a bogey on the 90-yard Par 5 No. 18 and fell into a tie with four other duos just a shot back in the scramble for the $100,000 first place prize.

De Vicenzo-Funseth shot a 3-under par 67 and were locked with the teams of Billy Casper-Gay Brewer, Gardner Dickinson-Dan Sikes, Charles Sifford and Billy Collins, and Jack Burke and Paul Harney at 197.

Casper and Brewer posted a 67 over Onion Creek Club, Dickinson and Sikes had a 65, Sifford and Collins shot 64, and Burke and Harney had

The 64s were the best rounds of the day over the 6,584-yard course which was still damp from several days of drizzle.

"I hit just a terrible putt on the last hole," said Barber, known as "Mr. X" on the tour for his quiet mannerisms. "It's going to be a great race tomorrow. Maybe we'll shoot 62."

Barber had four of his teams birdies but pushed his downhill, breaking putt on the 18th green.

Nagle said "the pin placements were really mean out there. Peter has a great third shot into the last green and hit his putt into the middle of the hole."

The winners will each earn $50,000.

76ers take 3-0 lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Franklin Edwards hit a 14-foot bank shot with two seconds left to give the Philadelphia 76ers a 107-105 victory over the New York Knicks on Saturday and a 3-0 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

Philadelphia needs one more victory to advance to the Eastern Conference final against the winner of the Boston-Milwaukee series in which the Bucks lead 2-0. Game 4 of the best-of-seven 76ers-Knicks series will be here Sunday.

Edwards shared the hero's mantle with Moses Malone and Maurice Cheeks, who scored 28 and 24 points respectively, and combined for Philadelphia's last 16 points before Edwards' game-winner.

New York trailed 99-89 with 3:38 to go but rallied behind six points by Bernard King, who led the Knicks with 21 points. They tied it at 105-105 on two foul shots by Ernie Grunfeld with 19 seconds left.

Cagers inducted

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Bill Bradley and Dave DeBusschere, teammates on the world champion New York Knicks teams of the early 1970s, are paired again as they enter the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Also joining 138 other players, coaches and contributors to the game at induction Monday will be University of North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, former Cincinnati Royals star Jack Twyman and two pioneers of the modern game who are now dead, referee Lloyd Leith and former Amateur Athletic Union President Lou Wilke.

Bradley, now a U.S. senator from New Jersey, said he was "particularly happy" to be elected the same year as DeBusschere, now general manager of the Knicks.

"In a way, we helped each other get here," Bradley said, pointing to the "complete dedication to teamwork" that marked the Knicks teams that won the 1970 and 1973 NBA championships.

With the installation of Bradley and DeBusschere, four members of those teams will be in the Hall of Fame. Bradley will be presented by Jerry Lucas, who was installed two years ago, and DeBusschere by Willis Reed, who was inducted last year.

Cowboys draft for defensive help

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The annual Dallas Cowboys' draft often recalls the heady optimism of baseball spring training.

Big league managers can usually see a pennant through their sunglasses in Florida before heavy realism looms in August.

The Cowboys also are always pleased with themselves on draft day in April, or February, sometimes without reason.

They steal away a free agent sensation like Everson Walls. But the books also balance out with major disappointments, like No. 1 pick Rod Hill in 1982 or Larry Bethea in 1978.

It wasn't much of a shock on National Football League draft day Tuesday when Dallas executive personnel director Gil Brandt called first and second round picks, Jim Jeffcoat and Mike Walter, "surefire, can't miss" prospects.

Brandt always perks with optimism about the talent his sleuths have unearthed.

He was delighted to have landed a defensive end like Jeffcoat of Arizona State and a linebacker like Walter, areas where the Cowboys are most needy.

Dallas has lost three consecutive National Conference title games. The reason: defense.

The question before the house is: Can these two players give the Cowboys IMMEDIATE help? Can these guys be counted on to keep Dallas from making it four losses in a row in the NFC title games this winter?

Brandt obviously thinks so. Other brows are less feverish.

He predicted Walter would be starting in the Cowboys' opener Sept. 5 against the defending World Champion Washington Redskins.

"He'll be a starter (at strongside linebacker), that's my feeling," Brandt said. "In my mind he is no gamble."

This word was relayed to Coach Tom Landry, who never wears sunglasses.

"I'd be surprised if Walter was starting," Landry said with a grin. "I have to worry about getting him (Walter) ready. Gil doesn't."

Was Landry trying to tell his team something by drafting defensive players like Jeffcoat, Walter, and the other Arizona State end, Bryan Caldwell, in the first three rounds?

"I don't send signals," Landry replied.

Landry doesn't have to. The message is loud and clear to his defensive linemen and linebackers: Competition is coming.

"We'll have eight defensive linemen competing and only six positions to fill," Landry said.

Then he said with relish: "It will be a very competitive situation."

The Dallas pass rush was not up to par in 1982 and the linebacking was also not of championship caliber.

Oilers refuel supply of draft choices

By MICHAELA LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — When the Houston Oilers were in their glory dueling for division titles, former Coach Bum Phillips noted that the road to the Super Bowl passed through Pittsburgh.

Present Coach Eddie Biles checked his road map and hopes he's found another way — through the draft.

Biles, General Manager Ladd Herzog and Vice President for Personnel Mike Holovak set out in the National Football League draft to improve the team's image and to establish their own route back to the playoffs.

The Oilers have spent the past two seasons refueling their supply of draft choices after Phillips traded them away for instant starters.

The Oilers had 14 selections in Tuesday's draft and used them to send out strong messages to several players, primarily in the offensive line and defensive secondary.

Embarrassed by the arrests of three-fourths of their starting defensive secondary during the off-season, the Oilers concentrated heaviest in that area, choosing five defensive backs.

The message here was intended for cornerbacks J.C. Wilson and Greg Sternrick and safety Vernon Perry, all arrested in the off-season on drug and alcohol charges.

Wilson was convicted of drunken driving and Sternrick pleaded no contest to possession of cocaine. Perry is charged in Jackson, Miss., with cocaine possession, resisting arrest and violating state liquor laws.

Free safety Mike Reinfeldt is the only member of the starting secondary to escape charges.

"I read the papers like everyone else and we didn't play well either," Biles said.

Biles won't say if Sternrick, Perry and Wilson will be invited to training camp in July.

"We have to sit down and evaluate all our options," Biles said. "We're keeping all options open."

Wilson received a two-year probation sentence. Sternrick is scheduled to be sentenced

June 6 and could face up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The Oilers likely would have sought secondary help even without their off-the-field problems. The Oilers dipped to 28th place in total defense last season and ranked 25th in pass defense.

Houston's first two selections, Southern California's Bruce Matthews and California's Harvey Salem, were addressed to Earl Campbell, whose yardage production dropped to a career low last season behind an ineffective offensive line.

The Oilers struck gold last year when rookie Mike Munchak became an instant starter. The Oilers are hoping Salem and Matthews also will offer immediate help.

Matthews and Salem represent what the Oilers sought most in the draft — intelligent players from major universities who won't be dazzled by the step up to the pro level.

Based on the past two Oiler drafts, the current rookie crop should be encouraged about making the team. In 1981, Biles' first year, the Oilers had only 10 picks but six made the team that year and four are still on the roster.

Houston made 11 selections last season and eight rookies made the squad.

The message is clear.

Martin is suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Manager Billy Martin of the New York Yankees was given a three-game suspension Saturday for kicking dirt at umpire Drew Coble during a game with the Texas Rangers.

The suspension will not take effect immediately because Martin has protested the action and asked for a hearing, said Bob Fishel, assistant to American League President Lee MacPhail.

He said the hearing would be held at AL offices in New York the week of May 8, after the Yankees return to New York.

Martin lost two arguments with two umpires during the first two innings of the Yankees' 8-3 loss to the Rangers on Friday night.

Last week, MacPhail fined Martin $5,000 for outbursts in the first two weeks of the season.

Rangers pound Yankees

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Most fans had filed out of the stadium, most players were in the clubhouse and the lights were dimming, but Dave Hostetler was still signing autographs for a group of kids.

Hostetler was a hero again.

The Texas slugger, who had been benched for three games after striking out 20 of the 43 times he had been at bat, logged New York starter Shane Rawley for two singles driving in three runs as the Rangers dropped the Yankees 8-3 Friday night.

"How much will this help him?" Texas manager Doug Rader asked rhetorically after the game. "Oh my God. Both of them (Hostetler's singles) came with two outs. Just tremendous."

Hostetler paced the run-starved Rangers in a 10-hit attack that included a Bobby Johnson towering three-run homerun and three Buddy Bell hits.

"I felt better tonight. BP (batting practice) really paid off. It felt good to contribute," Hostetler said.

"It's nice to know the coaching staff believes in me. Doug never said anything negative about me."

Rick Honeycutt, 3-1, pitched seven innings and allowed only one run to pick up the win. Honeycutt, who started the game with an earned run average of 0.59, raised his ERA to 0.72 — still good enough to lead the major leagues.

"I'm adjusting a lot better during games. I'm changing speeds and using different pitches. The numbers are nice, but the win is more important than the ERA," Honeycutt said.

Last season, the left-handed pitcher was 5-17 with an ERA of 5.27.

Honeycutt left before the start of the eighth inning because a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand filled with blood after it had been drained once in the fifth inning.

"I had it down in spring training and I never could toughen it up and get rid of it," Honeycutt said. "I hope it's not serious."

Willie Randolph, who had injured his knee in an earlier game, left in the fifth inning.

Billy Martin, who lost arguments with two different umpires in each of the first two innings, was ejected in the third.

Martin yelled at plate umpire Drew Coble from the dugout and returned to the field with his cap on backward. After a few words, he was ejected.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —

Phillies right-hander John Denny gave the credit to Gus Hoefling, the team's strength and flexibility instructor, for his masterful two-hit shutout of the Houston Astros Saturday.

Denny faced only 28 batters, retiring the last 16, and struck out five in the Phillies' 8-0 victory that snapped a four-game Houston winning streak.

Acquired from the Cleveland Indians late last season, he has been working diligently under the eye of Hoefling, who also has helped Phillies ace Steve Carlton stay in shape over the years.

"I've been feeling very strong lately, and I give all the credit to Gus," said Denny, who won his third straight complete game after one loss.

"I know I'm seven years behind Lefty (Carlton) since I've only been under Gus for one and a half months, but I've really been working hard," Denny said.

Denny allowed a single to Tony Scott in the first inning, a walk to Jose Cruz in the second and a single to Dickie Thon in the fourth.

Cruz was erased in a double play and Thon was caught stealing, so Denny faced only 28 batters in getting his first shutout since September 1981.

"I felt very comfortable with every one of my pitches," said Denny. "And my change was working well. The change sets up a lot of the other stuff."

Phillies Manager Pat Corrales was very pleased with Denny, who didn't allow a runner to reach second base.

China bars U.S. TV crew from rehearsal Up Close.....

PEKING (AP) — China barred an ABC-TV crew from filming a rehearsal of Arthur Miller's "Death of A Salesman" today to protest the network's coverage of a Chinese tennis star's defection to the United States.

"ABC is denied permission to film because its reporting of the Hu Na case was not serious and truthful," People's Art Theater spokesman Zhou Rei Xiang told the Associated Press.

Miller is in China to direct the Pulitzer Prize-winning play.

On April 5 the Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman publicly protested ABC's coverage of the case of tennis player Hu Na, who was granted political asylum in the United States on April 4 over China's strenuous objections.

China complained that ABC had urgently requested an interview and promised to air the comments of Foreign Ministry spokesman Qi Huaiyuan on Miss Hu. The statement was to be shown March 28 on the "Nightline" news program but it never was aired.

That segment was devoted to Hu Na. ABC later aired the comments of the Chinese consul in San Francisco, who said Miss Hu would not be persecuted if she returns to China.

"I was old enough to know better, so I deserved the spanking," Stan admitted.

Shenanigans seem to run in Stan's family. Stan remembers when he was high school age, a cousin, Harold Baer, and some of his friends pulled a goodie in the City of Pampa.

At that time Cuyler was one lot longer than two blocks. It went from Atchison, by the White Deer Land Museum, to just north of where Hub's clothing store is, now. At that time Walberg's farm implement store was on that corner and across Cuyler was a blacksmith's shop.

One Halloween Baer and his buddies worked all night pushing the farm machinery out into Cuyler street. The industrious boys even dismantled buggies and hauled them by ropes onto the roofs of the buildings lining Cuyler. The town constable watched, laughing.

The next morning when the pranksters reported to their classrooms, they were sent to the principal's office. He told them they could return to their classes after they had returned all of the machinery and buggies to their rightful places on the implement lot.

"I wasn't involved in that one," Stan grinned.

"In those days the grade school and high school were all in the same building. It stood where the drive-in bank is now." Because he was a big boy, he played football on the high school team.

The football practice field was on the lot where the Gray County Court House stands today.

He finished school in Kansas, and while there, Stan learned the basics of blacksmithing, which he has put to use many times.

One of the crops raised on the Kretzmeir farm was cotton. "My dad hired pickers to pick the cotton. They would load the 1922 Model T truck with loose cotton in the evening. The next morning Stan would drive the truck to the cotton gin, leave it there and go on to school. After school, he went back to the gin and picked up the truck on which was a bale of cotton instead of the loose cotton he had delivered.

Because of health problems, Stan's father had to give up farming in Texas. He left his two sons, Stan and Roy, then 20 and 18, in charge of the family farm. They did all their own financing and paying off of the bills.

"We were pretty young for that responsibility, but Dad had trained us well." The boys weren't left entirely on their own. Stan's uncle Chris and his family were still running their farm.

Stan's aunt planned a party to celebrate his 22nd birthday. Among the guests were members of the Wehling family.

Theresa Wehling had come to Pampa to visit her brother, and another phase of Stan's life was about to begin.

It was love at first sight.

"I said he's mine if I never have him." Theresa grinned across the room at her husband of more than 50 years. Asked if she were afraid of not being accepted, she said, "If they don't like me the way I was and the way I am, they can go blow."

Stan said because he was mechanically inclined, his father had given him the responsibility of keeping the farm equipment in running order. This experience paid off through the years.

Farming hasn't always been a steady source of income, and Stan had to supplement his finances with outside jobs.

He sold pre-need cemetery plots for a while. "I'd go through my canned sales talk, during which the wife and husband would say little. At the end the husband would say, 'I don't care what they do with me after I'm gone; they can just throw me over the fence.' 'Ok, I would say, but is that what you want to happen to your wife?' — I made the sale."

Stan believes in himself. "If you can sell yourself, you can sell anything," he said. Reflecting on his three daughters and son, Stan said, "You know when I was in my teens, I didn't give kids much thought, but now... well, I see one of the rewards of growing older. Those children and their children and now our great grandchildren - they make it all worthwhile."

Stan and Theresa have struggled and grown together and they proudly show the pictures and tell of each child's accomplishments. They are enjoying the fruits of their toil.

Mystery broadcast seeks to deter May Day protests by Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A mysterious radio announcer claiming to speak for Solidarity has urged Poles to stay home on May Day and ignore a call by the outlawed labor federation for anti-government demonstrations.

It was impossible for reporters to determine whether the three-minute broadcast was from Solidarity or a government ruse.

The Communist government has launched a campaign in the official news media to defuse the anti-government demonstrations planned for Sunday, and has detained members of Solidarity in recent weeks.

Lech Walesa's bodyguard, secretary and her husband were summoned for questioning Friday. The labor leader's spokesman, Piotr Konopka, called the interrogations "harrassment" by the government.

There was no apparent effort to jam Friday's transmission, unlike previous Solidarity broadcasts, and it contradicted what was believed to be an authentic broadcast heard Thursday night.

In Thursday's broadcast, fugitive Solidarity leader

Zbigniew Bujak repeated the call for May Day demonstrations, but the transmission faded after several seconds.

On Friday, Western reporters were given copies of Bujak's remarks. He called for anti-government protests Sunday and pledged that the underground organization would continue to fight for trade unions free of government control.

Mark Giles, 13, and his brother, Scott Anderson, 14, of Amarillo look at the Brand Wall in the Roberts County Museum. They were just passing through with their dad, Cliff Anderson, also of Amarillo, and decided to stop and see what was inside the old depot.

Standing in the "door" of the parlor, I was overcome with bitter-sweet memories. There was the same leather and wood sofa and a piano I remembered. A tiny room not more than 10 X 8 feet, a worn carpet that was once an elegant Persian rug, heavy drapes against the strong Northern Illinois winds hung at the windows, and that musty-sweet smell of a room used only for intimate visits with close friends.

I was stirred from my reverie by the soft voice of Jane Bright, the museum curator, saying, "I feel the spirit of the people who lived with this furniture whenever I stand here."

Bright is the curator of Roberts County Museum, located on Highway 60 in Miami.

In 1978 the people of Miami saw an opportunity to have a museum for Roberts County and went with it.

The Santa Fe Railroad had decided to sell the old railroad station, said Cecil Gill, director of the Roberts County Museum.

Some citizens of Miami and Roberts County thought the old depot would make the perfect start for their museum, so they approached county officials with the idea and after a couple of town meetings, the officials agreed to buy the station.

After the depot was bought, things just seemed to fall together for the small community.

Mayme Graham, owner of the lot where the original blacksmith shop had stood, gave the ground to the county for the museum. And the old depot, built in 1888, was moved to the lot in March 1979.

Miami citizens donated their time and money to renovate the old depot — the first building of the Roberts County Museum.

Donations of clothing and household goods just seemed to flood in. Soon the museum directors decided to expand the original depot building. Cement blocks were donated by C. W. Ferguson for the addition and an adjoining lot was purchased. The addition is called the "Furg and Ester Room," in honor of Ferguson and his wife.

Mayme Graham was a member of the historical committee. After her death, Graham's sister donated her books to the museum. Memorials in Graham's name bought furniture for the Mayme Graham Memorial Research Library, a room in the museum. This library, open for public use, contains Graham's books on the history of Roberts and surrounding counties.

Visitors wandering through the museum can "feel the spirit" of the people who lived with the furniture and clothing. Bright said, a softness coming to her voice, as she stood near the reproduction of an old time kitchen. The room's ice box was made by a member of Bright's own family. She said standing in that "room" made her feel close to the people who had used the icebox and other furnishings.

Nona Shelton Payne donated the money for a ranch building in memory of her husband David D. Payne, who died in May 1969. She had come to his Robert's County ranch as a bride in 1940.

Payne, born in November 1871, rode his horse to the Texas Panhandle when he was 19. In 1908 he bought land in the Canadian River area of Roberts county.

He also filed on and fenced in the Bar C State School land. "By hard work, thrift, discipline and courage, he built from his first two sections a ranch of 25 sections," says the plaque dedicating the building to him and his wife.

The replica of a ranch building now houses an old blacksmith shop, tinker's shop, shoe maker's shop, a chuck wagon and buggy.

The blacksmith shop in the "old ranch building" was donated to the museum by Stanley Kretzmeir.

The blacksmith's tools were originally owned by Mr. Donkin who came to Pampa in 1912 from Oklahoma. Kretzmeir said Donkin had most of the blacksmith tools in Oklahoma when it was still Indian Territory. The majority of the tools were made in the 1860s. Donkin gave the tools to Kretzmeir in 1930. Kretzmeir added, "I'm not a blacksmith. I just like to play around with it."

When Kretzmeir heard about the museum in Miami, he decided to donate the tools and put together a blacksmith's shop for the museum.

A nursing dress, donated by Fran (Mrs. Don) Morrison of Pampa is displayed in the museum lobby. The dress was probably used by her mother around the turn of the century. One of the wedding dresses in the museum was worn by Lizzie Fre Young (Morrison's grandmother) on her wedding day in the late 1870s, Morrison said. Lizzie was born in a half dug-out and her mother covered the dirt floor with gunny sacks to keep the children as clean as possible, Morrison said.

Bright said the day she was dressing the mannequins, she had this lovely, what appeared to be, street dress. She thought how pretty the back of it was. After it was dressed, Gill came by where she was working and she commented on it. He agreed it was a pretty dress.

But, Gill explained, "You have the dress on backwards." The "street dress" was a nursing dress. Ladies wore many more layers of clothing in those days than we do today. A nursing mother probably wore a light, knit sleeveless undershirt with two extra, appropriately-placed holes in the front. Over that she may have worn a camisole which buttoned up the front. The front of the dress had two layers. The under-layer buttoned shut and the outer layer came together in the center front with a series of inverted pleats.

"Nursing mothers surely had it more convenient in those days," Bright said, smiling.

Maybe, but ironing was sure a pain. Some old irons are for "sale" in the old-time store. One of them weighs about 10 or 15 pounds, is hollow in the center and had an iron handle. Bright said the person using the iron would put hot coals into it to keep it hot.

In those days when a mother said "hot" to her child, she meant HOT! And to think she didn't have refrigerated air conditioning.

Whenever she looks at the old irons, Bright said she thinks of the old Chinese laundries and marvels at how such small people could handle them — they are heavy!

On an outside wall in the museum is a "Brand Wall". For a $25 donation, a family or ranch's registered brand will be burned into the wood. Most of the brands on the wall were put there by Elmo "Slack" Gill, father of Cecil Gill. "Slack" worked on the wall until his death in 1982. He was known as the "Brandin' Wall Man" by the people of the community.

Bright said, "He (Slack Gill) loved doing this. He came in every day to see if I had a brand for him."

Bright is the only full-time employee of the museum. Some of the auxiliary members are retired ladies from the community. They come to the museum to visit with people who come to tour the buildings and see some of "what it was like back then."

Maxine Wells, Oletta Moore and Clara Hoffer are three of the auxiliary volunteers. Volunteers work in teams of two on Saturday and Sunday to show visitors through the museum. These women are walking history books.

"This chair was used by John Cantrell when he worked over in the County court house," Wells remembered fondly, as she rocked to and fro. "And it was in the Perrin court house in 1889, so it's been around awhile." She grinned at her friends. Cantrell was the custodian in the courthouse from 1912 until he died in 1952.

Hoffer was not on duty this Sunday, but she said, "I like to come over just to visit with my friends."

Roberts County's museum is not just a place to come see "what it was like back then", but a gathering place for friends who enjoy reminiscing.

Auxiliary members said they also enjoy getting to meet the people who come through. Some of the visitors are surprised to find a museum in the old depot.

One time a man saw the sign which reads, "Miami Freight Lines. He wanted to send a telegram," Bright said. What he found instead was a message from the "old west" — the struggle to survive and then the warmth and elegance of the people.

Maxine said that sometimes "kids come running in. They need to use the restroom." She even donated fifty cents for a child to read books, then found out it was fifty cents per book. "The little girl read ten books!" She laughed.

Oletta remembered one traveling couple who stopped by the depot-turned-museum to take a break. "They wanted a cup of coffee," she said, laughing.

This couple had a taste of history, instead.

The museum — supported by a memorial fund, donations and contributions — is open every day of the week from 2-5 p.m., except Wednesdays, Bright said.

Story and photos by Julia Clark

Bright demonstrates how a pioneer woman cooked canned food in a steam cooker before it went to the pantry for winter supplies. Pioneer women made it to town an average of twice a year. This is a relatively "modern" cook stove. It has a water tank under the fire box and a pipe coming out the back for easier access to hot water. The doors above the cooking surface are warming ovens. Behind Bright on the kitchen cupboard — another "modern" convenience — is a cabbage shredder for making sauerkraut. The open-out bin generally held flour.

Jane Bright shows how a turn of the century mother opened her nursing dress for convenient and discreet feeding of her baby.

Dear Abby

Patient falls in love with emergency room doctor

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I was seven months' pregnant with my fifth child, I had a severe nosebleed, so my obstetrician sent me to the hospital's emergency room where I was treated by a very nice young doctor for approximately six hours. He made me feel so good, I hated to leave him. He and I are exactly the same age (30).

It's been four months now, and I realize that I am very much in love with this doctor. I don't know if he's married, has a girlfriend or anything else about him. All I know is that I dream about him every night and I can hardly wait to go to sleep because these dreams are so realistic and wonderful.

Three weeks ago I wrote him a letter to thank him for his kindness to me. I told him how I felt about him and asked him if he would like to spend a day with me. I told him I was married and had a family and I didn't expect any commitments, but if he was interested to call or write. I gave him certain times to call and an address that would be discreet.

So far I haven't heard from him. Do you think he's still considering it? Or should I consider myself rejected?

IN LOVE

DEAR IN LOVE: Don't consider yourself rejected. Just assume that the young doctor wisely decided against having an affair with a married woman.

...

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 44-year-old professional married man. Our children are grown and away at school. My wife and I have grown apart over the years, and several years ago, I fell in love with a girl 17 years my junior.

After several years of a beautiful love affair, my wife and children learned about this affair. My wife became panic-stricken! She has lost 40 pounds and has changed back to the beautiful woman I married 20 years ago. Now I find that I have "fallen in love" with her all over again. However, I am no less in love with my younger girlfriend.

Now that each knows about the other, I am expected to make a choice. How does a man who loves two beautiful women choose between them when they both love him very much?

TORN BETWEEN TWO LOVES

DEAR TORN: Choose the wife. It will be less strain on your conscience — not to mention your pocketbook.

DEAR ABBY: I am 21, unmarried and pregnant. After much soul-searching I have decided to give up my child for adoption. It was a difficult choice, but one I think is best for everyone concerned — especially the baby.

My family, friends and co-workers have been extremely kind through all of this and supportive of my adoption decision. The problem is with the salesman, customers and others that I see regularly in my position as a receptionist. Seeing my obvious pregnant condition, they have been very nice, asking how I feel, do I want a boy or a girl, etc. They are not aware that I do not plan to keep the child, and I prefer not to tell them.

After I return from maternity leave, what should I say? I would like to put this all behind me as quickly as possible.

NOT READY FOR MOTHERHOOD

DEAR NOT READY: If you really want to "put it all behind you as quickly as possible," don't return to the same job. If you do, be prepared to tell the truth when asked about your baby.

...

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Homemakers News

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Most of us have had the experience of purchasing a product and then finding out later that another brand might have been a better "buy." But the frustration of a poor purchase decision can often be avoided by seeking out information before buying.

Many consumers want product information but do not know where to find it easily and in a convenient form. In Gray County, we have several sources for reliable consumer information available for everyone.

The Gray County Extension office offers free extension service fact sheets which include objective information about the features, use and care, and operating procedures of various products. Some of the more popular fact sheets include those on microwave ovens, pattern alterations and food preparation.

Fact sheets are prepared by home economics specialists on the basis of the latest research information concerning that product. Although brand names and prices are not included on extension fact sheets, they do provide general guidelines which can help in purchase decisions. Call the county extension office at 669-7429 to get these fact sheets or to get answers to your consumer questions or visit our office in the courthouse annex.

The public library is another good source of information. Magazines such as Consumer Reports, Consumer's Research and other specialized publications give brand names and price comparisons along with quality ratings. The librarian can direct you to the consumer magazines available in the library.

Stores can also be a source of information. Manufacturers often provide information pamphlets on major appliances, for example. Although these materials are also meant to be advertisements, consumers can compare the features of products with this information. Use and care booklets, and warranties available with the products also provide valuable information.

For information about a business firm, you can check with the Better Business Bureau (BBB). The BBB provides consumers with information on products and selling practices and provides an opportunity to mediate grievances between consumers and sellers. The closest office of the BBB to us is in Amarillo and may be reached by calling (806) 374-3735.

Gathering product information before making a purchase can increase your purchasing "power" by helping you get the best buy for your needs. Effective use of product information by large numbers of consumers can also have a disciplinary effect on sellers, encouraging them to offer better products or better terms to other consumers.

During this week, "National Consumers Week," make plans to become a more educated consumer and in the process wisely select goods and services. Remember — an effective and efficient system of commerce depends on an informed and educated public.

REPORT CHILD ABUSE & CHILD NEGLECT

To report such incidences, please call 669-6806 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 669-7407 after 5 p.m. and on weekends. A child's life may depend on your call.

Clothing workshop planned

Clothing projects are being planned and all mothers or grandmothers and leaders are encouraged to attend a clothing meeting to help prepare for the project Wednesday, May 4, at 9:30 a.m. in the courthouse annex meeting room.

Topics to be discussed include dates, activities, project groups, project material and a clothing workshop. Then a field trip is planned to a ready-to-wear store, a fabric store and a sewing machine shop.

Everyone is welcome to attend the meeting. For more information, call 669-7429.

Gardening by Moon signs

May is busy time for gardeners

By LOIS BOYNTON

The moon will be decreasing: 1-11; 27-31. The moon will be increasing 12-26. The fruitful signs are 6-8 (Pisces); 15-16 (Cancer); 24-25 (Scorpio). The semi-fruitful signs are 1-3 (Capricorn); 11-12 (Taurus); 22-23 (Libra); from 2:08 p.m. the 28th through the 30th (Capricorn). The barren signs are 4-5 (Aquarius); 9-10 (Aries); 13-14 (Gemini); 17-19 noon (Leo); 19 noon-21st 4:12 p.m. (Virgo); 26-28 noon (Sagittarius); 31 (Aquarius). Use the fruitful signs for all planting when possible. The semi-fruitful signs are second choice.

Remember to plant during the increasing moon the seeds that produce their fruit above the ground. Plan seeds that produce their fruit below the ground during the decreasing moon.

May is a busy month. There are more chores to be done that there are hours in the day to do them. More crops are planted in May than in any other month. It is also time for gathering from your garden enough for a fresh salad of lettuce, radishes, onions, asparagus and spinach. Oh! The delicious taste of the first fresh vegetables gathered from your own garden.

Planting out from the greenhouse and windowsill can be done now with caution; there could still be a light frost, so be prepared.

Plants from a mail-order house generally arrive dry, so give them a good soaking in a pail of tepid water for several hours or overnight.

Growing and sowing conditions are at their best just now, and the garden is a place of joy with the lilacs blooming and all plant life greening up with new buds opening every day. The snowballs, peonies and iris are getting ready for their show. It is a great time in the garden. So don't be so busy that you miss the joy.

Cut back poinsettias to two eyes above the ground and plunge the pot to the brim in a bright sunny spot in your flower bed.

Cut spent blooms from your Easter lily, knock it out of the pot and plant in your flower bed where you want it to bloom. Plant as deep as it was in the pot. It will bloom for you next year, later than Easter, however. Probably sometime in June.

Sometimes a conical evergreen tree loses its leader, as one of ours did several years ago. For some unknown reason, it just died back about eight inches.

We cut the dead part, selected a branch from the top whorl of side branches, carefully bent it straight upright and tied it with a piece of old nylon hose to a strong stake we had driven close to the trunk and tied it in two places to the trunk. The stake should be left for a full season or until the new leader can stand alone.

Winter-killed shrubs should be cut practically to ground level. This will encourage their new shoots to grow stronger and better. Cut old wood out of crepe myrtle; it blooms on the new wood.

Seeds benefit from overnight soaking in warm water before planting. Try placing the seed between paper towels and let them complete sprout before planting. This works great for seeds that are slow to germinate like okra, petunias and others. This will give a head start and insure germination of the seed.

Scatter poppy seed in empty places for color. Rake in, pat down and cover with vermiculite to mark the spot.

If you like spinach, try New Zealand spinach. Although not a true spinach, it's a great substitute. When warm weather arrives it continues to produce new tender succulent leaves. It is an annual but persists on returning year after year even after rototilling.

Check roses again with pruning shears in hand. Perhaps you did not prune them severely enough. It's a mistake to leave weak growth on a bush.

To make a beautiful and unusual flower bed: In a sunny place, plant masses of petunias so thickly that weeds will not take over. Edge the bed with curly parsley, this will almost be trouble free when planting is over. There will be little upkeep — only cutting the dead heads off of petunias and clipping the parsley for the kitchen. And, of course, it will need watering now and then.

Cut the spent blooms from jonquils, tulips and spring flowering bulbs, side dress with bone meal. Do not remove or restrict the foliage. It is manufacturing food for next year's blossoms and should be allowed to die back naturally. Plant annuals around them to take over while the foliage is maturing.

Peaches and pears should be thinned properly to insure large fruit and protect the tree. When the peaches are well-formed, they should be thinned to six inches apart. Pears should be thinned to two per cluster and the clusters should be about six inches apart.

A new lawn from seed will benefit from a light top-dressing of a 50-50 mixture of sand and coarse peat each month. This will help to create a smooth level surface and encourage the growth of young grasses.

Established lawns should be mowed at least weekly between May and early September. Sometimes twice weekly in good growing conditions.

If mowing is not carried out with sufficient frequency, the vigor of the grass may be impaired by the shock of cutting too much at a time.

In planting our tomatoes, we dig the holes a foot deep and put bone meal, cottonseed meal and a sprinkling of gypsum in the bottom of the hole. We set the tomato plants in the hole, and place gallon cans without tops or bottoms over the plants.

We sucker the plants regularly. Suckers appear in the axils of the leaves. We think they should be removed.

When the tomatoes are about 18 inches high, we remove the cans and place plant tin bands around them. Some of these bands are three foot and some are two foot in diameter. All are four inches high. They help preserve the water and make the job easier.

After the rings are in place we put on the wire cages or cylinders. They are 18 inches in diameter and five foot tall. These are held in place by two 3/4 inch pipes, six foot long. They are woven down through the wire and driven into the ground. We have grown our tomatoes by this method for several years. The plants produce well and the fruit is clean and easy to pick.

We always grow several varieties of tomatoes. Some of our favorites are Glamour, Porter and Beefmaster.

Now that we spring ahead with daylight saving time, it will give us one more hour in the evening to work in our gardens.

Heidi Allen, Pampa's former Miss Top O' Texas, has been selected as one of 12 Texas Tech University coeds to appear in the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity calendar. Allen is to appear as September's feature photograph.

Allen was also chosen as "All Greek Beauty" in March. She was selected through the votes of all sororities and fraternities at Texas.

Ragsdale named director Good Samaritan Services

William Ragsdale of Pampa has been named executive director by the board of Good Samaritan Christian Services, Inc. Ragsdale replaces Christy McCrary in this volunteer position. McCrary had agreed earlier to serve as executive director for two to three months in order to get the Good Samaritan Place program underway. After leaving Good Samaritan, McCrary plans to practice law here.

A member of St. Matthew's Episcopal church, Ragsdale also belongs to the Pampa Rotary Club and Pampa Amateur Radio Club. He retired as office manager of the Pampa office of the Texas Employment Commission in January 1982.

He is married to the former Iris Morris. They have one son, Bill of Pampa; one daughter, Peggy Davis, of Austin and four grandchildren.

Jo Ann Jones, president of the Good Samaritan board of directors, said, "The board is delighted that Mr. Ragsdale has agreed to serve in this position. He has already been serving as a skilled and compassionate interviewer and receptionist at Good Samaritan Place. It is obvious his Christian concern and his years of experience interviewing those in need will make him an excellent director of this interfaith mission."

In the 2½ months since Good Samaritan Place opened, more than 240 families

Childhood screening continues this week

Appointments for early childhood screening are now being taken for Baker and Lamar and Grandview - Hopkins school districts.

Parents who suspect their children (ages 3 to 5 by Sept. 1) are not performing like other children their ages in speech and language development, coordination, general knowledge, hearing and vision, can call 665 - 2376. Ask for special education department.

Appointments will be accepted through May 6. The actual screening is to take place May 9 at the Lamar Elementary School gymnasium.

Purpose of the screening is to help identify children who need early education. If problems are found in one or more of the areas tested in the screening, the child may be considered for more extensive testing to decide whether they are eligible for Early Childhood Education.

GORDON OF Philadelphia's collarless cardigan jacket is semi-fitted, with breezy invert-pleat skirt, in porcelain white silk linen. Shirt is cocoa handkerchief linen. Jacket about $136, skirt about $76, shirt about $46.

WEEKEND AND vacation fashions go soft and brightly colorful, as in Gordon of Philadelphia's cotton knit pair. Culotte and T-shirt top are banded in sunny yellow against bright blue. Top about $26, culotte about $40.

Summer fashions for work, leisure

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — The era of "anything goes" in summer fashions has been replaced by the idea that a real wardrobe is needed in this season, too. With so many more women working, business clothes belong to summer just as much as casual wear.

Take the summer suit, long a nearly vanished species. Its tailored good looks and versatility have restored it to the key place in summer city dressing. Designers have eased the silhouette to a comfortable semi-fit, but the curve-conscious focus is still there. Also restored is a classic fabric favorite, linen, most often a blend to avoid the wrinkling associated with pure linen.

Return of the summer suit also brings back white, in soft cream, ivory or the porcelain off-white in Gordon of Philadelphia's silk linen suit. The easy, collarless cardigan jacket looks cool, and the skirt is breezy with spaced inverted pleats. To go with it they have a fine handkerchief linen shirt in a choice of soft summer colors.

This cool business look appears at Bill Blass in red cotton gabardine, with a short-sleeved, double-breasted jacket. George Samsen at Mollie Parnis puffs the tops of short sleeves for a wide-top look to his blond silk herringbone jacket, double-breasted in black buttons and belted in black patent.

Summer suits can be unmatched, as in Tracy Mills' cotton pique in royal blue collarless tunic jacket and easy skirt in black to match the belt. Black, or black and white, dramatize cotton suits. Ilie Wacs goes all-black with a long, boldly loose jacket, while Mary Ann Restivo awning-stripes a tunic-length double-breasted jacket over a slim black skirt.

Weekend or vacation clothes are as casual as city wear is tailored. Often sportswear in fashion colors, the range can include safari vest, miniskirt and striped T-shirt at Anne Klea, and shorts of every length and style, from boxer to waist-gathered like a romper. Little T-shirt dresses in cotton knit come within the casual category, all white or in blocks of color. Gordon of Philadelphia does the look in a two-piece of culotte and T-top, color-banded in bright blue and sun yellow.

This summer, leisure wear stays away from working hours. Only dresses cross the line, as in the cotton knit T-shirt look. Even here there is a tendency to divide, with city sophisticate coal-dresses, double-breasted in big white buttons against black or navy linen, for office or in-town occasions. Dresses for leisure, whether one or two-piece, come in softer fabrics and downright floppy styling.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Dressing up the T-shirt

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — Joan Wiesneck has been making a name with her uniquely soft, hand-dyed evening dresses under her own label, Sara Mique. Inspired by Brazilian clothes she saw in her travels, she has created frothy, lace-ruffled dresses that look casual and formal at the same time.

Made for the woman who likes to look different but beautiful rather than freaky, Sara Mique dresses are also one-size, fitting from size 4 through 12 or 14. Now Ms. Wiesneck is proving that her special look can translate into day dressing. For summer, she's transformed the T-shirt.

Starting with a sleeveless cotton knit T-top, she adds a V-yoke which extends over the shoulders in a cap-sleeve effect. The yoke edges are stitched to make them pie-crust fluted. The fluted edging is repeated on the pockets of a soft little peg-top skirt to match. Color choices are white, mauve, gray or black.

A gentler look in young fashions

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — Call it refinement, call it classicism — under whatever name, the current fashion trend is influencing small girls' casual fashions for spring and summer. Even stonewashed denim is gentled with over-dyeing, as in Nani Montez's denim vest, shirt and pants in red, white and blue.

At Her Majesty, classic pastel pinstriped oxford cloth is used in easy separates. There's a suspended knicker, a trio of blouse, skirt and button-on apron, a group of suspender shorts, vest and matched man-tie.

Health-Tex takes the soft road with details like puffed sleeves on blouses, peplums edging tops and dresses styled with pinafore ruffling. The gentler trend has brought dress looks into casual wear, such as Garanimals' ruffled prairie skirt in-said color to go with a variety of puffed-sleeve tops in stripes and dots.

Garanimals also likes soft details on its spring pants, such as white shoestring ties for clamdiggers, cuffs on shorts and elasticized ankles to round out long pants. For toddler fashionables, a culotte overall comes in lightweight corduroy with a textured pinstripe surface.

Buster Brown has adapted the '50s look for little girls in circular skirts to go with coordinated blouses. Prints feature coin dots, stripes, ice cream cones and candy motifs. An even gentler look appears in their "Mississippi" group of eyelet-trimmed, ruffled and embroidered separates.

Part of the gentle trend is a revival of the nautical look. Margaret Marten for Fischel does navy blue and white striped bloomers, skirts and shorts, with sail-or-collared tops.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

FROM GARIMALS, left, striped top and clamdiggers with white shoestring ties; right, prairie skirt and blouse in both dots and stripes. Pants about $9.50; top about $7; skirt about $10; dot top about $7.50.

A fashion world that's very special

NEW YORK (NEA) — George Stavropoulos has never dipped so much as a toe into the stormy commercial waters of Seventh Avenue. He's not in the business of rivaling other designers, whether for novelty or social status. He has his salon on New York's 57th Street and holds all his shows in an elegant uptown hotel.

It's a natural setting for the Stavropoulos clothes. Whether for day, cocktail or evening, they breathe the couture atmosphere in which the designer was brought up. In his native Athens, he had just such a couture salon, making custom clothes for the wealthy women of Greece and for foreign clients. Although his clothes now are classified as ready-to-wear, they are still as close to couture in technique, fabrics and conception as one can find.

The fashion world of Stavropoulos is that of women with many social engagements. His suits are worn to charity or private luncheons, his dresses go out to cocktail parties and dinners. Known widely as an evening gown specialist, he puts more than 60 of them in a collection of a little over a hundred styles. Since there are few makers of beautiful gowns today in this country, high-fashion stores snap them up.

Stavropoulos came to the United States when he proposed to an American girl who would emigrate only if he agreed to emigrate here. Knowing no English, but encouraged by some of his Greek-American customers and his wife, he opened a tiny salon on 57th Street. His wife did the talking, and just one model put on the styles, while spectators waited for her to change.

Peeking at Pampa

The active lifestyle is everyone's lifestyle today in Pampa. Here's the evidence.

Pampa Art Club members pressed the success button again last week in their annual arts and crafts show. Members displayed their own handiwork in sculpture, all types of paintings, and even wood carving!

Peggy (Mrs. Dewey) Palmier always makes an artistic statement with her special type of copper enameling. She developed her own technique. Mary Lane displayed some finely detailed bird sculptures. You could almost see them breathe! Ann Lemons, a relative newcomer to the field, showed some beautiful water colors and decorative painting as well. Must mention the nice water colors and china painting by Frances Appleby — loved her bluejays.

Heritage Art Club members exhibited their works Friday and Saturday at the Lovett Library. Their display of talent was amazing. Some of the members showing their arts and crafts included Louise Ward, Rebecca Vaughn, Yvonne Scrimshire, Pat Griffin, Grace Gilpatrick and Crystal Cruzan. Can you believe one town has so much talent packed in it!

Good luck and best wishes to Regina and Hank Jordan who moved to Lubbock last week where Hank will join the Texas Railroad Commission. Regina, daughter of Barbara and Robert Bennishek, was an efficient, pleasant employee of the Gray County Tax office the past couple of years.

Lisa Malone, the Noon Lions Club entry to the district beauty queen contest, reports a wonderful, unforgettable experience. Sounds like she served as a top notch ambassador of good will! Besides that, she was in the top 10! With an attitude like hers, the sky's the limit for what we can expect of her in the future.

Coronado Community Hospital (CCH) honored 45 hospital Auxiliary volunteers at the annual Awards Recognition luncheon April 20. That day's volunteers wore corsages to match their pretty pink uniforms. Nancy (Mrs. Ed) Paronto, director of volunteer services deserves special recognition for making the program happen so smoothly.

Walt Johnson of CCH recently attended a three-day convention in Lubbock for the Texas Association of Public Relations and Marketing for hospitals.

Congratulations to Ted Simmons, county commissioner from McLean, who was named president of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association. He's a member of the CCH board, also.

Gail Cook is spearheading an alumni banquet in Amarillo for the Amarillo College associate degree nurses. While a CCH scholarship student at AC, Gail won several honors, including one of two outstanding students.

Dining out: Nelda and Bob Rogers and Lorene and L. D. Parrish — a foursome of Billie Don and Vernon Watkins of Greenbelt with Pauline and Jack Vaughn — Virginia and Cap Jolly (Virginia looked so pretty in blue) — Millie (always a captivating smile for everyone) and John McKinley.

Carol (Mrs. J. R.) Lawley came from Houston to visit her parents, Neil and Art Rankin. Schuyler Stuckey, his wife and son, Stephen came all the way from Saudi Arabia to visit his parents, Bonnie and Vernon Stuckey.

The recent concert by the Harrington String Quartet, sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, was superb! Say June Alexander, now of Amarillo, who looked elegantly chic in green.

Spring party time arrived last Sunday when Beta Sigma Phi honored Mike Keagy as 1983 Woman of the Year with a yellow rose tea. Mike looked radiant in a raspberry, buruffled dress. Mike and Bob also celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary that day.

The Keagys are the parents of four children whose names all begin with "J" — Jean and Joan (twins), Jim and Janet. Gerry (Mrs. Clint) Caylor looked like a breath of spring air in off-white suit belted with gold. Viola (Mrs. Rufe) Jordan wore the same summery colored suit topped with a straw hat, circled with brightly colored posies. Norma (Mrs. Buff) Maguire wore an orchid suit contrasted with a lilac blouse.

Helen (Mrs. Charles) Dimmier, 1982 Woman of the Year, presented a moving and sincere speech that was lovely. Debbie Callison, Beta Sigma Phi Council president, pulled the whole event together in the nicest way. She is a sweetie!

The local extension homemakers clubs presented a beautiful spring covered-dish luncheon last week revolving around the theme "Collectibles." Saw Katie McDonald and Marilyn Butler there. Teresa Wood of McLean was presented the $500 4-H scholarship for her outstanding achievements in 4-H and every other endeavor she makes. She's also valedictorian of her senior class. I must mention, too, her lovely mother, Mrs. David Wood, who accompanied Teresa to the luncheon.

Special guests were Sheriff Rufe and Viola Jordan. The sheriff said grace over the plentiful meal in his inimitable style. Judge Carl and Pat Kennedy, and Judge Don Cain were also present. Highlight of the program was the presentation by Proxie Warminski of White Deer on collecting...everything!

Attention all billboard watchers! Seen on a billboard at a popular eating place here: "Shallow minds ripple easily." Oie! See you soon! KATIE

IT'S A FACT!

An estimated 468,000 children ages 3-5 have vision problems. A young child can't tell you when he or she has one.

The National Society to Prevent Blindness, now in its 75th year, suggests that it's up to parents to have a youngster's vision checked—before school age. A primary concern is the eye condition amblyopia (lazy eye).

The affected child has a weak eye that won't do its part, and the child favors the other eye. Undetected and untreated, amblyopia can result in permanent reduction of vision or even blindness in the weak eye.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

A new assertiveness will be awakened within you this coming year which will considerably enhance your potential for success. Being second-best will no longer have any appeal for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 Instead of wasting time today worrying about whether your ideas will work, try them and, if they fail, try again. Action is essential. Taurus predictions for the year ahead are now ready. Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic combinations and compatibilities for all signs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 Something you've been waiting for that has to come through another, something which has been delayed, is likely to break loose at this time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 You won't be in the mood today to be linked to persons who tend to drag their feet. Seek associations with those who are as energetic as yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 Your greatest asset today is your determination to succeed. Once this desire is awakened, your objectives are achievable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 Plans requiring bold measures are likely to go more smoothly for you today than they will tomorrow. Time is not your ally. Don't dillydally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
 You're great once you get going today, but you may need a push to get started. Teaming-up with an eager beaver is your best bet.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
 Though you are an independent thinker, your companions will have a great influence on your attitude today, especially if they're enthusiastic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 If you are a salesperson, this is the day to make a number of extra calls. Your possibilities for getting prospects to sign are good.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 Your leadership qualities will be quite evident today in either business or social situations. When you take charge, things start happening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
 Substantial accomplishments are likely today, particularly in matters where your compassionate instincts are aroused to be helpful to those you love.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
 Your sparkling personality will add luster to any gathering today. You'll bring out the best in others and they'll make you feel appreciated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 Devote your energies today to ways to advance your career or add to your resources. These areas contain potential rewards.

Philip Marlowe returns in pay TV series

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Philip Marlowe, Raymond Chandler's tarnished knight, portrayed in the past by Humphrey Bogart, Dick Powell, Robert Montgomery, Robert Mitchum, James Garner and Elliott Gould, is back in a two-fisted series for pay television.

The new Marlowe is Powers Boothe, the Emmy-winning actor who brings his own brand of brooding and menace to the role of the quintessential 1930s private eye.

"He's a loner and he obviously can take care of himself physically and intellectually," says Boothe. "He likes what he does and what he does is just a job to him. I've always felt if you followed a real private detective around it would be boring. It just happens that we catch Marlowe when he has an interesting case."

Home Box Office is currently presenting five such cases, all taken from Chandler short stories.

Chandler's Marlowe, the basis for seven novels and 24 short stories, was the epitome of the tough private eye. Chandler, with the help of Dashiell Hammett, virtually created the genre. Marlowe, for all his faults, was a man with a moral code as strict as Arthur's Round Table. His special charge was to ride to the rescue of the helpless and tilt his lance at the guilty.

Chandler's stories were complicated thrillers, but equally important he encapsulated the mood and atmosphere of 1930s Los Angeles. They were a mixture of drama, violence, sex and suspense.

The new series captures that, and, interestingly, it was made in England (where it was telecast on London Weekend Television).

"We made it in England because the producer, David Wickes, was British and he had the rights," says Boothe. "I think they also had more 1930s art deco furnishings there. But a big part of it, I'm sure, had to do with the economics. It's cheaper to work there. When I was in England all the studios there were booked and 85 percent of the projects were American."

Marlowe's grubby office on Hollywood Boulevard, the smokey dives, the seedy motels are all faithfully reproduced at Twickenham Studios near the banks of the Thames.

Marlowe is perpetually 38 and time is rooted in the 1930s. Boothe says, "Marlowe works best in this atmosphere. He's more than a detective, he's a reflection of an era. It was our last age of innocence. It was a romantic time. And it was a time when you could drive some distance through open areas to reach Santa Monica."

"I think Chandler's claim to fame is that he took pulp and made it into literature. I was amazed when I started this to find out how many true Chandler fans there are. I also didn't know all these short stories existed. I wouldn't have done it if they'd just taken the character of Marlowe and written new stories."

Chandler, who died in 1959, did not live to see James Garner's interpretation in "Marlowe," adapted from "The Little Sister," or director Robert Altman's "The Long Goodbye," in which Elliott Gould played a modern-day Marlowe.

A man who makes steel guitars talk

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pete Drake, leader of the softball team, "Pete's Freaks," may not be a whiz on the ball field, but the late Elvis Presley, Bob Dylan, Ringo Starr and George Harrison have wanted him on their teams in the recording studio.

Drake, a steel guitar player, is one of Nashville's foremost "sessions men" — a musician who plays for recording sessions. As versatile as a utility infielder, he also is a record producer, owns a recording studio and runs a music publishing firm and a record company.

He's best known to the public for his 1964 million-selling hit, "Forever," in which he hooked up a special device to his steel guitar and it "talked."

The sound from his famous "talking steel guitar" came by running a tube into a small speaker and putting the tube in his mouth.

"Your mouth becomes an amplifier and the guitar becomes your vocal cords," he said.

He calls this device an "actuator," and owns the patent.

A more important legacy is how Drake's brilliance on the steel guitar boosted the instrument from its use in the country music field to acceptance in rock 'n' roll and pop music.

When the 50-year-old Drake played his steel guitar on Dylan's records about 15 years ago, Nashville was established as a recording center for rock and pop music and not just the headquarters for rhinestone-suited country performers

After that, Drake traveled to England to play on Harrison's album, "All Things Must Pass." Starr came to Nashville so Drake could produce the ex-Beatle's "BeCeaps The Blues." For Presley, he played on five motion picture soundtracks and other albums.

But he reserves some of his highest acclaim for singer B.J. Thomas. Drake is the producer of Thomas' hit, "What Ever Happened to Old-Fashioned Love?"

"B.J. is one of the easiest persons for me to produce," the gray-haired Drake said during an interview in his second-floor office. "He's a singer's singer. He can hear a song twice and sing it like he's known it for 20 years. He's just a pro, and probably the greatest singer I've ever worked with."

His proudest achievement, though, was producing the 1979 album, "Ernest Tubb: The Legend and the Legacy."

"It was a way to show someone who had done so much for so many people that we appreciated him," Drake said. "The record went gold, and it was the biggest thrill of my life."

Drake spends most of his time producing records, though he spends 12 to 15 hours a week playing one of his five steel guitars.

A very formidable John Houseman faces the camera during rehearsals for an off-Broadway revival of "The Cradle Will Rock," which he is directing for a run from May 9 to May 29. The play stars former members of the critically acclaimed Acting Company which Houseman co-founded 11 years ago. He is also busy doing commercials for such firms as Smith, Barney; Plymouth and Proctor and Gamble. (AP Newfeatures Photo)

Houseman is quiet, dignified

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — He sits there in a quiet corner of the delicatessen, a formidable, august-looking man in the September of his years. The waitress arrives. "What'll ya have, dearie?" says she.

"Bacon, eggs and some toast, please," replies John Houseman. His tone is pleasant, his manner modest. Disappointing, if you expect him to come on like that crusty, cold-eyed Harvard law professor he played in "The Paper Chase."

Or like that venerable Brahmin he essays on those TV spots for that brokerage firm, who haughtily sniffs: "They make money the old-fashioned way — they EARRRRN it!"

In the flesh, he's just a quiet, supremely dignified and unassuming man. He's 80 now, but still busy.

His current project: Directing an off-Broadway revival of Marc Blitzstein's proletarian play with music, "The Cradle Will Rock." He first produced it in 1937. The director then was a young fellow named Orson Welles, with whom Houseman later helped foal the film classic, "Citizen Kane."

The new "Cradle" opens May 9 and runs through May 29 at the American Place Theater.

It's an old-grad gathering in two other respects:

—It's stocked with former members of the critically-acclaimed Acting Company — Tony-winner Fatti LuPone of "Evita" among them — that Houseman co-founded 11 years ago.

—And many of them studied at the Juilliard School's famed drama department, which he began in 1968 and from which such unknowns as Kevin Kline, Christopher Reeve and Robin Williams sallied forth to become very known.

The Acting Company, which spends most of the year touring the United States, bringing classical repertory to cities large and small, used to be exclusively composed of Juilliard grads. Now, he says, half the troupe comes from other schools.

When he began Juilliard's drama school, regional theater in America was on the upswing. The idea was that the school would provide those theaters with a steady supply of classically-trained young emoters. And that the graduates would get the chance to regularly practice their art instead of lurking at the doors of Broadway producers.

But in the fourth year of operation at Juilliard, he says, "I decided it was time to show 'our wares.'" Five productions were staged by the soon-to-graduate class of '68. Excellent reviews ensued.

The Boys...

'They're all capable, very capable' said the banker when the Boys balked at three million dollars...

straight to her family's waiting arms in the other room. The Boys: Joe Gordon, Jim Campbell, Bill and George Arrington, Leonard Hudson and Vernon Stowers and their millions were ready to square off. Here were the local men with all the "stinkin' money" in the county, money made in banking, cattle and oil.

Others at the auction were perhaps waiting out of curiosity, or to buy a parcel or tractor. The president and owner of banks in Borger and Pampa was in position on the living room floor. Also present were representatives of the Farmers Home Administration and Small Business Administration, the government agencies where Price acquired his $2.3 million farm debt.

"There's no back taxes. They were all paid yesterday and the day before. We're gonna offer it in its entirety, and we want top dollar. Mr. Price is going back to Washington, I understand." Big Bill said. He handed the mike to the little colonel, and the boys started bidding.

Bids opened at $2.5 million and jumped to $2.6 within seconds. The colonel reported the action into the mike in his quick, southern auctioneer's tongue.

Auctioneer Colonel Ralph Segars stands on a tailgate and barks into a mike at potential buyers during former Congressman Bob Price's auction Thursday. Price munches a hot dog as he watches neighbors buy off the possessions of four generations of the Price family.

One of the younger members of the auction crowd watches the confusion around the sale of odd lots of wire, fence posts, garden hose and rusty tricycles.

Big Bill and his assistant worked the crowd. Bill's dark, wrinkled face displayed a look of both worry and frenzy, as he stomped in and out of the crowd yelling for bids.

"Two point six is the bid. Come on boys, you're not thinkin'!" screamed Bill.

The boys upped the bid to $2.8 million.

"Okay, now you got somebody wakin' up," Bill said.

The colonel's rapid-fire babble for more suddenly got no response.

"It's in the bargain basement. You're gonna go home tonight and just wish you could have the land for this price. All right, $2.9, now go!" Bill yelled.

"He doesn't need an amplifier," said a cowboy. "My mom and dad are interested in part of it, but not the whole thing," said a farm lad out of the competition.

Despite the pleas from Bill and the Colonel, the boys were stuck on $2.9 million. Gordon sat on a folding chair and whispered to Campbell. Their partnership between two families goes back three generations.

Gordon was the only "Boy" without jeans and western garb. But his blue suit and boots were topped that morning by a sweat-ringed, filth-caked cowboy hat, bent and stomped beyond use.

The Boys alternately huddled for half an hour with the Price family in the next room.

Still the magic $3 million bid wouldn't come.

"I'm gonna sell it. I'm gonna sell it," warned the colonel.

"No, you're not! You're not sellin' nothin'! I've got a big man thinkin' Now go to work!" Big Bill screamed back. He moved in and out around the Boys' whisperings, digging for the $3 million bid.

A balding man with a red face and wearing jeans and ostrich-hide boots stood in the dirt outside the open room and talked to the bank owner. Vernon Stowers got out a portable calculator and took his turn talking to Price.

Some in the crowd speculated that the Pampa oilman was haggling over the mineral rights Price owned under 900 acres of the ranch.

"They're all capable. Very capable," the banker said when the Boys balked at $3 million.

Stowers made up his mind and broke the stalemate with the magic number. The crowd gasped its approval.

Now it was up to an unknown mix of the Boys to top it. The Arringtons huddled with Gordon and Campbell and back to Stowers.

Another half hour passed, and the colonel slowed his tongue.

The bids had come in hundred-thousand-dollar increments. But now came a bid that indicated the boys were near the top. Pampa oilman Leonard Hudson bid $3,025,000.

"You can cash his check; I'll guarantee that," Reavis shouted and announced the bid.

But Big Bill knew it was over. He made an unusual hushed plea to George Arrington for a higher bid.

Arrington shook his head: "I won't do it," he said.

Big Bill whirled to the crowd and shouted, "Leonard Hudson bought it! You've got a new neighbor."

The land auction was over. The price was $312.82 per acre. Each of the Prices cried in the other room.

Offered congratulations, Price shot back. "For what?"

"I'm happy with the price, but I'm not happy about having to sell it," he said.

The crowd cleared out for the drive down to the equipment sale and a look at Price's leftovers: an eight-wheel diesel tractor, plows, wire, tanks, cars, feed troughs, old refrigerators, lawn mowers, scrap metal, a shopping basket with no back, rusty tricycles, odd-ball pieces of carpet, tarps, pipes and fence posts. It was all for sale to the highest bidders from the back of the colonel's station wagon.

"This junk won't bring anything, I don't think," remarked a cigar-chomping, fat farmer on his way down the hill.

Big Bill told the driver to take the sandwich truck down to the parked farm equipment and displayed odds and ends.

"The coffee's still on me while you're up here — when you get down there, start chargin' for it. This up here meant something — that down there don't," Reavis told the driver.

"How much for this tarp? Will you give a dollar? I know you've got something to cover up." Reavis and Segars worked the crowd for the last time. They were getting five percent on the sales, Segars said.

"You can't count it 'till it's closed — until you get the check and get to the bank," the colonel said.

Hudson and his advisers met at 2 p.m. Thursday to hammer out the paperwork on his $3 million purchase. The group met all day and late into the night Friday; still, the sale wasn't worked out as of Saturday afternoon, according to Hudson's wife.

"It's quite a mess. It's not ours yet," Mrs. Hudson said.
