He got nothing back from Guyana but bodies

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

For a week, semi-retired Wheeler farmer Melvin Meadows watched television pictures of the mass death at Jonestown and didn't know a self-proclaimed Messiah and maniac had ordered his daughter, son-in-law and five grandkids to their deaths.

Court claims against the People's Temple for the Nov. 18, 1978 Guyana tragedy were settled last week, and a final report will be written next month. But though his six descendants died at the mass suicide-murder, Meadows received nothing from the millions left behind by the Rev. Jim Jones and his followers.

"I done give up on that," Meadows said about a settlement from Peoples Temple assets.

found in banks around the world. The last of the assets was divided among those suing the temple last week. Court-appointed administrator Robert Fabian was ordered to send out the remaining claims. California Judge Ira Brown also instructed Fabian to write a final report about the temple claims by April or May.

Meadows wrote to temple administrators about four years ago, he said.

Jones forced temple members to turn over their money, including the social-security checks of many elderly members, to Jones' South American commune. After the mass deaths, more than $10 million in temple assets were

"I never heard a thing from them," he said.

Meadows' daughter, Gladys Smith, her husband, David Smith, and all five of the couple's children drank poisoned Kool-Aid or were injected and commanded to die at the People's Temple camp in Guyana.

Cult leader Jim Jones sent Meadows' offspring and more than 900 others to their mostly-willing deaths in the South American temple camp.

Meadows knew that in 1975, his children and grandchildren joined some kind of religious cult in San Francisco called the People's Temple. About two years later, he got a letter from his daughter and had to pull out a map of South America to figure out where in the world her letter came from. He learned his daughter was living in a country called Guyana.

Despite the letters from Jonestown, Meadows saw pictures after the jungle deaths and didn't realize his family was there, he said. The 913 victims, many with arms together in a death embrace, lay in a mass of rotting flesh under a hot tropical sun.

U.S. Representative Leo Ryan of California and members of the news media flew into the remote camp to check stories that Jones and his followers were holding some temple members against their wills. As the investigators tried to leave, Ryan, three newsmen and a cult defector were gunned down by temple killers at the Jonestown airstrip. The mass suicide-murders followed.

The members' bodies were shipped to Washington for autopsies and often futile attempts at identification.

When Meadows first investigated, he went to the Wheeler County Sheriff to ask for help. The sheriff referred him to Congressman Jack Hightower.

About a month later, Meadows was told from Washington that three bodies had been identified as Gladys Smith, 32, David Smith, 52, and Karl Wayne Smith, 11. The Smiths' other four children and Meadows' grandchildren, three boys and a girl ranging in age from 3 to 14, died at Jonestown, but their bodies were never identified, Meadows said.

The bodies of Gladys, David and Karl Wayne were returned to Meadows, and he buried them in the Wheeler Cemetery.

"I put them away," Meadows said.

Gladys Smith was born in Amarillo and raised on Meadows' Wheeler farm. Meadows, 72, moved his family to the farm in 1949.

Smith's mother and Meadows' first wife, Mary, died when Gladys was 10.

Meadows married his second wife, Grace, about three years later. Between them, the newlyweds had twelve children, including the future victim of Jonestown.

Gladys was a quiet girl who helped out with the farm chores and attended Wheeler schools, Meadows said.

Just before she left Wheeler, the farmer said his daughter was not getting along with the other girls in the 14-member family.

Then one day when she was 17, Gladys left for classes at Wheeler High School, and "she never came back," Meadows said.

Gladys met David Smith, a man then more than twice her age, in Wheeler. Instead of going to class, she boarded a bus for Denver and a rendezvous with Smith, Meadows said.

She married Smith there in 1964. The Smiths lived in Colorado where several of their children were born. The family frequently visited Meadows' Wheeler farm, he said.

"They stayed with me a lot," he said. David Smith later moved the family to California, and in 1975, the Smiths joined the People's Temple in San Francisco.

Meadows said his daughter joined Jim Jones and the religious cult because of David Smith's influence over her, and because she and the kids had nowhere to go.

"He left her and the kids out there in the country with nothin'," Meadows said.

Gladys and the kids visited Meadows at the farm in 1977, and his daughter said nothing about moving to Jonestown, he said.

But just a few months later, the farmer started receiving the letters from Guyana.

He said he believes Jones' cult members censored Gladys' letters, as Meadows said the writings "were all the same."

"She always just said how pretty it was there. How green everything was. How she could see bananas ripen right on the tree," he said.

Then came the tragedy that shocked the world.

"I watched it on TV for a week before I even knew she was where they were talking about," he said.

Meadows said he paid to bury the Smiths, including his son-in-law. He said Smith's Colorado relatives wouldn't help with burial expenses.

"I called them, and they said they didn't want anything to do with him," Meadows said.

The farmer said he no longer has his daughter's letters or even a picture of her.

Meadows' second wife died, and the farmer now lives at the Wheeler farm with his son, Buford, 14. The farmer still grows a little wheat and sorghum, and he signed up for the PIK program. But Meadows said he's semi-retired.

"It's too much work," he joked.

Meadows spends most of his time watching television at the farmhouse. The rabbit-ears antenna brings in a snowy picture of the daytime soap operas Meadows watches the shows and leaves the volume on the set high. He rarely thinks about Jonestown, he said. Meadows said he never watched any of the movies made about the cult.

"I started to read a book about it once, but I couldn't finish it," he said.

Gladys Smith grew up at this Wheeler farmhouse, where she helped raise hogs and chickens and tended other chores of a normal, small-town girl. She left the

Meadows farm when she was 17—15 years later, the Panhandle woman and her husband and five children died with cult leader Jim Jones in a jungle camp at Jonestown, Guyana. (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Wayne Smith, 11, and his son-in-law, David Smith, 52, after they drank the religious cult's poisoned Kool-Aid. The Smiths' other four children also died at Jonestown, but their bodies were never identified. (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Two Panhandle counties to be named as nuclear dumping sites

By T. LEE HUGHES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy will soon propose nominating sites in Texas, Utah, Mississippi and Louisiana for consideration as the nation's first permanent repository for high-level nuclear waste, an energy official says.

The sites include two in the Texas Panhandle, one in Deaf Smith County, and the other in Swisher County.

William Bennett, director of the department's geologic repository division, said Monday that hearings have been tentatively scheduled in the four states to obtain citizen comment on the proposed nominations.

Bennett said letters are expected to be sent out this week informing governors of the four states of the proposals.

The department has already proposed nominating sites in Washington state and Nevada as possible locations for the repository.

Under a 1982 law, five sites must be nominated nationwide for further detailed studies, to be reduced to three by January 1985.

However, the department is planning to dramatically accelerate that schedule and recommend by next fall the three sites for detailed study.

Following the studies, the president must by March 1987 choose the site for the first repository, a deep underground mine where high-level nuclear waste would be stored for thousands of years.

Seven sites have been under consideration in Texas, Utah, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Bennett said the department had originally hoped to propose three of them for nomination before the hearings, to complement the two sites proposed in Washington and Nevada. But he said final guidelines for the site selection process have not been completed.

"We had been prepared to make a recommendation (on three sites) earlier until it became clear to us that the process laid out by the (law) really required us to wait until we had the guidelines, and rightly so," said Bennett.

So he said hearings would be held to receive comment on all seven sites and a decision made on which to nominate after the site selection guidelines are finalized.

The sites are in Swisher County and Deaf Smith County in Texas, at Davis Canyon and Lavender Canyon in Utah, at the Richton Salt Dome and the Cypress Creek Salt Dome in Mississippi, and the Vacherie Salt Dome in Louisiana, Bennett said.

He said the hearings have been tentatively scheduled for April 25 in Tulsa and Hereford and April 26 in Austin, Texas; April 28 in Richton and April 29 in Jackson, Miss.; May 3 in Monticello and May 4 in Salt Lake City, Utah; and May 10 in Minden, La.

In Texas, the energy department has delayed action on a recommendation by a private contractor that a 16-square mile area of Deaf Smith County be proposed for nomination, Bennett said.

Bennett said the department had been prepared to accept the recommendation but changed course after Texas objected that more time was needed before reaching a decision. He said Texas wanted broader areas of both Deaf Smith and Swisher counties considered during the hearings.

Well, they caught him, now, who is he...?

Pampa police are still trying to identify a suspected burglar they arrested Monday. A man giving his name as Alvin Johnson, and reportedly of 904 Varnon was caught by patrolmen as he was taking a dark bag from a mobile home Monday.

But Pampa police say the name and address didn't check out, and they are still attempting to identify the 32-year-old man through his fingerprints. He will be formally charged with burglary of a residence.

Police officers received a call from a neighbor at approximately 10:15 a.m. reporting suspicious activity at 829 S. Barnes. When Sergeant Charles Love and Patrolmen Danny Lance and Richard Pack arrived at the scene, they saw Johnson coming out of the mobile home. Police said Johnson dropped the bag, containing several unidentified items, and dove under the mobile home. After some coaxing by the officers, Johnson came out from under the mobile home.

Entry to the mobile home was gained by prying open a door, reports say. The home is the residence of Mary McClain Worley, who was out of town at the time of the burglary.

A sellout

That is what Congressman Jack Hightower termed the National Restaurant Association's failure to lobby against the new "Tip Tax." Hightower met with representatives of area restaurants late Monday evening in Amarillo.

Pledging to support repeal of the law, Hightower further said "I am in favor of tax avoidance but not tax evasion. It is unfair to say that there is one class of people that does this or that, everybody in that class of people does it. That is wrong and that is a presumption that has resulted in the way this tax is applied."

Weather

Tonight will be clear and cold with the low in the low 30s and light and variable winds. Wednesday will be fair and warmer with the high in the upper 60s and southerly winds at 10 to 15 mph. Monday's high temperature was 58, and the overnight low was 39.

This year, make the old homestead pretty

Does your house need paint? Do you need more room for a growing family or business? Would you like to put brick or siding on your home or business? Is landscaping needed in your yard?

The Neighborhood Revitalization Committee of the Pampa Board of Realtors is sponsoring its second annual incentive contest to encourage people to make exterior improvements on their homes or yards. The Realtors will take "before" and "after" pictures free of charge for contestants.

To enter the contest, residents must be making exterior improvements to their property and have the work completed by September 15. Judging will be done by Revitalization Committee members and will be done during the last two weeks of September.

For the contest, the city will be divided into seven geographical sections: northeast, northwest, central east, central, central west, southeast and southwest. There will also be a category for businesses making improvements. A first prize will be awarded in each category, and honorable mentions in each category will also be recognized.

Jurors convict three New Orleans policemen

By TERRY LEONARD

DALLAS (AP) — New Orleans police Sgt. John McKenzie wept and consoled his sobbing wife after jurors convicted him and two other officers of conspiracy and violating the civil rights of a black man who claimed police beat him.

The all-white jury acquitted four other officers Monday. The seven policemen had been accused of brutally interrogating five people, three of them black, about the killing of a white patrolman in the Algiers section of New Orleans.

Prosecutors said after the verdicts were read that "justice had been served," and that the jury sent a message to the New Orleans police department.

But astonished defense attorneys said they were bewildered by the jurors' decision to convict officers Dale Bonura, Stephen Farrar and McKenzie on the same testimony they used to acquit detectives Ronald Brink and Thomas R. Woodall and officers Richard LeBlanc and Stephen Rebol.

"I find it unbelievable that they can look at the same evidence and acquit some and convict others," said defense lawyer Walter Rothschild. "It's illogical that the jurors can believe and disbelieve the same parts of the testimony."

McKenzie, Bonura and Farrar could be sentenced May 19 to a maximum 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine on the felony charge of conspiring to assault, intimidate and threaten Algiers residents questioned about the killing of Neupert.

They face a year in prison and a $1,000 fine on a misdemeanor charge of violating the civil rights of Robert Davis by beating and assaulting him.

"It's obviously a compromise verdict and it is ripe for appeal," said defense attorney Ralph Capitelli, who represented McKenzie.

Prosecutors had contended the seven officers were criminally overzealous in pursuit of Neupert's killer, that they "were willing to take any information at any cost."

"Civil rights cases are very important and have an impact in a community," said prosecutor Michael Johnson. "This verdict sent a message to New Orleans that they have a problem, or that they had one in November of 1980."

"New Orleans needs this story told. Hopefully, they (police) can take this and proceed on it," said prosecutor Glenn Burns.

Four blacks were killed by police during a crackdown in the Algiers section that came in the aftermath of Neupert's slaying. No charges were filed in connection with the deaths. But the controversy prompted the police superintendent and his top lieutenant to resign.

"I'm happy about the verdict considering this is Dallas and this was an all-white jury," said Mary Singleton Byrd, the sister of Sherry Singleton, one of the four to die in the police crackdown.

The defense argued that Davis, Clarence Green and Johnny Brownlee, who are black, and brothers Raymond and Ervin Hughes, who are white, lied about being beaten to hide their cooperation with police from drug pushers and others on the streets of New Orleans' West Bank.

The jury, which deliberated for more than 2½ days, reached its verdict just hours after it sent a message to U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer, saying it had been unable to reach a verdict and needed further direction.

Buchmeyer gently lectured the panel about its duty, told dissenting jurors to re-examine their position, cautioned them not to yield any conscientious opinion, but to try once again to reach a verdict.

The verdict stunned the defendants, their families and a contingent of New Orleans police officers gathered in the hushed gallery.

Farrar, 31, stared blankly around the courtroom and hugged his sobbing wife.

Animals down, prices up at show

The Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show and sale held here March 12-16 was a resounding success, according to Floyd Sackett of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. The total of 456 entries was 181 less than the number of entries in 1982. Of the 456, 317 were in the 1983 sale, as compared to 371 in 1982.

However, superintendent Clyde Carruth and assistant superintendent Jim Greene, said they felt the show was a success, because the average purchase price was up from last year, although floor prices were down. Lambs were the only exception to the floor price drop.

The average calf brought $1,236, the average barrow brought $336.61, and the average lamb brought $264.76. The show and sale encompasses the seven northeastern counties of the Texas Panhandle and is the last sale of the year in this area. The total sales for the show make it one of the largest in the tri-state area.

Business people were responsible for 65 percent of the total sales at this year's show. Without the backing and support of these business people, the sale would not be nearly as successful and it would not bring as many people into the community.

"We are very grateful to the merchants of the Panhandle, but particularly to the merchants of Pampa for their fine support of the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Sale. We would also like to express our appreciation to the members of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Agriculture Committee and all the volunteers who spent thousands of hours in preparation for carrying out and finishing such a successful sale," said Ed Sweet, president of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

In 1983, 52 calves were entered in the show, compared to 92 in 1982.

How about starting a snake farm...?

BEAVER, Okla. (AP) - The federal government is selling about 60 acres of public land this week, but a couple of parcels might be hard to homestead.

The sale, scheduled Thursday in this Panhandle town, features one parcel a mile long but only 2.64 feet wide. The other is 2.5 miles long and only 50 feet wide.

Federal officials estimate a fair price for the one 2 1/2 feet wide would be $10 while the other can go for $500.

The sale is part of a program to get rid of 8,500 acres owned by the Bureau of Land Management.

in 1982. The average 1983 price per calf was $1,236.13, up from the 1982 price of $1,158.50. Floor prices dropped $2 in 1983, from the 1982 price of $67.00 per hundredweight (CWT).

Pig entries were down 124 from 1982 to 1983, with 333 entered in 1982, and 209 entered in 1983. The average price per pig remained the same, with $336.69 the 1982 average, and $336.61 the 1983 average. Floor prices dropped about a dollar from 1982 to 1983. In 1982 the floor price was $48.25 per CWT, and in 1983 it was $47.50 per CWT.

Only 17 fewer lambs were entered in 1983 than 1982, with 212 entered in 1982 and 195 entered in 1983. The average price per lamb was about the same in both years. The average 1982 price was $265.29, and the 1983 average was $264.76. Floor prices on lambs went up from $55.00 per CWT in 1982 to $61.00 per CWT in 1983.

The total sales of the 1983 show was $132,230.83, down $22,465.77 from 1982.

Home free

Gina Strickland, left, shouting "I Love You, America!" arrived home to Texas with her boyfriend Berni Hofstadter Monday at Hobby Airport in Houston after being released from prison in Cuba earlier in the day. U.S. Congressman Mickey Leland, center rear, flew to Cuba for talks with Fidel Castro to arrange the release of the Brownsville couple who had been held there since November. (AP Laserphoto)

Couple freed from Cuban prison planning wedding

HOUSTON (AP) — An airplane crash and 148 days in Cuban prisons interrupted their courtship and ruined plans for a December wedding, but Gina Strickland and Berni Hofstadter were free today and planning a wedding.

Miss Strickland, 22, and Hofstadter, 29, both of Brownsville, arrived by private jet at a Houston airport Monday afternoon after a four-hour flight from Cuba. They were released to U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, after the Congressman met with Cuban Premier Fidel Castro over the weekend.

"I love you, America!" shouted Miss Strickland after she and Hofstadter stepped onto U.S. soil. They both fell to the runway to kiss the concrete and were immediately enveloped by more than a dozen relatives.

"This is the happiest day of my life," shouted Hofstadter.

The couple was arrested after their small plane crashed in Cuba on Nov. 12 during a flight from Grand Cayman to Miami. They were forced to sign confessions of drug trafficking and spent 43 days in solitary confinement, they said.

Cuban officials repeatedly promised their release, said Hofstadter.

"If you've been in Cuba you would understand that you can't believe anything until you see it happen. It's a land of manana (tomorrow)," he said. "They always said 'tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow' and we saw 148 tomorrows."

Asked about the couple's immediate plans, Hofstadter said, "Get married and raise a family and live happily ever after."

They couple, who plan to wed next month, said they would have been married last December, but instead spent most of that month in solitary confinement in Cuba. The sweethearts were separated throughout their imprisonment for all but a few minutes.

"The only time we saw each other was on her birthday, Dec. 7, and that was only for 15 minutes," said Hofstadter.

Leland, who helped in the 1979 release of American prisoners and again last year, said the Cubans were "forthright and cooperative with us" in arranging the release of the couple.

The congressman said he and his party "were treated with courtesy and dealt with in a spirit of extreme cooperation."

Leland said he met with Castro for about two hours and also discussed the release of another Texan, Neal Nichols, 29, of El Paso. Nichols was a passenger in a small plane that crashed in Cuba 26 months ago and the congressman said he has been sentenced to six years in prison. Leland said he is "convinced" Castro will release Nichols soon.

The congressman said he and his staff are "digging down" to pay most of the $5,000 cost of fuel and pilots' fees it took to affect the release. He said the use of the airplane to return Miss Strickland and Hofstadter was donated.

Hofstadter said Cuban authorities gave him and Miss Strickland a choice of confessing to one of two crimes — one for drug trafficking and one saying they were working for the Central Intelligence Agency. The CIA confession carried a sentence of "20 to 30 years," he said, and the drug charge only "four or five days."

They signed the drug confessions, but Hofstadter said he noted beside his signature that it was "under duress."

Both adamantly denied they were smuggling drugs.

Hofstadter said he and Miss Strickland had flown from Brownsville to Jamaica on a business and pleasure trip. He said they started back from Jamaica, made a stop in Grand Cayman and were trying to reach Miami when their rented airplane developed engine problems.

"We landed late at night — about 9:30 — in a sugar cane field," said Hofstadter. They grabbed their luggage and left the scene, he said, and hid for four or five hours after seeing people with weapons.

Later, he said, they found a road and tried to hitch a ride. When they came to a sign, he struck his lighter and realized the sign was in Spanish.

"It was only then that we knew we were in Cuba," said Hofstadter. They turned themselves over to authorities.

Emotional plea opens Blue Law battle

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1983 battle of the Blue Law opened with echoes of arguments from years gone by, plus an emotional plea by a man who blames his daughter's death on the "monkeys" pushing for legalized Sunday shopping.

Harold Marshall, a Dallas salesman, said the forces working for repeal of the Blue Law are "raping our school system" by making students work late and weekend hours. "These monkeys are working kids unconscionable hours," he told the House Committee on State Affairs on Monday.

The committee is looking at several bills aimed at repealing the law banning the sale of 42 items on both days of a weekend. As in past years, witnesses for repeal said the 1961 law is an unfair restriction on free trade, and witnesses who like the law said it provides a needed day of rest.

Despite testimony that no employees would be forced to work Sundays if the stores opened, Marshall said workers — particularly students — would have no choice. He said his 16-year-old daughter died in a car wreck after being forced to work late hours in a Dallas supermarket. "These yahoos would run over their own grandmothers for a dollar," he said of the anti-Blue Law forces.

"There's ample hours to shop now. Who is having trouble finding enough time to spend money?" he asked. Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, said he got his repeal bill to the House floor in 1981, where it was narrowly defeated. This year, armed with an impressive fiscal note, he's trying a local option repeal bill. Comptroller Bob Bullock's fiscal note on the Ceverha bill says legalized Sunday shopping would raise $28 million in sales tax in the next two years, even if shopping was legalized only in urban and border counties.

Despite the impressive prediction, Ceverha said, "Right now, we don't have the votes" to get his bill out of committee. All the Blue Law repeal bills were referred to a subcommittee Monday.

Committee member Gene Green, D-Houston, said Blue Law opponents should concentrate on revision rather than repeal, because, "Repeal is probably not going to happen this session and maybe not next session." Anti-Blue Law witnesses — including a judge who ruled unconstitutional — said the law is archaic.

State District Judge De Brown Walker of Dallas, who struck down the law, called it a "continual irritant to the people" of a "24-hour seven-day society." Walker's ruling is on appeal, a process that could drag on for two years.

Insanity would be tougher to prove

AUSTIN (AP) — A criminal defendant would have to prove he was "severely" mentally ill and did not know his actions were wrong before a jury could acquit him on insanity under a bill approved by the Senate on Monday.

Currently, a defendant can try to prove either that he did not know his actions were wrong or that he was incapable of conforming his behavior to the law in question, a difference that led defense lawyers to oppose Sen. Ray Farabee's proposal.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, acknowledged that John Hinckley's attempted assassination of President Reagan "certainly heightened" interest in an insanity bill.

Hinckley was found not guilty by reason of insanity in the shooting of the president.

"Your bill would make it more difficult to prove insanity," said Sen. Tati Santeestaban, D-El Paso. "That's right," replied Farabee.

The Senate adopted an amendment with Farabee's approval that would prohibit telling a juror what the consequences would be if a verdict of "not guilty by reason of insanity" was returned.

The Senate sent Farabee's bill to the House on voice vote in apparent preference over another measure that would have abolished the insanity plea in criminal cases.

Farabee's bill also would allow judges to keep up with defendants found not guilty because of insanity.

When he shot oilman

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A former police captain broke down and cried several times on the witness stand as he described shooting an oilman he witnessed having sexual intercourse with his wife.

L.R. Wynne testified Monday that he "was out of mind" after witnessing his wife, Margie, and shooting victim Erle Winston Mathis, 63, making love in Mathis' truck along a country road.

Mathis was gunned down in his pickup truck Oct. 15 as he waited for a traffic light to change at a busy downtown Amarillo intersection.

Wynne, who testified he shot Mathis after confirming suspicions that his wife was having an affair with the oilman, is pleading innocent by reason of insanity.

Mrs. Wynne testified Monday that she and Mathis had been having an affair intermittently since 1969, and said they were unaware that her husband had seen them.

Wynne said he had seen Mathis following his wife on several occasions and suspected they were having an affair.

He tried to confirm the suspicion Oct. 14, told his family he was going to Houston for a convention, drove to the Amarillo airport, rented a car and unsuccessfully tried to follow his wife after work, he said.

The next day, he followed her to a hospital parking lot where he said she met Mathis, got into his truck and drove with him to a road on land he owned outside the city. Wynne said he followed them in the rented car, parked near the entrance of the land, and walked to within 25 feet of Mathis' truck.

"I saw my wife and the deceased having intercourse and necking," Wynne said. "I observed the scene for a few seconds ... I turned and started running back to the car. My heart started hurting real bad. I thought I was having a heart attack."

Wynne said he then drove back to Amarillo where he waited for Mathis. When Mathis pulled up to the traffic light, Wynne walked pulled out a .38-caliber pistol and walked to the passenger-side window.

"When he saw me, he panicked," Wynne said. "I can't describe the look on his face. He screamed out, 'He had made a mistake. I screamed, 'You did make a mistake. You sorry son of a bitch.'"

"I shot him through the passenger window."

Authorities look for link in car bombings

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two car bombs have exploded in an affluent San Antonio neighborhood in the space of a week, but investigators say they may be "random" incidents and not linked.

The second bomb went off shortly after midnight Sunday, destroying a car owned by U.S. Rep. Bill Archer, a Houston Republican.

Archer's son had parked the car near the San Antonio Country Club, and the vehicle was empty when the device detonated, Chief Arson Investigator Larry Foraker said.

The first car bomb exploded a block away the Sunday before, in the parking lot of a tightly secured condominium complex.

No one was injured either time. Investigators have noted similarities between the bombings, but believe the second incident may be "a random thing," Foraker said Monday.

After the first car bomb exploded, a security guard reported receiving telephone calls from an unidentified man who said: "I'll get you all."

No threatening calls followed the bombing of Archer's car, arson investigator Santiago Garcia said.

He said little evidence has been recovered from either vehicle.

"All we've got are samples of the material that was scattered all over when the bomb went off," Garcia said.

"Some of that could be trash. We don't even know what type of device it was," he said.

Archer's Chevrolet Camaro bore congressional license plates, which may have attracted the person who placed the bomb, Foraker said.

The car had been driven by Archer's son, Richard, daughter Elizabeth and Richard's fiancée, Carol Kelly, to a wedding reception at the country club.

"I guess if there were other bombings in the neighborhood, this might look like a fun car to bomb with congressional license plates," Richard Archer told The San Antonio Light early Sunday.

The FBI and federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms also are investigating the bombings.

"Whatever was left of the bomb is pretty much what we've got," FBI spokesman Patrick Crowley said Monday. "I'm not going to comment further than that."

New look at the Mideast imperative

While the U.S., in its role as an honest broker in the Middle East, has been negotiating the removal of Israeli, Syrian, and Palestinian armies from Lebanon, the Soviet Union has quietly insinuated itself into that ravaged country.

Monday in Washington, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger described the dimensions of this highly complicating new menace. He warned that Syria has become "another outpost of the Soviet Union," with thousands of Soviet military personnel operating and defending SAM-5 missile batteries that now pose a threat to the U.S. Mediterranean fleet as well as to Israeli air operations. Never before have the Soviets deployed their sophisticated, high-altitude missile outside the U.S.S.R.

This provocative and destabilizing buildup culminates a massive Soviet resupply of military hardware to Syria, a long-time Russian client and near-satellite, following heavy losses of material during Israel's invasion last year of Lebanon. Its sinister significance is that the Soviets have dealt themselves a major new hand in the Middle East. A heavy price will have to be paid before the Soviets agree, if ever, to a Syrian pullout from Lebanon.

With Syria, as Weinberger says, a Soviet outpost, American diplomatic efforts to rid Lebanon of military occupation by foreign forces appear to be increasingly bleak. The Israelis have not fought a war to liberate themselves from the PLO threat in Lebanon only to withdraw and turn the country back to Syria and the PLO, which is to say to Soviet domination. Even if they were willing to do so, a unilateral Israeli withdrawal would not be in our best interest.

And, whatever else may be said, handing Lebanon back to the Syrians and the PLO would be an intolerable tragedy for the Lebanese, who have suffered more than 100,000 killed and a million uprooted under those occupiers since 1975.

A heavy Soviet presence in Syria and consequently in Lebanon should stimulate some broad rethinking of Arab of Arab as well as Israeli and American positions. Arab insistence that Israel withdraw completely from Lebanon as precondition to negotiations on the future of the occupied West Bank has clearly been overtaken by events and is unrealistic. It freezes the Arab-Israeli peace process.

The goal of ridding Lebanon of all foreign forces has been bedrock U.S. policy, and rightly so, since the Israeli invasion made this possible. That basic aim should be pursued, despite Soviet intervention. But clearly the single-minded Arab and American policy of pressuring Israel to withdraw from Lebanon, thereby abandoning the Lebanese to their enemies, appears to be increasingly imprudent. The time is at hand, therefore, for the U.S. to undertake a new consensus with its Arab friends and Israel.

Reagan concludes, 'America believes in God'

By William A. Rusher

NEW YORK (NEA) — A careful study of President Reagan's address to the National Association of Evangelicals in Orlando a couple of weeks ago is absolutely central to any understanding of the man or his presidency. As a matter of fact, it goes even further, shedding light on the fundamental nature of American society and inviting consideration of various problems that are still open. It will be quoted and studied long after the Reagan administration itself has passed into history.

The central proposition of the speech is Mr. Reagan's declaration that "We" — meaning the American people — "will never abandon our belief in God." He makes it clear that there is nothing in the least sectarian about this position; he explicitly condemns anti-Semitism and all other forms of "bigotry and prejudice." But he is insistent about the basic assertion, pointing out that "The Declaration of Independence mentions the Supreme Being no less than four times; 'In God We Trust' is engraved on our coinage; the Supreme Court opens its proceedings with a religious invocation; and the members of Congress open their sessions with a prayer." No one in this country is required to believe in God, but — as a collectivity — the country does.

Such a position would by itself have been quite enough to get Mr. Reagan in trouble with the atheists, as well as with that arguably distinguishable segment of the population that is made acutely uncomfortable by any public reference to the Deity, especially on the part of a president. But Mr. Reagan promptly went further, unhesitatingly inferring specific policy guidelines from that central societal commitment. He wants children to be allowed (not required) to pray in the public schools. He believes that if the federal government is going to dispense free contraceptives to minors it should be obliged to notify their parents, so the latter can play the advisory role that is a parent's prerogative. He opposes the federal funding of abortions "unless and until it can be proven that the unborn child is not a living entity."

Worse yet, from the standpoint of those for whom God has no role in the formulation of public policy, Mr. Reagan avowedly shapes not only his domestic initiative but his concept of the world beyond our shores in the light of the American society's commitment to God. In particular, he declares that as long as the Soviet leaders "preach the supremacy of the state, declare its omnipotence over individual man, and predict its eventual domination of all peoples of the earth — they are the focus of evil in the modern world."

It was all too much for columnist Anthony Lewis. "Primitive," he raged — that is the only word for it... What must the leaders of Western Europe think of such a speech?... What must Soviet leaders think? However one detests their system, the world's survival depends ultimately on mutual restraint. What confidence can they have in the restraint of an American leader with such an outlook?"

Here, however, Lewis is going much too far. If Yuri Andropov is half as keen a student of the free world as his own propagandists have cracked him up to be, he is well aware that the Judaeo-Christian ethic prohibits all aggressive war. Moreover, in Mr. Reagan's speech itself the relevant distinction is clearly drawn: "I intend to do everything I can to persuade (Soviet leaders) of our peaceful intent; to remind them that it was the West that refused to use its nuclear monopoly in the '40s and '50s for territorial gain and which now proposes 50 percent cuts in strategic ballistic missiles and the elimination of an entire class of land-based intermediate-range nuclear missiles. At the same time, however, they must be made to understand we will never compromise our principles and standards. We will never give away our freedom. We will never abandon our belief in God."

That is not a platform — probably there is none — on which every last American citizen could comfortably agree to stand. But it is one that has, I believe, the enthusiastic support of the vast majority of the American people, and in reclaiming it Ronald Reagan stands forth more clearly than ever as their leader.

America needs some confidence

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

After many months of grim economic news, the American economy shows signs of picking up. The major economic indicators suggest that a recovery is under way. The extent of the recovery depends very much on an intangible factor, the mood of the American people. Consumer confidence — the willingness of people to go out and purchase durable goods — will set the pace of the recovery.

Many observers believe that a measure of consumer confidence is returning. The surge in home buying is the most cheering indicator of this confidence.

Americans ought not to expect too much. As one major financial institution notes, 1983 will see a slight upturn but vigorous expansion will not take place for many years — probably not within the decade because of the effects of a massive restructuring of the world economy have yet to be absorbed. Certainly, there will be no swift return to the economic growth of the 1960s.

Business and industry in the U.S. are in the midst of a technological revolution. Old industries are continuing to run down, with resulting unemployment. However, new high technology companies are being developed very rapidly, with a great deal of venture capital going into new processes and products. It is this pattern of investment which promises a high level of economic activity in future.

To reach that level, it might be advisable for the U.S. government to conduct a massive survey of all U.S. manufacturing activity. Historians will recall that such a survey was conceived and carried out by Alexander Hamilton, President Washington's secretary of the treasury, at the beginning of the new federal government.

Americans would profit from a new, overall appraisal. The public isn't fully aware of what has happened to U.S. manufacturing in the past 20 years. For example, in 1962, the U.S. imported a total of $7.6 billion worth of manufactured goods. In 1981, the total was $143 billion, an increase of almost 2000 percent in 20 years. In the same period, our manufactured exports increased from $13.6 billion to $154.2 billion.

America's effort to regain lost prosperity is being conducted in a dismal global environment. Many countries carry a staggering burden of debt. They are looking to the U.S. to provide new credit. The American people and Congress need a clearer view of foreign credit demands in the perspective of the credit needs of American manufacturers who create jobs.

While there is some cheering on the economic horizon, the era of painful adjustment is not over for workers and managers. Intelligent decisions will have to be made in the business world and in government in order to regain prosperity at a satisfactory rate.

Look who's coming to city hall

By PAUL HARVEY

Chicago: Look who's coming to City Hall! The candidate most likely to be your next mayor is a black man.

So what? Harold Washington was a boomerang. It was never intended that he be nominated.

Supporters of Chicago's Mayor Jane Byrne enticed Congressman Washington to enter the race expecting thus to dilute support for her opponent, Dick Daley. Instead, the black Congressman siphoned off support from both white candidates and suddenly he is it!

Their strategy is to divert enough Democratic support in the next convention to bargain at least for second place on the national ticket.

Ambitious Jesse Jackson would like to be the nominee; experienced Tom Bradley or Andy Young are more likely.

Now... As black Chicago voters rallied behind a black Democrat in the primary, might whites rally behind Republican in Arpil?

That would be Bernard Epton, a lackluster lawyer who was never expected to win. After all, it's been 50 years since Chicago has had a Republican mayor.

And the Democrats' machine remains awesome. Nonetheless, it's going to be what Alben Barkley used to call a real "whittlecute."

Chicago is the most geographically segregated city in our nation. As blacks flocked around Washington whites might flock around Epton.

Last month, two-thirds of the city's voters for white candidates. If they vote that way next month, they will elect Epton.

Either way, look who's coming to City Hall!

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, March 29, the 88th day of 1983. There are 277 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 29, 1973, the last American troops left South Vietnam, ending the United States' direct military role in the Vietnam War.

On this date:

In 1847, American forces under General Winifred Scott occupied Vera Cruz, Mexico.

In 1867, the British North America Act established the Dominion of Canada.

In 1943, World War II meat rationing began in the United States.

And, in 1951, the Chinese government rejected a U.S. offer for truce talks in Korea.

Five years ago: The Italian government received a letter from kidnapped Former Prime Minister Aldo Moro urging the government to offer to negotiate his release with his abductors.

Today's birthdays: Former Minnesota Senator Eugene McCarthy is 67. Entertainer Pearl Bailey is 65.

Neither way will the world come to an end. You have watched political evolution in Los Angeles and Atlanta, in Detroit and Newark, New Orleans and Gary, Indiana.

Black Mayors appear to have administered that office with neither more dexterity nor less.

However, candidates prefer to downplay the race issue, it's there. Yet, I see no evidence that prejudice predisposes black politicians.

On the contrary... black mayors may be able more effectively to deal with crime and welfare problems.

Whites might benefit more under a black mayor who is determined to be fair than under a white mayor who feels he must placate minorities.

Mother reunited with her newborn son

DALLAS (AP) — Harold DeShon Patterson was unfazed by the excitement surrounding his first week of life.

He slept peacefully through the chaos of Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, the bright television lights and the hugs of his mother, from whose arms he had been kidnapped four days earlier.

"He looks perfect, just perfect," Gretchel Patterson said after her son was placed in her arms.

FBI agents and Dallas police flew Harold back to Texas Monday afternoon from Lawton, Okla., where he was found in an apartment shortly after 7 a.m.

Two women — one in Lawton and one in Dallas — remained jailed today in lieu of $20,000 bond each on federal kidnapping charges.

The FBI accused Norma Jo Smith of Lawton of being the woman who masqueraded as a nurse to take the baby from his mother's arms last week at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Neighbors became suspicious about her new baby, because she had not appeared to be pregnant, and called authorities, said Oklahoma City FBI agent Gene Pogue. Her husband — with whom she had no children — was not arrested.

Yvonne Nelson, 25, also arrested Monday morning at her Dallas home, "arranged the whole deal," said Dallas police Sgt. Jack Clower.

"She waited in the car ... and took the woman with the baby to Oklahoma. She furnished the transportation," he said.

"I don't know if they are friends or related or what," he added.

Others who were taken into custody at the same house where Ms. Nelson was arrested later were released as material witnesses, Clower said.

The boy was examined at Comanche County Hospital in Lawton, where doctors said he was in good condition.

Lizzie Patterson, the boy's grandmother, was flown here with her daughter from the elder woman's East Texas home.

"For a while, I thought I'd never see him again," the Palestine woman said of her grandson. "People told me there was a black market for babies."

But the baby's 18-year-old mother never gave up. "I hoped that I would get my baby back," she said.

The Pattersons said they learned the boy had been found when a relative saw television reports in Dallas and called them.

Mrs. Patterson said she held no grudge against the woman who took her grandson.

"I feel like the lady might be sick and need help," she said.

The mother, who is unemployed, said she wanted to forget about her son's kidnapping and "love him and take care of him the best I can."

Why consumer credit is so costly

NEW YORK (AP) — High interest rates on consumer loans aren't a conspiracy to defraud the ordinary person. Neither are they kept artificially high in an attempt by banks to cover foreign loan losses.

You'll get hot arguments about such assertions. You'll get them from credit card holders who pay 18.2 percent on average, auto loan holders who pay 14 percent to 16 percent, and politicians who fear high rates will kill economic recovery.

You will not get an argument from A. Charlene Sullivan, associate professor at Purdue University's Credit Research Center. There is no mystery to the high rates, she says. No conspiracy either, she adds.

The main reason for high rates, she contends, is that lenders' costs remain high. Their expenses, she says, consist mainly of operating costs, credit losses and the price of re-lendable money.

She said operating costs — obtaining credit reports, monitoring loans, collecting payments — account for 25 percent of consumer installment loan costs at large banks, and one-third of the cost at smaller institutions.

At large commercial banks, she said, bad-debt losses in 1981 were about 5 percent of installment loan costs and 11 percent of bank credit card costs. Since then, she believes, the percentages have risen.

Most people can accept the explanation to this point, but beyond it they become confused or suspicious.

Why, they ask, should a borrower pay 18 or 19 percent or more on a relatively small consumer loan while the prime rate on huge loans to top corporations is only 10.5 percent?

One explanation, Mrs. Sullivan says, lies in the length of the loans. Most prime rate loans, she estimates, are for less than a year. An auto loan might run three or four years.

The cost of short-term money is lower than the cost of long-term money. That is, the cost to the banks for short-term money to cover short-term loans is lower than the cost of long-term money to cover long-term loans.

The situation results in part from economic uncertainty. The short term is easier to predict. The long-term outlook is more difficult; it is riskier, and therefore more costly.

But Mrs. Sullivan concedes there is another factor. Banks and other creditors, she says, hesitate to change consumer loan rates quickly or often because of the expenses involved.

"If a bank has 5,000 credit cards outstanding, truth-in-lending laws require the bank to send out 5,000 letters notifying the cardholders each time it wanted to lower or raise rates," she said.

Dear Abby

Teenager fears runaway romance -

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and my boyfriend is 15, and our parents are good friends, so we see a lot of each other. Please don't think I'm a little slut, but I am getting very close to going all the way. I guess I am very passionate for my age, but I can't see anything wrong with kissing and hugging and touching if you feel like it. It's what it leads to that scares me. I am still a virgin (I think), and I intend to keep my virginity as long as possible.

I have read letters from your readers who said they actually got pregnant without going all the way, and that scares me. We have gone too far already, and we can't go back to holding hands now. I know I'm going too fast for my own good, and I feel guilty.

Give me a good lecture if you think it will help.

FOURTEEN AND ONLY HUMAN

DEAR FOURTEEN: You are wise and intelligent to recognize the seriousness of your predicament. You and your boyfriend should see less of each other, and then only in circumstances that will minimize the temptation. Too much togetherness often places a superhuman burden on young and fiery passions.

Your feelings are normal, but, unfortunately, at 14 you can't afford to fully express them.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I'm crazy, but I'm a 44-year-old woman who has been madly in love with a 25-year-old man for the last five months. J. has never been married, but I have been married three times. (Widowed once and divorced twice.) I have three grown children who accept our situation because they have never seen me so happy in all my life! Abby, I never knew what love was all about until I met this beautiful, sensitive, caring man. When we are out together, people look at us like we're a little weird. Why won't society accept us? If I were 25 and J. were 44, nobody would think a thing of it.

Do you think we can make a go of marriage? J. is kind and gentle, and as mature as a man of 50. Besides, he makes me happy.

SITTING ON TOP OF THE WORLD

DEAR SITTING: Be less concerned with what "society" thinks and more concerned with what each of you can bring to a marriage. Being madly in love for five months classifies you as "honeymooners." Your chances for making a go of marriage would be better if you tested your love with a long engagement.

DEAR ABBY: I get my hair shampooed and set once a week at a beauty shop I have patronized for a long time. I also have my fingernails manicured there.

The young woman who gives me my manicures lights one cigarette after another during my manicure. I am not the type to complain, but it bothers me to be so close to someone who is smoking.

Should I tell her I am allergic to smoke? I don't want to upset her as she is a very nice person otherwise.

TIMID IN FORT WORTH

DEAR TIMID: Most smokers assume that their smoking is inoffensive unless they are told otherwise. If you tell a "nice person" that her smoking bothers you, she will graciously refrain from smoking in your presence.

You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on Popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Seating also is for sleep

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

If you could find a moderately-priced chair or sofa that turned into a bed with a flip of the wrist and was light enough to be moved easily from room to room would you buy it?

Recently, more Americans have been answering "yes" and purchasing flexible foam seating that converts into a sleep surface by unfolding flat.

The seating comes in a variety of styles, sizes and fabrics and seems appropriate in today's smaller homes where it can accommodate an occasional overnight guest as well as provide informal, moveable seating.

As a new category of furniture, flip-out foam chairs and sofas are usually not displayed in the traditional upholstered furniture department. Instead, look for them in casual contemporary specialty stores and in mail-order catalogs.

Furthermore, since the seating differs from traditional construction, the familiar guidelines for judging quality — such as stuffing material and type of springs — do not apply.

There are two ways of constructing all-foam seating. One is to use a piece of foam so dense and thick that it is capable of standing on its own. The other is to employ several foams in a variety of densities and compressions — softer at the seating surface for comfort and harder in areas that provide the chair's structure.

Some manufacturers use only foam to construct the pieces, while others also employ materials such as particleboard, cellulose fiber or metal rails to provide additional structure.

Shoppers will find a wide variety of available designs. There are armless and armed chairs as well as settees and sofas that open into single, double, queen- or king-size sleeping surfaces.

Some design are similar to wood-framed modular seating or sofas and suitable for formal areas. Others resemble a stack of pillows and are plainly meant only for a casual setting.

Some flip-out foam chairs convert to both lounge and sleeping positions. A few units sleep at regular height, though most are only about 6 inches off the floor when opened out into a bed. Some of the larger units make up into one large bed or two singles, which provides more flexibility in sleeping arrangements.

Since there is such variety, shoppers may have to investigate the offerings at several outlets to see a full range of products.

Upholstery fabrics on the furniture tend toward tightly-woven materials such as cotton duck or canvas, corduroy, nylon parachute cloth and cotton prints.

Quilted treatments that have some give and don't need to be tightly tailored look well, since it is impossible to pull the fabric tight and staple it to the frame the way some upholstered furniture makers do, according to one manufacturer.

Some companies offer fabrics that are treated with a stain repellent, a good option to look for, since most covers are not removable and must be dry-cleaned on the chair when they get dirty. Removable covers are an option on some more expensive models.

Cancer Society plans 1983 neighborhood crusade

It has been said that education is the gift of life. In continued support of this philosophy, the American Cancer Society plans to hold its annual crusade April 17-19.

The crusade educates the general public to signs and treatments of different kinds of cancer and solicits donations for further cancer research and to provide services to cancer patients.

Many Gray County cancer patients have benefited from the crusade donations through sickroom and comfort equipment, transportation to Amarillo for treatment and guidance and rehabilitation.

Pat Leach and Sharon Dodd have volunteered as the 1983 residential co-chairmen. "Our goal is to reach every single neighborhood in Pampa with our literature; and we hope to gain donations to this great cause," Dodd said.

The American Cancer Society relies on volunteer help.

"Currently we have quite a few area chairmen volunteers. Area chairmen find people to walk their assigned neighborhood to distribute literature and collect donations. However we still need area chairmen in the Baker, Lamar and Horace Mann districts," said Leach.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer can contact the co-chairmen at 665-7082 or 665-6370.

Expert's RX for bugs:

Use pesticides only as needed

By JAMES E. WALTERS
Associated Press Writer
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — People shouldn't be afraid to use pesticides when necessary, but the need should be there without question, says University of Arizona expert George Ware.

"While we can't do without chemical controls, if the need is not there don't disturb the balance of the equation," he cautioned recently in an interview based on his definitive new book, "Pesticides: Theory and Application."

A one-time Arkansas farm boy, the 55-year-old Ware is head of the U-of-A's Department of Entomology. He has a doctorate in entomology and plant pathology and a background of 32 years' research on the subjects. An earlier book was long a standard text in agricultural colleges.

In the new book, Ware calls for an "intelligent man's pest control," or integrated pest management.

"I don't think, quite honestly, that even our grandchildren will be without the chemicals," he said. "Once you reach an economic loss condition, or economic threshold, there is nothing that will do the job except something that reduces the pest numbers immediately, and the only materials — the only condition that will do that — is to introduce a toxin of some sort.

"You can't do it by biological controls. Biological control is something that has to have been going on for several generations of the controlling organism."

He defines pesticides as chemical substances used to control or kill pests.

His definition of pests includes insects; weeds; rodents that feed on grain; disease-transmitting flies and cockroaches; plant diseases; termites nibbling on homes; algae in swimming pools, and birds that eat their weight every day in young plant seedlings.

"The need for pesticides will not diminish," Ware said. "They are as indispensable to U.S. agriculture as the tractor or mechanical harvester. Thus, we must know what they are, what they do, when to use them, and how to use them for the most effective yet safest

"Right now about one-third of the world's food crop is destroyed by pests during growth, harvesting or storage," Ware said.

But, he said, the pesticide arsenal is not keeping up with our pest problems. Surviving insects or weeds develop a resistance to certain chemicals.

Your skills and talents for being able to manage things for others will be put to good uses this coming year. Personal gain will result from those you help.

Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic combinations and compatibilities for all signs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Turnabout is fair play, and today you may have an opportunity to prove your loyalty to a friend who has often assisted you. Try to even the score.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be a rather reluctant starter today, but once you set a course you'll be capable of achieving desirable results regardless of the obstacles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Put your best foot forward today if you have a chance to make new social contacts. One in particular could develop into a lasting relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Conditions are favorable today for resolving serious family problems. Get everyone together, put the cards on the table and try to iron things out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to get in touch with an old friend you haven't seen too much of lately. He or she will be happy to know that you still care.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your possibilities for major achievements look good today. However, you will have to truly earn whatever you get. Be prepared to produce.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may have a touchy situation to contend with today, similar to one which caused you anxiety in the past. You won't repeat old mistakes.

Drunken drivers pressed into highway clean-up work crews

By DICK STANLEY
Austin American-Statesman

ROCKDALE, Texas (AP) — Here in rural Milam County, drunken drivers caused 49 accidents last year, injuring 28 people and killing one. Halfway through the carnage, County Judge Phil Smith decided that he'd had enough.

Now, eight months later, a large yellow sign reading "DWI Work Force" has become a familiar Saturday fixture on county roads and highways.

The portable sign accompanies a yellow pickup that carries a traveling group of a dozen or more men and women, each of them convicted for the first time of driving while intoxicated.

They are serving a year's probation which includes cleaning trash off the shoulders of the roads four hours each Saturday for six consecutive Saturdays.

"It sure has caught the public's attention — more than anything I've done as county judge," Smith said.

Smith isn't certain that his community service solution fulfills all the niceties of permissible justice, but then he's not trying to please everybody.

"A smart lawyer might come down here and upset it; that's true," he said. "But I don't care. I'm determined to be tough on DWIs, and the time to do it is on the first offense."

Besides the public humiliation of working behind Milam County's large yellow sign, first offenders are also hit hard in the pocketbook.

Smith charges them an average of $30 for their supervision on the trash detail, a $350 fine, $53 in court costs — and $25 for eight hours of classes on the dangers of drunken driving.

At that, he figures they are getting off easy because he won't take away a driver's license until the second conviction, when jail time is possible and the mandatory hours behind the yellow sign double.

No prominent people have appeared before Smith to test the equality of his DWI solution. But he says he's ready and waiting for the first one.

"We haven't had any doctors, say, or any lawyers yet. But if we get them, they'll go out there with the others," said the judge.

"I've excused a (Cameron) city building inspector on the advice of the county attorney's office. But he was in his 60s and had health problems. I have to consider things like that, but otherwise, I'm determined to make no exceptions — men and women alike."

Mrs. Reagan narrates at benefit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan, in her first stage appearance as first lady, got a standing ovation from the audience and a rave review from her husband.

"I thought it was great," the president said, embracing and kissing Mrs. Reagan after she finished her reading Monday night.

Mrs. Reagan, who was substituting for the late Princess Grace of Monaco, narrated Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," reading light-hearted verse by hummist Ogden Nash to the music of the National Symphony Orchestra.

A subdued Princess Caroline, elder daughter of Princess Grace, sat next to President Reagan in the presidential box of the Kennedy Center Concert Hall.

The black-tie audience paid $500 per box seat for the National Symphony pension fund benefit.

After she was finished, Mrs. Reagan grinned broadly and blew her husband a kiss.

Conductor Mstislav Rostropovich descended from the podium and kissed her on both cheeks and both hands.

Princess Caroline, Reagan,

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, Nash's widow Frances, and the president's other guests joined in the audience's standing ovation.

Although this was Mrs. Reagan's first stage performance since her husband became president, she recently appeared on a television comedy show

Fund to aid poor

AUSTIN (AP) — A final Senate vote was needed today on a bill that would set up a trust fund to provide legal services to the poor.

Sen. Craig Washington's proposed Texas Equal Access to Justice Act was tentatively approved on Monday 22-9.

"If there is no legal representation, people are frustrated. If they are frustrated, there is no justice, and if there is no justice, there is violence," said Washington, D-Houston.

Washington's bill would funnel certain client funds held by lawyers into an interest-bearing account, set up by a non-profit corporation which would receive and disburse interest earned on the funds for legal service in civil matters.

The corporation would be formed under rules adopted by the Texas Supreme Court.

Washington said although the bill would only affect funds "nominal in amount," the fund in time could generate as much as $70 million for legal aid for indigents.

Fresno State meets DePaul in NIT finals

NEW YORK (AP) — The Wake Forest Demon Deacons found out a little about defense in the National Invitation tournament — not theirs, Fresno State's.

"No Atlantic Coast Conference team played defense like this," said Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy after his team was outplayed by the Bulldogs 86-62 in the NIT semifinals Monday night.

The surprisingly easy victory for Fresno State over the Deacons sent the Bulldogs into the finals of the nation's oldest post-season basketball tournament Wednesday night against DePaul, a 68-58 winner over Nebraska in Monday night's other semifinal game at Madison Square Garden.

Ron Anderson and Bernard Thompson each scored 10 points in the first half to help Fresno State pull out to a 14-point lead at intermission and the Bulldogs breezed home from there over a seemingly stunned Wake Forest team.

"I don't think we quit," said Tacy. "We just didn't concentrate. Once we got behind, it got out of hand. Their pressure hurt us — we just didn't concentrate on offense."

In every aspect of the contest, the game plan worked to perfection for the team from the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

"Our plan was to get a big lead in the first five minutes, then make them (Wake Forest) play from behind," Anderson said. "Offensively, Wake Forest was being denied the ball and couldn't get going — our defense was too tough."

The Bulldogs, actually finished the regular college basketball season ranked No. 1 in the nation in defense.

Fresno State virtually settled Monday night's opener with a 38-24 halftime lead. The Bulldogs then delivered the knockout blow at the start of the second half by outscoring the Deacons 13-4 during a stretch that gave the Bulldogs a 59-36 lead with 11:30 left in the game.

With a host of their red-clad fans from California rooting them on, the Bulldogs led by as many as 28 points twice before the one-sided contest was over.

Susan Winegart scored three goals to lead Kyle's Welding past J.C. Penny, 8-0, Mark Dibble added two goals for the winners while Debra Dibble, Buzz Bosque and Randy Linville had one each.

Goalie Molly Mitchell was superb for Kyle's. Cliff Baker, Sandy Jones and Rob Martin were the top players for Penny.

Daniel Felix scored two goals and Beny Silva added one as Fatheree Insurance downed 3-W Oil, 3-1.

Eduardo Resendez led Fatheree's defense.

Bill Griesser drove in 3-W's goal while Jim Clary and goalie Robert Brewer were credited with fine defensive play.

Gold repels Invaders

DENVER (AP) — It was a reunion of sorts, a meeting of two former Denver Broncos head coaches — the only two winning coaches in the history of that National Football League franchise — both of whom were unceremoniously fired in spite of their good deeds.

John Ralston and Red Miller are long-time friends, as you'd expect of veteran coaches who share a common experience. But there clearly was no love lost between their teams Monday night when Miller's Denver Gold beat Ralston's Oakland Invaders 22-12 in United States Football League action.

In a bitterly contested game played before 38,720 fans under rainy skies, the teams combined for 22 penalties worth 207 yards, including six personal fouls and an unsportsmanlike conduct infraction.

Oakland got the worst of it, being assessed 13 penalties for 207 yards, mostly in the first three quarters to help Denver roll to a 22-0 lead. Although Denver nearly equalled Oakland's penalty figures, the bulk of the Gold's infractions occurred in the final quarter when the victory already appeared secure.

"I just don't know why we tend to show this kind of performance penalty-wise," said Ralston.

One possible reason for the intensity on both sides was the importance of the game. In winning, the Gold sent the four-team Pacific Division into a deadlock. All four teams — Denver, Oakland, Los Angeles and Arizona — now have 2-2 records.

"It was a big game for us because we could have gone one-up," said Ralston. "Now we are all 2-2 and you can be sure nobody will dominate this division."

"This win puts us back in the race," said Miller, whose club started the year at 0-2. "I think things are coming along for us. We keep progressing each week."

Miller was particularly impressed with his team's opening drive. Pounding off the right side, running back Harry Sydney carried the first four plays for a total of 38 yards, helping set up Ken Johnson's 10-yard touchdown pass to Bob Niziolek. Denver then faked the extra-point kick, with holder Jeff Knapple passing to Larry Canada for the two-point conversion and an 8-0 lead.

"They got the jump on us and that two points loomed big," said Ralston.

Denver scored on its next possession, too, marching 80

Wins TPC Tourney

Hal Sutton of Shreveport, La. grimaces as he watches his par putt miss the hole on the 18th green of the Tournament Players Championship Monday. Sutton bogeyed the hole, but still won the tournament title. (AP Laserphoto)

Sutton nails one-stroke win in TPC tournament

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Hal Sutton knew there was potential disaster lurking on every shot with gusty, shifting winds blowing over the controversy-ridden Players' Club course. "I was just fortunate I was able to steer clear of most of the trouble," Sutton said after his closing 69 had provided him with a one-stroke victory Monday in the day-late wind-up of the Tournament Players Championship. The 24-year-old tour sophomore's victory in this prestigious event established him as one of the game's most promising young stars. But the home course for the PGA Tour and the permanent site for the annual championship of the touring pros had a certain nightmare quality for many of the game's leading lights. Even before they fell victim to the varied frustrations and tribulations, woes and patience-shattering bad bounces of the final round, several of them signed and presented to Commissioner Deane Beman a formal petition asking that changes be made in the course. The Jacksonville Journal said supporters of the petition include Tom Watson, Jack Nicklaus, Hale Irwin, Johnny Miller, Tom Weiskopf, Ben Crenshaw and Craig Stadler. Generally, the complaints center around severe rolls.

slopes and undulations on and around the greens. Sutton was one of very few to escape the course without major disaster. He did not have a 3-putt and did not hit a ball in the water throughout the week. He finished with a 5-under-par 283 and collected the biggest prize yet offered on the American tour, $126,000. It was secured only when John Cook, in a tie for the lead, hit his tee shot in the water on the 18th hole and made double bogey. Ed Fiori, leading alone on the 17th tee, finished double bogey-double bogey and tied for eighth. Crenshaw, one of nine men who either led or shared the lead at one time or another, had a final-round 75. It included four double bogeys — one of them on a 4-putt. Watson played the last three holes four over par. He had a 72-291. Nicklaus never really got in contention, had to birdie two of the last three holes for 74-291.

Masters champ Craig Stadler's 84 included a nine on the ninth hole. Journeyman Bob Eastwood came on to take second with a no-bogey 69 and a 284 total.

North Carolina State story awaits final chapter

By The Associated Press
If Coach Jim Valvano had known that his team would reverse its midseason form, moviegoers might have been lining up to see "The North Carolina State Story" at their local theaters this spring. But Valvano and his Wolfpack players will have to be content with a live TV version this Saturday in Albuquerque, N.M., as a member of the NCAA basketball tournament's Final Four, along with Houston, Louisville and Georgia. After a strong start, North Carolina State swooned when guard Derek Whittenberg broke his foot and missed 14 games. "When Derek got hurt, I did say at the time that I had a dream that he'd come back and knock in a jump shot that would win the ACC championship," said Valvano. "But that's as far as my movie went. Had I known this was going to happen, I'd have sold the rights." North Carolina State, 24-10, won the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament and captured the NCAA West Regional championship, upsetting Virginia in both games. While Valvano's 16th-ranked team was labeled a Cinderella team in the West, they'll face a similar team in the semifinals against Georgia, the East champion. The 18th-ranked Bulldogs, 24-9, upset defending champion North Carolina 82-77 in the regional final. Saturday's game between Houston and Louisville in the other semifinals will feature No. 1 against No. 2, respectively. Louisville has won 16 consecutive games and will take a 32-3 record into the championship round. The trip will be the second straight for the Cardinals, who won the national crown in 1980, and the fifth under Coach Denby Crum.

Cougars looking forward to slam-bang game

HOUSTON (AP) — The mere calling cards of the teams, Louisville's "Doctors of Dunk" and Houston's "Phi Slama Jama" fraternity conjures up visions of a titanic struggle for national collegiate basketball supremacy. That's just the kind of slam-bang game the top-ranked Houston Cougars are predicting and looking forward to Saturday when the two teams meet in the semifinals of the NCAA Final Four tournament in Albuquerque, N.M.

"When you've got the talent that we've got and the talent that they've got and you put them on the same court, it makes for an exciting game," guard Reid Gettys said Monday as the Cougars prepared for their second straight trip to the championship tournament. "It's going to be strength against strength and I don't think either team has to worry about the other slowing it down. I love this kind of game."

Houston dissected Villanova 89-71 to win the Midwest Regional tournament with a sledgehammer inside game led by 7-foot sophomore Akeem Oluajuwon and 6-9 senior Larry Micheaux. Meanwhile, the second-ranked Cardinals wilted Kentucky's rosy playoff future with a full-court press to win the Midwest title 80-68 in overtime. The Houston-Louisville winner will meet either Georgia or North Carolina State Monday for the national title. "I hope it's a physical game, that's what I like to play," said Micheaux, who scored a career-high 30 points and grabbed 12 rebounds against Villanova. "When I go on the court I feel I am stronger than any other player out there. I take that very seriously."

The Cardinals earned the title "Doctors of Dunk" during a four-year span of one national title and three appearances in the Final Four that netted Coach Denny Crum a 105-25 record over that period of time. Louisville's slam-dunk show had slowed, however, until Saturday's victory over Kentucky. "I guess we showed everybody that the Doctors are back," Louisville's Scooter McCray said.

Houston will take a 30-2 record and 25-game winning streak into the game compared to Louisville's 32-3 record and 16-game string. "From what I've seen of them on TV, they play the same kind of game that we do," UH forward Michael Young said. "I think the refs know the type of games that we play and will let us play a little more physical. It will be a very fast-paced game. That's what all of us like."

Gettys just likes the high-stakes atmosphere surrounding a trip to the Final Four. "At this time of year when there is no tomorrow if you lose, it's much easier to keep alert and have that little extra sharpness in your eyes."

Names in the News

LONDON (AP) — Yoko Ono, the widow of ex-Beatle John Lennon, says the presence of her late husband remains so strong in her life that there's no room for another man.

Asked about reports linking her romantically with Hungarian designer Sam Habidtoy, the 50-year-old Miss Ono said "It would be very difficult for any man to try to have a normal relationship with me now, because this is not a normal situation. John's presence is so palpable there's no room in my life for another man."

Miss Ono and son Sean, 7, still live in the New York apartment the family inhabited when Lennon was shot dead on the sidewalk outside on Dec. 9, 1980.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Henry Kissinger, considered a master of selective leaking when he was secretary of state, says government officials must "use" the media to be effective.

"There is absolutely no doubt that when an official deals with the press, he is trying to use the press," Kissinger says in the April 2 issue of TV Guide.

"An official is very unwise — in addition to being morally wrong — if he deliberately misleads the press," said Kissinger. "But the press must understand that the official is there not to
