U.S. troops seize Grenada's airports

Reagan says action will protect lives

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — About 1,800 U.S. Marines and a small number of Army Rangers invaded Marxist-ruled Grenada today along with 300 soldiers from six Caribbean nations, and President Reagan said they had secured the island's two airports in a "completely successful" operation.

Pentagon sources said the Rangers suffered casualties, but gave no details. A ham radio report from some of the 750 American medical students on Grenada said a U.S. helicopter was shot down, and a report from a Barbados radio station said three Cubans were killed and 22 wounded in fighting at an airport construction site.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said Reagan told him and other congressmen in a briefing that 30 Soviet personnel were seized in Grenada and they "will be asked to leave."

Reagan, in a Washington news conference, said he wanted to withdraw the American troops "as quickly as possible," and House Speaker Thomas

P. O'Neill said the Marines would be in Grenada "five to seven days or less."

Reagan's announcement today followed a broadcast by Radio Free Grenada that helicopter-borne U.S. paratroopers had landed and taken both airports on the island in the eastern Caribbean. The broadcast said there was fierce fighting at the main airport.

The other airport is being built by Cuban workers, and Barbados state-owned Caribbean Broadcasting Co. said three Cubans were killed and 22 wounded in fighting there. It gave no source for the report or other details.

The invasion was launched a day after the military regime that seized power last week effectively blocked evacuation of as many as 300 Americans from Grenada, which sits about 100 miles southwest of Barbados and 100 miles north of Venezuela.

Reagan told a Washington news conference that the United States acceded to a request from the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States to go into Grenada to oppose the "brutal group of leftist thugs" running the nation.

He said in addition to American forces that those involved came from Antigua, Barbados, Dominica, Jamaica, St. Lucia and St. Vincent.

Reagan said the goals of the operation were to "protect innocent lives," including up to 1,000 Americans on Grenada, "to forestall further chaos," and to work for "the restoration of law and order and democracy."

The United States "had no choice but to act strongly and decisively," Reagan said. Asked for details of the operation, Reagan said both airfields on Grenada had been taken.

American medical students on Grenada said in ham radio broadcasts that one helicopter crashed during the invasion, and that the state radio was urging doctors and nurses to report for duty, indicating there were some casualties.

Marines man foxholes to guard command post

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Marines were ordered into foxholes and bunkers today near the rubble of the bombed U.S. command post after three suspicious vehicles were seen at the airport, a Marine spokesman said.

Some 300 Marine replacements for comrades killed or wounded in Sunday's terrorist bombing had just taken up their positions at the airport, where the U.S. contingent of a four-nation peacekeeping force is headquartered, when the order was given.

"There have been three vehicles spotted driving around the area," said Capt. Wayne Jones. He added: "There are suspicions they could contain explosives."

Earlier today, rescuers dug out four bodies from the shattered compound, pushing to nearly 200 the number of American servicemen killed after a suicide terrorist drove a truck loaded with TNT into the lobby of the four-story, concrete building where Marines were sleeping Sunday morning.

A similar attack on the post of the French contingent of the peacekeeping force a few seconds after the one on the U.S. compound left 58 French troops dead or missing, French officials said.

Marine guards, with guns at ready, were on alert today at the temporary U.S. Embassy, in the British Embassy building, where U.S. spokesman John Stewart said there was an "indirect threat." The U.S. Embassy was destroyed by a terrorist bombing in April.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan spoke of the probability of finding more bodies in the rubble.

"We are now to the second and first floors where the majority of the Marines were sleeping and we've taken out many of those. We have some more to go," he said.

Bulldozers and cranes provided by the Lebanese government and private firms in Beirut worked under spotlights throughout the night and into the morning at the Marines' airport zone and at the site of the bombed French quarters.

The latest figures issued by the U.S. Defense Department today put the overall U.S. casualty toll in the bombing at 192 killed.

In Washington, as a political furor built over the Marines' mission, President Reagan declared the Marines will stay, because "we have vital interests in Lebanon... the mission remains and it remains unfulfilled."

He said the bombing was "a horrifying reminder of the type of enemy we face in many areas of the world today — vicious, cowardly and ruthless."

But House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Congress is "going to have a complete review of why we're there and whether it is worthwhile to keep our boys there for diplomatic reasons."

French President Francois Mitterrand, returning to Paris after a visit to Beirut, said that France "remains and will remain faithful to its engagement in Lebanon."

Iran and Syria rejected U.S. suggestions that those countries were behind the twin terrorist bombings. Both The Washington Post and CBS News quoted unnamed U.S. government sources as saying there were indications that officials at the Iranian embassy in Beirut may have known in advance about the bombing attacks.

Inflation rate rises faster in September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, propelled by higher car, food and housing costs, rose 0.5 percent last month in the biggest increase since May, the government reported today. Prices had risen at the slightly more moderate pace of 0.4 percent in both July and August.

For the first nine months of the year, prices paid by consumers have risen at an annual rate of 3.7 percent, raising the possibility of the lowest one-year figure since the 3.4 percent of 1972.

Prices climbed 3.9 percent last year in what most economists say was a recession-linked improvement from the 8.9 percent increase of 1981 and the 12.4 percent 1980.

In all, prices rose 2.9 percent in the 12 months ending in September, today's Labor Department report said.

Prices rose 1 percent for new cars and 2.1 percent for used autos, increases reflecting "the discontinuance of the latest domestic rebate programs and low inventory of both domestic and imported 1983 models," the report said.

Used car prices have risen sharply in each of the last five months, increasing at an annual rate of almost 20 percent from April to September.

Food prices rose 0.4 percent in September, the biggest gain since the 0.5 percent increase of April.

"The impact of the prolonged summer drought was reflected in higher prices for fresh vegetables (up 5.3 percent), fats and oils (up 2.6 percent) and poultry (up 1.9 percent)."

Food costs had gained 0.2 percent in August after declining in the previous two months, and they are up 1.9 percent over the last year.

Meat prices have been falling because many ranchers, faced with soaring feed bills this year, have greatly reduced their herds. However, that action also has cut the potential supply of meat for next year, making higher prices likely at that time.

Today's report said housing costs rose 0.5 percent in September, including increases of 0.5 percent for homeowners.

Meeting change considered

City nears approval on new property tax

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

The Pampa city commission today approved on first reading an ordinance establishing a new property tax rate of 61.2 cents per $100 valuation, rejected two proposed change orders on M. K. Brown Pool construction, awarded a bid for waterline replacement projects and discussed consideration of a change in meeting time for the commission.

Commissioners set a meeting for 8 a.m. Monday, Oct. 31, for final reading and vote on the tax ordinance, designed to raise an additional $145,000 in property tax revenues for use in street maintenance seal-coating projects.

Construction of a 92-foot concrete retaining wall at the new pool at a cost of $16,991 was approved in change order No. 5. The wall is designed to keep water drainage between the roadway and the pool from entering the pool.

Commissioners rejected a proposed wood deck for sunning and a sun shelter.

"The pool could open without them," City Manager Mack Wofford said. Mayor Calvin Whatley suggested construction of the deck and shelter could be considered at a later date "when more funds are available."

The city had budgeted $72,000 for additions to the pool not in the original contract, including heating equipment, painting, fencing, lighting and diving boards. Change orders already have added about $90,000 to original construction costs, mainly because the heating and retaining wall expenses exceeded previous estimates, Wofford explained.

Construction of the deck and shelter would push the additional costs to about $110,000, Wofford said.

Commissioners awarded a bid for replacement of 2-inch waterlines throughout the city to Stubbs, Inc., of Pampa at a cost of $77,500 per hour, including labor and use of equipment.

The waterline replacement will be paid out of revenue sharing funds carried over from last year. The project should nearly complete the replacement of lines carried out during a seven-year project except for a few spots in the city, Wofford said. Approximately 7,000 feet of lines remain to be replaced out of about 200,000 feet.

In a non-agenda item, Commissioner Jay Johnson asked the city commissioners to consider changing the time for commission meetings, saying the 9:30 a.m. time is too inconvenient for many citizens.

He said he felt "our citizens would like to attend these meetings... We might get some more feedback from our citizens" if the time were changed to allow more to attend.

Wofford said "whatever is convenient to the governing body is acceptable to us."

Johnson suggested a later afternoon session at 5 p.m. or later. Other commissioners said they might be agreeable to a change, with discussion of whether a late afternoon session or an early morning session would be more acceptable.

Wofford and City Attorney Don Lane noted the schedule of another meeting time would require a change in a current city ordinance setting the 9:30 a.m. time on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

The matter will be added to the agenda for the next regular commission meeting on Nov. 8.

In other business, commissioners approved on final reading an ordinance changing commercial solid waste collection charges and approved final plan for Block 3, Kalene North Addition for construction of the new Satellite Center by the Gray County Association for Retarded Citizens.

The commission gave tentative approval to an agreement with Dr. M. C. Overton and Dr. Todd H. Overton for construction of a roadway through property owned by the doctors in the north section of the city off Duncan St.

The roadway is designed as a drainage path to carry water across the property.

Commissioners approved the agreement with the stipulation that the project be changed to include a low-water crossing instead of an under-road culvert at city expense.

Man hurt in elevator fire

GROOM — A natural gas fire in the scale house of a grain elevator west of Groom Monday seriously injured a Panhandle man.

Fred King, 43, was listed in serious condition this morning in the special-care unit at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo. King suffered burns to his head, back and hands in the fire that erupted shortly after noon Monday.

The scale house at Weeks & Bagwell Grain Inc.'s grain elevator, the only property in a village called Lark, Texas, on Interstate 40 about seven miles west of Groom, caught fire when King tried to light a cigarette inside the small metal building, according to Groom Mayor and volunteer Al Homer.

Homer said an unlit cigarette and King's lighter were found on the floor of the burned scale house after the fire was extinguished by the Groom Volunteer Fire Department.

The metal building, which is located adjacent to weighing scales in front of the property's grain-storage elevators, was heavily damaged in the fire, Homer said.

The call reporting the fire was received by the fire department about 12:15 p.m. Two fire trucks from Groom and an ambulance from the Groom Volunteer Ambulance Service responded to the fire. The ambulance, manned by Homer, Jerry Crowell and D.A. Watson, transported King to the Amarillo hospital. Volunteers had the fire extinguished about a half hour after they arrived.

Another man inside the scale house when it caught fire, Kenny Schultz, helped the victim escape the blaze and notified the fire department, Homer said. Schultz was in a far corner of the building when the fire erupted and was uninjured, he said.

The volunteer said early indications are that natural gas had somehow accumulated inside the building and ignited when King struck his cigarette lighter.

Angry lawmakers seek Lebanon security answers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration is confronting questions from a sorrowing nation and angry lawmakers about the security that permitted so many U.S. Marines to be murdered in Beirut.

The death toll from Sunday's bombing rose to 192 and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said "I reject the administration's preposterous rationale that we did all we could to protect our forces."

A member of President Reagan's party, Sen. Steve Symms of Idaho demanded "a full explanation of what orders the Marines were under — and how, a truck full of TNT could have gotten past all the checkpoints."

A Marine who survived the attack said the sentry on guard could not get his weapon loaded in time to stop the truck. "As he (the attacker) went past, (the sentry) tried to pull out a magazine because we're not allowed to have one in our weapon," Lance Cpl. Robert Calhoun, 21, told reporters in Beirut. "He tried to pull the bolt home, but by the time he got everything loaded, (the bomb) exploded."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz went to Capitol Hill Monday to answer questions about security in closed meetings with senators and congressmen. "There was anger in that room," Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., said afterward. "The anger was very much bipartisan."

The secretary announced he will go to Europe by the end of the week to talk with ministers of Britain, France and Italy — America's partners in the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon — and that a high level mission will discuss Middle East security in Israel next week.

The Senate Armed Services Committee scheduled a hearing today for an explanation of administration plans to improve security.

Flags flew at half-staff in the capital as word went out from the Pentagon to families across the land about the fate of husbands, sons and brothers.

Letha Kimm, who lost a son in Vietnam, knew it had happened again when two Marines came to her door. "I don't even know why they had to be over there," she said of Edward Kimm, a Marine sergeant, dead at 33.

And Shirley Trahan of Lafayette, La., was told her 19-year-old son, David, had been killed. "He had no business over there, but he wanted to go," she said.

President Reagan was insistent that the Marines will stay. "The option we cannot consider is withdrawing (Marines) while their mission still remains," he told a visiting group of journalists.

Mideast oil is important to the West, Reagan said, and the American presence in faction-riven Lebanon is "central to our credibility on a global scale."

The resolve to stay was a theme Shultz played to Congress. "If we are driven out of Lebanon, radical and rejectionist elements will have scored a major victory," the secretary said. "The message will be sent that relying on the Soviet Union pays off and that relying on the United States is a fatal mistake."

The president, he said, "is determined that we will not be driven out of Lebanon by the enemies of peace." The enemies include Iran, Syria and the Soviet Union, Shultz said, adding:

"Iranian elements in Lebanon operate from behind Syrian lines and are allied with Syria. Syria must bear a share of responsibility for any Iranian actions in Lebanon whether or not Syria knew of any specific terrorist plans."

"Likewise, the Soviet Union, even though its relations with Iran are strained, has encouraged Syria and contributed to the climate of violence and intimidation... in Lebanon."

From Congress there was a renewed cry for explanations of the U.S. purpose in Lebanon.

"I don't think it is a time for Americans to back down from terrorism, but I think it's time we give the reasons we're over there," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. told reporters.

"The president needs to clearly define for the American people why their boys are being sent to die in Lebanon," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

"We must find a way to share the burden of peacekeeping," said Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker. "We should not leave at the point of a gun and I would stoutly resist that."

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said he asked why so many Marines were sleeping in one place and why the wounded were flown to German and Italian hospitals instead of much closer hospitals in Israel.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said the senators were told the wounded were flown to European hospitals because that was the procedure that had been rehearsed.

"There were no answers as to why the breach of security occurred," Bumpers said. Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, said the senators learned "that the situation is one that could occur again," Pell said.

Anti-missile demonstrations result in arrest for 1,200

By CYNTHIA GREEN
Associated Press Writer

Dr. Benjamin Spock was handled with care and a police chief's wife was seized by her husband's officers as 1,200 protesters nationwide were arrested for strewing ashes, climbing fences and lying across roads to protest deployment of U.S.-made missiles in Europe.

Monday's demonstrations capped a weekend of 140 rallies nationwide against NATO's planned placement of cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe, where 1.5 million people have joined recent protests.

Spock was among more than 300 people arrested as they climbed a chain-link fence surrounding the Seneca Army Depot in Romulus, N.Y.

The famed 80-year-old baby doctor, who wore a tie bearing red peace symbols, was helped over the 6-foot barricade by two women and eased down the other side by two military policemen.

"I was a little bit nervous about whether I'd fall flat and look ridiculous," Spock said afterward.

State police Superintendent Donald O. Chesworth said about 400 protesters blocked each of the 13 principal gates at the facility, which employs 11,000 people and is believed by nuclear weapons opponents to be the most likely point of departure for Europe-bound missiles.

But the blockade had little effect on the operations of the facility and was over by noon, a spokeswoman said.

The Seneca protesters, who came from as far away as Indiana and California, were confronted by about 50 flag-waving counter-demonstrators who accused them of being communists, and about 20 hymn-singing evangelists.

At least 577 people — including Erica Bouza, wife of the city's police chief — were arrested on trespassing charges during a demonstration by more than 1,000 people at the Minneapolis headquarters of Honeywell Corp., which makes electronic gear for nuclear arms.

The demonstrators were taken to Minneapolis Auditorium and served coffee and doughnuts along with their summonses, courtesy of Chief Anthony Bouza.

In New York City, the protest took on some glitter Monday night as celebrities from actor Paul Newman to conductor Zubin Mehta turned out at Lincoln Center for a classical concert by musicians opposed to nuclear arms.

Sopranos Jessye Norman and Kathleen Battle and violinist Itzhak Perlman were among the 200 musicians who donated their services at the performance, and proceeds from tickets priced up to $1,000 went to Physicians for Social Responsibility and the Nuclear Weapons Education Fund.

In a brief speech, Newman quoted a Chinese philosopher as saying "If you do not change direction, you may wind up where you are headed," and concluded, "A verifiable ban on nuclear weapons is the only sane reaction we can have."

Protesters in San Francisco lay limp on the plaza in front of the Bank of America building as a hooded figure carrying the sickle of death wandered among them. Another group at the main federal building scattered ashes in the lobby, used firecrackers to simulate an explosion and threw confetti representing radiation.

At least 71 were arrested on charges of obstructing sidewalks and access to streets.

Grenada landing Marines' 11th

By The Associated Press

Tuesday's landing in Grenada was the 11th time since World War II that U.S. Marines have landed on foreign shores with orders to keep the peace or evacuate Americans and foreign nationals, and the first such occupation since the peacekeeping force landed in Lebanon last year.

It was the second time Marines landed in the Caribbean; 18 years ago troops landed in the Dominican Republic to prevent a communist takeover.

The first two waves of 425 Marines went ashore in Lebanon on August 25, 1982, to help evacuate Palestinian fighters from the area.

Initially, the Marines in Lebanon were to "man checkpoints, secure the port and generally assist the Lebanese armed forces" in evacuating the PLO guerillas, according to Defense Department officials.

Sunday's bombing of U.S. military headquarters at the Beirut airport claimed more than 200 lives.

Marines landed in the Dominican Republic on April 28, 1965, with the official mission of protecting U.S. interests and American lives. At the time, the island was in a period of political upheaval as a rebel coalition fought against a civilian junta appointed by military officers who overthrew Juan Bosch, the country's first elected president. Bosch took power in May 1961, following the assassination of Rafael Trujillo, a dictator who ruled the island for 31 years.

Elections were held on the island in June 1966 and the last Marines left the Dominican Republic on Sept. 21 of that year.

Marines have also been used:
—In 1946 to evacuate Americans from Shanghai during fighting between communists and Nationalists;
—In 1965 to evacuate Nationalist Chinese civilians from two islands off the mainland;

—In 1966 to evacuate non-combatants rapped during battles for the Suez Canal;

—In 1956, when more than 14,000 Marines and Army troops landed on the Lebanese beaches to try to halt fighting among political groups;

—In 1974 to evacuate foreign nationals from Cyprus during fighting between Turks and Greek Cypriots;

—In 1975, when 14 Marines are killed and 41 wounded in an attempt to rescue the crew of the cargo ship Mayaguez after they had been seized by Cambodia off that nation's coast.

—In 1975, to evacuate Americans and others as communists overran the governments of Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Both Republicans, Democrats demand answers on Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and Republicans alike in Congress are demanding to know why more was not done to protect U.S. Marines at their billet in Beirut from the same kind of terrorist explosion that destroyed the U.S. Embassy in the Lebanese capital six months ago.

The Senate Armed Services Committee summoned Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger to testify behind closed doors today on security for the Marines. The subject also dominated a sometimes stormy closed session of the House Foreign Affairs Committee with Weinberger and Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Monday.

The Marines were killed early Sunday when an unidentified suicide terrorist drove a bomb-rigged truck into the open space beneath their headquarters building, which stood on concrete stilts near the Beirut international airport.

The same technique was used in the April 18 attack on the embassy, which killed 17 Americans.

"Quite frankly we had inadequate security, particularly since a short time ago we had the experience of an explosion not unlike this in the American embassy," said Sen. John Warner, R-Va., a member of the Armed Services Committee and former secretary of the Navy.

Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., said Weinberger and Shultz encountered "fairly hostile questions, including, 'Why had we not learned from the bombing at the embassy?'"

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said: "I reject the administration's preposterous rationale that we did all we could to protect our forces."

Ma Bell rate hike foes assail company

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell's plan to double monthly phone bills could increase the rate, force old people into nursing homes and strip poor Texans of a necessity of life, according to critics of the $1.36 billion rate hike request.

Monday was opening day of a Public Utility Commission hearing that is expected to last about eight weeks, and the Bell foes opened up with a salvo of accusations and predictions.

"Obviously, crime goes up" as phone bills do, said Jim Boyle, public utility counsel. "There are fewer people to report it."

Attorney General Jim Mattox called Bell's request the "most outrageous and egregious 'touching' I've ever seen."

And Bertie Boatright, an elderly Austinite who has protested previous Bell rate hikes, said it's simply a matter of money — or the lack of it — for thousands of old people.

"I still love my telephone. Without it I'm lost," she testified. "If you take my telephone away from me, I'll have to play like I'm talking to someone."

Paul Roth, Bell vice president for revenue and public affairs in Texas, said he's getting used to the annual consumer harrange.

"I've heard it every year," Roth told a reporter. He said that "unfortunately" the higher rates could force some Texans to give up their phones.

Boyle estimated the number could be as high as 300,000.

But Roth denied consumer complaints that Bell is fat with profit and wants to get fatter.

"We're not greedy. We are not avaricious. We are not trying to hurt old people," he said.

Of the poor Texans who might lose their phones, Roth said, "Maybe that's something that's going to have to be recognized in the rate structure." However, he warned that "subsidized" rates for the poor mean "somebody else has to pay for that."

Later Monday Roth was the opening Bell witness. Roth and Mattox engaged in about three hours of calm verbal sparring about the rate request.

"Your major job is to try to figure out how to get more money out of these regulatory agencies, isn't it?" Mattox asked.

About two questions later, Roth acknowledged that dealing with PUC is one of his top priorities.

Mattox, claiming that Bell's request is "illegal" because it's based on projections, not historic data, failed to persuade PUC Administrative Law Judge Jacqueline Holmes to postpone the hearing until Jan. 2.

Ms. Holmes also turned down Mattox's requests to order an outside audit of Bell and force Bell and American Telephone and Telegraph Co. to participate as a single entity in the hearing.

The longtime relation between Bell and AT&T ends on Jan. 1 as a result of court-ordered divestiture. But Mattox claimed the companies are allies in the rate case.

Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence, disagreed, saying, "There will be two different companies before this case is over. There is a big difference of opinion on many issues between AT&T and Southwestern Bell."

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire was among the witnesses testifying against Bell. She said her city is "somewhat offended" at Bell's ambitious request.

"This is not a time Houstonians can afford to pay that increased charge," she said. "Southwestern Bell is proposing to remedy antitrust violations that may have occurred on their behalf by asking the consumers to pay for it."

The Senior Citizens Alliance of Tarrant County brought several witnesses to Austin for the hearing's opening day. George Parker, the group's president, said the increase would "sabotage" efforts to keep old people in their homes and out of nursing homes.

"One of the most important things of keeping them in their own homes is having a phone," he said. "We've got to do something to keep old people in their homes and not drive them into nursing homes."

Texas marine families still awaiting news

By The Associated Press
Several Texas families of U.S. Marines waited today for the phone to ring and for more television reports about victims and survivors from Sunday morning's bombing at the Beirut airport that killed at least 191 Marines.

"I just went into a state of shock when I heard the news ... and saw the pictures on TV and saw the men trying to rescue the other men. I just went to pieces," Rosa Bland of Arlington said Monday.

Her son, Steven, 23, was stationed at the Marine headquarters, located at the Beirut airport. Unlike some parents, she had heard nothing, she said.

Mrs. Bland said she was "still sitting on the edge of my seat" waiting to hear whether her son was killed or injured when a truck loaded with explosives drove into the Marine compound.

Harold Montgomery of Austin also waited anxiously for word, but added, "I figured they would let us know in due time — no news, good news." Joel Montgomery, 19, wrote from Beirut earlier this month that he was doing security duty at the airport and a nearby university.

Montgomery and his wife were "just piddling around the house, I guess, trying to stay busy," he said.

"We're just sitting here waiting," said Cynthia Burt, sister of Lance Cpl. David Brown, 19, of Conroe. "We haven't heard anything yet."

The family of Cpl. Freeman R. Bertrand, 20, of Alta Loma in Galveston County, also waited anxiously, since the Santa Fe High School graduate was stationed at the airport where the bombing occurred.

"It's very nervous," said his mother, Jo Ann Bertrand, 46. "You have a lot of faith that God will pull you through this. I do feel so sorry for the people who (already have been notified of) lost sons over there."

Henrietta and Lee Roy Sabrusla of Bay City said they were somewhat confident their son, Lee, 19, had escaped harm because he wrote from Lebanon last week he had just been transferred from guarding the airport to the Beirut university.

"Still, Mrs. Sabrusla said, "it's very suspenseful. You're just in limbo."

The television in Barbara Estes' home in West Orange usually stays on 24 hours a day. That's how she and her family learned early Sunday of the bombing of the Marine command post, where their son, Danny, 19, is stationed.

By late Monday, she still had no word from the government on whether Danny was among the dead. And she had not heard from him.

"I've just been trying to capture pictures on TV. But I'm not going to be satisfied until I talk to him," Mrs. Estes said.

A day of sitting, crying and praying ended at 5:15 p.m. Sunday for John and Brenda Brown of Copperas Cove. Their son, Steven, 28, a medic with the Marines, called from a ship offshore and said, "Dad, I'm okay." He had spent the day digging through rubble, finding the bodies of his friends, he told them.

The Browns headed for church "to give thanks" after they hung up from talking with their son. He couldn't talk long because so many other Marines were waiting in line to make similar calls, they said.

At least two families learned their Marine sons were safe when they saw them on television.

Kathy Waggoner of Longview watched a network film Sunday morning of Marines helping to remove wounded Marines from the debris of the collapsed four-story Marine headquarters when she saw her brother, Capt. Mike Hagemeyer.

Ecstatic, she called her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hagemeyer of Longview, who hadn't heard from their son directly.

"The first we heard about it was when we got a phone call from the wife of Mike's co-pilot. She said Mike was all right. I imagine he was on the (USS Iwo Jima) when the explosion occurred."

Ronald Calhoun, a worker at Kelly AFB, San Antonio, said he learned early Monday that his 20-year-old son had survived the attack. His son told reporters in a Beirut news conference that he was on the roof of the four-story building when it collapsed, knocking him unconscious.

"I pity the poor people who don't know about their loved ones yet," Ronald Calhoun said. "I thank God we didn't hear from the authorities saying something had happened to Bob. We went through a trauma yesterday before we knew he was all right."

Barbara Madera of Arlington, the mother of 21-year-old Staff Sgt. George Stephen Kelly, got second-hand word that he was trying to contact her, but was afraid to accept it as fact until she heard directly from him or from military authorities.

Army Spec. 4 Marcus E. Coleman of Dallas was reported missing Monday.

"I have a lot of fear but I haven't given up completely. I just don't believe it's supposed to be like this," said his mother, Dorothy Coleman, who said she was unable to sleep Sunday night after hearing about the bombing.

The commander of the South Texas Marine Corps Recruiting District in San Antonio was so upset over news of the bombing that he nearly tore a door off its hinges.

At least 191 Marines were killed and dozens of others wounded when a suicidal bomber drove a truck loaded with explosives into the Marines' command post at the airport in Beirut, Lebanon.

The injured were airlifted to U.S. military hospitals in Europe and the burn victims eventually were to be flown to Kelly Air Force Base here, where doctors from Brooke Army Medical Center planned to pick them up, DuBois said.

The burn unit, the only such U.S. military facility in the country, is operated by the Institute for Surgical Research.

Dallas family holds hope

DALLAS (AP) — The mother of a 19-year-old Marine from Dallas kept hoping for the best today despite the government's announcement that Spec. 4 Marcus E. Coleman was among the missing in Sunday's suicide bombing in Beirut.

Dorothy Coleman said she didn't sleep Sunday night after hearing of the devastation of a Marine barracks that killed at least 191 and injured dozens more. Then, an Army officer visited her Monday to tell her that her son was missing.

"The only thing we've heard is that he's just missing," added Judy Hunnicutt, 33, Coleman's sister. "But they indicated that he might be dead because they asked us to call our priest."

Mrs. Coleman said, "I have a lot of fear, but I haven't given up completely. I just don't believe it's supposed to be like this."

Monday's mail bore a letter from her son in which he said,

"You get closer and closer to going home and then you don't make it."

"I'm getting closer and closer and I don't know whether I'm going to make it," Coleman wrote. "I pray every night that I do. I'm leaving it in God's hands."

Coleman was scheduled to be home by Thanksgiving, his family said.

Army officials said Coleman was a member of a radar unit sent to help the Marines locate mortars firing from the Marine-held area from hill positions.

Initially, the Army identified Coleman as injured, but later changed his status.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Drownings civil suits said settled

WACO, Texas (AP) — Attorneys involved in lawsuits resulting from the Lake Mexia drownings of three youths who were in the custody of county officials say they've settled the $12 million dispute.

Jury selection in three $4 million lawsuits, which had been consolidated into one suit against Limestone County officials, was scheduled to have begun here Monday.

"In my opinion, the case is settled. There's been a meeting of the minds. Every claim that could be resolved has been settled. The trial is definitely off," Rob Squires, the lawyer who filed the suit for the families of the drowning victims, told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

The out-of-court settlement still must be approved by court officials.

Steven Lawrence Booker, 19; Carl Baker, 19; and Anthony Freeman, 18, drowned during a Juneteenth celebration at Lake Mexia. After their arrest on charges of possession of marijuana, they were being transported across Lake Mexia in a boat owned by the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife. They drowned when the boat capsized.

The suits alleged that negligence by former sheriff's deputy Kenneth Elliott, reserve deputy Kenneth Archie and adult probation officer David Drummond caused the drownings.

Attorney W.C. Haley, who represents three of the defendants, confirmed that a settlement had been reached but said no details could be disclosed until the paperwork had been filed with the U.S. district clerk's office.

Squires declined to divulge terms of the settlement, but said, "Whatever they (the defendants) want to be disclosed, will be."

Haley said Squires had requested that the amount of the settlement not be disclosed.

Squires said it would be several weeks before state officials get approval of the settlement so the papers can be filed with the clerk.

Also named as defendants were Limestone County Sheriff Dennis Walker, the State of Texas, the Parks and Wildlife Department and a game warden.

Elliott, Archie and Drummond were acquitted on April 17, 1982, of criminal charges filed in connection with the drownings.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Brooke Army Medical Center officials here were preparing today to receive two U.S. Marines injured in Sunday's bloody bombing of a Marine barracks in Beirut.

The two will be treated at the hospital's burn center, Jerry DuBois, a spokesman for the unit at the Army's Fort Sam Houston said Monday.

He said he did not know the condition of the two men, scheduled to arrive early today, but that the unit probably would receive only patients who were "serious or critical."

DuBois said he could not release the names of the two

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP 'O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve the freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Lebanon tragedy: who's to blame?

Tragedy has occurred in Lebanon and now the finger-pointing will begin in the United States Congress.

But before we begin accepting politically-inspired assessments of blame, the American people should remember there is enough blame to go around and it must be shared by both sides of the political spectrum. That becomes obvious when you consider how and why United States Marines came to be in Lebanon in the first place.

Events leading to this tragic sacrifice of young Americans were triggered last year when Israel, tired of terrorist attacks against its people from inside that troubled country, launched a counterattack.

The Israelis, in their usual no-nonsense fashion, drove all the way to Beirut, routed the terrorist Palestine Liberation Army and made a mockery of Syria's military machine as it tried to protect its PLO friends.

Liberals in the United States cried out in alarm at the harm being inflicted on their beloved Yasser Arafat and his gang of terrorists, and they demanded the United States force Israel to stop it and get out of Lebanon.

Of course, before Israel agreed to withdraw, it required assurances that attacks against its citizens from Lebanon would not continue. The proposed solution was for several nations to send "peacekeeping forces" into the country to keep the outside nations from achieving dominant positions and to keep the numerous elements in Lebanon from killing each other. So those who demanded that the United States force Israel out of Lebanon must accept a large part of the blame for the Marines being sent there, even though they are now among the loudest critics of a U.S. presence in that country.

But conservatives in this country must also share the blame. They have no hesitancy in involving the United States in the affairs of other nations as long as it is under the guise of "our national interests" and they had no trouble whatsoever in accepting the plan for a "peace-keeping force." So the United States Marines were sent off to Lebanon where more than 200 of them have now met their death.

How they were to be effective in keeping the peace is not clear. The Marines were not to engage anyone in combat unless the U.S. forces, themselves, were attacked. They only way they could have possibly played a role in peacekeeping would have been to engage those who were breaking the peace and force them to stop.

The liberal elements in this country, of course, would not allow that to happen. Their mission had been accomplished when Israel agreed to stop fighting the terrorists and withdraw from Lebanon. Conservative elements accepted the fact that the Marines were to become nothing more than sitting ducks for terrorists in the hope that their mere presence would allow the Lebanese government to consolidate its power, something they considered in "our national interest."

Under those conditions and given the violent history of that region, Sunday's tragedy, or something similar to it, was inevitable. It wasn't a question of "if," but "when."

So now, hundreds of young Americans are dead because the liberal community could not accept the thought that Israel might score a military victory over a terrorist group, and because conservative elements thought the United States had the right to prop up a government in Lebanon that many Lebanese obviously did not want propped up.

The deaths of these Americans, you would think, might help to finally convince the leaders of this country that the United States has no legitimate right to interfere in the affairs of other nations and to impose our will on citizens of other countries, regardless of our motives.

But judging from the early rhetoric in response to the tragedy in Lebanon, it is a lesson that will go unlearned and those 200 deaths won't mean a thing.

Surprise: Elderly better off

Even as a federal advisory committee studying the Medicare funding crisis is planning to recommend yet another Social Security payroll tax hike, the Census Bureau has let us in on a "dirty little secret": on a per-capita, after-tax basis, those over 65 are 7 percent better off than the non-elderly. That's right, a new Census Bureau study of after-tax income for all Americans find that the over-65 per-capita income in 1980 was $6,299, compared with $5,910 for all non-elderly.

While it is true that those over 65 suffer a 40-percent drop in gross income compared with the nation as a whole, they also get a substantial tax break and have fewer household members to support.

The average family shelled out 23 percent of its gross income in federal and state income, payroll, and property taxes (but not counting sales taxes), that tax burden drops to about 13.5 percent for the elderly. And, while the average family household has 2.73 persons, the average elderly household has only 1.74. Thus, on a strict per-capita, after-tax basis, the elderly are far better off than younger families with children, where the per-capita figure is only $4,803.

Now that this secret is out, you may find an altogether different character to the debate over Medicare in the next two years, than we had on Social Security in the last two. As a Washington Post report understated it, "These new figures are likely to become factors in the inter-generational politics that have developed around Social Security and Medicare."

With the maximum Social Security Tax scheduled to leap to 14.3 percent of all salaries up to $43,800 in 1984 from the current level of 13.4 percent of $35,100 (a single-year increase of $1,560.60 for upper-middle-income families and their employers) resistance to still more hikes is bound to grow. Particularly when the middle-income workers discover that on a per-capita basis they are worse off than the elderly. After all, these folks have seen their own and their employers' maximum Social Security tax jump from under $1,000 in 1972 to $6,263 in 1984 - a 6.7 fold increase in only twelve years.

The combination of this soaring tax hike and government-inspired inflation has left the average family fully 7-percent worse off in 1980 than in 1974, with per-capita after-tax income dropping from $6,422 (1980 dollars) to $5,960. By contrast, the elderly per-capita after-tax income actually rose modestly from 1974 to 1980 from $6,212 to $6,299.

This is, of course, because this period saw a tremendous 88-percent increase in average Social Security benefits (a full 12 percent after inflation). This during a period when the average workers' wages actually dropped by 9 percent before taxes and more than 10 percent after.

In short, it is an undeniable fact that during the 1970s the elderly fared the best of any group in society; certainly better than young couples, and especially better than the rising number of female-headed, non-elderly households, where the per-capita income ($2,917) was less than half that of today's elderly.

This contrasts sharply to the carefully cultivated public perception of "light plight of the elderly". In this sense, the census study is a vivid reaffirmation of the remarkable political clout of the elderly, and the degree to which this clout represents, not the voice of the poor but, the voice of a fairly affluent middle-income group able to push politicians around with ease.

What is, of course, most troubling is the degree to which this political clout is growing in raw numbers even as the relative economic and political strength of the working-age population is declining.

A new Bureau of Labor Statistics study shows that since 1978 the 16- to 21-year-old labor force has actually fallen from 18.7 million to 16.9 million, while the total employment in this age group has fallen from 15.9 million to 13.8 million.

In short, we are now on the sharp "downslope" of the post-war baby boom bulge, and the number of young workers (16-24) in the permanent workforce is actually declining by about 15,000 each year. At the same time, the number of people at retirement age is now rising annually by slightly over 55,000. This, combined with the much higher levels of voter registration and actual voter turnout, means the elderly now comprise at least 20 percent of the total political power in this country.

Over the last few years unscrupulous demagogues like Rep. Claude Pepper (D.-Fla.) have had a field day cultivating the elderly voting block. With the publication of these new census figures that "political steamroller" may find new opposition in the months to come.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 25, the 298th day of 1983. There are 67 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 25, 1971, the United Nations General Assembly voted to admit mainland China and expel Taiwan.

On this date:

In 1701, a city charter was granted to Philadelphia.

In 1764, John Adams married Abigail Smith. He later became president and she first lady.

In 1892, first lady Caroline Harrison, the wife of Benjamin Harrison, died in the White House at the age of 60.

In 1931, the George Washington Bridge, linking New York and New Jersey, was opened.

And in 1955, the Tappan Stove Co. introduced the first electronic range for home use. It could cook bacon in 90 seconds, eggs in 22 seconds, and cost $1,200.

A different marriage vow

A lot of brides and grooms answer "I do" when they haven't really heard the question. Take the traditional marriage vows words. "For richer or poorer..."

It seems superfluous to require that a person promise to live up the marriage partnership when everything is going well. Not necessarily.

The traditional marriage contract is not prescribed by Holy Writ, you know. You'll not find it in the Bible.

The framework for the words dates back to a primitive Sarum, England rite of 1078. It is based on a formula which evolved out of centuries of trial and error. It is based on honesty as much as on morality.

The experience of many generations teaches that this code for human conduct is best.

And it says "for richer or poorer" because we have learned that either is a strain on the tie that binds.

Daily we are confronted with examples of marriages which can survive and thrive in poverty yet flounder and fall apart in prosperity.

There is an organization of ex-wives in Hollywood - specifically for the women who have been divorced by celebrity husbands.

These are the women who suffered with their aspiring husbands through the lean years, only to be cast aside when the student became a star.

Mike Landon's wife, Ken Berry's wife, Gavin MacLeod's wife, others...

They get together to commiserate, to help one another cope.

The executive producer of "Hill Street Blues," Steven Bachco, whose wife works in that cast, says it's bad to become too successful too soon. "At first you feel guilty and then you begin to believe your press agent."

Flattery is a narcotic. Some OD on it.

You know what I'd like to hear the clergyman say before the ceremony:

"Dear beloved, I don't think you know what you're getting into. So before I ask your solemn promise I'm going to tell you something:

"When I get to that part about sickness and health that means you're stuck. That means when you're 50 and suddenly feel like a young colt, you don't jump the fence.

"And when I say 'richer or poorer' don't say you do - unless you mean to continue to love, honor and cherish - even if you strike it rich!

"Now, if you're sure you know what the vows say and if you are prepared to resist when health or riches tend to lure you astray, let's get on with the ceremony."

On trading with the Soviets

In early 1980, the Carter administration forced one Lawrence J. Brady, a staunch foe of free and easy trade with the Soviet Union, out of his Commerce Department job. In late 1983, the Reagan administration has parted company with the same Lawrence J. Brady, who, badly frustrated in a still higher Commerce Department job, is running for Congress.

Proving either: (a) that Lawrence J. Brady is one obnoxious so-and-so, or (b) that the more certain things change, the more certainly they stay the same. On the historical record, (a) is more likely than (b).

Yes, the Soviets invade helpless neighboring countries, sending millions into exile; and, yes, they promote turmoil in Central America and Lebanon, and, yes, they shoot down civilian airliners that violate their "sacred" air space. But, well, look here - you can't just stop doing business with such a nation. Trade is the great emollient; or so the official theory ran during the detente era, when it was supposed that with rolls of cash register tape we would bind the Soviets to the West. Besides, economic sanctions hurt America - meaning American exporters - more than they do the Soviet Union.

Lawrence J. Brady's first resignation came after a great uproar over his testimony to a congressional committee. He labeled as "a shambles" the Commerce Department's controls on sensitive exports to the Soviet Union.

Since becoming an assistant secretary of commerce, and particularly since the airliner massacre, Brady has pursued the same hard line as before, gravely affronting Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Secretary of State George Shultz. Shultz and Baldrige fear that to get out in front of the Allies on trade sanctions would be to invite the same kind of disunity as occurred when the U.S. embargoed shipments of pipelaying equipment to the Soviets.

Maybe. And maybe the price is worth paying.

The question is commonly posed: Whom do sanctions hurt more, us or them? That isn't the relevant question at all. Far better to ask: Why should the U.S. help prop up a regime that murders airline passengers - just to name one relatively small category of the regime's victims?

The CIA has appraised the Soviet Union as capable of getting by without U.S. trade. On the other hand, if the Soviets buy our products, they must want them. If they want them, those products must serve some useful purpose. This much is common sense. So is this: It pays not to help one's enemies too much.

How could a good customer be a dedicated enemy? American exporters spread their hands in bewilderment. By giving the Soviets "a stake in peace," through trade, as PepsiCo's Donald Kendall has put it, we equip ourselves to "affect their conduct."

But how has all this in fact affected their conduct? Have they pulled out of Afghanistan? Slacked the Polish repression? Compensated the families of Korean Airlines Flight 007's victims? Just what have the Soviets done, in short, to warrant Kendall's gauzy hopes?

What the Kremlin understands is that American business has come to cherish its trading relationships with the Soviet Union. It likes the money. Sanctions always prove shortlived. The farmers howl about grain embargoes, Caterpillar and Dresser about technology cutoffs, actual or prospective.

Various American bankers, concerned about their Polish loans (tendered at below market rates), yearned for the crushing of Solidarity. With that Wales fellow put in his place, there might be hope for repayment!

Nor does American business shrink from buying, in return, Soviet products made by slave labor - despite a 53-year-old law that the Customs Service largely ignores, no doubt for fear of taking away the Soviets' "stake in peace." The whole grimy story is laid out by Joseph Harris in the September "Readers Digest."

The Soviets know all this. They know, too, that despite splanetic attempts like Lawrence Brady's to summon America to some sense of its national interest, they need only wait. On this matter of trade, America will come round; just so the sound of rustling dollars is loud enough.

Federal official to follow up investigation

DALLAS (AP) — Federal officials have sent a nationwide bulletin alerting agencies to a fatal accident at a State Fair of Texas amusement ride and are monitoring an investigation to determine if a ban on similar rides is needed.

Nancy Harvey Steorts, chairwoman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, arrived in Dallas Monday and said the investigation into the accident would last another three weeks.

"As part of our investigation, the Consumer Product Safety Commission will attempt to see whether the problem is limited to the ride at this state fair or if it is a problem at others," said Ms. Steorts.

Investigators have not determined what caused a car from the Enterprise to fly from the ride's metal base and skid 40 feet into the fair midway, she said. One man died in the accident, and 16 others were injured.

Ms. Steorts said a letter has been sent to the commission's regional offices throughout the nation to alert them to the Oct. 17 accident in Dallas.

The commission is investigating whether the problem resulted from a defective product, poor design, a malfunction or an operational problem, she said.

At the conclusion of the investigation, the safety commission will have the authority to recall all rides similar to the Enterprise, ban such rides, set stricter regulations of the product or produce uniform inspections for all rides that are carried from site to site, Ms. Steorts said.

"The state, as well as the state fair board, needs to be very cognizant of the safety of these rides," she said. "The consumer, too, has the responsibility to ride any ride safely."

She also said "in many cases, there's not enough regulations" that apply to amusement rides, but then added, "I think you have industry today that is much more concerned with making safe products."

While other State Fair of Texas rides were being dismantled and placed on trucks Monday, the Enterprise remained intact under court orders arising from two lawsuits brought by the survivors of the man who died in the accident and by a man who was injured in the accident.

The fair closed Sunday. Next week, the Enterprise will be dismantled and tests will be conducted under an agreement by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, State Fair officials, attorneys for the injured, and the ride's owner, Continental Park Attractions, said Ed Wright, an attorney for Continental.

A sound test was performed on the ride Friday by attorneys for Johnny Hamilton, who has filed a $3.5 million lawsuit in state district court. Hamilton said in the suit that he sustained bruises and internal injuries when the car that flew off the ride repeatedly slammed into his gondola before the car left the frame.

Hamilton's attorney, John Jones, said his office conducted a test on the noise level of the music that is played while the ride is in motion. The test also involved measuring sounds from the midway crowd and the surrounding rides in motion.

Jones said that the test results are being analyzed by sound engineers and that the analysis will not be completed for about two weeks.

Angry judge puts De Lorean trial on hold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge who again postponed the much-delayed trial of John Z. De Lorean accused CBS News of "interference" and wasting taxpayers' money for broadcasting secret FBI videotapes in the cocaine trafficking case.

"Justice and the judicial system may have been severely compromised," said U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi at a hearing late Monday.

The judge abandoned the scheduled Nov. 1 trial date and said he would not decide until at least Nov. 8 whether a new date can be set.

Takasugi had barred the broadcast of the tapes showing undercover agents presenting De Lorean with a suitcase purportedly containing cocaine as part of a drug deal.

But the judge was overruled by a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and he saw the tapes broadcast nationally Sunday on "CBS Evening News."

CBS defended broadcasting the tapes as "newsworthy," noting that an appeals court panel had upheld its right to do so.

"You ask yourself: 'Is this what it is purported to be?' and 'Is it newsworthy?'" said CBS President Ed Joyce. If both answers are yes, he said, a news organization is justified in using such materials.

But Takasugi told attorneys in a hushed, packed courtroom that he was "required to protect the (judicial) process. The CBS interference in that process may have devastating effects."

In a grim but controlled voice, Takasugi said CBS and its local station, KNXT, acted out of "a thirst for selling news" while ignoring the impact on De Lorean's right to a fair trial.

Outside court, De Lorean's attorney, Howard Weitzman, said, "I don't think he can ever receive a fair trial."

He said he would explore alternatives to seeking a dismissal of charges because he would like to see De Lorean "go on trial and be vindicated."

The government claims the 58-year-old De Lorean, once a star of the U.S. auto industry, entered a drug conspiracy to raise money for his failing auto company in Northern Ireland.

"The question of a fair trial is an important one to us," said KNXT news director Andrew S. Fisher. He said the tapes only supplement with images and sound information already in the public record of the case.

Washington reprimanded by bar

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Craig Washington, a Houston attorney, has been reprimanded by the State Bar of Texas for "professional misconduct" in his private law practice.

The reprimand, voted by the District 4G grievance committee of the State Bar, was announced Monday by the Bar's state headquarters. It will be filed with the Texas Supreme Court and published in the Texas Bar Journal.

The grievance committee, from the Houston area, warned Washington that "he may expect no leniency as to the imposition of professional discipline for future acts of professional misconduct."

"I was quite frankly surprised that they found as they did and that the remedy they recommended was as harsh as it was," Washington said Monday.

"But I believe in the grievance committee process, and I have determined to make no comments in response," he said.

The grievance committee report, signed by chairman Paul Rick Oshman on Sept.

29, said three incidents led to the reprimand:

— Washington became legal counsel in 1976 for a client and accepted a partial payment of an agreed $3,500 fee to handle the appeal of a conviction for aggravated robbery. "Throughout the appellate process Mr. Washington filed no brief on behalf of his client. The extent of his actions on behalf of client were seven letters, two written to the trial judge, three to the district clerk, and two to the clerk of the Court of Criminal Appeals," the grievance committee said. "Of the seven letters, none dealt with the merits or substantive issues in the case... Mr. Washington, therefore, accepted a fee and performed no meaningful legal services for his client."

— Washington represented a client in a 1980 divorce suit. "While Mr. Washington prepared deeds to be exchanged between the parties and discussed the transfer of property with opposing counsel, he failed to adequately safeguard the interests of his client who found it necessary to retain other counsel at additional expense for post judgment proceedings resulting in the proper transfer of title," the committee said.

Don't get me wrong. I think taking care of your eyesight is just as important as the next guy. In fact, that's why I went to Dr. Simmons & Simmons in the first place...to see about extended wear contacts.

I know a lot of stores have them. But I figure for something as important as my eyes, I needed an eye-care specialist to make sure I get the best fit possible. And besides, for one fee, I got a thorough examination, the right type of lens for me, a good fit and check-ups to make sure I'm getting the best wear possible.

Now that I've got my extended wear contacts from Dr. Simmons & Simmons, I've got more interesting things to do with my time than worrying about my eyes...see what I mean?

HANG ON JERRY — KABC-TV station manager Tom VanAmberg holds the hand of his anchorman Jerry Dunphy after Dunphy was shot and wounded in front of the ABC-TV studios in the Los Feliz area of Los Angeles Monday evening. A woman passenger in Dunphy's auto, identified by KABC as Sandra Marshall, was also shot and wounded. (AP Laserphoto)

Veteran TV newsman shot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran television anchorman Jerry Dunphy and a companion were ambushed and shot in their car Monday night outside ABC studios, KABC news reported.

Dunphy underwent emergency surgery at Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center but his condition was not released pending notification of his family, said a hospital receptionist who would not give her name.

Initial reports indicated Dunphy and a female passenger were in his car heading to the ABC studio, a few miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, when three people ran up to his car and fired into it, hitting both occupants.

Neighbors saw Dunphy running across the street toward the studio and the assailants fleeing in a car.

Dunphy began his television news anchoring career at television station KNXT in 1961 with "The Big News," an hour-long program. He opened his newscasts with a line that began trademark: "From the desert to the sea and all of Southern California, good evening," said Ralph Story, a veteran newsman at KNXT.

Dunphy has been married twice, has five children, and has undergone open heart surgery, Story said.

Say smiling terrorist sped past guards

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The driver of a pickup truck packed with TNT was smiling as he sped past Marine sentries who tried to stop his suicide mission before he slaughtered their sleeping comrades.

But the half-dozen sentries could not halt the terrorist before he crashed into the lobby of the four-story command post and barracks, and detonated his truck-bomb in a swift, deadly attack.

The explosion shattered the building that was headquarters of a Marine battalion and killed nearly 200 U.S. servicemen, most of them asleep inside.

"We heard about a thousand people, it seemed like, screaming 'Help me! God, help me!'" said Lance Cpl. Robert Calhoun, 21, of San Antonio, Texas. He was an off-duty sentry sleeping on the roof, knocked out by the explosion.

Calhoun later said he had talked to another Marine who was on guard duty "and walked out alive."

"He told me the man (driving the truck) was wearing green fatigues," said Calhoun, who did not identify the sentry.

"As he (the attacker) went past, (the sentry) tried to pull out a magazine because we're not allowed to have one in our weapon," Calhoun said. "He tried to pull the bolt home, but by the time he got everything loaded, (the bomb) exploded. He said all he remembered was that the guy was smiling."

Priest defends church's stance

DENVER (AP) — A priest whose church soccer team included Mexican nationals in the United States illegally says "We don't ask people if they have documents when they come to communion, (and) we don't ask them for documents if they want to play soccer."

The Rev. Marshall Gourley of Our Lady of Guadalupe Roman Catholic Church made his comments after the Immigration and Naturalization Service detained six illegal aliens who were en route to a Mile Hi Soccer League tournament at Lowry Air Force Base on Sunday.

The INS was called when Air Force personnel asked to see the men's "green cards" — proof that they were legal resident aliens — and the men could not produce them.

Two of the six had been on Gourley's parish team for several seasons, he said.

"Jesus never asked people if they were legal, or if they had documents, or were card-carrying Jews," said Gourley Monday. He and other priests at the northwest Denver parish have voiced their criticism of the INS and its procedures before.

Here's the room for a "crafty" family

Everybody's heard about those old-fashioned quilting bees where pioneer women got together for a few hours of socializing and work. Togetherness: that's the spirit of crafts.

These days, though, you're more likely to find the typical craftsman (or herself) in a solitary workroom in some distant corner of the house. The "crafty" person has been practically banished from mainstream family life.

That's usually unnecessary. With careful planning, many family rooms can serve as craft workshops, too. Here's how.

CONVERSATION ALCOVE invites lounging but craft area is a no-nonsense workshop. Family room is featured in October issue of "Decorating & Craft Ideas" magazine.

The first step is to set aside separate areas for craft and non-craft activities. The second is to draw them together again through certain decorating tricks that give a room unity of design.

The family room is intended for a quilter and a miniaturist (someone who makes dollhouse furniture and scale models), although it can be adapted to other uses. The larger portion of space is devoted to a craft area and the remainder is taken up by a "conversation alcove," with plushy love seats.

There's lots of storage: a must for stowing tools and materials. It's ranged along the walls, leaving the center of the room clear. Why? so there's plenty of space to operate the eight-foot-long solid maple quilt frame. When the frame is not being employed, the quilting surface tilts up vertically and the whole apparatus fits flat against the wall.

The storage includes a closet for compact power tools, complete with work platform and a fan to suction off sawdust.

The unification of the decor — drawing together of all elements of the room into a harmonious whole — began with the choice of wallpaper. It's a crisp, neat windowpane check (cream-colored stripes on a hunter green field) which provides a nice contrast to the clutter in the craft area.

The love seats in the conversation alcove are upholstered in a fabric color-coordinated to the wallpaper. This establishes a strong visual link between the craft and non-craft areas. The wallpaper and fabric are from the same source.

The visual link is further strengthened by framing the arch between the alcove and the craft area in bands of pastel colors found in the alcove furnishings. It's such simple touches as these that give the entire space the unity it enjoys.

Decorating accessories are — you guessed it — completed crafts and work in progress.

Dear Abby

Wife hurt by husband's dirty books

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What can a wife do about a husband who constantly buys porno magazines? I don't mean just Playboy and Hustler, I mean magazines with one nude picture after another—no articles at all.

We've had many fights about this. It's been going on for five years. I've threatened to leave him, then he promises he won't buy any more, but I keep finding them hidden all over the house. I even found some stashed under his car seat.

We have three kids, and when I think of how much money my husband has spent on this filth when it should have been spent on the kids, I could cry.

I am not bad-looking, Abby. I'm 27, have a good figure and I'm still asked for my ID when we go out. I even get whistles from guys when I'm in the car or walking by myself.

Why does my husband keep buying this filth? He knows how much it hurts me. He will get up in the middle of the night to read these magazines, then he wakes me up for a little fun. I feel so used. What can I do? He says he loves me just the way I am.

HURT AND BETRAYED

DEAR HURT: Believe it or not, your husband's preoccupation with nude pictures has nothing to do with you. If he loves you and wants your marriage to survive he will see a therapist about his problem—and it is a problem if it's damaging your marriage.

See a family therapist with him. You both need to understand why your husband needs these magazines. Share this letter with him today. It could save your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Please answer this in the paper because there are some folks who need to see it. I am a widow, 85 years old. I just had a wedding anniversary, and not one friend or relative sent me a card or wished me a happy anniversary. It was just like I never had an anniversary to remember.

I always remember them on their anniversaries, but if they keep forgetting mine, they are going to get exactly what they gave me—nothing!

They think that just because my mate is gone that date doesn't mean anything to me anymore. Well, they are wrong. It still means a lot to me.

HURT IN LEXINGTON

DEAR HURT: I'll print your letter to let those who ignore the wedding anniversaries of widows know that their remembrances are missed. In most cases, however, the date is not forgotten; friends and relatives think they're being kind by not reminding the widow of her loss.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had a poem in your column that started with, "Thank God for dirty dishes." I clipped it, hoping to make a needlepoint sampler of it to frame and hang in my kitchen. Now I can't find it, and I'm going crazy looking for it. Can you help me, please?

ANNA IN ASHTABULA

DEAR ANNA: Yes: Thank God for dirty dishes, They have a tale to tell; While other folks go hungry, We're eating very well. With Home and Health and Happiness We shouldn't want to fuss, For by this stack of evidence, God's very good to us!

Bath gets face lift

One of the best ways to develop a decorating plan is to pick a single decorative motif and copy it in various ways.

A new line of wallcovering borders offers a wealth of design inspiration to copy in applique, stencil, photographic enlargements or simple cutouts applied to lampshades and wastebaskets.

For example, use a design such as a prepacked wallcovering border in the cheerful May Morning by Flair Trim to decorate a bathroom. Additional border trims a tissue box and the tulip motif is enlarged and applied to the hand towels and washcloths.

Here are applique instructions from the Singer Company designers:

Trace tulip designs onto graph paper and enlarge to form tulips 12 inches high for the hand towels and six inches high for the washcloths. (The tulip is the easiest flower to copy and you may be able to draw it freehand.) With a pencil, draw tulip heads on pieces of coral, gold and blue broadcloth. Draw around motifs, leaving about 1/4 inch seam allowance. Pin in position on towels and washcloths.

Set your automatic sewing machine for a close, narrow zigzag stitch. Sew over the pencil lines, stitching appliques to towels. When stitching is completed, trim away excess fabric close to line of stitching.

Bathroom curtains and shower curtain may be applied in the same way for a coordinated decorative plan. Leftover border trims the wastebasket, frames the window, edge and mirror.

You can also make a photographic enlargement of any border motif, to paint directly on the wall in a life-sized mural. A toy-soldier wallcovering border design can be photographed with a 35mm camera and projected onto a closet door. Trace the outlines and paint to match the original. Finish the closet door to resemble a guardhouse for a boy's; maybe a dollhouse door for a girl's.

Wallcovering borders are easy for anyone to apply — you need no special tools or talent. Simply dip a three-to-four-foot strip in water, smooth it in place on the wall and sponge dry.

Computer use everyday part of Dallas school

DALLAS (AP) — Five-year-old James Eric Martin was intent upon moving a stick body to its proper place beneath a head on the computer screen.

"Move it up, up by his head," instructed his 5-year-old classmate, Stephen Nash.

"Why?" asked James Eric, manipulating the keyboard of the terminal, placed on a pint-sized table in the kindergarten classroom.

"Because that's his body," said Stephen.

Children teaching other children — even 5-year-olds — is a cornerstone of the computer program at the Lamplighter School, a private school that has more computers per pupil than any school in the nation.

In keeping with Lamplighter's motto — "A child is not a vessel to be filled, but a lamp to be lighted" — computers are not used for instruction by the teachers, unlike many other schools across the country. Their function at Lamplighter is purely creative and teachers are more interested in the processes involved than the end results.

The school has field tested a computer language called "Logo," developed by Massachusetts Institute of Technology researchers and adapted to Texas Instruments terminals by a team of MIT and TI programmers.

The idea was originated by J. Erik Jonsson, TI founder and chairman of Lamplighter's board of trustees.

"He sees a view of kids that is really quite visionary," said John D'Angelo, TI's liaison with the school. "He felt that computers — and this was five years ago — are something every child needs to know about. He sought ways to make that happen and he had some contacts with people at MIT and saw Logo as that vehicle. Children could develop those skills necessary to be computer-aware and be able to live in this society."

Lamplighter's 447 students — ranging from 3-year-olds to fourth-graders — have been using 50 computers donated by TI for three years.

Although no studies have been conducted at Lamplighter on whether the computers speed learning, D'Angelo and school director Pat Mattingly said they were convinced the program has improved the children's logic.

"They have to think through where they're going; they have to see the end result in their minds and then figure out the steps to get there," said D'Angelo, who taught math and science for 25 years before joining TI five years ago.

"We do feel that we've seen some changes in the children, mostly their feeling comfortable with what some adults would consider a scary experience" of using a computer, Miss Mattingly said.

The computers "naturally bring people together" and are well-suited to peer teaching, she added.

Lamplighter's history of innovation made it a natural setting to test Logo, D'Angelo said. The school, which issues no grades and has open classrooms built around "conversation wells," sits on 12 acres that include a barn and farm animals. The fourth-graders formed a corporation in which they sell fresh eggs and declare dividends.

Although most of the students are from upper-middle-class families, school officials say they provide financial assistance for students whose parents cannot afford the tuition, ranging from $1,150 to $3,100.

Logo was revised and refined after the study was completed at Lamplighter about a year ago. School officials declined to conduct studies on the computers' effect on learning because they didn't want to deny computer use to a control group of students, Miss Mattingly said.

The children's prowess during the Logo study, however, surprised even Logo's founders at MIT.

They found that Lamplighter's students "at a very young age were doing things on these computers that they didn't figure they'd be doing until the second or third grade."

D'Angelo said.

Miss Mattingly said she thought the MIT researchers were surprised that such young children "would recognize letters, directions, colors so easily. To them, it was a game. And I'm sure it will have some effect on their other studies." She noted that children can more easily use a word processor than labor over a hand-written report.

Logo has spread to schools across the country, and studies elsewhere indicate that children working with computers "tend to grasp ideas quicker and it stays with them longer," D'Angelo said. "I think in the next three, four or five years we'll start seeing more definitive studies."

TI's role in the Lamplighter program remains minimal, he added. The company maintains the computer terminals and D'Angelo, manager of TI's educational support division, conducts a monthly tour of the school for educators and others interested in the computer program.

Each class has two terminals, and the teachers determine how often they are used.

IDENTIFICATION CHECK — Detroit Police Officer Charles Meyers checks identification cards of some students at Henry Ford High School. Meyers is one of two officers assigned to the school following several violent incidents, including one death. Stepped-up security in the city's 200,000 student school system, the nation's fifth-largest, includes student ID cards. (AP Laserphoto)

Cracking down on violence in Detroit's high schools

By JOHN CLINE
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — A special police team equipped with metal detectors makes unannounced sweeps of the city's 22 high schools and turns up a small arsenal of handguns, knives and clubs. Students wear mandatory identification cards before being allowed into school buildings. And any student found with a handgun in school faces automatic expulsion.

In an effort to end violence in its public schools, the city of Detroit is getting tougher with the system's students.

"Guns have no place on our school grounds or in our school buildings," said Arthur Jefferson, superintendent of the city's 200,000-student system, the nation's fifth-largest.

Jefferson ordered stepped-up security earlier this month after several recent violent incidents, including the shooting death of one student.

The violence followed a summer clampdown by Mayor Coleman A. Young who told police to strictly enforce a curfew on youths after crime on city streets rose last spring.

Jefferson announced the tougher policies in a letter to parents earlier this month.

"We've had no serious problems with students complying," Jefferson said last week.

Jefferson also said talks with city police were being held to increase protection for the schools, but refused to elaborate. He did say he wanted to attract parent volunteers to monitor school hallways.

Less than a week after the school year began, 16-year-old Marco Hardaway was shot to death outside Henry Ford High School. Another student is being held in the Wayne County Youth Home in connection with the slaying.

Four days later, two students were wounded near Mackenzie High School. And on Oct. 10, a Redford High School student was wounded in a knife attack.

Use of the metal detectors began Sept. 20. The searches have resulted, so far, in the arrests of 35 students and the seizure of 12 weapons, said Frank Blount, the school district's security chief.

The weapons included handguns, a club and knives — one with a 12-inch blade.

The use of the mandatory ID cards also began this year.

"It's helped me 100 percent today," said Policeman Charles Meyers, referring to the identification cards. Meyers is one of two officers patrolling Ford High School which has more than 3,000 students. Each high school has at least one officer on patrol.

"I think it's the best thing that ever happened to this school," said 17-year-old Ford senior Leesa Harris of the ID regulation.

Tonya Parker, 17, also praised the use of metal detectors, saying, "It's very protective."

Both girls acknowledged seeing students, "boys, mostly," with weapons on school property.

At Kettering High School, most students were wearing the ID cards bearing their pictures. Those who did not were stopped.

"I forgot to put it on," said Stacy Vasson, 16, who complained that the ID clashed with her clothes.

"It is necessary and important that we be able to identify our students from outsiders who would come in and attack our students," said Elizabeth Hood, principal at Mackenzie.

"The new enforcement policy is not enough unless it's continued," said Ford Principal Moses Petty, calling for more people to monitor hallways and the cooperation of parents who "would insist students obey the rules."

Petty said he did not see any relationship between the tighter security and the summer curfew enforcement, saying the curfew primarily applied to late-night activities and weekends.

Detroit has had a standing curfew since 1975, but blanket enforcement resumed July 1. The ordinance requires that people under age 18 be off city streets after 10 p.m. during the week and 11 p.m. on weekends. Those convicted of curfew violations face a $500 fine or 90 days in jail, and parents must pay the financial penalties.

The renewed curfew enforcement received nationwide publicity and produced 323 arrests between June 30 and Sept. 6, city police said.

Young's curfew action was a response to a 11.2 percent jump in Detroit's crime rate in the first four months of 1983 over the same period last

Lifemark, AMI to merge

HOUSTON (AP) — Lifemark Corp., a Houston-based health care operation, and American Medical International Inc. have announced a proposed $1 billion merger.

Acquisition of Lifemark by AMI is subject to approval of shareholders of both corporations as well as government regulatory agencies, officials of both companies said.

Each share of Lifemark would be exchanged for 1.7143 shares of AMI stock under the merger agreement. Based on AMI's closing price of $27.8 per share on the New York Stock Exchange on Friday, Lifemark shareholders would receive $46.50 per share worth of AMI common stock.

Lifemark operates 25 hospitals and three chemical-dependency facilities, primarily in the southern United States. The operation includes 4,629 beds. The company also provides management, pharmacy, cardiopulmonary and physical-therapy services to the hospital industry on a contract basis.

AMI, which reported fiscal 1983 net income of $101.5 million on revenues of $1.68 billion, owns, operates and develops hospitals and provides health care services to more than 500 cities worldwide.

"We have long felt that a merger with Lifemark would significantly enhance AMI's long-range growth strategy," said Royce Diener, AMI chairman.

William S. Mackey Jr., Lifemark chairman and chief executive officer, said, "AMI's scope of operations, strong community operation and general management philosophy are a close fit with our own."

AP AWARD WINNER— Chicago White Sox manager Tony LaRussa has been named the Associated Press American League Manager of the Year. LaRussa led the White Sox from 20 games under .500 four seasons ago to a division title this year. (AP Laserphoto)

LaRussa named AL's top manager

CHICAGO (AP) — Tony LaRussa, who twice in the last two seasons came close to being fired by the Chicago White Sox, smiled graciously when he learned he had been named American League Manager of the Year by the Associated Press.

"I'm very pleased," said LaRussa. "I felt I had a chance but it's the kind of thing that you don't think is going to happen."

LaRussa, who turned 39 during the AL playoffs, said "Of all the honors and awards one receives, this is where you have to pass the credit around. There is no other individual honor dependent on so many other people.

"There are the players, the coaches, the general manager, the owners," said LaRussa, whose team caught fire in the second half of the season and won the AL West by a record 20 games before succumbing to Baltimore in the playoffs.

LaRussa won the honor easily, getting 51 of a possible 87 votes from a national electorate of sports writers and broadcasters. Joe Altobelli of the Orioles finished second with 21 votes. Toronto Blue Jays Manager Bobby Cox was third with 11

Mavs cut Salisbery

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks on Monday waived free agent Danny Salisbery, reducing the National Basketball Association team's roster to 14 players.

Salisbery, a 6-foot-7 forward from Pan American University, was invited to training camp after playing one game in a summer league. He played in two preseason games for the Mavericks and did not score, Mavericks spokesman Kevin Sullivan said.

Salisbery had played four years in the Continental Basketball Association. The Mavericks will have to cut two more players by 5 p.m. Thursday to fulfill league requirements.

National League honor goes to Lasorda

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers captured his third Associated Press National League Manager of the Year award today by one vote over Houston Astros Manager Bob Lillis.

Lasorda, who guided the Dodgers to their fifth NL West title in 10 years, emerged victorious from a three-way voting war that also included Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner. Lasorda received 28 of a possible 87 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Lillis, who led the Astros to a third-place finish in the NL West, received 27 votes, and Tanner, whose Pirates finished six games back of Philadelphia in the NL East, was third with 23 votes.

Paul Owens, the Phillies general manager who took over in the dugout on July 18 from the fired Pat Corrales, had six votes. Atlanta Braves Manager Joe Torre, last year's NL Manager of the Year, had two votes, and Bill Virdon of Montreal received one.

The 56-year-old Lasorda took over the Dodgers from Walter Alton in 1977 and immediately led the club to the National League pennant. He also won pennants in 1978 and 1981, when the Dodgers won the World Series in six games over the New York Yankees. He won his previous Manager of the Year awards in 1977 and 1981.

This year, the Dodgers clinched the NL West on Sept. 30, the Friday night before the end of the season, and wound up with a record of 91-71. They lost the playoffs in four games to the Philadelphia Phillies.

This was to have been a rebuilding year for the Dodgers, a team replete with sophomores and rookies.

Steve Garvey and Ron Cey were gone from the team, following on the heels of players like Dave Lopes and Reggie Smith. Bill Russell was the only veteran left from an infield that had played together for 10 years.

Rookie Greg Brock replaced Garvey at first base, while second-year player Mike Marshall moved into the outfield as Pedro Guerrero took over Cey's job at third. In addition, Lasorda had 1982 Rookie of the Year Steve Sax at second base.

"You lose a Garvey, or a Cey, and you don't replace guys like these overnight," Russell said early in the season.

But that, in effect, was what Lasorda did.

Brock, while hitting only .224, drove in 66 runs and had 20 homers, and Marshall, who played in only 49 games last year, finished with a .284 average 65 RBI and 17 homers. While struggling at third base with 31 errors, Guerrero remained a potent offensive force, hitting .298 with 103 RBI and 32 homers. Sax, in much the same straits as Guerrero with 30 errors, had 175 hits and stole 56 bases.

"Winning changes a lot of things," Russell said. "It makes up for a lot of inexperience."

Pampa spikers go for title tonight

Pampa can claim its second consecutive District 1-4A volleyball championship with a victory over Borger tonight, starting at 6:30 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

It will also be Parents Night for the Lady Harvesters. Parents of all the players will be introduced prior to the match.

Pampa is 8-3 in district play while second-place Levelland is 7-4. Should Pampa lose to Borger, there would be a playoff to determine first and second place in the final standings. Levelland would be Pampa's opponent if the Lobos beat winless Brownfield tonight. Should Brownfield pull an upset, then Dumas, Lubbock Dunbar and Borger could have a shot at a playoff spot.

Going into last Saturday's action, Dunbar was tied with Pampa for first place at 6-3. However, Borger surprised Dunbar in straight games, 15-3, 15-4, and 15-2, 15-11. Pampa's top hitter, Diana Simmons, is still recovering from a back injury and may miss tonight's match. The 5-9 senior didn't play against Brownfield.

"She pulled some muscles and it's been slow to heal," said Pampa coach Phil Hall. "I hope to have her ready for the playoffs."

Pampa wrapped up a playoff spot Saturday with a dual sweep of Brownfield, 14-16, 15-13, 15-7, and 15-4, 15-11.

"In the first game, we played very unemotional, but then we got our intensity back the second game," Hall said. "We came from behind to win and we had control from then on."

Pampa's Junior Varsity pulled off an upset by defeating previously-unbeaten Brownfield JV, 11-15, 15-5, 11-15.

Pampa seventh graders play Canyon here today

Pampa Blue hosts Canyon at 4 p.m. today in a seventh-grade football game at the middle school field.

Four football games are on tap for Thursday in Pampa. Pampa Blue plays Canyon at 4 p.m. while Pampa Red goes against Borger at 5:30 p.m. in eighth-grade games at the middle school field.

Pampa ninth-grade will play Borger at 4:30 p.m. at Harvester Stadium, followed by a high school junior varsity game between the Shockers and Dumas JVs.

Pampa's swim team opens the season against the Amarillo High Sandies in a dual match at 6 p.m. Thursday at the Maverick Club in Amarillo.

This Saturday, Pampa's cross country team will be in Lubbock for the District 1-4A meet.

Wheeler moves closer to District 1-1A title

Wheeler took a big step closer to a District 1-1A title Friday night with a 34-7 win over Booker.

Wheeler is now 6-1 overall and 4-0 in the district standings. It was Booker's first league loss after three victories.

Ronnie Jones and Toby Collins scored two touchdowns apiece for the Mustangs. One of Jones' TDs came on an eight-yard pass from quarterback Steven Snapp.

Wheeler attempts to extend its unbeaten streak Friday night against Follett.

Scots have top Class 5A team

By The Associated Press

The Highland Park Scots have hovered near the top of The Associated Press Schoolboy Poll most of the season and finally got the opening they needed to move to the top of the Class 5A list.

San Antonio Roosevelt ended Converse Judson's reign as the No. 1 ranked team with a 35-24 victory last week and Highland Park jumped up one notch into the lead.

The Scots joined Fort Bend Willowridge in 4A, Littlefield in 3A, Groveton in 2A and Bremond in A as the No. 1 ranked teams in the state.

There also were two newcomers on the 5A list replacing No. 7 Gregory Portland and No. 10 Austin Reagan, who lost their games last week.

Unbeaten Houston Yates and San Antonio Clark moved into the top 10 as the ninth and 10th ranked teams.

Judson remained in the top 10 as the No. 8 ranked team. Highland Park received 15 of the 20 first place votes cast and took the lead by a 195-175 point margin over the new No. 2 ranked team, defending state champion Beaumont West Brook.

Fifth ranked Waxahachie and No. 9 Silsbee were Class 4A losers and were replaced on the list by No. 9 Allen and No. 10 Tomball.

In Class 3A, No. 7 Port Arthur Austin was an 18-13 loser to Kirbyville and was replaced by No. 10 Kaufman.

Littlefield held a strong lead over runnerup Navasota in 3A with 15 first place votes to four for Navasota. Daingerfield, Ballinger and Pflugerville remained Nos. three, four and five.

All ranked teams in 2A and A won their games and remained in the top 10.

Rivera involved in five previous auto accidents

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steeler defensive lineman Gabriel Rivera, who injured his spine in what police charge was an alcohol-related car crash, was involved in five traffic accidents in his native Texas over a four-year span.

Doctors say it will be another 10 days before they learn whether injuries to the 22-year-old athlete's spine will leave him paralyzed from the chest down.

Rivera was in serious condition Monday at Allegheny General Hospital, after being in critical condition over the weekend. He was admitted Thursday night after being hurled through the back window of his sports car during a head-on collision in suburban Ross Township.

Police charged Rivera with drunken driving, speeding, reckless driving and driving on the wrong side of the road.

The San Antonio (Texas) Light reported that police records show Rivera was involved in five separate traffic incidents between March 1, 1979, and Jan. 12, 1983. He was charged and pleaded guilty in at least four of them. Rivera was first involved in a collision in San Antonio on March 1, 1979, when he was 17, but police records don't indicate whether he was charged, the newspaper reported. Rivera played at Thomas Jefferson High School in San Antonio.

He was charged with speeding on July 31, 1979, in San Antonio; on Oct. 10, 1980, in Tom Green County in west Texas; and on Dec. 9, 1980, in Lubbock, according to the newspaper. The last two violations occurred when Rivera was a student at Texas Tech University, where he was a four-year starter and the Southwestern Conference defensive player of the year in 1982.

The paper reported that

Rivera was charged with running a stop sign in San Antonio last Jan. 12, four months before the Steelers made him their No. 1 draft choice.

Rivera, a native of Crystal City, Texas, pleaded guilty and paid fines on all three speeding charges and the stop sign violation. Last Thursday night, Rivera demolished his 1983 Datsun 280-ZX sports car.

The other driver, Allen Watts, 48, of Ross Township, told police Rivera's car skidded into the path of his car near an intersection. Police said 90-foot skid marks left by Rivera's car indicate he was exceeding the 35 miles an hour speed limit but police have not said how fast he was traveling. Watts escaped serious injury.

Giants, Cards battle to 20-20 tie

ST. LOUIS (AP) — If Neil O'Donoghue never has to endure another such ordeal, he already has paid his dues.

"I felt good, but I missed," said O'Donoghue after missing on three field-goal attempts in overtime for the St. Louis Cardinals Monday night. "If I had them over, I'd make them all."

But O'Donoghue got no second chances, and the New York Giants were able to walk off with a 20-20 tie in the National Football League contest.

"Both teams had chances to win, and there's frustration in both locker rooms" said New York Coach Bill Parcells. "I can appreciate how they must feel."

O'Donoghue, at 6-foot-6 the tallest kicker in the NFL, embarked on his misadventures after first rescuing St. Louis from defeat.

His 22-yard field goal with 54 seconds left in the fourth quarter created the tie. It offset Ali Haji-Sheikh's earlier boot of 28 yards for the Giants, but later the St. Louis kicker went cold.

"There's no excuse," said O'Donoghue after squibbing a 19-yard attempt among the three he missed in overtime.

"These things happen. It's been a long time since I missed three in a row," the mild-mannered veteran of seven NFL seasons said. "You do the best you can and go on. I had to hit them, and I didn't."

"It was an excellent chip shot. It was automatic, you win the game," St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said wearily. "We didn't want to lose the clock. We didn't want Neil to run around. He just missed it."

St. Louis, after trailing most of the way in regulation time, dominated the overtime period to no avail.

O'Donoghue first missed a 44-yard field goal attempt following a short New York punt. Following the try from short range with 1:03 to go, he missed a 42-yarder with 44 seconds remaining.

Hanifan was asked, in view of his team's numerous chances, if he equated the tie with a defeat.

"When you think of the opportunities ... yeah, you have to feel that way," said Hanifan. "I don't recall ever missing a win before in a game like this."

The Giants had a 14-10 edge at halftime.

It was the first tie of the year in the NFL and only the seventh in 87 regular-season overtime contests since the NFL went to sudden-death play in 1974.

St. Louis wound up with a 388-264 advantage in total yards, much of it generated by Mitchell's rushing total of 108 yards on 24 carries. Each team had three turnovers.

As time was winding down in the extra period, the Cards sent O'Donoghue on the field to attempt his 19-yard field goal on second down.

Raiders change quarterbacks, beat Cowboys

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

The changing of the guard was drawing to a close. Marc Wilson, the Los Angeles Raiders' quarterback, was being besieged by a flock of writers and photographers.

In the locker next to his, Jim Plunkett dressed quietly, almost unnoticed.

It must be tough, someone commented, to be ignored after having been surrounded by crowds like that. "Oh, I don't know," Plunkett said with a sad smile, surveying the unoccupied space around him. "I've been in this kind of crowd plenty of times, too."

"This looks fairly permanent," he added. "It's always difficult when you're not playing, but it's something we all have to accept somewhere down the line."

Then Plunkett, a victim of some disastrous seasons with New England and San Francisco before being rescued by the Raiders, pulled on his boots, slung his jacket over his shoulder, worked his way past Wilson and his court and strolled out of the locker room — alone.

Wilson is the epitome of the good guy — a soft-spoken gentleman who set all kinds of passing records at Brigham Young in the late 1970s, then became the Raiders' No. 1 draft choice in 1980, the year Plunkett reached the pinnacle with his Super Bowl victory.

And in a matter of five days starting last Wednesday, Wilson became the Raiders' starting quarterback, the co-signer of a rich, five-year National Football League contract and the first quarterback to beat the Dallas Cowboys this season.

He would seem, at first blush, to be very much out of the Raiders' image, an image of misfits, ne'er-do-wells and clubhouse lawyers who, having failed at acceptance elsewhere, have been given one last chance on renegade owner Al Davis' team and have cashed in on it.

"Well, yeah, but Jim Plunkett isn't a renegade," said Coach Tom Flores, who used to quarterback these Raiders two decades ago. "He's always been a very classy guy, very quiet."

For a few days last week, Wilson was very much in danger of becoming a renegade of sorts, a potential league-jumper. He was being wooed by Donald Trump, the owner of the United States Football League's New Jersey Generals.

Negotiations had begun with Wilson's agent, Howard Slusher. "There was never an ultimatum like, 'Sign me or I'm going to leave,' never anything like that," Wilson said. "I just think everybody just knew it was coming down to the wire and something had to happen one way or the other."

"The situation was that either the Raiders were committed to me or I was going to go to the USFL. I just worked out that the Raiders decided they wanted to have me around for a while. It's nice to be liked — especially at those prices."

"I heard Trump said on TV that they weren't interested in me, that they never were, that I was a backup quarterback, that they had no interest in me, which is a flat-out lie." He halted for an instant and giggled as he said "lie," surprised at himself for using that word.

Flores said it was only coincidence that Plunkett was yanked and Wilson installed as the starter and then signed, all at the same time the USFL. I just worked out that the Raiders decided they wanted to have me around for a while. It's nice to be liked — especially at those prices.

needed and that Marc deserved a chance to play.

"And we'd been working on signing Marc since the summer. It just so happened that it came to a head now." And Davis, the architect of the American Football League's player raids on the NFL in the '60s, added: "We want to win. The players are the game and the players have to be paid."

Then, as Plunkett and Wilson had done before him, Davis walked out of the room, past the poster which had been torn from the Texas Stadium stands and taped to the locker room wall, a poster which read: "Good Guys Wear Black."

MORE BODIES — Rescue workers carry the body of a U.S. Marine killed in the bombing of the Marine operations center in Beirut Sunday morning. The bomb, consisting of 2,000 pounds of TNT, killed at least 192 Marines and injured 80 more. (AP Laserphoto)

IT'S GOOD NEWS — Katie Moody, mother of Marine Cpl. Morris Dorsey, smiles with happiness as she learns from another Marine that her son is doing well in a Cyprus hospital where he was taken after being injured in the Beirut blast Sunday. She had first learned her son was alive when she saw him in an Associated Press photo showing him being carried on a stretcher. (AP Laserphoto)

Schultz says Iran, Syria and Soviet Union may share blame

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although proof is lacking, Secretary of State George P. Shultz says the Soviet Union, Iran and Syria all could have a hand in the devastating attack on American Marines in Beirut because they are "enemies of peace."

"The enemies of peace in Lebanon are the enemies of peace in the Middle East, and it is not a coincidence that these elements have been bitter opponents of the Multinational Force in Lebanon of which our Marines are a part," Shultz told members of Congress Monday.

Shultz also disclosed he is going to Europe later this week for urgent consultations with the foreign ministers of Britain, France and Italy, which also have contributed troops to the force in Lebanon.

It was learned elsewhere that the meeting will be in Paris, probably on Thursday.

Shultz also announced the administration is sending a high-level mission to Israel next week to review with our Israeli friends the situation in Lebanon as well as broader issues of Middle East security.

Shultz said in his prepared statement that "President Reagan is determined that we will not be driven out of Lebanon by the enemies of peace." The actual meeting with the lawmakers was closed.

Shultz said the U.S. government does not know who is responsible for the attack on the Marines, but said that while both Iran and Syria have denied responsibility, "It is not difficult to detect who are the enemies of peace in Lebanon." He listed Syria, the Soviet Union and Iran.

He said Syria seems determined to make Lebanon once again a satellite or province of "Greater Syria." He said the Soviet Union "arms Syria with the most sophisticated weapons and encourages its hegemonic policies," while Iran is "the regime of fanatics with which we have had earlier experience."

He cast a cloud of suspicion over all three.

"Iranian elements in Lebanon operate from behind Syrian lines and are allied with Syria," he said. "Syria must bear a share of responsibility for any Iranian actions in Lebanon whether or not Syria knew of any specific terrorist plans."

If the Marines are withdrawn and the United States is perceived to have been driven out of Lebanon, Shultz said "radical and rejectionist elements will have scored a major victory" and "the message will be sent that relying on the Soviet Union pays off and that relying on the United States is a fatal mistake."

Reagan raises stakes in Lebanon policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is escalating the rationale for his Lebanon policy by suggesting that a U.S. military withdrawal could lead to Soviet domination of the entire Middle East and a cutoff of Western access to the region's oil supplies.

By depicting the stakes in those terms Monday, Reagan indicated that previous administration justifications for the Marine presence in Lebanon did not go to the heart of the issue.

Before Monday, the administration had been defending the Marines' mission in more limited terms: to help Israel's northern border secure, to help achieve Lebanese national reconciliation and to promote the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon.

But Reagan, speaking a day after the Beirut airport massacre, said the stakes involved not only Lebanon's political future but that of the entire Middle East, the security of Western oil supplies and American global credibility as well.

Reagan noted that forces loyal to the Soviet Union have taken over in such countries as South Yemen and Ethiopia and "it would be a disaster" if forces with similar orientation were able to spread their influence throughout the Middle East.

And, citing the presence of several thousand Soviet military advisers in Syria, Reagan said pro-Soviet forces are poised to move elsewhere in the region.

He added, "If Lebanon ends up under the tyranny of forces hostile to the West, not only will our strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean be threatened, but also the stability of the entire Middle East, including the vast resource areas of the Arabian peninsula."

Despite the enormity of the stakes, Reagan said it would be a mistake for American forces to become involved in the area other than in a peacekeeping role. If Americans were to go into combat, "We would be fighting Arab states, and that is not the road to peace," he said.

Reagan's statement left some analysts wondering whether the administration can achieve its ambitious objectives for the region with 1,600 non-combatant Marines.

There were echoes in Reagan's remarks Monday of his speech last April in which he outlined what would happen if Congress rejected his proposed $600 million aid request — a trifling sum nowadays — for Central America: "Our credibility would collapse, our alliances would crumble, the safety of our homeland would be put in jeopardy."

Reagan sounded much the same Monday in discussing Lebanon: "We have vital interests in Lebanon and our actions in Lebanon are in the cause of world peace. ... To the extent that the prospect for future stability is heavily influenced by the presence of our forces, it is central to our credibility on a global scale."

In both Lebanon and Central America, Reagan is warning of serious consequences if the United States abandons its friends. But he is reluctant to commit more than minimal resources to get the job done, apparently recognizing that to do otherwise would entail a heavy political price at home.

THOUGHTFUL — U.S. Navy Communications Specialist Mitch Johnson, 21, of Elko, Nev. contemplates a tiny American flag he found Tuesday digging in the rubble that was the Marine command center near Beirut airport. Johnson is assigned to the U.S.S. Austin offshore Beirut and was among Navy men brought in to help in the rescue after the command center was bombed Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supplemental unemployment benefits will be extended for 16 months to help the nation's jobless.

President Reagan signed legislation Monday extending the program. The supplemental coverage is provided, in some cases for up to 24 weeks, to unemployed workers whose normal six-month benefits have expired.

The program, which expired Sept. 30, is being reauthorized until March 31, 1985.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal National Mortgage Association says its new $1.6 billion program could provide more affordable mortgages for 25,000 families who might otherwise be unable to buy homes in today's market.

The company, known as Fannie Mae, said Monday it was making the 12-month offering in conjunction with 199 mortgage lending companies in every major city.

Fannie Mae president Robert J. Mylod said the program is "direct response to high interest rates

BLESSING — A U.S. Navy chaplain blesses the body of a Marine Tuesday who was killed Sunday during a terrorist bombing of the Marine command center near the Beirut airport. Bodies of Marines killed are still being uncovered as the grim digging task continues. (AP Laserphoto)

Son listed as dead, but was only wounded

VERNON, N.Y. (AP) — It was so official. Rose Lagoy and her 17-year-old son were at a hospital visiting her husband when the men in uniform came by Monday to notify her that her elder son, Marine Lance Cpl. Michael J. Balcom, was among the dead in Beirut. There was even a preacher present to comfort the family.

Three hours later, Balcom called to say he was alive. "Most people don't believe in miracles, but I had one today," Mrs. Lagoy said afterward. "It was hell for a few hours," she added.

There was faint hope a mistake had been made about an hour after the officers broke the news to the family. A telephone call came from a Pentagon representative saying there "was a slight possibility Mike was alive," Mrs. Lagoy said.

A little later, Balcom's stepbrother, Richard, who had gone home from the hospital to grieve in private, heard the phone ring.

It was Balcom, calling from a military hospital in West Germany to say he had been wounded.

"Ma, I just talked with Mike. He's OK," Mrs. Lagoy recalled her younger son telling her.

Mrs. Lagoy then called West Germany and spoke to the son she had thought was lost.

"When it blew, he was wedged between two walls," she said. "He kept saying, 'Guess what I got? A purple heart,'" Mrs. Lagoy said. "I said, 'My God, I don't care about the medal. I want you.'"

Mrs. Lagoy, who said her 20-year-old son had an injury to an ear and suffered cuts and bruises, had no ill-feelings toward the officers who misinformed her. "They were very, very nice," she said.

Area ground water may be contaminated, tests show

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Preliminary tests indicate ground water in several portions of this industrial region may be contaminated, the Texas Department of Water Resources says.

And Mike Moore, an investigator with the agency's Orange office, said several Southeast Texas firms are suspected of contributing to the problem.

Moore has been collecting data on ground water from companies to comply with Federal Environmental Protection Agency requirements.

All facilities handling toxic waste have been required to monitor ground water under temporary EPA rules since 1981, Moore said.

But the temporary rules are now being replaced by legal permits as required by the Resource Conservation Recovery Act. Ground water data is required of all companies seeking these permits.

Moore said negative test results showed up in July and August as companies began collecting data for permits.

Parents want to know if their sons are alive

By The Associated Press

Death wore a uniform and life came with a phone call for the agonized families of U.S. servicemen in Beirut today, as those who already knew the worst treasured last letters and railed against a massacre that "didn't have to happen."

"I want someone to tell me why my son had to die," said Lou Meurer of Louisville, Ky., whose 21-year-old son Ronald was killed in Sunday's terrorist bombing. "I guess I don't matter because I'm just a dead Marine's mother. But I hope a lot of people start asking this question now."

The parents of Lance Cpl. Duane Wigglesworth, 19, of Naugatuck, Conn., grieved in private, but the slain man's uncle criticized the "low-key" security at the Beirut airport, where the bombing occurred.

"Other than the fact of shock right now of what happened, the family feels that it didn't have to happen, that it shouldn't have happened," said Grover Wigglesworth, the corporal's uncle.

The crushing irony of a jaunty letter received Monday morning added to the pain for the parents of Pfc. Mark Helms of Dwight, Neb., who learned of their 19-year-old son's death from Marine officials after reading "Hello, I'm still alive" in a missive from Lebanon.

"Of course last night was a sleepless night, sitting and waiting, hoping for a phone call rather than a uniform," said Marvin Helms, Mark's father. "Then this morning the Marine Corps came and told us that is was the end of it for our son."

As the grim news came formally, with a visit from an officer in dress uniform, good news filtered in on television pictures, radio, in phone numbers passed hand-to-hand among servicemen in Lebanon.

Mary Ciokon of San Diego learned her husband, Navy Senior Chief Journalist Joseph Ciokon, 43, was safe after she recognized him in a telecast from U.S. military headquarters in Beirut.

"I was happy and I felt guilty," said Mrs. Ciokon. "So many had not heard about whether their men were safe. I saw Joe on TV last night and I am grateful he is OK. I feel for the wives and families who are still waiting for word."

"The only thing I want to know is whether or not my son is alive," said Irene Henry of East St. Louis, Ill., talking about Lance Cpl. Eric A. Pulliam, 19. "All I know is that his platoon was to pull out of there in November. He was supposed to be home for Christmas."

For many, no news was good news.

"We haven't heard a thing and we're delighted," said Lavon Singleton, father of Lt. Mark Singleton, 24, of Conway, S.C. "We're really glad and we're thinking Mark is all right."

For others, waiting was agony.

"It's like you heard the first shoe drop when you heard of the bombing, and now you're waiting to hear that second shoe drop," said Sue Freeman, whose son, Lance Cpl. Clayton J. Freeman of Greenville, was in Beirut at the time of the attack. "You can't relax."

Three uniformed soldiers came to John R. Price at his home in Attalla, Ala., to tell him of the death of his 20-year-old son, Marine Pvt. Christopher James Price.
