He's No Nixon

Allan Shivers has run into the kind of bind that Dick Nixon encountered — and Nixon turned it into votes — but it's going to be the nearest political trick of the century if Allan can do the same. Remember the famous Nixon heart-washing? It was right about the time Ike was beginning to find out that running for President wasn't covered in any of the manuals he'd studied at West Point. He was being given bad advice by the same GOP "liberals" who are still doing business with him; and he was more scared than heroic. It was at that time somebody of enterprising disposition turned up the fact that Dick Nixon had had a lot of big money backing him in his race for the Senate. The evidence wasn't very damning, and nothing illegal was claimed even by the most ardent mudslingers. But Ike's heart got fluttery and he did his famous lily-liver act and refused to say whether he wanted to let Nixon stay on the ticket or not. Nixon had only one out and he took it. He got on TV, with his attractive wife, and told the American people how he rose from the ranks, like an Horatio Alger hero, and that he loved his Mom and Pop, and everybody's Mom and Pop, and also dogs and children and if the American people were against a fellow like that — well he'd just go off in a corner somewhere and die. There wasn't a dry eye in the country when Dick got through; and if the polls had been open that night, Dick would have pulled four votes for every one of Ike's. But Dick Nixon in 1952 is not Allan Shivers in 1954. Whatever else Allan Shivers might be, he is not an innocent man — and he would look goofy wrapped in the white cloth of a Vestal Virgin. He isn't going to be able to Nixon it out. There is, to be sure, nothing illegal about taking a fast profit (before taxes of course) of $425,000 on a $25,000 investment held just a few months. Allan Shivers knows that, but will the voters understand. We'll still count ourselves in Shivers' camp. We like his politics and we can stomach the CIO-PAC man, Yarborough. We're not ready to turn the State of Texas over to the labor union bosses. But let's face it, comrade — the row is going to be a long one and a rough one. As we said before, the governor has a real battle on his hands for the first time. And it's going to a wowser.

Equal Partners

In past times, it has been the practice to assay the health of the economy with the thermometer of production — the volume of goods and foods which flow from farm and factory. This still is and will remain vitally important. However, more and more economists are stressing another sort of index, which once was given relatively little attention — consumption, as represented by the volume of retail business. In other words, the degree of success attained by retailing in its efforts has the strongest possible bearing on whether times are good or not good in this country. High production can be maintained only if the goods move off the store shelves and into American homes. Mass-distribution is mass-production's equal partner.

The American Way

SALESMEN AT BAY AGAIN
By GEORGE FECK
American business is currently undergoing rapid changes in its approach to salesmanship, and this possibly, more than any other single development, will go far toward averting a major economic slump. It has been many years since any real sales effort has been needed by most businesses. We have lived through times of scarcity when anyone could sell anything, and through years of inflationary spirals when consumers had plenty of money to spend. Through this period, the formerly important salesman lost his place in the sun because business leaders assumed the attitude that "we do not have to worry about salesmen because we can sell whatever we make." As a customer, I welcome this change of atmosphere in the sales arena. It is good to have the producer once again camping on my doorstep instead of my having to camp on his. It is refreshing to witness members of the business community speaking in terms of sales campaigns, dealer promotions and all-out efforts. A superbly developed system of sales, merchandising and advertising was in large degree responsible for America having built up such a high standard of living. The competitive nature of business — indeed, the rivalry of sales people — has consistently helped keep goods plentiful and prices down. We have been able, through progressive sales methods, to mass-produce many products that otherwise would have remained available to only a favored few. By returning to a revitalized selling economy, we are going to find more and better goods produced; and we are going to witness an increasingly larger national income. There is an interesting new twist to the selling sales era, however, that was pointed out a short time ago by one of the nation's outstanding sales executives, Ben

IS YOUR PURSE SENSITIVE?

Thomas Jefferson, while commenting on heavy taxes, said: "The purse of the people is the real seat of sensibility. Let it be drawn upon largely, and they will listen to truths which could not excite them through any other organ." Well, everybody's purse today is being "drawn upon largely." But are enough of us aware of just how heavily we are being taxed to bring about action toward reducing the heavy drain on our pocketbooks and on the very vitality of our productive economic system? Taxes levied against each of us by local, state, and national governments are so scattered in their method of "take" that a great many people do not realize how "largely" their purse is being hit. In other words, the whole truth about taxes is not readily apparent. But piecemeal facts about taxes can be collected. Taken together, these facts are enough to make even complacent taxpayers demand that the size and cost of government be drastically whittled down, and that the whittling begin at once.

Record Spending

1. Expenditures of the national government in the current fiscal year will total approximately $70 billion. This is the highest level of spending ever reached by the U.S. government except for the three World War II years and the Korean crisis year, 1950-53. It is more than twice as high as the $32 billion spent in 1940, and almost eight times the $8.1 billion spent in 1940. In actual purchasing power, the estimated 1954 expenditures are almost twice those of 1948 and four times those of 1940. 2. The cost of government has far outpaced the expanding wealth of the nation. In 1930, federal, state, and local taxes took 11.9 per cent of the net national product (the value of all the goods and services produced), and in 1940—and this, we must never forget—these taxes took 27.8 per cent. At the same time, the national debt rose from $16 billion to $75 billion—and this, we must never forget, is a debt upon the taxpayers of America and no one else. 3. It is now estimated that the average John Doe taxpayer has to pay out more in taxes than he spends on food for his family. When we average up all the families, regardless of size, whose breadwinners had incomes of $3,500 a year in fiscal 1953, we find that the average family paid $836 in direct and indirect federal taxes, and $262 in state and local taxes. The total was $1,097 or 39.1-40 a month. This is 31.3 per cent of income. 4. The family head who made $4,500 in the same year paid $1,148 in federal taxes, and $346 in state and local taxes for a total of $1,494—or 33.2 per cent. The family with a $7,500 income for fiscal 1953 paid $2,801 in taxes, or 37.3 per cent of income. The family with a $15,000 income paid $6,618 in taxes, or 44.1 per cent of income. 5. Business corporations paid taxes on the average, amounting to 10.5 per cent of gross sales receipts. The taxes were more than three times larger than the dividends paid by the companies from which the average figures were compiled, and more than four times larger than their retained earnings or net profit. Admittedly we live today in an atmosphere of international tension. We need to spend adequately for national defense. But who can say with conviction that $7 billion couldn't be cut from the proposed $37.5 billion Department of Defense appropriation and at least one billion cut from the $4.3 billion for "mutual military aid program"? And who can prove to the hard hit taxpayer that, in these critical times, when the economic health of our nation is so vitally important, a substantial savings couldn't be made in the proposed $20 billion for "other expenditures"? The health of our private enterprise system is at stake. No longer can businessmen ask solely about a proposed policy or action. "Is it sound?" They must ask, "What is the effect on our tax position?" Progress, in many cases, is being halted not enough capital is left after taxes to create enough new jobs for the youth. These are true facts. They should move all citizens to demand an immediate drastic action in the size and cost of government.

Internal Revenue Commissioner

T. Coleman Andrews has decided his agency's instructions to taxpayers on how to fill out various tax forms are too bulky, complicated, and technical. He reportedly wants more simple phrases, presented in brief form. "I'll even use comics if that will help make it easier for taxpayers to fill out their returns." Mr. Andrews is quoted as saying: "I doubt that the use of comics will give taxpayers anything to laugh about. It's much easier to part with our money. Perhaps we would get a lot more fun out of the whole thing if the taxes themselves were 'presented in brief form'—instead of just the instructions on how to pay them."

Walkout By Ike Would Leave No GOP Candidate

By RAY TUCKER

Washington — Sherman Adams' bare suggestion that President Eisenhower may retire to his Gettysburg farm after his present term has forced Republican leaders to realize that their Presidential cupboard is not too well stocked with possible replacements. And nobody believes that the White House Chief of Staff did not issue this warning without the head man's knowledge and approval. Aside from the stark fact that Ike might quit, the Adams' notice was apparently designed to pressure Congress into enacting most of the Administration's legislative program. Eisenhower himself has said that the GOP would, deserve to lose the Congressional elections next fall, if Congress did not pass the bill on the Eisenhower program, which he conceives his suggestions to be.

Unlike his immediate predecessor, Eisenhower does not particularly enjoy the White House office. He is not awed by his high estate. In view of the honors and experience he attained as European Commander in World War II and the head of SHAPE, he does not possess the appetite for political intrigue which drives Harry F.D.R. and Harry S. Truman. Should his popularity not endure, and should the present or the next Congress snub the majority of his legislative proposals, he might easily feel that he has had enough. After all the Republican bigwigs sought him out in 1952 because they thought that Robert A. Taft could not end their long exile, and with the implied promise that the Party would do his bidding. Thus the prospect of 1954 under a substitute nominee for 1954 has become a reality. Anyway, if only speculatively, the leaders interested in retaining control of the Executive branch of the government are looking over the field. And they are not too happy over these tentative and preliminary glimpses. Two once obvious names have been ruled out — namely, Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Vice-President Richard M. Nixon of California. Even if Governor Dewey should consent to run again and defeat such a political name as Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., the President-makers would not nominate him soching time. The man at Albany has made too many enemies among the conservative, midwestern faction. He is, perhaps, more unpopular now than he was after the 1948 debate. Vice President Nixon's reputation has fallen to the ground like last night's skyrockets. As the man who first inspired and then tried to cut off the Army-McCarthy controversy, he led the Administration into a mess and a trap. His characteristic suggestion of American intervention in Indo-China, in view of the eventual Eisenhower-Dulles retreat, were also deplored at the White House and on Capitol Hill. As forecast by veteran observers when he was viligated as the "strong man" at Washington and advanced as a possible Eisenhower substitute, the young Californian's political slips are showing. The fact is that there are no Senators or Governors of sufficient stature to qualify, through achievement or popular appeal, for the Republican Presidential nomination.

It is impossible for the foresighted politicians to decide now what kind of candidate the times and conditions in 1956 will require. But barring a war, when it is assumed that Ike would have to run again, the likeliest figure appears to be George M. Humphrey of Ohio, Secretary of the Treasury. He has made a fine impression on the politicians and the businessmen. He has a Taft man in 1952. He is a man of stature and assistance even to our Allies, unless they co-operate with us wholeheartedly. He may appeal to the skeptics on this issue. Despite these qualifications, however, his availability will depend on business and financial conditions, since that is the field in which he is supposed to be an expert. Another Cabinet possibility is Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson of Michigan. However, he runs second to Humphrey as an alternative choice, if the walkout on the GOP.

Fair Enough....

Special New Jersey Red Probe Amateurish Effort

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK — I have a scrappy, amateurish little "report" from a special commission of the state of New Jersey which took five years to "investigate Communist and Un-American activities in the public schools and tax-supported colleges and universities." This pathetic book, composed of five members, kicks off with an admission that none of them was a trained investigator and that they did not have trained investigators at their service. It labored lightly and, after five years, brought forth a meager report of about seven and one-half small pages of widely separated lines of type. The spirit of the document is expressed in a disavowal of "witch hunting." This is the standard term of all inept, unqualified committees and of all heel-dragging Republican papers and politicians, intended to intimidate the members of the commission, that New Jersey has been as heavily infested as any other state with the possible exception of California and New York. The Fort Monmouth installation is an important phase of the menace and would be the inevitable destination of any thorough, competent investigation of Communism in New Jersey.

The most important item in this flabby document is a statement that the commission's written records have been placed in a filing cabinet in the state library. That may be true. But Mrs. W. H. Hardie, of Short Hills, a lady of public spirit with the courage of a fight, tells me that this data is held in absolute secrecy.

Mrs. Hardie said: "Last September, I went to Trenton with the consent of a member of the assembly to use his name. I asked anyone, including a member of the legislature, could get at the files. The state librarian sent up to the chief justice's office for a ruling and the reply came down, 'Good-God, no — it would blow the lid off the state of New Jersey.'"

Mrs. Hardie, the wife of a manufacturer of steam boilers, said the member whose name she invoked was Nick Joyce, of Essex County, which includes Newark. She said further that when Mr. Joyce himself asked for a look at the files, a member of the state commission on education said no body could see them.

The Chief Justice is Arthur Vanderbilt. He served one term as chief justice of the state, and is a Republican in the same sense that Eisenhower and his palace guard are. He is a Republican of the camp of Tom Dewey, Earl Warren, and Clifford Brown. The state commission on education was set up to hop aboard the Ford Foundation's future political safari into the realms of government, fair, case, incidentally, was one of the two suggestions of more or less Republican hue who procured a mysterious writ of good citizenship from Ike to Arthur J. Goldsmith, of the Waldorf Tower, and got himself invited to the White House. The other was Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania. Goldsmith is versatile and pushful, but publicly tends to undo his schemes. Therefore, he tries to shun it except that his vanity has him try to do it about that "endorsement" from Ike.

Vanderbilt, like Warren, of California, who is using the bench of the Supreme Court as a baby-kissing forum for 1956, is a politician as well as a grandiose jurist. He has a machine of his own, and twin sons in the legislature with a machine of their own. Attorney General Herb Brownell, Dewey's old campaign manager and a genius of the anti-McCarthy forces in the Eisenhower executive branch, has now projected the Department of Justice into the problem of fighting back Communists in New Jersey. He did this by appointing one William Finley Campkin, a protégé of Vanderbilt, to head a new unit of the Newark Evening News, would "obliterate the need for Congressional investigations. It would do nothing of the kind and it might make them all the more necessary."

The commission report dealt with a long time and never could get it into words that made sense. And the criticisms included such best-selling records of hers as "Somebody Bad Stole de Wedding Bell" and "Santo Baby."

On a torn piece of newspaper: "Beebe, the desk." Turns out to be news that Luchin Beebe, who with Charley Clegg now owns the Virginia City Territorial Enterprise, works daily at the desk which, authentically, was used by Mark Twain when he had a job on the same quip newspaper. Beebe has a new book from Stanford University Press due in September. It is called "Constock Commotion," the story of the famed lode. Stanford offers a photograph of Beebe telling at the Twain desk and next to a new car, you can't think of anything you'd rather have signed at Coors, with just a trace of flourish.

Lines of a cigarette package: "Coward, twice." Noel Coward has a new book out in July, a highly personal affair, containing a review of the bitter years for Coward and the world between 1936 and 1945. This is his second autobiography. The first covered his first 31 years of life. This picks up from there and goes through the war years. A fascinating, grim book.

with her hardly could have been more futile. It says the commission's files are in the state library, but doesn't say whether they can be examined by citizens. And it says of four suspects, who were come upon, only that their names were turned over to the FBI and the state police. That is precisely what all the anti-McCarthy fanatics have been demanding for years, knowing that the FBI and state police have to wait for their respective Departments of Justice to act on the information.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NOTES ON PAPER: Scribble saying: "Look into Northwest Airlines schedules for Seattle flights." Eight words involving a lot of Americans, family things, vacation and plans. It started with a towhead of two years old named Katie Schmitt who, at a Western farm and now she is Katie S. Sharpless and is 96 and her granddaughter, who is a television actress, is taking her out to see Katie, who hasn't put eyes on him since they were two weeks old. Since you are married to the actress, you decide to go along for the ride and, maybe, get up to Vancouver Island during the two weeks.

Another scribble: "Dr. George Ferris." You dig into your mind for an hour and it comes up. Ferris is a dentist who entered a contest, just one of those millions who write a few words on a piece of paper and mail it in and forget about it, secure in the conviction that nothing will come of it. But for Ferris something came of it. He won a South American trip for himself and his wife in a contest staged by a company that has a clinic in Seattle, and other other bad jobs. "What comic moment did Dr. Ferris have in mind when he entered the equivalent of $4,000? Just say that there is a dentist who is feeling no pain today."

Short note from musical comedy star Carol Bruce now starring in London in "Big Boy." "The theatre-goers here like you they like you. Here in England they have a sort of unswerving faith that is quite inhumane as far as our American applause. They stamp their feet and the sound becomes overwhelming. I've been notified by mail that Princess Margaret has seen the show twice and will arrange an audition where I can be formally presented to her, and I feel young in heart about it. I keep thinking about my daughter, Julie, whose one request when I promised her she could come to visit in London this summer was, 'May I please visit the King and Queen?' I explained that there was no King, but there was a lovely Queen, 'Fins,' she said. Children are laconic."

Back of an envelope: "Graham & Kitt." Turns out to be a memo about a bright young man of the theatre, music, typewriter and inventions named Rony Grayson, who distinguished "New Faces" both as a singer and a model. Out of Buffalo, where Rony once was part of a music combination playing for a one-time club called Chia's Pagoda, comes a note from Glenn Rosney, professional musician: "It is a pity, the general public's music taste is usually poor and unpredictable. To deny Eartha Kitt possesses talent would be sheer stupidity. Still, the talents of Rony Grayson, Al Cocco, Dorothy, Robert Gary, Joan Carroll, Fred Lynde and others far exceed Miss Kitt's and she has the same ability to render a competent imitation of French singers. A style characterized by a tone and so-called sexy phrasing. This latter quality is, at least to me, artificial and affected. Such things annoy me a great deal. This is what comes of knowing not much about music. You've tried to say just this about Kitt for a long time and never could get it into words that made sense. And the criticisms included such best-selling records of hers as "Somebody Bad Stole de Wedding Bell" and "Santo Baby."

On a torn piece of newspaper: "Beebe, the desk." Turns out to be news that Luchin Beebe, who with Charley Clegg now owns the Virginia City Territorial Enterprise, works daily at the desk which, authentically, was used by Mark Twain when he had a job on the same quip newspaper. Beebe has a new book from Stanford University Press due in September. It is called "Constock Commotion," the story of the famed lode. Stanford offers a photograph of Beebe telling at the Twain desk and next to a new car, you can't think of anything you'd rather have signed at Coors, with just a trace of flourish.

Lines of a cigarette package: "Coward, twice." Noel Coward has a new book out in July, a highly personal affair, containing a review of the bitter years for Coward and the world between 1936 and 1945. This is his second autobiography. The first covered his first 31 years of life. This picks up from there and goes through the war years. A fascinating, grim book.

The Nation's Press

AN ISSUE THAT WILL NOT DOWN

(Chicago Tribune)

It might be assumed from the horrified clucking of the softboiled press, the New Dealers, and the New Deal Republicans that the New York Times, Pentagon hearings had demonstrated that Sen. McCarthy harbored some sinister design to overthrow the executive power. It is charged that by challenging Presidential directives, he seeks to undermine the theory of a government of separated powers and to usurp the prerogatives of the executive.

Yes this is no new dispute. It dates back to the administration of the first President, and it has been very much alive for more than seven years. A great many other members of Congress in addition to Sen. McCarthy have protested that it is not the legislative, but the executive branch, which maintains the existence and rights of the other in this controversy.

The controversy involves the question whether the President, merely by writing a statement under his own signature, can decree that Congress be denied knowledge of the official acts of officers and employees of the executive department. In the recent hearings, this question came up in two ways. It involved the right of the senate permanent investigations subcommittee to subpoena and compel testimony from members of federal loyalty boards on the clearance of alleged subversives in government employment.

It also revolved around the right of the chairman or members of the subcommittee to receive classified documents — those stamped "Secret," "Confidential," or "Restricted." A paraphrase, or original, of such a document, originating with the FBI and sent by that agency to the department of the army, came into Sen. McCarthy's hands.

ON HONEYMOON IN JAMAICA

On honeymoon at the Tower Isle Hotel, Jamaica, B.W.I., during the last ten days of June, were Mr. and Mrs. Carl D. Hare of Amarillo. Mrs. Hare is the former Berenice Homer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Homer, 1327 Charles. She graduated in June from Oklahoma University. The couple was married June 10 in Pampa.

RUTH MILLET

The term, "boy crazy," is one that parents would do well to drop from their vocabularies in dealing with their teen-age daughters.

Over and over again that term appears in letters from girls who feel their parents don't understand them.

Such girls write:

"My parents yell 'boy crazy' at me every time I try to talk to them about dating."

Or they accuse:

"I'm NOT boy crazy. My parents just don't want me to have the fun and good times dating and going to dances that all the other girls have."

Let's take a good, hard look at the term "boy crazy." What does it mean anyway? Does it signify that a girl likes boys and wants them to like her; that boys have suddenly become very important in her thinking; that she would like to have a boy friend of her own; that she thinks life without dating is dull and boring?

If that sums it up, isn't being "boy crazy" not crazy at all, but just the normal way for a girl who is growing into womanhood to feel and think?

And if it is perfectly normal and natural why should parents fear and resent it, and cheapen it by labeling it "boy crazy"?

When they do, they build a wall of misunderstanding between themselves and their daughters.

"Don't tell me to have a talk with my parents. I can't talk to them. They just tell me I'm boy crazy," writes a 17-year-old whose parents refuse to let her go out with boys.

And so these girls seek help from outsiders. They can't discuss a natural, normal emotion with their parents because their parents already have the answer for it. "Boy crazy."

Any parent who wants his daughter's complete confidence and trust should avoid that term whenever dating is discussed.

Improve Food Practices Of Children Says Harvard's Nutrition Department

What Baby is after each time he cries is a signal to his mother. The cries all sound alike at first, but later on you'll begin to discover that he cries in one way when he's hungry, in another after he's eaten. If he does cry after he's eaten, most likely it means that he's wet, or that he didn't get up all of the air bubbles. When you do start to put him to bed, hold him for a little while if he isn't sleepy. In a short while, you'll be able to judge why he's crying and to take care of him quickly.

Generally, it's a good idea to give Baby his nap right after his noon meal. He's more willing to go to bed after he's eaten than he is if he's been allowed to return to his play.

You might try getting him undressed and into his sleepers before feeding him, since it will help to get him into the mood for sleep.

Any illness will upset Baby's sleep schedule. He's forced to stay in bed all of the time, and often the bed takes an unpleasant association because he's known discomfort there.

To get him back into his sleep habits, try moving the bed to a different part of the room or give him a new toy to take to bed with him.

Be careful not to show your concern or the poor sleep habits will take hold more firmly.

The Department of Nutrition at the Harvard School of Public Health has conducted intensive nutrition education studies in schools. Some of these studies, sponsored in part by The Nutrition Foundation, Inc., are described in a monograph, "Nutrition Education in Elementary and Secondary Schools."

The Department of Nutrition at Harvard believes that it is possible to improve the nutritional practices of large groups of people by improving the food practices of children. Most children attend elementary and secondary schools. If these children have an opportunity to learn and practice principles of good nutrition in school, they will acquire better food habits and attitudes which will carry over into adulthood. In time these will become the habits and attitudes of their children.

This group feels that nutrition education programs are making available to children nutritional information and opportunities to ex-

Real Beauty Needs Attractive Manners

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Some older women, who've learned the art of make-up, possess a good figure and have excellent clothes sense could be stunning. But a few unbecoming mannerisms prevent them from being the poised, extremely attractive women they should and could be.

Like the woman, for instance, who'll whip out her compact, comb and lipstick to repair her make-up in a crowded restaurant in the middle of her dinner partner's conversation.

Or, another, who twiddles her unusual bracelet while her friend desperately tries to describe her new dress.

If both these women knew how annoying these mannerisms were, half the battle would be won. The other half would be to acquire a little self-control or poise.

The first woman could win her dinner partner's eternal admiration by retreating to the powder room for make-up repairs. (And this way, she won't reveal any beauty secrets, either.)

The second could learn to wear her jewelry just to complete a smart costume. And once she puts on her bracelet, she should forget about it.

Poise is something that, when acquired, can open doors to new friends, ideas and a happy outlook on living.

The students were asked to write short unsigned essays on "What I Think and Feel About Food." From these a questionnaire was assembled. This questionnaire had now been administered to approximately 2000 students. When the results become available it is hoped that they will provide a guide in planning more effective nutrition education programs. Programs based on the nutritional knowledge and food practices of students and embracing their interests, experiences, and beliefs.

The role of attitudes in the learning process is presented in the current issue of Nutrition Reviews by Dr. Helen S. Lockhart of the Harvard School of Public Health.

Strawberries And Ice Cream Loaf Is Tempting And Quickly Prepared

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor

How does a career woman, busy from Monday through Friday, handle her weekend entertaining?

Let's go to Weston, Connecticut, and get an answer from Mrs. Dan Mason. Her Strawberries and Ice Cream Loaf is something her friends rave about.

She says she finds it practical when baking angel food cakes to bake two loaves from one package of mix. If but a few guests are expected, one loaf is then put into the freezer.

Incidentally, this shape and size of cake is especially good for compact packing into either a top-of-refrigerator freezer or a deep-freeze locker type.

Both berries and ice cream come from the freezer to complete this springtime dessert. Mrs. Mason scoops out the center of the loaf and fills it with many spoonfuls of vanilla ice cream to be topped with strawberries, easily defrosted while the cake bakes. More berries are passed around in a bowl.

Strawberries and Ice Cream Loaf (Makes 6 servings)

One package (14 ounces) angel food mix, 1 pint vanilla ice cream, 1 package (10 ounces) quick-frozen sliced strawberries, thawed.

Prepare angel food mix as directed on package. Four batter quickly into two greased 8 x 5 x 3-inch loaf pans. Cut gently through batter to remove large air bubbles. Bake at once in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 20 minutes, or until cakes spring back when pressed gently.

Cool in pans, upside down, until cold, 3 to 3 hours. Then loosen from sides with knife and gently remove cakes. Make a rectangular cavity about 1 1/2 inches deep in top of one loaf by removing a section of cake with sharp knife and fork; leave a 1-inch wide outer rim all around cavity.

Fill with vanilla ice cream. Garnish with a few strawberries. Serve with remaining strawberries.

Relaxing Aids Girl's Beauty

The most important beauty lesson a girl can learn is that of relaxation. A relaxed, attractive girl is always more appealing than her beautiful, but nervous and tense friend or sister.

So, whenever you have the opportunity, relax. "Let go" physically and mentally. And if you haven't the opportunity, make it. There are several instances during the career girl's working day when she can take advantage of a restful minute or second.

For example, what about the time you waste waiting for that elevator or phone call? Instead of fretting and creating more nervous tension, you should be relaxing. Just let the tense muscles go limp and allow pleasant thoughts to occupy your mind.

Try this several times and as your brief relaxation periods increase, you'll notice you won't have that exhausted feeling at the end of the day. Your job will seem more interesting, too.

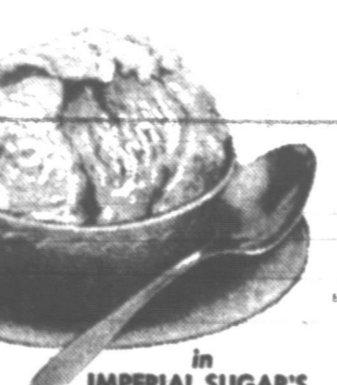

As soon as you arrive home from the office, try this simple routine for rest and relaxation. Start by taking a lukewarm bath filled with rich, foamy soapsuds. Allow yourself 30 minutes to relax completely, letting soothing suds do the trick.

After you're completely dry and have put on a comfortable robe, pour some witch hazel over a deep dish of ice cubes and dip your washcloth into it. Then, seated in a soft chair (with footstool) lay the washcloth gently on your forehead and eyes. Instantly, you'll feel cooler and refreshed.

Treat yourself to a glass of ice-cold lemonade. Then gather all those letters you weren't in the mood to answer. Now that you're relaxed, cool and rested, handling your correspondence will be a delight instead of a chore.

Protect the outside of a wooden salad bowl with a few thin coats of fresh white shellac.

Scout Attendance At Camp Ki-O-Wah Sets A Record

The largest number of Boy Scouts in history attended Camp Ki-O-Wah this summer. Paul Beisenhers, council Scout executive, was back in Pampa today, following the conclusion of the fifth week.

A total of 528 Boy Scouts attended camp, a total that does not include the 334 Cub Scouts and their fathers who were on hand two weekends, Beisenhers said. Breakdown on weeks for the regular campers was 303, the first week; 197, the second; 190, the third; 185, the fourth; and 80 the fifth and last.

Tops 1953
That was about 15 per cent more than in 1953, the executive pointed out. And, till this year, 1953 saw the highest camp attendance in history, with the Region Nine Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico — award last year for the highest percentage of eligible Scouts who camped during the summer. Beisenhers expects the 1954 percentage to be about the same.

Some 11% of the 160 non-swimmers in the five weeks of camp learned to swim at the end of their week, the executive continued.

An "almost unbelievably small number" of Scouts suffered injury during the five weeks, the executive said. Most serious was a broken finger. Another with the mumps was sent home. And there was the usual number of small cuts, bruises and sunburns.

"They could not have played around home without getting hurt more than they did at camp," Beisenhers opined.

At Final Camp
Among the troops on hand for fourth week of camp were Troop

Pump Priming Thumbed Out As Unemployment Relief

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The Eisenhower administration has definitely rejected "pump priming" as a device to relieve U.S. unemployment.

President Eisenhower indicated this course of action in his March 26 press conference statement that no "slush fund" emergency program is needed. Developments since that time have confirmed the administration belief that indirect methods of bolstering the U.S. economy are better than government relief of any kind.

What this means is that the plan proposed by AFL President George Meany, Harvard Economist Sumner Slichter, Democratic Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois and others for a federal government action program to relieve unemployment is going to be ignored.

The political implications of this decision are summed up in a belief that while had employment conditions may make it possible to lose an election, good employment conditions, by contrast, can't win the coming November elections.

There is plenty of optimism in Washington for an October pickup in business. One indication of this is found in the Federal Reserve Board's action, reducing bank reserve requirements and providing more credit for the normal fall harvest and crop movement.

There is also a prevalent feeling that all the pump priming of the Roosevelt era really did no good. What pulled the country out of the depression, it is explained, was the war spending.

What the country has been going through in the past year, according to the president's press conference.

Security Subcommittee Holds Hearings On Reds In Army

WASHINGTON, July 6—UP—The Senate Internal Security subcommittee Tuesday launched new hearings intended to show that Communists infiltrated the Army's Information and Education Service in World War II.

Chairman William E. Jenner (R-Ind.) said the subcommittee (at 8 a.m. est) would try to find the Communist "pattern" so the government will know what to guard against in a future war.

A spokesman said witnesses would include Ralph DeToledano, writer on communism, and others who were active in the Army I&E program.

Jenner said the hearings "are expected to show how Communists working behind the scenes used the Army Information and Education Service in an effort to indoctrinate eight million GI's who are now back in civilian life."

He said earlier testimony disclosed that the Communist party had a "powerful interest" in the Information and Education Service and instructed party members to penetrate it.

He said the hearings were a new step in the subcommittee's continuing inquiry into subversion in government departments. The subcommittee held hearings last year on charges linking the late Harry Dexter White and others to an alleged spy ring in the treasury in World War II.

Congress Swings Into Final Month

By TED LEWIS JR.
WASHINGTON, July 6—UP—Senate Republican leader William W. Knowland said Tuesday Congress is in "good shape" to make its July 31 adjournment target date.

Knowland made the statement as Congress swung into what could be its final month. He said "barring unforeseen developments, I think it should be easy to make it by July 31."

He also insisted that when Congress does adjourn it will be able to claim "a good batting average" on President Eisenhower's program. The President has issued his program will be a major issue in the fall election campaign.

The House is further along with its work than the Senate and is more impatient to adjourn since all 435 members must stand for reelection this fall. The foreign aid appropriation bill is the only major business still facing the House.

Knowland said the Senate will probably take up farm price support legislation or the bill to re-empt the atomic energy law by Friday. He said he does not think either will cause much delay.

He predicted the Senate will follow the lead of the House and vote some form of the President's flexible price support plan. Under the House bill, the government support level on basic crops could be adjusted between 82 1/2 per cent and 90 per cent of "fair price" parity.

public hearing. The new fares were announced last month.

The basic fare will be 15 cents in a circle six miles in diameter in the center of the city. They will go up a nickel when a rider crosses into the second, three-mile zone, and another five cents should he ride more than six miles from the center of the city.

U. S. Can't Convince Reds

WASHINGTON, July 6—UP—The United States has told Russia for the second time that American naval forces in the Far East did not seize a Soviet tanker, the State Department announced Monday.

The Russians charged in formal notes on June 24 and on July 2 that the tanker, Tuppsee, had been seized and detained by the United States. This government on June 26 rejected the Soviet charges as "completely without foundation."

In a new note delivered to the Soviet foreign office Sunday, the United States said:

"The vessel in question was not seized by the naval forces of the United States and that it has not been detained by United States authorities. The United States government, therefore, has nothing further to add to its note of June 26 rejecting the unfounded charges of the Soviet government in this matter."

A State Department spokesman said that the Russians were directing their complaints over the incident "to the wrong address." He pointed out that the Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa had admitted some time ago it is detaining the tanker.

Migrants' Children

They Follow Sun To Live, But Live In Twilight Zone

By KENNETH O. GILMORE
EPA Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Unaccepted, uncared for and uneducated — these are the children of eastern U.S. migrant farm workers, according to state and federal government welfare officials.

From the Everglades of Florida to the far reaches of New York, these children tag along with their wandering parents who sweat out meager incomes off uncertain and changing crops.

Wherever migrant workers go they have problems and pose problems. "They follow the sun for a living but live in a twilight zone of citizenship," says Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

But it is the children who suffer the brunt of this homeless exodus. Many American communities refuse to provide them with welfare and medical facilities when sick or abandoned. For they are the innocent offspring of outsiders. Migrants are wretched for their labor but not for their disease, hunger and misery.

Shamrock Water Lack 'Critical'

SHAMROCK — (Special) — Water shortage in Shamrock has reached a near critical point. Mayor Bob Douglas has urged residents to conserve as much water as possible.

Four new wells have been completed but cannot relieve the situation until they are filled in to the main line into Shamrock. The wells will add approximately 1,200 gallons per minute to the city's water supply.

Early Saturday, the city water pressure was reduced to practically nothing when the water in the 10,000,000 gallon reservoir became so low the pumps would not operate. Cafes were unable to serve their customers water, soda fountains were shut down temporarily and Saturday night bays were postponed.

Some 12-inch pipe was on its way from Pittsburgh, Pa. The pipe will be used to tie in the new wells that have been drilled approximately 3 miles west of the city's eight old wells and reservoir 14 miles north of Shamrock. City councilmen awarded the contract for laying the line to Frenchie's Welding Works, A. O. LeBlanc, owner, said he is ready to start the project as soon as the pipe arrives.

White House Properties was awarded a contract for building well houses at the four new wells.

Until last week July 19 was the earliest shipping date for the promised pipe. Another source of supply was located and the city officials have been notified that the pipe was shipped Friday, June 25. It is hoped the water situation will be relieved within six weeks.

"The city's water supply should be more than adequate after the new wells are tied in," Mayor Douglas said. "We hope all residents will cooperate with us until that time by being as conservative as possible."

CHILDREN OF MIGRANTS AT HOME

On their stomachs and hid between the rows.

Such cases are not rare, although some are less shocking. They stress the need for what the conference termed adult education. Gross ignorance of migrant parents is one of the reasons for the plight of their children. In many instances they simply do not know better.

Of even greater importance is the education of the children themselves. Only a handful receive adequate schooling due to constant travel. What they do pick up while on the road is seldom recorded and often not recognized.

A typical case is that of a bright nine-year-old boy who had to read the same third grade text book in three states where he tried going to school. He had no way of proving his progress to teachers in Georgia, New Jersey and New York. As a result he decided to quit school, for he felt he was getting nowhere.

Action is being taken to improve such situations but progress is slow. Many of the agencies trying to help are understaffed and lack the necessary funds. Little information is available on the true number and location of migrants.

Among proposals supported by the East Coast Migrant Conference were these:

Migrants should be given a health examination before leaving on their trek northward and cumulative records developed to go along with them.

Since seasonal workers contribute to the economy of the states in which they work, it was recommended that residence requirements be eliminated so they could share in the welfare services available to other citizens.

It was also urged that Old Age Social Insurance, Unemployment Compensation and Workmen's Compensation be extended to migratory workers.

Magistrate Frank Milton found that the former nurse, Margaret Evans, had brought the charges against the British earl with "the intention of doing Lord Beatty as much harm as you possibly could."

The woman was the indirect cause of a trans-Atlantic tug-of-war over Lord Beatty's stepson, William O'Connor, former husband of Lady Beatty, took their seven-year-old son from London to Los Angeles two weeks ago after reading that the boy's stepfather had been accused of "assaulting a woman in the street."
