

Citizens to build new drive-in bank at Somerville, Kingsmill

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

The "24-hour teller" and another drive-in bank are coming to Pampa.

Steve Jones, president, and the board of directors of Citizens Bank and Trust Company have announced plans for construction of a new motor bank located on the one-half block west of the main bank building on West Kingsmill.

The motor bank will have eight drive-up units for retail customers and two commercial teller units. Five tellers will provide service to the eight units, Jones said. The design will provide for separate commercial and retail units and easy access into and out of the motor bank.

The motor bank will feature an unmanned automated teller machine which will perform several teller functions and be open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, he said.

"White brick will be used to match the present bank building and complimentary landscaping will be used for beautification," Jones said. The new motor bank will also provide for personal contact through the use of closed circuit TV screens and microphones.

Jones said construction is scheduled to start in August and should take from four to six months to complete.

He said the addition of the motor bank is in response to the need to better serve the needs of the bank's customers.

Jones said to avoid a revolt, popcorn will be in the lobby at all times.

"We don't dare do away with the popcorn," he said.

Local drilling not hurt by court rule

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

Once Uncle Sam gets his hands on tax money, he never lets go, local oilmen said, and they said Monday's Supreme Court ruling upholding the windfall profits tax was expected. None of the Pampa drillers expected a branch of the government to overturn a law creating $225 billion in tax revenue through 1990.

The oilmen called by the Pampa News said they had hoped the high court would throw out the law — that a favorable ruling would have stimulated a search for new oil. But much of the "stripper" oil produced out of the old Panhandle Field here is presently exempt from the tax anyway, and the ruling won't hurt local drilling, the oilmen said.

On a 9 to 0 vote, the Supreme Court Monday overturned the decision of a Wyoming federal judge, who ruled in November that the windfall profits tax was unconstitutional because it didn't apply to oil produced in Alaska above the Arctic Circle. Wyoming Judge Euing T. Kerr said any federal law must apply to all parts of the United States.

But the high court overturned Kerr's decision, and ruled that Congress could enact a tax for one part of the country and exempt another.

"Congress may take geographic considerations into account in deciding what oil to tax," said Justice Lewis F. Powell in his opinion for the court.

Pampa Benny Kirksey, who has an interest in several wells, said a federal tax imposed on one part of the country and not on another isn't fair. He said that idea is about the same as slapping an income tax on people who live in the southwest only, while exempting people in the northeast.

Kirksey said the Supreme Court didn't live up to its role as an objective, separate branch of the government in the ruling. He said the political considerations of a tax that creates so much revenue, not objective justice, is probably what influenced the court's decision.

Wallace Bruce, of W.L. Bruce Oil & Gas Company, agreed and said, "Any tax ever put on people was never taken off." But Bruce said most new "stripper" wells drilled here are exempted from the tax after the first 12 months. He said a producer pays the tax for the first year, until a well's history proves it produces less than 10 barrels a day. Bruce said wells under the 10-barrel limit are exempt from the windfall profits tax.

Bill Bridges, of Kaari Oil Company, said the ruling won't affect local drilling.

"The oil around here is casinghead gas. Stripper production less than 10 barrels a day is exempt," he said.

Bridges said the government has already allocated the money collected from the tax, and he therefore doubted the court would give it back. "There's not any way to declare it unconstitutional," he said.

Jim Campbell, who is a local oil and gas investor and royalty owner, said he was "disappointed, but not surprised" about the ruling.

"I don't have a tremendous amount of confidence in the Supreme Court," Campbell said.

He said the name of the tax irks him as much as anything. Campbell said the tax's "complex formula that I don't understand" has nothing to do with "profits." He said the tax is purely an "excise" tax collected without regard to profit.

Campbell said the tax was a "punitive" tax imposed on big oil during the Carter Administration when it was somehow determined the majors were taking in excess profits. He said the tax, "supply-side economics in reverse," has discouraged oil exploration and hurt consumers.

Campbell said a free market would "let the law of supply and demand take over," and with the current surplus, consumers would see lower prices for oil and gas. President Reagan echoes Campbell's philosophy and campaigned on a promise to try and repeal the windfall profits tax. The

Nuclear arms talks to shift from missiles to warheads soon

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, vowing to be "as flexible as necessary," is unveiling a new arms control offer that puts greater emphasis on measuring Soviet and American nuclear arsenals in terms of warheads instead of missiles.

Reagan planned to announce the change today after meeting with congressional leaders. His statement coincides with the resumption of strategic arms reduction talks between U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva.

The change is supposed to move the United States and Soviet Union away from building multiwarhead missiles and toward small, single-warhead missiles that would be less threatening.

Members of Congress who were briefed by the president predicted he would alter the U.S. position by raising the proposed ceiling on the number of land and submarine based missiles each side could have.

Currently, the U.S. proposal would set a ceiling of 850 long-range missiles on each side. It also calls for a one-third cutback in warheads, leaving each side with 5,000.

Several congressmen said the new U.S. position would not put as much emphasis on missile lifting power — or throw-weight — as the Pentagon had wanted. Currently, the Soviets have about a 3 to 1 advantage over the United States in throw-weight, which can determine the number and size of warheads that a missile carries.

As he left the White House, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters, "In three years of discussions on arms control, I've never heard the president stronger or more positive about the outlook, and about the positions we would be taking."

Percy said if Reagan lobbies for his proposal and gets the Soviets to accept it, "I believe that we can get approval of the Senate for it, and I think it is achievable in the first term of this administration."

Several senators said Reagan endorsed the concept of a warhead "build-down," calling on each side to destroy nuclear weapons as new ones are deployed. However, they said a proposal was not ready for inclusion in the negotiations now.

Changes in the U.S. position were recommended by a presidential commission headed by a former national security adviser Brent Scowcroft. The panel called for deploying the controversial MX missile, while beginning development of a new, single-warhead missile for deployment in the 1990s.

Reagan tells Nicaraguans to pack up and leave

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a swiftly moving diplomatic drama marked by charges of assassination plots and spying, 21 Nicaraguan diplomats are obeying U.S. orders to close all six of their country's consulates and leave the country.

The State Department on Tuesday ordered the consulates shuttered and the diplomats and their families expelled in an unexpectedly severe and swift retaliation for the expulsion of three U.S. diplomats by Nicaragua on Monday.

"The Nicaraguan government's precipitate action in expelling U.S. officials, giving them an unreasonably short deadline for leaving the country, and then the public show staged (in Managua) on June 6, called in our opinion for a strong response," said Rush Taylor, a spokesman at the State Department.

"An important additional consideration was the Nicaraguan government's use of its consulates for intelligence operations," Taylor said.

Another official, speaking privately, said the consulates were "being used very actively" for intelligence gathering. He gave no details.

Word of the U.S. action was passed to Nicaraguan Ambassador Antonio Jarquin during a chilly 15-minute interview with James H. Michel, newly appointed acting assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

At the Nicaraguan Embassy, Minister-Counselor Manuel Cordero, the deputy chief of mission, told reporters that "so far the U.S. government hasn't challenged the proof" that three expelled American diplomats plotted for the CIA to try to kill foreign minister Miguel D'Escoto and to form terrorist squads.

However, the State Department says it "rejects the charges." And Linda Pfeifel, head of the political section at the U.S. Embassy in Managua and one of the three expelled Americans, called them absurd.

The officials heading the Nicaraguan consulates in New York, New Orleans, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco were given until 4 p.m. local time today to close their doors and leave the country.

The remaining officials and all dependents were told to be out by Friday.

Cordero said 50 to 60 Nicaraguans in all would have to leave. The action would leave open only Nicaragua's embassy here, its mission at the United Nations in New York City and honorary consuls in Santa Barbara, Calif. and in Puerto Rico.

Managua and Washington were already locked in a long-running diplomatic word battle that includes U.S. charges that Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government funnels Soviet arms to guerrillas in El Salvador and the counter charge that the Reagan administration is striving "to overthrow our government."

In Congress on Tuesday, the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 20-14 to ban U.S. undercover operations in Nicaragua and to instead openly help friendly governments in the area intercept arms bound for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Some committee members, however, are predicting that a compromise will be reached when the issues comes before the full House that would allow U.S. covert aid to continue. No action is expected until later this month.

services tomorrow

MILLER, Randy Dale - 2 p.m. Carmichael - Whatley Colonial Chapel with Rev. Jim Neal, pastor of Grace Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Memory Gardens.

NICHOLS, Roy - 2 p.m., Johnson Park Church of Christ, Borger. Burial in Westlawn Memorial Park, Borger.

obituaries

KANDY DALE MILLER
Funeral services for Randy Dale Miller, 32, of 213 N. Nelson, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Carmichael - Whatley Colonial Chapel, with the Rev. Jim Neal, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will be in Memory Gardens Cemetery by Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors.

Mr. Miller was pronounced dead at 10:15 a.m. Tuesday in Coronado Community Hospital after he was electrocuted in an accident just off Price Road. According to his employer, Ab Conway of Con Chemical Company, Miller was spraying weeds near a bank of electrical transformers when he received a fatal shock.

Mr. Miller was born February 8, 1951 in Pampa and was a life-long resident. He was a Baptist. He married Debbie Huddleston February 12, 1972 in Pampa.

Miller worked as an oilfield driller for seven years before working at Con Chemical Company.

Survivors include his wife; one daughter, Tammy Miller of the home; his mother, Helen Miller of Pampa; one brother, Donnie Miller of Pampa; and one sister, Dorothy Hall of Rogers, Arkansas.

ROY NICHOLS
BORGER - Services for Mr. Roy Nichols, 86, of Borger will be held 2 p.m. Thursday at the Johnson Park Church of Christ in Borger, with Joe Winnett and Garry Boytz, Church of Christ ministers, officiating.

Burial will be at Westlawn Memorial Park in Borger with Ed Brown and Son's Funeral Directors.

Nichols died 7:30 a.m. Tuesday in Claude, Texas.

He was born in Bosque County, Texas, and was a resident of Borger for 45 years. Nichols was owner of Nichols Electroux Sales and Services in Borger and Pampa and a member of Johnson Park Church of Christ, The American Legion No. 671 and the V. W. F. Post 1789.

Survivors include his wife Mary; two sons, Randol and Roy H. Miller of Albuquerque, New Mexico; four brothers, Marshall of Perry, Texas; Seburn of Walnut Springs; Archie of Weslaco; and Willie of Canton; one sister, Dollie Sue Gissell, of Forth Worth, Texas; and six grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

CARRIE ELIZABETH NOEL
Carrie Elizabeth Noel, 73, of Coolidge, Ariz., died at 5 p.m. at Good Samaritan Hospital in Phoenix, Ariz.

Services are pending with Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors.

Mrs. Noel was born December 23, 1909 in Gray County, she lived in Pampa 45 years before moving to Childress in 1954 and to Coolidge in 1961.

She was a member of the Rebecca Lodge Baptist Church.

Survivors include one daughter, Norma Johnson, Coolidge; two sisters, Isa Saltzman of Pampa and Beulah Reed of Oregon; and two grandchildren.

Liberalists unhappy with reforms

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
WASHINGTON (AP) - Advocates for the disabled say the Reagan administration's liberalization of Social Security's disability reviews fall far short of the reforms needed, and key lawmakers say they will press ahead for more sweeping changes.

"We're disappointed. The changes do not address the problem," Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., told reporters Tuesday after Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler unveiled plans to exempt 135,000 people with "functional psychotic disorders" and 200,000 other disabled people from the reviews.

Levin and Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, the chairman of a Senate Governmental Affairs oversight subcommittee, are holding a hearing today to explore whether the Reagan administration has pressured administrative law judges to uphold disability cutoffs.

Jane Yohalem, lawyer for the Mental Health Law Project, said, "Given the extent of the problems with the system, it really was not a very significant concession by the administration."

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee with jurisdiction over Social Security, criticized the administration for jumping in while Pickle's panel was trying to draft a comprehensive disability reform bill.

Eileen Sweeney, a lawyer with the National Senior Citizens Law Center, said, "I don't think it really offers anything for disabled people."

Mrs. Heckler said President Reagan personally approved the plans to liberalize the review process which has led to the cutoff of 355,000 disability beneficiaries since March 1981.

Spring showers are mixed blessing

By BOB FICK
WASHINGTON (AP) - Continued cool, wet weather so far this month has bolstered vital soil moisture of most of the nation's fertile farmland, but it's interfering with field work over most of the East and retarding crop development outside the Pacific Northwest.

Farmers had as few as three suitable days for fieldwork as showers and thunderstorms covered most of the nation last week, according to the government's weekly crop update issued by the Agriculture and Commerce Departments.

"Showers again delayed completion of spring planting across most of the eastern half of the nation," the report said. "Cooler temperatures further delayed crop development in all areas except eastern Washington and Northern Idaho."

The moist weather and moderate temperatures, however, have kept pastures and ranges in good shape so that the nation's cattle herds were rated in fair to good condition last week.

This latest bulletin covers crop conditions on June 1, the same day field surveys are made for USDA's new harvest estimate that will be issued Friday. Winter wheat will be the key crop in that report.

Oil tax...

Pampa oilman said Reagan has tried, but presently is battling Congress over income tax cuts.

Vic Raymond, president and general manager of Pampa's Ingersoll - Rand Plant, said any good news for the oil industry in general is good news for Ingersoll. He said a favorable ruling Monday could have stimulated oil and gas exploration - good news for a plant that manufactures mobile oil rigs and which has laid off about half its workforce since the oil slowdown.

"Nobody really thought anything would come of it," he said about the tax ruling.

Raymond agrees the tax should be called an excise tax, as it's levied "against all oil whether the producer made any money or not."

Wilbur Hapeman, manager of Pampa's J.S. Fuel Company, said he was "somewhat skeptical" going into the ruling Monday.

"I didn't expect a whole lot of favors from the government, but I was hoping they would rule it unconstitutional," he said.

Ruling aside, Hapeman said he thinks local oilmen have sat through the worst of the oil slump and are ready to get back in gear.

"Maybe they will decide to go ahead and pick up some," he said.

The owner of another Pampa oil firm, who asked not to be identified, said even if the present law were declared unconstitutional, "Congress would have quickly passed another law, with so many billions involved."

Oil producer Bob Tripplehorn said the tax "affects all of us. It's not good. I don't know a damn thing you can do about it. Anything that affects (production costs) you're going to get less drilling all the way around."

"The bastards up there in Washington never want to relinquish anything. They spend it up or take it home with them, once they get their hands on money," Tripplehorn said.

Irving Chase, of Chase Oil Field Service and Chase Production Companies, said, "I knew they would rule against it (repeal) - everybody in the oilfield did. I don't think they can afford to. The government's in debt - they almost have to have it. I think it's going to be with us for quite a while, probably from now on," Chase said.

Rugged beauty of the Sierra could mean serious trouble

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
RENO, Nev. (AP) - As mountain ranges go, the Sierra Nevada is a relative youngster - probably under 10 million years old, and tens of millions of years younger than its eastern relation, the Appalachians.

This was the snowiest year in Sierra history, with 796 inches - close to 70 feet - of snow falling at Donner Summit during the winter. The latest survey by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service said there was still 60 percent as much snow on the ground at the end of May as there was at the peak of the winter, according to Jon Lea of the agency's snow survey crew.

That youthfulness is what gives the Sierra its distinctive charm - the craggy granite peaks, the spectacular canyons and the towering waterfalls. It also can make the mountains deadly.

As the Sierra grows older, its rugged features are gradually wearing away. What happened in the Washoe Valley on Memorial Day, when 40 acres of Slide Mountain slid into the valley floor, is part of that aging process.

And this year, a once-in-a-century accumulation of snow is likely to contribute significantly to that process.

Millions of years from now, the Sierra Nevada may be more like the Appalachians, softly rounded and gently tiered. Until then, geologists say, people living in the Sierra can expect periodic reminders that the mountains are constantly changing, sometimes in violent ways.

"What we saw (on Memorial Day) was just one little blip in the history of this mountain range," said John Bell, a geologist with the Nevada Division of Mines and Geology. "That's what's taken place here for millions of years and will probably take place for a few more million until the mountains are eroded and the valleys are more or less filled in."

Robert Clark, director of the National Weather Service's office of hydrology, said that's about triple the average for this time of year. Clark called the snow situation in the West "unbelievable," and singled out Nevada as a state that could be headed for trouble in coming weeks.

There's no consensus on how long the danger will remain this year, but estimates seem to range from two weeks to a month - depending on the weather.

Bob Crittenden of the National Forest Service said that while slides can't be predicted, certain areas can be identified as slide-prone. Slide Mountain is an extreme case, experts agree, but other places also exhibit signs of danger.

"The trouble spots are geologically known from history," Crittenden said. "We can really expect that sometime these things are going to happen on the east side of the Sierra, where you have the deep snowpack and steep face and narrow canyons."

The Forest Service is warning hikers and others to use caution in the Sierra in the coming weeks, and is surveying the range for more signs of trouble.

The USGS is taking advantage of the Washoe Valley slide to study the phenomenon, in hopes of learning to forecast slides in the future.

Meanwhile, Crittenden said, "We're going to watch it (the Sierra Nevada) day by day. And people in the vicinity (of the mountains) should watch it hour by hour."

Slide Mountain, as the name suggests, is a particularly unstable peak, and geologists can count at least nine times in the past 100,000 years that it let loose with rock or debris slides. The Memorial Day slide, which killed one person and destroyed four homes, was the tenth.

It "was a relatively small event on a geologic scale, but fairly significant in terms of what has taken place in historic times around here," Bell said.

What happened at Slide Mountain is in dispute. Some experts say infrared heating of the earth on the mountain caused snow to melt from underneath and give way, triggering the landslide. Others say the land itself gave way first.

But all agree on the two necessary ingredients for the slide - water, which acts as a lubricant, and gravity, which sets things in motion.

"If you take steep slopes and saturate them like they were saturated this year, they're going to start moving," Bell said.

Or, as Terry Katzer, a hydrologist with the U.S. Geologic Survey, put it, "Gravity overcame the friction coefficient and it just let go."

Katzer, like other experts, said the potential for similar mudslides in the Sierra this year "remains rather high."

"I'm really amazed that there haven't been more slides, because everything is just super saturated," he said.

EPA spokesman says

Plant clean-up fell through the cracks

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — The clean-up of a plant contaminated with lead was held up for two years by a staff reorganization at the Environmental Protection Agency's regional office in Dallas, an official says.

Port Arthur officials said Monday they learned that EPA tests two years ago showed lead concentrations of 32,600 parts per million in a three-block-long drainage ditch that leads from the Port Drum Co. to a drainage network that empties into the Sabine-Neches Waterway.

In 1981 the EPA ordered Port Drum to draw up a plan to do more testing at the site and then required more samples to be taken in March 1982.

"At the time we did the inspection we were in the process of getting RCRA (Resource Conservation and Recovery Act) firmly on the ground. In addition, the state agency was going through internal reorganization. There were changes in responsibilities," said Roger Meacham, a spokesman for the Dallas office.

When city health officials began last month to investigate complaints from residents living in the area, the EPA said it had no information about the firm.

Port Arthur Chief Sanitarian Theodore Jefferson said Port Drum officials considered the case closed when the EPA didn't send orders to clean up the lead-contaminated ditch.

Meacham said the clean-up, outlined by the agency in October 1981, "frankly fell through the cracks." Information on the discovery was released only last week.

"Our top people will begin working on this immediately," Meacham told the Port Arthur News.

Meacham said high concentrations of lead can cause mental disorders such as increased nervousness, tremors and rashes. Prolonged exposure can lead to mental breakdown, he said.

"Still I don't want to speculate about the danger until we have a complete report from them," he said.

PCBs, known carcinogens, were also found in levels that "concerned the EPA" at the site, records said. Meacham said the EPA is currently trying to determine legal levels of that substance.

Residents of the neighborhood near the west Port Arthur plant and Port Drum employees were taking blood tests and urine tests administered by the city to determine if they have been contaminated by lead or other pollutants, Jefferson said. Test results won't be available for at least a week, he said.

The lead came from the residue of paint that had been used to recondition drums at the company, city Sanitarian Marion Foster said. Most soil contains about 30 parts per million of lead and anything more than 200 parts per million is considered hazardous, she said.

Jefferson said the firm has been given until June 24 to draw up plans to correct 15 health violations found at the plant.

"So far, they seem to be doing everything we have asked them to," he said.

Jefferson said the city learned of the tests through the Texas Department of Water Resources.

City and state officials took air, water and soil samples at the site last month, but Jefferson said the results were not expected until next week.

Endangered sea turtles released into Gulf

PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Scientists hoping to give the Kemp's ridley sea turtle a new lease on life released more than 1,200 of the year-old endangered reptiles into the Gulf of Mexico.

The turtles, almost wiped out by hunters and fishermen, only nest at one location on the Mexican coast. Scientists released the reptiles Tuesday from the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Baker at five locations in the Gulf several miles off Padre and Mustang islands.

It is hoped the turtles have been "imprinted" with their new habitat and will return to the protected sands of the Padre Island National Seashore to nest, said Clark T. Fontaine, the federal research biologist who heads the government's joint raise-and-release program with Mexico.

The turtles weigh from 8 to 13 pounds each, Fontaine said.

It will be two to five years before scientists know if their program has succeeded. In previous dumpings, about 8,000 young turtles have been released into the Gulf.

In the spring, after the female turtles lay their eggs along the beaches at Rancho Nuevo, Mexico, biologists place a number of eggs in plastic containers filled with sand from Padre Island.

The containers with the eggs are taken to the Padre Island National Seashore where the eggs are allowed to hatch. After hatching, the baby turtles are released in the surf and allowed to swim 20 to 30 feet from shore. They are retrieved with hand nets and shipped to the federal hatchery in Galveston, where they live for 10 to 11 months before being released.

"Hatching in the sand from Padre Island and swimming in the Gulf off Padre Island is what, we hope, will imprint the Padre Island location in their instinct mechanism so they will return to this area to nest," Fontaine said.

"We are not sure how far they roam, how long they live or at what age the female mates and bears eggs," said Ted Williams, another research biologist working on the program.

The young turtles were trucked Tuesday from Galveston to the Coast Guard station at Port Aransas, where they were loaded onto the Point Baker for the ride to their new home.

"We don't know much about the scientific part of this, but if we can have anything to do with saving this turtle, it's sure worthwhile," said the Point Baker's skipper, Master Chief Boatswain's Mate Frank Tupa. "And it's a nice break from law enforcement patrols and search and rescue missions."

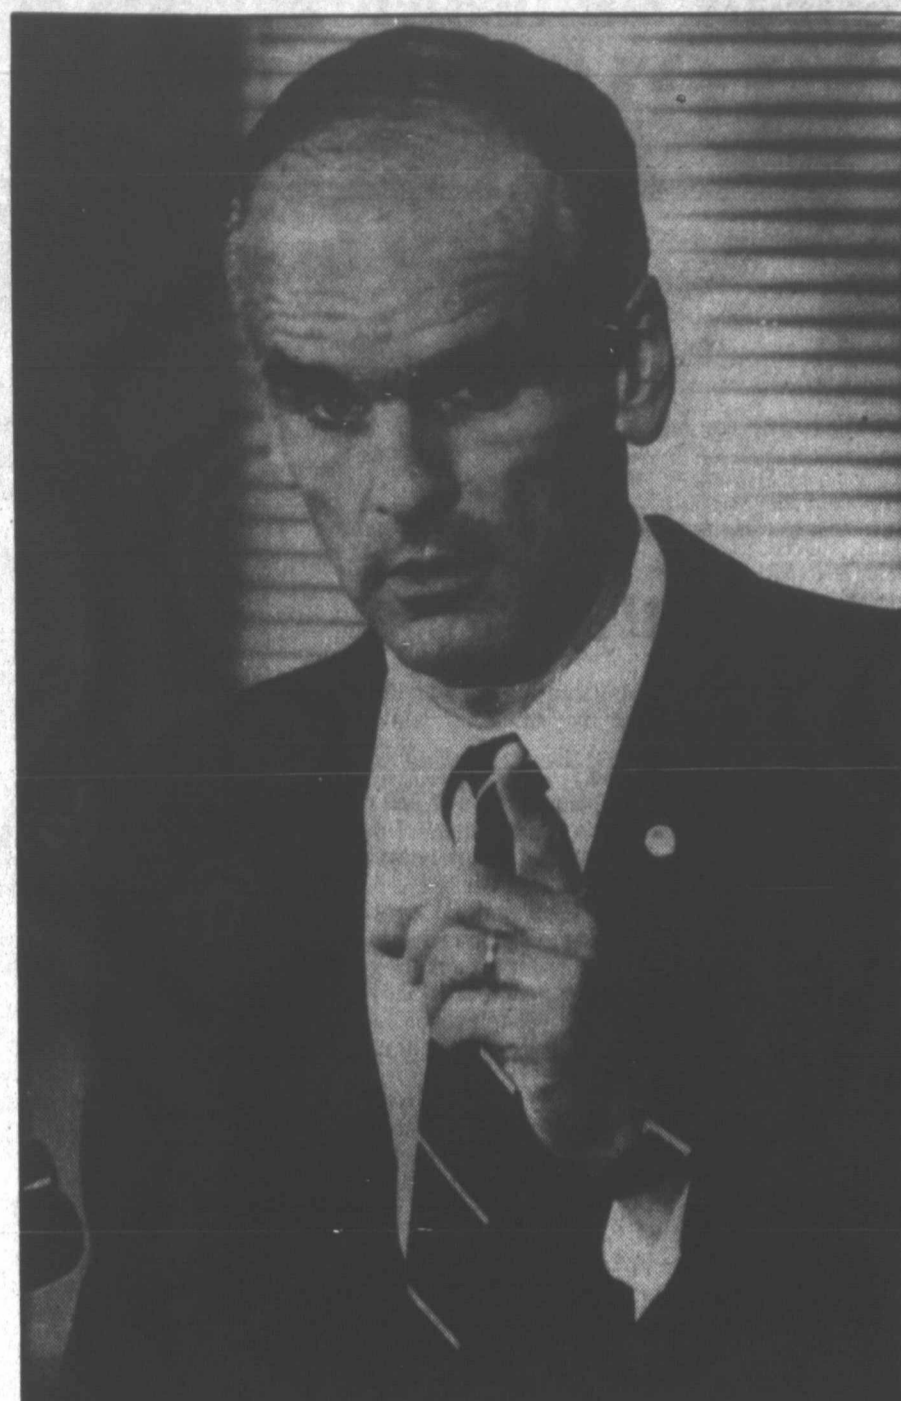

Tupa and his crew used navigation aids to locate and record the ship's exact position as each batch of turtles was released.

Williams said scientists don't know how many of the young turtles are lost to natural predators.

"They're too big now for red fish to eat, but just the right size for sharks," Williams said. "We have no way of knowing how many we might lose, but I guess it's a high percentage."

"If fishermen find a live turtle with a tag on it we are asking them to return the turtle to the water and leave the tag on," Williams said. "If the turtle is dead, we would like the fisherman to notify the nearest Texas Parks and Wildlife warden."

Released turtles with tags on their fins have been found as far away as France and Morocco, Williams said.

Seven indicted in vote fraud

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury investigation allegations of vote fraud in the 1982 Democratic primary has accused seven people of conspiring to buy votes by promising county welfare grocery vouchers to low-income families.

Those indicted Tuesday include a Duval County commissioner, a school board member and the wife of the Duval County judge.

The eight-count indictment, which brought to 30 the number of Duval County citizens charged in connection with last year's elections, accused the seven of involvement in one or more incidents of vote buying.

Indicted Tuesday were: Fidencio Saenz, Duval County commissioner; Domitilla Garza, a Benavides school board member; Olga Uresti, wife of Duval County Judge Gilberto Uresti; Rebecca Garcia, wife of Duval County Clerk Oscar Garcia; Norma Solis, a campaign worker for Uresti; Elvira Garza, another Uresti campaign worker; and Genevieve Garcia, a caseworker for the Duval County welfare office.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe said the indictment charges that the six women and Saenz conspired to buy votes by promising county welfare grocery vouchers to low-income families.

The charges are comparable to those the government successfully prosecuted in January against three other Duval County women.

Meanwhile, testimony was scheduled to begin in Laredo today in the trial of another trio of Duval County women indicted earlier on federal vote fraud charges.

The three, Aurora Canales, Elia Garcia and Aria Carrillo, are charged with offering welfare benefits in exchange for votes for Uresti.

Mrs. Canales is the wife of San Diego Mayor Ruperto Canales. Mrs. Garcia heads the Senior Citizens Center in San Diego, and Ms. Carrillo is a Duval County assistant welfare director.

If convicted, the three women faced up to five years in prison and fines of up to $10,000.

The offenses are alleged to have occurred during last year's Democratic Primary race for Duval County judge between Frank Garcia and Uresti.

Board staff recommends statewide decrease

AUSTIN (AP) — If the State Board of Insurance takes the recommendation of its staff, holders of property insurance policies in Texas will save $42 million the next year.

The board holds its annual public hearing today on property insurance rates with its staff recommending a 3.8 percent average reduction in all classes statewide.

The insurance industry is expected to ask for increased rates.

The board will announce its decision on rates about the first week in July. The new rates will be effective with policies written Oct. 1 or afterwards.

The staff recommendations for this year include statewide average rate reductions of 5.9 percent in homeowners insurance; 7.1 percent in farm and ranch owners insurance; 16.2 percent in fire coverage for businesses; and 5.5 percent in extended coverage — a separate policy that pays for damage not caused by fire.

The staff also recommended statewide average increases of 10.2 percent for tenant homeowners insurance and 14.4 percent for fire coverage alone on dwellings.

Gaylon Daniel, the board's staff actuary, estimated a 3.8 percent cut in all classes of property insurance statewide would mean a $42 million savings for policy holders. "I guess losses just haven't been happening as much as we had expected," Daniel said. "There have been no hurricanes since 1971."

He said there is speculation the tenant homeowner losses could have been caused by numerous apartment thefts and burglaries.

Washington decision helps Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says a decision by the U.S. Department of Labor will help Texas decide if and when a special session is needed to take care of the Texas Employment Commission issue.

In the final days of the Legislature, which closed May 30, a bill to continue operations of the TEC failed because of House-Senate differences.

Floyd Edwards, employment and training administrator of the Labor Department's Dallas office, immediately said there would be no unemployment compensation paid and no job placement in Texas after Sept. 30 without passage of the bill.

On Tuesday, Albert Angrisani, assistant secretary of the Labor Employment and Training Administration in Washington, sent White a telegram.

"I would like to emphasize that the Department of Labor has not taken a position on extending the TEC, nor has it analyzed possible consequences of the state Legislature's authorization for the TEC expire," the telegram said.

"Any statements or intervention by the Dallas regional office have been both premature and inappropriate. I regret that the regional administrator has interpreted state actions and consequences on his own initiative."

The Washington official invited White to give them the facts of the TEC matter "and we will respond promptly."

White told reporters that Angrisani's telegram "shows the Department of Labor is willing to work with us in trying to adjust their time tables to meet the time tables we are faced with and gives us better flexibility in handling this problem."

White said the telegram definitely would affect the calling of any special session at which the TEC matter might be considered.

So long, Jack

They called him the "Manassa Mauler" and for many years was the yardstick by which all heavyweight fighters were judged.

Now Jack Dempsey is dead.

But Jack Dempsey, who lived to a ripe 87, left more to boxing, and to America, than the memory of a pair of iron fists and an aggressive ring quality that never quit. He was a gentleman.

It is ironic, perhaps, in these days of boxing when the Hollywood hype has each muscled puncher spewing pre-fight hatred at the other in order to pack the gate and to insure that umpteen million people will be watching what is obviously a grudge match on television.

Dempsey never had an unkind word to say about any of his opponents, win or lose.

In fact, when Gene Tunney died a few years ago, Dempsey said part of his life had gone. And close friends said Dempsey began to go downhill in health from that point.

And Tunney was the man to finally took the Manassa Mauler's title.

There aren't that many sports fans left who actually saw what Dempsey could do in a ring, but there are a lot more of us who will remember that the greatest fighter in the world during that time in history was also was of the friendliest and kindest men you could meet.

So long, Jack.

Legacy

Because a man gives wealth to the poor in no way gives him the right to enter a bank and hold up the cashier to get this money to give to the poor. Just so, New Dealers have no right to use force to take from some in order to use this wealth to do what New Dealers believe should be done.

These people who would tax some to give to others are usually doing this for the purpose of relieving themselves of their own incapacities or indolence. It is an easy way of relieving themselves of their obligations to the unfortunate. It makes them feel that they are benevolent, while in reality they are trying to be the owners, the overlords, or those whom they exploit by taxation.

Shorts

Mayor Dan Roth and Councilman Irv Pickler reassured us that $1,000 campaign contributions from Pyrotechnics did not influence their votes to give the Anaheim-based wholesale firm a three-day jump on retail firms selling fireworks in Santa Ana. Roth and Pickler each said their "souls could not be bought for $1,000." We understand. Inflation has been tough on us all.

Because state spending is running a few hundred million above estimates, state finance officials say a backup sales-tax increase may be triggered later this year. It's akin to the Reagan-backed income tax surcharge which would automatically take effect in 1985 if the federal deficit is running too high. Politicians like these kinds of "automatic taxes," because when they kick in, they can shrug their shoulders and hope the voters will forget who set the trigger. We just wonder why bloated government spending never triggers automatic spending cuts, instead of automatic tax increases?

Did you notice the quote from the president of the Wisconsin-based Freedom from Religion Foundation who was "overjoyed" that the Crystal Cathedral will start paying a "fair share" of taxes? It's difficult enough to fathom how many decent people could be overjoyed when somebody - anybody - is forced to pay taxes, but there's another angle. The Freedom from religion Foundation is - surprise, surprise - a tax-exempt organization. Wonder if we could get tax exemption if we reorganized as the Freedom from Hypocrisy Foundation?

Little Austria seems to be happy once again

By DON GRAFF

Austrians elected a new government the other day, but we aren't going to be discussing here the significance of the less than earthshaking results or Bruno Kreisky's decision to pack it in as chancellor.

Rather, our subject is the country itself, Felix Austria as it was known in some of its more glorious days.

Those were a while back. The Austrian experience has not been particularly happy in modern times which, in the first great war, saw the collapse of an empire. It continued to be downhill for some time thereafter.

The German-speaking remnant that became independent Austria wasn't all that sure it wanted to remain so. For many of its reluctant citizens, the hope of the future lay in a union with Germany that the peace treaties prohibited.

For two decades Austria was less a country than a continental crisis. Even the occasional bright spots had their dark sides. Vienna, under a Socialist government functioning almost autonomously of the more conservative national authorities, gained a reputation as the most advanced and innovative city in Europe with its pioneering programs in public health and housing.

The huge blocks of flats erected for workers resembled fortresses - and they were used as such in the civil strife of the early '30s. Private armies of the political left and right fought it out. "Red Vienna" was subdued and a semi-fascist regime clamped on Austria.

The real thing was only a few years away. Austria was not an entirely unwilling victim of Hitler's Anschluss. But the cost was high. It shared Germany's defeat and partitioning.

At that point, it appeared Austria's lot after the second great war might make the previous post-war period look like the good ole days. But in 1955 things suddenly looked up. In a rare display of East-West agreement, the occupying powers withdrew in return for an Austrian pledge of neutrality.

That was an insignificant price for what it bought - the first and only instance of Soviet relinquishment of conquered territory, and it would never have happened had Moscow had the slightest hint of what would happen in next-door Hungary a year later.

Austria treated its new freedom gingerly, adopting such a low posture internationally that hardly anyone but tourists knew it was around. I know. I was there, for several warmly remembered years in the '60s.

As insurance against repetition of between-wars ideological strife, government was by "grand coalition" between Socialists and the conservative People's Party. That ended in 1967 when the latter formed a one-party government. That changed four years later when elections gave the Socialists a parliamentary majority, beginning the Kreisky era.

On second thought, let's do talk about Kreisky - "Emperor" Bruno, as he came to be known. Although the 90-year-old widow of the last real emperor of the Dual Monarchy has put it another way. She thinks Kreisky, offspring of a Jewish family in a society that has gained some note for its anti-Semitism, would have made a good chancellor for her husband. Which shows you how far even Hapsburgs have come since the not-so-old days.

Under Kreisky, Austria abandoned its low profile. While scrupulously observing the letter of its neutrality, it firmly identified itself with the West.

But in a highly independent fashion, it has cultivated contacts with Arab radicals, including PLO, and Kreisky has been among the most outspoken critics of Menechem Begin's Israel.

Vienna is the headquarters city of OPEC. In the Kreisky era, and in no small part because of the assertive performance of the outgoing chancellor, Austrians have acquired something they never really had before. A sense of national identity. More, a deep appreciation of their nationhood. There is not much sentiment these days for submersion in a greater Germany.

Austria does have its problems. It has had to cope with economic decline along with the rest of the industrial democracies. But less so than most. Unemployment is low and so is inflation.

And the elections have just demonstrated that democracy is thriving.

Looking back on the long and eventful history of Austria, these may not be the very best of times. But they are very far from the worst.

He was once the one who wore plaid to wedding

By RUSTY BROWN

The graduation of our college student this month was a long time coming. His journey into the realm of higher education began in August 1976.

I can still remember his excitement at the preparation for Departure Day.

I told him to put what he planned to take in the spare room. By the end of the week, the rug had disappeared under the guitar, the banjo, stereo, records, backpack, sleeping bag, hiking boots and, oh yes, a modest number of jeans, shirts and jockey shorts.

I remember thinking how different that was from "my day," when the chief concerns were cashmere sweaters and what length a skirt should be.

Bravo to the younger generation, I had mused, for discarding such shallow values.

On second thought, I realized their rejection of expensive clothes had been replaced by another set of expensive tastes: clock-radios, digital watches, $250 guitars, calculators and super-sophisticated sound systems with tape decks, speakers and on and on.

The morning of our departure arrived and the last item attached to the car was the 10-speed bike, yet another costly fixture of the new era.

On the highway south, we saw other cars apparently also college-bound because they were packed, as ours, with bikes out back, clothes and guitars showing through the windows.

Now and then, collegiate hitchhikers turned up on the berm, their gear in bundles on the ground. A twosome held up a sign reading, "Help us get to Bible College."

When we turned onto his campus five hours later, we saw that other parents had rented U-Haul trailers to transport kids and gear to college.

"Thank goodness we escaped that," said my relieved husband.

The dormitory room for two seemed familiar, reminiscent of an earlier time: the same student desks, maple beds, bare floors and duplicate closets with towel racks on doors.

But now there was a phone in the room. In my dorm the phone was down the hall and you had to wait in line to use it.

We were soon to learn that it was very convenient to lie on the bed and phone home "collect." The first call came a day later. He asked that the bike-lock key be mailed post haste and added, "I need some more money for books."

That was how it began seven years ago.

In the interim was a transfer to another school. The bike was stolen and the banjo exchanged for a saxophone.

Girlfriends came, went and came again.

He became a vegetarian, so visits home were preceded by laying in stores of lentils, barley and cheese. He cooked stir-fry vegetables and told us how to grow bean sprouts under the kitchen sink.

There was his water-conservation period during which he wouldn't flush the john but once a day. Later on, he would discuss the esoteric zero-sum economics of Lester Thurow.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, June 8, the 159th day of 1983. There are 206 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 632, the prophet Mohammed died.

On this date:

In 1905, President Theodore Roosevelt offered to act as a mediator in the Russo-Japanese War.

In 1965, U.S. troops in Vietnam were authorized to engage in offensive operations.

In 1967, Israeli torpedo boats and planes accidentally attacked the U.S. communications ship "Liberty," resulting in the deaths of 34 American seamen.

And in 1968, James Earl Ray, the man indicted for the assassination of Martin Luther King, was arrested in London.

Boy writes inspiring book

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Matthew Lancaster, a 10-year-old boy who died of cancer recently, left some advice for other cancer patients — "Hang Tough."

The book "Hang Tough" is being published this month by the Hospice of Stark County.

In trying to reach other cancer patients, Matt wrote, "I know that you will be able to handle cancer. Because if I can you can. It's OK to be scared. You have to have a positive attitude. Say to yourself you can do anything. Never say you can't. You just have to hang in there. I think you can do it. I wrote this book to help people with cancer. Your not alone."

"And remember. Hang tough, positiv aditud all the time. And pray to God."

"Matt had such a nice smile, but the thing I'll always remember is his courage," said Sue Elynn Haas, hospice social service director.

In November 1981, Matthew, of Jackson Township in Stark County, was diagnosed as having Ewing's sarcoma, a malignant form of cancer. It did not respond to surgery, radiation or chemical treatment.

The cancer spread. He lapsed into a coma on March 16 and died at home with his parents and brother.

"Sometimes, Matt would say to me: 'Mom, I can't die. I'm only 10 years old.' That's when we'd talk about the important thing not being how long you live, but how many lives you touch," said his mother, Martha Lancaster, in a recent interview.

"In the last four months of his life, he seemed to gain a new maturity and understanding of what was important," said his father, Jon. "He said things like, 'Only your physical body dies. Dad. Your spirit will be around until the year 3,000.'"

In his book, Matt wrote, "I now I have had a lot of scary thoughts. You probale do to. I think before I go to the doctor, will he put me in the hospital? Will he give me a shot? Will he hurt me? Will he tell me I'm not going to walk? When you get thoughts like that, put them out of your mind, think about something else. Anything else. And be happy."

Leaving government can improve a person's image

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — There are times in the affairs of statesmen when replacement or resignation can do wonders for the image.

That seems to be happening now with Thomas O. Enders, out as assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

And it certainly was the case for William D. Ruckelshaus, who quit 10 years ago as deputy attorney general rather than obey President Richard M. Nixon's order to fire the Watergate special prosecutor. The reputation he earned with that resignation on principle is one of the reasons he was summoned back to Washington to take over the tarnished, troubled Environmental Protection Agency.

It was a return engagement; he ran the place from 1970 to 1973 before moving to the Justice Department.

In the Enders situation, a diplomat who was suspect among liberals and critics of President Reagan's Central America policy now is being cast as an advocate of negotiation and pragmatism who paid for those views with his job.

Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz insist that was not the case, but the view persists, fueled by the comments of officials who insist on anonymity.

Perhaps the most celebrated of those anonymous quotes came from an official who told The Washington Post that Central America policies can't be handled with tea and crumpets on the diplomatic circuit.

Until he was replaced in what Shultz insists was a routine rotation, nobody was suggesting that Enders represented a tea and crumpets approach to leftist insurgencies in Central America.

Indeed, to critics of administration policy, Enders seemed a hard-liner, because they didn't like the policy and also because they never forgot his background in Southeast Asia.

He served as deputy chief of mission in Cambodia from 1970 until 1974 and, according to a Senate Foreign Relations Committee report, made the final decisions on targets for American bombers. The 1973 committee report — the panel was controlled by Democrats then — also said Enders tried to conceal the embassy role in target selections.

When the president chose Enders for the Latin America post, critics saw it as a signal that the administration was looking for military answers in Central America.

But since his replacement by Langhorne A. Motley, who had been ambassador to Brazil, the gossip in Washington has been that Enders ran afoul of White House advisers over his emphasis on negotiated solutions.

That may be so, but Enders certainly did not play down the military side of the equation. In a speech just after his change in assignments, Enders said there could be no political solution so long as leftist guerrillas in El Salvador believe they can win through force of arms.

He said there could be no peace without negotiations, but no serious negotiations without military, political and economic measures as well.

Cattlemen call for special brucellosis session

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas cattlemen, who urged Gov. Mark White to call lawmakers back to Austin to head off a livestock quarantine, went home with no commitments from the governor.

"The deadline for us was the day before yesterday, and the governor is aware of that," San Antonio cattle breeder Red McCombs said after a Tuesday private meeting with White.

Earlier in the day, more than 800 cattlemen jammed a hotel meeting room and shouted approval of a resolution calling for a special legislative session to deal with the brucellosis problem. Federal officials ordered a June 1 quarantine of Texas cattle after lawmakers failed to approve a brucellosis bill that would have brought the state into compliance with U.S. Department of Agriculture rules.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin of Austin later issued a temporary order that postponed the quarantine indefinitely.

Brucellosis is a livestock disease that causes weight loss and miscarriages in cattle, but poses no health danger to consumers of meat or pasteurized dairy products.

At the hotel meeting, White would go no further than a promise to make brucellosis a topic "if and when" he calls a special session.

The governor drew a standing ovation before his brief speech, but the crowd was less enthusiastic after the talk.

He said he was talking with state Senate and House leaders, "making certain that if and when such time occurs that we will have a special session, that there will be prompt action taken in order to solve this problem."

That comment drew applause, but the discontent showed a bit later when White said, "I have no time established in my mind yet as to when to call a special session, but I am extremely concerned with the problem. I am going to continue to monitor it, not only closely, but on a daily basis."

"I will be working this weekend. If you would give me some time," he said.

One cattleman yelled, "There is no more time."

Before the governor spoke, cattlemen paraded to the microphone to call for quick legislative action.

"We've got to comply with the federal regulations. It's just a matter of when and how. It's coming," said Buddy Jeffers, owner of the Amarillo livestock auction.

Before the private meeting, White told reporters "I cannot in a public forum tell them all the things we are doing. But I think you'll find we are making progress and we'll have good news for them."

After the private meeting, McCombs said White is "sensitive to the time limits of the problem."

"I feel like there will be (a special session) and will be included, but there are no commitments there are no times and no dates," he said.

White apparently is negotiating with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, according to McCombs.

"That's perfectly alright with us. What we want to do is get rid of the problem. If he can do it with the legislative process, that's fine with us," he said.

"If the USDA were to decide to lift their order of quarantine, if the USDA were to contact the states and say in their judgment Texas is essentially in compliance, our problems would be over."

But John Atwell of the USDA, who attended the private meeting, said he knew of no method short of a special session that could satisfy the federal officials.

Mattox says government serious about quarantine threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has sought to dispel any doubts about the federal government's intent to slap a quarantine on Texas Cattle. He says federal officials are "dead serious" about the threat.

Mattox met for an hour on Tuesday with three top federal agriculture officials on the plan to impose the quarantine on Texas breeding cattle unless the state adopts an acceptable program to control brucellosis, a disease that attacks the reproductive organs and causes miscarriages.

Following the meeting, Mattox told reporters that "it was pretty obvious to me that they are dead serious on getting Texas into a position where we can have a complete brucellosis control program."

Experts have estimated that the quarantine could cost the Texas livestock industry up to $130 million a year in lost income.

The Department of Agriculture announced late last month that it intended to institute the quarantine on June 1 because the state did not have an acceptable brucellosis control program.

The quarantine, which the department attempted to impose through an emergency rule making procedure, would slap severe restrictions on out-of-state shipment of breeding cattle.

A federal judge in Austin issued an order temporarily blocking the quarantine, and a hearing has been scheduled for June 16 on whether to extend that order through a preliminary injunction.

Mattox said that he explored with the agriculture officials the possibility of postponing the hearing until June 27 because "it might give us a little longer to work out the matter."

He also said that by the end of the month, Gov. Mark White might have a better idea of whether, and when, he will call a special session of the Texas Legislature to tackle the brucellosis issue.

Mattox said one purpose of the meeting was "to get us out of the courthouse, if we can."

Even if the state won a preliminary injunction against the quarantine, the federal government could move again to institute it through regular rule-making procedures, Mattox said.

He also said that during the meeting he sought to get the officials to discourage other states from imposing their own quarantines against Texas cattle.

Mattox declined to specify what specific understandings or agreements had been reached during the meeting.

Agriculture officials attending were Bill McMillan, assistant secretary for marketing and inspection services, John Ford, deputy assistant secretary and John Golden, associate general counsel.

The Texas Legislature adjourned its spring session

Dear Abby

Celebrate birthday quietly to avoid family embarrassment

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is a problem I've never seen in your column. I will be 50 years old in December, and my wife wants to give me a big party to celebrate the occasion.

I would rather she didn't, because in September we're giving my parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, and a little quick addition will explain why I don't want a big splash on my 50th birthday.

My wife assures me that people are very broadminded today, and nobody will care if it becomes known that my mother was pregnant with me when she walked down the aisle.

My wife then suggested that I "lose" a year and celebrate my 50th birthday next year in order to spare my parents embarrassment.

What do you think?

PREMATURE IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR PREMATURE: If you're giving your parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in September, I suggest you celebrate your 50th birthday quietly in December.

DEAR ABBY: A reader named Sue asked you about the expression, "Mind your p's and q's." She wanted to know, "What do the 'p' and 'q' stand for?"

You supplied three possible theories, but neglected to mention the explanation one would most expect from an old newspaper hand like you.

An elderly printer once told me the expression goes back to the days when printed pages were set by hand, one letter at a time.

The printer's wooden "cupboard" from which he withdrew each piece of type was called a job case. It was compartmentalized into pigeonholes that kept the a's together, the b's together, etc.

The most popular job case, with an exception or two, arranged the pigeonholes in alphabetical order.

The bay containing the p's was the next-door neighbor of the one containing the q's. So it was easy to get the p's in the wrong bay, and vice versa. Such mistakes led to typographical errors, which were hard to detect because p's and q's are look-alikes.

Thus apprentice printers were constantly admonished, "Mind your p's and q's!"

ROBERT McMORRIS,
COLUMNIST, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD

DEAR MR. McMORRIS: The theory proffered by the elderly printer seems more likely than any of those I submitted in my column.

Coincidentally, my source was the Morris Dictionary of Word and Phrase Origins. Any relation, Mac?

DEAR ABBY: In your reply to "A Raging Fool," you wisely pointed out that children who witness violence at home grow up to believe that it is an acceptable way to deal with their anger and hostility.

That caused me to recall what the late Martin Luther King Jr. wrote in his book, "Why We Can't Wait" (Harper and Brothers, 1946):

"Man was born into barbarism when killing his fellow-man was a normal condition of existence. He became endowed with a conscience. And he has now reached the day when violence toward another human being must become as abhorrent as eating another's flesh."

DEAR ABBY: I work for a business that has been patronizing the same florist for several years. The owner of the florist shop (Mr. G.) was also a friend of my boss. Well, Mr. G. died recently.

My question: Would it have been proper to order flowers for Mr. G.'s funeral from his own florist shop? Or would it have been better taste to order the arrangement from another florist, even though the profit from the flower order would benefit the family of the deceased?

LONG BEACH QUERY

DEAR QUERY: It most certainly would have been "proper" and in good taste to have ordered the flowers for Mr. G.'s funeral from Mr. G.'s florist shop.

DEAR ABBY: This is important. Our newspaper never runs an address where we can write to you if we want a personal reply. Don't you have a private box number? Thank you.

NEEDS SOME INFO FAST

DEAR NEEDS: Yes. Address your letter to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal, unpublished reply, please enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Teriyaki Pork Chops are grilled over medium to low coals and served with mounds of rice and peas plus pineapple orange kabobs.

Grill Teriyaki pork chops

Pork is becoming more and more popular in the American diet. Between 1976 and 1981, U.S. consumption of pork increased by 19 percent. This increase was noted by the Center for Science in the Public Interest in their recent five year study.

Today's pork is leaner than ever and is best prepared over a medium to low heat. When cooked on a barbecue grill, it is best marinated first and basted as it cooks to add flavor and juiciness.

To keep the marinade within arm's reach for basting, make a foil saucepot. This can be made easily from three thicknesses of heavy duty aluminum foil.

Mold three layers of heavy duty aluminum foil around straight-sided bowl or canister to form desired size. Remove bowl and fold edges down to form tight rim. Place on grill and remove using pot holders in both hands.

A foil saucepot can be placed directly on the grid of the grill and will save you time and energy by eliminating messy saucepot cleanup. Keep these guidelines in mind as you prepare Grilled Teriyaki Pork Chops.

GRILLED TERIYAKI PORK CHOPS

- 8 pork chops, 1/2 inch thick
- 1/2 c. soy sauce
- 1-3 c. dry sherry
- 1-3 c. packed brown sugar
- 1/4 c. vinegar
- 2 T. vegetable oil
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 1/2 t. ground ginger

Trim excess fat from pork chops. For marinade, combine remaining ingredients. Pour half of marinade into large glass dish. Place chops in marinade; pour remaining marinade over chops. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate two to three hours or overnight, turning occasionally.

Remove chops from marinade. Heat marinade in saucepot and grill chops over medium to low direct heat eight to 12 minutes or until browned. Turn, brush with reserved marinade and grill eight to 12 minutes until juicy and tender. Makes four servings.

Caffeine - harmful or not?

The question is caffeine—is it harmful or not? That question comes up regularly for all men and women who like a good cup of coffee.

Coffee is one of the world's most widely used drugs, according to a summary prepared by the Institute of Food Technologists. They state that while there are still many questions about its safety, available information seems to indicate that coffee and other high caffeine drinks are probably not harmful—if used in moderation.

The report continues that excessive consumption, however, (meaning the equivalent of about 10 cups of strongly brewed coffee per day), may lead to caffeineism, or coffee nerves, especially if the coffee is consumed in a short period.

The panel did recommend, however, that those in their third trimester of pregnancy should use caffeine-containing food such as coffee, tea, cocoa and cola only in moderation. Some doctors recommend that pregnant women abstain totally from caffeine.

Other drinkers of tea have turned to herbal teas. Although these do not contain caffeine, they do contain ingredients that have not been studied as extensively as caffeine. Many of these are no doubt harmless, but others have been shown to have a variety of toxic effects, even when used in moderate amounts. On balance, there are many more unknowns in herbal teas than in regular teas.

And so, based on this report, enjoy your coffee. Just drink it in moderation, as is the wise choice with all things.

As we see from advertising and food shelves, the food manufacturers are already responding to public concern. They have introduced a number of caffeine-free colas, decaffeinated teas, caffeine-free herbal teas and improved versions of decaffeinated coffees for consumers who want to reduce their consumption of caffeine.

These alternative products are not necessarily more risk-free than their caffeinated counterparts. For instance, there are conflicting data from animal studies on the safety of various solvents used to decaffeinate coffee. Most researchers agree, says the Institute of Food Technologists, that the risks, if any, are low.

The institute continues, "Some tea drinkers have switched to decaffeinated teas in order to avoid caffeine. However... when caffeine is removed from tea, much of the flavor is also removed."

Other drinkers of tea have turned to herbal teas. Although these do not contain caffeine, they do contain ingredients that have not been studied as extensively as caffeine. Many of these are no doubt harmless, but others have been shown to have a variety of toxic effects, even when used in moderate amounts. On balance, there are many more unknowns in herbal teas than in regular teas.

And so, based on this report, enjoy your coffee. Just drink it in moderation, as is the wise choice with all things.

Try these main dish salads

When the temperature soars, it's time for easy, refreshing meals. Cool and colorful main dish salads are ideal. Quick and easy to prepare, attractive entree salads spark the appetite and refresh the palate. Best of all, much of the preparation can be completed well in advance of serving.

With a bit of inspiration and inventiveness, a memorable main event salad can be created in short order. All it takes is an eye to ingredient combinations that are nutritious and varied in color, flavor, texture and shape. When it comes to greens, try iceberg lettuce alternatives such as leaf, romaine, Boston or bibb lettuce.

Spinach, Chinese cabbage and watercress provide a pleasing change of pace, as well. Vegetables and fruit offer the opportunity for easy salad creativity. Fresh, canned or frozen, raw or cooked, they can be chopped, sliced, shredded or cut into any number of creative looks. Always keep compatible flavors in mind, but don't hesitate to experiment with new combinations.

Some surprisingly uncomplicated salads can be made by attractively arranging ingredients on a platter and allowing everyone to create their own meal. California Club Salad is a tasty example that takes just minutes to prepare. A hearty variation of Hollywood's Brown Derby restaurant's famous Cobb Salad, it boasts chicken, hard-cooked eggs and crisp bacon with tomato and avocado atop a bed of shredded lettuce. Serve it with easily mixed French Blue Dressing, a piquant blend of salad dressing, pourable spicy - sweet salad dressing and blue cheese crumbles.

CALIFORNIA CLUB SALAD

- 1 1/2 c. chopped cooked chicken
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 4 crisply cooked bacon slices, crumbled
- 2 tomatoes, cut into wedges

- 1 avocado, peeled, sliced
- 1 1/2 qts. shredded lettuce
- French Blue Dressing, (recipe follows)

Arrange chicken, eggs, bacon and vegetables on lettuce-covered platter. Serve with:

French Blue Dressing

- 1/2 c. salad dressing
- 1/4 c. Catalina dressing
- 1/2 c. crumbled blue cheese

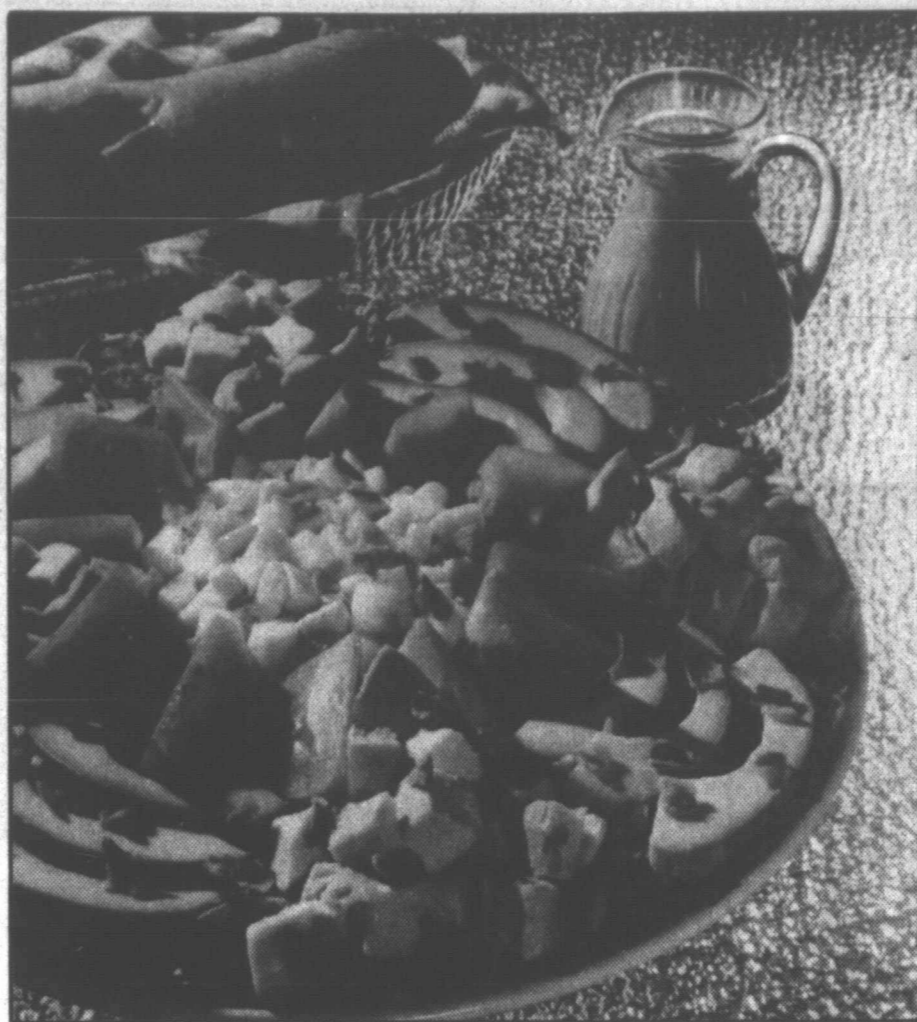

Combine ingredients; mix well. Chill. Four servings.

When a special luncheon or supper is on the agenda, Polynesian Luncheon Salad provides the entree with ease and style. It combines chopped cooked chicken with summer's best strawberries, grapes and pineapple in a lightly gingered dressing with an unexpected dash of pepper. Serve it with panache in pineapple shells, if you wish, or on individual salad plates. With croissants, crusty French rolls or date - nut bread and soft cream cheese, it's an easy and welcome warm weather refresher.

POLYNESIAN LUNCHEON SALAD

- 2 c. chopped cooked chicken
- 2 c. pineapple chunks
- 1 1/2 c. strawberry halves
- 1 c. green grapes
- 1 c. celery slices
- 1/2 c. salad dressing
- 3/4 t. salt
- 1/4 t. ground ginger
- Dash of pepper
- Lettuce
- 1/4 c. toasted walnuts

Combine chicken, fruit, celery, salad dressing and seasonings; mix lightly. Chill. Serve on lettuce-covered platter; top with nuts. Garnish with additional strawberries, if desired. Six to eight servings. VARIATIONS: Serve salad in pineapple shells or on individual salad plates.

Easy-to-prepare California Club Salad is a hearty main dish variation of the famous Cobb Salad, named for the owner of Hollywood's Brown Derby restaurant. Arrange ingredients attractively on a platter and let everyone custom make their own salad creation. Serve with a dressing made by combining salad dressing, spicy - sweet French dressing and blue cheese crumbles.

Local high school students, above, take time out from their preparations for an upcoming tour of Europe to pose for our camera. The students and tour director, Leta Olson, were scheduled to leave today for a month-long visit to Europe. (Staff photo by Jean Tierney)

Group to tour Europe

Area students were to leave early today for a month-long tour of Europe, directed by Leta Olson of Pampa. The high school students attended a bon voyage party Sunday given by Mr. and Mrs. Gabe Crossman, Mr. and Mrs. Coyle Winborn, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jacoby and Mr. and Mrs. Gary Dalton. Members of the tour group from Pampa include Shelly Crossman, Brent Bailey, Derik Dalton, Wade Gardner, Melissa Harpster, Cathy Jacoby, Jami Kirkwood, Dianna Ma, Georgina Milum, Penny Summers and Coyle Winborn.

Going to Europe from McLean are Stefanie Houdyshell, Anna Jean Lamb and Robbin Skinner.

Members from Conadian include Kelly Cooper, Sha'rie McCoy and Trisha Stock. Tracie Walker of Wheeler is also expected to join the tour.

Completing the tour group from Richardson are Dawn Algire, Krista Frambes, Susan Gillis, Joe McCusker, Karis Pelton and William Wadsworth.

Noodle and frankfurter casserole

Frankfurters and egg noodles combine in a casserole for a nourishing, kind-to-the-budget dish.

This is cooked with the added flavoring of condensed tomato soup and topped with bread crumbs.

Serve with milk for the youngsters, salad and watermelon.

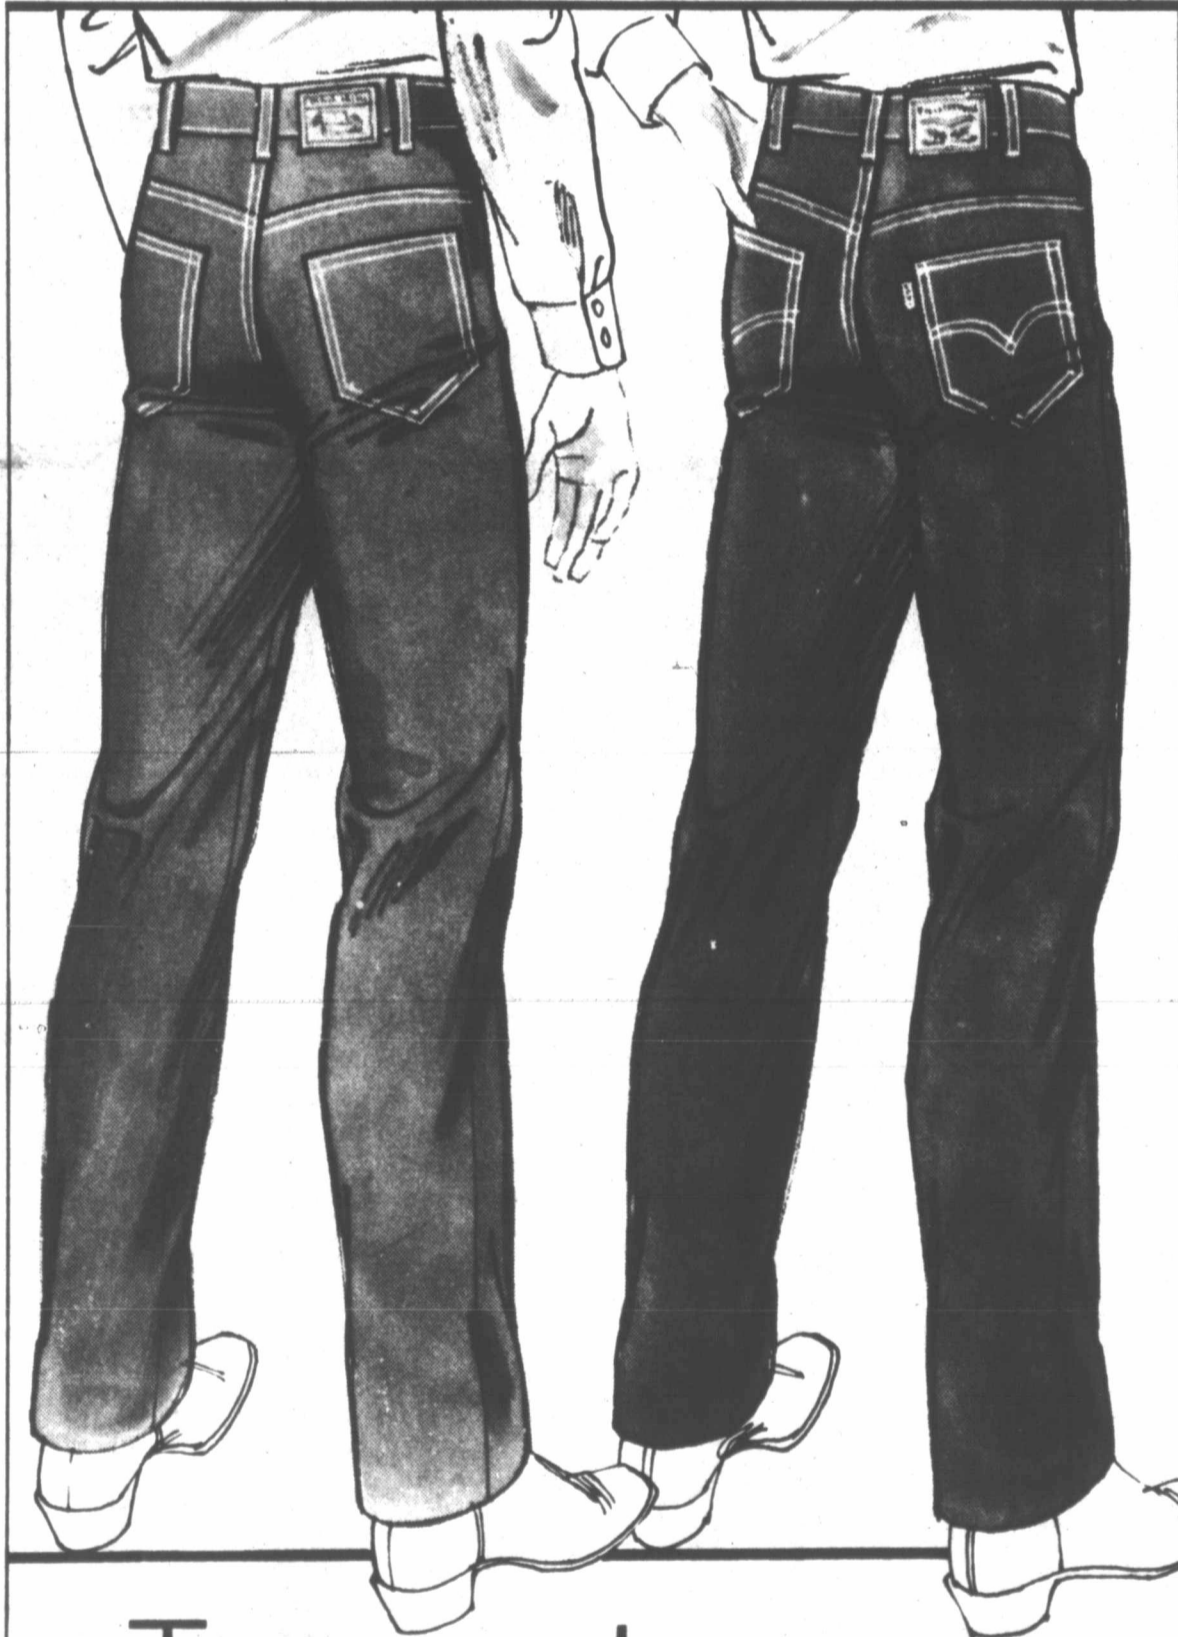

EASY FRANKFURTER NOODLE CASSEROLE

- 6 ounces medium egg noodles (about 3 cups)
- 1 tablespoon salt or lemon juice
- 3 quarts boiling water
- 1 pound frankfurters
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
- 1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed tomato soup
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 cup buttered bread crumbs

Gradually add noodles and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

Meanwhile, brown frankfurters and onion in butter until onion is tender. Combine with noodles, soup, milk and Worcestershire sauce in 1 1/2 quart greased casserole. Top with crumbs. Bake in a 350-degree oven 30 minutes. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 to 6 servings.

Shultz sees no evidence that Soviets are moderating policies

PARIS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, preparing to meet with his NATO colleagues, says he sees no concrete evidence the Soviet Union is moderating its policies despite recent expressions of interest in improved ties with Washington.

Shultz arrived in Paris early today for the annual spring meeting of NATO foreign ministers. En route from Washington, he spoke to reporters about the state of superpower relations.

That issue is expected to dominate his private talks today and the plenary meetings Thursday and Friday.

After an extended period of angry U.S.-Soviet exchanges, President Reagan said last week he foresaw "better" relations with Moscow. In addition, former New York Gov. Averell Harriman, after a meeting with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, said he was authorized to say that Moscow's "most sincere and fervent desire" is to have "normal relations with the United

Shultz said he had conferred with Harriman by telephone and plans additional discussions next week. Despite Andropov's upbeat tone, Shultz seemed skeptical about any short-term improvement in U.S. ties with Moscow.

"I have to say you have to measure an attitude according to the substance," Shultz said. "I can't point to anything substantive at the moment." He stressed that he didn't want to say anything that could "prejudice forward movement" in relations.

Asked about the possibility of a superpower summit, Shultz repeated the administration position that such a meeting would not be desirable unless there was a prospect of a significant easing of tensions.

He indicated a summit could be precipitated by a breakthrough in either of the two sets of nuclear arms control talks the United States is holding with Moscow or in talks on limiting conventional forces in Europe. These meetings, he said, are a "form of preparation" for a summit.

On a related subject, Shultz said there had been some movement recently "on the positive side" in a U.N.-sponsored effort to negotiate the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan. He suggested, however, that predictions of a breakthrough were premature.

Shultz planned a series of bilateral meetings today. He also was to meet with the five-nation NATO group which has been working on achieving independence for the South Africa-administered territory of South-West Africa, commonly known as Namibia.

In the evening he will join the heads of delegation from Britain, France and West Germany for the traditional four-power dinner that precedes NATO foreign ministers' meetings.

Court debates liquid lunch origin

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The court convened solemnly at noon, the lawyers argued the pros and cons of the issue and spread the evidence before the judge. And then, they drank Exhibit A.

Draining the last drop of his martini, Judge Daniel M. Hanlon pronounced his judgment: the delicious idea of mixing gin and vermouth originated in San Francisco.

So ended Tuesday's session of the Court of Historical Review and Appeals, a tongue-in-cheek tribunal trying to ascertain the birthplace of the martini.

While the court was unofficial, the players — and the evidence — were real.

Hanlon, a San Francisco Superior Court judge, said the mock court gives him, prosecuting and defense lawyers and witnesses a chance to loosen up during the lunch hour. Other topics that have been discussed in the court, which convenes a few times a year, include the origin of the hot dog.

San Francisco Supervisor Louise Renne won her case Tuesday, contending "there can be absolutely no doubt whatsoever that the martini originated here in San Francisco."

One story has it that Jerry Thomas, bartender at the Occidental Hotel in San Francisco, mixed the first martini there in 1862. But then New York enters the picture because Thomas published a popular bartender's guide there in 1865 that included a recipe for "Martinez Cocktail."

Then there's the story of a young Frenchman named Julio Richelieu, who claimed to have invented the cocktail in 1870 at his Martinez, Calif., bar.

The carefully researched testimony was based on historic accounts, riddled with jokes and punctuated with discerning sips from martini pitchers perched on the judge's and lawyers' desks.

Harre Demoro, historian and self-styled "student of drinking," argued that Thomas perfected the martini in New York, adding "anything that happened in San Francisco was a laboratory test."

But Ms. Renne scoffed at the idea.

"In a city called the Big Apple, it would be impossible for a sophisticated drink like the martini to be invented," she said.

Mixing a pitcher of martinis and pouring drinks for the judge and opposing attorneys, he said, "This is the drink that would make even the hardened New Yorker realize and appreciate the glories of the San Francisco martini."

The judge weighed the

Khadafy sideshow features pistol-packing women

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Besides a full dose of controversy, Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy brings theatrical flair and a posse of pistol-packing young women to his first appearance at an African summit in eight years.

Khadafy, with three planes and an entourage of 150 — by far the largest of the 51 delegations at the summit of the Organization of African Unity — arrived Sunday night.

Since his surprise arrival, the volatile Khadafy has been the center of journalists' attention, and his heavily armed bodyguards the bane of the Ethiopian hosts of the summit, whose formal opening has been delayed two days by political squabbling.

Whether for security or glamour, Col. Khadafy has a corps of female bodyguards, some wearing bright blue berets and tailored, desert camouflage fatigues. One woman sports a black jumpsuit, a heavy pistol in a sand-colored canvas holster strapped on her left hip.

Always close by Khadafy are hard-faced young men with rifles slung upside down over their shoulders and automatic pistols and knives in their belts.

In a white military uniform or enveloped in a cloak, the bushy-haired leader has made grand entrances and exits at pre-summit meetings.

The summit was supposed to open Monday but by today was nearing collapse because delegates couldn't decide whether to seat the Libya-backed Sahara Republic, which became the 51st OAU member in 1982 on the approval of Secretary-General Edem Kodjo of Togo.

The republic is the political entity of the Polisario guerrillas, who have been trying for eight years to win control of Western Sahara from Morocco. Morocco opposes the existence of the Sahara Republic and has asked other nations to boycott the informal negotiating sessions at which a compromise is being sought.

Two attempts to convene a 19th OAU summit last year in Tripoli, Libya, failed because of north African issues in which Libya has played a leading role.

Khadafy travels around this east African capital in a metallic green BMW. Ahead is a larger, maroon Mercedes limousine like those used by other heads of state here and apparently intended as a decoy. Behind follow two Range-Rovers. Security men are jammed inside; other guards stand on back bumpers.

An Ethiopian official who declined to be identified, said one of the female bodyguards pulled a pistol on an Ethiopian security officer in Africa Hall, where the conference was to be held. Ethiopian police tightened security, apparently to keep the bodyguards out.

Former EPA chief exonerated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Environmental Protection Agency official Rita M. Lavelle was being arraigned on a criminal charge of contempt of Congress today on the heels of a House subcommittee vote exonerating her former boss of the same charge.

Ms. Lavelle, the former head of EPA's toxic waste cleanup program, was scheduled to appear before U.S. District Judge June Green to enter her plea to the contempt charge.

The former assistant administrator was indicted by a federal grand jury May 27 on the misdemeanor charge for defying congressional subpoenas to testify before a House subcommittee investigating the agency.

If convicted, she could face a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Meanwhile, a different subcommittee took the first step Tuesday toward exonerating former EPA chief Anne M. Burford by approving a resolution declaring she no longer was in contempt.

The House Public Works investigations subcommittee said in its resolution that EPA and Mrs. Burford were now in full compliance with its subpoenas for agency documents. The vote sends the resolution to the full committee.

Ms. Lavelle was cited for her failure to appear before the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee to testify on her action in handling the $1.6 billion "superfund" toxic waste cleanup program. The subcommittee has been seeking her testimony since February.

Until she was fired by President Reagan on Feb. 7, Ms. Lavelle was in charge of the program. The subcommittee said it needs her testimony to pursue its investigation into alleged political manipulation and mismanagement of the fund, as well as charges of "sweetheart" deals with polluters.

Ms. Lavelle has insisted that she is willing to testify, but that the subcommittee has made no attempt to schedule her testimony between her job-hunting trips to California.

But the subcommittee said Ms. Lavelle failed to appear on the date she was subpoenaed and has made no effort to schedule an appearance. The House voted unanimously in May to cite her for contempt.

The resolution exonerating Mrs. Burford of contempt also involved handling of the "superfund," but under far different circumstances.

The House voted 259-105 last December to cite Mrs. Burford for invoking executive privilege on with access to the disputed documents, but sought and obtained a promise that Congress would clear Mrs. Burford when the matter was resolved.

Mrs. Burford's lawyer, Douglas Bennett, said the former EPA chief was "very gratified by the action of the subcommittee."

Birds use magic to stop Brewers

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

That old Baltimore black magic continues.

The Orioles, continuing their spell over Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, played longball in turning back the Brewers 6-4 Tuesday night, a victory made complete when a black cat streaked across the field late in the game.

"I didn't mind the black cat," said Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn. "It was the four homers that gave us trouble."

In other American League games, Detroit topped Boston 4-2; Cleveland nipped New York 2-1 in 10 innings; Kansas City trounced Minnesota 9-4; Texas ripped Seattle 10-0; Oakland beat Toronto 5-3; and Chicago outlasted California 12-11 in 10 innings.

Eddie Murray drilled a two-run homer and Gary Roenicke homered on Caldwell's next pitch to give Baltimore a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Benny Ayala, a lifetime .500 hitter against Caldwell, made his first start of the season and belted a solo homer in the fourth. Rich Dauer, mired in a 5-for-53 slump but starting because of a .390 career average against Caldwell, added a solo homer in the seventh off reliever Bob Gibson.

The loss marked the eighth straight time the Orioles have beaten Caldwell, who's 5-5 this season.

Murray's homer was his eighth of the season and his sixth in his last 11 games. It came after Cal Ripken drew a two-out walk. Roenicke's sixth homer followed.

The homers by Ayala and Dauer were their second of the season.

Milwaukee, which took a 1-0 lead in the first on Cecil Cooper's run-scoring single and added a fourth-inning run on Ben Oglivie's single, cut the deficit to 5-4 in the seventh on Ned Yost's two-run homer.

"It looked like a one-sided game," Roenicke said. "And then you look up and they're one run behind."

But Tippy Martinez, in relief of Dennis Martinez, 4-9, pitched 1 2-3 innings for his seventh save.

"I like playing them and I guess I might get keyed up," said Murray, who has hit 17 homers against Milwaukee, the most he's hit against any team. "You know they're going to come out hammering, and it's just a matter of who's going to out-hit who."

Rick Manning, acquired by the Brewers Monday in a trade with Cleveland, went 0-for-4 and had his 17-game hitting streak stopped.

White Sox 12, Angels 11

It was a wild night in California, where Chicago overcame an early deficit and then held off the Angels.

The Angels built a quick 6-1 lead as Daryl Sconiers, Reggie Jackson and Fred Lynn homered in the third inning, tying a team record for home runs in an inning.

But Chicago scored five times in the sixth and then took an 11-7 lead in the eighth by scoring four times, three on Greg Luzinski's double.

Then it was California's turn to come back as it tied the scores with four runs in the bottom of the ninth, three on Ron Jackson's homer.

Chicago won it in the 10th as Tony Bernazard drew a one-out walk from Andy Hassler, and one out later, scored on Luzinski's double.

Indians 2, Yankees 1

Toby Harrah's one-out single in the 10th inning drove in the winning run as Cleveland beat New York reliever Rich Gossage.

Yankees starter Dave Righetti took a three-hit shutout into the ninth, but was pulled after giving up Bake McBride's one-out single. Gossage then came on, but the Indians tied the score on singles by Manny Trillo and Broderick Perkins.

In the 10th, Ron Hassey singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Harrah's single. Gossage fell to 2-2 while Cleveland reliever Neal Heaton raised his record to 5-2.

Royals 9, Twins 4

Hal McRae doubled twice and singled and drove in four runs as Kansas City left-hander Larry Gura broke his own seven-game losing streak.

Gura, 5-7, worked six innings, giving up four runs on eight hits, including homers by Kent Hrbek and Mickey Hatcher.

Dan Quisenberry recorded his 13th save. Ken Schrom, 4-1, took his first major league loss.

The Royals banged out 12 hits, three by Amos Otis, and Willie Wilson stole three bases.

Tigers 4, Red Sox 2

Milt Wilcox pitched a five-hitter and got all the runs he needed in the first inning when Detroit collected five hits and scored four times, capped by John Wockenfluss' two-run homer.

John Tudor, 3-4, victim of Detroit's first-inning uprising, settled down and retired 25 of the last 26 batters Tudor finished with a six-hitter.

Wilcox, 6-6, bidding for his third straight shutout, yielded Tony Armas' 11th homer in the seventh inning. Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Armas had consecutive singles in the ninth for Boston's other run.

Rangers 10, Mariners 0

Rick Honeycutt upped his record to 8-3 and lowered his earned run average to 1.66 with a three-hitter. Seattle starter Bob Stoddard didn't fare as well; he did not retire any of the five batters he faced.

Texas sent 11 men to the plate in the first inning and scored six runs, two on Pete O'Brien's homer. Wayne Tolleson singled twice in the first inning and the Rangers finished with 15 hits.

A's 5, Blue Jays 3

Tim Conroy and Steve Baker combined for seven strong inning of relief after taking over for ailing Oakland starter Mike Norris.

Toronto had just four hits in the game, three by Willie Upshaw, including his 10th homer of the season.

Norris left with stiffness in his pitching shoulder.

Davey Lopes homered for Oakland, which went ahead for good with three runs in the third, two on a single by Mike Davis.

Astros down Giants on Scott's RBI double

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston relief pitcher Frank LaCorte wasn't worried about hitting in a clutch situation — except that he might be called upon to squeeze a bunt.

The Astros let LaCorte swing away, and he drove in an insurance run with a sacrifice fly in Houston's 4-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants Tuesday night.

The triumph was almost overshadowed by pitcher Nolan Ryan's duel with Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the top spot on the all-time strikeout list. Ryan ended the night two behind Carlton at 3,524.

Ryan gave way to LaCorte, 4-2, after pitching five innings, but the score was tied at 2-2 until Tony Scott delivered an RBI double in the seventh and went to third on a play at the plate with LaCorte coming to bat.

"I had it in the back of my mind that we might try a squeeze play," LaCorte said. "I didn't want that I've screwed that up a few times."

Astros Manager Bob Lillis could have lifted LaCorte for a pinch hitter. He didn't, and Scott scored on LaCorte's fly to left.

"He was throwing good, and it's tough to take someone out who's throwing well," Lillis said. "In batting practice, he takes a healthy swing. He doesn't get cheated. Pitchers live for batting practice, especially relievers."

"I just couldn't make the pitches when I had to," said lusher Atlee Hammaker, 6-3. "It ended up costing us the game."

Ryan broke Walter Johnson's longstanding career strikeout mark some two weeks ago, but missed almost four weeks with a severely pulled hamstring muscle, enabling Carlton to pull to within one strikeout.

Carlton struck out six against St. Louis on Tuesday night, raising his total to 3,526.

Ryan, LaCorte and Frank DiPino joined Ryan in combining for a three-hitter. DiPino, who struck out three of the four hitters he faced, collected his fourth save.

Ryan's lack of control enabled the Giants to take a 1-0 lead in the second. He walked three in the inning, including a bases-loaded free pass to Johnnie LeMaster.

Houston took a 2-1 edge on a run-scoring double by Jose Cruz and Bill Doran's RBI single in the fourth.

Ryan, who walked seven overall, put three more on in the fifth. Jack Clark's ground-rule double tied the game at 2-2.

Optimist Club roundup

P.J. Moose struck out ten batters as Dunlap defeated Cabot, 8-6, Tuesday in National Little League play at Optimist Park.

Losing pitcher was Tony Peet.

Dax Hudson was three for three at the plate for Dunlap and scored four runs. Jason Cameron was also three for three at bat and scored three runs.

Moose was one for two at the plate and knocked in two runs while Chris Myers had an RBI on a sacrifice.

Dunlap is managed by Perry Moose while Cabot is managed by David Peet.

Glo-Valve handed Dixie Paris its first loss of the season, 7-3, in American Little League action.

Winning pitcher was William Simpson while Robert Hines took the loss.

Dixie, 10-1, is in a three-way tie with Duncan and Glo-Valve for the second-half lead. All have 3-1 records with three games to go in the regular season.

In Babe Ruth action, Pampa Hardware downed the Lions Club, 8-5, in eight innings.

Winning pitcher was Jeff Gaines and the losing pitcher was David Carter.

Titan Specialties defeated White Deer-Skellytown, 5-1, in a Big League game.

Winning pitcher was Randy Newman while Darin Bennett was the loser.

Six Pampans advance in WTG Tournament

First-round action concluded Tuesday in the Women's Texas Golf Tournament with six Pampa golfers advancing into today's quarterfinal matches at the Amarillo Country Club.

In first-flight play, Nita Hill defeated Carol Fraley, San Angelo, 1-up, while LaVonna Dalton defeated Billie Uzzell of Odessa, 6-5, in second-flight competition.

In third-flight play, Fran Wilson def. Barbara Caldwell, of Amarillo, 4-3, and Mackey Scott defeated Mary Cervin of Amarillo, 2-1.

In the fourth flight, Alma Lamberson defeated Dorothy Warman of Wichita Falls, 5-3. Pampa had a seventh-flight winner in Joan Terrell who defeated Barbara Vaughan of Amarillo, 4-3.

Other Pampans weren't so fortunate and were eliminated in first-round play.

Linnie Schneider lost to Carol Snider of Farwell, 5-4 in the championship flight and Dot Allen fell to Betty Smith in the eighth flight.

The semifinals are slated for Thursday with the finals on Friday.

Jones to coach Boston Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — For four seasons, the reins were held by an outsider who carried on the Boston Celtics' winning tradition. Now they have been given to a member of the family who was present at the creation of the dynasty.

K.C. Jones, who played on eight consecutive National Basketball Association championship teams with the Celtics, was named Tuesday to replace Bill Fitch as head coach.

Jones, a brilliant defensive guard in his nine NBA seasons starting in 1958, is the fourth player from those title teams to ascend the throne that Red Auerbach, now general manager, left in 1966.

Being part of those clubs "is a great help" to Jones as coach "because he's lived it. He knows what it is and he can put it out and get other people to do it," Auerbach said.

"It gives me total confidence," Jones said of his success with Boston and elsewhere. "You have so many avenues to draw from with the success of all those years."

Jones, 51, agreed to a multi-year contract as Boston's ninth head coach and the sixth since Auerbach stepped down. Five of them — Jones, Bill Russell, Tom Heinsohn, Tom Sanders and Dave Cowens — are former Celtic players.

Fitch took over the team in 1979 after nine years as head coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"You can't talk about the last four years in anything but a positive way. Bill had a great record," Auerbach said.

Fitch's teams were 61-21, 62-22, 63-19 and 56-26. The Celtics won the NBA title in his second season but were eliminated in four straight games by Milwaukee in last season's playoffs.

Fitch resigned May 27, citing Harry Mangurian's announcement that he planned to sell the team as a key reason. Several days later, Fitch became head coach of the Houston Rockets.

"I thought Bill would be here forever," said Jones, a Celtics' assistant coach the last 5½ seasons. "I never envisioned that I would become the coach of the Celtics."

"All along I had my eyes set on K.C.," said Auerbach, who added that he didn't interview anyone else for the job.

Jones said his appointment "rates on top."

"This is here. This is now, and it's a dream fulfilled."

Pamcel golf open set June 25-26

Entry deadline is Friday, June 24 for the Celanese Pamcel Golf Club Tournament, according to tournament co-chairman John McCall.

The 36-hole medal play tournament will be held June 25-26 with a practice round set for June 24. There will be four flights plus a championship flight with five places receiving prizes in each flight.

Prizes consist of Tour Model Titleist irons (1-9 and PW) for first, Tour Model Titleist woods (1,3,5) for second, Titleist golf bag for third, Bullseye putter for fourth, and one dozen golf balls for fifth.

Entry fee is $40 and must be accompanied by an attested

Garland Nichols' basketball camp will be held June 13-17 and June 20-24 at the Pampa Youth Center.

The first session (June 13-17) will be for advanced players grades five through eight while the second session will be for any grade, any student.

Nichols can be contacted at 665-4029 or 669-232 for more information.

Strikeout Leader

Pitcher Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies tips his cap to the applauding crowd after passing Nolan Ryan for the all-time strikeout lead Tuesday night. Carlton's career total now stands at 3,526 after striking out six batters in a 2-1 loss. (AP Laserphoto)

Carlton becomes strikeout leader in loss to Cards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Steve Carlton was more concerned with beating the St. Louis Cardinals than with becoming baseball's all-time strikeout leader, say his Philadelphia Phillies teammates.

He got the record. He lost the game. Carlton fanned six St. Louis batters Tuesday night to give him a total of 3,526 over his 17-year major league career.

But that accomplishment was marred by George Hendrick's two-run homer in the first inning as the Cardinals edged the Phillies 2-1.

Meanwhile, Houston's Nolan Ryan, who returned from the disabled list to start Tuesday night against the San Francisco Giants, struck out three to move his strikeout total to 3,524 before leaving in the fifth inning.

Carlton, 6-6, and Ryan, 3-1, are likely to stay close throughout the season in the race to top a strikeout record set by Walter Johnson 55 years ago.

"This is going to seesaw back and forth," Ryan has said.

The 38-year-old Carlton, who stresses conditioning and mental preparation, has refused to talk to reporters for several years. On Tuesday night, he simply doffed his cap when the crowd gave him a standing ovation as he surpassed Ryan with his

3,521st victim, the Cardinals' Mike Ramsey.

Many of the 34,274 fans, the largest crowd at a Phillies game this season, had come just to see Carlton.

The Phillies lockerroom was subdued after the loss, which was Carlton's fourth straight. But the players were worried about their hitting, not about his pitching.

"He (Carlton) pitched well enough to win. We just didn't score enough runs for him," said Mike Schmidt, whose second-inning home run was one of only two hits the Phillies got against St. Louis pitcher Bob Forsch.

"It's a pleasure to play with him," teammate Pete Rose said of Carlton. "He's always going to do well. But he kept saying we should forget the strikeout record and win the game."

Carlton has a contract that runs through 1987, and he has said he intends to pitch 10 more years. By that time, he should have more than a strikeout record to his credit.

Carlton has won four Cy Young awards, and has won 20 or more games six times. He has tied Sandy Koufax for the modern-day National League record for most wins in a season, has struck out 100 or more batters in each of his 16 full seasons in the major leagues, and has come within nine games of becoming baseball's 16th 300-game

College World Series

Alabama-Texas only unbeaten after 'Bama win over Michigan

By KIM N. PRICE
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Troy Brauchle usually sits in the bullpen until the seventh or eighth inning, and sometimes even until the ninth when the plot has thickened.

"When I come to the ballpark I don't even loosen up," said the Alabama junior reliever. "I sit there and wait for the sign from the dugout to start throwing."

"After about 15 pitches, I'm ready to go to the mound."

Brauchle received that summons in a precarious situation Tuesday night when Alabama lead Michigan 6-5 in the bottom of the ninth and the plot had thickened.

With two outs, runners at first and second, and the count at two balls and no strikes, Brauchle entered the do-or-die situation.

His first pitch to Chuck Froning was a ball. The count was 3-0. The next three were strikes with the last one hit to shortstop for the final out and Alabama's victory over Michigan that sent the Tide into the finals of the winner's bracket against Texas in the 37th annual College World Series.

"We've been jumping out to early leads and then hanging on for dear life," said Alabama Coach Barry Shollenberger. "Lately, all our games have been close. I think the calibre of teams we've been facing lately have had the biggest part in deciding how close our games have been."

"But give our guys credit for finding a way to win."

Alabama, 45-9, has won its last 15 outings, including two games over national champion Miami, Fla., in the NCAA South Regional to earn a spot here.

Brauchle, who earned his 12th save, said Shollenberger "doesn't like to use me until the eighth or ninth, but sometimes I'll get in during the seventh." Brauchle has seen only 43-and-a-third innings in 30 games.

Tim Meacham, 6-0, got the call for Alabama in the seventh to relieve starter Rick Browne, who had lost a 6-0 Alabama lead, yet with help from his friends boosted his record to 12-1.

Some of that help came from David Magadan, college baseball's leading hitter at .539, who set a CWS record for most consecutive hits in a series, including a three-for-four performance in the game. He tied a single-game hitting record with a five-for-five performance in Alabama's 65 victory over Arizona State Saturday night.

Magadan, a second round draft pick of the New York Mets in the major league free agent draft Monday, had hit safely in eight trips in two games before flying out to left. "That was terrible, huh," he said of the outfield fly. "I hit a bad pitch. I would have liked to of had nine (consecutive hits), but eight's O.K."

Alabama struck for two runs in the first inning off a Bret Elbin homer and a Magadan single that scored Ted McClendon.

The Tide added another in the third and three runs in the fourth. Craig Shipley walked and went to third when Elbin singled. Magadan then singled, scoring Craig Shipley, and Elbin scored on Rob Skate's single. Magadan scored on Allan Stalling's single. Michigan, 49-8, rallied for four runs off of five hits in the fourth. Casey Close's double scored Ken Hayward, who singled, and Close scored on a throwing error off Fred Erdmann's hit. Erdmann advanced on a wild pitch and a hit by Rich Bair and then scored on a single by Dale Sklar.

The Wolverines added a run in the sixth and seventh and threatened in the eighth.

Dave Kopf, 9-1, took the loss for Michigan. He was relieved in the third. "You can't make mistakes like we did early against a team like Alabama and expect to win," said Michigan Coach Bud Middaugh. "Our defense didn't play well early, but that happens. It is the same defense that got us here."

Michigan meets Stanford and Oklahoma State meets Arizona State Wednesday night in the loser's bracket of the double-elimination event.

Alabama and Texas, both undefeated in tourney play, meet Thursday night.

Stephenson to defend title

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Handicapping golf tournament winners may be more difficult than any other sport, Jan Stephenson says.

"Just look at tennis. You can pick the finalists of a tournament most of the time," Stephenson said after a practice round Tuesday for the $200,000 LPGA Championship opening Thursday.

"In tennis, the best players come through. In golf, any player can beat even a Jack Nicklaus. Golf is such a game of inches. You can have one of those days when you roll seven every time," she said.

"In tennis if you're the top player, it's easier to win," she continued. "We may have one player dominate for one year, but you cannot dominate year after year in golf. Tom Watson came the closest."

Stephenson is the defending champion in this, the second of four annual majors for the women. She will face the strongest field of the year — 129 challengers that includes 18 of the 20 leading money-winners of 1983.

News briefs

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The Army says it will keep using a powerful anti-tank weapon in training exercises despite an accidental explosion that injured 24 recruits and a weapons instructor.

Eleven men, including the instructor, remained hospitalized Tuesday after Monday's explosion at an outdoor classroom at Fort Bliss.

Army spokesman Jim Lemons said the explosion occurred because the shoulder-carried rocket launcher had been loaded with a live round of ammunition, which the instructor believed was a dummy.

Lemons said the weapon itself was safe and reliable and would continue to be used in training.

CHelsea, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s record first-quarter profits may spur United Auto Workers to renegotiate their current contract with the automaker.

Harold K. Sperlich, Chrysler's president of North American automotive operations, said Tuesday he expected the union to press for a new contract this summer to replace the pact which will expire Jan. 14.

The company's first-quarter profit of $172.1 million has prompted calls for early negotiations for the company's 43,000 unionized autoworkers, who made substantial concessions in a previous contract when Chrysler appeared faced with insolvency.

Chrysler workers now make about $2 an hour less than their counterparts at other firms.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Artifacts found on a 78-acre tract in rural Baltimore County may have belonged to Benjamin Banneker, a self-taught mathematical genius who was America's "first black man of science."

Students become foster parents to eggs

By SANDY WARREN
Conroe Courier
THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Sixth-grade students in the Wilkerson Intermediate School masterworks classes always had thought their teachers were a bit egcentric, but when they announced their "egg fostering" program, they knew they weren't all they were cracked up to be.
Parents weren't too excited either. When Natalie Barnett told her mother she was going to become a foster parent, she replied, "Not in my house, you don't."

Overall, most parents liked the idea, although some weren't too happy with the forms from the Texas Department of Human Resources they had to fill out — the same forms that must be completed before custody of human children is granted.
Environmental health checks and fire inspections of prospective parents' homes were made as well as that of the psychological environment in each home. For example, did the project meet with the approval of the prospective grandparents? Were there siblings who would ridicule the egg? Did pets have their rabies shots?
The official application was altered slightly with the addition of a blueprint of each student's room, which was to be inspected regularly by the unit supervisor (parent), a requirement that met with overwhelming approval from grandparents.

That the egg wouldn't be living in a negative home environment had to be established before egg custody would be granted. Then, each student was interviewed by visiting Judge Van Stovall, who questioned them about such things as egg names and why they chose certain eggs.
Several boys chose girl eggs but only one girl chose an egg of the opposite sex.
John D. Moore said his mother told him girls were easier to take care of and he found this to be true as his egg was one of only six of the 45 that didn't crack up.

Sharon Fagan chose a boy because "I have a younger brother and a nephew" and because "I like boys, for one thing. And my egg had a big freckle and I thought he was kind of cute."
After custody of egg was granted, students soon learned that being an egg foster parent is like walking on egg shells. They had to take their eggs with them everywhere, including to lunch and recess. If an egg were left at home, the student had to submit a signed note stating that the foster egg was being properly taken care of by an egg sitter. Each egg was allowed a maximum of one day absent from school.

Each student was required to keep an egg journal and many built rooms for their eggs, one complete with a glowing lamp. Several fashioned wardrobes for their "children."
Sometimes, students left their foster eggs in a nursery at the school. A few discovered, after leaving their unattended, that they had been "eggnapped."

A couple of the eggs were victims of the ultimate in egg abuse — murder. In reminiscing about his lost loved one, Alex Harvey explained how Zaphod Beeblebrox seemed destined to become egg salad from the very beginning.
The egg "almost got smushed by some crazy teen-ager on a Moped ... Luckily Zaphod landed on an ant bed," he said.
The tragedy happened at recess, Alex said, when a friend attacked it.

"I struggled for my egg's life. But he got smushed and I got beat up," he recalled in his journal.
One student was charged with "neglect of egg" when it slipped out of its blanket and hit the desk.
Students decided punishment as a group and also awarded stars for each day the eggs didn't crack up.
Julie Neville said she discovered the hard way that "over-protective mothers are very dangerous" when her egg cracked within an hour after being placed in her custody.

"I was holding my egg, cradling it, when it slipped and bruised itself on the ground. It was only a small dent, but it felt as though I had been the one that fell, although from a 10-story building," she wrote.
Tara Sapru even baptised her egg, Maia, during a visit to a Catholic church.
"I baptised her any way I could," she wrote. "First I poured water over her and sang the 'Jesus come into me' song. Then I dried her and put her to bed. Now she's full of Him, too!"
Maia cracked but was patched up at the Humpty-Dumpty Egg Clinic, which was established when students discovered how quickly eggs crack up, suffer shell shock and produce foul odors.
Student nurses used talcum powder for the latter problem, and stocked up on adhesive tape for body casts, clear nail polish for minor fractures and Liquid Paper for plastic surgery.

Priest builds bee hobby into a career

NEW YORK (AP) — Armed with a brush and cardboard box, shielded by a veil and gloves, the Rev. William Lester does battle as the bee man of Brooklyn, protecting Gotham's humans from stinging swarms.
The Episcopal priest has turned a penchant for beekeeping into a civic crusade — capturing bees in urban locations and releasing them in less populous areas or displaying them in controlled environments.
"May and June are the swarming months," Lester said. "When they're swarming, they're pretty gentle."

On Friday, Lester traveled to the Bronx, where a batch of bees was swarming on the side of a building. In 15 minutes, he had whisked them into a cardboard box — without getting stung.
"I usually get stung every day," he said. "I'm not allergic and have no reaction. There is very little swelling, very little pain. I'm used to a little pain."
His next run, on Manhattan's 47th Street, took longer: 20 to 25 minutes before the insects were removed from the side of a building to make the area safe again for humans.

Once boxed, the bees are taken to country beekeepers, or to such places as the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, where they are placed in observation hives for the edification of visitors.
Lester, a priest for 23 years, became interested in insect life while growing up on a farm near Mount Clemens, Mich., about 40 miles north of Detroit.

"When I came to Brooklyn, I wondered 'What can I produce in Brooklyn?' The answer was very little. So I started keeping bees and took summer courses at Rutgers University in beekeeping," said the priest, who is assigned to All Saints Church in Brooklyn.
As his expertise grew, Lester gained a reputation within the city's fire and police departments, who now call him as often as four times a week. He serves the city without charge, he said.

He recalled a telephone call one hot Sunday afternoon from longshoremen on the Brooklyn docks. A foreign ship had just docked and when the hold was opened, thousands of bees swarmed out.

"The ship had come from South America, and any foreign insects should be destroyed immediately because of diseases they might carry," Lester said, noting that killer bees come from South America.

"They were extremely hostile," he recalled, "and they attacked me. That's unusual for honey bees. They're usually gentle."

The priest managed to corral the unwelcome visitors, however, with only a few stings.

He noted a belief going back to the days of the Roman Empire that bee stings are good for human arthritis.
