WILL YOU BE HERE? — President Eisenhower has proclaimed Wednesday as Safe-Driving Day in Pampa and over the nation, in the interest of keeping Death away from the highways for at least that one day. In the wreck Death cradles here, one died.

Midnight Is S-D H-Hour

An Accident-Free 24 Hours Sought

By UNITED PRESS

Tuesday midnight will be H-Hour for S-D Day—a day when the President has challenged the nation's motorists to get through 24 hours without a single traffic accident.

Safety experts, police, and city and state officials aimed new appeals to drivers throughout the country to face up to the presidential challenge and set an all-time safety record Wednesday.

Cities bet each other that their safety records would be better and "S-D" signs appeared on trucks, police motorcycles and even parking meters.

S-D Day—short for Safety Day—was thought up by a man who almost died in a traffic accident last March—Albert J. Veglia, registrar of motor vehicles for the state of California.

It was sponsored by the President's action committee for traffic safety and Mr. Eisenhower told the nation's drivers that if they practice common sense rules, Wednesday "can be a day without a traffic accident in all America."

Safety experts doubted if Wednesday's record will be absolutely spotless. But they hoped for a dramatic demonstration of how safe the nation's highways can be with a little special effort.

Kinard Urges Motorists To Use Caution

Knox Kinard, Pampa school superintendent called on all motorists Wednesday to support of Safe-Driving Day, Wednesday.

"Our record of safety on the streets of Pampa is impressive. Only a few children have been injured in traffic accidents in the last 10 years in going to and from school," he said.

Pointing up the fact that safety is a continuing problem Kinard said "S-D Day gives us a fine opportunity to join with others in keeping our community free of traffic accidents for at least one whole day."

The high school is cooperating with the Safe Driving program sponsored by President Eisenhower's Action Committee for Traffic Safety. It's year-round course in driving offered principally to sophomores by Terry Calley. The course is an elective and offered to those students who do not have their drivers license.

The original steering committee, composed of heads of the six associations will be expanded to include presidents of all producing groups in the fight against the flood of imported oil.

Addressing the meeting were U. S. Sen. Price Daniel, D-Tex., Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Ernest O. Thompson, Railroad Commissioner W. J. Murray Jr., and Republican National Committeeman Jack Porter.

"I can assure you of one thing," Porter told the oilmen, "and that is that the President is intensely interested in the oil imports problem." The national committeeman said he has had correspondence with Mr. Eisenhower on the subject.

Daniel said he was attending the session to get a briefing on plans of the operators, in order to see how he could be of help in Congress.

Demo Leaders Meet Today With President

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 —UP— President Eisenhower invited Democratic congressional leaders to the White House Tuesday to woo their support for foreign and defense programs he will present to the new Congress.

The Democrats, who take control of Congress next month, went to the meeting with a promise not to be obstructive. But they reserved the right to take issue with some of the President's 1955 legislative program.

Rep. James P. Richards (D-S. C.), prospective head of the House Foreign Affairs committee, said bipartisan co-operation doesn't mean the Democrats are going to agree to everything the President recommends. He warned the President to start appointing more Democrats to key federal jobs if he wants Democratic support.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), who will head the Senate Armed Services committee, said before Tuesday's session he will oppose any "substantial" direct economic aid for Asia if the administration recommends it.

There also was strong Democratic opposition to the administration plan, announced late Monday, to push for a boost in first, second and third class mail rates.

Mr. Eisenhower spent all day Monday giving his GOP leaders a rundown on his 1955 program, including his intention to ask that excise and corporation tax cuts scheduled for April be postponed.

The White House said Tuesday's meeting with Democratic as well as Republican leaders dealt mainly with foreign policy, foreign aid, and national defense. The chief speakers were Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

Alabama Official Fights Extradition

GALVESTON, Dec. 14 —UP— A lawyer said Tuesday that Alabama Attorney General Silas Garrett, who is charged with murdering the man elected to succeed him, will fight any effort to make him leave a Galveston mental hospital until doctors say he is able.

Garrett was served Monday in his hospital room with the indictment charging he "unlawfully and with malice aforethought killed Albert L. Patterson by shooting him with a gun."

Patterson is the crusader who was murdered in Phenix City, Ala., the city he had promised to clean up because it had become so infamous for its commercialized vice.

Garrett, son of an aristocratic Alabama family, has been treated for disturbances of the mind "on and off" in the mental hospital since 1945, a hospital spokesman said.

Hospital To End Year In The 'Black'

Highland General Hospital has operated for 11 months of 1954 with a profit of approximately $25,000, Hospital Manager C. C. Lander reported last night at a meeting of the hospital board.

The number of patients admitted was slightly below last year's figure, but income was up, Lander said, due to the short stays.

In November, the hospital operated at $150 below income, but had no effect on the annual profits.

Increased rates for private rooms at the hospital helped boost the hospital revenue, Lander pointed out.

The hospital board meeting was the final gathering of the group for the year. Next week, three new board members are expected to be named to replace members whose terms expire this year.

THESE GENIUSES IN ELECTRICITY WON'T BE IN THE DARK LONG

DALLAS, Dec. 14 —UP— Dan Reynolds of the Dallas Crime Commission was speaking at a meeting of the Electric Club when a lamp on the speaker's stand went out.

Electricity experts made a thorough check of all wiring and electrical connections, then came up with the reason for the failure. The bulb had burned out.

Petition Withdrawn

Parents Protest Teacher's Action

A petition to the Pampa School Board asking the dismissal of an elementary school teacher was presented and then withdrawn last night when petition signers were told their names could not be kept secret.

Pope Said To Be Failing

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 14 —UP— A team of doctors found Tuesday that Pope Pius XII is weaker and his recovery was halted.

Five specialists consulted at the bedside of the ailing 78-year-old pontiff in an atmosphere of urgency resulting from a recurrence of the hiccup which has plagued him repeatedly for many months. It was the third examination in five days.

The pope was suffering from a mild case of anemia in addition to the new attack of hiccup, it was disclosed. The process which brought him back from a brush with death 12 days ago had halted, doctors said.

His pulse was reported fluctuating slightly.

Mercury Dip Expected Here

A new cold front drove across Texas Tuesday on the heels of one that brought the state its coldest weather so far this year, but forecasters said it isn't as cold as its predecessor.

The new cold front at mid-morning was already as far east and south as a line from Wichita Falls and Abilene southwest to El Paso. It was expected to bring temperatures as low as 26 degrees in the Panhandle and South Plains Tuesday night.

A weak cold front is expected to hit Pampa this afternoon, with an expected low of 25 forecast for Tuesday night.

The front is expected to dissipate by Wednesday with temperatures expected to reach the mid 50s, according to the weatherman. Today's high calls for a reading of 49.

Two Jailed On DWI Charge

Two Pampa men were fined and sentenced to three days in the county jail Monday by County Judge J. B. Maguire, Jr., after pleading guilty to charges of driving while intoxicated.

James L. Haight, 31, of 423 N. Roberts, was fined $125 and costs. He was involved in an accident Saturday with a car driven by John Lee Wells, at the intersection of Starkweather and Foster.

Also picked up for driving while intoxicated was Elmer Max Robinson, 27, of 707 N. West. He was fined $100 and costs. Robinson was picked up Saturday in the 300-block of S. Cuyler.

May Trade For Students Held In US

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Dec. 14 —UP— Red China hinted Tuesday that it might consider trading 11 imprisoned U. S. airmen for 35 Chinese students who have been refused permission to leave America. Radio Peiping called the detention of the students "a flagrant violation of international law."

The Red broadcast appeared to observers to be a possible effort by the Communists to form a parallel case because the United Nations has condemned Red China as a Korean truce violator for jailing the uniformed airmen as spies.

Diplomats speculated that the Red Chinese would dwell on this subject before replying to UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld's cabled bid for a meeting in Peiping on the fate of the imprisoned airmen.

Most of the Chinese students who have been refused exit permits do not wish to leave the United States. The others are not being permitted to return to Red China at this time because of valuable scientific knowledge they have acquired in their studies and research.

The Peiping broadcast again ignored the Hammarskjöld's cabled request for a meeting in the Red capital with Premier Chou En-Lai. The message left New York last Friday at 4:08 p. m. and arrived in Peiping four hours later, but it was not known whether it was delivered to Chou.

UN officials refused to be discouraged by the lack of a quick reply from Peiping. They reasoned that if Chou were going to reject Hammarskjöld's proposal outright, he probably would have acted by now.

UF Hopes To Conclude Campaign

Officials of the 1954 Pampa community United Fund drive today decided to go ahead and call on 40 potential contributors who have not yet been contacted.

Johnny Campbell, drive chairman, said fund officials had been holding off, hoping they would be contacted by volunteer workers. But they have not.

Campbell, Floyd Watson, Jeff Bearden, Gordon Lyons and Warren Hasse met today and made the decision to try to wrap up the drive this week. The goal is $45,000 and today a total of $43,400 had been collected. The drive began Oct. 5.

Another meeting of officials will be held at 8 a. m. Friday in the Pampa Chamber of Commerce office, Campbell said.

Chuckle Corner

When a banquet speaker starts off by saying he's not much of a talker, why does he have to go ahead and prove it?

Women are collecting plenty of alimony from men they divorced because they weren't worth a cent.

A California boy, tossed in the air by an auto, landed on the car's top. Maybe reckless drivers are taking pride in their work.

When there's scribbling on a businessman's telephone pad, his wife likely is on the other end of the line.

Water Meet Report Given

It will be another month before any action is expected on the setting of an election date for the proposed Canadian River Municipal Water Authority water contract and $73 million bond issue.

Lynn Boyd, one of two Pampans on the authority board of directors, today told the Pampa City Commission what had transpired at the Monday meeting of the directors in Plainview.

Cotton Men Vote On Curbs

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 —UP— The nation's cotton farmers voted Tuesday on whether to place their crop under federal controls in 1955 for the second consecutive year and accept a sharp cutback in acreage.

Growers have never rejected controls in eight previous elections and indications were they will accept them again.

The necessary two-thirds of those voting were expected to approve the new controls even though it will mean a 15 per cent reduction from this year's acreage allotment to the smallest ever set for cotton.

With this season's supply 3 million bales above "normal" despite 1954 crop controls, Secretary Ezra T. Benson has called for the minimum allotment allowed by law during 1955. That would be 19,113,208 acres, compared with this year's 21.4 million acre allotment.

Even though farmers unopposed their allotment this year, record high yields helped boost the crop to 13,204,000 bales, about 1 million bales above hoped for output.

Last Of Tough Farm Controls Dropped Today

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 —UP— The last remnant of a super-tough farm control program went out the window Tuesday as Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson decided that drought and the flexible price support law made the program unnecessary.

Benson told a news conference Monday that the "cross compliance" provision of the program, scheduled to go into effect next year, was being junked along with its partner, "total allotment," which was dropped last fall.

He said proposed limits on commercial vegetable plantings scheduled for next year also are being removed.

The "cross-compliance" provision would have required farmers to comply with all of the individual crop allotments set for their farm to get price supports on any one crop. The vegetable limitations would have barred plantings on acres idled by controls on basic crops as a protection to traditional commercial vegetable producers.

When Benson proposed the toughest-ever control measures last summer, he described them as a "necessary evil."

Since then, he said, Congress has passed the flexible support law, the drought has reduced production in some places, and "it was our best judgment" that the controls should be dropped.

Power Figure May Be C Of C Speaker

Pampa next year may get a chance to learn first hand some information about the famous Dixon-Yates power controversy.

Chamber of Commerce directors yesterday voted to try to secure Hamilton Moses, president of the Arkansas Power and Light Co., as principal speaker at the annual C. of C. banquet.

Moses, considered one of the top speakers of the country, has been called to testify before congressional investigators in connection with the Dixon-Yates controversy.

Chamber directors voted to give E. O. Wedgworth, chamber manager, authority to secure a speaker for the banquet with Moses as first choice.

ALLERGIC TO CHRISTMAS
Scott Garrison, 10, of Santa Fe, N. M., holds the Christmas tree he can have — a plastic one — as he recovers from a brush with a live evergreen at school. Scott hates the Christmas season, not because he's a stand-in for Scrooge, but because he's allergic to evergreens, Christmas candy, and the smell of mothballs which often emanates from Santa's suit. Easter is out for him, too. Easter eggs make him violently ill.

were not permitted to ask questions.

Ladyman and the majority of the visitors present gave detailed accounts of how they say the teacher in question—she has been teaching for a number of years—has treated their children and the children of others in the classroom. Lists withdrawn.

"The people should stand up for what they can do — that's the trouble with the country today," Ladyman said midway through the session. It was shortly afterward the board asked to see the list of names on the petition and Ladyman refused, putting the petition back in his pocket.

However, the petition had already been passed around the table and was seen by board members Kinard and McMullen. It was when Board Member Gene Green asked to have a list of petition signers that Ladyman refused.

The controversy stemmed around the teacher's conduct in class, not her teaching ability. One woman present said she thought she was a good teacher, but for older children. She thought her 8-year-old should be treated like an 8-year-old.

Kinard told the board he had never had any complaints about the teacher. But Ladyman said he had. County School Supt. B. R. Nuckols has had some complaints, too, he added.

White Deer Christmas Pageant Set

WHITE DEER — (Special) — The second presentation of the annual Christmas pageant, in song and plaques, will be presented at 8 o'clock, tonight, in the White Deer High School auditorium. It is under the direction of Mr. Hobart McDonald. Solos to be given are: "The Holy City," Sharon Dickens; "Gesu Bambino," Reita Gosnell; "The Beautiful Fields of the Angels," Julia McConnell; "The Birthday of the King," Nancy McConnell; "Oh Holy Night," Jack McCabe; "I Wonder as I Wander," Carolyn Horner; and "Ave Maria," Carolyn Anderwald.

The mixed choir will present several numbers; the Boy's Choir will sing "We Three Kings" and the girls' choir will sing "Lo, How a Rose" and "White by My Sheep."

Scenes on the stage will be Bethlehem in Judea, the Shepherds and their flocks, the Angel Messenger, the Heavenly Host, the Nativity, the Wise Men, and the Adoration. The prophet will be Buddy Smith; stage managers, Don Powell and Dean Foote, accompanist, Julia McConnell and Peggy O'Neal; candle lighters, Lyda Spruill, Amy Durning, Judy Rhoades, and Patsy Smith; ushers, Janelle Crump, Sue Williams, June Trayler and Frances Cantrell.

White Deer Paper Wins Press Honor

WHITE DEER — (Special) — The Antler, White Deer High School yearbook, received top honors in the Texas High School Press Association contest. It was awarded first place in the class of 1954. The yearbook, published by the Antler Publishing Co., is a 100-page volume. It was edited by George Bagley, photographer, Sue Williams, Junior class editor; and Cheryl Chance, feature editor of the Antler, with their sponsor, Miss Claudia Everly, attended the meet at Denton.

McLean Masons Observe Birthday

MCLEAN — (Special) — The McLean Masonic lodge celebrated their 50th birthday recently with a barbecue dinner followed by an address by Dr. C. O. Hess of Amarillo. All past Masters of the lodge were invited and 23 invitations were mailed to those whose addresses were known. About one hundred Masons were in attendance from 10 different cities or towns.

Also honored was J. W. Burrows, age 88 and the only charter member known to be living.

Present officers of the lodge are: W. W. Wall, Worshipful Master; Jeff Rallsback, Senior Warden; Clyde Dwight Jr., Junior Warden; and John C. Haynes, Secretary.

Air Force Seeks Men As Auditors

The air force is looking for auditors who can qualify for positions paying as much as $10,000 per year. This fact was disclosed by the board of United States Civil Service Examiners, air force and army, sixth floor, federal building, San Antonio, who announced an examination for auditors.

A written test is not required as a part of this examination. Applicants will be rated on their experience, education, and training.

Free Movies Sponsored By Merchants

Free movie days Wednesday and Thursday at both downtown theaters are expected to attract over 1,000 families from Pampa and the outlying communities, according to Joe Tooley, chairman of the Merchant Activities Committee of the chamber of commerce.

Santa Claus will be at the LaNora Theater during show hours both days from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. to talk with the kiddies.

Pampa merchants are offering these two free movie days to give parents an opportunity to shop and have theaters serve as baby sitters. Tooley said he hoped the parents would take advantage of the family type shows.

Featured at the LaNora, is "The Little Fugitive," and at the La Vista, "Rogues Bump," a film about a youngster who pitches for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

McLean Firemen Re-elect Officers

The Christmas Story

Retold in the words of the Holy Bible
by Norman Vincent Peale
Illustrated by Valenti Angelo

The Adoration of the Shepherds

AND it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

Strauss Says U.S. Maintains Weapons Lead

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 —UP— Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission said Monday the United States is substantially ahead of Russia in development of atomic and hydrogen weapons.

"We started sooner," Strauss said. "We have more material to experiment with. We have more facilities. We believe we have more of these very large experimental machines. But since I can't look behind the Iron Curtain, I can't be absolutely certain. Most important, we have a devoted group of free men at work on the problems."

Strauss gave his views in a copyrighted interview with the weekly magazine, U. S. News and World Report.

Asked what progress is being made by the United States in the atomic field, he said, "We are making very rapid and satisfactory progress."

"In a business which has no competition until and unless you go to war, it's a little dangerous to feel assurance that the progress is satisfactory, but I believe it is."

SEC Asked To Withhold D-Y Okay

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Dec. 14 —UP— Sen. Clinton P. Anderson said Monday he has asked the Securities and Exchange Commission to withhold approval of the controversial Dixon-Yates power contract until Congress has a chance to review it next month.

The New Mexico Democrat, scheduled to become chairman of the House-Senate Atomic Energy committee in the 84th Congress, wrote Commission Chairman Ralph H. Demmler that the new Congress may direct the Atomic Energy Commission to cancel the contract unless the agreement is "again very substantially modified."

Anderson, one of the contract's chief critics, at the same time urged the SEC to examine certain portions of the contract which he said should be "corrected" before investors are permitted to put up any money. In the letter, Anderson charged that the SEC has the obligation to see that $100 million in bonds and other securities financing the project "are not now floated on the market."

The Securities and Exchange Commission must review the contract before it goes into effect. The agreement provides for the Dixon-Yates power combine to sell power to the Tennessee Valley Authority electric power for transmission over TVA lines.

SAVED QUICK AS A FLASH

Quick-thinking of a newspaper photographer, who signaled the engineer of the Shaker Heights, Ohio, high-speed electric train, background, with repeated flashes from the stroboscopic flash unit on his camera, saved passengers aboard from possible injury or death. On his way to work through a blinding snowstorm, George Grant of the Cleveland Press stopped to photograph the wrecked auto at left, which had knocked a utility pole across the tracks. Driver of the auto was slightly hurt.

Youth Sets House Afire, Kills Parents

HAVERHILL, Mass., Dec. 14 —UP— A brilliant, teenage student faced arraignment on manslaughter and arson charges Monday for setting a fire in which his parents and two other persons perished.

Police said Richard LaPlante, 16, of Haverhill, confessed under questioning that he ignited the blaze which swept the rambling four-story brick and wooden yacht club apartments where he lived with his parents. He said he "hated" his home.

Victims of the Sunday blaze were

Woman, 82, Admitted To Law Practice

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 14 —UP— Mrs. Eliza J. Penfield will be admitted to law practice in Indiana Tuesday at the age of 82.

Mrs. Penfield, a leader in the fight for women's suffrage in the early 1900s, was admitted to the bar in New York in 1916 at the age of 40. She practiced in that state for 36 years.

The spritely lady attorney took up law as a career because "I realized that I could do more for my sex in law than I could any-other way. My clientele was ready and waiting."

Her "clientele" resulted from her fighting campaign in behalf of voting rights for women. She was chairman of the women's suffrage party of New York and "spoke all over the country."

Mrs. Penfield, a graduate of Depauw University who lived in New York since 1897, returned from her suffrage fight to study law, pass the bar examination and begin her successful law career.

New-Type Deb Has Scrubbed Look

ELIZABETH TOOMEY NEW YORK, Dec. 14 —UP— The average debutante now is a girl who does her own hair, likes the natural look of unplucked eyebrows and pink lipstick and scrubs her face regularly with soap and water.

Doesn't sound much like a spoiled darling with expensive tastes and a tendency to dance nightly till dawn, does it?

The new look debutante, usually a college freshman who is more concerned with sociology than the social register, has changed considerably since mamma's day.

She doesn't expect an extravagant debut party and she likes to do things for herself.

The 100 girls who will make their bows to society at the debutante cotillion, one of the season's top balls, on Dec. 20 were surveyed to discover what a typical modern debutante does to make herself look pretty.

She not only prefers to set her own hair, the survey revealed, but the average debutante is old-fashioned about her hairdo. She prefers a long, soft bob, much like the one worn by glamour deb Brenda Frasier 14 years ago, to the fashionably short hair cut.

The girls got together for lunch recently and filled out long questionnaires about their beauty habits. The cotillion is sponsored by Jacqueline Cochran, famous woman pilot who owns her own cosmetics company.

Part of the new look to debut these days is getting together with other socially-eligible teenagers and making a debut in a big party sponsored by a business concern. Guests buy tickets to attend, but expenses are paid by the sponsor so that all the proceeds may go to charity. The cotillion benefits the New York Infirmary.

Although Puerto Rico is part of the United States, its citizens have no representation in the U. S. Congress and therefore do not pay income taxes to the U. S.

June Talk

By JANE KADINGO

Pampa News Women's Editor

YOU CAN EXPECT me to deviate greatly from the "norm" during the days to come before Christmas. I have so many Christmas ideas that I'd like to pass on to you, that I won't have time unless I do so each day. Today, here's an idea on organization during the busy, confusing days ahead, and a short simple recipe for unexpected company — or to prepare ahead of time to serve the relatives and friends you are expecting.

HERE IS HOW to organize, by an NEA staff writer.

"Next to a soundproof room or a superior social secretary best bet for the homemaker who wants to keep track of her wits is a communications center designed to organize the confusion of the holidays."
"Such a center will prove its worth the rest of the year, too, but it's particularly good now, with the children home for the holidays. The telephone jingles incessantly. Parties, programs, rehearsals for other programs, meetings, recitals, errands to be tended to today, messages to relay — had enough?"
"To set up a center takes only a little planning. It must be so convenient that the rest of the family can't help but use the facilities you provide. In my home, and probably in yours, the logical spot is next to the telephone."
"What equipment do we need? I take my cue from a kitchen communications center I saw that was both attractive and efficient. A bulletin board with a pad of paper anchored on it, and magnets to secure a pencil and written messages plainly in view, should put an end to the frustrating notes jotted on the backs of envelopes which so often drop on the floor. Reminders, shopping lists and instructions can also be pinned where no one will miss seeing them. (Other families I know have had similar success with a blackboard, preferably with the chalk chained to the board.)

"Knowing the time of telephone calls and arrivals and departures can eliminate a lot of snappy tempers. A clock placed next to the bulletin board and at eye level over the telephone shelf will, we hope, encourage its use."
"I would like the low-cost electric time piece used in one center because its attractive, tole motif, in gold and black, didn't obscure the clearly defined numerals that even a second-grader could read without difficulty. Although this one was in a kitchen, it would look equally well in other rooms."

THE RECIPE — A rich, crunchy topping does wonders for the taste appeal and appearance of a vanilla custard or pudding dessert. To make, combine 1 cup rolled oats, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. To the dry ingredients, add 1 1/2 cups of melted butter, mixing until crumbly. Sprinkle the crumb mixture generously over the baked custard. Serve hot or cold.

ESA Chapter Plans For Christmas Fete

Plans for the annual Epsilon Sigma Alpha Christmas party were made at a recent meeting of the group in the City Club Room. The event will be held Friday in the home of Mrs. Charles Robinson. During the business session, led by Mrs. Charles Robinson, in the absence of Mrs. Al Doucette, president, it was announced that the Perryton chapter will be host to the district meeting in January. The group also voted to contribute 10 cents per member to help defray the expenses of brain surgery for the son of a member of the Fort Worth chapter. Attending were Mmes. Burton Doucette, Charles Robinson, Max Hickey, John Nutting, Oscar Engle, Eugene Bentley, Lucille Foster, Margaret Payne, Bruce Parker, John Samsel, Walter Reek, Guy LeMond, Norman Fulps, Parks Brumley, and Bill Ragdale. Miss Penney Payne was a guest.

Christmas Tea Held By AAUW

The annual December tea of the Pampa chapter, American Association of University Women, was held Sunday afternoon in the City Club Room. Guests were greeted by Miss Sibyl Turner, president, and Miss Evelyn Milan and Miss Nova Mayo presided at the guest register. The welcoming address was given by Miss Turner and Miss Virginia Denton, art chairman, introduced the program. On the program were students of Mrs. Claude Speake of Woodrow Wilson School, who presented Christmas choral numbers. Students participating were Vincent Johnson, Zip Hall, Sara Naylor, Charles Fant, Marie Guthrie, Nora Wells, Jon Naylor, Frank Pryor, Jimmie Don Bradford, and Beryl Nash, pianist. Their numbers were "O Come, All Ye Faithful"; "Hark Ye, What Angel Voices"; a Polish carol: "Sing, Ye Faithful, Sing," a French carol: "When Christ Was Born," a Neopolitan carol: "On Christmas Day In The Morning"; "The First Noel"; "Silent Night"; and "Joy to the World." Marie Guthrie sang a solo, "O Savior Sweet" by Bach; and Sara and Jon Naylor presented a duet, "Mary's Lullaby." Mrs. Kenneth D. Ross closed the program with a reading, "Christmas Thoughts." Refreshments of cake, mints and punch were served. The table was covered with a white cloth and centered with a white winter spray, flanked by tall, thin red tapers. Mrs. L. L. Millren, social chairman, presided at the punch bowl. Hostesses were Mrs. J. B. White, Mrs. Margaret Nelson and Miss Mellie Bird Richey.

MAMIE'S CHAPEAUS TOP 'EM ALL — Like any other well-dressed lady, Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower will be wearing new hats this season. This glamorous quartet was made for her by designer Sally Victor of New York. The red jersey "four leaf clover," top left, is embroidered in yarn of red and topped by a red felt wing. The soft, dusty pink velvet, top right, features a long side drape. Gem of the collection is the simple white mink breton, lower left. Small blue wool jersey toque, lower right, is embroidered with pink and blue yarn and trimmed with a narrow strip of Persian brocade.

First Lady Goes On Fall Hat-Shopping Spree For Eight Glamorous Creations

By GAY PAULEY
NEW YORK, Dec. 14 — UP Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower has gone on a fall hat shopping spree. As usual, the chic Mrs. Eisenhower selected small hats, relying on material, trim and color to add variety. The largest hat in a year of big hat popularity is also the fanciest — a narrow-brimmed breton of dusty white mink. The mink is one of four dressier hats in the group; the rest are primarily for wear with daytime suits and dresses. One of the handsomest is a small breton of jewel-toned green satin; with the slight roll of the brim entirely draped with the fabric. A favorite bonnet silhouette of Mrs. Eisenhower's is made in white beaver, with a facing of white satin. This small hat, with its sharply indented frame, holds firmly to the head and provides just the right amount of height above Mrs. Eisenhower's dark bangs. Most conservative of the dressy group is a draped hat of soft, pink velvet — the same pink the first lady has throughout her wardrobe. The velvet is tacked around a small, round crown and drapes almost fan-like on the right side. Others in the collection are: a small, off-face toque in a soft, powder blue wool jersey, embroidered with narrow strips of brocade and wool yarn in shades of blue and pink; a small, rose-red pillbox of long-haired beaver, with small Vs at each side to grip the head firmly; a simple breton of black velvet with a grosgrain bow at the back; and a red wool jersey hat with a small "wing" of red felt perched southfully on top. The embroidered crown is shaped like a four-leaf clover. Mrs. Eisenhower selected the hats without trying any on. Refreshments of cherry pie and coffee were served. The tables were decorated with miniature silver Christmas trees. Present were Mmes. Lloyd Bennett, Stella Sidham, L. B. Haggard, L. E. Saltzman, N. L. Welton, Ernest Baird, John Sandy, W. D. Allen, John Haggard, Ernest Vanderburg, Ida Barton, R. L. Souther, and R. W. Ragdale. Visitors were Mrs. H. M. Stokes and Mrs. R. L. Edmondson.

Congenial Couples Class Has Party

The Congenial Couples class, First Methodist Church, held a pink and blue shower recently for Mrs. Bob Davis, in the home of Mrs. Ross Byars, 841 N. Faulkner. Decorations followed a yuletide theme. Refreshments of hot rolls, Christmas candy and coffee were served. Guests present were Mmes. Leon Daugherty, R. H. Dilley, Vernon Moore, Elmer Radcliff, Joe Tooley, Ralph Delashaw and Malcolm Denison. Those who sent gifts, but unable to attend, were Mmes. Henry Link, H. W. Goodner, Flandie Lullman, Clyde Medkief and Iri Smith.

ALL ABOARD FOR S-D DAY.

Dec. 15 is Safe-Driving Day, appointed by the President's Action Committee for Traffic Safety. The idea is for everybody in the country to cooperate and chalk up a 24-hour period free of traffic accidents. Led by the National Safety Council as national coordinator, every major traffic safety organization will join the effort. Illustrated above—for you to avoid—are some of the common causes of accidents. Last year we Americans killed 38,300 people. That's one person on the average every 14 1/2 minutes around the clock, 365 days in the year. There was a traffic injury approximately every 24 seconds for a total of 1,350,000 persons injured so they were disabled beyond the day of the accident.

HOLLYWOOD—(NEA)—Movies Without Popcorn: Television has no monopoly on the unheated emotions provided in programs like "Strike It Rich" and "This Is Your Life." There's some powerful real-life drama in Hollywood, too—and it's not in the script.

"The Admiral Hoskins Story," a true film account of the life and heroic naval career of Rear Adm. John Hoskins, is before the camera at Republic. Arriving on the set, I'm introduced to Hoskins, an amiable man with a small white moustache, and I sit beside him to watch Alexis Smith, in the role of Mrs. Hoskins, play a touching scene with Sterling Hayden as the admiral.

It is the moment in the picture when she learns through a telephone conversation with her husband that he has lost his leg in the bombing of the U. S. aircraft carrier Princeton by the Japs.

As Alexis sobs, I hear choking sounds coming from the throat of the real Admiral Hoskins, who winces his eyes and tells me: "It's silly. But every time that girl has played that scene I've gone to pieces."

A CHAPTER from the life of Edwin Booth is being re-created at Fox, where "Prince of Players" is shooting.

Hundreds of extras have risen from their theater seats to shout oaths at Richard Burton occupying the center of the stage in his Hamlet costume. At a signal from Director Philip Dunne, they let fly with a barrage of tomatoes and cabbages.

The vegetables strike Burton's body, as specified by Dunne, but a few thrown by over-enthusiastic extras strike the star sharply in the face. Burton stands calmly, not moving, until the scene is over. Then the unexpected happens. Burton laughingly picks up the vegetables and begins to pelt the extras who were carried away by their work.

BARBARA STANWYCK, Robert Ryan and David Farrar are the stars working in Benedict Bogeaus' production of "Escape to Burma," a drama in which Barbara plays an American doll living in Burma.

They finish a scene under Alan Dwan's direction in which a baby elephant, gussied up in the tail region with a red bow ribbon, ambles off the stage.

When the next scene with Ryan is shot, Dwan confides to Barbara that her leading man is nervous about the elephant.

"This must be a gag," she whispers to me.

It is—and it's not in the script.

For a second, it appears that Ryan is crossing the stage with great dignity as the script specifies. In the next moment, however, he prankishly hoists his coat tails to reveal the elephant's red ribbon pinned to the seat of his pants. He hops up the stairs in jumbo fashion to the roars of Barbara and the crew.

A single fatality occurs per one billion passengers carried on British railways.

Hoods Pistol Whip Sheriff

WOODVILLE, Tex., Dec. 14—UP—Two men believed to be West Texas jailbreakers jumped Sheriff Dan L. Johnson on a road near here Monday, pistol-whipped him with his own .45 caliber automatic and fled.

While Johnson was being rushed to Tyler County Memorial hospital for treatment, a score of sheriff's officers, city police and state police spread out in a manhunt. Six airplanes joined the search shortly afterwards.

The attackers, both Negroes, were believed to have escaped from the Floydada, Tex., jail Saturday night.

The man attacked Johnson on Highway 190 when he stopped their car because it had front and back license plates with conflicting numbers.

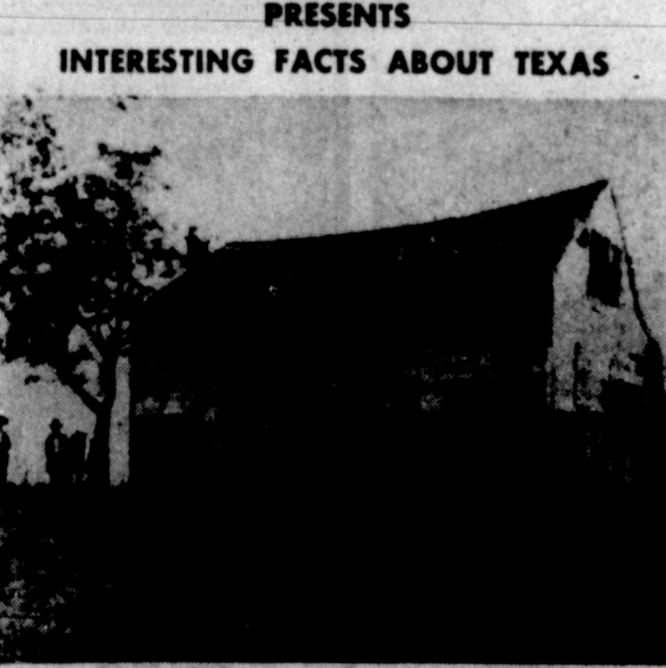

Johnson said the clip fell out of his automatic pistol in the scuffle that followed, otherwise, he said, he believed the men would have shot him.

The Negroes picked up the clip and fled with the gun in their car, leaving behind just Negro women who had been in the car.

One of the women said one of the men was named Pete Jackson. A Negro named Pete Jackson broke out of the Floydada jail Saturday with another inmate named Herman Davis.

Shortly after the jail break a Ford car answering the description of the one used by Johnson's attackers was stolen in Floydada.

Truman 'Satisfied' With Efforts To Free Airmen

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 14—UP—Former President Harry S. Truman said Monday "fool statements by persons in high places" cost the United States friends in the conduct of this country's foreign policy.

But, he said, he is satisfied that all steps possible are being taken to free American flyers sentenced to prison in Red China on pony spy charges.

He also said he believed President Eisenhower will have less trouble with the incoming Congress than he had with the Republican-dominated Senate and House in the last Congress.

Mr. Truman, in a press conference kicking off a day of activities to be climaxed by a $170-a-plate birthday dinner Monday night, said the American foreign policy today is what was set up by his administration.

"The foreign policy is just what I set up," he said. "When you get right down to it, the foreign policy is just the same."

"But we lost a lot of friends by fool statements by persons in high places."

He said the foreign policy is based on "continued support of the United Nations for peace in the world."

Mr. Truman declined to say what he would do to free the flyers imprisoned by the Chinese Reds.

"I had more eager - beavers telling me what to do when I was President. I don't want to join that group now. The President will do it," he said.

Understanding Of Canada Aim Of Rochester U. Plan

By DONALD JOHNSTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
ROCHESTER, N. Y. — (UP) — A unique college program, aimed at bringing the peoples of the United States and Canada closer together, is gaining prominence as an agent for fuller understanding between the two countries. Operating under the theory that these international neighbors are "partners in one another's destiny," the Canadian Studies Program at the University of Rochester is striving to improve a peaceful relationship that already is the envy of other nations.

Dr. Cornelis W. de Kiewiet, president of the university, who conceived the program, says "It is our belief that the time has come when American public opinion should achieve a greater awareness of today's Canada."

A Year Old
Through the program, the university is endeavoring to acquaint college students with the thoughts, feelings and problems of the Canadian people. The project is the only one of its kind on an undergraduate level in American universities and is expected to set a pattern for other United States and Canadian institutions.

Initiated only a year ago, the program now has a comprehensive collection of Canadian materials, and a schedule of courses, research, conferences, teacher-exchanges and scholarships.

Dr. de Kiewiet points out that Americans are prone to take Canadians as "bush-league" Americans. "To be oblivious of a very real Canadian self-consciousness is a national fault for which we pay a greater price than we recognize," he warns.

"Canada and the United States are indissolubly committed to each other," explained Dr. de Kiewiet. "The facts of geography, history, language, economics and strategy make us partners in one another's destiny."

Conference Plan
The program is not designed to educate a group of specialists in Canadian affairs. Dr. Donald W. Gilbert, director of the program, said "the availability of courses on Canada, as part of a normal concentration program in history, economics, geography, geology, government or literature, will afford opportunity to study a particular field in terms of another society closely related to our own and to compare and correlate developments in that field in the two countries."

One of the most important phases of the program is the conference plan, which draws leaders of the countries together for free and frank discussion. The first in a series, held in September on economic relations, successfully set the stage for future exchange of ideas. Some 80 leaders in business, education and government attended.

A representative reaction to the conference was voiced in an editorial of a New York City newspaper which stated that the conference "should mark a milestone in Canadian-U.S. relations . . . Rochester University is pioneering in a field that one hopes will be followed by other American and Canadian institutions."

AF To Play 'Santa Claus'

The Air Force Recruiting Service will play "Santa Claus" to December enlistees, who enlist between Dec. 17 and 27, by offering them a 10-day leave in order that they might spend Christmas at home.

If applicants want to stay home for Christmas, they may enlist Dec. 17 and return home. They would depart for their basic training Dec. 27.

Should applicants want to remain home both Christmas and New Year's Day, they may enlist Dec. 23 and leave for basic training Jan. 2.

Anyone desiring to enlist under this plan should contact Sgt. D. L. Packham in the basement of the Pampa Post Office.

Guatemala's New Regime Revamps Land Reform Plan

By ROBERT PRESCOTT
United Press Staff Correspondent

GUATEMALA CITY — (UP) — Land reform, one of the chief political weapons of Guatemalan Communists for nine years, is boomeranging against the Reds.

President Carlos Castillo Armas has revamped this country's drastic, Communist-inspired agrarian program with a goal of solving unemployment and sweeping into power last June 27, he immediately halted the Red land reform program which, he said, was aimed mainly at lining politicians' pockets and running the U.S. "imperialist" fruit companies out of Guatemala.

His aides let it be known that vast land in national estates, no more foreign-owned agriculture. Most of these will be Indians, who compose 70 per cent of Guatemala's population.

"We will fight Communism with its own weapon — land reform," said Castillo Armas. "Our goal is eventually to raise the large Indian segment of population to the same level of civilization and culture as the rest of the nation."

When Castillo Armas overthrew a Communist-dominated government and swept into power last June 27, he immediately halted the Red land reform program which, he said, was aimed mainly at lining politicians' pockets and running the U.S. "imperialist" fruit companies out of Guatemala.

His aides let it be known that vast land in national estates, no more foreign-owned agriculture. Most of these will be Indians, who will be divided up among the peasants.

"We have seen," Castillo Armas said, "that the result of this was a decrease in national production. The Communist program was a political instrument, designed to sabotage production."

The new, substitute land reforms will exploit new regions, such as the Reyna territory in northern Guatemala, where 330,000 acres of good agricultural land lies unutilized, and the Izabal region near the El Salvador border.

The government will turn the land over to the "campesinos," guarantee them credit and educate them in modern agricultural techniques.

three-fold result," Castillo Armas said. "It should increase national production. It should increase social benefits to the peasants. And it should increase technical knowledge."

"That is what we will do." Combined with the land program will be a nationwide drive to modernize all communications, including roads and airports, electrification and housing. Foreign investment will be encouraged.

No decision yet has been announced as to whether land expropriated from U.S. companies and large Guatemalan land-holders will be returned.

"Any land reform should have a

S-D Day Brainchild Of California Man

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14—UP—Safe Driving Day, which the nation will observe Wednesday, was the brain child of a man who was nearly killed in an automobile accident early this year.

Albert J. Veglia, registrar of motor vehicles for California, thought up the idea while he was lying in a hospital bed last March, the innocent victim of the very kind of traffic smash-up that "S-D Day" is intended to curb.

It was a classic bit of irony that Veglia should have been involved in a bad wreck. He has devoted much of his life to campaigning for traffic safety. Only a month before his own accident, he represented California at President Eisenhower's White House conference on highway safety in Washington.

Out of Control

Late on the afternoon of March 5, Veglia was driving down U. S. 40, 12 miles west of Sacramento, Calif., the state capital. Suddenly a car which was moving in the opposite direction on the four-lane divided highway went out of control, crossed the 27-foot parkway strip and crashed into a car directly ahead of Veglia's. Veglia swerved his own car off the pavement in an effort to avoid the collision but was struck by both of the other cars. His own car was hurled some 75 feet and its top was sheared off. Two women in one of the other cars were killed.

Veglia was so badly injured that he lay unconscious for five days and required 276 stitches in his face and head. He remained in the hospital for three weeks.

According to Gov. Dan Thornton of Colorado, an old friend to whom Veglia later went with the "S-D Day" idea, Veglia "had a lot of time to think as he lay there in the hospital."

"One of the things which he thought about most was that old bugaboo of public apathy which had always handicapped him and other conscientious public officials who are trying to reduce accidents," Thornton said recently. He kept thinking: "Isn't there some way to bring dramatically to the attention of the public the need for halting the slaughter on our highways?"

A Special Day

The result of Veglia's brooding was the idea of setting aside one day when "everybody, all over the country, would be asked to try to eliminate accidents completely," to dramatize what could be accomplished by attention to safety year-round.

Veglia enlisted the support of Thornton and of Joseph Matson, president of the Automotive Safety Foundation. Matson arranged a luncheon in Washington at which Veglia sold his idea to representatives of other professional safety groups.

President Eisenhower then threw his full support behind the project, and the President's action committee for highway safety took over the sponsorship.

Wednesday, communities from coast to coast will join in carrying out the project that Veglia thought up on a hospital bed.

Oscar Winner Arrested On Drunk Count

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 14—UP—Academy Award winner Bröderick Crawford, actress Abigail Adams and New York actor Myron McCormick faced arraignment on drunk charges Monday. They were arrested after their car smashed into a fence following an all-night party.

Police said Miss Adams, 37, often romantically linked with George Jessel, "turned the air blue" with insults when arrested early Sunday in her stocking feet.

"We went to a party and got lost," Crawford, 44, told police.

The three were jailed on drunk charges for several hours before obtaining their release on $20 bond each.

Officers said Miss Adams told them, "You don't know who I am. You can't arrest me."

They said she later apologized, saying, "It's just that we use that language every day."

Mongolia, Russia Linked By Railway

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Foreign Analyst

A brief broadcast from Peiping reported Monday that the first train on a new railroad which is to link Communist China, outer Mongolia and Soviet Russia had reached the Mongolian border.

It was not a very exciting announcement. But in its potentialities for the future, it was real news.

The dispatch is a reminder that Communist China and Russia are building, with the sweat of countless thousands of slave laborers, a vast rail network that will open up all of that part of east Asia.

It has long been known that the network was under construction. In fact, parts of it were started, on the Chinese side, by the Nationalists long before the Communists overran the mainland five years ago.

But construction has been speeded since then, and any report of progress is not good news for the West.

Complete by 1956

Nationalist Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek estimated last October, on the basis of his intelligence reports, that the network will be completed in 1956.

"Then Russia will be in control of the great Eurasian land mass and clearly will be in a strong position to match the power of the United States and Great Britain, unafraid of any air power which may be thrown against it," Chiang said.

He predicted that by 1956 Red China would be prepared, with the completion of the network, for a war in the Pacific. He predicted also that Russia would start a general war.

A lot of things could happen before 1956, and Chiang's prediction may have been a little on the pessimistic side.

"But the railroads will link solidly two vast Communist-ruled countries and give them communications which for the first time will permit a swift, big-scale movement of men and supplies.

The railroads also will link with Chinese Red lines that run southward to the Indo-China frontier.

The network link which the Peiping broadcast mentioned is to extend from Tsining, about 200 miles west-northwest of Peiping, to Ulan Bator, capital of the Soviet-Satellite state of outer Mongolia.

Peiping said that the line had reached, on the Chinese side, a frontier whistle-stop named Ehrhien. Ehrhien is on the border of inner Mongolia. Thence the road will extend through inner Mongolia to outer Mongolia, on the northwest.

To Aid Advance

"Railroads minister Teng Tai-Yuan, who was on the first train, told the 700 people gathered at the tiny halt of Ehrhien that the completion of the present section of the line will add to inner Mongolia's economic and cultural advance," Peiping said.

But the Reds are building the network for economic and military purposes. It will connect Red China with Russia's trans-Siberian railroad at points along a line extending from eastern Siberia to Alma Ata, in the Soviet Kazakh republic in central Asia.

Whatever the motive of the Reds in speeding construction, it is hardly likely they have in mind their campaign of "peaceful co-existence."

Seven Injured In Car Crash

EL RENO, Okla., Dec. 14—UP—Seven persons were injured, some seriously, when a Mid-Continent Trailways bus collided with a house trailer and automobile on U.S. 44 about 30 miles west of here.

The injured included the driver of the bus, which was en route from Oklahoma City to Lawton, Okla., via El Reno and Anadarko, and the wife of an Air Force sergeant en route from Columbus, Ohio, to Hamilton Air Force Base in California.

L. D. Ward, reporter for the El Reno Tribune, said the collision apparently occurred as the bus started to pass the other vehicle.

"That bus must have jumped nearly 100 feet through the air before coming to rest in a field," Ward said.

Illegitimate Births Among Teenagers Rising Unabated

CHICAGO, Dec. 14—UP—A doctor said Tuesday that illegitimate births among teenagers have doubled in the last 15 years in a wave of "sex hysteria."

Dr. Goodrich C. Schaffner, Portland, Ore., blamed the trend partly on "bosom consciousness" instilled in youth by "Hollywood influences and the insane emphasis by modern advertising and the press on this semi-respectable sex appendage."

"The array of bosoms now available to the naked eye is simply appalling, and it has its results early and late," he told the sixth annual congress on obstetrics and gynecology.

Schaffner said the increase in illegitimate births "is certainly significant of the general trend in relation to precocious sex activity."

"It must be recognized as a background to the observation that there is a greatly increased awareness of sex in the younger group, stimulated and maintained by sex hysteria, which is a calculated instrument of modern journalism and so-called entertainment trends," he said.

Schaffner said that girls scarcely into adolescence already are subject to a bosom inferiority complex and are wearing "miniature falsies."

He said actual or imagined "bosom inferiority" among young girls can have serious consequences.

"In my own practice, I have had one attempted suicide and several serious and total derangements contingent upon real or fancied breast irregularities," he said.

Schaffner said various treatments for breast development are "uniformly worthless."

75,000 Clinic Cases Helped Develop Hospital's PILE-SHRINKING OINTMENT

Thousands of pile sufferers now can truly report they have found wonderful relief, and put off the need for surgery, through the ointment formula approved by Thornton Minor Clinic's medical staff. This pile-shrinking ointment is not a mere modified skin salve. It does not depend for its effect on just one ingredient. Experience with more than 75,000 clinic and hospital cases has shown how an ointment must deal with the various problems of itching, bleeding, swelling and pain. For non-surgical shrinking of your piles, try Thornton Minor Ointment—the prescription approved by a specialized pile clinic. $1 at all drug stores—ointment or suppository form.

Electrical Contract Let

Gray County commissioners Monday awarded a contract for the electrical work in the new addition to the county dual-purpose barn in Recreation Park and directed Sheriff Rufe Jordan, as custodian of the Courthouse building, to get it fixed up for Christmas.

Plains Electric Co. of Pampa, got the electrical contract with a bid of $424.85, according to the minutes of the court session. There were two other bids, both higher.

Jordan has been authorized to spend up to $200 on Christmas decorations for the Courthouse, the minutes show.

In other action, the court accepted the Texas Highway Department's proposal to widen U. S. Hwy. 60, from the Pampa city limits to the Rodeo Grounds entrance, passed a number of budget amendments and paid the bills.

Slezak had to grow a beard for "Fanny," which pleases his wife but not him. "I grew it to look dignified," he says, "and there's nothing more dignified than a beard. But it affects my eating habits. Minestrone gets caught in it."

The Jackie Gleason show, over CBS-TV, will play host to the winner of NEA's national Little People's Christmas Coloring Contest on Dec. 18. This lucky winner will be the best Little People colorer anywhere, and besides the TV appearance, he (or she) will get to see a Broadway show and Radio City and the Empire State Building. Might be worth investing in a few crayons.

Never know where radio will take you. Blanche Thebom, the Met's glamorous mezzo-soprano, landed in Iceland last summer because of radio. Seems the Icelanders had been bombarded by Soviet Russia's cultural propaganda radio, and, to counteract this, some leading citizens decided to invite an American singer.

The Reykjavik Music Club suggested Miss Thebom, because she was heard frequently on NBC's "Telephone Hour," which somehow reaches Iceland. She was invited, sang two concerts, but came away without a souvenir.

She generally buys souvenirs, and asked the proprietress of her hotel where she could get a pair of silver earrings the lady wore, since these particular earrings seemed very Icelandic in spirit.

"I bought them," the lady told Miss Thebom, "in Ailentown, Pa."

This should be delightful news to anybody who owns airline stock. Since "Down You Go" is about New York, the MC of the DuMont quiz, Bergen Evans, will have to fly back and forth each week between his Chicago home and his New York studio. And one of the new panelists on the show will be Norbert Wiener, who lives in Boston and will have to fly down from there each week. A heavy fog — and the program's shot.

Both Evans and Wiener are college professors — Evans at Northwestern and Wiener at MIT. Steady viewers may yet have to do home work.

This is baritone David Atkinson's description of a couple he knows: "He has a strong will and she has a weak won't."

Walter Slezak, on stage in "Fanny," seems to radiate benevolence. He's a big, good-humored man, one of the most capable actors currently playing that trade. It's nice to report that he's just as good-humored off-stage.

In fact, Slezak is one of the best natural humorists around these days. He has a knack of saying funny things automatically. As examples, consider these witticisms, tossed off nonchalantly: "Having lived in Germany under Mr. Hitler, I know that the only difference between Nazi Germany and Russia is that in Russia it's colder."

"I'm the father of the Los Angeles smog. We have a home there and you should see the stuff I burn — everything but my mother-in-law. She isn't combustible."

"I don't sing — I just talk on pitch."

There were more, liberally sprinkled through a more-or-less serious discussion of Slezak's career.

This is his first musical in some time, and he has a fine reason for going into a musical. "Musicals," Slezak says, "are more remunerative and I like money, therefore I like being in musicals."

The Slezaks are something of astrology students, and Walter would prefer that the stars guaranteed his moves through the theatrical world.

"My wife," he says, "is the sorceress. She summons the stars and they give me the good or bad news."

In "Fanny," he plays an old man who cannot have children, and eventually dies. This doesn't sound like a happy part, but somehow Slezak endows the character with a great deal of comedy. "Dying a sterile old man every night," he says, "doesn't bother me. I'm happily married, I have three lovely children, I'm 53 tonight, since I take part to heart. When I was young 'My Three Angels' I played a criminal and I went around picking pockets."

FRANKFORT, Ky. — UP — A recent survey showed that more than 130,000 persons in 27 Kentucky counties were receiving free food under a joint federal-state relief program.

Most of the needy persons were located in eastern Kentucky, where there is widespread unemployment because of a slump in the coal mining industry.

The food — surplus commodities distributed by the federal department of agriculture — included butter, cheese, non-fat dry milk, shortening, canned beef and gravy and dried beans.

Aged Spanish Opera Star Dreams Of A 'Little Business'

By JOHN BLAKE
United Press Staff Correspondent

MADRID — (UP) — From riches and fame to rags and oblivion is the story of Ramonita, a mezzo-soprano who once shared the limelight with Enrico Caruso.

But this happened so long ago that time has effaced her past glories and dulled her memories. The young Spanish girl who at the turn of the century commanded fees of over 1,000 pesetas gold for one night's performance today is a partially blind woman of 70 who sells lottery tickets for the "blind" on a street corner barely a stone's throw from the Royal Opera House where 40 years ago she had been applauded by Alphonse XII, then boy-king of Spain.

In the golden days, Ramonita sang mezzo-soprano roles in "Aida," "Lohengrin," "Rigoletto" and "Carmen" in Milan, Rome, Warsaw, Odessa and St. Petersburg.

But what she remembers most vividly is sharing the public's applause in Milan's Teatro Lirico with an up-and-coming Italian named Enrico Caruso.

"That was in the 1880's or 1890's," but I can't be sure of any dates — it has all been so long ago," she said. "Caruso was beginning his career then, I was in 'Rigoletto' with him for just one performance. That was because the mezzo-soprano billed with Caruso suddenly was taken her place."

She wistfully recalled the high life of pre-revolutionary Russia: "How much gold there was in Russia... how many rubles... what beautifully attired women! Everybody, it seemed, spoke French, and St. Petersburg was more fancy than Rome or Milan, though perhaps not so much as Paris."

The story of Maria Ramona Galan begins in the latter part of the 19th century when, at the age of 14 and at her father's insistence, she commenced to study voice in Madrid. Her voice coach was an Italian baritone named Battistini.

"Somehow, I remember him quite well," she said. "He was a big man with a fine powerful voice."

From Madrid, she travelled to Milan for an audition and was booked by agents of the Teatro Costanzi in Rome.

"I lived in Milan for 20 years," she continued. "Milan, you understand, was the mecca of opera singers."

The last time Ramonita appeared in the Madrid Royal Theater was in 1926, the year the theater closed. It has remained closed ever since. The civil war wiped out her savings. The Republican government in 1936 empounded all savings accounts with banks to help finance the war.

Then came long years of sickness. She was forced to go on relief. Eight years ago she underwent an operation for cataracts. The operation was only partially successful and she was admitted into O.N.C.E., a self-supporting government relief organization for the blind.

Today Ramonita lives alone and forgotten in a small unheated room on Calle Independencia, barely 100 yards from the Opera House, still nursing dreams for the future.

Shoe Is Clue In Slaying

BRINKLEY, Ark., Dec. 14—UP—Police hunted Tuesday for a man with mis-matched shoes after finding one shoe two blocks from the house where a 25-year-old socialite, Mrs. Sun Fuller, was bludgeoned to death with a stick of kindling wood.

Eight persons were held for questioning, but Police Chief Frank Henderson said none had been charged. They included a 38 or 39-year-old laborer with a record of 13 years in prison for burglary, a 30-year-old woman and 16-year-old girl who had been living with him, and five Negroes.

Finding of the shoe confirmed a report by two newspaper delivery boys, brothers George, 12, and Cyrus Totten, 11, who said they saw a big man clad in a tan overcoat, apparently running with one shoe off in the vicinity of the Fuller home, about the time of the attack early Sunday morning.

Henderson said he particularly wanted to find a bushy-haired former mental patient, with a record of killing a woman in Illinois, who was known to have been in Brinkley Saturday night.

The chief said he found it hard to believe that Mrs. Fuller's five-year-old daughter, Mary Helen, actually "saw the burglar hit Mommy," as she related.

Henderson found it strange the child hadn't raised an alarm, if she saw the attack. Fuller was discovered by her husband, Milton, a wealthy auto agency owner. Fuller had been dozing on a living room sofa, after drinking coffee at downtown cafe with some duck hunting friends when he heard a "thudding noise."

Fuller said he went into the bedroom to find his socialite wife dying on the floor, her skull crushed with one blow of a four-foot length of kindling.

Police found some almost obscured footprints outside the house in the mud. They believed the killer took off his shoes to enter the house, and killed Mrs. Fuller when she awakened and perhaps recognized him.

Henderson exonerated Fuller. The husband said he woke before dawn, and decided to go to town for a cup of coffee and the Sunday newspaper. He said he woke his wife and learned where she had put the keys to his auto agency.

State Water To Be Legislative Subject

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is another in a series of dispatches dealing with problems facing the Texas legislature convening in January.

By LLOYD LARRABEE
AUSTIN, Dec. 14—UP—Texas lawmakers believe the next legislature will take a definite step toward solving the state's mounting water problem.

However, most legislators replying to a United Press survey qualified their answers by saying they did not expect the 55th Legislature to come up with a complete solution to the problem.

Water conservation was singled out by the lawmakers as the forthcoming session's top issue, along with taxes.

Sen. George Moffett of Chillicothe said he expects the legislature will make a "genuine attempt to solve the problem."

"This will undoubtedly include further legislation relating to the storage of water not only at suitable sites on the larger streams but also in multiple lesser sites near where it falls," he said.

Supported by Ashley
Support for recommendations of the Texas water resources committee was voted by Sen. Carlos Ashley of Llano.

He said the legislature's "greatest task" will be passage of measures "which will enable Texas to conserve and put to beneficial use the flood waters of our public streams."

The committee's recommendations include a proposed constitutional amendment to levy a state property tax of three cents per $100 valuation to support a $100 million revolving fund for aid in financing construction of water projects.

The water development fund would be raised through issuance of bonds, and used to aid political subdivisions in financing construction of dams, reservoirs and other water storage projects.

That proposal is one of nine recommended by the water resources committee.

Ashley expressed belief the committee's revolving fund proposal is the "best plan thus far presented."

"Not Aware of Problem"
A West Texas legislator, Rep. J. O. Gillham of Brownfield, expressed belief lawmakers from other parts of Texas are not aware of the water problem.

Rep. Rogers Says:

Merchants Could Impose Blockade On Commie China

would not be an act of the government. "In fact, it would be no act at all. It would be a failure to act."

Private Embargo
"The refusal to dispose of goods and commodities to Red China so long as she persisted in violating international law by holding American boys on trumped-up charges would have a telling effect on her economy," Rogers feels.

Blockade A Possibility
Nevertheless, the representative says, there is the possibility of setting up a blockade "under the supervision of the several governments involved."

By this method, Rogers thinks, the UN could render a definite service in determining whether or not such nation was an offending nation, without decreasing the cessation of trade with her.

"Why wouldn't it be sensible to enforce the rules of international law and conduct," he asks, "by peacefully channeling trade away from the violators, rather than waiting until war has been declared and then trying to prevent the trade by force of arms?"

There has been, he concludes, "entirely too much thinking along the line that we have a choice between only two alternatives: the one, to be insulted; the other, to go to war."

Dam Business
HOLDREGE, Neb., Dec. 14—UP—A group of duck hunters went into the dam-building business after a blind they built on the Platte River was left high and dry through a sudden channel shift.

The hunters, rather than move the elaborate blind, got themselves some sandbags, dammed up the river flow and sent the water past the blind again.

Rep. Barefoot Sanders of Dallas said water conservation probably had more "general interest" than any other issue facing the lawmakers, "but I do not believe that it will be fully and completely worked out during this session."

Rep. B. H. Dewey Jr., Bryan, agreed, but cited passage of eight water measures by the legislature last year as "a step in the right direction."

Couples Face Smuggling Count

LAREDO, Tex., Dec. 14—UP—Smuggling charges were filed Monday against three men and two women arrested by federal agents who said counterfeiting plates were found in a false bottomed cosmetics case.

The group also was charged with conspiracy and with possession of counterfeit plates.

Agents said they had been watching the five since last Friday. They were arrested early Sunday 10 miles out of Laredo on State Highway 202 towards Freer, Tex. They had checked out of a Laredo hotel only a few minutes before.

Three plates for making counterfeit $20 bills on the federal reserve bank of Atlanta, Ga., were found in one of the women's cosmetics case that agents said contained a false bottom.

The men were identified as William Hester, 36, and John Oliver Thompson, 22, both of Columbia, S. C., and Ralph Pete Shaw, 31, Anderson, S. C.

THE BOWIE HIGH SCHOOL Jack Rabbits, champions of state Class AA basketball crown the past four years, are still racking up cage victories.

Bowie has added six victories this season and their winning streak now stands at 74.

This is the first time in four years that Bowie has been playing without 4-50 Temple Tucker. They'll never reach the state meet this year, though.

If we were forced to make a long-range prediction on who would upset the Jack Rabbits now, we would say Birdville of Fort Worth.

And you'll recall that Birdville will be in Pampa, Dec. 21 and Jan. 1 for the second annual Top of Texas basketball tournament.

Birdville last week advanced to the finals of the Hardin-Simmons Invitational Tournament before losing to Berger for the title. The Coaches' Association has a run for the money before bowing, 57-47.

Coach Johnny Nobles of Birdville told us last year that Temple Tucker has been blocking his path to the state meet the last two or three years and he was getting tired of it.

With Tucker out of the way this year, Nobles may make it. This year, he has two of his big boys back from last year, Hanny Stevenson and Donald Davis.

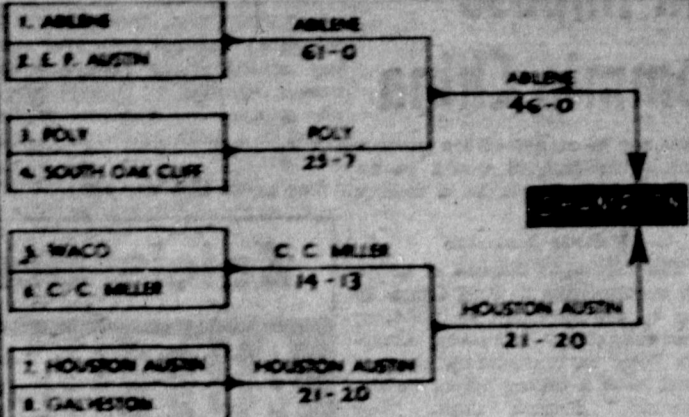

Both Stevenson and Davis stand 6-4. Stevenson made the all-tournament team here last year. He scored 41 points in two games.

Against Berger Saturday night Stevenson dunked in 27 points.

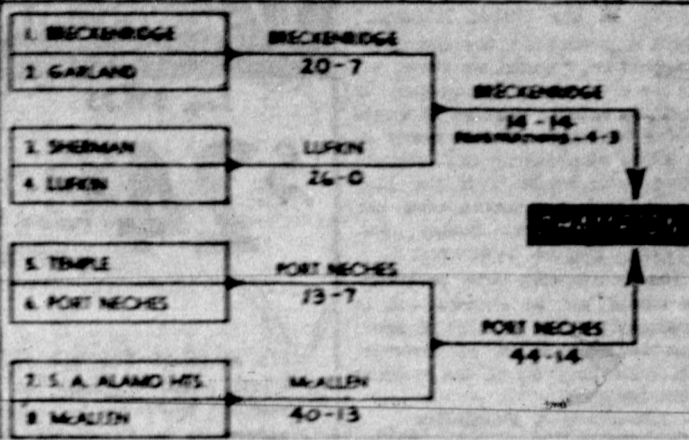

The Top of Texas Tournament is shaping up pretty well. Chickasha runner-up to the Harvesters last year, has won her first two starts this season.

Four of the six boys who saw action in the second win for the Chicks Friday night, 64-61, over Putnam City, took part in last year's tourney finals here.

Boys Club Meets Amarillo Tonight

About 12-15 top notch bouts will be unrec'd tonight at the Top of Texas Sportsman's Club arena where the Pampa Optimist Boys Club team meets a combined Amarillo Golden Gloves and Borden's team in an inter-city match.

It will be the seventh inter-city duel for the Pampa mittmen this season. They have broken even in their first six matches, winning three and losing three.

Tonight's bouts will get underway at 8. Most of the "ace" members of the Pampa team will see action tonight.

Admission prices for the bouts tonight will be 75 cents for adults and 25 cents for students.

Bulldog Five Tough On Home Court

The Harvesters basketballers left after noon today for Plainview where tonight they take on a tough Plainview Bulldog quint in a non-conference outing.

The Green and Gold will be going after their third straight triumph and seventh this season.

Plainview has lost only one game this season, a narrow 47-45 defeat at the hands of Amarillo being their lone loss.

Coach Clifton McNeely and his charges left today highly aware of the terrific battle the Harvesters had with Plainview at Plainview last season. The Harvesters quit came out of that game a 33-48 victor but not until after a hard fight all the way through.

The Harvesters handled the Bulldogs much easier at Harvester Fieldhouse last year, 36-42. But the Bulldogs are double-tough on their home court as last year's game with the Plainview team at Plainview indicates.

Both Pampa and Plainview were in the state tournament last year at Austin. The Harvesters emerged as state champs in the 4A division while Plainview finished fourth in 3A.

Several members of both clubs who saw state tournament action last year are back this campaign.

Top returnees for the Bulldogs is Hugh Bob Tilton while Gary Griffin and E. Jay McDivain, both all-stars last year, head the list of Harvesters returnees.

After tonight's game, the Harvesters will return home and then embark again Friday on a two-day tour, meeting Vernon at Vernon Friday night and Quannah at Quannah Saturday night.

The Pampa B team Shockers, also unbeaten this season in six starts, will meet Plainview B in preliminary game tonight.

Tonight's game will be broadcast over both Pampa radio stations, KPND and KPAT.

Amarillo moved one game ahead of the Harvesters last night in games won with a 65-40 win over Canyon. It was the seventh win against no losses for the Bandits this season.

The Bandits meet Berger in a non-conference outing at Amarillo. Berger will be seeking revenge from their 64-42 loss to the Sandies in the season opener.

Former Army, Yale, Irish Coach Tutoring Trotters

Elmer Ripley, prominent basketball coach who resigned as head coach of the United States Military Academy at West Point at the end of the 1953-54 season to join the Harlem Globetrotters, will direct the play of the Negro wizards when they play the Boston Whirlwinds at Harvester Fieldhouse Thursday night.

With Ripley acting as his chief aid and handling the reins when he's away from the team on other sports connected with his vast empire, Owner and Head Coach Abe Saperstein of the Trotters again has the services of one of the smartest coaches in the business.

Not only does he have a great knowledge of the sport, but Ripley has the knack of imparting valuable pointers to his players. At the start of the current season the new men seeking places with the famed team were placed under his direction.

Ripley's coaching career has been long and successful. Born in Staten Island, New York City, he has coached at the following schools: Junia 25, Lockhaven State Teachers 61, Millersville 71, West Chester State 66, Moravian 62, Drew 47, Mississippi State 77, Sewanee 74, Bethel 52, Millsaps 70, Tulane 62, Rice 43, Eastern Kentucky 60, Xavier 44, Florida 58, Temple 61, Louisiana State 72, Texas A&M 61, Murray (Ky.) 72, Morehead (Ky.) 64, West Virginia 72, Richmond 66, East Tennessee 53, VMI 62, North Carolina College 64, Bluefield State 55, West Virginia State 63, Virginia State 54, Morris Brown 57, Morehouse 54, Hampton Sydney 79, Western Maryland 71, Southwest Louisiana 66, Loyola (La.) 62.

BORGER, Dec. 14 — The professional baseball situation in the cities of Borger and Pampa took a "turn for the worse" here Monday night when a combined group of the two cities met to discuss the possibilities of a merger.

While Pampa was confident she could go along on the merger deal, the Borger group expressed little hope of raising the necessary funds to uphold her end of the deal.

Bob Grimes, president of the Panhandle State Bank in Borger and a stock holder in the now defunct Borger Gasser franchise, said last night "I can't seem to get anyone here interested in bringing professional baseball back to Borger."

Grimes said, however, that he would contact all of the former stock holders in the Gasser franchise, either by phone or by person, and try to get their interest restored in baseball.

Grimes reported that 125 Borgerans had stock in the Gasser franchise. That is the number of stock holders that is needed in the "Pampa-Borger merger plan."

The goal that has been set up is to sell 125 shares in each city at $100 per share to purchase the Pampa Gasser franchise, ball park and players now owned by Doug Mills of Pampa.

The Borger group reported last night that they should know definitely, one way or the other, by Friday whether Borger would go along with Pampa on the merger plan.

Meanwhile, the Pampa committee will stand by awaiting the word from Borger before trying to acquire stock holders in Pampa.

Tech Nips Ags Late, 49-48

GOODWELL, Okla., Dec. 14 — UP — Texas Tech surprised Oklahoma A&M at the Aggie's own strategy — a light man-to-man defense — to win a 49-48 victory in the last six seconds here Monday night.

The undefeated Raiders gained victory on two free throws by sophomore Harry Scaling when the clock read six seconds to go. He was fouled by A&M forward Mack Carter, who led his team in scoring with 13 points.

Tech started with a some defense then switched to a man-to-man pattern that baffled the Aggies. Forward Jim Reed and guard Carl Ince led Tech scoring with 14 points each.

The teams met in half of a double-header dedicating a new Panhandle A&M College field house here. Panhandle downed Western Colorado 72-47 in the first game.

Texas Tech and Oklahoma A&M tied the score seven times in the second half and the lead changed hands an equal number of times. It was the fifth victory against no defeats for the Raiders and A&M's second loss in five games.

Until Scaling coolly sank his last free throw, Aggie forward Carter apparently had iced the game. He sank a high-leaping jump shot 15 feet out to give a 48-47 lead to Hank Iba's crew from Stillwater.

Hank Iba's crew from Stillwater, Hawaii but then ripped off 19 straight points and went on to a 74-78 triumph. Notre Dame (No. 18) rebounded from a loss to Chicago 86-78 as Lloyd Aubrey led the Irish scoring with 25 points.

In other leading games, Bradley, last year's NCAA tournament runner-up, nipped Oklahoma City 63-62 when City center Roger Holloway missed two free throws in the final minute; Louisiana State beat Texas A&M 79-91.

North Carolina State, ranked fourth nationally, meets Clemson Tuesday night, needing to win to the North Carolina for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead.

Three other nationally ranked teams play, Niagara (No. 10) meeting Cornell, Cincinnati (No. 18) playing Western Kentucky, and George Washington (also No. 19) facing Wake Forest.

Other leading games Tuesday night include Baylor - Oklahoma, Kansas - Tulsa, Pepperdine - New Mexico A&M, Washington (Mo.) - St. Mary's (Calif.).

Dodgers Lambast New Starting Date Of Spring Training

BROOKLYN, Dec. 14 — UP — The Dodgers sharply criticized Saturday the new major league rule which forbids spring training activity before March 1 and warned their players they had better work out and be in shape when they report to camp at Vero Beach, Fla., on that date.

"Since spring exhibition games begin on March 10, that gives us only nine days of workouts and that isn't enough — certainly not for the pitchers," said Buzzy Bavasi, the Dodger vice president. "Therefore we're going to expect all of our players to work out some place this winter and insist they be in shape when they get there."

The new rule was placed in effect last Tuesday at the joint meeting of the major leagues at the request of the players themselves. It stipulates that no club can ask a player to report before March 1 and that any player who goes to the training area before that date will not be permitted to accept expenses money.

"I want to say that all of the 16 major league player representatives, Carl Erskine of our club was the only one who voted against this rule," Bavasi commented. "Our players didn't want that rule."

According to Bavasi, four Brooklyn players have telephoned him asking permission to report earlier, but that he had to turn all of them down.

Southwest Cage Stock Rises As SMU, Tech Nip Toughies

The early-season wave of upsets riddled on in college basketball Tuesday, claiming Indiana and the Oklahoma Aggies as its latest "big name" victims.

A pair of teams from Texas staged Monday night's big surprise, Southern Methodist invading Indiana's home court to upset the nation's fifth-ranked team 82-79 and Texas Tech cashing in on a pair of last-minute free throws to beat 19th-ranked Oklahoma A&M 63-62.

That made a total of 11 defeats handed out to nationally ranked teams in the last three days.

Southern Methodist found it easier to handle Don Schmidt, Indiana's star, than it did the 10-inch all-American who had another great night, scoring 25 points. But the Mustangs were held to 25 points in the last half while they were scoring 37 in the first.

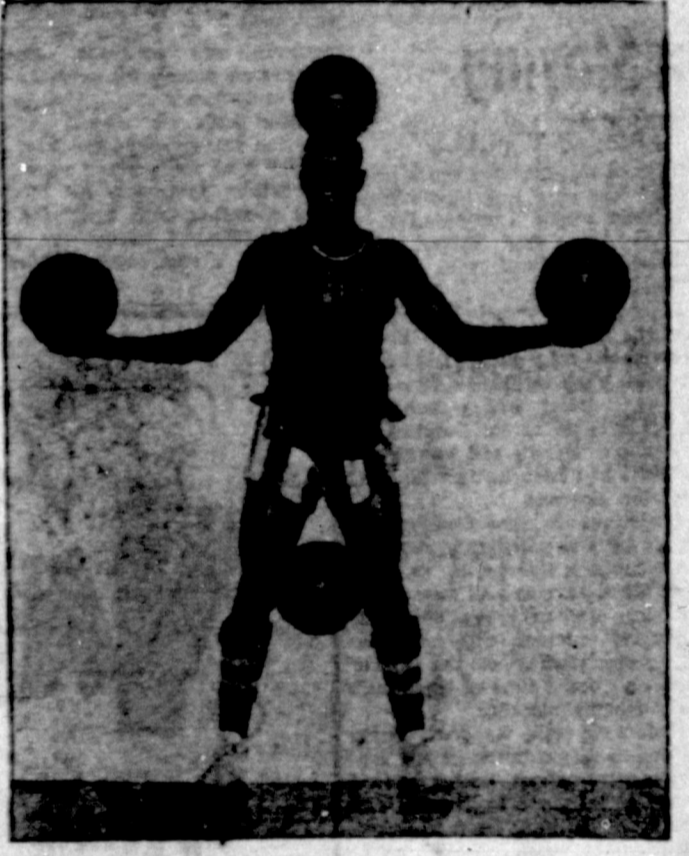

SMU's lead and his second-half scoring of 20 points wasn't enough, however, to help the Mustangs to a 63-62 victory over the Sooners.

Southern Methodist on the other hand, displayed a balanced attack that hit on 64 per cent of its shots as Jim Krebs led the way with 20 points.

Texas Tech, defending champion of the Border Conference, whipped the Oklahoma Aggies, defending champion of the Missouri Valley Conference, by matching the Aggies' at their famed ball control game. With six seconds left, the Aggies led by 48-47 but then Aggie forward Mack Carter fouled Tech's Harry Scaling. Scaling sank both shots for the victory.

Missouri, which upset Indiana just one week ago and then rocketed to the No. 9 national ranking by also upsetting Iowa, whipped its third straight rival from the Big Ten Monday night, downing Wisconsin 97-94.

Three other nationally ranked teams scored impressive victories Monday night. Iowa (No. 19) came back from its loss to Missouri to beat St. Mary's of California 80-69. Southern California (No. 14) was held to an 11-19 lead after five minutes by the University of

BASKETBALL WIZARDY — Such stunts as is shown above will be pulled by the touring Harlem Globetrotters Thursday night at Harvester Fieldhouse. ## LaSalle, Kentucky 1-2 In Cage Poll

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 — UP — LaSalle's Explorers who discovered the "promised land" when they won the national basketball championship last season, again led the United Press weekly college ratings Tuesday with 25 out of a possible 85 first place votes and a total of 335 points.

The board burners from Philadelphia, received seven second place votes, one for third place and two for fourth. They received three fewer first place votes than last week but picked up 13 points because of stronger second place support among the 35 outstanding coaches who make up the United Press rating board.

Kentucky zoomed into second place with 196 points while Illinois, which received two first place votes, ranked third with 175 points. North Carolina State with one first place vote was fourth with 135 points. Indiana with one first place vote fifth with 133 votes, UCLA with two first place votes sixth with 113 points, Duquesne with one first place vote seventh with 113 points, Utah with two first place votes eighth with 93 points, Missouri ninth with 79 points and Niagara and Iowa tied for 10th with 72 points.

A Major Upheaval There was a major upheaval in the rankings of the first top 10 teams. Kentucky, which seldom is far from the top in the ratings, moved from fourth to second.

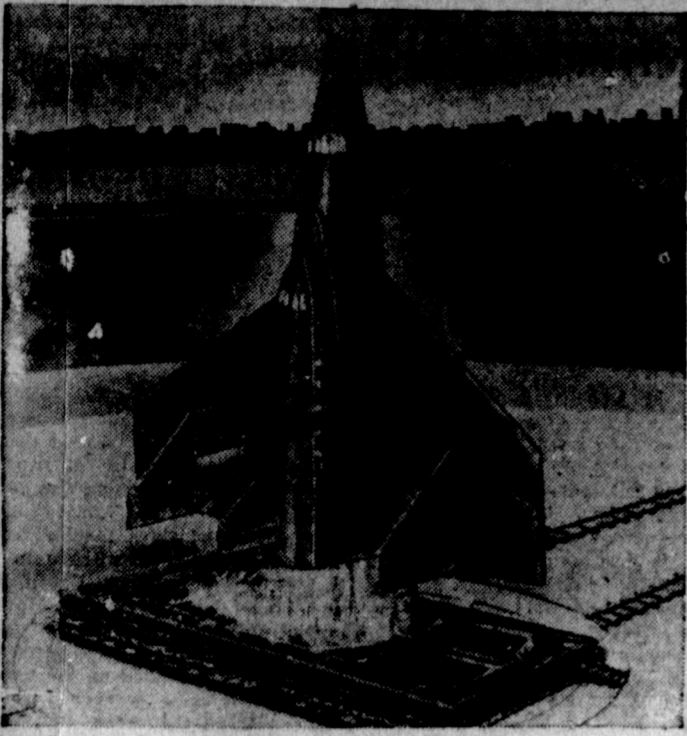

Others: St. John's 11, DePaul 9, Wichita 8, New York University, and Purdue 7 each, Washington 6, Villanova and Stanford 5 each, Alabama and Wake Forest 4 each, Louisville, Kansas, Xavier (Pa.), and California 3 each, Vanderbilt, Duke, Seton Hall, Oklahoma and Tulane 2 each, Texas Christian, Connecticut and Houston 1 each.

Dr. Walter R. Dornberger, missile expert, told the Chicago chapter of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences that in 10 or 15 years rocket-propelled airliners traveling 13,000 mph are a possibility. This is an artist's conception of what such a rocket airliner might look like. Dornberger is a former general in the German army.

Giant Machine Moves Houses

NEW YORK — (UP) — The nation's expanding network of new poured concrete highways until express highways is causing families to be uprooted in many areas to transplant specifications. It permits him to the old homestead to greener pastures, but nowadays they at least have a surefire way of moving it. The machine is a double-quick, and putting dollies under them. It is no longer unusual for a house to be hoisted from one site to another at a two-day clip, and it is the giant diesel-powered tractors that move and control the York's southern state parkway as well as the Pennsylvania and New Jersey turnpikes by a single house. Each moving concern, according to an article in Steelways, magazine of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and is valued at $5,000. Biggest thing in the big operation, says Steelways, is a machine that is "like nothing else in the world." Alone, it looks like a monstrous, misbegotten tractor — a house aboard, more like a mechanical box constrictor that closed its jaws around something. It can never hope to swallow. To its owner, a house-mover, James W. Hartshorne of Moorestown, N. J., it represents an investment of $100,000 — and is worth every nickel. Called the "tournamover," the machine was built by the R. ### Red Baubles Purchase Hit

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 14—UP—Merton Tice, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has urged Americans to stop buying Christmas ornaments and decorations manufactured by Russia or her satellites.
Tice called for a boycott and said it was "ridiculous" for companies in this country to buy such goods from countries with "Godless ideologies."
Tice issued his statement through national headquarters of the VFW here Sunday.
He said in the years 1947-1953 there was a rise from $40,000 to $4 million in retail sales of Christmas decorations imported from Soviet Russia and her satellites.
Tice said the Dec. 7 issue of the Communist Daily Worker reported that "a brisk trade has continued in the finely-wrought ornaments from Poland and Czechoslovakia which are used the world over to symbolize the season of peace and good will."

New Jap Foreign Minister Seeks Closer U. S. Relations

TOKYO, Dec. 14—UP—Hisato Ichimada, finance minister in the new Japanese cabinet, said Monday the government will follow a program designed to combat inflation and strengthen friendship with the United States.
In an exclusive interview with the United Press, the 61-year-old finance minister said the most important economic problem facing Japan is the problem of "deflation" and he intends to continue the deflationary program of the previous regime.
He indicated, however, that a "tougher attitude" would be taken by the government and it would "set examples" of austerity for the rest of the nation to follow.
"I have no intention of changing our deflationary policy," Ichimada said. "That is our policy and we will follow it although we may have to adjust from time to time to meet developing situations."
He said there absolutely were no plans to change the Japanese yen exchange rate.
Ichimada, who served six years as governor of the Bank of Japan and is highly respected by foreign economic experts, indicated that one of his reasons for accepting the cabinet post was to insure good relations with the United States.

'Newlyweds' Fined In Court

GREENWICH, Eng., Dec. 13—UP—Two young "newlyweds" were fined Monday on grounds both were women.
"There is more to marriage than the physical side," pleaded the "bridegroom," Violet Ellen Katherine Jones, 26.
She posed as a bachelor named Victor Eric Kenneth Jones in order to marry Joan Mary Lee, 21. The government said Jones was not a man, and therefore charged her and her "bride" under the perjury act of 1911 making false statement for the purpose of being wrongly listed in the marriage register.

Artificial Births Ruled 'Adultery'

CHICAGO, Dec. 13—UP—Superior Court Judge Gibson E. Gorman Monday assailed artificial insemination of a wife, with a third party as a donor, as adultery whether the husband consents or not.
He said that such a practice "constitutes adultery on the part of the mother." A child so conceived is "not born in wedlock," and hence is illegitimate, Gorman ruled, and the practice is "contrary to public policy and good morals."
Gorman's ruling was requested by Charles C. Cooley, attorney for Mrs. Mary B. Doornbos, suing George Doornbos, 48, for divorce on grounds of drunkenness.
Mrs. Doornbos sued on grounds of drunkenness. Doornbos had asked the right to visit his wife's child David, 5. Mrs. Doornbos claimed her husband had no rights or interest in the child, because the child was born following artificial insemination.

Swedish Girl To Wed Whitfield

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 14—UP—An attractive red-haired Swedish school teacher said Monday she plans to marry American Negro track and field star Mal Whitfield when he returns from a United Nations good will tour in February.
"We will be married after Mal returns," blue-eyed Birgit Johansson said.
Miss Johansson, 26, said she met the Olympic champion in Sweden in 1949 while he was touring with a team of American track stars. She came to this country in July, 1953, and is working here as a bookkeeper in a bank. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Axel Johansson, live in Gothenburg, Sweden.
Miss Johansson, who taught kindergarten in Sweden, said she and Whitfield had not yet announced their engagement "officially."
She said he will return from his world-wide tour in February and they will make their marriage plans then.

Student Survives Ordeal
ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 14—UP—A 28-year-old former medical student, who underwent a two-month, self-imposed ordeal in the Catskill Woods in the hope of dying from exposure, was under treatment and in good condition Monday.
The strange experience of George G. Murch, of Goshen, N. Y., began in early October. It ended Sunday when he was found by state troopers, "too-tired to run."

Pat, Mike Join In Another Story

BERLIN, N. H. — UP — Mike certainly teamed with Pat on this one.
Pat Hickey of Berlin was accompanied part of the way to work by his dog, Mike, as usual. But contrary to routine, Mike didn't return to the kitchen to stay with Mrs. Priscilla Hickey.
This day the dog stopped in front of the woodshed adjacent to the Hickey home. Mrs. Hickey couldn't make the dog move. When Pat returned, he investigated and ended up by shooting a bobcat that Mike had held at bay for hours. The state pays a $20 bounty for each bobcat.

Driving Like Crazy

Automobiles are here to stay. And, since we can't live without 'em, it's high time we started learning how to live with them. With so many millions of cars covering so many billions of miles on our highways there are bound to be thousands of unavoidable accidents due to mechanical failures, etc. According to statistics there are fewer accidents per mile of travel with cars than there were with horses and buggies. The trouble is there are more of us and we do a lot more traveling.

But a car in the hands of a careless or reckless driver (and who doesn't get careless or reckless on occasion) is a lethal weapon and we are killing and crippling for too many on our streets and highways. Probable due to carelessness, recklessness, or drunkenness—or are due to carelessness, recklessness, or drunkenness—or failure to watch for those things in the other fellow.

And now we learn that many "insane" people are driving cars. How to deal with the insane is one of humanity's oldest and most difficult problems, and one that the auto has complicated to a certain extent. But there are degrees of insanity just as there are degrees of sanity, and scientists tell us that the borderline between the sane and insane is scarcely visible, and in many cases hard to determine. This appears to be true since there are times when we all doubt our own sanity.

Therefore the question arises: How crazy should a person be before we deprive him of his rights and privileges as a citizen? And who is to determine whether he is to drive or not?

Naturally, a person crazy enough to have to be committed to an asylum is in no condition to drive an automobile. But if a patient is pronounced cured by competent doctors, and put back into circulation should he be refused a driver's license? Or should the rest of us have a certificate showing we have never been in a mental hospital before we are granted a license? Should we be required to pass a mental examination as well as a physical one? We have read that many very insane persons have higher IQs than the average among the sane.

If a patient is considered harmless by the medics, but still insane enough to be released in custody to someone considered sane, should that someone be responsible for his actions? Or should the medics who released him be held to account? Or the guy who issued him his driver's license?

One headline in a Denver newspaper recently screamed that "thousands of insane people are driving cars in Colorado and menacing the lives and limbs of all of us." We admit that thousands are "driving like crazy," and there are, undoubtedly, a few of us too crazy to be driving.

It seems to us that something could be worked out between the lawmakers and the medical men to protect us from those few. The recent accident in Denver involving a man who had been pronounced insane is deplorable.

THE NATION'S PRESS

CHANGE AND CIRCUMSTANCE
(The Wall Street Journal)
In Follansbee, West Virginia, there is considerable battling over plans to sell the Follansbee Steel Corporation's plant and move it to lock, stock and mill to Gadsden, Alabama.

In New York City there is less battle but equal controversy over the decision of John Wanamaker, one of the pioneers in the department store field, to close down its main downtown store and shift its selling emphasis to its suburban stores.

Each of these cases has some complex particulars, but together they have served to dramatize some of the economic forces that have been operating in two major sectors of our economy, heavy industry and retail selling. They also dramatize the difficult problems raised for people and the economy by changing circumstances.

The Follansbee Steel case has aroused a whole community; and not without reason, for this mill is a vital factor in the life of the community. Bitter charges have been made against the Follansbee directors, against financier Frederick Richmond who bought the mill, and against Republic Steel, which plans to repurchase and move it. This week Follansbee residents who are also stockholders obtained a Federal court order invalidating the sale and are busy seeking out other buyers to take it over and operate it where it is.

The management of John Wanamaker has been blasted with like fervor by its employees' union. The employees have started an intensive drive to raise enough capital to purchase the store and continue its operation.

It would be a happy circumstance if some equitable arrangement could be made to preserve each of these business operations for the benefit of the communities of a

Front For The National Education Association
This column has been pointing out that the National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools is just a clever scheme of the National Education Association to fool the public into believing that local voters are running their public schools rather than the National Education Association.

It will be remembered that I offered any one of the 35 members of this commission $500 if any of them would answer a few questions to determine whether tax-supported schools are in agreement with the Golden Rule, and offered $500 to anyone who would get one of them to do it for $500. None of them would do it because they have no real convictions that schools that violate the Golden Rule can really educate. Men are always willing to defend their real convictions.

Now I was very much interested in a report in the November 24th issue of Human Events, written by Felix Wittmer under the heading of "A Front for Nationalized Education." Anyone who is really interested in education and wants to know whether or not he is being used or duped should send $1 and get six copies of this issue of Human Events. Its address is 1835 K Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Just to give you a little idea, I want to quote from this issue: "The National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools, has 'arrived' as a great, ubiquitous (being everywhere at the same time) organization which is being used as a valuable aid in saving our public school system, and which therefore demands support of well-meaning citizens. Few people are aware of its origin and philosophy and the make-up of its promoters. Here are some facts for parents and civic leaders.

"About six years ago, Dr. James P. Conant, one-time President of Harvard, and Professor Paul R. Mort, of Columbia Teachers College, conceived the idea of the National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools. Conant is the ancient New Deal minion and protagonist of world government schemes; Mort received his training and has taught since 1928 at Columbia Teachers College. He has served in various capacities with the National Education Association.

"The Highlights Report of NCCPS, printed in 1951 by Time-Inc., while featuring the pictures of the 35 Commission members, does not highlight Conant and Mort; their established preferences for such left wing causes as federal aid to education and benevolent understanding for the Soviet Union are kept in the background. After all, successful business executives, whose corporations represent hundreds of millions of dollars, but who are not necessarily acquainted with the immutable laws of economics, represent the Commission.

"Business Week, May 12, 1951, describes as the Commission's chief aim an addition by 1960 of 520,000 new classrooms, 50 per cent more than we now have, and higher teachers' salaries. Where is the money to come from? Says Business Week, 'the Commission thinks state and federal aid will eventually be needed.'

"In the pattern of organizations which tend to make our once free education dependent on the central government, NCCPS plays a formidable role. The National Education Association itself, with its 29 departments, 24 commissions and committees, 14 headquarters divisions and one centralized council, has long realized that it needs the cooperation of semi-official organizations like the National Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, and of independent groups like the American Association of University Women, League of Women Voters, Public Education Association and National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools. While a graphic description would place these latter associations in the outer orbit of N.E.A., they are of much greater importance than mere satellites.

Apparent Independence
Their apparent independence gives weight to collaboration with NEA departments like the American Association of School Administrators, Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, National Association of Secondary School Principals and National Council for the Social Studies.

"The pamphlet 'Schools Are What We Make Them,' published by Bell & Howell Company, Chicago, Illinois, has been distributed by NCCPS. The title page carried the message: 'From the National Commission for the Public Schools...' On page 24, suggestively illustrated by a picture of the national Capitol, there is the following paragraph:

"Changes in federal legislation sometimes are urgently needed. Although state and national groups are likely to propose such changes, citizens' groups in thousands of communities must support them. An example of how this support is the quarter-century drive which has been required to obtain general federal financial aid for public education."

"While the NCCPS is apparently to function as a protector of the NEA lobby in its drive for federal aid, it is evidently also meant to confuse, intimidate and destroy the grass roots opposition to widespread socialistic education. Heavily subsidized by such traditional sponsors of left wing projects as the Carnegie Corporation (which granted the Commission $400,000 in two years), the Rockefeller General Education Board and Sloan Foundation — NCCPS, through its contacts with the Advertising Board might easily be fancied to

Dulles-Humphrey Showdown Could Tear Apart GOP Party

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — The vast Eisenhower program of encircling the Russo-Chinese Communist Empire with a global wall of military and economically strong nations friendly to the West will reach a showdown soon as a result of the Dulles-Humphrey differences over this problem. The struggle may tear apart both the Administration and the Republican Party.

Both Secretary Humphrey and Secretary Dulles are sincere and conscientious in their beliefs. No petty or personal bitterness enters into their dispute. Nor is it simply a question of money, although the Treasury head is naturally anxious to balance the budget, lower taxes and strengthen the nation's internal position. It involves this country's role in a prolonged cold war with the Reds throughout the globe.

In a sense, Dulles advocates former Secretary Dean Acheson's theory that the United States must build "positions of strength" against possible Russo-Chinese aggression around the world.

While the comparison can be drawn too fine, Humphrey leans toward Herbert Hoover's viewpoint that the U. S. will lose on all fronts unless it remains solvent and balances its world contributions against its resources.

Dulles' position is understandable. He and his predecessors, in accord with major Truman-Eisenhower policy, have organized a series of far-flung alliances designed to "contain" the Communists. With the possible exception of NATO, this anti-Russian coalition as of today amounts to nothing more than a paper structure.

Although these estimates are tentative and confidential, the cost of rearming and military maintenance of these Allies will amount to more than $3 billion annually. This includes money and materials required for NATO, SEATO, Korea, Japan, Formosa, Western Germany, and the proposed new alliance in the Middle East — namely, Turkey, Iran, Iraq and Pakistan. These figures apply only to military expenditures.

As a result of warnings by visiting statesmen from many of these lands, and by reports from his diplomatic representatives overseas, Dulles discovers that these people represent the people's grass roots movement, which of course it doesn't.

"During 1950, for instance, a total of 10,257 newspaper advertisements appeared in dailies and weeklies in every state of the union. Thirty full-page advertisements, 3,000 outdoor posters, 90,000 ad cards in buses, subway and street cars, hundreds of spot announcements on radio and television networks, milk bottle tags, auto tags and postage meters hit the American public in 1950 alone. The advertising firm of New Dealers Benton and Bowles prepared the ads."

The people who paid for these advertisements did not realize that they were tools promoting more centralization and more power for the National Education Association that is the driving force behind the ever-increasing growth of Karl Marx schools.

The internationalists would have you believe that patriotism is ridiculous sentimentality. But they're wrong. Patriotism is not based on a love of scenery. It is based on the fact that the American Constitution, for the first time in history, set up a system that preserved the individual's freedom. It did this by means of a system of checks and balances that prevents any individual or group from holding too much power too long. The internationalists want to give them complete power, with no check and no balance. But history proves that power decays, and that absolute power decays absolutely.

A belief in a government that protects us from this is patriotism. We are now lost in a period testing whether or not such a government can any longer endure. That's why the issue of the United States versus the United Nations is the major issue that becomes no less important through the fact that the politicians ignore it. The issue is whether your husband, your son, or the father of your children must risk his life on a foreign battlefield without due process of law. It is up to the public to bring the reluctant eyes of the politicians back to this issue of fundamental morality. This is patriotism.

Jonathan Yank

Secretary Humphrey cannot afford to express his horrified reaction publicly. But there is no doubt that he agrees with a recent statement issued by Senator Harry F. Byrd. The Virginian's criticism is significant, for he admires Humphrey as "one of the ablest men who have ever guided the Treasury."

"We have given away $40 billion to foreign nations, all of which have been added to the public debt. The first thing we should do is to eliminate aid to other countries, all of which have smaller debts than ours. . . . If we continue to pay Santa Claus to visit the world abroad, we can expect nothing but collapse of our currency and all the terrible consequences."

Moreover, Byrd has generally favored Ike's foreign policy.

Roving Reporter's Defense Of Early Roosevelt 'Quack'

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

C. R. Roseberry, the roving reporter of the Albany Times-Union, recently assigned himself to track down the C. J. Roosevelt who received belated recognition in these footnotes to history as a Friend of Man who sold an infallible cure for "consumption and the liver complaint" known as Dr. Larbor's extract of Lungwort, 100 years ago. Mr. Roseberry seems to share the theocratic delusion which sanctifies as a holy shrine the grave of a distinctly mortal politician at Hyde Park. For he writes, with arbitrary indifference to obvious fact, that "there is nothing in the record" of this tailboard quack of long ago "that looks dishonest."

Not that I would try to visit his sins upon his kinnery of remote degree who have enough of their own to answer for, I venture to insist that, on the face of things, this pioneer mountebank of a classical clan of such, was a swindler imposing on the hopes and fears of his contemporaries and, thus, a rogue. The claims of miraculous medical powers which he set forth to acquire the earnings of the sick poor as well as the ill-got profits of the predatory rich were patently false and fraudulent and addressed often to the despair of the dying. In fact, the debates which led to the adoption of the pure food and drugs act were shrill with denunciations of fakers who preyed on the hopes of the hopeless and, be it further said, of a journalism which took its title and more of the dirty proceeds.

Having set matters in their correct posture, I may relate that Mr. Roseberry asked Eleanor Roosevelt who this C. J. Roosevelt might have been and that, by her help, he was able to report that C. J. "really was a connection of the clan that produced the late president, though down a different branch of the family tree."

"His venture into pharmacy must have been a passing phase of his youth," Mr. Roseberry continues, "for he went on to become a practicing physician and lived to the age of 60. He married an Albany girl, Margaret Pruyn, the Pruyns, needless to elaborate, were one of Albany's first families."

Mr. Roseberry found no trace of a three-story brewing and bottling plant hard by the Hudson depicted in the circular published at the time and I would readily admit that no such institution ever did exist. As like as not, this faker bottled and bottled his buchu in his own kitchen and commissioned some wan consumptive to draw him the edifice and scenic background for a couple of quarts of his therapeutic hooch.

Mr. Roseberry was at first misled by the fact that the circular was dated 1854, a century ago this year. He then appealed to Eisenor, who referred the question to George Emilen Roosevelt in New York. He reported that the name of C. J. Roosevelt appeared twice in the family log, being father and son. Cornelius, the Quack, was born in New York, Dec. 4, 1850, and was graduated from medical college of the University of New York in 1847. Thereby, let it be seen, he was bound by conventional hippocratic undertaking when he peddled his worthless cure in 1854. George Emilen passed on the word that the miracle worker was a homeopath in Columbus, Ga., and later in Macon, where he died in 1880, not far from My Leader's prosperous speculations in building lots for desirous Democrats, from which Negroes are forever excluded by the text of the titles, at Warm Springs.

Following the, as it were, scent, Mr. Roseberry learned that Cornelius J. Roosevelt lived in hotels in Albany in 1844, 45 and '46 and operated a patent medicine "emporium" which was, he states, "equivalent of today's drug-store."

His quest led him to consultation with the current press whose front pages, like those of the leading English bulges of today, were given up solely to ads, peppered with preposterous claims of herb-growers. However, he found no ad for Roosevelt's Lungwort, the discovery, it appears, of one Larbor, otherwise unidentified, although "even the doctors ran ads, along with astrologists and the phrenologists."

"It was," he says, "the golden age of quacks. One of the big operators was Dr. James Durno, a 'rheumatic physician' who took all comers for a buck and a head and prescribed Mountain Indian liniment and Durno's Catarrh Snuff. Shaker syrup was a positive cure not only for TB but for erysipelas, ulcers, cancer and even pimples."

To dispose of the whole subject, I encountered at the Joe McCarthy rally in Madison Square Garden Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edision, the former governor of New Jersey and Secretary of the New York and son of the late wizard of Menlo Park who gave us the hair-pin burning in a bottle which turned 60-night into day and stepped up the rate of broken hearts on Broadway. With a shy feeling I asked Governor Edision had he noticed my reference to an ad for his late father's wonder-drug called Edision's polyform, which relieved "the terrible suffering of rheumatic pains" according to the text of an ad in Puck on Dec. 22, 1880.

Governor Edision said yes, he had. And he mentioned the name of the principal ingredient, which escaped my mind, however, as I turned to take the proffered hand of Senator Lehman, who reads me religiously and would not be put off without my autograph.

per, and has little or no talent for wrapping.

As for the presents she bought, she gave my family a real break—she spent twice as much on the McLemores as she did on her own family.

That broke me up a little, but a husband can't give in too much. Let a husband give in too much and he'll find himself not only washing the dishes, but drying them.

So I criticized a few of the presents. I questioned the choice of a trivet for a six-year-old niece. I also said I couldn't quite see the sense in sending a top hat to Uncle Orville, who operates a farm, but Mary didn't get mad. She told me she knew I wasn't quite myself from pain and lack of rest, and kissed me on the forehead; she told me not to worry about Christmas, and asked if I would like a glass of water.

After that there wasn't anything for me to do but tell her she was one in a trillion, strictly my gal, and how lucky a man I was to be married to a lady like her.

I don't deserve Mary, but am I glad I have what I don't deserve!

Christmas day is the nicest day of all. It beats Fourth of July, Thanksgiving, and even Easter. It has only one drawback—the days leading up to it.

They are horrible days. They are the days when man and wife come to hand to hand fighting. The battle is engaged over how much to spend, and how much is to be spent on who or whom.

Mary has her favorite people—who doesn't?—and I have mine. We decided, while throwing rights and lefts at one another, to spend about $300 on Christmas presents.

When this battle was over we kissed and made up—and then started fighting all over again about how it was to be spent!

I tried to be fair about the thing, and suggested that $250 be spent on my family. She didn't see eye to eye with me. I'll tell you that. So we settled on half and half—$150 for her family, and $150 for mine.

Then the real battle started. Over suits, of all things! I told Mary that I would like to send Aunt Deda something real nice. She said she would like to send Auntie Lee something real nice, too. I told her my aunt was nicer than her aunt, and she said, "Not in my book!"

She then proceeded to tell me all about her aunt, after which I told her all about mine—which got us nowhere at all.

I was just a few days out of the hospital, a victim of an automobile accident, when all this happened. There was no chance for me to shop, no chance for me to pick up my share, and no chance to fight her back—so she shopped.

I told her when she started to have the gifts mailed from the store, explaining that people would understand if we didn't wrap them this year.

Mary didn't go for that, so all the presents are here in the house, and she is going to wrap them, although she isn't a very good wrap-

Then the real battle started. Over suits, of all things! I told Mary that I would like to send Aunt Deda something real nice. She said she would like to send Auntie Lee something real nice, too. I told her my aunt was nicer than her aunt, and she said, "Not in my book!"

She then proceeded to tell me all about her aunt, after which I told her all about mine—which got us nowhere at all.

Christmas day is the nicest day of all. It beats Fourth of July, Thanksgiving, and even Easter. It has only one drawback—the days leading up to it.

They are horrible days. They are the days when man and wife come to hand to hand fighting. The battle is engaged over how much to spend, and how much is to be spent on who or whom.

Mary has her favorite people—who doesn't?—and I have mine. We decided, while throwing rights and lefts at one another, to spend about $300 on Christmas presents.

When this battle was over we kissed and made up—and then started fighting all over again about how it was to be spent!

I tried to be fair about the thing, and suggested that $250 be spent on my family. She didn't see eye to eye with me. I'll tell you that. So we settled on half and half—$150 for her family, and $150 for mine.

Then the real battle started. Over suits, of all things! I told Mary that I would like to send Aunt Deda something real nice. She said she would like to send Auntie Lee something real nice, too. I told her my aunt was nicer than her aunt, and she said, "Not in my book!"

She then proceeded to tell me all about her aunt, after which I told her all about mine—which got us nowhere at all.

PICTURE NEWS

AROUND THE WORLD

ON THE BUN—Many a hurdle comes between a performer and stardom, but singer-dancer Sheree North is showing that it's easy to get over some of the hurdles. The voluptuous blonde looks good in track garb in Hollywood as she keeps in shape by leaping over barriers on a local track.

HOLDING THE WAVES—This aerial view shows operations when sea-going cranes dumped earth to fill the last gap in a new dyke, closing off the sea, left, from what will be new land called the South East Polders in Holland. Note that a larger, reinforcing dyke is being built just behind the outer dyke. The engineering miracle stretches out from the village of Harderwijk.

A CATS MEOW—Cady de Padirac, who comes from a long line of distinguished white Persian cats, fits very snugly into the cup he won as the best feline in the International Cat Club show in Paris. Cady, who's owned by a Parisienne, doesn't seem very happy about the fact that he won that award.

HE HAS TROUBLES—Young Daniel Eisenberg, a student at a New York City public school, was submitting to the needle during a health test. Perhaps the lad felt he'd feel less if he wore a blindfold, but he seems to have changed his mind about that. After the worst was over—and even it wasn't very bad—Dan took solace in the fact that he was contributing to the advance of the medical science.

FIRST FLURRY—Rain and snow slowed traffic and communications in the Cleveland area when Jack Frost gave a sample of his wares with a killing spread. A repair man is shown lifting a fallen tree branch from some wires.

ANGELI DISGUISE—Pier Angeli, a beauty from Italy, accents her lovely features in Hollywood with Chinese good luck symbols—dramatic earrings and a swinging Buddha pendant. To round out the picture, Pier is playing now in American movies.

AUTUMN IN ENGLAND—Little girls are scampering like squirrels through the leaves of Green Park in London, and loading their strollers with firewood. The chill autumn winds had carpeted the park with colored leaves from the rows of trees, and the youngsters were having the time of their lives.

SHE'S IT—When the Adam Hat Company held a contest to choose "Miss Hat Check Queen," in Manhattan, it didn't take the judges long to choose lovely Margaret Neal. Margaret's the real thing because she works in a restaurant.

PRIZE HEIFERS—Cyrus Eaton is shown standing proudly between Shorthorn heifers at his farm at Northfield, O. On the left is the Ohio State Grand Champion female, Acadia Primula 3rd, with B&B Augusta, Kentucky's State Fair Reserve Junior Champion on the right. Eaton's broad business interests include iron ore, coal and steel as well as railroads, and raising registered Scotch Shorthorn cattle is his hobby.

CLOSE HARMONY—Rehearsing Cole Porter's new musical, "Silk Stockings," in New York finds the composer at the piano as Yvonne Adair, left, and Hildegarde Neff warm up their pipes. Don Ameche will co-star in the show with Miss Neff, and it's scheduled for a Broadway opening late in December.

WINNING STYLE—A corduroy skirt which can fit any girl in the 7 to 14 range won for girls' accessories in the annual Hess Brothers contest in Allentown, Pa. The contest encourages manufacturers to create more multi-purpose and space saving products.

UNHIDDEN TALENTS—Even with her face covered, shapely Joan Rawlings manages to attract more than a fair share of stares on the beach at Miami. Perhaps she didn't want to get too sunburned, but if that's the reason for the odd disguise, she certainly must be mighty afraid of old Sol.

WELL EDGED—A frivolous black velvet dinner hat takes wing when Vaughan O'Toole encircles this imaginative creation in New York with a brim of delicate black feathers. An intimate dinner for two might be the right occasion for wearing it.
