

Smith is free; his sanity hearing continued

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

After spending the night in Gray County's minimum security ward, David L. Smith appeared before Judge Carl Kennedy in Gray County Court this morning in a committal hearing on his sanity. After an hour in court, Kennedy continued hearing until 3 p.m. Tuesday, and turned Smith loose on his own recognizance.

Smith, 35, was picked up by Gray County Sheriff's Deputies Mike Wopperer and Doug Davis about 3 p.m. Thursday. Smith was taken to the physician's office and examined by Dr. Wilhelmina Beck and Dr. Foster Elder, according to Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan.

Jordan said after talking with Smith "for a bit" he thinks Smith needs help.

Smith, who calls himself a newspaper man, walked into Pampa News publisher Louise Fletcher's office Wednesday morning with a quart of reddish paint. Smith lunged at her and poured the paint all over her desk. Some of the paint splattered onto her skirt, office and carpeting.

"This symbolizes the yellow journalism and the way the paper smeared me," Smith said.

He was released by the Pampa Police Department while Fletcher was still signing the complaint accusing him of disorderly conduct.

Later Wednesday evening, Smith hitch-hiked to a ranch about 25 miles north of the city, and struck the elderly owner.

Ranch owner Mickey Ledrick, who calls himself "probably the closest thing to a friend he's got," said Smith came to his home Wednesday night, struck him when he was told to leave and then let the air out of some tires on three ranch vehicles. Smith hid in the trees near the house, Ledrick said, and a search by Roberts County Sheriff Eddie Brines that night failed to locate him.

Ledrick, who had guests visiting the remote ranch, said Smith turned the ranch "into an armed camp" Wednesday night.

When Smith attacked the publisher Wednesday, he held a scrawled, hand-written letter, which he said explained his actions.

"It is with regret that I am forced to use violence in order to bring attention to a serious blith (sic) that is settling in over America like a swarm of locas (sic)." Smith's letter said in part.

Smith claims to receive his instructions from Civil War Confederate General Albert Sidney Johnston who has impowered him with "the power of the press" and has told him to use that power to fight the "burocrats (sic) that are trying to destroy the spirit and basic concepts that America is based on." Smith said in his letter.

Smith also said in his letter he planned to run for Governor of Texas in the next election.

Capitol sex

Facing reprimand, one vows to stay, one unsure

By MIKE ROBINSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Gerry Studds, facing House reprimand for gay sex with a 17-year-old page, says he will stay in Congress, but Rep. Daniel B. Crane has left his plans unclear after admitting an affair with a female page.

The two congressmen on Thursday admitted ethics committee charges they had sex with teen-age pages. Formal reprimand, the mildest discipline the full House can mete out, could take only a few minutes once scheduled, since neither is contesting the action.

"Of course," Studds, 46, a Massachusetts Democrat, told reporters when asked if he would serve out his term. He took the House floor, where he proclaimed his homosexuality and admitted "a serious error in judgment" in his relationship with the page 10 years ago.

Studds said, though, that his relationship did not involve improper conduct because it was voluntary and there was no preferential treatment or harassment.

Crane, 47, a Republican from a Bible Belt district in downstate Illinois, first sought advice from his brother, Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., the 1980 GOP White House hopeful. Then he flew home to explain his affair with a 17-year-old girl page to his wife, Judy, and six children.

"I know nothing — I'm not talking," the conservative supporter of school prayer and strict morals said when asked about the liaison three years ago that began when the girl lost a six-pack of beer to him on a basketball bet and ended with repeated sessions in the bedroom of his Alexandria, Va., apartment.

The talk among Illinois Republicans was that Crane might resign and that, if not, he would have a hard time getting re-elected after barely squeaking out a third term last fall.

"If Dan Crane came to me and asked me if he should resign," House GOP Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said in reply to a question, "Well, I'd like to be as much of a strength to him as possible. I'd say the Good Lord sometimes moves in mysterious ways."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the windup of the investigation by the ethics committee, formally the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, yielded findings that were "most disturbing."

The committee voted 11-1 to recommend to the full House the reprimand of the two lawmakers.

Committee special counsel Joseph A. Califano Jr. also said the panel found that James C. Howarth, majority chief page in the House doorkeeper's office, "engaged in a sexual relationship with a 17-year-old female in 1980 who was at the time under his direct supervision and gave her preferential treatment."

Califano said there was evidence that in 1979 and 1980 Howarth, now chief majority page in the document room, purchased cocaine in the Democratic cloakroom where lawmakers mill during House sessions.

Unlike the two lawmakers, Howarth did not waive his right to a public hearing. Califano said he urged disciplinary proceedings against Howarth.

The committee said Studds and the male page both confirmed the details of their relationship. It said Crane and the girl page did the same.

In his floor statement, Studds said, "It is not a simple task for any of us to meet adequately the obligations of either public or private life, let alone both. But these challenges are made substantially more complex when one is, as am I, both an elected public official and gay."

The committee said Studds "acknowledged in writing that he made sexual advances to two other male pages in 1973."

After Crane left Washington, his office issued a statement in which he said: "I'm sorry that I made a mistake."

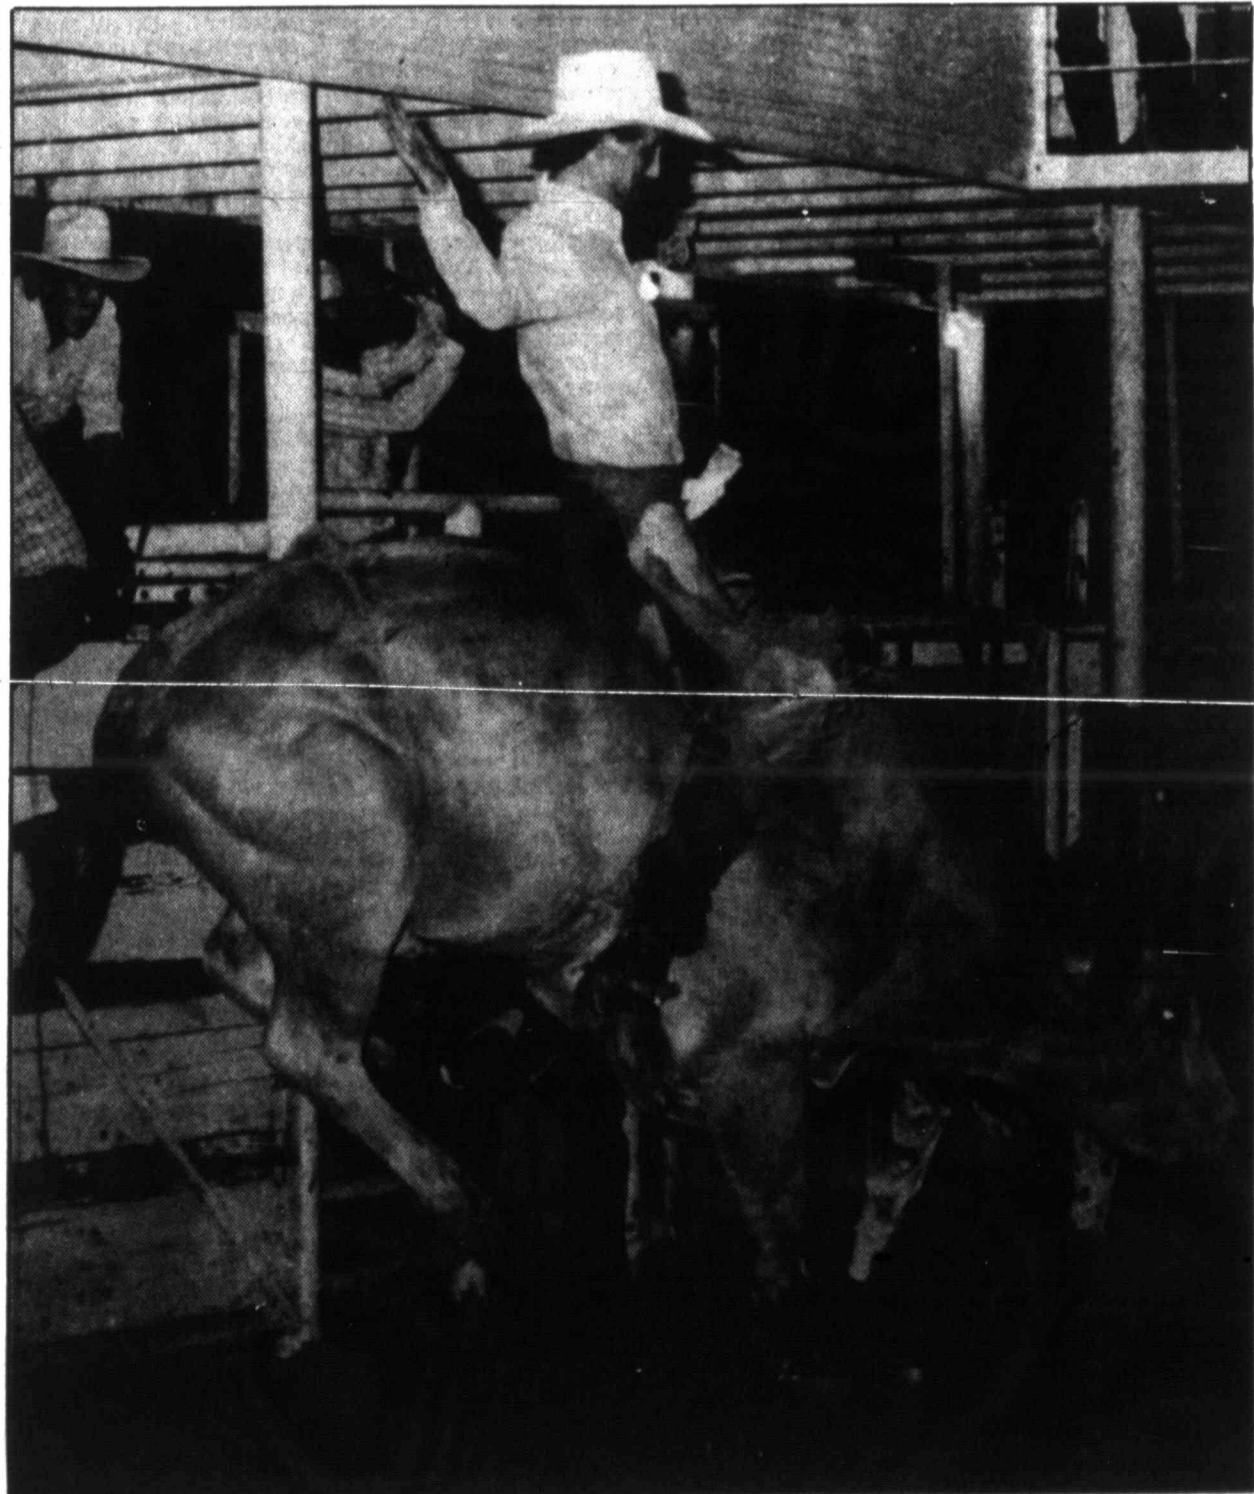

"It happened three years ago," he said. "I'm human and in no way did I violate my oath of office. I only hope my wife and children will forgive me."

The committee said the girl told investigators she found Crane "as an older man, very attractive." She said she went to his office to pay off the basketball bet at 8 p.m. and that he asked her if she wanted some beer.

The girl replied that she did not like beer and the two of them then went to a suburban Virginia bar, the committee quoted her as saying.

Job Hunter

David Findley, 19, grew up in the Florida Everglades, but he has lived here off and on for a couple of years and considers Pampa his home.

He wants to stay here, but hasn't found work since he lost his last job about three months ago.

The job hunter is a steel hanger who has worked for Pamtex here and Southern Iron in Florida.

"We put up steel buildings, all the way down to the windows," Findley said about his work as a steel hanger.

He said his previous work was mainly to put together the frame and steel sheets of the buildings.

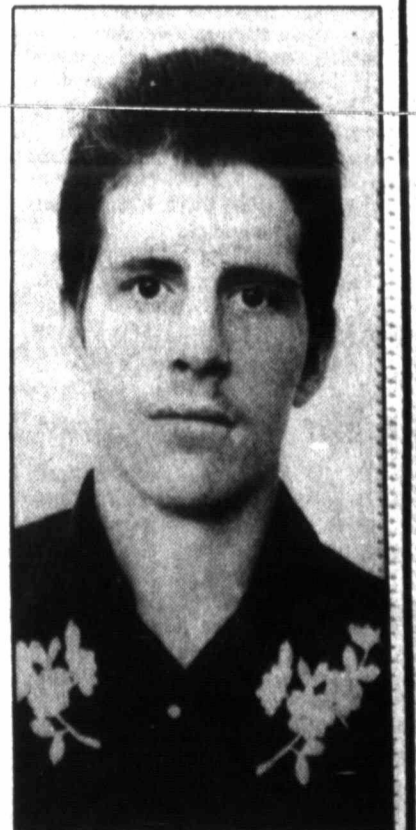

The job hunter fell just short of finishing high school, but he wants to go back at night. Findley said he wants to take night courses in business management at Clarendon College.

Findley came to Pampa on the advice of a good friend who has relatives here. He moved to his new home because he heard of an abundance of work "when the oil business was swinging."

In addition to Pamtex, the job hunter has worked in both Pampa and Amarillo for Guaranteed Pest Control. He said he worked in sales and spraying houses and foundations.

Findley can drive a combine and just about any kind of farm tractor. "I grew up on a farm," he said.

The job hunter is also interested in gardening and landscaping.

He said he wants "just about anything" in the way of work. To interview David Findley, call 688-7734.

Wholesale prices inch upward 0.5 percent in June, study shows

By SALLY JACOBSEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, propelled by the sharpest energy price gains in 11 months, shot up 0.5 percent in June, the government said today.

It was the second straight overall gain — following four months of little or no change — and meant that, for the first half of the year, wholesale prices fell at an annual rate of 1.0 percent.

Indeed, economists were far from being upset at today's news. One said that further, although smaller, increases should be registered for the next few months. Another said the new round of price hikes was typical "as a recovery picks up steam."

Anticipating the new report, several analysts stuck by their earlier predictions that, for all of 1983, wholesale prices may rise at their smallest clip in more than a decade.

Today's Labor Department report placed much of the responsibility for the new round of higher prices on energy costs, which rose 3.2 percent. Gasoline prices soared 5.1 percent, also the largest gain since last July, while heating oil costs climbed 5.3 percent and natural gas costs rose 0.2 percent.

Energy prices had risen 2.2 percent in May after falling for the five previous months.

The south terminal, a huge single building, houses dozens of international airlines although much international traffic has been routed to the newer Charles de Gaulle airport east of Paris.

An airport spokesman said he got to the scene shortly after the explosion. "The injured had been put on benches and the team of medical workers from the airport are caring for them," he said.

The ground floor of the terminal was evacuated, he said.

The explosion came one day after a man with a pistol shot and killed a Turkish diplomat in Brussels.

Passengers at the Turkish Airlines counter were checking in for Turkish Airlines Flight 926, a Boeing 727 due to leave on a non-stop flight to Istanbul with 167 passengers.

An employee at the Turkish Airlines counter at Orly said by telephone that the explosion "perhaps was aimed at us, but there are several other airline offices next to us."

The blast occurred just after 2 p.m. (3 a.m. EDT) when the terminal at the airport southwest of Paris was crowded with summertime travelers.

Police said it appeared the bomb had been placed among some baggage in the main hall of the terminal.

Airport police said there was panic in the main hall with people fleeing the scene. Airport officials said the departure of all flights was suspended.

An employee at the Air India counter in the terminal said "several dozen people were covered with blood."

the smoke immediately and we just ran out.

She said she saw people lying around on the floor near the Turkish Airlines counter "and a lot of people walking around with cuts."

The explosion appeared to have been aimed at the Turkish Airlines counter, and police immediately speculated that it may have been the work of Armenian nationalists seeking retribution for a massacre of hundreds of thousands of Armenians between 1894 and 1915.

Welfare increase is approved

AUSTIN (AP) — The state welfare board has approved a $2.15 billion budget that deputy commissioner Quentin Woomer says reflects a trend of spending more state — and less federal — money for welfare.

"It is a trend I think you will see through this decade," Woomer told the board Thursday.

The three-member board voted to raise payments slightly for welfare families beginning in September, with a one-time average bonus of $100 for August.

The board also approved staff recommendations for penalizing nursing homes that fail to meet state and federal standards.

Recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children — AFDC — would get an increase of $7 a month in keeping with the Legislature's decision to put more money in that program.

The AFDC increase will be the first since 1969, and Woomer said it "is doubly significant this (legislative) session when money was so tight."

The budget for the fiscal year starting Sept. 1 is approximately $231.5 million more than the current year, an increase of 12.5 percent.

State funds will provide approximately $901.2 million of the budget, federal funds over $1.22 billion and other funds $26.6 million.

Not included in the welfare budget are $600 million to $700 million in food stamps, which flow directly from the federal government to recipients.

He said the last Legislature approved bills and resolutions that would require another $73.9 million in state funds, but lawmakers failed to provide the money.

Under the proposed nursing home rules, the Department of Human Resources could penalize nursing homes by denying them a portion of the money they get from Medicaid, the state and federal program that pays for nursing home care for the poor.

The department would be required to cancel the Medicaid contract of any nursing home that is cited twice in a year for violating standards of patient care. It also would be forced to cancel the contract of any home at which conditions are considered an "immediate threat to the health and safety of its patients."

Medicaid payments could be held up for 30 to 60 days for other deficiencies.

Currently, the staff said, 50 nursing homes could have their Medicaid contracts canceled, and an estimated 150 homes could lose Medicaid payments for an average of 30 days each. About 1,100 nursing homes furnish health care to 72,000 impoverished Texans at a cost of $496.6 million a year.

The proposed nursing home rules will be presented at an Aug. 2 public hearing, and the board will consider them for final adoption in September.

The AFDC proposal would raise the average monthly grant in September from $41.26 to $48.49.

Welfare board chairman J. Livingston Kosberg of Houston said he was pleased with the legislative increase, but added, "It is woefully short of what we need. I hope future legislatures can see fit to continue the increases."

A provision in the overall state budget would allow the board to raise

AFDC payments to $53 per month if it can find the money, and Woomer said the staff would "come back at mid-year" with recommendations.

In August only the typical Texas welfare family — a mother and two children — would receive a $100 bonus in AFDC payments and food stamps, raising the total AFDC-food stamp payment to $513.

Beginning in September, special payments that welfare children have been receiving twice a year will be incorporated into the regular monthly AFDC grant.

The AFDC budget for fiscal 1984 is $191.6 million, a 51.8 percent increase over this year, but Woomer said the welfare department "is denying over 50 percent of the people that come in the door."

The board voted to add nearly $1.2 million to a family planning program on teen-age pregnancies, which Woomer described as a "serious problem."

"I don't think we're No. 1" among the states in teen-age pregnancies, "but we're very close," said Woomer. "It's a massive problem that doesn't go away — it's a fact of our society."

The welfare budget also provides $1.5 million for emergency assistance to families and children — the first time state dollars have been made available for such a program — and $1.9 million to deal with truants and runaways, another state first.

Texas welfare commissioner Marlin Johnston said the department was installing a toll-free hotline to take calls about alleged welfare fraud or abuse.

Doctors say

Texas hospitals are short of facilities for ill newborn babies

HOUSTON (AP) — Facilities for ill newborns in Texas are full and overloaded across the state and some babies face death because of lack of space and a shortage of trained nurses, doctors say.

In Lufkin, a critically ill newborn boy died July 7 after two hospitals with special neonatal care equipment declined to admit him because they were full.

In Houston, the neonatal intensive care unit at Jefferson Davis Hospital, designed for 24 patients, had 29 babies at one point Thursday, said administrator Lois Moore.

Mrs. Moore told the Houston Chronicle she has had to turn down requests to accept babies from hospitals which lack newborn intensive care units.

Seventeen babies were in a 12-bed unit on Thursday at the Turner newborn intensive care unit at Houston's Hermann hospital, said Dr. Eugene Adcock, professor of pediatrics at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

No bed in the unit has gone unoccupied more than four or five hours for two years, Adcock said.

This month, he said, "The numbers of patients we have had to refuse has skyrocketed."

"We must have a large number of babies dying for lack of facilities in this state," Adcock said. "One liver transplant gets more publicity than 50 infants for whom we can't find bed space."

Son prayed for forgiveness, shot 'best friend' - his father

HOUSTON (AP) — Billy Ray Clore says that he said a prayer for forgiveness, then shot his "best friend" — his comatose father — in the head because doctors said there was no chance he would recover.

But Clore, who testified Thursday in his murder trial, said he did not believe the shot he fired March 21 was fatal, claiming that his father, Robert Clore, 62, had died Nov. 19 when a heart attack left him comatose.

"I stopped him from breathing," Clore said. He said doctors had told him his father could not recover from the heart attack, his second in two weeks.

"They said that he had no brain waves," Clore said.

State District Judge Ted Poe said that he would rule today on a prosecution motion to delay the trial so that medical investigator Martha Mattioli, who performed an autopsy on the elder Clore, could testify.

Dr. Mattioli is hospitalized for an undisclosed ailment.

If no continuance is granted, Poe said, final arguments will begin today at 10 a.m.

Clore wept repeatedly as he testified Thursday. Clore and his father were partners in a used tire business and he described the older man as "my best friend, my closest friend." He said he visited his father two or three times a week after the Nov. 19 heart attack.

Clore said he never drew a response or sign of recognition from his father after that. The defendant's two sisters also testified that when their father was shot, he was "brain-dead" and doctors had said he had no prospect for recovery.

"I'd say, 'Dad, if you can hear me, open your eyes. He never talked, never turned his head,'" Clore said.

Clore said he thought his father "deserved to have a funeral and be buried."

"I walked in the room and stood there and looked at my father," the 26-year-old Clore said. "I said a prayer. I prayed that I'd be forgiven for what I was about to do, if it was wrong."

Clore began to weep and questioning stopped briefly while he regained his composure.

He said that his father had told him that he never wanted to be in a helpless state between life and death. Clore said his 31-year-old brother, Bobby, recalled "that Dad had told him that if anything ever happened to him that he could not be the same, he would rather someone take a gun and shoot him."

The day of the shooting, Clore said, his father "was just laying there. He was in a coma. Tubes sticking in him. That's what he did not want."

Clore testified he could not be sure his father was not in pain and "wanted to end his suffering."

Clore's grandmother, Betty Clore of Fort Worth, told the jury her son had also told her he could not bear the thought of being a vegetable.

"He told me once, 'Mother, I'm not afraid to die. It's what's between life and death,'" said Mrs. Clore, 85. "I won't ever forget it."

She recalled that after her son's first heart attack, he rose from his bed one day and ripped intravenous tubes from his body in an attempt to leave the hospital.

"He said, 'Mother, I can't make it. I can't make it,'" she said. "He wanted to come home and die in dignity. He was so opposed to things like that — the IVs."

Zimmermann asked her if she bore her grandson any ill will for the shooting.

"None whatsoever," she replied.

Hansen briefly interrogated Clore and told him he joined him in his prayers for forgiveness.

"I am just losing my marbles over this case," Hansen said during a recess.

Cotton farmers win court battle

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Angry cotton farmers in the Lower Rio Grande Valley have won a temporary restraining order that keeps the U.S. Department of Agriculture from seizing a portion of their cotton crop under the government's "payment in kind" program.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela granted the order Thursday in conjunction with a suit filed by members of the 1,200-member Cotton and Grain Producers of the Lower Rio Grande Valley, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

The order prohibits the USDA from taking the cotton until an Aug. 3 hearing on the dispute can be held.

The valley produces about 10 percent of Texas' cotton crop and area farmers were among the first in the nation due to receive payment-in-kind cotton under their government contracts. The payments were to come due today.

The farmers group said the government was taking a portion of their crops by exercising a contract clause in the PIK program they had been promised would not be used.

"I feel I've been misled," said Wayne Labar, 44, of Harlingen, a plaintiff in the lawsuit. Surrendering the cotton would cost him from $32,000 to $60,000, he said. USDA press secretary John Ochs said he recalled no assurances being made to participating farmers about the clause.

Charles Wofford, executive director of the farmers' group, said Rio Grande Valley farmers would lose more than $5.5 million if the USDA is allowed to exercise the option.

Under the new PIK program, about 80 to 90 percent of Texas' cotton farmers idled a percentage of their cotton acreage this year. In exchange, they are to receive from government surpluses the amount of cotton the set-aside acreage would have produced.

But the program was so successful that USDA officials discovered the amount of cotton needed to fulfill the PIK obligations exceeded the amount on hand in government storage.

Faced with a shortfall of about 1 million bales, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block exercised an option in the participating farmers' contracts that required farmers to turn over some of their 1983 cotton harvest if the government should need it to fulfill PIK obligations.

In exchange, farmers would receive a guaranteed payment of 55 cents per pound. Many farmers have contracted to sell cotton from the current harvest at market prices that currently are about 73 cents a pound, Wofford said.

The farmers must default on those sales contracts or buy cotton themselves on the market to give to the government, suffering huge losses either way, Wofford said.

"You're going to have farmers suing the government, and shippers suing farmers, and mills suing shippers. The only thing it will be good to be then is a lawyer," Wofford said.

Old city jail closed

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas City Jail, where nightclub owner Jack Ruby fatally shot accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald in 1963, has closed after nearly 70 years in favor of an ultra-modern facility.

Municipal Court Judge Michael O'Neal on Thursday arraigned, fined and released the final six prisoners held in the jail, which is perched atop the city's courts and police building in the downtown area.

The city will now hold its prisoners in the new Lew Sterrett Justice Center, a $62 million facility owned by Dallas County.

The two inmates who did more to put the old jail in the history books were Oswald, the accused killer of President John F. Kennedy, and Ruby, who gunned down Oswald on Nov. 24, 1963 in the jail's basement as law officers prepared to transfer Oswald to the Dallas County Jail.

The jail, which opened in 1914, is "one of the oldest landmarks in the city," said Ed Preston, who retired from the police department 10 years ago.

ERA: Like cat, it comes back...

Rather like one of those sand-filled, Bozo-the-clown punching bags, the Equal Rights Amendment just keeps bouncing back up. The Senate opened hearings last month on a motion by Sen. Paul Tsongas, and a flock of colleagues, to give the amendment yet another shot at passage.

If that session was any indication, ERA activists learned very little from their double defeat of the last decade. Sen. Orrin Hatch greeted Tsongas with a series of unexpected, but not unreasonable, questions, and got only a puddle of "I don't know's" and "the courts would have to decide that." Does the ERA guarantee the alleged "right" of sexual preference? Would it force the Army to draft women? Tsongas promised to have a staffer look into the matter.

The mere fact that there is any doubt on such basics suggests to many that the ERA is an exercise in constitutional roulette.

Frustrating though that sensibility may be, it can't be ignored. Most Americans favor the principle of equal rights for women; a majority, in fact, support the amendment, and did so throughout the ratification process. Yet few understand exactly how ERA would advance the cause of equal rights. Or why it's needed. And no one in the amendment's camp seems to have the answers.

A recent study by Catherine England of the Heritage Foundation lists more than a dozen alternative fronts on which the battle might continue. Equal rights groups could press for the deregulation of cottage industries, giving women greater freedom to start businesses at home. States could remove some of the ridiculous restrictions on private day-care, making it cheaper and easier for mothers who work. Tax laws could be rewritten to end continuing penalties on two-earner families.

Indeed, President Reagan has established a commission to look into these kinds of barriers to women's progress, but the Gloria Steinem crowd has shown little interest. Reagan's piece-by-piece approach is more tedious, and a lot less glamorous for placard carriers. It is, however, far more likely to secure gains for women.

The Vanguard of the Working Class has once again shown its true colors in Cuba. Five young Cubans, Esquiel Diaz Rodriguez, Jose Luis Romero, Angel Conato Martinez Garcia, Benito Garcia Olivera and Carlos Garcia Diaz, were, according to Amnesty International, sentenced to death on Jan. 25, 1983. Their despicable crime? Trying to form an independent union. The Chamber of Crimes Against State Security of the Havana Provincial Tribunal decided that was "industrial sabotage." Note that dictatorships are not especially shy about using the death penalty.

It is, of course, amusing to watch Defense Secretary Weinberger saying that we wouldn't send any troops to Central America and then saying that "we have to take each situation as it comes," which may mean something different depending on how you read the tea leaves. What's more amusing is that if you read the papers on Monday, you'd think half the policies in existence get formulated by offhand comments on Sunday TV interview programs. Sunday's traditionally a slow news day, but is the situation so grave that those exercises in self-promotion and evasion have to be regurgitated on Monday as if they were real news?

Former Georgia Gov. George Busbee deserves at least an honorable mention in the "public servant" chutzpah category for this or any month. Busbee, 55, who was ineligible to run for a third term, filed for a pension (while hiring on as a lawyer in a high-priced firm), claiming he was "involuntarily separated" from his job and therefore qualified to draw full and immediate benefits. He got it, of course, and is now drawing $57,648 a year for his life, in addition to the pittance the law firm no doubt pays him.

Free trade must become a top priority again

By OSCAR COOLEY

That world trade - by which I mean free trade between all peoples - makes for world peace, maximum production and progress, has been stated and restated by economists for centuries. Yet, every now and then shackles on trade are imposed, and people who are assumed to be well educated call for increased "protection" against foreign-made goods.

After World War II, Japan rapidly rebuilt her wrecked cities and industries. One of her outstanding products was the small size, economical automobile which she made at so little cost that she could bring them across the Pacific and sell them like hot cakes in the U.S.

Our auto manufacturers protested at this competition, and the Japanese, ever ready to oblige, agreed early in 1981 to limit their sales of cars in the U.S. to 1,680,000 for two years. Last February they agreed to extend this limitation for another year.

But on June 30, Sosuke Uno, Japan's international trade minister, announced that Japan would not restrict her export of cars for a fourth year. So, get ready, Detroit, for a flood of Toyotas etc. to come down the road beginning next March.

The American auto makers shuddered and the U.S. Auto Workers, ever ready to beg the government to support wages in some way, demanded that the Japanese "voluntarily" restrain their exports for that fourth year.

William Bywater, president of the union of electrical and machine workers, said that Uno's announcement should bring home to Reagan and Congress the fact that the U.S. is "in a trade war."

Foreign autos are not the only good that is about to run over us. Steel, a basic commodity which Americans have long produced in volume, is coming in from abroad heavily. Harking to the wishes of the steel companies and the steel workers' union, Washington has imposed sharp restrictions on imports of steel, much to the discomfort of British and German steel makers.

Then there is the domestic content bill, which would require a certain percentage of the parts of a product sold here to have been made here.

It is not trade that we are against, say the protesters - against imports, but "unfair trade." By this they mean trade that is facilitated by aid, tax forgiveness, or subsidies of some kind, given by the governments of the countries which are selling goods. Apparently, if the producers of those goods did not receive these aids they could not afford to transport and sell them here.

The U.S. government gives similar aid and succor to American exporters which enable them to export profitably. Everybody, it seems, is doing it.

This is the sad part of the whole matter: everybody is doing it. The world is pretending there is truth in an ancient error: protectionism. Import quotas are being reduced, import taxes increased. Japan resents our restrictions on her goods, but she imposes high tariff walls against ours.

Don't people as consumers want more goods? How can it be said that Americans are injured by, need protection against, foreign-made goods?

If Japanese automobiles are being sold in U.S. markets, somebody must be buying those automobiles. They must be in demand by American motorists.

Would fewer children starve in Ethiopia if the Ethiopian government were to forbid the import of food into Ethiopia or put a high tax on it?

Is the U.S. Steel Corporation so weak and spindly that it cannot survive unless the government requires that U.S. industry buy home-produced steel to fashion its machines and build its skyscrapers?

Arrest scene

An FBI agent stands outside the Pitts Hotel in Washington after three men were arrested in connection with the abduction of the wife of a former Salvadoran ambassador. The woman, Clelia Eleanor Quinonez, was rescued when the three men were arrested while having her place a call to her husband from a phone outside the hotel. She was said to be in good condition. (AP Laserphoto)

Wife of former envoy in good condition after dramatic rescue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of a former Salvadoran ambassador to the United States is in good condition today after FBI agents whisked her away from kidnapers who had held her for a week demanding $1.5 million ransom.

Clelia Eleanor Quinonez, 53, wife of Roberto Quinonez Meza, was kidnapped in Miami and rescued Thursday at a pay telephone booth outside a Washington hotel. The captors were having her call her husband to verify she was safe so that he would pay the ransom.

About 40 FBI agents had faked out the Pitt Hotel in northwest Washington and were planning the rescue when Mrs. Quinonez appeared at the telephone with her abductors who placed a call.

Mrs. Quinonez' husband said in Miami that the call lasted four or five minutes. He said he heard voices and scuffling over the line as the arrests were made. He said the FBI called him later to say his wife was safe.

Taken into custody in Washington were Mack L. Carr, 18, Robert A. Gerald, 19, Clifford Bibbs, 23, and an unidentified 17-year-old, all of the District of Columbia, according to James W. Vatter, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI's Washington field office.

Arrested in Miami were Salvador Lacaya and his sister, Margarita, said FBI spokesman Dennis Erich.

Vtter said Carr, Gerald and the youth were arrested with Mrs. Quinonez at the telephone booth. Bibbs was taken into custody later.

FBI spokesman Ron Dervish said a woman also was being sought for questioning in the case. No other arrests were expected, he said.

Dervish said that Mrs. Quinonez was "in very good condition. She was not harmed in any way."

"It was hectic," former ambassador Quinonez said at an early-morning news conference in Miami. "We were very, very nervous. We're very happy the way it's turned out."

Agents said no one was injured during the arrests.

Quinonez, a wealthy businessman, said "I have no idea" why his family was targeted for the kidnapping.

But Theodore M. Gardner, special agent in charge of the Washington FBI office, said that following the abduction Quinonez was contacted by phone and that a demand of $1.5 million was made for his wife's release as a "war tax." Gardner said the abductors told Quinonez the money would be sent to leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Gardner said that after the kidnapping Mrs. Quinonez was brought by van to Carr's residence. He said federal agents had the residence under surveillance for several days.

Miami media were aware of the abduction early in the week, but were asked to keep the story from the public because of death threats to Mrs. Quinonez. Joseph Corless, special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office, credited journalists in the safe rescue.

"The cooperation and sincerity of the press really contributed to the success. The press really deserves a true compliment for what they did in this case," Corless said.

Mrs. Quinonez was stopped while driving home from work at a real estate company. Her Mercedes was found near the couple's home in a wealthy neighborhood of suburban Coral Gables.

Quinonez, 56, an outspoken anti-communist, received several ransom demands, the first coming about an hour after the kidnapping when he received a telephone call from the kidnapers at his office at Orion Trading Corp. Kidnapers made further demands Thursday.

The kidnapers, apparently members of an unidentified Central American terrorist organization, demanded more than $1 million in ransom and told Quinonez if he went to authorities for help, his wife would be killed.

It wasn't known whether the ransom was to be delivered in the United States or El Salvador.

Quinonez spent the days since the kidnapping at home, pretending nothing was amiss. He and his house were believed to be under surveillance by the kidnapers.

Quinonez and his wife have been living in Miami since 1980. Their children live elsewhere.

Her husband, as the Salvadoran ambassador to Washington, represented the government of deposed El Salvador Gen. Carlos Humbert Romero from 1977-79. A military coup overthrew the Romero government in 1979.

In Miami, Quinonez has been an outspoken critic of communist leanings in Central America, giving speeches and becoming president of the recently formed Salvadoran Coalition for Freedom and Independence Inc., a non-partisan group based in Miami.

Officials fear nuclear power plant problem is widespread WASHINGTON (AP) — Small cracks that could lead to a reactor meltdown have been found in the large cooling water pipes at 13 of the nation's nuclear power plants and officials fear that more may have the same problem.

Seven of the 13 plants have been told they can resume operation after patching the hairline cracks, but government officials view that fix as only temporary and say that utilities will have to spend hundreds of millions of dollars replacing the piping as a permanent solution.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission disclosed the extent of the problem Thursday after reviewing piping inspections conducted during the past year at 18 boiling water reactors, all manufactured by General Electric.

The commission also ordered another five reactors manufactured by GE and suspected of having the same problem to shut down within the next 30 days so their large cooling pipes, ranging in diameter from 12 inches to 24 inches, can be inspected.

The shutdown was the first one the commission has ordered for inspections since 1979, when several plants were told to close to look for alleged structural problems that might affect their ability to withstand an earthquake.

Two NRC officials said Thursday's order was issued after the four companies that own the five uninspected reactors rejected suggestions during meetings Wednesday and earlier this month that they shut down voluntarily.

"We just didn't think they should be down now," said Cindy Longest, a spokeswoman for Commonwealth Edison Co., a Chicago-based utility that owns two of the affected reactors — Unit 2 at the Quad Cities plant in Cordova, Ill., and Unit 3 at the Dresden plant at Morris, Ill.

However, spokesmen for the three other utilities denied that officials for their companies had been requested to close the reactors voluntarily.

The other three reactors ordered to shut down were Unit 3 at the Tennessee Valley Authority's Browns Ferry plant at Athens, Ala.; Unit 2 at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick plant at Southport, N.C., and Boston Edison Co.'s Pilgrim plant at Plymouth, Mass.

Harold Denton, director of reactor regulation for the commission, said the cracks could cause the pipes of a plant's primary cooling system to break, creating the potential for a core meltdown and a large release of toxic radioactive materials.

"The potential for suffering a loss-of-coolant accident or major leak rests primarily with these lines," said Richard Vollmer, director of the NRC's engineering division.

All of the plants have backup emergency cooling systems but, said Ed Case, the assistant director in Denton's office, "We don't like to have to test those things."

The closest a civilian nuclear power plant has come to a core melt was during the March 1979 accident at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania. The TMI reactor overheated and released a small amount of radioactivity but evidence later showed that the fuel in the core itself did not melt.

Denton said the severity of cracks found recently prompted him to call for the shutdown of the plants not yet inspected.

"There are a fair number of cracks reported that were 50 percent through, all the way around," he said. "That's why I'm fairly uncomfortable with allowing these plants that have not been inspected to continue to operate."

The industry and government had been aware of similar corrosion and cracking in smaller pipes less than 12 inches in diameter since 1975. But the problem first appeared in the larger pipes last summer at Niagra

Mohawk Power Co.'s Nine-Mile-Point Unit 1 reactor at Scriba, N.Y.

Niagara Mohawk opted to replace the piping, a job which cost it $65 million and required the reactor to be shut down for more than a year.

The six reactors now shut down for repairs are Units 2 and 3 at Peach Bottom, Unit 1 at Browns Ferry, Unit 1 at Brunswick, the Cooper plant in Nebraska and the Fitzpatrick plant in New York.

Reactors allowed to resume operation after making the welding patches are: Northern State Power Co.'s Monticello plant in Minnesota, Georgia Power Co.'s twin-reactor Hatch plant, the Unit 2 reactor at TVA's Browns Ferry plant, the Vermont Yankee plant and the Unit 2 reactor at the Dresden plant.

Kirk Willison, a spokesman for the utility industry's Electric Edison Institute, called the timing of the shutdown unfortunate since summer is the season in which electricity use is at its peak.

Agreement on U.S. bases is signed

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Premier Andreas Papandreu said today that Greece and the United States have signed a new agreement on U.S. bases in Greece that calls for their removal after five years.

The premier's announcement during a news conference came after nine months of difficult negotiations, and only one day after the return to Athens of U.S. special envoy Reginald Bartholomew.

The U.S. envoy had been holding consultations in Washington after the Greek government announced that there was "substantial disagreements" between the two sides on the bases issue. The United States maintains four major installations and 20 minor military facilities in Greece.

The provision that the bases are to be removed after the five-year period satisfies one of the Socialist government's most prominent pre-election pledges.

Papandreu said the agreement would go into effect Dec. 31, 1983, and after the termination of the five-year period the Americans would be given 17 months to remove the installations.

Papandreu said the agreement was initiated by the two sides early this morning and that the full text of the agreement will be made public when the accord is signed within the next two weeks.

Describing the moment as "historic," Papandreu said that under the agreement the United States undertakes to maintain the strategic balance of power in the region, and gives Greece the right to revoke the accord if this balance is upset in favor of Turkey.

The Socialist government has repeatedly demanded a guarantee from Washington that the United States would provide Greece with military aid equal to at least 70 percent of the aid provided to Turkey. Both are members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Papandreu said the Americans would provide Greece with $500 million in military aid in 1984. He said that amount represents 70 percent of the aid to Turkey next year and would be provided for in a separate exchange of letters between the Greece and the United States.

Officials say Walesa won't be fired

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Gdansk shipyard management has "no intention" of firing Lech Walesa for taking an unauthorized two-week vacation, an official of the government-run Polish information agency Interpress said today.

"The management of the shipyards will not fire Mr. Walesa," the official said, asking not to be named.

"He did not elaborate on his statement, but said the agency had its information from 'good sources.'"

Officials in the shipyards, where Walesa formed Solidarity after August 1980 strikes, have said they are waiting for the union leader's return before taking any action.

Under workers' rules, they are obliged to assess why he took the leave, and rule on his future employment afterwards.

Walesa last week took off from work without official leave for a vacation. He is expected to return to his Baltic seacoast home Sunday and to report for work

Monday.

By taking the unauthorized leave, Walesa risked dismissal from his job under workers' laws stipulating that any three-day absence without official approval is grounds for being fired.

Walesa had said he would not return to work before he wanted to, and vowed to fight a possible dismissal in court.

Walesa has been visiting relatives north of Warsaw and taking his wife Danuta and three youngest children fishing and swimming in nearby rivers and lakes.

pedal that fast. The tires have virtually no tread for added traction and they weigh only 15 pounds each, which is about half as much as a tire on the family car. (AP Laserphoto)

Teenager topic-nuclear weapons

An AP News Analysis
By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once upon a time, a 13-year-old girl told her father that the most important thing her country could do would be to control nuclear weapons.

He told the country about it, and the cynics snickered. They said it was just like Jimmy Carter to talk about Amy's ideas in the middle of a climactic, nationally televised campaign debate with Ronald Reagan.

After all, they said, Carter was president of the United States and this was not a matter for teen-agers, it was serious business.

It still is, 3½ years later. But reactions have changed. Amy's comment to her father was fodder for the stand-up comics of 1980. There are no wisecracks about the Soviet journey of Samantha Smith, 11, of Manchester, Maine.

She went at the invitation of Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov, bearing a message similar to the one Amy Carter gave her father.

In the campaign debate with Reagan, Carter said he wanted to put the nuclear question into perspective. "I had a discussion with my daughter Amy the other day before I came here, to ask her what the most important issue was," he said. "She said she thought nuclear weaponry. The control of nuclear arms."

It was grist for the cartoonists and comics. Not so when Andropov wrote Samantha.

Samantha said she was worried by accounts of the nuclear arms race, so she sent Andropov a letter, asking why he wanted to conquer the world or the United States, and whether "you're going to vote to have a war or not?"

Andropov replied that the Soviet Union is doing everything possible "so that there will be no war at all on earth ..."

"Nobody in our vast and beautiful country — workers or peasants, writers or doctors, children or grown-ups or members of the government — wants war, be it big or small," he wrote. "We want peace. We have a lot to do: grow grain, build, invent, write books and make space flights."

Samantha said the letter made Andropov seem like a grandfather.

That's not a description that likely would flow from President Reagan's comments on the nuclear fears of American children. "The most upsetting letters I receive are from schoolchildren who write me as a class assignment," Reagan said in a speech last Nov. 22. "It's evident they've discussed the most nightmarish aspects of a nuclear holocaust in their classrooms. Their letters are often full of terror. Well, this should not be so."

Andropov invited Samantha and her parents to the Soviet Union for two weeks, at government expense.

Purpose of black candidacy is questioned

DETROIT (AP) — Black Democratic leaders want to know the purpose of a possible presidential bid by the Rev. Jesse Jackson before deciding whether to support such an effort.

The black caucus of the Democratic National Committee voted without a fight Thursday to back the concept of a black presidential candidate. But whether they'll put that idea into action for 1984 is something else.

They want to know if the reason for a black candidacy is to:

—Boost voter registration?

—Actually capture the nomination?

—Make a political statement?

—Create bargaining leverage with a stronger Democratic contender?

—When I understand the objective, I'll know better how to participate," said

Sharon Dixon of Washington, D.C.

Jackson, the head of Operation PUSH, a black self-help organization based in Chicago, talked to the caucus, but did not answer the questions specifically, saying it was difficult to do in a public meeting.

But he mentioned indirectly that a black candidacy was justified for all the reasons suggested by the questions.

However, after Jackson's talk, Terry Pitts of Milwaukee said, "I think I'm as confused as I was before." Jackson acknowledged he faced some problems with the caucus. He referred to a kind of pressure in the room focusing on his possible candidacy. But he hurriedly added that the pressure was "creative" pressure, not a hostile pressure.

Jackson never made his intentions clear, although he talked of a coalition of women and minorities who could make up a majority of the voters.

He said assuming a black candidate is just for blacks is as ridiculous as saying a black should not run.

Jackson was urged to make a decision soon on whether to run for the nomination.

Recession will be subject of much dispute

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the recession is officially over, analysts are busy trying to assess its place in economic history.

Was it indeed, as described, the worst since the Depression of the 1930s? Was anything worthwhile learned, or any indirect benefit gained, from this period of widespread economic pain?

The answers to those questions will be subject to much dispute. The cost to countless individuals and businesses is probably impossible to measure, and a lot of it may never be recouped.

But the post-mortems are beginning to come in. And as one analyst who has given the statistics a close examination points out, some striking things happened during the period that stretched from the summer of 1981 to the closing months of last year.

Edward Gibson, director of research at the regional investment firm of First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y., the cash and financial assets held by individuals in this country did not drop, as one might assume they would in a period of high unemployment and declining business activity.

Federal Reserve statistics, adjusted to take inflation into account, show that individuals' cash holdings rose 9.7 percent, and their net financial assets increased 8.7 percent, during the recession. Individuals' holdings of cash in currency and short-term investments, rose more than $250 billion in the 18 months from mid-1981 to the end of 1982, for a total of more than $2 trillion.

As Hugh Johnson, another First Albany analyst, pointed out, the cash buildup was motivated by more than just caution prompted by tough economic times. High interest rates and the advent of investments like money market mutual funds provided a powerful incentive for people who were able to do so to salt money away.

It now appears that this huge store of cash reserves has helped provide the fuel for economic recovery. Auto sales, retail trade and other consumer businesses are perking up strongly — providing one positive after-effect of the recession.

As Gibson acknowledges, the peak unemployment rate of 10.8 percent was by far the highest since the '30s. But he also notes that a greater percentage of the working-age population (56.4 percent) was employed than in any of the recessions of the '50s, '60s and '70s.

The evident explanation for the disparity in these two measures is that more adults — notably women — are active in the labor force now.

Gibson also says industrial production did not fall as much in 1981-82 (12 percent) as it did in 1973-75 (15 percent) or 1957-58 (13 percent). The inflation-adjusted gross national product, the total output of goods and services in the economy, dropped 2.2 percent in '81-'82, against 4.9 percent in '73-'75 and 2.7 percent in '57-'58.

Colorful ceremony ends World Scout Jamboree in Canada

KANANASKIS COUNTRY, Alberta (AP) — Singing and cheering teen-agers from 182 countries gathered beneath a Canadian mountain sky and bade farewell to new friends made during the 15th World Scout Jamboree.

"The ties between people here, these bonds of friendship, will stay with us," Ken Hayashida, 16, of Seal Beach, Calif., said as the nine-day campout ended Thursday night. "No matter what happens in the world, we will know we had peace for two weeks here in Canada."

The 13,564 scouts, some carrying flags of their homelands, marched to the ceremonial grounds at the foot of the Canadian Rockies. And in the cold, clear night, they sat cross-legged on the ground and pledged to meet again in 1987 — at the next world jamboree near Sydney, Australia.

"You now know that people all over the world really are the same, with the same feelings..." Lord Baden-Powell, the grandson of scouting's founder, told the campers. "The way we speak and behave is the only difference."

The jamboree was the first to include girls as participants and had more countries represented than any other in the 63-year history of the event. About 3,600 attended from the United States.

Shrimp nets may be empty

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Open season for shrimping in the Texas Gulf began today with at least one fisherman predicting that this year's harvest is going to be relatively small.

Waters in the Sabine Pass in Southeast Texas have been crowded by shrimping boats in recent years. Ken Little, who has fished for shrimp in the area more than 15 years, said the number of shrimpers there has doubled or perhaps even tripled in less than 10 years.

Past preparations of yours will bear fruit this coming year, but not necessarily in the areas you anticipate. Success will have its surprises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be quite fortunate today in business or financial situations, provided you don't get uptight and put obstacles in your own path. Order now: The NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $1 for your Cancer Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead. Be sure to give your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Persons who are in accord with your way of doing things will be recipients of your warmth and generosity today. Challengers may experience your anger.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your desire to be charitable is a noble aspiration, but be careful you don't obligate yourself beyond your abilities to provide.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Being with friends will provide you with a great deal of pleasure today if you don't permit upmanship or competition to enter the picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Even though you may have a number of serious negative influences to overcome, financial arrangements should work for you profitably today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not allow self-doubts to override your positive thoughts today. Concentrate on your hopes, not on the pebbles in your shoe.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Benefits are apt to come your way today, but not primarily through your efforts. Unless you acknowledge collaborators, hard feelings may result.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Follow your urges today which dictate that you do what is best for the largest number, even if your self-interests try to induce you to do otherwise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Important objectives are reachable today, but your routes to success may not be as easy as you first surmise. Be tenacious, not timid.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful about making promises today. Others will hold you to your word. This will be especially true of your mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When solving problems for others today, your logic supersedes your feelings. Where your own interests are concerned, emotions may dominate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your judgment is very keen today, but you may satisfy yourself with easy answers instead of getting to the root of matters. Probe more deeply.

Dispersing fog of religion

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the early days of the Soviet Union, its leader V. I. Lenin said its system was "dispersing the fog of religion and liberating the workers" from it.

But after 65 years of communist rule in an officially atheist nation, "the workers refuse to be liberated from their faith," says the narrator on an extraordinary NBC-TV documentary exploring religious life in Russia.

"Religion remains a daily fact of life in the Soviet Union," says the narrator, the Rev. Bruce Rigdon of Chicago, a specialist on the Russian church. He says it now is displaying signs of greater strength and growth.

The candidly searching, filmed report, "The Church of the Russians," turned out to pack so much revealing detail that it's to be shown in two hour-long segments, on this Sunday and next, instead of one as originally intended.

"Religion is indeed alive and thriving in the U.S.S.R.," says veteran newswoman Helen Marmor, executive producer of religious programs for NBC News. "That's the story we came back with because it's there."

The TV news crew spent a month exploring church activities in cities and rural settings.

In interviews both with church leaders and government officials, as well as with pastors, seminary students and ordinary people, the documentary offers a strikingly vivid look at the religious situation, both its vigor and strains.

Rigdon of Chicago's McCormick Theological Seminary at one point asks the government vice chairman for religious affairs, Peter Makartsev, why religion survives when the government does all it can to spread atheism.

"Because it exists," Makartsev says, apparently stumped at any explanation of it. "It is. Religion will exist as long as believers exist."

Their thronging, devout existence is shown firsthand in the crowded churches, the young couples lined up for baptizing of babies, in a busy new publishing house turning out Bibles and other materials, in the bulging seminaries.

At the Moscow seminary, a second-year student tells how he grew up in a non-religious family, but reached a point where he began pondering the meaning of life. When he first visited a church at 15, he says he was intrigued, but had no idea what was going on. He began reading theology books.

Gradually, he says, "my world views became religious ones."

Seminaries in Moscow, Leningrad and Odessa, said they have doubled enrolments, but still can handle only about a third of the applicants. In Kiev, Archbishop Makarii said up to 60 percent of the crowded Sunday liturgies are young people between 20 and 30.

While various church and government officials insisted there were no restrictions on the church, a U.S. Russian church historian who previewed the documentary, the Rev. John Meyendorff, termed their claims "baloney."

But he said the Russian church leaders are "absolutely authentic" in their faith, even though under pressures. "The impression in the West that faith has been snuffed out in Russia is quite wrong."

Some Eastern Orthodox churchmen, previewing the film, said it was the most comprehensive such portrayal of the Russian church to be offered in this country.

In the film crew's moving about and interviews, Ms. Marmor says the government "not only did not interfere but sometimes bent the rules to help us."

As in every communist country, she said, an agent was assigned "to keep an eye on us. But so far as our work was concerned, there was no control whatever or attempts at it."

Besides portraying the vitality of Russian religion and its institutions, the film also is a dramatically scenic stroll among majestic old churches, with their Byzantine-style, bulbous domes, the newer, trimmer sanctuaries, still with ornate interiors, the gardens, sidewalks and people of Russia.

The people themselves provide many of the most touching glimpses, a young boy lighting candles, an old monk, said to be 100, walking the monastery grounds, dispensing blessings, a woman feeding pigeons and singing an old Russian folk song. "Please do not forsake us, have mercy," it goes.

Pope wants old habits

By George R. Plagenz

In his directive asking Roman Catholic nuns to return to wearing religious garb, Pope John Paul II didn't say whether he was asking the sisters to go back to the medieval-style, floor-length black robes and stiff, elaborate headdress.

But it was clear he wants them to dress in something that tells the world they are nuns. Beginning in the 1960s many nuns exchanged their religious garb for conventional clothing in the belief this allows them to identify more closely with the people they serve.

The pope, on the other hand, says religious dress is a "social witness to values (like poverty, obedience and consecration) which challenge society," not conform to it, and thus "inspires a way of life which has social impact."

The pope in his 38-page document said nothing about priests' dress but it is known that he is opposed to the trend among priests to wear street clothes for the same reason he is opposed to nuns in nylons.

No survey, so far as I know, has been taken to see how the Catholic laity feel about all this. But a recent poll of Episcopalians showed that next to the issues of women priests and the revised Book of Common Prayer, what is uppermost in the minds of Episcopalians is "spirituality of the clergy."

They sense apparently that today's clergyman may be more interested in being accepted as "one of the people" than he is in being their spiritual guide.

That churchgoers prefer a minister who is "different from them" — not "one of them" — is borne out by the findings of a men's fashion writer.

His survey showed that people don't like to see ministers in a three-piece suit because it reminds them too much of a businessman, which is not what they want their ministers to be.

On the other hand, this survey showed that people don't like casual dress for a minister either. This may come as a shock to those ministers — including priests — who have taken to discarding their clerical garb on the assumption that this will enable them to "relate better" to their people.

In other words, it may be the clergy themselves, rather than "the people they serve," who are behind this new informality in clerical dress and manners. If true, the reason may not be hard to find: It is lonely up there alone. It is more fun down on terra firma with the common throng.

Across the top of the religion page in one newspaper recently was this banner headline: "Protestant Ministers Gratefully Step Down From Their Pedestals."

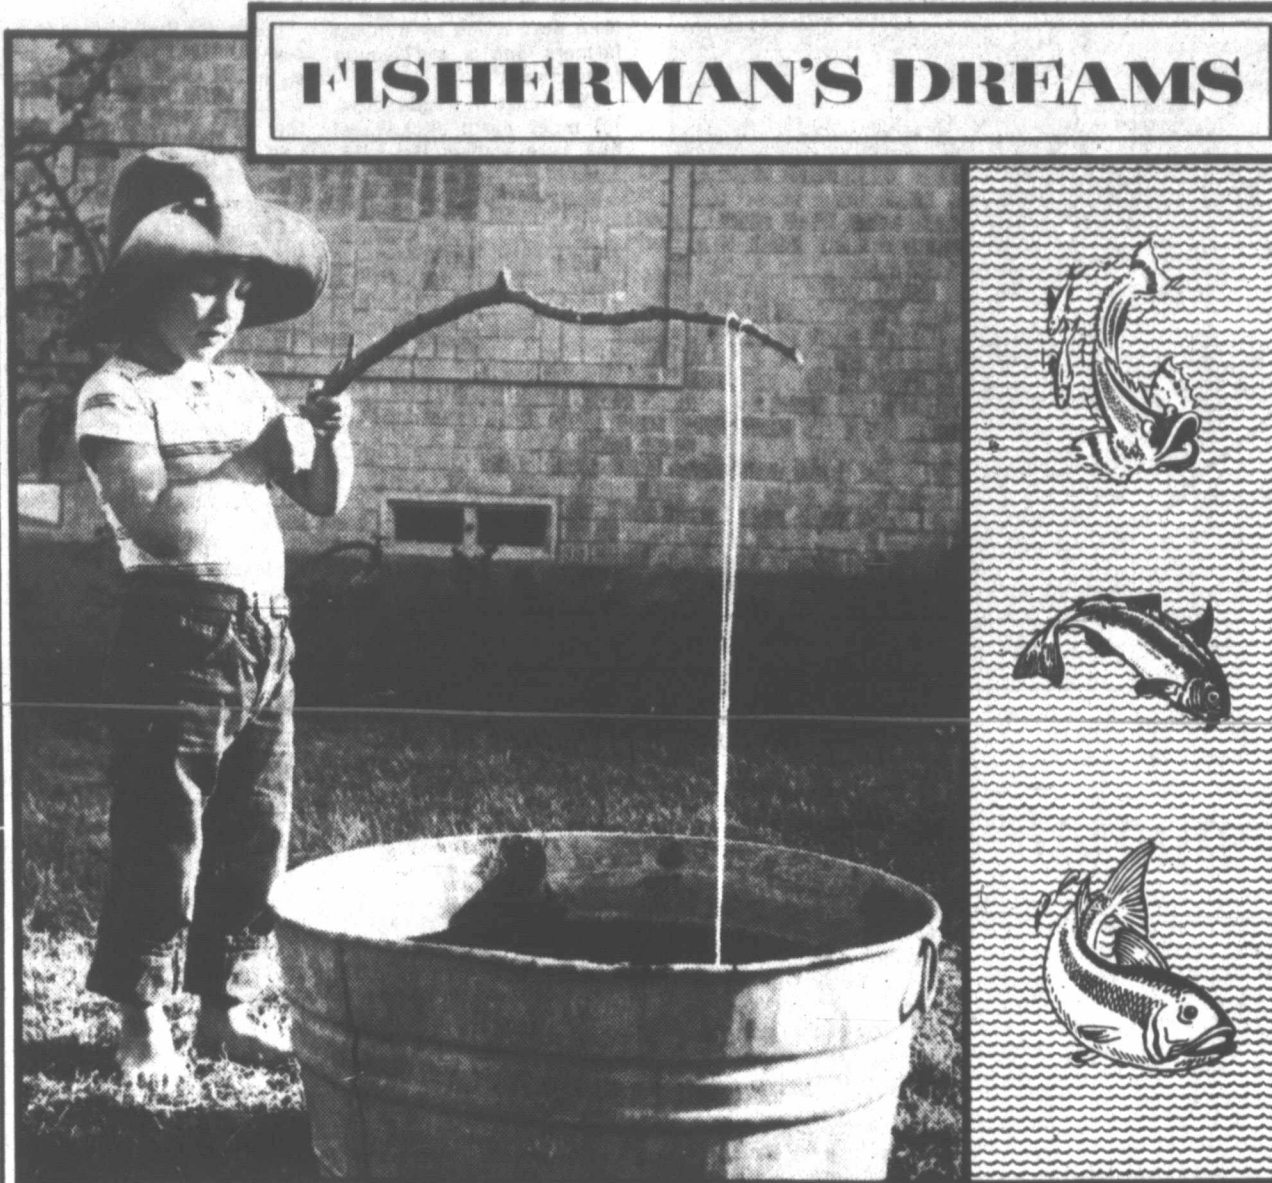

The article quoted a Lutheran minister as saying, "I don't consider myself a pastor, in quotes. I'm just another person who has been called to be a minister of God. I'm no better and no worse than anybody else."

Other pastors tell their congregation: "We are all ministers. You are no different from me."

Calling the pastor by his first name is another sign of the times in the churches. But again this may be more the pastor's doing than the laity's. Instead of "Pastor" or "Reverend," the minister encourages us to call him Dan, Dick or Joe. Even some priests would rather be called by their first names than by "Father."

If clergy prestige has slipped generally in the last 20 years, it has remained high in the black churches where people still tend to address their minister as "Pastor" or "Reverend."

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

An enthusiastic fisherman, like this young fellow, has to be an optimist. His love of the sport is not so much in the size of the fish caught as "in the ketchin'." He loves the thrill of watching the bobble of the cork; the excitement of the sudden tug on his line. Often it isn't even necessary to have a fish. His dreams are sufficient to keep him standing at this old tub for hours.

How many of us are like this fisherman...willing to go through life living on dreams, subsisting on wishes, hoping against hope that in the end everything will turn out alright. There is no middle ground with God. Fisherman's dreams are useless in man's longing for Eternal Life. The church offers such a way to us all. Go to church; take your family or a friend.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man in response to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Just a big hole in the ground'

A twelve foot deep meteor depression near Odessa is usually disappointing to tourists that travel to see it. The crater, mostly filled with sand, was made about 20,000 years ago when a meteor survived its trip through the earth's atmosphere, creating a 100 - foot - deep hole where it crashed. (AP Laserphoto)

Meteor crater disappoints tourists

METEOR CRATER, Texas (AP) — Those who see what's left of the meteor that gouged west Texas 20,000 years ago often are disappointed.

"Tourists get real upset when they drive all the way out here and see this," said Odessa County caretaker Dale Yonkin, who lives in a trailer with his wife and two children in the rim of the block-wide meteor crater.

The only movement near the crater is an oil company pump jack that bobs beside the 12-foot-deep depression. The meteor carved a 30-foot-deep hole in the earth in impact, but since then, winds have nearly filled the crater to ground-level with sand.

"The crater's just a big old hole in the ground. It's best in the past," Yonkin said.

The crater's future, too, may be shaky. Two Californians who drove up in a van looked at the crater hole, shook their heads and left within a minute. "Nothing to see," the driver said. "A waste," his passenger said.

Waste is not how Chamber of Commerce officials in Odessa, nine miles to the east, feel about the crater.

"We have a crater and it is legitimate," spokeswoman Eunice Ramsey said. "It's just not something you go to every weekend."

Few motorists traveling on Interstate 10 through the rich Permian oil basin take the two-mile detour to the meteor site.

"We don't need to keep a crowd counter out there," Ms. Ramsey said.

The meteor site, named a national landmark in 1965, does interest scientists.

NASA studied the crater preceding man's landing on the moon in 1969 because the terrain was so similar to the meteor-impacted moon.

Odessa meteor enthusiast Tom Rodman said.

The University of Texas also studied the crater in 1940 for supernatural materials, but found no geologic anomalies, he said.

But Rodman has little interest in those who stop to see the crater and leave disappointed.

"If it's not a body of water you can throw a beer can in, they don't seem to be interested," Rodman said.

What is interesting is that the Texas crater may have been part of the same meteorite that created the mile-wide, 570-foot deep crater near Winslow, Ariz., or may have been a "traveling companion" of the Arizona meteorite, he said.

Meteorites that enter the atmosphere add about 990 tons daily to the Earth after they crash at sea or on land, experts say.

Some meteor showers appear yearly at predictable times. For instance, the Leonid meteor swarm appears each mid-November.

Written records indicate the Leonid shower was seen as long ago as 902 A.D. — 981 years ago, meteor expert Frank Drass said.

Some meteorites that hit the Earth cause considerable damage. Seventy-five years ago, the Tunguska meteorite scorched a 20-mile-wide swath and flattened Siberian forests like matchsticks, Drass said. There were no reported deaths.

The largest meteor on Earth is near Grootfontein in southwest Africa, and weighs about 66 tons. The largest meteorite in the United States was found in 1902 near Portland in Oregon's Willamette Valley, and weighed 15 tons.

Most meteors completely disintegrate before they reach Earth, but those large enough to reach the ground are called meteorites. An observer without the aid of a telescope each night can see an average of five to 10 meteors per hour, scientists say.

Meteorites that survive the intense heat of atmospheric friction and reach Earth shatter on impact with the ground. Craters from a meteor strike have carved holes in places such as Arizona, northern Quebec, Canada, the Chaco region of Argentina, Siberia and near Odessa.

The Odessa area meteor was made up of 90 percent iron, 7 percent nickel and 3 percent trace minerals, all of which are found on Earth, Rodman said.

When the meteor first hit, it landed in the then-West Texas marshland. West Texas now is dry plains with an average rainfall of 15 inches.

But the crater "has been injured" by road crews, Rodman said.

Tourists threaten ancient city site

By KERIN HOPE, Associated Press Writer
BOGHAZ KOY, Turkey (AP) — On a craggy Anatolian hillside, an archeologist is working to save the ruins of a 3,500-year-old Hittite city from destruction by modern farmers and a burgeoning tourist trade.

The village of Boghaz Koy, 120 miles north of Ankara, was once called Hattusas, home of the Hittite kings and center of an empire that covered most of modern Turkey and northern Syria.

"It's a unique ancient site but until very recently nobody came to see it apart from Hittitologists," said Peter Neve, from the West German Archeological Institute in the Turkish capital. He has been excavating on the 400-acre site for almost 30 years.

"It's just in the last couple of years the tourists started flocking in. We may get 60,000 this year and they must not be allowed to spoil the site," he said in an interview.

A massive fortification wall, almost four miles long, encloses the ruins. It is cut by monumental gateways, flanked by huge human and animal figures carved in gray stone.

Inside are the remains of a royal palace, two forts and eight temples, one of which contained a royal archive in the form of more than a thousand clay tablets inscribed in wedge-shaped cuneiform writing.

Children graze flocks of sheep over the site. Deep plowing threatens to destroy still-buried antiquities, and a few newly built houses encroach on the lower part of the ancient city.

Neve has spent $75,000 in private donations on buying up part of the site from local farmers. The land has been turned over to the Turkish state.

With Turkish government backing, he has planted more than 35,000 trees to help re-create the dense forest environment of the second millennium B.C.

"In another few years, we shall have made an archeological park here," he said.

Villagers have restored parts of the fortifications and cleared a 235-foot tunnel through the city wall, one of nine intended for surprise attacks by an ancient garrison under siege.

"A new temple we dug last season produced hundreds of bronze weapons and breastplates — gifts to a war god — and several beautiful small carved ivories," Neve said.

The clay tablets, unearthed at the turn of the century and deciphered in the 1930s, revealed the Hittites as a nation of efficient warriors, diplomats and bureaucrats. They were also pious worshippers of more than a thousand gods, Neve said.

In rock carvings, the Hittites depicted themselves as short and stocky. They wore large earrings and distinctive boots with toes curling to a point.

"They invaded Anatolia around 2000 B.C. and quickly adopted local customs and artistic styles," said Tahsin Ozguc, an Ankara University professor who excavates at two other Hittite sites. "They learned to write from Assyrian traders established here."

Skilled horse-breeders, the Hittites invented fast three-man chariots manned by archers and spearmen, he said.

Taiwan promotes penal isle to boost tourism

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — In the battle for a larger slice of the tourist dollar, Taiwan is promoting a penal island famed for its submarine hot springs, spotted deer and hardcore criminals.

The move to encourage tourists to visit Green Island, 22 miles southwest of the main Nationalist island of Taiwan, is seen also as a step by the government to improve its international image on human rights.

Green Island, 6.1 square miles of primitive but attractive landscape populated by 3,900 fishermen and small-crop farmers, has long been shrouded in mystery. Tales have floated back about the treatment of the 600 inmates there, some said to be political prisoners, held in three maximum security prisons.

The government has denied charges of ill treating the inmates, and rejected claims by the London-based human rights organization Amnesty International that several hundred political prisoners are detained there. It says there are no political prisoners in Taiwan, and the inmates on Green Island are common criminals.

At present, tourists are free to visit Green Island, and inmates are restricted to an area away from visitors. But few tourists go there because of the inconvenience of travel and inadequate accommodations.

Yu Wei, director general of Taiwan's Tourism Bureau, is determined to change this and, in an initial step, the government is helping build a 36-room hotel at a cost of $1.05 million U.S.

The hotel is scheduled to open later this year, when passenger flights by small domestic airlines and an existing twice-a-week ferry service will be increased.

Aside from its natural beauty, Yu said in an interview, Green Island has other attractions: it is not polluted, unlike many industrial areas of Taiwan, and its submarine hot springs are considered therapeutical for rheumatism and a variety of skin diseases.

Dear Abby

Husband frowns on wife's belly dancing

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for a year to a good, loving man who treats me like a queen. He has a few faults, but nothing serious. He goes out once a week with the boys, comes home drunk and falls into bed. He has never hit me or even called me names.

I always loved to dance, and if I say so myself, I was very good. Before we were married I used to do "belly-dances." When someone had a birthday, I'd go out and do a belly dance. It wasn't vulgar or anything. It was all in fun. I got paid, but I really did it mostly for fun.

All of a sudden I was asked to teach a course in belly dancing at the "Y." I really want to, but my husband thinks belly dancing is a hootchy-kootchy striptease dance, but it's not. It's really an art.

I'm 29 and my husband is 32, and we have no children yet. I really want to teach this class and have some outlet besides cooking, cleaning and doing the laundry. Do you think I'm wrong?

LOVES TO DANCE

DEAR LOVES: Absolutely not! Teach your husband how to belly dance, too. If he has the stomach for it.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my early 20s, my husband is in his early 30s. My problem is our sex life. We've been married for three years and our sex life has been pretty bad for most of it. There is no romance in our lovemaking whatsoever. It lasts maybe three minutes, then I'm left frustrated.

I've talked to my husband until I'm blue in the face, but it hasn't helped. I've been to a marriage counselor. (He won't go.) I've even threatened to leave him. Nothing works. He says he loves me, but sex is not a very important part of marriage. I think it is.

The rest of our marriage is pretty good, but I'm falling out of love with him awfully fast. What should I do?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Try to persuade him in a loving, non-judgmental way to get therapy. Almost every university medical school offers sex therapy, which could be enormously helpful to your husband. If he really loves you, he'll agree. If he refuses, you can either settle for a sexually frustrating but otherwise "pretty good" marriage, or make good your threat to leave him. Only you can make that choice.

DEAR ABBY: I'm being married in an informal wedding. It's the second time around for both of us. He's wearing a business suit and I'm wearing a short, dressy dress.

All the guests are wearing informal clothes except my fiancé's mother, who plans to wear an expensive formal gown she bought especially for her daughter's wedding, which was canceled last summer at the last minute.

She showed it to me and asked how I liked it. I told her it was beautiful, but I thought she'd be more comfortable in a short dress. I explained that no other woman would be wearing a long gown, and she might feel conspicuous.

She said she had her heart set on wearing it, and if I had no objections, she would wear it.

Now what? I hate to let her make a fool of herself. I've asked my fiancé, and he said, "She's stubborn as a mule. Leave her alone." What should I do?

AUGUST BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Listen to your fiancé.

DEAR ABBY: About the question of calling first or just dropping in: Nothing annoys a woman as much as having her friends drop in to find her house looking the way it usually does.

Computer voices

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Can a violin talk? The answer is a qualified "yes," according to Allan W. Schindler, associate professor of composition at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music.

"A computer can impose certain characteristics of one sound, such as a human voice, on another sound, such as a violin, to produce a new sound," he explains.

Although the result "cannot exist in nature, it sounds realistic because it is made up of two real sounds," Schindler says.

In addition, new technologies in computer music make it possible to "hear live stage performances in which voices reach previously unattainable ranges, notes can be greatly sustained, and one voice can be turned into a chorus," he says.

Book review

Book is a haunting love story

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyle Editor

"Chase the Wind" a novel by Pampan Deborah Lawrence and Aggie Villanueva of Olathe, Kan., has been aptly described as "haunting." I would also use the word "disturbing."

I can't recall ever being quite so disturbed by a book, although I can't say exactly why this is true. It certainly made me think about marriage and man's relationship with God.

"Chase the Wind" is a Christian romance novel, a new genre of fiction we may be seeing more of in the future. Although the plot lines of Christian romances are much the same as the popular paperback romances today, they have a more moralistic theme. However, I did not finish "Chase the Wind" with the feeling of having been preached a sermon. It was much more subtle than that.

Lawrence and Villanueva wove an ingenious love story based on the book Hosea in the Old Testament of the Bible. Lawrence explained that Hosea is perhaps the most difficult book to interpret.

"The first time I read Hosea, I couldn't make head nor tails of it," she said. "But a friend made it clear that it was just a story. Once I realized it was a story about someone's life and their marriage, then the rest came pretty easy."

"Hosea is the prophet with a broken heart," she said. Simply explained, Hosea was asked by God to marry a prostitute in order to show the people of Israel that God would accept them although they had worshiped other gods and idols.

"Chase the Wind" expands this story into a romance between Hosea and Gomer, the prostitute, set against the background of Israel as the country was filled with inner political turmoil and later invaded by Syria. Time and again Hosea would win Gomer and lose her as God seemed to win and lose the hearts of the people of Israel.

Lawrence and Villanueva first wanted to write their book as an anthology of Bible stories written as romances. However, once they began with Hosea they realized it would evolve into a novel.

"Our book doesn't focus on the wrath of God but more on his compassion," Lawrence said. "He was so full of wrath, so full of wanting to vent his anger — and the result was compassion and mercy."

Hosea's idea of comparing God as a loving husband was completely new to the people of his time, Lawrence explained. They only knew about sacrifices and ways to avoid His rage, she added.

"So many people believe they've done too much for God to forgive, but Hosea disproves this," she said.

Seldom do I find a book I become so involved in that I read the whole book in one day. "Chase the Wind" is an exception. The character and story line are believable — captivating really.

Lawrence said developing the characters was "the most fun" part of the 1½ years she spent co-authoring the book. She used past experiences and people she knew for her characters, she said.

"Aggie (Villanueva) would say she drew on her husband for Hosea," she explained. "I drew on God as I see God. And Gomer ... she's the dark side of all of us, of how we would be without God."

In the prologue, written by Lawrence, Gomer daydreams on a mountainside. Here readers are introduced to the wind as a symbol of God and of evil, too.

"That's the way I am," Lawrence says of Gomer conjuring up the dream images. "The wind came from the Bible, ('Israel is chasing the wind, yes, shepherding a whirlwind — a dangerous game!' Hosea 12:1 The Living Bible)" she added.

Lawrence said she believes Christian romances will become more evident in the future. The difference between these type books and the popular romances today, she said, is the morality evident in the Christian romances.

"They're not quite as lenient (as popular romances)" she said. "They (popular romances) keep getting more erotic and more erotic. I think the spiritual aspect (of Christian romances) makes them different. There's a need for that. I think women like having spiritual guidelines."

When asked to define morality, Lawrence replied, "I hate to say it's a bunch of no-nos because that's not really how I look at it. Morals today are always changing, but the basic principles of the Bible never change. That's because they work."

An autograph session for Lawrence and her book "Chase the Wind" is planned at Waldens Book Store at the Pampa Mall Saturday, July 16, from 12 noon until 3 p.m.

Lawrence, 31, moved to Pampa from Olathe, Kan. last fall after her husband, Robert, was transferred by Phillips Petroleum. The couple have a daughter, Tricia, 9. Lawrence is an active member of the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly. "Chase the Wind" is her first novel, but she is working already on a second novel.

Oral surgery changes life as well as smile of woman

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — What people remember most about Vanessa Durns is her smile.

The smile has a cover-girl symmetry. She laughs and grins and speaks, but that radiant smile never leaves her face.

And that smile is no accident, no good fortune of her birth.

It was carefully sculpted five years ago in the operating room of Easton Hospital during six hours of surgery. That surgery removed a slice of her upper jaw so her face wouldn't be so long, moved her lower jaw forward to give her a more symmetrical profile and segmented her upper jaw to give her teeth a better alignment.

It is a procedure known as orthognathic surgery, an operation that is as much reconstructive as it is isometric. This method has transformed both the appearance and the oral function — not to mention the self-esteem — of thousands of men and women across the United States.

Pampa little league teams ousted from Area Tourney

Both Pampa American and National Little League teams were eliminated from Area baseball competition Thursday night at Optimist Park.

Dumas, trailing Pampa American, 7-3, rallied in the late innings to take an 11-9 victory. Pampa led until the fourth inning when Dumas scored sixth runs to take a 9-7 lead. Dumas extended the lead by scoring two more runs in the fifth.

The Americans closed the gap to 11-9 in the sixth inning and had the tying runs on second and third, but Dumas first baseman Mike Elliott made the final out to end the rally.

Dirk Davis was the winning pitcher while Jason Garren was charged with the loss.

Robert Perez and Greg Lang had two hits each for Pampa while Curt Brashears hit a home run.

The game between the Pampa Nationals and High Plains East developed into a pitcher's duel with High Plains coming out on top 2-1.

Pampa's Kevin McKnight and East Plains Mike Rose allowed just five hits each. High Plains broke open the scoreless duel in the third inning by scoring a run on singles by Clem Weatherston and Brad Shadle.

High Plains added another run in the fourth on a walk and an error.

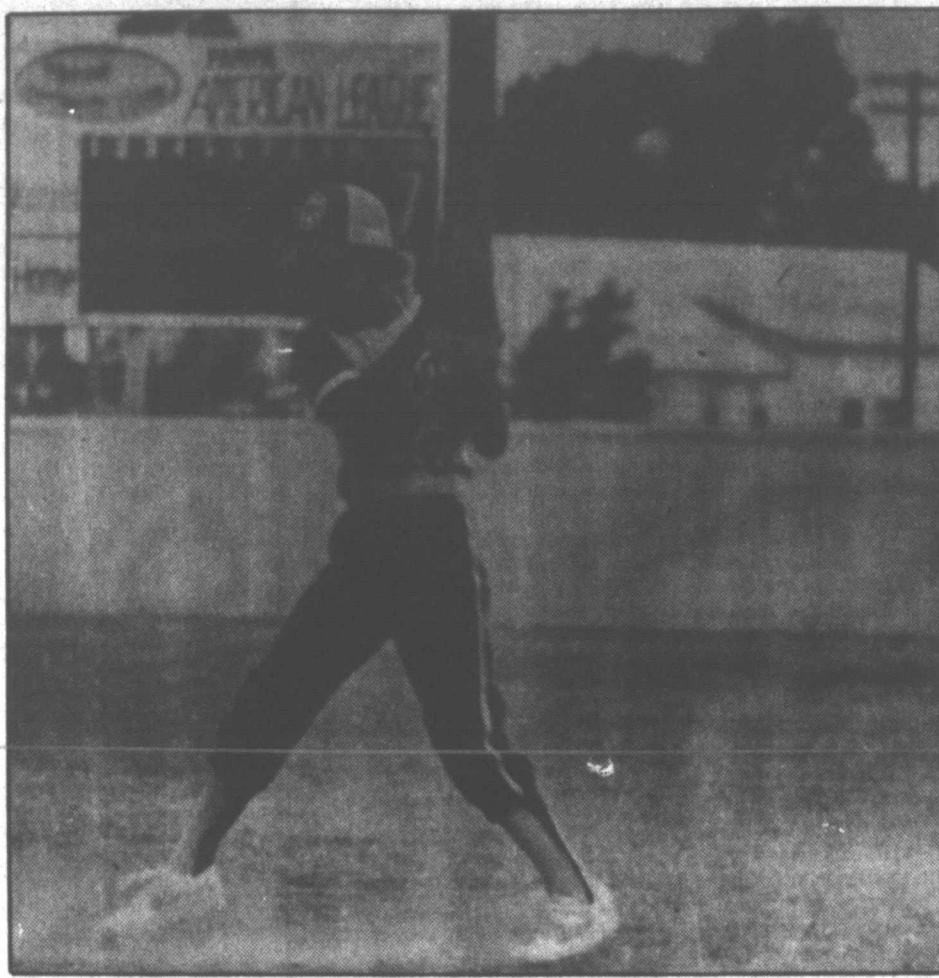

Pampa scored its lone run in the top of the sixth when pinch hitter Robert Hinds walked, and scored following singles by Brandon McDonald and Terry Stroud.

McDonald and Stroud were Pampa's top hitters with two hits each.

In tonight's action, unbeaten High Plains West meets Dumas at 7 p.m. in the American League park while High Plains East goes against Phillips at 7 p.m. in the National League Park.

The tournament will end tonight if High Plains West and Phillips win their games. A loss by either team will send the finals into Saturday night at 7 p.m.

Stolid and successful

Hale Irwin is golf's invisible hero

By Murray Olderman

PITTSBURGH (NEA) — The impulse hit him as he walked down the 12th fairway on a warm spring day, with an invitingly cool lake on his left.

Hale Irwin had just escaped the winter snows of Colorado. Five of his college buddies were with him. They were having a rollicking good time.

And Hale was exuberantly happy as one of four amateur golfers invited to the 1967 Houston International Classic.

"Hey," he said suddenly to himself. "I'm going to jump in that lake." He even took a step in that direction. But he didn't jump.

Hale Irwin jumping in a lake? That's like Sir John Gielgud wearing blue jeans to dinner. Or Steve Carlton calling a press conference.

That was a year before Hale Irwin embarked on a pro golfing career, which by the start of this season was to produce $2,140,093 in official earnings and the prestige of having won two U.S. Opens.

Yet he's still virtually invisible as a public figure. Hale Irwin is staid and stolid, stoic and successful, always under a tight rein.

The day before the recent U.S. Open at Oakmont, Pa., he went out at seven in the morning to play the back nine — all by himself.

Hale doesn't crave attention. He doesn't thrive on excitement.

So the realization that he has won a quarter of a million dollars more than the great Arnold Palmer, that only four others in the entire history of golf have won more money, that so far he has 15 tour victories (most recently the Memorial Tournament in late May) is startling.

Hale Irwin, a trim 38 years old, a one-time all-conference defensive back at Colorado, a man who no longer has to prove his credentials as an athlete, is invisible by choice.

Citing the month he turned pro, Hale says, "If you had told me in May 1968 that I would have won two Opens and accomplished what I did, I would have turned cartwheels. Now I'm too old to do a cartwheel."

That doesn't mean emotions don't bubble under that cool outward demeanor, which is emphasized by metal-rimmed glasses that give him the look of a CPA.

He recalls the night before his final round at Inverness in 1979, when he won his second Open.

"I was so pumped up I couldn't eat. Or sleep. My wife and I collectively got 15 minutes sleep. And that was a lot."

"Then I was playing the 10th hole, leading by six and saying to myself, 'You've got this one. Just don't fall down.'"

"I still had a five-shot lead with two to play. How do you lose it? You don't. I double-bogeyed and bogeyed and still won."

Like old Satchel Paige, Irwin has formulated a set of aphorisms to keep himself on keel.

On motivation — "You need the bread. The goal we all start out with is hazy, an over-the-horizon goal. Did Columbus know he was going to hit America?"

On his intensity and drive — "If you strip it down and put it in a measuring glass, it would look the same as Tom Watson."

On controlling his emotions — "You've got to be careful not to let it get away. A runaway team of horses usually crashes."

On making money — "You win and you make money. You don't win to make money. If I just tried to make the cut and some money, the chances are I wouldn't do it."

On aspiring to be the best golfer — "I like to throw in a good deal of realism with my optimism. That is a hell of a mountain to climb. I'm not saying I'm not up to the task with my physical gifts. But should I have been climbing that mountain? Is it me?"

Being Hale Irwin, and knowing who he is, preoccupies him.

"I'm not out here for recognition," he explains. "To make myself visible. Our demeanor isn't always indicative of the inner self. I've been under the gun as an athlete most of my life, in different situations. I've always been a competitor. I had a 'don't-give-up' since I was a kid. All those old sports clichés — I believe in them."

"Whether I'm entertaining or not has marginal bearing on whether I win a golf tournament. If you want to say I'm a stick-in-the-mud, go ahead. It's very difficult to describe yourself. You have to ask other people."

"I only broke a club in anger once intentionally. And I was going to change the grip on it anyhow."

Texas pounds New York

NEW YORK (AP) — When Charlie Hough's knuckleball is moving, the Texas right-hander is unhittable.

The New York Yankees learned that lesson for the fifth time.

Throwing his knuckler at two different speeds and from varying positions, Hough raised his record to 5-0 against New York with a five-hit 11-2 victory Thursday night.

"It seems like I always have my good stuff against them," said the 35-year-old right-hander, who was Texas' ace starter in 1982.

Hough, 8-7, walked three and struck out seven in completing his fifth game of 18 starts this season.

In his last nine starts, Hough, who underwent knee surgery in the spring, has given up just 16 earned runs in 77 2-3 innings.

"The next time we have to face him, I'm going to tell my hitters to not show up," said Yankees Manager Billy Martin. "He one of the two best knuckleball pitchers I've ever seen. The other was Hoyt Wilhelm."

After retiring New York in order in the first inning, Hough, with a 1-0 lead, pitched himself into trouble by walking Oscar Gamble and Butch Wynegar to start the second. One out later, Don Mattingly blooped a two-run double to center, putting New York ahead 2-1.

"I did a poor job of pitching that inning," said Hough, the American League Pitcher of the Month in June. "I tried to be too fine. I tried to pitch according to the ballpark. You should never do that. But once I got past that, I was over the hump."

Hough retired 16 consecutive batters before Steve Kemp's two-out infield single in the seventh.

"The ball was hopping all over the place," said the reliever-turned-starter. "When it's doing that, the opposition looks awfully bad."

In the ninth, though, the Yankees loaded the bases with two outs, and Hough had to go at Mattingly again. After the first baseman worked the count full, Hough slipped a fastball by him to end the game.

"I was just hoping to see the ball," said Mattingly. "On each at-bat, I had no way of knowing where the ball was going."

NL roundup

Things looking up for Houston Astros

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

In 1980, Terry Puhl and the Houston Astros hit line drives, got good pitching and fine defense in winning the National League West.

Since then, the Astros have gone astray.

But lately, things are looking brighter for Puhl and his teammates.

On Thursday night, Joe Niekro threw a three-hitter and Puhl doubled twice and scored two runs as Houston stopped the Montreal Expos 3-0.

Offensively and defensively, this is the best this club's played in a couple of years," Puhl said.

Also, Atlanta downed Philadelphia 5-2. New York beat Cincinnati 7-4. Pittsburgh rallied past San Diego 8-6. Los Angeles clubbed Chicago 8-4 and St. Louis overcame San Francisco 6-5.

Houston is currently tied with San Diego for third in the NL East with a 45-41 record, eight games behind Atlanta. Still, Puhl is encouraged about the Astros.

And Bill Virdon, who managed Houston the last three years and now manages Montreal, is encouraged about Puhl, who hit 282 with 13 home runs in 1980.

In strike-shortened 1981, Puhl slumped to 251 with three homers and last year he hit 262 with eight home runs.

Houston went ahead in the fourth against Steve Rogers, 12-4, when Omar Moreno tripled and scored on Puhl's bloop double. Dickie Thon then singled and Puhl scored on Phil Garner's groundout.

In the sixth, Puhl doubled, went to third on Thon's infield hit and scored another Garner grounder.

Niekro, 7-7, retired the last 14 batters for his first complete game. He struck out three and walked none as Houston won for the eighth time in nine games. Montreal has lost 11 of 14.

Braves 5, Phillies 2
The game was tied 1-1 after eight innings, but Bob Horner and his Atlanta teammates quickly changed that.

Horner led off the top of the ninth with his 15th homer. Chris Chambliss followed with a triple and Glenn Hubbard, Bruce Benedict and Rafael Ramirez added RBI singles as the Braves scored four times.

Philadelphia tried to battle back in the bottom of the ninth with one out. Ivan deJesus and Greg Gross drew walks from reliever Steve Bedrosian, 6-3. Reliever Terry Forster allowed Tony Perez's RBI double before retiring Pete Rose and Gary Matthews for his ninth save.

Atlanta took a 1-0 lead on Dale Murphy's 20th homer in the second inning.

Mets 7, Reds 4
Rusty Staub, New York's pinch hitter deluxe, came through again with a two-run homer in the sixth inning to break a 4-4 tie.

It was his second homer of the season, both as a pinch hitter. He was batting for winning pitcher Tom Seaver, 6-9. Seaver went six innings, struck out seven and walked four. Jesse Orosco got the save.

Keith Hernandez blasted a two-run homer, his seventh, to lift the Mets into the 4-4 tie.

New York and visiting Cincinnati combined for nine stolen bases. The Mets swiped five, including two each by Mookie Wilson and Darryl Strawberry.

Pirates 8, Padres 6
Johnny Ray, who hit a two-out, game-tying home run in the ninth inning of Wednesday's victory over San Francisco, continued his heroics for Pittsburgh with a two-out, two-run double to cap a four-run rally in the top of the ninth inning against San Diego.

The Pirates trailed 6-4, but Dale Berra and Lee Mazzilli singled. John Montefusco, 8-2, gave up Mike Easler's RBI single and a sacrifice. Gary Lucas intentionally walked Bill Madlock before Ray doubled in the go-ahead runs.

Pinch hitter Kurt Bevacqua had given San Diego its lead in the seventh with a grand slam.

Cardinals 6, Giants 5
San Francisco took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the seventh. St. Louis went ahead 3-2 in the top of the eighth and then the Giants edged in front 4-3 in the bottom of the inning.

But pinch hitter Floyd Rayford belted a two-run homer to cap a three-run rally in the top of the ninth that lifted the Cardinals.

The Giants tried to rally in the bottom of the ninth against reliever Bruce Sutter. Max Venable led off with a triple and scored on pinch hitter Tom O'Malley's groundout.

Stadler leads British Open

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — There was a misty haze hanging over the dunes and brush and sandhills that make up the Royal Birkdale Golf Club links on England's northwest coast.

Bill Rogers was squinting into that blur, trying to focus on the one-iron second shot that was flying toward the green on the 526-yard, par-5 17th hole during the first round of the 112th British Open Golf Championship.

"It looked like it was going over the green," Rogers said Thursday.

Then people started falling out of the stands and I figured something had happened.

He figured correctly.

The ball hit some 10-15 yards short of the green, on a airway baked hard by a record-breaking heat wave. Look a bounce and then ran into the cup for an extremely rare double eagle: a score of 2 in a hole that plays to a par of 5.

It was the first in British Open competition since Johnny Miller turned the trick at Muirfield in 1972.

"That's the first one I've ever had, the first one I've ever seen," Rogers said of the hot that carried 228 yards.

"There's no way I can hit a one-iron 228 yards, but the round is hard from all this heat they've been having over here, the ball got a good run and it was a little downwind," said Rogers, who won this title, six other international vents and Player of the Year honors in 1981.

"I haven't played very well since then," Rogers said.

"I won a tournament earlier this year, in New Orleans, but I've only played really good two times, that week and the week before."

"Except for that, the last 18 months hasn't been much to get excited about."

And Rogers was less than completely excited about his round of 67, four under par, which put him in a tie for second behind Craig Stadler after the first round of this, the oldest of all golf's myriad championships.

"I got three under par in a hurry, on one shot," he said. "I wish I could say that I'm confident and playing as good as I can play. But I'm not."

"I wasn't prepared to play good here. My confidence isn't very good."

"Sure, I'd like to win another British Open, another major."

Oilers sign second-round pick

HOUSTON (AP) — Harvey Salem, the Oilers' second draft choice, signed a contract Thursday with the Houston franchise, and will report to training camp Friday, General Manager Ladd Herzog announced.

Salem, an offensive tackle, comes from the University of California.

Terms of the contract were not announced.

Also Thursday, the Oilers acquired in a trade former Los Angeles Rams all-pro offensive tackle Doug France.

France, 30, did not play last season. He retired because of a shoulder injury, but the Rams still retained his rights.

Terms of the trade also were not announced by the National Football League franchise.

Bruce Matthews, the Oilers' top pick, now is the Oilers' only draft choice who has not signed with the team.

Howard Slusher, who represents Matthews, is asking for a three-year package that could be as high as $2.5 million to $3 million, according to the Houston Chronicle.

The Oilers are offering Matthews a four-year package worth $1,159,500, including a $467,000 signing bonus.

"I'm disappointed I'm not at training camp," Matthews said Wednesday from his Los Angeles home. "I'd like to be there because I need the work."

"I know we can get close on this thing," he said. "I think it could be settled."

Caldwell suffers knee injury

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Defensive lineman Bryan Caldwell, the Dallas Cowboys' third-round draft choice, returned Thursday to Dallas to have his injured left knee examined by team doctor Marvin Knight, the club announced.

Caldwell, from Arizona State, suffered a sprained knee ligaments, with possible torn cartilage, during a routine drill Wednesday, team officials said.

Dallas' first-round draft choice Jim Jeffcoat, also a defensive lineman from Arizona State, has been suffering cramps caused by dehydration in the 90-degree temperatures.

A champion jockey is a champion novelist

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Writer Dick Francis came to the United States in 1954 with a team of British horsemen for the International Sweepstakes at Belmont Park. The result of that memorable event has been set to history, with little or no effect on Francis' renown this side of the Atlantic.

Indeed, Francis has made his mark here with pen and ink, so to speak, rather than with silks and iron.

"I never felt I was a born writer," says Francis, whose current racecourse thriller, "Banker," is his 21st book. Francis always wanted to be a jockey. After a late start he was a Royal Air Force pilot in World War II — he became one of England's top peepchase jockeys. He rode 345 mounts to victory, earning the title Champion Jockey once in his professional career that began in 1948.

In 1956, his horse, Devon Loch, collapsed 30 yards from the finish line. The following January, Francis took a serious fall — he'd had dozens over the years, with a corresponding quota of broken bones — that put him out of action for several weeks.

"I'd half-written my autobiography," he recalls, "and I took an assignment to write articles on racing for the London Sunday Express.

"It was a good job, and it kept me on the scene," he says. "But it didn't pay quite enough and Mary, my wife, suggested I do what I'd always talked about doing, write a novel."

The result was "Dead Cert," published in 1962. Francis has written one a year since then, and each has expanded his worldwide following which now includes readers in 18 languages. He finished his autobiography, "The Sport of Queens," in 1966.

Francis, now 63 and not much heavier than the 140 pounds he carried as a jockey, maintains close contact with his first love: racing and racing people. The sport is common to all of his books.

Francis' work is distinguished further by the author's effort to bring a new aspect of the horseman's world to each novel.

"Banker" incorporates merchant banking and equine pharmacology in a story about a magnificent racehorse named Sandcastle who produces deformed offspring, "Twice Shy," published last year, tracks a schoolteacher's efforts to keep a computerized system that can beat the racetrack odds from the hands of villains.

Dabney Coleman loves to act on TV

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — If you know actors, you know that what they really want is to be a movie star. Not a TV star, but a genuine, up-there-on-the-silver-screen movie star.

Here is Dabney Coleman, movie star, and he says that what he wants to be is a TV star. He's had an incredible parade of smash hit movies — "9 to 5," "On Golden Pond," "Tootsie" and currently "WarGames" — and most of his peers are green (or some other Technicolor) with envy. But here he is, starring in the new NBC summer series "Buffalo Bill," and he says that's what he wants to do for a living. He wants to be a TV person.

He probably will get his wish, too. "Buffalo Bill" looks like it could be a winner. The reviews have been good and, in the ratings race, it leaped from a 29 to an 18 in its first weeks on the air. So Coleman hopes "Buffalo Bill" will be picked up by the network after its 13-week run is completed.

"I have wanted to do a TV series for a long time," says Coleman.

Meanwhile Craig is thinking of celebrating when he learns that Steve has been arrested.

THIS WEEK: Craig's plan backfires. Jeff relies more heavily on pills.

EDGE OF NIGHT — Camilla shows up saying that she was conned out of 10 million dollars but another 40 million are still unaccounted for. Sky and Raven tell Peter they saw him breaking into the office. Dell's ruby is appraised at $160,000. A shadowy figure cuts a rope making a sandbag fall narrowly missing Preacher. Calvin and Chris find out that Sully, a cellmate of Dell, sent a hit man after Dell.

THIS WEEK: Miles is on the trail of the murderer. Many things disappear at the studio.

'Three's Company' - British do it better

Network programmers are constantly on the lookout for ways to minimize the risk of launching a new series. That's because high risk equates with high probability of losing one's job.

One play is to borrow from last year's hit movies. Every season brings us the inevitable "Animal House" rip-offs, the "Saturday Night Fever" spinoffs, the "Raiders of the Lost Ark" action clones. Almost all of them turn out to be duds. But they are safe duds.

Another favorite play is to recycle successful British TV sitcoms. At this time they've had some good luck. "All in the Family" and "Sanford and Son" came to us from across the Atlantic. So did "Too Close for Comfort." So did two recent flops, "Amanda's" and "Foot in the Door."

Do you ever wonder how these Americanized versions stand up to the British originals? I have. This summer provides a chance to find out about one of them.
