

Radio report of murder dispute is unfounded

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

WHEELER — A radio news report this morning which said Oklahoma authorities now believe Robert Hall, 28, of Sayre, Okla., was killed in Texas is "unfounded," according to a spokesman for the Beckham County Sheriff's office.

District attorneys from Texas and Oklahoma are fighting to prosecute Michael Anderson, 26, for Hall's murder. Officials in both states say the victim was killed within their respective jurisdictions and want to try Anderson. The authorities agree Anderson should be tried in the state where the killing occurred, and they disagree about where it happened.

Hall was shot four times at close range in the back of the head sometime in late February. His ex-wife, Donna Hall, March 1 reported the killing she said she had witnessed. Using information Mrs. Hall provided, about midnight, March 2 Wheeler deputies uncovered the victim, buried in a shallow grave behind Anderson's isolated, Wheeler County farmhouse.

Texas District Attorney Guy Hardin previously said Hall's murder was ordered by a drug suspect from his cell in the Beckham County Jail.

Both Hardin and Doug Haught, assistant D.A. at Sayre, also said Hall's execution-style slaying may be related to three other murders in Beckham County over the past 15 months.

The three similar killings were committed in 1982. The victims, all young men, were also shot to death at close range, and their bodies were dumped along rural roads in Beckham County near Carter, according to Haught.

Leaders of an Oklahoma group dubbed "The Family" may have ordered all four murders, according to authorities. Wheeler deputies have added extra security toward watching Anderson in the Wheeler County Jail, because of reports the suspect may be part of "The Family."

A spokesman for the Wheeler Sheriff said Anderson is being held in isolation, and that all visitors, except his immediate family, are being turned away.

Hardin said previously that Anderson fears for his life. After surrendering to police in Louisiana about 24 hours after Hall was found dead, Anderson gave authorities a statement about Hall's murder, according to Hardin.

Donna Hall was scheduled as a prosecution witness against David Staggs of Elk City, Okla. Staggs is scheduled for trial in Beckham County next month on charges that he assaulted Donna Hall with a weapon and possession of methamphetamine.

Anderson was ordered to kill Donna Hall when he shot Robert Hall, but he let her live and told her to keep her mouth shut, according to Hardin.

The unusual battle for jurisdiction to prosecute Anderson between Hardin and Oklahoma District Attorney James P. Garrett reached the office of Oklahoma Governor George Nigh last week. Garrett wants Nigh to sign extradition papers against Anderson.

Nigh's extradition officer, John Torres, said he is analyzing evidence in the murder, and said he will meet with Nigh about the case Thursday.

Torres' Texas counterpart in White's office, Gilbert Pena, said Oklahoma authorities have a fat chance of getting Anderson back, as long as he is charged with the crime in Texas.

"That won't be a squabble," Pena said. "If there are charges pending in Wheeler County, Oklahoma's just gonna' have to wait," Pena said. "That's the procedure that's been followed in the past."

White's representative said the Texas Governor will support his state's district attorney in a battle for jurisdiction.

"I assume the local district attorney will prevail," Pena said.

White's office said the governor would not normally grant Oklahoma's extradition request, when Texas charges are pending.

Anderson was indicted for Hall's murder March 9 by a Wheeler County grand jury. Anderson remains in custody with bond denied.

Hardin said both physical evidence and statements from witnesses to the killing prove Anderson killed Hall in Wheeler County.

"I have ample evidence to send him to the pen for life," Hardin said previously.

"We have ethical, competent evidence that the murder occurred in Beckham County, Oklahoma," Beckham County Undersheriff Don Jameson said today.

"That report would be unfounded," Jameson said about the story that his officers now believe Hall was killed in Texas.

The report by Jack Clark on the Texas State Network, based in Dumas, was aired by KGRO in Pampa and other stations this morning. The report attributed the information to unnamed Beckham County Sheriff's authorities.

The Oklahoma district attorney issued a complaint charging Anderson with first-degree murder March 14, and he asked the Oklahoma Governor to bring the suspect back to Beckham County for trial.

Haught, who is prosecuting the case for Oklahoma, also said today that nothing has changed in his effort to return Anderson.

Hardin was reportedly in Austin today and could not be reached for comment.

Anderson's court-appointed lawyer, Harold Comer of Pampa, has declined to comment about the case.

Gray County Commissioners will consider a proposal for the county to arrange payment for residents of Gray County who are patients in Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo and have not paid their bills at their regular meeting Thursday morning at 9:30 a.m. in the county courtroom, second floor of the courthouse.

According to County Judge Carl Kennedy, who presides over the commissioners' court, the county may have to decide whether or not the patients are indigent or are able to pay their bills.

Commissioners will also consider sending a letter of recommendation to the state legislature to designate District Attorney Guy Hardin as a full-time prosecutor. This designation will mean Hardin must drop his private practice and will be paid about $6,000 more a year, Kennedy said. Hardin has requested the designation, Kennedy said. The commissioners will also hear a request by Hardin for more office space.

A letter from the Board of Pardons and Paroles will be considered. The letter informs the commissioners that the board has no money to pay the medical bills incurred by a prisoner who was confined in Gray County Jail on a governor's warrant.

According to Kennedy, the commissioners will have to decide whether or not the county will be able to pay the bills, which were incurred at Coronado Community Hospital.

Commissioners will also consider renewing fire protection contracts with the Groom, Lefors and McLean Fire Departments.

Also on the agenda is a possible procedure for billing offenders who have intentionally damaged county roads. Kennedy said this pertains mainly to oil companies and oilfield service workers who have torn up county roads during the bad weather this winter.

The billing question is the county's way of asking the offenders whether or not they intend to repair or otherwise compensate the county for the damage to the roads.

"I think we'll find most of them fully intend to come back and fix them," he said Tuesday.

Commissioners will also consider appointments to the County Historical Commission for the 1983-84 term, and consider giving approval to two subdivisions within the county limits.

The court will also consider a settlement with Computer Election Systems, which provided voting machines on a rent-to-own option last November. The county chose not to buy the machines, and thus must make some settlement with the company.

Commissioners will also pay the county's bills and consider time deposits and transfers as recommended by the county auditor.

Absentee voters turn out in force

At the close of absentee voting Tuesday at 5 p.m., 202 of Pampa's 10,995 Pampa's registered voters had cast their ballots by absentee at the city secretary's office, up from 27 in 1982, and 144 in 1981. City Secretary Erma Hipsher said she felt the number of people who voted by absentee was "a good turnout."

The 294 people who voted by absentee in Pampa Independent School District elections at the school business office at 321 W. Albert were "just a few more than last year," according to Jerry Haralson, School District Business Manager. The district has 12,282 registered voters.

Persons who vote by absentee are not allowed to also vote in person at the polls on election day. When a voter casts a ballot by absentee, his or her name is placed on a "strike list," which is sent to the polls to avoid a person voting twice.

For anyone who did not vote by absentee, the polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday, April 2. Anyone who has a question about where to vote should call the city secretary at 665-8481, or the school district business office at 669-2531.

Anti-gambling lobbyist denies being paid by outside tracks

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — An anti-gambling lobbyist says no matter what records a House committee forces him to submit, the result will always be the same — his efforts are not financed by out-of-Texas race tracks trying to protect their business.

The organization is composed of individuals who are business professional people and churchmen. (Legislators) can take our blood tests and that's still all they're going to get. That's who we are," said Allen Maley Jr., a Dallas resident.

Rep. George Pierce, R-San Antonio, has not asked for blood. But Pierce, chairman of the House Committee on Urban Affairs which is considering the pari-mutuel betting bill, said Tuesday that a financial report sent in by Maley raises more questions.

Pierce wants more answers and gave Maley until April 6 to submit more complete records.

The report Maley sent to Pierce shows that Texans Against Gambling, of which he is director, was funded by a $10,000 loan from the Anti-Crime Council of Texas. The council got $5,000 from the Baptist General Convention of Texas and $2,500 from the Texas United Methodist Church.

The remainder came from smaller donations, according to the report.

Pierce, a legalized horse race betting advocate, said he wants to know "Who are the people?" backing Maley.

In a letter to Maley, Pierce asked for more records and complained the financial report does not answer "core questions," including whether out-of-state interests are paying Maley's way.

Maley said he would not decide whether to comply with the request until he saw the Pierce letter.

"To our knowledge" his anti-gambling efforts have not been backed by "money from anybody connected to any racetracks anywhere," Maley told a reporter.

Maley and the committee have been at odds since his refusal at a hearing to disclose his financial backing. Last week the committee authorized Pierce to subpoena the records. Maley complied without subpoena, but sent only the report released Tuesday.

Pierce said Maley had made "a mockery of the legitimate questions" asked by the committee. He said the financial statement includes several inconsistencies, including a conflict with a previous report showing no contributions accepted.

"Having complied with your request for this information, I must tell you that I highly resent your demand for it," Maley told Pierce in a letter.

Two hurt in separate area crashes

Two Pampa residents were taken to Coronado Community Hospital as a result of local automobile accidents.

Aurora Santana, 48, of Pampa, was admitted to CCH Tuesday afternoon after she was involved in a traffic accident with a car driven by Deloris Blanco, 30, of 208 Thut Street.

According to police reports, Blanco was driving a 1972 Chevrolet down South Barnes and made a right turn onto Thut Street, and collided with Santana's 1973 Chevrolet. Blanco was cited for unsafe change of lane and failure to present driver's license.

Santana was brought to the hospital at 2:31 p.m. complaining of back injuries, and was admitted. She was reported in good condition by a hospital spokesman this morning.

In the fog this morning Rick Wayne Heichel, 33, of 713 Buckler, was involved in a two-car accident between the Ingersoll-Rand plant and the Celanese Chemical Company. Heichel was admitted to CCH this morning, using the name Rick Wayne Beauchamp, for treatment of possible back injuries.

According to Department of Public Safety (DPS) reports, a car driven by James Alexander was westbound on highway 60 at 6:55 this morning 4.3 miles west of Pampa, when he pulled over to the shoulder of the road to make a U-turn.

Alexander apparently did not see the car driven by Rick Wayne Heichel, and began to make his turn. Heichel's car collided with Alexander's as it was making the U-turn.

The DPS said Alexander was not issued any citations and did not seek medical treatment.

Reagan wants to dicker on missiles in Europe

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today offered to cut back on the planned deployment of new medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe if the Soviet Union agreed to reduce its arsenal of rockets targeted on NATO countries.

Even if the proposal were accepted, the United States would begin installing new Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe late this year as scheduled, while the Soviet Union would be required to dismantle some of its medium-range weapons.

The Kremlin's chief arms negotiator, asked about the offer Tuesday, said, "I'm not optimistic."

Revealing a compromise plan to his "zero-zero" proposal to eliminate all medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, Reagan said in a nationally broadcast statement from the White House that "it would be better to have none than to have some. But, if there must be some, it is better to have few than to have many.

"If the Soviets will not now agree to the total elimination of these weapons," Reagan said, "I hope they will at least join us in an interim agreement that would substantially reduce these forces to equal levels on both sides."

The Soviets have flatly rejected the zero-zero proposal and the United States' NATO allies have urged that the Reagan administration make a scaled-down proposal.

Reagan did not propose a specific limit on the number of weapons. A senior administration official who spoke on condition he not be named said the numbers of missiles allowed under the new U.S. proposal would be the subject of negotiations with the Soviets.

Accusing Moscow of failing to offer any serious alternatives to the zero-zero formula, Reagan said, "Their failure to make such a proposal is a source of deep disappointment to all of us who have wished that these weapons might be eliminated — or at least significantly reduced.

"But I do not intend to let this shadow that has been cast over the Geneva negotiations further darken our search for peace," Reagan said.

Reagan's announcement confirmed earlier reports that a new proposal was put on the bargaining table in Geneva on Tuesday.

Accompanying Reagan's announcement was a White House statement saying the NATO allies "welcome and strongly support the new American intermediate nuclear force negotiating initiative announced by the president today."

"It represents a significant step designed to move the INF negotiations toward conclusion of an equal, fair and verifiable arms control agreement," the statement said.

Reagan announced his new strategy in a speech to NATO ambassadors, gathered in the East Room.

"NATO will begin deploying a specific deterrent to this threat late this year, unless, as we hope, an agreement to eliminate such weapons would make this deployment unnecessary," Reagan said.

Reagan, noting that the Soviet Union has rejected the zero-zero plan, said Moscow "has failed to come up with any serious alternative. They insist on preserving their present monopoly of these weapons."

The Kremlin has proposed — and Washington has rejected — a plan under which the Soviet Union would scale back its missiles to 162 rockets — matching the number of British and French missiles — if the United States abandoned plans to deploy its new weapons.

A senior administration official said the United States has asked Moscow not to reject the proposal out of hand.

Naughty story about Brooke costs magazine editor his job

By The Associated Press

Brooke Shields, the teen-age siren who was the target of a ribald lampoon in the Princeton University humor magazine, has lost a round in a court battle to prevent publication of nude photos taken when she was 10.

At Princeton University, where the 17-year-old actress-model has applied for admission, the editors of the humor magazine were fired after they published a satirical guide for students bent on courting the star of such flicks as "Pretty Baby," "Blue Lagoon" and "Endless Love."

In Albany, N.Y., the state Court of Appeals ruled that nude pictures taken of Miss Shields when she was 10 years old can be published, but not in pornographic magazines.

Efforts to reach Miss Shields for comment Tuesday were unsuccessful. Reporters did not get replies to messages left

Serfco suffers first loss, but says it will weather the storm

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO Staff Writer

Although Service Fracturing Company (Serfco), an international company headquartered in Pampa, suffered its first operating loss in its nine-year history during the third quarter of its fiscal year, it is still in healthy financial shape, according to Jerry H. Guinn of Pampa, president of the company.

The loss amounted to three cents a share, which reduced earnings by about ten cents a share, he said.

With the inclusion of Mercury Fracturing Service, Inc., a company located in Fort Morgan, Colorado, which Serfco bought on April 30, 1982, revenues were down 2.2 percent for the nine months and down 25.8 percent for the three months ending December 31, 1982. Mercury's revenues amounted to 21.7 percent of Serfco's nine months revenue.

In the areas excluding Mercury, the oil and gas well drilling was down 56 percent from December 1981 to the 1982 low in October, 1982. There was some recovery in the last two months of 1982 so that the decline was reduced to 52 percent

Business seminar planned

A small business seminar will be held in the Chamber of Commerce conference room Thursday from 7 - 10 p.m.

It will cost $10 for chamber members and $15 for non-members. Brad Mink, instructor, said one of the biggest problems facing the small business person is how to get the word out about their business -- in other words, how to spend the advertising dollar in a wise manner. He will cover this subject as well as marketing plans, budgeting and research.

Pampa High dramatists sweep regional awards

Pampa High School drama students swept the awards at the recent zone 1 - act play competition in Amarillo and are now eligible for the district competition April 8.

Pampa's students presented Moliere's comedy, "The School for Husbands" winning first place honors, shared with Canyon High School.

In addition, Pampa's Davy McKnight and Kim Gross were picked as Best Actor and Actress of all students in the competition. Alfred Buchanan was chosen as a member of the All - Star Cast and two other students, Amy Radcliff and David Alexander received honorable mentions.

Pampa's drama students are now preparing for district competition set April 8 at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

Ten cast and three crew members were in the play, directed by PHS drama coach Nanette Kellon.

Nash to speak to environmental group

Bill Nash, from Grand Prairie and a Keep America Beautiful representative, will speak to The Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation meeting at the Lovett Memorial Library, April 5 at 7 p.m.

Nash will present a film, and talk on whether or not Pampa needs an organized beautification and clean-up program.

According to Betty Henderson, president of The Pampa Environmental Foundation, the purpose of this meeting is not to solicit funds or persuade people to serve on committees, but rather to inform the community of Pampa's litter problem and of a possible solution.

Keep America Beautiful, Inc. is a national, non-profit public organization, which has developed a tried and proven system for year-round, litter-free communities, Henderson said. She said, the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation believes the Clean Community System has proved and has agreed to invest both time and money in it, provided the community is, also, willing to invest time and money.

by December 31, 1982. Revenues and earnings from these operations continue to be adversely affected by severe pricing competition for the acidizing and fracturing work that is available, Guinn said.

Serfco's hopes for a good third quarter faded with the bottoming out of drilling activity in October, 1982, Guinn said. The slump carried on into November, making it the worst sales month of the year. While pricing pressure increased with the lowered activity levels, third quarter revenues decreased from the second quarter, reversing the nine-year trend at Serfco, he said.

Guinn calls the challenge of adjusting to prevailing market conditions Serfco's "first priority" as the company implements more expense reduction programs begun in 1982.

Some of the expense reduction programs used included a 42 percent reduction in work force since June 1982, salary reductions, closing its Liberal, Kan. district and idling of property and plant equipment. In addition, the company took 29 cars and pickup truck out of service and sold them.

"In these times of reversing trends, uncertainty about the price of oil, depressed natural gas sales and general economic jitters throughout our industry, Serfco will meet the ongoing challenge, he said."

Guinn said Serfco's size affords it a flexibility not enjoyed by other larger companies of its kind. Serfco will continue to solve problems through innovative ideas for acidizing and fracturing on an individual basis, also a benefit not enjoyed by larger companies, he said.

Kids can get free immunization in April

The clinic will be conducted in Shamrock at the Planned Parenthood Office, 210 N. Wall, Shamrock, on April 18 from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Perryton children will be vaccinated on April 12 from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Trinity Presbyterian Church, 1801 S. Drake, Perryton.

Final arguments set in murder trial

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Defense attorneys for a former police captain here plan to argue today that he was temporarily insane when he pumped five shots from a pistol into an Amarillo oilman who had been having an affair with his wife for 14 years.

But prosecutors contend that L.R. Wynne knew exactly what he was doing on Oct. 15 when he gunned down Erie Winston Mathis about an hour after he caught his wife and Mathis making love in a pickup truck.

Final arguments were scheduled today in the murder trial.

Wynne has testified that he was "out of (his mind)" after he saw his wife, Margie, making love with Mathis in a truck parked along a country road.

But two prosecution witnesses testified Tuesday that Wynne was legally sane when he shot Mathis because he knew the difference between right and wrong.

Dr. Jerome Brown, a Houston psychologist, and

Dr. John Nottingham, a forensic psychiatrist, testified for the prosecution. Defense attorneys earlier presented testimony from another psychiatrist claiming Wynne was psychotic.

Brown testified that Wynne told him during an examination, "To tell you the truth, I damn sure intended to kill him. If that puts me in the pen, that's tough."

The 63-year-old Mathis was shot to death in his pickup as he waited for a traffic light to change at a busy downtown Amarillo intersection, about an hour after Wynne had seen him and Wynne's 51-year-old wife.

Margie Wynne testified Monday that she and Mathis had been having an affair intermittently since 1969, and said they were unaware that her husband had seen them.

Both Brown and Nottingham said on the stand that Wynne had admitted during examinations that he intended to kill both Mathis and his wife when he spotted them in the truck parked on land Mathis owned outside the city.

The expert witnesses said Mathis told them he changed his mind when he considered the care of his 33-year-old retarded son.

Wynne "said if he had a gun he would have killed them both," said Brown. Wynne went back to his car to get his pistol, checked to see that it was loaded but then changed his mind, he said.

"The decision shows some judgement or discrimination of the consequences of killing his wife," Brown said.

He said that that decision showed that Wynne was rational at the time of the shooting.

Wynne "was being in a purposeful and rational way after the incident," said Brown.

He said that Wynne's attempt to hide his automobile license plate with a paper potato chip bag and throwing away his gun were purposeful attempts to avoid detection.

New execution date set for condemned killer

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A new execution date has been scheduled for a condemned killer who was so impatient for a date with death that he unsuccessfully tried to force a deputy U.S. marshal to kill him.

Charles F. Rumbaugh was ordered Tuesday by State District Judge George E. Dowlen to die by lethal injection before sunrise May 2. But the execution could be stayed again if the U.S. Supreme Court does not rule quickly in another case.

Charlie Brooks Jr. was executed by the state last December, making him the first inmate executed by injection and the first in Texas to be put to death since the high court allowed the reinstatement of the death penalty.

But in January, the Supreme Court effectively delayed further executions by deciding to use the case of condemned Texas prisoner Thomas Barefoot to review procedures for emergency appeal of death sentences.

That case is expected to be heard by the high court April 26, and the execution of Rumbaugh may have to be delayed a second time if the ruling is not issued before May 2.

During a Feb. 24 competency hearing, Rumbaugh tried to hasten his own execution by pulling from his coat a make-shift knife, fashioned from metal he took from a jail window, and attacking a deputy U.S. marshal.

"It doesn't matter to me what this court decides," Rumbaugh said from the witness stand. "I have already picked my executioner. I will make them shoot me. I am going to make you kill me now."

He walked from the witness stand toward the deputy marshal and stood before him, waving the knife and shouting, "Kill me! Kill me!"

Rumbaugh was shot once in the chest with the deputy marshal's .38-caliber pistol. Rumbaugh has only recently recovered from the wound.

Rumbaugh, convicted of capital murder in the 1975 robbery and slaying of Amarillo jeweler Michael Fiorillo, wrote a letter to Dowlen last year, saying he wanted to waive further appeals and to have a date scheduled for his execution.

Rumbaugh was ordered to die on July 22, 1982 by Dowlen. Rumbaugh's parents then intervened and the execution was stayed by a federal judge in Houston.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson cleared the way for scheduling of the current execution date when she ruled March 7 that Rumbaugh is mentally capable of waiving further appeals of his death sentence.

The American Civil Liberties Union and Rumbaugh's parents are expected to seek another stay.

Jurors had trouble believing many witnesses

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jurors in the three-week civil rights trial of seven New Orleans policemen, which ended this week in Dallas, had trouble believing many witnesses for both sides, a New Orleans newspaper reported today.

The Times-Picayune, the States-Item reported its findings from interviews with the seven women and five men who asked that their names not be published.

The jury, after studying testimony for nearly three days, Monday convicted three of the policemen and acquitted the other four.

The officers were accused of beating or threatening Algiers residents during the investigation of the 1980 murder of policeman Gregory Neupert.

The newspaper, after interviews Tuesday, reported the following accounts of jurors:

"Jurors had trouble believing many witnesses for both the prosecution and defense. When you have three versions, it's hard to determine which ones to believe," said one juror.

"At times during the deliberations, emotions ran high and discussions broke into shouting matches.

"During these heated debates, the jurors usually divided along sexual lines, with most of the men believing the policemen were guilty and most women arguing there was not enough evidence to prove guilt.

"When the jury first got the case on Thursday, in informal votes each time it was seven women for acquittal and five men for conviction. All these men, they wanted a conviction one way or the other," said one woman. However, another woman said she usually sided with the men, and the vote was 6-6.

"The jury agreed unanimously Friday to convict three officers, but after a weekend recess, two women decided to change their vote, telling others jurors they had decided no one had been beaten by police."

"There was a lot of cussing under our breath," said one juror. "Someone said, 'Oh no, back to day one.'"

"Male jurors argued that three could be convicted of civil rights violations just for holding one Algiers man against his will. Two of the women changed their minds and agreed to convict after the judge advised that it was sufficient to convict if the panel believed the man was held against his will.

"Panel members said they decided to convict three of the officers because they were the only defendants who admitted being present at police headquarters when alleged acts of police brutality took place."

Convicted were Sgt. John McKenzie and officers Dale Bonura and Stephen Farrar.

Sentencing was set for May 13. Maximum possible penalty for each is three years in prison and a $10,000 fine on the felony charge of conspiring to assault, intimidate, and threaten.

In addition, they face a year in prison and a $1,000 fine for the misdemeanor charge of violating the civil rights of Robert Davis by beating and assaulting him.

Defense attorneys have promised to appeal the convictions, mostly because the same testimony acquitted four — detectives Ronald Brink and Thomas R. Woodall, and officers Richard LeBlanc and Stephen Rebol.

Ironically, Davis and another key prosecution witness, Clarence Green, were in jail Monday when the guilty verdicts were handed down.

Davis was booked for trespassing Monday after he refused to leave an apartment complex where he had been evicted 1 1/2 months before for non-payment of rent, police said. He was freed later on bond.

Green, arrested without incident Saturday in Franklin, was being held in lieu of $60,000 bond on a charge of felony auto theft.

Prosecutors claimed that victims of police brutality were Davis, Green, and Johnny Brownlee, who are black, and brothers Raymond and Ervin Hughes, who are white.

Davis testified that police beat him for several hours and forced him to name James "Comanche" Billy Jr. and Reginald Miles as Neupert's killers.

Panel approves emergency unemployment tax

AUSTIN (AP) — Under a bill on its way to the full House, Texas employers would pay a one-time average tax of $1.80 per employee so the state can borrow another $300 million from the federal government to pay unemployment claims.

The emergency employers tax was approved Tuesday by the House Labor and Employment Relations Committee. The tax would be due with the employers' first-quarter 1983 taxes.

Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, who sponsored the measure, said the tax was calculated at 5 percent of the unemployment tax paid by employers in 1982.

Texas has had to borrow $383 million from the federal government already because of escalating state unemployment and a corresponding drain on Texas' unemployment fund.

Employment officials have told Gov. Mark White the state will need another $300 million by mid-May to pay 1983 unemployment claims.

Last year, the Legislature met in a special session to change the formula used to calculate employer taxes to avoid a huge tax hike. Legislators also, however, decreed that the state cannot borrow additional money from the federal government unless it can guarantee payment of the 10 percent interest the government charges the state.

Criss said his bill would provide enough money to back the new loan request.

Although unhappy about the situation, representatives of business groups who testified before the House Labor and Employment Relations Committee Tuesday said Criss' bill is the best alternative for coming up with the interest money.

The committee also heard testimony on Criss' general unemployment tax bill, a longer-term measure that would once again change the formula under which employer taxes are calculated.

Criss said his employers tax bill is "the extreme approach to the problem — an immediate, large tax hike to get us out of debt quickly."

He said the bill is a "rough draft" proposed by the Texas Employment Commission.

Criss said under his bill, in 1983, employers would pay an average of $205 per employee instead of the $136 they would pay under current law. In 1984, the tax would go to $344 instead of $205.

But in 1985, the tax would begin to drop back down, to $249 instead of the $350 projected under current law, then in 1986, it would drop to

Bill would increase auto liability insurance minimum

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill under study by a House subcommittee would raise the minimum amount of car liability insurance Texas motorists must carry by more than 50 percent.

Insurance rates for liability coverage would go up by a statewide average of 10 percent for motorists now carrying the minimum protection required, said sponsor Rep. Don Lee, D-Harlingen. Lee operates an insurance agency in the Lower Rio Grande Valley city that sells automobile insurance.

His bill was sent to a subcommittee of the House Insurance Committee on Tuesday.

Dallas lawyer Richard Geiger, a lobbyist representing Fire and Casualty Companies in Texas, testified that 55 percent of Texas motorists already carry more than the required minimum liability insurance.

He said, therefore, the impact of increasing the minimum amount of insurance required would affect only 45 percent of the motorists in Texas. Besides that, he said, the amount of increase would vary greatly, since rates vary according to 15 classifications of motorists and 40 geographic regions.

At present, the law requires liability protection of $10,000 per person injured in an accident, $20,000 for total medical expenses, and $5,000 for property damage.

Lee said most cars today cost more than $5,000. He proposed raising the limits to $15,000 per person for medical expenses, $30,000 per accident for injuries and

Deputy shot, man arrested

ANNA, Texas (AP) — Law officers used tear gas to flush out a suspect in the early morning shooting of a Collin County sheriff's deputy, authorities said.

The officer, who was not immediately identified, suffered two minor wounds when he was fired upon with a shotgun, according to a sheriff's department spokesman.

The suspect barricaded himself inside a trailer house after the 2 a.m. shooting and was flushed out about two hours later with tear gas, the spokesman said. No shots were fired.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Got those Tuesday morning blues...?

This editorial space has pointed out a few issues the current candidates for city office haven't addressed already, and we're about to do it again.

If there is one gripe heard longer and louder than any other, it is that the city fathers meet when no one can be there to hear them.

Oh sure, we send a reporter, and we let you know what happened, but wouldn't it be nice if you could participate in your city government if you felt like it?

The Pampa City Commission meets twice each month at 9:30 in the morning on Tuesdays. What are you doing at 9:30 Tuesday morning?

Probably working.
How can a government claim to represent the people and then hold a public meeting when the public can't attend? They can't.

If they decided to hold it at 3 a.m. in the middle of a wheat field, they'd probably get a better public turnout. A guy doesn't mind driving a little and losing some sleep once in a while for a good cause. But how many of us are going to jeopardize our jobs for a chance to have our "say" at a city commission meeting?

Oh, it's not all their fault. In fact, it's not their fault at all. We're the ones who put them there. We're the ones who settle for having meetings at an inaccessible time. And we're the ones who continue to take it without a word spoken against it.

Government only works if the people work at it. Those who are elected will take exactly as much power as they are allowed by the people. If the citizens of this town are content to be quiet and create a power void, they should not be surprised at someone coming along and filling it any old way he sees fit.

Who is free to attend a city commission meeting at 9:30 a.m. on a Tuesday?

People who own their own businesses, retired people, and people out of a job.

And while each of them should be there, and represented, there is a far greater number of people in this town who are not represented.

They're working.

Want to keep things that way? It's your choice.

Being a cop is easy for a girl named Lucy

By Rusty Brown

Lucy Bates, the 6-foot-1 blonde policewoman on TV's "Hill Street Blues," is a heroine and role model for female cops trying to make it in this male-dominated field.

Lucy's fellow policemen seem to accept her as part of the team. Everyone knows she and her Hill Street partner, Joe Coffey, are good pals both on and off the set.

It's too bad police work didn't turn out that way for a friend of mine. When Irene Chaires, 35, was picked as the only woman on a nine-person police force in the New Mexico town of Rio Rancho, she was elated.

Behind her were the years she pored over text books far into the night to keep a 3.3 grade average and get a degree in criminal justice. Behind her were the rigors of the police academy where, as an over-30 mother, she pitted her brains and brawn against youthful superjocks.

Her head was full of all she'd learned as an intern in a police department detective division.

When she became a police officer she thought she had it all together. Divorced, she could now buy a home for her 6-year-old twin daughters. She could begin a lifetime career in her chosen field.

She was so gung-ho, she didn't even mind working the graveyard shift.

"I loved it," she says. "There was nothing in that town that moved at night that I didn't know about."

She dished out traffic tickets to rebellious youths and didn't flinch when they gave her a hard time. Even as a slender, 5-foot-7 policewoman she never called for extra help.

Her first arrest — or collar — was a drunken, disorderly woman.

"She tried to assault my partner," she says, "and we finally got her handcuffed and into the patrol car. She spit on my head all the way to the station."

Once, she and two other officers surrounded a house where an angry fight raged inside and an automatic rifle lay on the front steps. A combination of teamwork and bravery kept the situation from spilling over into a shoot-out.

She and her partner, Kenneth Jaramillo, worked well together and became close friends. They respected each other and seldom disagreed on how to handle a situation.

"The job became my life," says Ms. Chaires.

Not everything was perfect, of course. She was given the police car with the most mileage. Some of the men bothered her about being single. And, "one superior kept making passes," she says. "He made off-color remarks and was always trying to get his hands on me."

Another time, when the department was being fitted for bullet-proof vests, an officer said he wanted to measure her since her vest cost $10 more. "He said he wanted to see what the extra money was for," says Ms. Chaires.

Then, she and her partner were accused of having an affair. They both vehemently denied it.

"I was followed, watched and harassed with mysterious, obscene phone calls," she says.

Just eight months after she was hired, she and her partner were fired... "for unsatisfactory job performance," she says.

But the real reasons had more to do with gossip and prejudice against women in the police department.

The shock of the firing hit her hard. She tried to commit suicide, had a breakdown and was hospitalized.

Determined to fight back, she filed charges with the state's Human Rights Commission, saying her discharge was due to sexual harassment and sexual discrimination.

After a six-month investigation, the commission said she was right.

Now she plans to sue the city, the police department and two superior officers.

After eight months without work, she has just begun a training course for a security job.

Looking back at what she's been through, she says, "I know why most women don't file charges. It's almost easier if some guy pats you on the ass to go find another job than to fight this thing through as I'm doing."

Meanwhile, she watches Hill Street's Lucy with envy.

"Lucy and her partner are very close," says former officer Chaires. "They protect each other, and the other officers look at them as colleagues, not as a man and a woman."

She asks, "Why can't the real world be like that?"

Unfortunately, Irene, in the real world, struggles take longer to solve than an hour of prime time.

The president is right on!

By Don Graff

I'll bet regular readers (and bless you, every one — or two) think I take my stand right down the line against Ronald Reagan.

Well, you're wrong.
On one issue, trade, this president and I are in complete accord. He is right on target in opposing protectionist restrictions, as he did in an address on his West Coast swing earlier this month, as an antidote to what ails American industry and saver of American jobs. Protectionism, as he correctly pointed out, has a nasty way of destroying more jobs than it saves.

But it's becoming tougher and tougher to hold that line against business and labor interests who think otherwise. And in a Congress acutely sensitive to those thoughts.

The pressures are becoming intense, both in this country and in most of our major trading partners, to shield weak sisters in domestic economies with import barriers and to gain short-term advantages in world markets with subsidized exports.

The Japanese threat — that devious Oriental plot that can only be countered through auto import quotas and domestic-content legislation, which the president singled out for special condemnation — is only part of the problem.

We're also skirmishing with the Europeans over agricultural products. Our beef, if you'll pardon the term, has been that the EEC governments subsidize below-cost exports in order to unload surpluses piled up by their protected high-cost growers. They have to, they say, to keep the farm vote in line.

That's certainly an argument that ought to be understood in Washington. Nevertheless, we're retreating, giving Egypt an especially good deal on a million tons of flour, thereby shutting out the French who are counter-retaliating with energetic efforts to undercut U.S. sales to China.

There's more, and what it adds up to is the prospect of a series of self-serving, short-sighted moves and counter-moves to push exports and curtail imports that could only have disastrous consequences for all involved.

The reasons are obvious. There is no way that one country is going to want or be able to buy from another if its own products are shut out and its earning capabilities thereby reduced.

History provides plenty of evidence, particularly national policies of the 1930s that threatened to turn a depression into a permanent state of the worldwide economy.

There will be an opportunity to attack the problem at the highest level during the coming summit meeting of the leaders of the seven major industrial democracies at Williamsburg, Va., in May, and it won't be a day too soon. The way things are going, however, by that time the skirmishing may be dangerously closer to all-out war.

The Reagan administration hasn't always practiced its free-market preaching; there are those Japanese auto quotas, a sweeter deal for domestic sugar producers and other evidences of backsliding. But to give the leader himself full credit, Ronald Reagan never recanted the faith.

He reiterated it in the San Francisco speech, pointing out that protectionism is a "banker mentality" that ignores hard truths. The costs are high and they "are always passed on to another group down the line."

In other words and in the end, they are paid in full not by foreigners but by folks right here at home.

On this point, he could not be more right.
Right on, Ron.

A get-well card for poor Klaus

By ART BUCHWALD

I was very disturbed to read in the newspaper the other day that convicted Nazi war criminal Klaus Altamann-Barbie had to undergo an emergency hernia operation in Lyon, where he is awaiting trial for his role in the deaths of hundreds of Jews and resistance fighters.

I immediately called the French Embassy to find out how he was.

"Are you a friend of his?" the embassy official wanted to know.

"Not exactly," I said. "But I am interested in his health. Tell me, was the operation very painful?"

"It might have been," the man said.

"Did he scream a lot? Was he in real agony?"

"I doubt it. I'm sure the doctors gave him anesthesia."

"Oh that's too bad."

"What do you mean, that's too bad?"

"Klaus never believed in anesthesia. He felt a man should be fully conscious when he was worked over. It would have been nice if he was awake when the doctors did it to him."

Barbie is a sick man. He has, besides hernia problems, stomach pain, kidney disease and a nervous disorder.

"Poor Klaus. Does his stomach pains make him wretch a lot? You know, double over as if someone kicked him with a boot?"

"I have no idea. Why are you interested?"

"No one likes to be kicked in the stomach. I know Klaus liked to kick other people in the stomach, but he never wanted anyone to do it to him."

"I don't understand where this conversation is leading..."

"I told you. I'm just interested in Klaus Barbie's health and I want to make sure he's getting the best medical help available. You say he has kidney trouble. He must be very uncomfortable."

"The French doctors are taking very good care of him."

"I'm sure of that. But tell them not to give Klaus any painkillers."

"Why not?"

"Klaus never believed in painkillers. He said painkillers dulled the mind and senses. I'm sure if he wouldn't prescribe them for others, he wouldn't want any for himself. Tell me about the nervous disorder."

"From what we know he can't sleep at night."

"Poor Klaus. He used to sleep so well in Lyon. Don't let the doctors give him anything to get a good night's rest. Barbie always maintained the less you let a person sleep, the more willing he was to cooperate with his captors. Be sure and shine a light in his eyes all night long. He likes that."

"How do you know what he likes?"

"He used to do it all the time to the people in his care. He wouldn't have done it if he didn't believe a bright light was good for someone who needed sleep."

"Are you a doctor?" the man at the embassy asked.

"Not exactly. But when someone like Klaus Barbie gets sick, I like to be of help. Have the French doctors hit his kidneys with a night stick?"

"I'm sure they haven't."

"They might try it. Klaus always said hitting a person in the kidneys was a good way to make him forget his hernia problems."

"I don't think the doctors are about to hit Barbie in the kidneys with a night stick."

"I guess not. Maybe the cure is an old wives' tale or maybe Barbie made it up during World War II. What else is wrong with him?"

"He's also supposed to have a heart condition."

"Poor Klaus. It's as if his entire professional life has caught up with him. The man must be miserable."

"I imagine he is."

"How miserable?"

"I have no idea. Why is it so important to you how miserable he is?"

"I just wanted to know how much to spend on a 'Get Well' Card."

What went wrong in Vietnam?

By PAUL HARVEY

It's no fun to scratch the scab off the wounds of war but unless we learn from the past we're prone to repeat it.

We have to know what went wrong in Vietnam.

Marty Rogan is a favorite golfing companion of mine but that is one subject we have difficulty discussing dispassionately.

Marty, Pensacola class of '43, Navy Captain in World War II, retired, is embarrassed by our stalemate wars in Korea and Vietnam — but he bristles when I blame the military.

"Our hands were tied with red tape," he insists.

"It was Washington, D.C., which stopped our bombers at the Yalu."

"Our Navy was ordered to spare Haiphong Harbor..."

Retired General William Peers says our mistake was fighting a war of graduality; failing to commit the forces for a quick victory.

I feel quite at home with that argument because I have heard it from Marty and other military men whose concept of weapons, tactics and strategy are rooted in the past.

When Americans are confronted by any exigency they are likely to vent their frustration elsewhere.

We can't even get a consensus among Vietnam veterans themselves as to what would be an appropriate memorial for the 57,939 who died there.

The bitter row over whether the statue and flagpole should be at the side of the monument or atop it is reminiscent of the anguished debate which tore our nation apart in the 1960s.

In the 1980s our nation is divided again between those who debate whether nuclear or conventional weapons are a better deterrent.

The Soviets, meanwhile, are not divided. They continue to accumulate and deploy nuclear weapons.

Is this not the crux of our nation's now critical choice:

Our six percent of this planet's mothers cannot produce enough soldier boys to police the planet one bloody bayonet at a time — and we can bankrupt ourselves trying. Limited war requires limitless numbers of men — and we don't have them!

Even if Moscow should agree to limit future wars to conventional weapons, that kind of war against the hordes of Asia the West could not possibly win.

With those weapons, we were helpless to whip a country smaller than Illinois!

It is only our awesome technology — it is only our arsenal of nuclear, and thermonuclear weapons — which has kept potential enemies at arms' length. Hopefully it will work indefinitely.

But anybody who would destroy that deterrent is no friend.

There's racism in Chicago...

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — "Everybody talks about the weather," according to an aphorism widely attributed to Mark Twain, "but nobody does anything about it."

In Chicago politics these days, the subject matter is different and the situation is reversed: Nobody talks about racism but everybody is doing something about it.

Republicans and Democrats, blacks and whites, voters and politicians all are in the process of disgracing themselves by attempting to capitalize on the fact that Rep. Harold Washington, D-Ill., is the first black ever to win the Democratic Party's nomination to be the city's mayor.

There is no justification whatever for the tawdry maneuvering on the part of those determined to deprive Washington of the mayor's post solely on the basis of racial prejudice.

The most recent entrant in those sweepstakes is Democratic Mayor Jane M. Byrne, who initially was presumed to have lost her bid for re-election when she finished second — behind Washington — in the Feb. 22 Democratic mayoral primary.

Byrne now has decided to enter the April 12 general election as an independent write-in candidate, a move which can only be interpreted as a crude attempt to pander to the bigotry of the white Democratic voters and precinct captains in Chicago's "ethnic" wards, notably those on the North and Northwest side of the city, who cannot bring themselves to support a black candidate. (She also has shamelessly abandoned an earlier public promise to support Washington.)

One of the few Chicago politicians who in recent weeks has behaved with any semblance of class or distinction is Bernard E. Epton, the Republican mayoral nominee who entered the race many months ago when it was widely assumed that his Democratic opponent would be white.

A decent, progressive politician and lawyer, Epton has steadfastly resisted the temptation to take advantage of what could well evolve into an ugly racial situation — but the same cannot be said of his party.

When President Reagan flew to Chicago for a Republican fund-raising dinner prior to the primary, the head table was overflowing with local GOP notables, all of whom were introduced to the audience — but Epton was relegated to a table at the back of the hall and received no official recognition whatever.

That situation changed abruptly, however, when the results of the Democratic primary became known. "The national party people didn't recognize my existence until the day after Harold won the Democratic primary," Epton told one interviewer. "I'd rather not speculate on the whys of that."

The Republican National Committee now has belatedly committed itself to a major organizational effort on Epton's behalf. Estimates of the amount of money expected to flow into his campaign from out-of-state Republican sources range from $250,000 to $750,000.

The Democratic National Committee, to its credit, has organized an ambitious campaign to mobilize many of the party's best known figures, including numerous putative presidential candidates, on behalf of Washington.

Chicago's blacks haven't exactly covered themselves with glory. One of Washington's noisiest supporters, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, whose public demeanor usually ranges between flamboyant and maniacal, has unnecessarily terrorized the city's white residents into fearing that if Washington is elected blacks will do to Chicago approximately what Sherman did to Georgia.

In Nicaragua

Planes bomb guerrilla supply depot

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Air Force planes bombed an airfield in northern Nicaragua that anti-Sandinista guerrillas were using to supply their forces and killed or wounded several rebels, Interior Minister Tomas Borge said.

The Nicaraguan foreign ministry denounced new cross-border raids by Honduran-based Nicaraguan exiles pledged to overthrow the leftist government, and Honduras denied a charge that its troops had aided the rebels by attacking Nicaraguan frontier posts.

Honduras also claimed that its security forces had intercepted 12 Nicaraguan soldiers carrying weapons to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Borge, speaking at a news conference late Tuesday, said helicopters and small planes used the airfield to bring weapons, ammunition and other supplies to the rebel forces.

The insurgents also used an airfield in Honduran territory, he said, but stressed that the one bombed Monday was in Nicaragua, close to the confluence of the Coco and Bocay Rivers just across the border from Honduras in Jinotega province.

He said an undetermined number of rebels were killed or wounded in the bombing.

Borge said Nicaraguan troops and rebels clashed in the area of the bombing, with three Sandinista soldiers killed and three others wounded on Monday. He said there were casualties among the insurgents but gave no details.

Because the Nicaraguan government generally bars reporters from combat zones, none of the reports could be checked.

According to the government, the latest clash raised the number of Sandinista troops killed to 64, while the rebels have lost 280 soldiers since clashes began two months ago.

Borge said the rebels planned to use the Bocay River, one of many in the north, to travel into the interior of the country.

Elsewhere, rebels used mortars and small arms fire to attack the Nicaraguan border posts of Teotecacinte, 143 miles northeast of here in Nueva Segovia province, and El Kun, 155 miles to the northeast in Northern Zelaya province on Monday, and then fled across the border into Honduras, the foreign ministry said.

Earlier Tuesday the ministry had charged that Honduran guards attacked two other posts, El Suspiro and El Espino, 80 miles northwest of here in Chinandega province.

The Honduran government denied the charge. Nicaragua repeatedly has denied charges by the United States and its allies in the Salvadoran government that the Sandinistas were funneling Soviet and Cuban weapons to the guerrillas.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council ended a five-day debate without taking action on Nicaragua's charges that the United States and Honduras were supporting the rebels.

The United States has not answered the charge that it backs the rebels.

Shuttle Challenger launch set for Monday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — At long last, the countdown is set to begin for the maiden launching of America's second space shuttle, the Challenger, which has been grounded for more than two months by engine leaks and contaminated cargo.

Launch director Al O'Hara was ready to start the clock ticking at 2 p.m. EST today, aiming for a liftoff at 1:30 p.m. Monday. It is the first U.S. man-in-space countdown with a built-in holiday — Easter Sunday — for most of the launch team.

A normal shuttle countdown moves down to the 11-hour mark and then is held there for 10 hours, 40 minutes to allow crews to catch up on any work that has fallen behind. O'Hara said this hold time has been extended to 25 hours and 10 minutes — starting at midnight Saturday — "to give many of the shuttle workers Easter off."

Those plans could be upset, however, if there are problems to overcome — and Challenger has had its share.

This sleek new ship in the planned four-shuttle fleet originally was to make its launch debut on Jan. 20. But fuel leaks occurred in all three of the shuttle's main engines and in a fourth brought in as a replacement.

While engineers worked to correct a basic design defect in the engines — more powerful than those that powered the first shuttle, Columbia, through five successful launches — a windstorm swept the Kennedy Space Center on Feb. 28.

Gusts up to 70 mph breached protective seals on the launch pad and allowed sand, dust and other matter to settle on Challenger's cargo — a 5,000-pound tracking and data relay satellite. The flight was delayed several additional days while experts evaluated the potential damage and cleaned the spacecraft.

O'Hara is optimistic. "We are very pleased with the engines after going through a very agonizing period of time; we are confident the engines are in excellent condition," he said.

As for the satellite, John Lovelace, a payload manager, said: "We feel very confident that we have gotten all the contaminants that could have caused us a risk."

The four astronauts who will fly the five-day mission used the delays to sharpen their skills in simulators and in jet planes.

Commanding the flight will be Paul J. Weitz, who spent 28 days aboard the Skylab space station in 1973. His pilot will be Air Force Col. Karol J. Bobko, with Story Musgrave and Donald H. Peterson serving as mission specialists.

In New England

It's brown eggs against white eggs

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Old McDonald's bought some eggs, ee-ee-i-o.

It used those eggs in its Egg McMuffins, ee-ee-i-o.

It was white eggs here, and white eggs there. Here an egg, there an egg, everywhere a white egg — except in New England, where 9 million hens lay almost 2 billion BROWN eggs every year.

Old McDonald has a problem, ee-ee-i-o.

The poultry farmers who own those 9 million chickens in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts are feeling fried over the fast-food chain's decision to use white eggs instead of brown eggs in a nationwide giveaway in May.

In the McDonald's promotion, customers will receive half a dozen fresh white eggs with certain purchases, the idea being to put to rest any suspicion that McDonald's uses powdered or processed eggs.

Nice idea, say the poultry farmers, but why white? Nearly all of New Hampshire's 600,000 laying hens produce brown eggs, said Thomas Danko, poultry specialist for the New Hampshire Extension Service.

Last week, the New England Brown Egg Council tried unsuccessfully to convince McDonald's it should use brown eggs, at least in New England, in its giveaway.

McDonald's had already agreed to buy its eggs for the promotion from Connecticut white-egg producers, who supply all the eggs for the chain's New England restaurants.

"Naturally, we are disappointed," Jerry LaFlamme, president of the New Hampshire Poultry Growers' Association, said Monday. "Relying on local people for business at McDonald's, you'd think they would want to use our eggs. But they don't."

"Obviously, they want to buy all their eggs from one place," Danko said. "But you'd think they would bend a little in this case."

Telephone calls to McDonald's corporate headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill., went unanswered Tuesday night.

Some New England politicians, including Rep. Norman D'Amours, D-N.H., wrote letters of complaint to McDonald's. Rep. John R. McKernan, R-Maine, appealed to McDonald's to "understand the potential damage the white egg giveaway could do to our egg industry." He said more than 80 percent of egg buyers in New England preferred brown eggs.

"We're fighting for our survival," said LaFlamme, who runs a poultry farm in Monroe. He said higher costs for heat and grain make the local brown eggs more expensive than white eggs produced closer to grain markets in the South.

LaFlamme said brown eggs are more likely to be fresh.

"White eggs are shipped, and you can have eggs that are several weeks old before they're brought to market," LaFlamme said. "We ship our eggs out daily from the henhouse to the processing plant."

Reagan the reverser

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In spite of Ronald Reagan's personal strengths, it is very unlikely he can shrink the size of government, says a man who has studied the historic impact of leadership.

"He has failed and he will continue to fail to reverse the forces behind government growth," says Professor Eugene E. Jennings, who contends that the Office of the President now has insufficient power to wage an effective battle.

One reason, he insists, is the "rule of elephantiasis," which, he says, states that forces for government growth are greater than those for shrinkage. It is fixed, he said. "It is easier to get fat than to get slim."

As a consequence, he claims, the presidential election process has now become "just a ceremonial gathering to celebrate the last vestiges of the belief that a single individual can make an imprint on the sands of time."

Jennings, author of the widely used volume, "Anatomy of Leadership," contends that a frontal attack on government size, cost and presence "produces a situation similar to antibodies clustering around a foreign invader."

In continuing the attempt, said Jennings, the president risks being tagged the "great reverser" because, he claims, Reagan has been forced to compromise much of the platform on which he ran.

Jennings is a Michigan State University professor, author of many books on corporate life and leadership, and adviser to corporation chairmen and occasionally heads of state. Jennings said Reagan is the first president since Calvin Coolidge to attack government size head-on. "And he doesn't have the tools."

Among the errors he says Reagan has made:

- Failing to realize there was insufficient power in the office of the presidency. Since Franklin D. Roosevelt, says Jennings, there has been a power shift toward legislative and judicial branches, and bureaucracy in general.
- Overestimating the power of a single individual.

"The present art of governance is not sophisticated enough to offset the power to push and shove a president."

Conflicting forces bombard the president's office, "and make him at worst into a vacillator or at best into a catalyst who has a stimulus to enhance or slow that which will eventually happen anyway."

-Failing to understand what is self-evident: "That vast number of Americans cannot get along with less government."

Jennings argues that each time the president goes directly to the public for support in his struggle against government elephantiasis he runs the risk of becoming less effective.

"The typical American today doesn't want less government if it means being deprived of benefits, supports and protection that he has come to believe are his rights," said the professor.

'Lunatics,' 'idiots' stricken from law

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House has taken "lunatics" and "idiots" out of a state law and replaced them with "incapacitated persons."

In a voice vote on Tuesday, House members voted tentative approval to a revision in the statute on lawsuits filed on behalf of Texans unable to handle their legal affairs.

The revision faces another House vote before going to the Senate for consideration.

Houston Rep. Brad Wright's bill deletes the law's reference to "lunatics, idiots or non compos mentis persons."

"Non compos mentis is a Latin legal phrase for 'not of sound mind.'"

Service awards

Rufus Holmes of McLean, left, and Darwin Allen of Wheeler were among employees of Getty Oil Company honored recently for 35 years of service with the company. A third area Getty employee, Vestal Bailey of McLean, was also honored for 35 years of service. The three men were recognized during a special recognition dinner in Tulsa, Okla.

Area Getty employees recognized for service

Three Pampa area employees of Getty Oil Company were among 49 employees of the firm, representing 1,710 cumulative years of service, honored at a special recognition dinner March 14 in Tulsa, Okla.

Darwin Allen, Vestal Bailey and Rufus Holmes were honored on the occasion of their 35th anniversaries with the company.

Allen, a Wheeler resident, began his career with Getty as a roustabout in Kellerville. He also worked as a truck driver and pumper before being named to his present position as lease operator in February, 1962.

Bailey, a McLean resident, began as a roustabout in 1948 and worked as a truck driver and mechanic helper before assuming his present position as lease operator in 1954.

Holmes, also a McLean resident, began his company career in the Kellerville area in 1948 and has been in the Pampa district since 1955. He has been a lease operator since 1967.

Under Getty's service recognition program, employees receive a service award for each five full years with the company. Beginning with the 25th year of service, employees and their spouses are guests at a special dinner held during their anniversary year. Honorees from five states attended the recent ceremonies.

Pollutants make way to top of the world

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Scientists have discovered that a dense haze of pollution hanging over the North Pole is larger than previously thought and could raise temperatures enough to change the world's climate.

Researchers fear that the gray haze, which builds up every winter, will hold too much heat in the atmosphere and may begin to melt the arctic ice.

"They are concerned that if the climate in the arctic warms up, that could theoretically affect the latitude climates, the mid-latitudes where we live," Bill Brennan, spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said Tuesday.

Brennan said that pollutants such as soot absorb radiation from the sun, effectively retaining heat. In addition, the particles darken the snow and the cloud cover, which means both reflect less and absorb more radiation and heat.

"We found the haze layers are much more numerous than we anticipated and the intensity of the pollution is much larger than was expected," NOAA principal investigator Russell Schnell reported after the group sampled air above the North Pole on Monday. "And the pollution was spread over much larger areas than I had originally thought it would be."

Scientists flying through the haze to measure it have been surprised to find it extending as high as 18,000 feet, Schnell said.

The haze was first reported by pilots in the 1950s, but only in the last few years has it been identified as being of man-made origin.

Before the current study, which employed about 25 scientists from various agencies such as the Boulder-based NOAA, scientists had to rely on information from a network of ground stations scattered around the Arctic Circle from Alaska to Norway.

"There was uncertainty as to whether what they were seeing was accurate or not," Brennan said. "They didn't know the extent of the haze and their instruments didn't tell them what the pollutants were."

NOAA also has scientists testing the air at the South Pole, but Brennan said they were monitoring carbon dioxide content.

In Washington being Reagan's friend important

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Laxalt occupies a unique position in a city where power — or proximity to it — often is the standard by which people are judged.

"One of President Reagan's closest friends," is how the Nevada senator most often is described, which is a pretty good tag for a Republican politician to carry after his name.

Laxalt's relationship with the president was built during the years they were governors of neighboring states, and later when Laxalt served as chairman of Reagan's 1976 and 1980 presidential campaigns.

Now the affable, gray-haired senator is trying to be a buffer between competing factions within a Republican Party that many observers believe could engage in a bloodbath if Reagan decides not to run for re-election in 1984.

A staunch conservative, Laxalt commands the loyalty of the cadre of political operatives throughout the country who have spent much of their adult lives planning for and working on Reagan presidential campaigns.

Many of those Reagan loyalists are growing restless. They want a signal from the White House that he is ready to campaign for another term. And they are worried that people they were fighting against in the early primaries and caucuses in 1980, will take over the 1984 campaign.

Tape for closed meetings

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has been sent a Senate-approved bill that would require statewide governmental bodies to make tape recordings of the proceedings when they hold a closed meeting. The vote was 31-0.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said the tape would be available as evidence in case there is a question whether the governmental body had a legitimate right to close the meeting.

For many weeks Laxalt has quietly moved around the country trying to calm their fears.

"I tell them he's a horse, to stay loose and in a few months we'll let them know," Laxalt said in an interview in his Senate office.

He also tells the Reaganites one other thing they are anxious to hear:

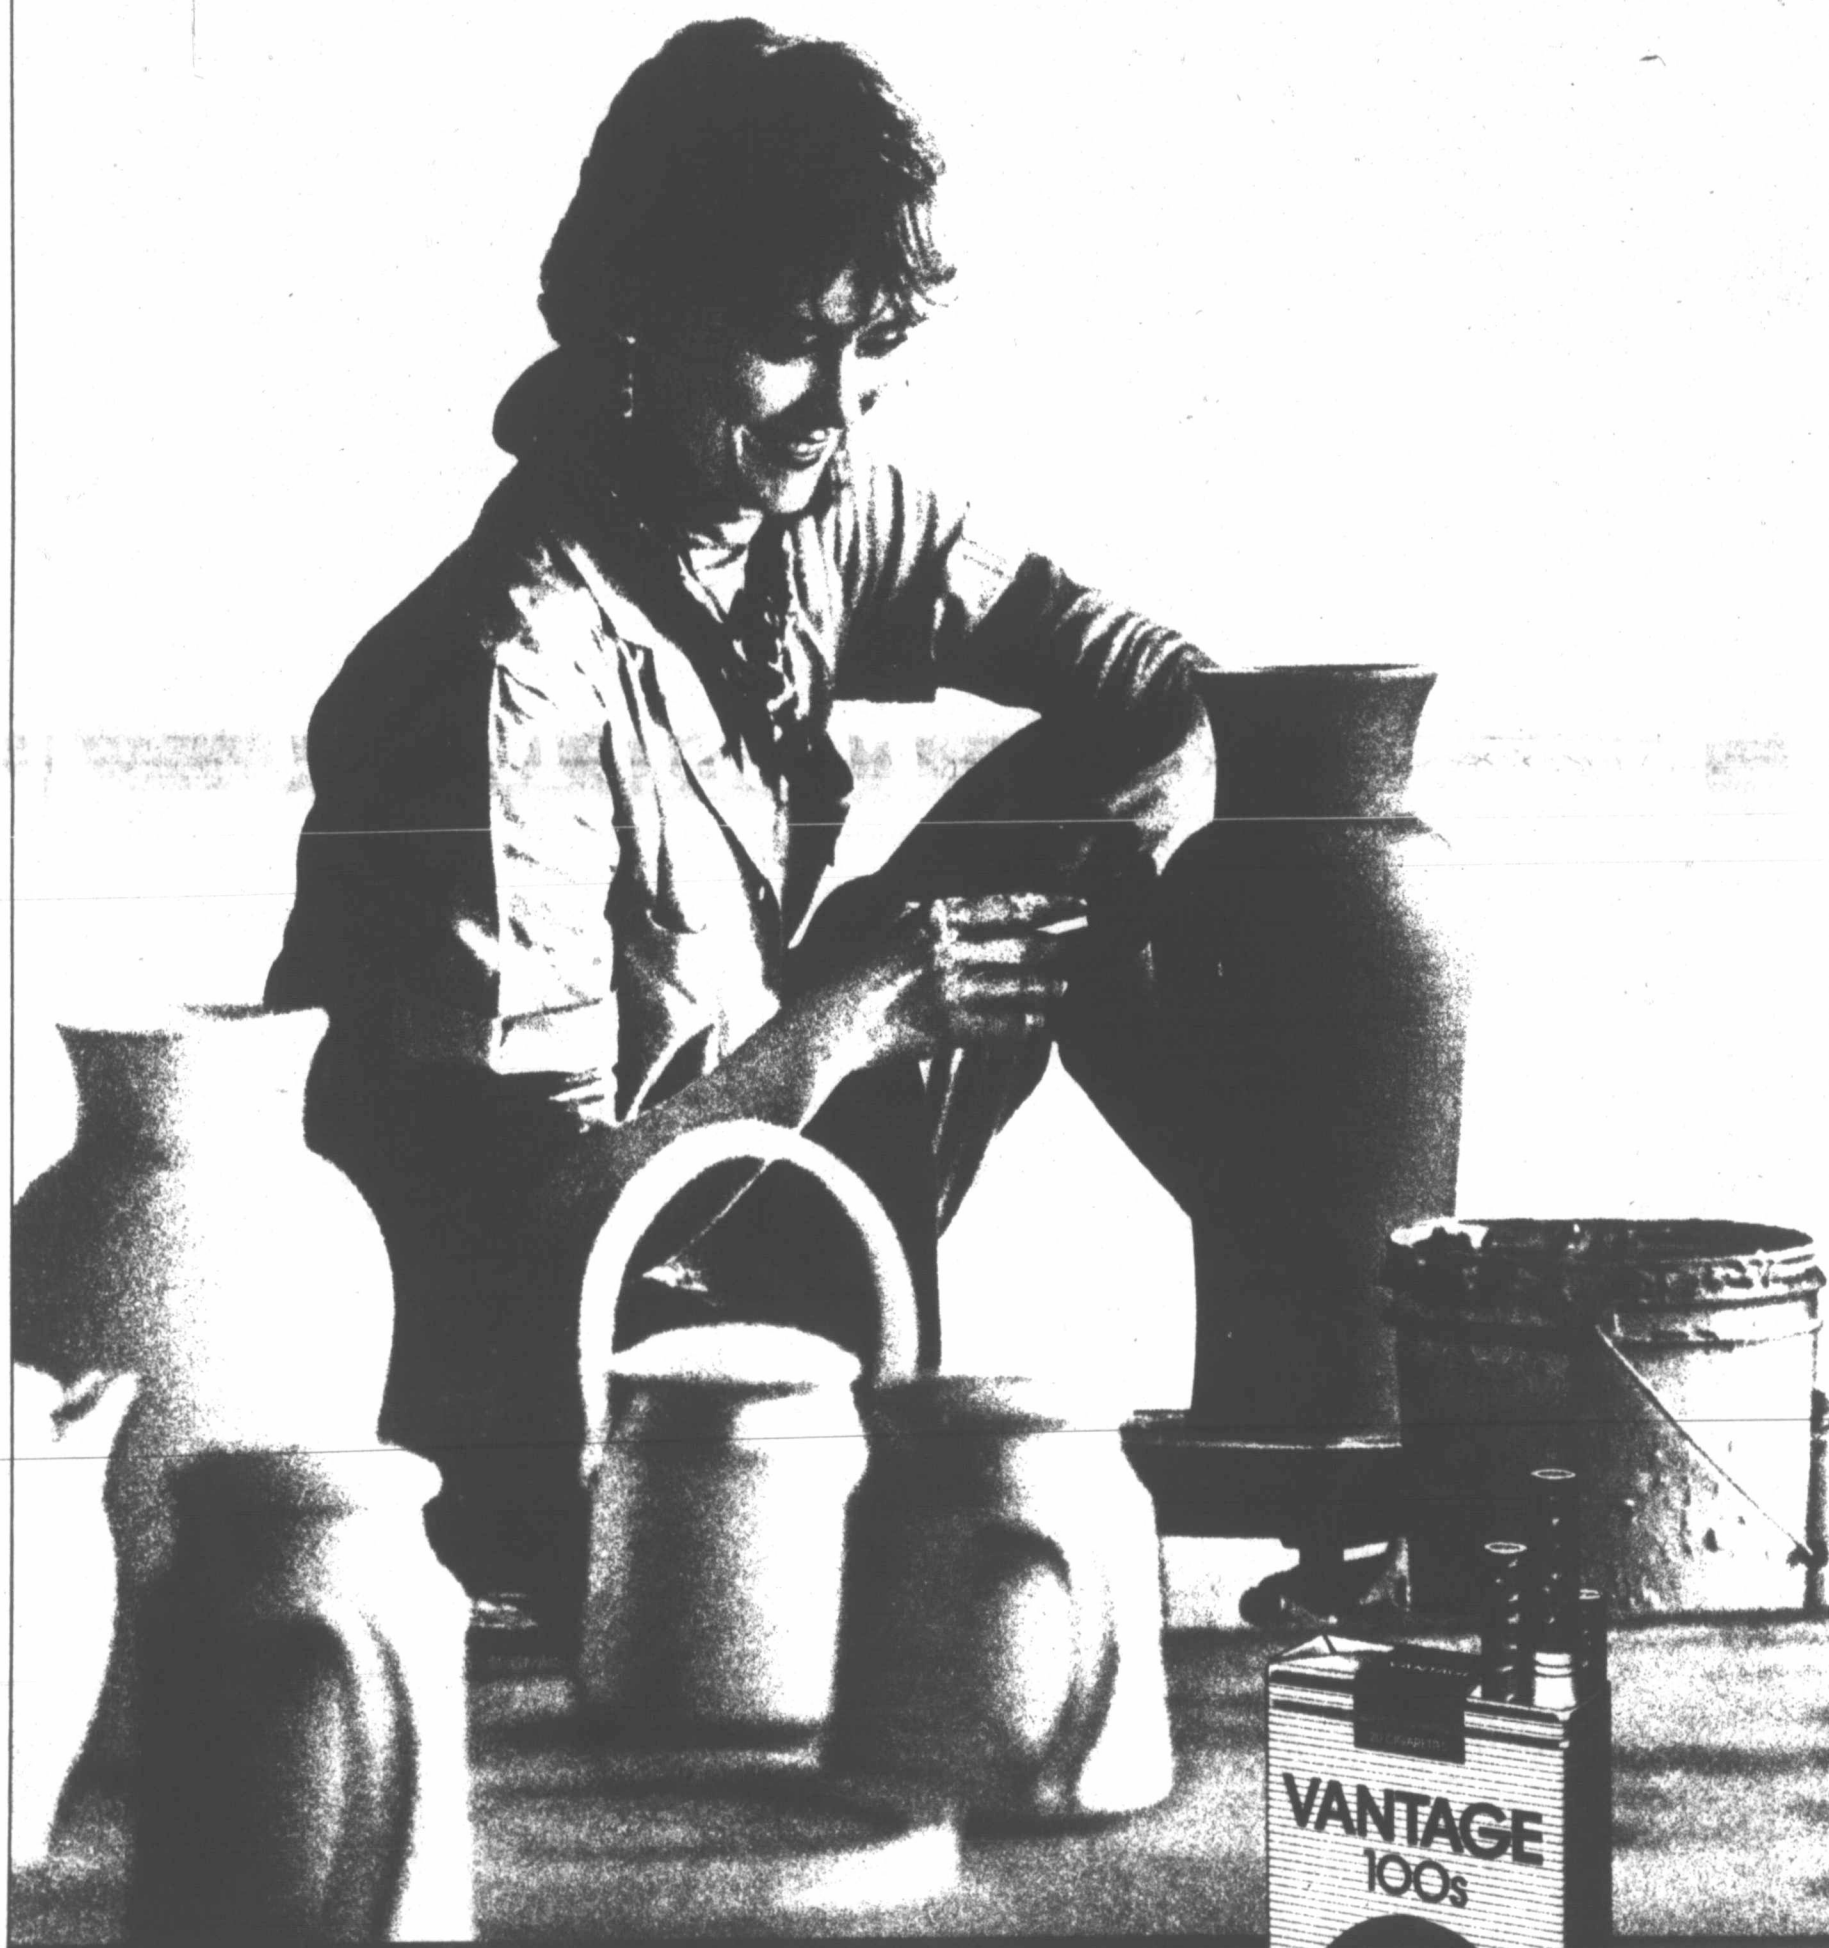

"I tell them I've been delegated for calling the shots and they seem satisfied by that."

Laxalt and White House aides are anxious to play down concern among conservatives over the role James A. Baker III might play in a Reagan re-election campaign.

But the fact is that concern is out there and is never likely to be fully calmed.

No matter what Laxalt is able to tell the president's political supporters around the country about his role in calling the shots in a re-election campaign, it is clear that Baker, as White House chief of staff, will play a critical role, even if a less visible one.

Bunny cookies perfect for baskets

When you're making Easter baskets this year, add some Funny Bunny cookies for the finishing touch. These cheerful fellows are easy to make, shape and decorate. You can make the dough quickly days or even weeks ahead, then bake and decorate the cookies when there's more time.

Bunnies, decorated eggs, chicks, springtime weather and colorful baskets filled with goodies. All these things and many more make Easter a day of joy that brings family and friends together.

Funny Bunny Cookies, a bright happy treat, is truly a last minute marvel that will brighten up any Easter basket and delight all who see them. Best of all they're easy to make and you can decorate them with Easter treats you have around the house.

Cookie dough needs to be made ahead and chilled thoroughly to make it easier to slice. Once made, the dough can be refrigerated for a week or more or frozen for up to six months. If frozen, be sure to transfer frozen dough to the refrigerator for at least an hour or to room temperature for 30 minutes before slicing.

One slice of dough forms the bunny's head. And one simple cut turns another slice into halves to form the bunny's ears.

Decorating begins with an easy powdered sugar frosting, some of which is tinted pink with maraschino cherry juice. Then let the entire family add Funny Bunny's features with gumdrops or jelly beans, licorice ropes or other colorful candies.

And you'll be pleased at how easy they are to make and how little time the decorating takes from your busy Easter schedule.

FUNNY BUNNY COOKIES
 1 c. brown sugar
 1 c. granulated sugar
 1 c. shortening
 2 eggs
 1 t. vanilla
 3 1/2 c. all-purpose flour
 1/4 t. salt
 1 t. baking soda
 1 t. cream of tartar

Cream sugars, shortening, eggs and vanilla until light and fluffy. Combine dry ingredients; stir into creamed mixture. Shape dough into logs two inches in diameter (or pack dough into four, 6 oz. frozen juice cans). Wrap rolls in waxed paper or foil (if using cans, cover tightly with foil or plastic wrap).

Chill at least 6 hours. Then slice dough 1/4-inch thick. Cut one-half of the circles in half. On an ungreased cookie sheet, place two halves on top of a whole circle to form bunny's head and ears. Bake at 375 degrees for 7 - 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Carefully transfer cookies to wire rack; cool completely.

FROSTING
 2 1/2 c. powdered sugar/
 4 T. milk (about)

Combine powdered sugar and milk; stir until smooth. Pour 1/4-cup frosting mixture into small bowl. Add cherry juice and mix well for pink tint. Spread top of each cookie with white frosting. Position licorice ropes for whiskers and gumdrops for eyes and nose. Let white frosting dry about 15 minutes. Carefully spread pink frosting on ears and under nose. Yield: about 28 cookies.

Easy walnut brownies

By Aileen Claire
 NEA Food Editor

Brownies are a favorite dessert or after-school snack of youngsters.

Here is a different combination that goes together easily — using biscuit mix and liquid chocolate as the base. Walnuts add that extra crunch.

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 2 envelopes unweetened liquid chocolate flavor
- 1/3 cup cooking oil
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3/4 cup biscuit mix
- 3/4 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
- Powdered sugar

Stir together eggs, sugar, chocolate, oil and vanilla; mix well. Add biscuit mix and walnuts; stir until thoroughly blended. Turn into a well-greased, 8-inch square baking pan and spread level. Bake at 350 degrees about 35 minutes or until top feels firm when touched lightly in center and sides have pulled away slightly from edges of pan. Cool in pan on wire rack. To serve, sprinkle with powdered sugar, cut into squares and top with a walnut half. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 16 2-inch squares.

Cancer survivors featured in TV special tonight

Three Americans who survived cancer to regain active lives will be the subject of "Cancer: The Winners," a 60-minute special to be broadcast by Superstation WTBS March 31 at 8:05 p.m. with a repeat at 10:35 p.m.

Cleveland radio personality Rena Blumberg, mountain guide Glenn Exum and American League umpire Bill Kunkel will be profiled in the program.

Blumberg had a mastectomy five years ago, followed by two years of intensive chemotherapy when doctors discovered the breast cancer had metastasized.

Exum, in his 70s, climbed the Grand Tetons again, one year after surgery for prostate cancer, on the 50th anniversary of his first ascent.

Kunkel was operated on for colorectal cancer in the fall of 1981 and was back behind the plate for the 1982 season. Their stories, told through filmed reports and in-studio interviews, are examples of the advances in treating and rehabilitating cancer patients today.

Bob Neal, WTBS broadcast personality, hosts the show. Willis J. Taylor, M.D., will join Neal in the interview segments. Taylor is the president of the American Cancer Society and head of Radiation Oncology at the Virginia Mason Hospital and Mason Clinic in Seattle, Wash. Members of the studio audience will also be able to ask questions during the interviews.

In addition to Superstation WTBS's premiere and repeat telecasts Thursday, March 31, Home Box Office will also carry the program Friday, April 1 at 5 p.m.

"Cancer: The Winners" is the third annual program to be co-sponsored by the American Cancer Society, the National Cable Television Association and Turner Broadcasting Systems.

Dear Abby

Woman's name change costs her a fortune

HAM AND hard-cooked eggs with raisins fill brunch turnovers.

Combine leftovers for turnovers

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Holidays are fun but often leave the freezer chock full of leftovers. These challenge a cook's ingenuity.

Easter, for example, has its abundance of leftover ham and eggs.

These make an excellent basis for turnovers for a brunch at a later date since they may be prepared ahead and frozen once baked.

HAM AND EGG TURNOVERS

- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 2/3 cup milk
- 1 1/2 cups diced cooked ham
- 2/3 cup raisins
- 3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 2 tablespoons sliced green onions
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- Salt to taste
- 2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen patty shells, thawed
- 1 egg beaten

In one-quart saucepan, melt butter over medium heat. Stir in flour, cook 1 minute. Stir in mustard; cook 1 minute. Gradually whisk in milk. Cook and stir until thickened, about 5 minutes. Stir in ham, raisins, hard-cooked eggs, onions, pepper and salt. Cook and stir over low heat 5 minutes. Remove from heat and set aside. Roll each patty shell into a 6-inch circle. Spoon fillings, equally divided, onto circles. Fold over and carefully press edges with fork to seal completely. Place on greased baking sheets. Brush with egg. Bake in 400-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes until puffed and golden brown. Serve hot or at room temperature. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 12 turnovers.

NOTE: Turnovers may be cooled, wrapped and frozen. To reheat in conventional oven: Thaw in refrigerator, place on baking sheet and heat in 350-degree oven 10 to 15 minutes until heated through. To reheat in microwave oven: Microwave each frozen turnover on high power 1 to 1 1/2 minutes until heated through.

DEAR ABBY: I had to write after reading the letter from the "Proud Orlikoffs," who were upset when their son married a woman named Reilly and he changed his name to Reilly instead of insisting that she change her name to Orlikoff.

My brother, Edward Moravitz, married a girl who thought Moravitz sounded too ethnic, so she nagged him until he changed their name to Moore.

After Edward passed away (unfortunately at a much too early age), my mother, in making out her will, left the following bequests:

"To my two grandchildren, I leave $25,000 each. And to my daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edward Moore, I leave $1,000 — the other $24,000 she can get from some family by the name of Moore."

I hope you print this. Don't worry about embarrassing anybody. I've changed all the names, but the idea is the same.

OLGA IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR OLGA: Let's hear it from a man who takes the woman's part in this name-changing controversy:

DEAR ABBY: The "Proud Orlikoffs" felt that their son was abandoning his heritage when he changed his name to "Reilly," which is his fiancée's name.

I ask you: What about the proud Reillys? Why should the woman be expected to change her name to her spouse's just because of an outdated custom?

A man who changes his name to his wife's name is not disgracing his family any more than she would be had she changed her name to his.

Too bad we can't all do as Eleanor Roosevelt did — marry a person with the same last name.

OHIO MALE

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column a few months ago from a daughter whose father had developed a relationship with a lady shortly after the death of his wife, who had lost a long battle with cancer. It hit home with me because my father very lovingly nursed my mother through six years of cancer before we lost her. My father was devoted to Mom for over 30 years — and especially those last six.

About two months after Mom's death, Dad met a lovely lady. There were some unkind comments from family members about the short mourning period he gave Mom. Almost two years later, he still mourns Mom, and this lovely lady understands his grief and comforts him. They have a very caring relationship. Neither one is ready for marriage, but they find it financially advantageous to live together. Now they're getting pressure from family members who want them to get married.

I support my father in his decision as long as he is happy and comfortable with the relationship.

My point: Where do family members get off judging and putting pressure on a man who has lost a beloved wife, and now has a second chance at happiness? No one will ever take Mom's place in our hearts. But Mom is gone, and Dad must go on living.

I hope you'll print this so others won't judge a situation unless they've been there.

A LOVING DAUGHTER IN NEW MEXICO

Akeem Olajuwon: A power in the pivot

HOUSTON (AP) — Seven-foot Houston center Akeem Olajuwon gets his agility from his past as a soccer player but his break-neck dashes up and down a basketball court come from his insatiable desire to do two things with the ball — dunk it and block it.

Olajuwon was a high-speed shuttle in last week's NCAA Midwest Regional title game against Villanova, spending much of his time above the rim on both ends of the court.

Was it a pregame call from off-season buddy Moses Malone of the Philadelphia 76ers that fired him up?

No, says Olajuwon, who reduced the matter to its simplest form.

"I love to dunk the ball and block the ball and to do both I have to run very fast," said Olajuwon, who now becomes the problem of No. 2 ranked Louisville in Saturday's semifinals of the NCAA Final Four championship tournament. "That's just the way I like to play."

Olajuwon admitted he did benefit from Malone's call.

"He just told me it depends on me," Olajuwon said. "He said if I play hard every minute of the game, the Cougars will win it all."

Whatever the impetus, Olajuwon hit 10 of 11 shots, scored 20 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked eight shots against stunned Villanova for his best performance of the season.

Olajuwon has emerged as one of the top power centers in the nation with only four years of basketball experience. Much of that time he was playing under international rules in his native Nigeria.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said Olajuwon's early knowledge of the game was "Give me the ball."

Olajuwon still will occasionally entertain teammates with a few soccer maneuvers deftly juggling a basketball using his feet. But he's far more awesome using his hands for a slam dunk.

Lewis likes to tell how he didn't think enough of Olajuwon as a prospect to meet him at the airport when he flew here from Nigeria.

Astros' Ryan placed on disabled list

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
The Houston Astros received some bad news and some worse news.

First, they were informed Tuesday that hard-throwing Nolan Ryan, who is only 15 strikeouts away from Walter Johnson's all-time record, had been placed on the 21-day disabled list with an inflamed prostate.

Then, three Astros pitchers — Mike LaCoss, Frank LaCorte and rookie Julio Solano — gave up 16 hits, all singles, and 11 walks in a 12-5 exhibition loss to the Atlanta Braves. LaCoss allowed 11 of the hits and seven runs in five innings.

The 36-year-old Ryan, who will go into the season with 3,494 career strikeouts, had been scheduled to start Houston's home opener April 5 against Los Angeles. He joins the disabled list first baseman Art Howe, who has tendonitis in his right elbow, team spokesman Mike Ryan said.

In the game, the Astros also committed five errors, three by third baseman Phil Garner, to add fuel to Atlanta's offense. Chris Chambliss had a pair of RBI singles for Atlanta, and Alan Ashby homered for Houston.

In other exhibition games, San Francisco defeated California 5-1, Kansas City edged Montreal 8-7, the New York Yankees shutout Los Angeles 8-0, Pittsburgh downed St. Louis 5-3, the Chicago White Sox beat Toronto 3-1, Oakland clobbered Milwaukee 10-5, Seattle blanked Cleveland 5-0, Philadelphia whitewashed Baltimore 4-0, Cincinnati shaded Boston 4-3, Minnesota pounded Detroit 10-5 and the Chicago Cubs downed San Diego 10-7.

Dave Bergman and Johnny LeMaster had run-scoring singles to snap a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning and boost San Francisco over the Angels, but not before Giants Manager Frank Robinson had been ejected from the game in a vehement argument with homeplate umpire Mark Johnson. Robinson and Johnson argued over an interference call against Joel Youngblood on an attempted sacrifice bunt in the seventh, interrupting the game for 15 minutes and resulting in a threat by Johnson to call a forfeit.

The Yankees shut out Los Angeles for the second consecutive day. This time, Shane Rawley, Dale Murray and Rich Gossage combined on the six-hitter, while the Yankees victimized Fernando Valenzuela for eight runs in the seventh inning. Don Baylor led the Yanks with a double and two singles.

Pittsburgh touched St. Louis relief ace Bruce Sutter for four hits and three runs in the eighth inning to beat the Cards. Dale Berra had two RBI, including one in the decisive rally against Sutter.

Vance Law doubled home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and scored an insurance run for Toronto when rookie Scott Fletcher singled. Toronto scored its only run off Richard Dotson in the first on Jorge Orta's RBI single.

Carney Lansford hit a two-run homer in the first inning to ignite a 17-hit Oakland attack against Milwaukee. Mike Heath's bases-loaded triple keyed the A's four-run third inning against Mike Caldwell.

Pampa holds off Borger rally

BORGER—Pampa jumped out to an early lead and held off a seventh-inning rally to edge Borger, 7-6, Tuesday in District 14A baseball action.

"We pulled one out, but it got a little scary there at the end," Pampa coach Bill Butler said.

Pampa righthander Coyle Winborn (1-0) held Borger to five hits before he left in the fifth inning with the Harvesters ahead, 6-2.

"Coyle did an excellent job," Butler said. "He got a little tired in the fifth and they started hitting him."

Borger started a comeback in the bottom of the seventh with Pampa leading, 7-3. Relief hurler Randy Skaggs got leadoff man Shane Wade on a groundball, but gave up consecutive walks to Kevin McKinney and Rob Williams, then yielded a run-scoring double to Brett Newton. Skaggs settled down to strike out Mike Orr, but a bases-loaded walk and an infield error made it 7-6 with two outs. However, Chris Stimson grounded back to Skaggs to end the game.

Garland Allen gave Pampa a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a single scoring Charles Wuest, who had led off with a base rap.

Pampa made it 3-0 in the second inning. Wade Barker and Toby Ritthaler both singled with Barker scoring on Wuest's liner that was dropped by Wade. Another run scored when Allen was hit by a pitch, forcing in a run.

Pampa's big blow came in the fifth when 270 hitting Toby Ritthaler blasted a two-run homer to make it 6-3.

Allen, who entered the game with a .280 average, led Pampa's seven-hit attack with two hits and three rbis.

Pampa, 4-7 overall and 1-2 in district play, hosts Brownfield at 4 p.m. Thursday in another loop contest.

Borger is now 4-6 and 2-1.

Idol of spring

Garvey walks with the common man

By Murray Olderman

YUMA, Ariz. (NEA) — For the first time in 27 years, Steven Patrick Garvey, who is all of 34 years old, is starting out a spring thoroughly divorced from Dodger Blue. Just as he is thoroughly separated (on the way to being divorced) from Cyndy Garvey, the mother of his two pre-teen daughters.

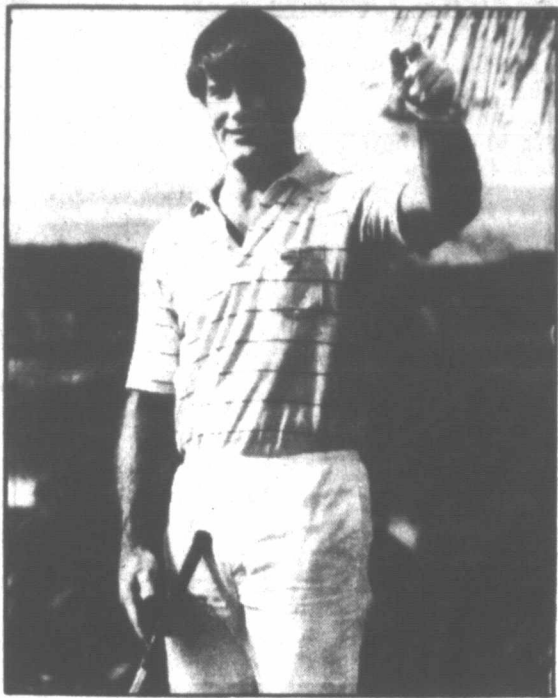

The process, Steve Garvey feels, has humanized him on both counts — in the public's view.

The perception of him as the perfect All-American man with the perfect career and the perfect family has been altered. The alabaster figure on the pedestal has teetered and is down there on the ground, walking with the common people.

"They can relate to me," muses Garvey, the San Diego Padres new first baseman, as he contemplates the change. "They didn't know it, but they always could. It's particularly so with the press. They're no longer looking for flaws. Now they write more about me professionally. Steve Garvey is from a middle class family. His dad is a bus driver for Greyhound. His mother works hard (as an insurance adjuster), and they're both still working. They had an only son who played from 8 in the morning till dusk, and developed himself. They gave me a tremendous set of principles. And I've been successful."

The association with Dodger Blue came in the spring of 1956, when he was 7 years old and with his father went out to the Tampa airport to meet "KO 1," the private plane of the world champion Brooklyn Dodgers. The team trained then as now in Vero Beach, but flew to the west coast of Florida, where Steve was born and raised, for five days of exhibition play. His dad drove the team bus to the games, and Steve served as the bat boy on the field.

For the next 11 springs,

while he became an all-state quarterback, an all-state baseball slugger, and also played basketball and golf. Garvey was the Dodgers' bat boy. He went off to Michigan State to play football, and in his sophomore year he started eight games at defensive back. But then the Dodgers picked him No. 1 in a special phase of the free agent draft in June 1968, and his future was ordained.

He had already met Cyndy, a stunning blonde freshman. And in 1971, by which time he had already progressed through the minors to a permanent spot on the Los Angeles Dodgers, they were married.

As he prepares to start his 13th full season in the major leagues, with the San Diego Padres, Garvey has played 1,107 consecutive games at first base, all with the Dodgers. In the 11th Padres game in 1983, he likely will become the National League all-time leader for playing consecutive games, passing Billy Williams of Chicago.

It might have been with the Dodgers, who, after his contract lapsed in 1982, were willing to renew it for four years at a sum of over $1 million per annum. But Garvey insisted on five years. That led, in his words, to "the termination of our association."

"All I've done my whole career with them," explains Garvey, "was to promote the image of the Dodger organization. I never lied or tried to deceive them. I told them I thought I could play for five years and I wanted to play for five years. And they wouldn't see it."

The words are not impassioned. Ever controlled — and that control is transferred to his immaculate grooming, from the carefully combed forelocks to the laces on his shoes — Steve tries to deflect any hint of bitterness. But it's there by insinuation.

He says, "You have 3 million people coming into your park, and suddenly you decide you're going to get rid of all these guys (in addition to Garvey, the Dodgers also disposed of longtime third baseman Ron Cey) and put in young guys. Now you're cheating your public, unless all these guys come together and win this year."

"A guy in my position, who has been synonymous with this organization and can still contribute, and whom the public en masse wanted to stay, it wasn't easy to leave. It was the single, toughest decision I ever made."

After seven consistently productive seasons, in which he averaged over .300 and over 100 runs batted in, Garvey is coming off two sub-par years, in which his batting average, his RBIs and his home run totals dropped off severely. Since he is 34, a relatively advanced age for a player, there is some doubt about his ability to play out his new five-year pact with San Diego.

"I'm sure I can," he rebuts, "or I wouldn't have signed it. And if it turns out at some point that I can't, then that'll be my last year. Say in the first half of 1987, I see I can't play up to the standards I set for myself, I'll end it that year. I worked too hard to get where I am."

That is the mortal Steve Garvey talking, conscious of his professional and personal setbacks.

"People put me on a pedestal," he says, "and they were looking for flaws and cracks. If there was one little thing, 'Oh, somebody perfect doesn't do that.'"

"I kept saying, 'Listen, I'm just a human being. All I'm trying to do is be the best possible person I can and the best professional.'"

A professional, by definition, is one "participating for gain or livelihood." By his salary, at least, Garvey is doing the best he can.

In 12th-man tradition

Walk-ons to handle Aggie kickoff duties

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Mike Carter took off his Lubbock Monterey high school uniform four years ago and thought his football career was over.

He enrolled at Texas A&M along with others with similar thoughts including fellow senior Dennis Burns of Crosby and freshman Rodney Pennywell of Houston.

But the trio and 37 other A&M students were back in pads Tuesday for one more shot at making the Aggie football team as members of Coach Jackie Sherrill's 12th man kickoff team.

Sherrill decided last December to invite members of the A&M student body to try out for the Aggie kickoff team. The walk-on hopefuls, Sherrill said, would handle kickoff coverage duties at all A&M home games this season.

Sherrill said the gesture was his way of expressing gratitude to the outstanding student body. Carter and his tryout mates were eager to rekindle their competitive spirits.

"It was tough for me to adjust to not playing after high school," Carter said. "It was hard going to the games and seeing certain situations in a game where I felt I could help."

Student assistant coach David Beal, a former Aggie quarterback, was designated the 12th man coach and set about paring down the original tryout list from 250 to the 40 who went through their first workouts Tuesday.

The group will be cut to 12 players at the end of spring training.

"I thought the rest of the team might think we were just getting in the way," Carter said. "But when some of us did a good job on something, they'd come up and tell us."

Beal said their were no surprises after the first workout.

"They were all excited and anxious to find out what it was all about," Beal said. "Just from listening to the other coaches talk, I think they did a good job. We won't put them in kickoff formation until next week. We want to get them used to the hitting first."

Carter said he expected the first workout to be worse than it was.

"I felt myself enjoying being back on the field and doing some hitting," Carter said. "I got the feeling that Coach Sherrill told the regulars to go pretty rough to make sure we could take it." Burns, a 6-foot-1, 180-pound senior, said he saw it as his last chance to play football.

"I just thought I could do it," he said. "We have to go out there and prove ourselves. If we do that, everyone will accept us."

Pennywell, 5-10, 182, from Houston Jersey Village, hasn't had time to forget the thrill of competing.

"I'm a freshman so I haven't forgotten what it feels like," he said. "I was very athletically inclined in high school so when this came up I was interested in helping get it started. For most of us it was our last chance to play."

The 12th man tradition started in 1922 when E. King Gill, a former member of the football team, was called from the stands to suit up. Gill never got into the game but it was good enough to start a legend.

And now the legend is no longer waiting. It's right out on the field.

Struggling Celtics fall to Pacers

By The Associated Press
Coach Bill Fitch has been agonizing with his Boston Celtics, but he hasn't come up with a pat answer yet for the team's skid.

"If it was that simple, I would have burned someone at the stake a long time ago," Fitch said Tuesday night after his team was blown away, 130-101, at Indianapolis.

The loss was the seventh in 11 games and 13th in 24 for the Celtics, who have slipped 11 games behind Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division of the National Basketball Association and only three ahead of New Jersey.

"We've just been struggling," Fitch said. "We haven't been physical enough all year. I can only remember one rebound out there tonight that was a physical one."

The victory was only the 19th for Indiana this year and just its fourth in 22 meetings with the Celtics. Clark Kellogg scored 29 points and had 10 rebounds for the Pacers, who ran off two scoring bursts, in the second and third quarters, to turn the game into a laugher.

During the second spurt, Indiana outscored Boston 20-9 to take an 83-58 lead after six minutes were gone in the second half. Kellogg had six points in the run.

Larry Bird was Boston's high scorer with 25 points.

"I wouldn't have expected to win like that," Indiana Coach Jack McKinney said. "I would have just been happy to win. This is the most fun I've had all year."

In other NBA games, Chicago edged Philadelphia 97-95. San Antonio outscored Denver 136-129. Kansas City defeated Houston 111-95.

Bullets 94, Bucks 81
Milwaukee was prevented from clinching its third straight Midwest Division title when Frank Johnson and Jeff Ruland led Washington to victory with 24 points apiece. The victory kept Washington two games behind Atlanta in the battle for the sixth and final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference.

The Bullets took the lead for good by scoring eight straight points and taking a 58-50 advantage in the third quarter en route to their sixth straight victory.

Warriors 109, Mavericks 106

Golden State broke a seven-game losing streak with the help of a crucial steal by Lester Conner with 12 seconds left. With the Warriors holding a 107-106 lead, Conner swiped an inbound pass by Dallas' Kelvin Ransey, and Sleepy Floyd converted two free throws to give Golden State its three-point victory.

Joe Barry Carroll led the way with 28 points for the Warriors, and Mark Aguirre had 31 points for Dallas.

Judge says state shut down radioactive materials firm unfairly

AUSTIN (AP) — A company shut down after an accident contaminated at least one worker with radiation won a temporary reversal of state actions by convincing a judge that the firm was not given a fair chance to respond to the closing.

State District Judge John May agreed Tuesday to issue a temporary injunction blocking the Texas Bureau of Radiation Control's move to close the Gulf Nuclear Inc. facility at Webster, Texas, attorneys said.

Dudley Murrey, representing Gulf Nuclear Inc., said May's ruling upheld company contentions the agency violated state law "by not providing us with proper notice of the action and by not providing us with a hearing on the order dated March 18."

The Webster plant was ordered closed after officials learned of a Feb. 8 accident. Preliminary tests show one employee was contaminated with 13 times the allowable amount of americium 241, officials said.

But Brian Berwick, an assistant attorney general who represented the state, said May has left the state in a "legally clouded position."

"We need to study the law books and find some way to respond," Berwick said.

Berwick said the state, in a suit filed Monday, asked the court to back the bureau of radiation control's order.

Ed Bailey, director of licensing for the state agency, said the contamination apparently occurred Feb. 8 when a lathe ruptured a container of the material.

Tests are being conducted at a federal lab in Oak Ridge, Tenn., on several plant employees who were in the area of the accident. Final results have not been released.

The accident was only reported three weeks later by an employee who feared he might be contaminated, officials said. That worker was subsequently fired. Murrey said the termination stemmed from excessive absences and had nothing to do with the report.

The company filed suit Friday against the state Health Department, which supervises the radiation control agency. The state responded Monday with a suit charging that Gulf Nuclear shipped radioactive materials on "commercial passenger flights to Mexico six times in 1980 and 1981.

That suit also asked the court to back the agency's ruling. It also alleged that excessive radiation levels were measured at three spots on the company's fence line at Webster.

Gulf Nuclear, in a company statement released last week, said it believes its safety procedures are adequate to protect its employees and the public.

The attorney general's office said in court papers that "the continued operations of Gulf Nuclear involving the handling of radioactive materials now poses a threat to the public health and safety and the environment."

Lawmakers consider remodeling UIL

AUSTIN (AP) — The executive director of the University Interscholastic League says the UIL does such a superb job that even though it penalizes — the public schools — rally around it.

At least two lawmakers, however, feel the time has come to remodel the league.

Legislation has bounced off the UIL's leather-tough hide for years, and the league's control of extracurricular academic and athletic competition in public schools has only changed with its OK.

Asked how the UIL, which was created in 1910 and is located on the University of Texas campus, had survived intact, Executive Director Bailey Marshall said in an interview the school lobby is the UIL's best friend.

"What happens when there is a bill that would affect the organization or rules, those people that it would affect the most, which are the school superintendents, principals, speech teachers, journalism teachers, drama directors, band directors, coaches, parents of the kids — all these people get word to their legislators the good things about the league," said Marshall. "And there is no doubt in my mind that we have one of the better organizations — if not the best — in the United States as far as overall program is concerned."

"Eddie Joseph (assistant executive vice president) of the Texas High School Coaches Association said the other day for every one who's disgruntled, he believed he could pick out 5,000 that were favorable to the organization," Marshall recalled.

One who is disgruntled is Rep. Frank Madla, D-San Antonio, who complains that the league "only has the ability to penalize young people."

Violations of league rules, which are adopted by member schools, often result in probation for the school and occasionally in disqualification for district and state honors.

"When there is an infraction, the league's only recourse is to disqualify a team or group," said Madla, a former teacher. "I think that needs to be corrected. If the football coach violates a rule, I think the individual should be penalized, not the school."

Marshall said, "We've tried for years to separate the coach's sin from the player's sin," but enforcement has fallen back on local officials, who seldom follow through.

Madla's bill would replace the UIL with a Texas Interscholastic League, which would be run by a nine-member commission appointed by the State Board of Education. The commission would be in full operation by July 1, 1984.

Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, is sponsoring the same bill in the Senate, and Madla said House and Senate committee hearings on the identical proposals are scheduled for this month. "I think a lot of us have been giving the UIL the benefit of the doubt for far too long," said Mauzy.

"This is much farther than any UIL bill has gone before," said Madla, who added that he has received "all kinds of mail for and against" the league, including from teachers and school districts who support his proposal. "Folks from top to bottom are cognizant of the changing mood toward the organization."

"I personally feel that the organization (UIL) has the means for changing to meet the needs of society," said Marshall, a former coach, teacher and principal. "If it were changed to some other mode of operation, they would still have to have rules, somebody would still have to make those rules and regulations, and somebody would be unhappy."

As an example of how the league has become more lenient in response to lawsuits and other challenges, Marshall cited the new waiver officer, who will hear appeals and can grant exemptions to UIL rules. This procedure alone will cost the UIL an estimated $85,000 a year.

Marshall said if the Legislature created the league as a separate state agency, "the schools themselves would be less likely to have a voice in what the rules are," and the league would lose the valuable resources of the University of Texas, which controls the UIL budget and provides free housing and athletic facilities, as well as business and professional staff services.

Also, Marshall said, he could envision — with the proposed nine-member commission — "a little more direct pressure on individuals within the organization administration to either turn their head or let something slide through."

"At present we don't have that because the university does not try to get involved... They don't threaten me with, 'Hey, we're going to fire you, or hey, you better not do this or we're going to cut your salary...'"

Marshall and Madla agreed that they had had a "cordial meeting" on Madla's bill, but the legislator said, "We accomplished nothing... Mr. Marshall sees my bill as one that would eliminate his position. I don't blame him for being hostile."

Athletic Director Shorty Lawson of the Abilene Independent School District said, "The UIL isn't perfect, but it's the best thing in the country."

Lewisville defends its anti-drug program

LEWISVILLE, Texas (AP) — In the past 10 days, news reports have made this Dallas suburb famous, as well as infamous. And all the attention is leaving many townspeople longing for a return to obscurity.

The issue that has attracted national interest is a 7-month-old drug informer program instituted at the town's only high school.

Under the program, any of Lewisville High School's 2,220 students can be paid up to $100 for providing "information leading to the arrest and conviction of another student who is using or selling drugs."

So far, 30 students have been turned in; drugs — mostly marijuana — were found on 15. The Parent Teacher Student Association, which sponsors the program, so far has paid $450 to student informers.

The informer program has received widespread news coverage. It has been investigated, dissected and criticized. It has been called a last-ditch attempt to solve a desperate drug problem. It has been labeled a snitch tactic, pitting friend against friend.

Lewisville, though, sees the issues quite a bit differently.

"The media makes it seem as if Lewisville High School has this great big drug problem, which it doesn't, and that there's this great big controversy about the program, which there isn't," says Cathy Quagliana, a senior at the high school and editor of the school newspaper, Farmers' Harvest. "People don't understand what the big deal is."

According to interviews with students, parents and community leaders, Miss Quagliana's view is shared by most of the 30,000 residents of Lewisville, a former farming community just 23 miles from downtown Dallas.

Today, the town is the home of people who commute to jobs in Denton, Dallas and at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, says Marjorie Head, secretary of the town's chamber of commerce. But Lewisville still is proud of its heritage; the high school's athletic teams are the Fighting Farmers, whose emblem is painted on a Lewisville water tower.

The town works to maintain its small-town atmosphere, says Ms. Head.

Says City Councilman Bill Cross: "There are a lot more families here than single people, and they are conservative families."

This conservatism, says Cross, has shown itself in the town's defense of the drug informer program. Cross himself equates the program with the honor system at a military academy, and he applauds the idea.

"The real thing you don't have anymore is honor, like at West Point or the Naval Academy," he says. "Honor is the most important thing a person can have. When I was young, if you saw somebody do something wrong, you called the police. Nowadays, I see people not getting involved."

The school's principal, Douglas Killough, instigated the drug informer program after coming to Lewisville last summer from Alabama, where he operated a similar program.

Under the rules, a student who gives a tip receives $50 in cash if drugs are found on the suspect. The money has been donated by Lewisville businesses and individual residents. Either the principal or an assistant principal conducts a search of the suspect's pockets or purse. The identity of the tipster is closely guarded.

Of the 15 students found with drugs through the informer program, all were reported to the Lewisville police, remanded to the custody of their parents and expelled from school. The maximum expulsion time is one year. Formal drug rehabilitation is not offered by the school district, nor is it mandatory.

Mark Allen, 16, a sophomore at the school, says he is one of the students who was searched. A couple of weeks ago, he says, he was pulled out of biology class and taken to the principal's office, where he was asked to empty his pockets and wallet. No drugs were found.

The action was taken, he says, because someone saw a friend repay a loan and thought it looked like a drug deal. "They said someone had seen us exchange money," Allen says. "But they didn't have nothing on me."

Angered by the experience, he opposes the drug informer program. "It was humiliating," he says.

Yet he, like most students, has not gone before the student council, school administrators or the PTSA to raise questions about the program.

In fact, before this month, the only public opposition to the program was voiced in three unsigned letters to the editor published in a Lewisville newspaper in September.

One of the letter-writers, Tony Methvin, 18, a senior at the high school, now openly discusses his feelings. He originally wanted to be anonymous, he says, because of the pressures of living in a small town.

"If I put my name on that letter and I was one of only five people in town who felt that way, there's a lot of flak I would get," he says.

But since he appeared on a national network morning news show last week to debate principal Killough, says Methvin, he hasn't received any of the expected criticism.

"I think if people had strong opinions one way or another," he says, "some difference in the atmosphere at the school would have occurred. But since most people are lackadaisical and don't have any opinion about it, there hasn't been any change."

Methvin says the main argument anyone has voiced against the program is that it offers a monetary reward. "They're afraid of the ramifications of money being dangled in front of someone's face," he says. "A student may be willing to make up some information or get someone they don't like in trouble."

But not all the informers have taken the reward, says John Zepka, who co-chairs the PTSA with his wife, Kathy. Mrs. Zepka confirms the PTSA has made nine payments of $50 each.

The Zepkas are among the program's most ardent supporters.

"We did it to help the children, and it's coming out so differently, like we're infringing on their rights," says Kathy Zepka. "That's not the way it is at all."

And both are determined to stand by the community's feelings.

"The phone calls received at the school, at the administration office, at my house are completely in favor (of the program), overwhelmingly in favor, might add," says John Zepka. "The program is alive and well. It is fully supported. We don't intend to change it."

School board president Dr. Dale Jackson echoes Zepka's sentiments. "It's the first time in 15 years on the board that we've gotten call after call saying, 'We're behind you 100 percent,'" Jackson says.

Last week, the school's student council passed a resolution supporting the program. The vote, says council president Jeff Nowak, was almost unanimous.

Supporters of the program don't think of student informers as snitches. Instead, they believe the informers are helping other students who are being victimized by drugs.

Reagan, Brady say they hold no grudge against Hinckley

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and White House Press Secretary James Brady say they don't hold any grudges against John W. Hinckley Jr. for shooting them two years ago, but Brady adds, "I hope he doesn't win the Irish sweepstakes."

Reagan, in an interview with The Washington Post published today, said he has accepted the assassination attempt as "something that goes with the territory" of being president.

It was two years ago today that Hinckley tried to kill Reagan as the president was leaving the Washington Hilton. Reagan, Brady, Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy and police officer Thomas Delahanty were wounded.

All but Brady, who was hit in the brain, have fully recovered.

Hinckley was acquitted by reason of insanity last year and is being held in St. Elizabeths, a federal mental hospital.

"I don't hold any grudge or anything," Reagan said of Hinckley.

"I just think it would be fine if he could be cured, also," Reagan also said that "whatever time I have, I owe the Lord."

"I think someone was watching out for me," the president said.

Reagan was struck in the chest by a single .22-caliber bullet, and collapsed as he was escorted into the George Washington University hospital. At one point he was close to death as surgeons struggled to find the bullet and patch a punctured lung.

In the interview, Reagan discussed legislation he sent to Congress last year that would abolish the plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. He said he favors changing the law so that a defendant could be found "guilty but insane."

"There seems to be something wrong with 'not guilty by reason of insanity' when the person has performed the deed, which to me 'not guilty' has always meant," Reagan said.

Reagan also said that while he doesn't think about the assassination attempt too much these days, it does sometimes concern his wife, Nancy.

"I knew it was much worse for her," Reagan said, referring to one-day trips outside the White House. "... She didn't reveal it too much, but I knew what she was thinking."

Brady said in an interview for this morning's "Today Show" on NBC, that he doesn't wish Hinckley "any evil," but gets angry about the shooting "when I think they are going to let him go."

He said, "Every day in therapy, I'm there and taking my pain-ridden body around the gymnasium and hurting every step of the way. It's pretty difficult to do that without thinking of why you're there."

Rare egg starting to hatch at San Diego zoo

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A tiny California condor embryo is gradually pecking through its egg shell and may break through within days, becoming the first of the almost extinct birds to hatch in captivity, zoo officials said today.

The bluish egg was snatched Feb. 23 from its parents' nest at the condor sanctuary in Ventura County and has been incubating at the San Diego Zoo ever since.

"There are no problems that we see. The embryo is very active and right on course," zoo birdkeeper Cyndi Kuehler said Tuesday. She has been babysitting the egg for the past month.

Zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said early today that there was no change in the condition of the embryo.

Because no condor egg has ever hatched in captivity, scientists aren't sure how long hatching will take.

Ms. Kuehler said experience with the Andean condor — a close relative of the nearly extinct California condor — shows that hatching takes about three days once the embryo "pips," or begins to poke out of the shell.

Jouett said the embryo at the zoo "pipped" late Monday and has knocked out a finger-sized hole in the shell.

Jouett said the embryo had to rest periodically because trying to break out of the shell "is the most strenuous thing that critter has had to do in his whole life."

The condor egg, five to six times the size of a chicken egg, has been monitored around the clock by zookeepers and a video camera. It was plucked from the nest as part of the captive breeding program aimed at rescuing the condor from extinction.

Scientists estimate there are only 17 to 20 California condors left in their natural mountain habitat near Ventura. Three male condors are in captivity, all at the Los Angeles Zoo.

The ash-gray birds of prey are dying off at the rate of three a year and could be extinct by 1990.

The San Diego Zoo is also incubating a second condor egg at its avian propagation center. That egg, taken from the wild March 8, is expected to hatch early next month.

State officials gave scientists permission to take the first egg laid by each pair of breeding condors in the wild. Once an egg is taken, the condors can mate again and produce another egg.

Meanwhile, a year-old male California condor named Hol Hol has been transferred from the San Diego Wild Animal Park to the Los Angeles Zoo to be near two other members of the species.

Hol Hol was captured in mid-August from a mountain nest near Ventura. The bird's transfer was recommended by the California Condor Working Group on Captive Breeding, which found that the rare birds "should be kept together so they can react with their own species."

Nursing home bills approved by the House

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has tentatively approved measures requiring state officials to make a second surprise inspection annually at nursing homes and establishing criminal penalties for people who tip a nursing home about a surprise inspection.

Both bills won unanimous approval Tuesday, but face a final vote before going to senators.

Garland Rep. Anita Hill's bill orders

officials.

Smith wants the state to immediately revoke a nursing home's "superior" rating if subsequent violations are found.

The amendment also bars a superior grade for any nursing home cited for a violation during a 15-month period prior to the inspection.

Sid Rich of the Texas Nursing Home Association said his group did not object to Smith's amendment.

GEORGE JONES BARBARA BEL GEDDES

Names in the News

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Country music star George Jones, known for his hit "He Topped Loving Her Today," putting a stop to his concert tours for at least two weeks. Jones' agent, John McMeen, says the 52-year-old singer is suffering from severe stress and fatigue brought on by a heavy concert schedule. Since September, McMeen said, Jones has performed more than 86 shows "in his effort to rebuild the faith of his fans and to push his new album. He wanted to do it, but he schedule finally caught up with him physically." He's recuperating at his home in Lafayette, La. McMeen added that Jones, scheduled for another medical checkup next week, will miss a seven-show European tour which was scheduled to start March 30. Jones was the Country Music Association's Male Vocalist of the Year in 1980 and 1981.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actress Barbara Bel Geddes is out of the hospital after heart surgery, but there's no word when she'll be back as the powerful matriarch on television's "Dallas." Miss Bel Geddes, 60, was released Tuesday from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center where she underwent a quadruple heart bypass two weeks ago. She entered the hospital for tests March 12 after complaining of chest pains, and three days later suffered a major heart attack.

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) - A retired oilman and his wife apparently died of carbon monoxide poisoning in a double suicide pact, repeating a family tragedy of last year, officials say.

WASHINGTON (AP) - John W. Hernandez, former acting chief of the Environmental Protection Agency, is now working at the Energy Department as a 32 1/2-day consultant.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "She was in good condition and in good spirits when she was released," said hospital spokeswoman Virginia Bohannon. At Lorimar Productions, the producer of "Dallas," spokesman Bob Crutchfield said taping for the season ended March 8 and is not expected to resume until late May. He said he does not know when Miss Bel Geddes will be back to work.

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) - When former President Richard M. Nixon made a rare public appearance before an arts society, an old friend showed up - actress Zsa Zsa Gabor.
