County dismissed from Grandstaff suit

Senior Staff Writer

AMARILLO - U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson has dismissed Gray, Carson and Hutchinson Counties as defendants in a $5 million federal lawsuit brought by the family of Four Sixes Ranch cowboy James Grandstaff, who was killed by police chasing a fugitive on Aug. 11, 1981.

Robinson officially dismissed the three counties from the civil - rights lawsuit Tuesday afternoon, just before she instructed jurors about how they must decide the fate of the remaining defendants in the case.

'We're very pleased the judge saw fit to make that decision. We did not feel we should have been in the suit in the first place. It's unfortunate we were subjected to the expenditure of time and money and embarrassment," Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said this morning about the ruling.

Reagan budget up $68 billion

President's plan offers no major tax hikes, spending cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan today sent Congress a $925.5 billion budget plan for 1985 that would rein in domestic spending for another year but press ahead with a military buildup. The result: a $180.4 billion deficit that will occupy much of Congress' attention

Despite the hefty budget deficit, the financial blueprint offers no major action - either through sharp spending cuts or a major tax hike — to wash away the red ink.

Overall, the budget calls for spending $925.5 billion next year, up from the $853.8 billion estimated for this year.

If the president's financial guide is followed, there would be a decade-long freeze on domestic spending, after adjustment for inflation.

Nevertheless, the deficit would impose huge burdens. The budget projects that taxpayers will pick up a $164.7 billion tab just in interest payments on the national debt in the upcoming fiscal year that starts on Oct. 1. Those payments are estimated at $149.5 billion this year.

The deficit hit a record $195.4 billion in the 1983 fiscal year and is projected at $183.7 billion this year.

Reagan, in his message accompanying the document, took note of the red ink, saying

"Only the threat of indefinitely prolonged high budget deficits threatens the continuation of sustained non-inflationary growth and prosperity. It raises the specter of sharply higher interest rates, choked-off investment, renewed recession and rising unemployment through a bipartisan effort to curb spending.

He also urged, as he has previously, enactment of constitutional amendments that would require a balanced budget and give the president line-item veto authority so he could pare individual items from appropriations bills rather than accepting - or rejecting - the measures in total.

In an election year, the administration apparently decided against adding controversial spending cuts or taxing proposals to its financial blueprint, especially since the likelihood of Congress heeding such suggestions — even to pare the troublesome deficits — is considered slim

As a result, government spending would account for nearly 24 percent of the value of nation's output of goods and services in 1985, above the 22.4 percent in 1980, the year

The budget document lauds the administration efforts to keep domestic spending under control. It said spending on domestic programs would run $523.1 billion next year.

virtually the same as last year, when adjusted for inflation. Underpinning the budget plan are the administration's assumptions that the economy will continue expanding at a solid pace through the end of the decade, despite the deficits that private economists worry could sink the recovery.

The projections also forecast that inflation, interest rates and unemployment will decline.

With that rosy economic outlook, the deficits are projected to decline to $152 billion in 1988 and $123.4 billion in 1989 Overall, the budget blueprint urges spending cuts of about $9 billion in a variety of non-defense programs, about half of which would be wiped out by fresh increases in other areas. Turning to the military, the document asks Congress to boost spending next year by 14.5 percent, to $264.4 billion, by far the biggest increase for any major agency. After discounting for inflation, the boost would be 9.3 percent.

No major new weapons are proposed. But tens of billions of dollars would go for 40 MX nuclear missiles, almost two dozen ships and hundreds of planes, tanks and other armaments. There would be a 5.5 percent pay raise for the 2.1 million men and women in uniform.

The administration also wants more money for foreign aid, both economic and military, which would rise less than $500 million to $15.2 billion. The biggest chunk would go for

Proposed budget reflects election year realities

AN AP NEWS ANALYSIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — When his Democratic opponents accuse President Reagan of gutting federal education programs, he will point to his election-year budget and argue that he proposed the largest education budget in history.

The figures sent to Congress today prove it. The budget for the Department of Education that Reagan once advocated abolishing is $15.5 billion, an increase of $100 million over the current level

The increase reflects two political realities: this is a presidential campaign year and the quality of education is an issue Reagan and his opponents hope to use to their That's the way it is with election-year budgets.

Four years ago, Jimmy Carter proposed the largest defense budget in history, but it didn't prevent candidate Ronald Reagan from accusing the Democratic incumbent of neglecting the nation's military preparedness. The principal Democratic campaign theme this year is fairness. The party's White House contenders are arguing that the Reagan administration has been biased toward the rich at the expense of federal programs designed to help the less fortunate in society

Party leaders want resolution

Demos may demand pullout

WASHINGTON (AP) - Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and other top House Democratic leaders are lining up support within their own party for a resolution calling for the "prompt and orderly withdrawal" of U.S. forces from Lebanon

The Democratic plan does not set a specific timetable for the pullout, but calls for a progress report from the president to Congress within 30 days on what steps he has taken to accomplish the withdrawal.

Although the resolution would not carry the force of law, it represents a major departure from congressional sentiment last fall, when both the Democrat-run House and the Republican-led Senate voted to allow President Reagan to keep the Marines in Beirut through mid-April 1985.

O'Neill said the administration has not justified keeping Marines in Lebanon. "The policies of the administration are unexplained and the American people do not know why our Marines are there," he said late Tuesday after the resolution was drafted at a Democratic strategy session on Lebanon

O'Neill was to present the withdrawal proposal today to a closed-door caucus of all 267 House Democrats. Party endorsement of general terms of the resolution was expected.

"We want to bring those boys home as quickly and as safely as we can," O'Neill said He said Democratic leaders shied away from any formula setting specific dates for the withdrawal, such as the 60-day pullout being pushed by Rep. Samuel S.

Stratton, D-N.Y., preferring to leave that up to the administration. But asked by reporters what "prompt and orderly withdrawal" meant, O'Neill responded: "prompt removal is immediate or right away House aides said the measure would be brought up within the next few days before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The panel's chairman, Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., was a principal drafter of the 8-page It will be brought before the full House, possibly as early as next week but more likely not until mid-February, House leadership aides said.

The resolution, in its present form, states that a prompt withdrawal of U.S. troops is a desire of Congress. Thus, it would also require Senate approval.

Space shuttle countdown begins

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) -The countdown for America's 10th space shuttle mission began today with the crew predicting the journey would open "new frontiers" for servicing satellites and building the permanent orbiting station President Reagan has

Among the activities planned for the five-day flight aboard the shuttle Challenger are the first space walks without lifelines. Two of the five astronauts are to move away from the shuttle with a backpack propelled by nitrogen gas jets.

Liftoff from Cape Canaveral is scheduled for 8 a,m. Friday. Test conductor Andy Browne began the countdown at 2 a.m. today with the the "call to stations," summoning more than 50 engineers and technicians to the control center three miles from the launch pad.

Commander Vance Brand, pilot Robert Gibson and mission specialists Bruce McCandless, Robert Stewart and Ronald McNair arrived here Tuesday from their Houston training base and told reporters they anticipated an exciting mission.

Essentially, they said, it will be a rehearsal for the next flight, in April, when another shuttle crew will attempt to capture and repair a defective satellite named Solar Max.

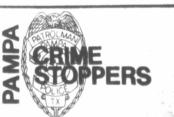

McCandless and Stewart will test the backpacks, moving without tethers as far as 300 feet from Challenger. In April's flight, an astronaut will use the backpack to secure Solar Max so it can be brought into the shuttle cargo bay

O'Neill, like many high-ranking House Democrats, supported the legislation last September allowing the Marines to stay in Lebanon for 18 months. But O'Neill now says he can no longer support such an extension. · An earlier draft of the Democratic verbal instructions at 2:38 p.m. Tuesday in the trial that began Jan. 9. The judge earlier dismissed three counties as defendants in the suit (see related story), leaving jurors to decide whether the City of Borger, current Borger officers John Gill Ray and John Robert Alonzo, former Borger officers John Wayne Turner and Bailey Hal Roberts and Hutchinson County deputy sheriff Ricky Morris violated Grandstaff's

It took the judge an hour just to read the charge to jurors. Then she gave each side one hour and fifteen minutes for final arguments.

"It's horrible to be shot, but what happened afterwards is totally outrageous...it is sickening," Fox told jurors about Grandstaff's death. 'This was not a handcuffing — this was torture," she said about the officers treatment of the ranchhand after they shot him.

"The officers say it's okay what happened to Jim Grandstaff because they thought he was Lonnie Cox...But you don't do what they did to your worst enemy or the worst felon... There is no excuse on earth for what they did," she said.

Fox asked jurors to look at Grandstaff's autopsy photos, showing deep grooves on his wrists and marks and bruises on his face.

"What happened was no accident. It was as inevitable as the sun coming up in the morning. The City of Borger hired these young toughs and gave them badges and guns," Fox pleaded.

She said Borger officer Robert Alonzo, identified in earlier testimony as the man who fired the fatal shot into Grandstaff's back, "arrived at "The Grandstaffs don't need sympathy. They need justice," the lawyer pleaded. Fox asked jurors to award $1 million for Grandstaff's loss of "life and liberty;" $1.5 million each to his widow, Sharon, and daughter, Jo Cheryl; $500,000 to his father, Joe Grandstaff; and $125,000 each to his stepsons, Robert and Randy Gatlin. Defense lawyer Wayne Sturdivant, representing the city and the four Borger officers named in the suit, asked jurors to judge each officer as an individual and refuse to "lump them all together."

These four Borger officers did not kill James Grandstaff on the night in question," Sturdivant said, pointing out that ballistics tests could not positively determine which weapon fired the fatal shot.

Sturdivant pointed out that Ray, Turner and Roberts couldn't have killed Grandstaff because they had the wrong caliber or type of weapon when they shot at him.

"That leaves John Robert Alonzo." the lawyer said and told jurors they must decide whether Alonzo fired the fatal shot, based on a 'preponderance," or the greater weight, of evidence.

But Sturdivant maintained that Alonzo didn't kill Grandstaff, either. He said the plaintiffs "came up with a scenario to see if they could blame John Robert Alonzo '

"John Robert Alonzo did not shoot James Grandstaff," he said, reasoning that Alonzo testified he wasn't in the right position to fire the

"Mr. Grandstaff only could have been shot by a person on the west side of the road...Not a witness has testified that John Robert Alonzo was on any side but the east side of the pickup...The shot could have come from the north or any area on the west side of the road," Sturdivant argued.

'Nobody denies John Robert Alonzo fired at the pickup, but he denies the .223 - caliber slug that killed James Grandstaff came from his weapon,' Sturdivant said the officers testimony that conflicted with earlier sworn statements in connection with the shooting was the result of the passage of time and confusion about the fatal events.

"I enjoyed representing these men.

I don't believe they lied. I believe they were confused. I bet every one of them would like to get up on the witness stand and start over," the officers' lawyer said. He asked jurors not to discount officers' testimony about what happened, when they might have misstated "standing on a left foot when they were on their right.'

'This was a tragedy,' he agreed, but pleaded "don't view this case with sympathy or prejudice, but by the evidence applied to each issue and each officer. Sturdivant referred to Pampa police officer Charles Love's testimony that he saw former Borger patrolman Mickey Davis kick Grandstaff in the head and tell the wounded and handcuffed man on the ground to "shut up.

'That is wrong. I know it made you incensed when you heard it,' Sturdivant said, asking jurors, "Don't paint the other officers with the same brush

He asked where is Mickey Davis now and why wasn't he included in the Sturdivant said any awards "must be reasonable and just to each defendant." He suggested $100,000 could return $10,000 per year, when invested at low risk be tax - free," he said. The defense lawyer asked jurors to refuse to hold the city liable for its officers' conduct. He said Borger officers lawfully pursued Cox, received fire and were in fear for their lives. What happened to Grandstaff was done in good faith, because officers thought the cowboy was the fugitive Cox, Sturdivant argued. He said, according to the judge's earlier instructions, the jurors must decide "widespread incompetence" existed throughout the city government and police force before they can hold the city liable for violations of Grandstaff's civil rights.

"This happened one time and one time only...There was not widespread incompetence in the City of Borger," Sturdivant said.

Lawyer R.A. Wilson, representing deputy Morris individually, said his client didn't participate in the chase of Cox that led onto the 6666 Ranch in front of the Grandstaff home.

"Deputy Ricky Morris was not there when the firing started. Deputy Morris did not fire a single shot, Wilson said.

"No one placed Ricky Morris on the scene until after the shooting was finished," he said.

Robert Wallis, another associate in the Houston law firm of Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, made the opening arguments for the plaintiffs at 3:38 p.m.

"They all cracked. They all opened fire. None of them had a target. They couldn't see anybody," Wallis said. He pointed out the Borger radio log of the fatal morning on Aug. 11, 1981, indicated that when officers first spotted Grandstaff's truck, police told the dispatcher "they didn't know whether it would be Lonnie Cox or someone else" inside the pickup.

The lawyer said the individual officers aren't totally to blame for what happened.

"Borger gave them guns and badges. Borger sent them out there to do that. Borger approved what they did, and Borger hasn't changed to this day," Wallis said.

The lawyer said proving which officer fired the fatal shot, or proving which officer fired first, weren't issues at the trial: "They all pulled the trigger...Someone at close range behind him shot him in the back while he was on the ground by his truck."

"Nobody thinks they went out there to kill James Grandstaff. This is about anybody shot down in their front yard," he said.

Wallis said officers' testimony about officer Davis firing a "warning shot" into the ground near Grandstaff after the cowboy was fatally wounded was concocted to explain a last single shot, one shot fired in cold blood into Grandstaff's back.

officials didn't want to know the truth about Grandstaff's shooting. He said the officers involved were never reprimanded, and in fact, all received "The whole city — the whole police force on duty was out there...They were hunting. The opened fire because they weren't properly trained," Wallis said.

In reference to the jurors' instructions that they could decide Grandstaff was to some degree neligent in connection with his death, Wallis said, "Mr. Grandstaff was trying to guard his children from a fugitive. He went down there to help.' "How are we going to govern the people we give the power?" the lawyer asked, pleading the "Majesty of the Law" begs for a judgment against the city and police officers.

"We run the government — the government doesn't run us...The only justice at this point is money," Wallis pleaded, asking jurors to punish the city and police officers. The arguments concluded about

Texas big beneficiary of military budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas, traditionally a major beneficiary of Pentagon spending, would be targeted for more than $261 million in military construction projects next fiscal year under the budget proposed today by President Reagan.

The amount is the fourth largest of any state, behind only California, Georgia and Virginia.

In addition, the Army Corps of Engineers is proposing to spend more than $117 million in Texas for construction work on civil water projects such as reservoirs and water channels.

And the Defense Department is seeking to spend millions more on purchase of weapons systems from private contractors in Texas, such as Bell Helicopter, General Dynamics Corp. and Texas

The defense budget proposes authorizing about $261.2 million for military construction in Texas next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. Though the money would not necessary be spent during that

Those projects include housing, weapons support facilities and maintenance structures- everything from from an instruction building for $16 million at Fort Bliss in El Paso, to missile storage igloos for $11.6 million at Carswell Air Force Base near Fort Worth and a flight simulator building for $3.3 million at Ford Hood west of Killeen.

Authorization for the program still faces a lengthy process of congressional approval, during which projects are likely to be added to or deleted The Corps of Engineers, meanwhile, is seeking $117.8 million for construction work on a dozen water projects in Texas.

These range from $10.1 million for work on the Corpus Christi ship channel to $58 million for flood $18.1 million for flood control at Joe Pool Lake southwest of Dallas.

Major weapons systems that would be purchased from Texas companies include helicopters, fighter aircraft and missiles.

The Pentagon wants more than $268 million for 44 sophisticated scout helicopters made by Bell Helicopter of Fort Worth, nearly $216 million for 22 attack helicopters from the same company and over $4.2 billion for 150 F-16 fighter aircraft manufactured by General Dynamics of Fort Worth.

It also wants $574 million for multiple launch rocket systems manufactured by Vought Corp. of Dallas, nearly $680 million for air-to-surface missiles made by Texas Instruments of Dallas and over $217 million for modernization of M60 tanks, with part of the work done by Texas Instruments

udge to rule on extraneous testimony

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — A Kerrville doctor in whose office six children mysteriously went limp has a harrowing story to tell. Now a judge must decide whether jurors in the murder trial of the doctor's nurse can hear the story.

State District Judge John Carter previewed Dr. Kathleen Holland's testimony Tuesday. Jurors were sent home while lawyers in nurse Genene Jones' murder trial argued whether the 'extraneous' offense testimony should be allowed.

Ms. Jones, 33, is being tried in the Sept. 17, 1982, death of Chelsea McClellan, a 15-month-old girl who died after receiving two injections from the nurse. Prosecutors say Ms. Jones injected the girl with a fatal dose of succinylcholine, a powerful muscle relaxant.

Ms. Holland calmly recalled Tuesday that Chelsea was one of six children who suffered mysterious seizures during the month Ms. Jones worked

There also was a pattern of occurrences, according to her testimony. Each child fell ill after either being alone with Ms. 'Jones or getting an injection from her.

Chelsea was the first case. She came to the office on Aug. 24, 1982, one day after Ms. Holland opened her practice. The baby went limp while alone with the nurse, but recovered.

Ms. Holland on Tuesday gave this account of the other cases in which Ms. Jones is charged with injury to a On Aug. 27, Brandy

Benitez, 1-month-old, was brought to the office because of diarrhea. The baby was left alone with Ms. Jones in a treatment room. When Ms. Holland returned to the room, the infant "began looking more and more lethargic."

"Then, she just all of a sudden went limp," the doctor said. The child recovered, but Ms. Holland said she could not, at the time, figure out what caused

Two Army medics testified about an Aug. 30 incident in their helicopter, sent to transfer a 7-year-old patient of Ms. Holland to San Antonio. Jimmy Pearson suffered heart disease and was severely retarded and deformed.

Sgt. David Maywhort said that Ms. Jones looked at the boy, decided he was "really going downhill," and injected something into his intravenous line. Maywhort said, contrary to the nurse's diagnosis, the boy seemed stable before the shot.

He also said Ms. Jones stethoscope examination of Jimmy was pointless because of the noise of the helicopter. Maywhort said he tried to get another medic to stop her, but Ms. Jones gave the shot before he could get to her. Jimmy reacted within

The helicopter landed in a pasture, Jimmy was treated, and the flight to San Antonio continued.

Jimmy died several weeks later. Ms. Jones is not charged in the death, only in the injury.

On Sept. 3, Misty Reichnau, 21-months-old, came to the office with an ear infection. The nurse was ordered to prepare an intravenous solution to give the girl. Ms. Jones was alone when she made the preparations.

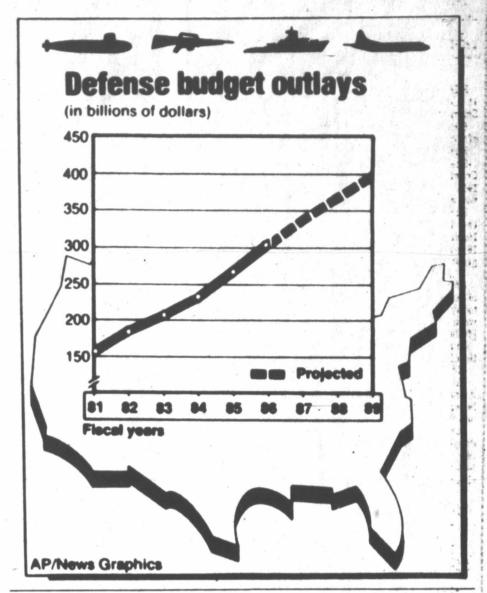

"I was holding the child," Ms. Holland testified. "Shortly after starting the IV the child, while screaming during the procedure. suddenly stopped screaming and went limp. Misty later recovered.

On Sept. 17, according to earlier testimony, Chelsea died after a similar incident in the pediatrician's office. The girl was given two shots by the nurse. The injections supposed to carry immunizations - included succinylcholine, prosecutors

Ms. Holland testified Tuesday that the next mysterious case arose that same day - while she was planning for Chelsea's autopsy. A hospital official told her to return to her office. There she found Jacob Green on a stretcher in an "I asked Genene what the hell happened," she testified. "Jacob had a seizure," was the reply, she added. The boy later recovered

Ms. Jones was fired on Sept. 28 after her boss confronted her with a bottle of succinycholine that had two unexplained holes.

Congress should keep hands off

The U.S. Supreme Court has decided not to convert nine million Americans, at the stroke of a decision, into criminals. That's good.

The court decided that selling video tape recorders does not constitute a violation of U.S. copyright laws. It also said that using the machines to view television programs at a later time is not, in and of itself, illegal.

It exercised restraint by saying, in effect, that if Congress wants copyright laws to cover video recorders, it will have to write the laws.

If Congress is sensible, it will stay out of the fray and permit the development of marketplace mechanisms to protect private intellectual property.

It is likely that some copying of proprietary material is occurring and, in all justice, some compensation may be due. The parties who believe they are being hurt are primarily motion picture producers who are concerned that a burgeoning market for pre-recorded cassettes will be hurt by off-the-air copying. On the other hand, the argument can be make that they receive broadcast fees from TV stations, and if broadcasting results in some taping, that's a known risk.

Home taping is a separate issue from the manufacture and sale of unauthorized or "pirate" cassettes. Such activity is a clearcut violation of property rights.

The remedy that's been proposed—a tax of up to $100 on video records and a dollar on blank tapes, to be distributed among movie producers—is inappropriate.

It would seize money from people whose intent may be only to watch "The Love Boat" on Sunday morning to create an enormous slush fund for a politically-favored interest group. About 30 million recorders are expected to be sold between now and 1990. At $100 a set, that's a lot of slush.

copyrighted product, they'll have to develop a better system than punishing the innocent many for the alleged sins of a guilty few. With a little imagination, they can probably devise a non-coercive marketplace mechanism that will be more effective than anything Congress can

How fair are Reagan policies

With the economy booming and the news on inflation astonishingly good, it's natural that the Democrats at the Dartmouth debate harped on the "fairness" issue. That and the deficit will dominate the domestic issues in debates by the presidential challengers.

In face of such primary politics, we are tempted to ask (as we hope voters will) a logical question: If Mr. Reagan is "unfair" to the poor, with his "massive budget cuts," why are his deficits so large?

Granted defense spending has risen from about 24 percent of the federal budget to about 27 - but the deficit has risen from 9 percent of total spending to nearly 25, and the total budget has risen from 22 percent of GNP to nearly 25. Thus, the only thing Mr. Reagan has really "cut" that much is taxes, which have dropped from 21 percent of GNP to less than 19.

But, what about all those poor people who have lost their benefits? What about the poor farmers, the public housing recipients, the food stamp beneficiaries, the unemployed, and the elderly? Glad you asked.

The awful truth is: between the Reagan administration's half - hearted attempts at budget - cutting, and Congress' insatiable appetite to raise the ante on every administration proposal, the government is spending more money than ever on what might be called "social programs" or transfer payments to various groups: from the elderly to the poor, to the farmers, to the sick and disabled

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, using Treasury Department data, has compiled a list of such programs showing what has appeared to their spending in the last couple of years - and the results may surprise you.

For example, we heard at least three Democratic presidential hopefuls, including Walter Mondale, excoriate Pres. Reagan's "cuts in health care." Well, it may surprise you to know that in fiscal 1983, the federal government spent $94.7 billion of all health care programs, up $12.4 billion from 1982, a 15.2 - percent increase -- nearly 6 - percent more in real (non - inflated) funds. Indeed, the next major crisis in Social Security is the soaring costs of Medicare which threaten to bankrupt the system:

And take housing assistance programs. Hardly a week goes by when we don't see a story about how the Reagan administration's cuts in housing subsidies has caused an "explosion in homeless people" as one story had it.

Again, it may surprise you in 1983 total housing assistance payments and programs rose 19.7 percent, from $8.4 billion to $10 billion - a real increase of 16 percent. If you want to know where most of the new

"homeless" are actually coming from, consider one fact: Since 1970 more than 250,000 mental patients have been put out on the streets in that great liberal program called "deinstitution alization."

In Massachusetts, for example, state hospitals have cut their total in - patient population from more than 12,000 to less than 2,000 in the last ten years. Is it any wonder the state's "homeless" population is now estimated at 10,000?

For the "poor farmers," under Ronald Reagan farm subsidies and aid have soared to record highs. Farm price supports went up 63 percent from $11.6 billion in 1982 to $18.9 billion in 1983, while Famers Home Administration subsidies rose 21 percent.

And on the food consumer front, despite the rash of "hunger hype" reports about growing malnutrition, total spending on food and nutrition programs rose 14 percent (10 percent real) in 1983, the largest - ever - one year increase (in real terms).

A reporter from the LOWELL (Mass.) SUN, who was sent out to do a story on "the hungry," had a hard time finding them. As she told us, "I spent nearly three days scouring the low - income neighborhoods, and I can honestly say I couldn't find the hungry people they 're talking about.' The Boston Globe, which has prominently featured the hunger theme in news and editorial columns, reported on its December 29 food page, that the cost of their so - called "market basket" of thirty - four products had dropped (for the first time in a decade) from $42.57 in 1982 to $42.23 in 1983 - a 0.7 percent decline.

In fact, the 1983 market basket cost was only 3 percent above the 1981 figure of $40.97. That's Boston's lowest two - year food inflation in more than a decade.

At the same time the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that Boston area "real wages" adjusted for inflation rose nearly 7 percent in that two - year period, while Social Security benefits rose at nearly double the actual rate of urban price rises.

Thus, not only is the government spending substantially more on total nutrition programs, but the general public (including the elderly) is increasing its ability to buy the food they need.

Even the unemployed, by and large, are being well taken care of in the transition from recession to recovery. In 1983, when unemployment dropped from 10.8 to 8.4 percent, and 3.8 - million new jobs were created, total spending on unemployment compensation soared 64 percent from $27.2 billion to $44.7 billion.

So, if you are getting the idea that this so called "fairness" issue is so much election year clap trap, you are probably right.

And as they went their separate ways maybe Anya would be saying to Ivan, 'Wasn't she nice? She also teaches music.' And Jim would have been telling Sally what Ivan did or didn't like about his boss. They might have even decided they were all going to get together for dinner some evening soon.

Mr. Reagan's point, I believe, was that if peopole got to know each other one on one, they wouldn't want to go to war.

While getting Jim and Sally and Irvan and Anya together is a very nice seenario for peace, I think it's more important for Ronnie and Nancy and Yuri and his wife to find themselves sharing a shelter from the rain or storm.

socialists are unhappy

The other day I received a subscription pitch from In These Times, which describes itself as a "socialist newsweekly." The material provided a fascinating insight into the world of American socialists.

According to the magazine, "Socialism is no longer a dirty word to millions of Americans." If that statement is true, why aren't avowedly socialist candidates winning elections? The magazine doesn't address that question, of course. Leaving aside that socialists think about public acceptance of their views, it is interesting to note how they regard the world around them. Addressing prospective subscribers, In These Times asks "Why do people like you and I have so little to say about issues that affect our own future? How has so much power gotten into the hands of corporations? And why, in a so - called 'free enterprise' system is the market controlled by a few mammoth corporations that arbitrarily set prices and manipulate the economy without regard to public welfare?' These questions shed light on the curious outlook of the radical community. One wonders why the socialists think they have so little to say about issues that affect their future. As citizens and voters, they have the same right to express themselves and cast ballots as other citizens. Their real complaint is that they aren't in a position to settle the issues on their terms. Socialists always hunger for absolute power over other people who don't want to be subected to socialism.

They ask how power has gotten into the hands of the corporations. Actually, corporations have very little power in our society. Witness the anti - business legislation of recent decades. If corporations had been all - powerful, this legislation would not have been enacted into

As for the market being controlled by a few mammoth corporations, that simply isn't true. Consider the major airlines: they are in trouble today while the small, recently spawned carriers are prospering. Giant Ma Bell has just been broken up. The record of recent years shows very clearly that "a few mammoth corporations" have no capacity to manipulate the economy.

The socialists, however, can't live without their conspiracy theory. Because of their ideology, they are compelled to believe that ess men are intent upon taking away the freedom of other citizens.

Mayor Harold Washington of Chicago, leftist Congressman Ron Dellums of California, and radical union leader William Winpisinger, head of the Machinists union, all think In These Times is must reading. However, I don't think I'll subscribe. The message of the magazine is hatred of the free market pure and simple.

Slowdown in defense buildup promised

WASHINGTON (AP) -Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger promised Congress today that Pentagon budget increases 'can begin to slow dramatically" in fiscal 1987 if it allows the Reagan administration to pursue its record military buildup.

Weinberger asked to spend $264.4 billion in fiscal 1985, which starts Oct. 1. This amounts to a 14.5 percent increase over this year's spending level without accounting for inflation and a 9.3 percent increase if inflation is taken into account. If approved, that would bring the cost of the administration's defense program to $883.3 billion in the four years since it began "rearming America."

In a 297-page report, Weinberger contended "we have made great progress" in restoring the military balance with the Soviet Union. He and Reagan have blamed "a decade of neglect" by previous administrations for allowing U.S. defenses to

"Unfortunately, we cannot make up for a decade of neglect in only three years of higher defense budgets," Weinberger said.

"If we stop in mid-course, we will only endanger the progress we have made in recent years, and invite speculation by friends and adversaries alike that the United States can sustain neither its will nor its leadership," he added.

"By the same token, if we are allowed to continue on the path we have set, we can look forward to a time, only two fiscal years from now, when defense increases can begin to slow dramatically."

The defense secretary said the United States has not regained military parity with the Soviets.

He said the Soviet buildup of strategic nuclear missile and bomber forces "shows no sign of slowing." And he said the Soviets have widened their advantage in numbers of conventional weapons "by producing major weapons at rates exceeding those of the United States and its NATO allies combined.'

However, Weinberger insisted that "we have a lot better position now than in when the Reagan administration came into administration program already under way, the fiscal 1985 budget contained no surprises and few significant new elements. It calls for spending nearly $1.8 billion on the much-touted Reagan plan to drive for a virtually impregnable anti-missile defensive shield, probably based in space, by the end of the century.

Only $250 million of this would be "new money," Weinberger said, explaining that the rest of the nearly $1.8 billion would be shifted from other less promising anti-missile programs.

The administration also is making a third attempt to win congressional approval to start producing a new generation of nerve-gas shells and bombs, something Congress has rejected twice previously. It requested $121 million to prepare for this

Great-grandson Moses fights to escape heritage

By DIANNE WILLIAMS

Associated Press W:iter
EAGLE BRIDGE, N.Y. (AP) — Will Moses makes his living as an artist, despite his famous great-grandmother.

He lives in the tidy, old farmhouse that artist Grandma Moses called home. He paints rural American scenes, as she did. And his work has been termed American folk and primitive, just like hers. But the legacy of Grandma Moses is something her great-grandson is struggling to escape.

"I tend to cringe a little bit" when the comparison is made, Moses says. "I don't want to be like Grandma Moses."

"I want to paint like this," he says, referring to his colorful and detailed scenes. "I, want a distinction there."

The younger Moses has lived all his 28 years in Eagle Bridge, in the shadow of Vermont's Green Mountains.

Anna Mary Robertson — later to become Grandma Moses — was born here in 1860.

For the last five years, Moses and his wife.

For the last five years, Moses and his wife, have sold for as much as $5,000, though se Sharon, have lived in the white house on Grandma sale in his living room were less than $2,000

Moses Road where the legendary career of Grandma Moses began.

Will Moses began painting when he was 4 years old. That was 1960, the same year his great-grandmother was celebrating her 100th birthday. She had been honored by Presidents Truman and Eisenhower, had been interviewed by Edward R. Murrow, Time and Life and countless others, and her rural paintings had drawn international attention.

A small photograph of the Moses family on her 100th birthday celebration now hangs in a corner of the Moses living room.

Other Grandma Moses relations have also painted, including her father, Russell King Robertson, her younger brother, Fred, and her son Forrest

Some other family members also paint, but none do it for a living, as Will Moses does.

He says his own work is "more complicated ... with more colors and more detail." His oil paintings have sold for as much as $5,000, though several for sale in his living room were less than $2,000.

But being the great-grandson of a famous painter can make a separate career as an artist difficult.

"It used to bother me a lot more than it does now," he says. In his earlier years, Moses says, people were often highly critical of his career as an artist, accusing him of exploiting the Moses name.

artist, accusing nim of exploiting the moses name.

But Moses, with no formal art training, makes no apologies for his painting style that includes scenes of country fairs, the old swimming hole and the farms that dot the hills around his home.

"This is what I know and what I do and I'm trying to perfect that.

"Having the name Moses hasn't helped my career. It does get attention," he says, "but I've never had anybody buy a painting from me because my name is Moses."

As for other aspects of the Moses name, the roadside historical marker in front of his home and the Grandma Moses legend still draw attention—more than 20 years after her death.

"You have to live with it," he says of the tourist attention, "but it all works out and you meet some real nice people."

Old railroad depot will get new life

and

By TOM HONEYCUTT Pine Bluff Commercial

MONTICELLO, Ark. (AP) — In the not-too-distant past, train depots bustled with activity. As America moved further into the automobile age, however, the depots were vacated and children came to know them only as quiet places to play games.

So it was with the Ashley, Drew and Northern Railroad depot at Monticello. Once the spot where passengers caught trains coming from and going to Crossett, it has not seen a passenger in many years and probably won't again.

But the mayor of Monticello, James Jordan, and the Drew County Chamber of Commerce hope to hang on to that relic of an earlier age and make a home for the chamber.

The Ashley, Drew and Northern — AD&N for short, but also known to some residents as the "All Day and Night" — was incorporated in 1912 and chiefly served the wood-products industry from Monticello to Crossett. The line was only about 42 miles — beginning at Crossett, enuing at Monticello and passing through towns such as Pugh, Old Milo, Fountain Hill and Ladelle along the way.

It tied in with other short-line railroads of the area and with lines of the Missouri-Pacific Railroad. In 1963, the AD&N was purchased by Georgia-Pacific Corp., which still owns it.

The depot, built shortly after the railroad's incorporation, served only a small area and was not constructed of brick like larger depots. It stretched along the tracks of the AD&N and was built so that the depot agent could look in either direction along the track from inside the building.

Jordan, a native of Ladelle who remembers trains coming through his hometown as a child, says he practically stumbled into the restoration project about a year ago.

While searching for some documents to place in a time capsule commemorating Monticello's centennial, he came across an ordinance that deeded the depot land to the AD&N.

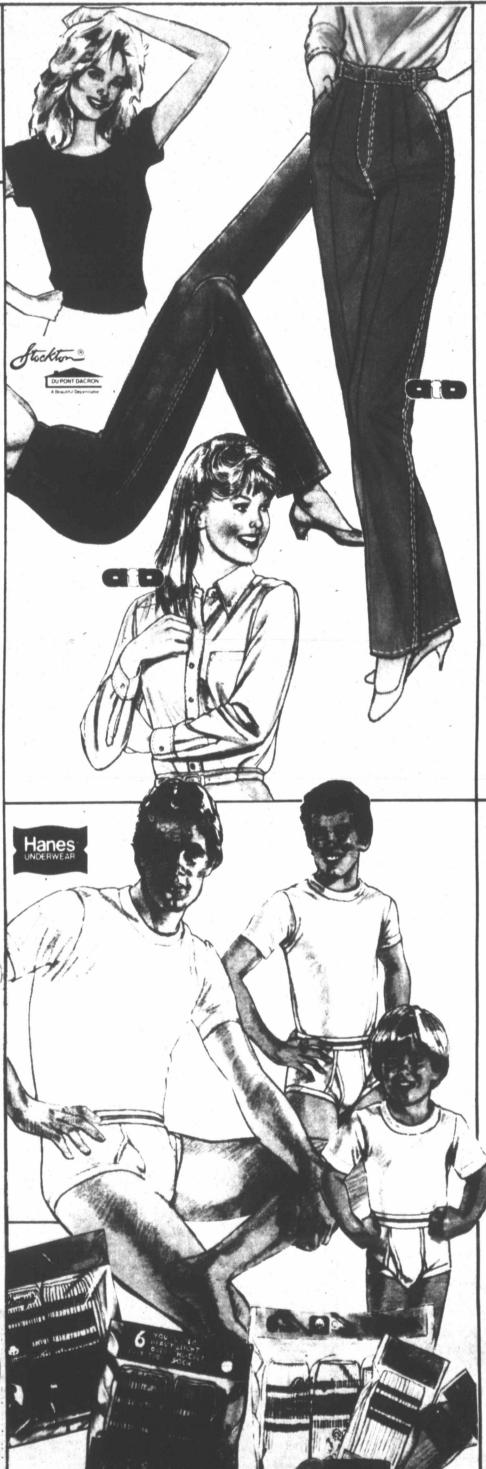

Reading the ordinance, he discovered a clause that said the land must be returned to the city if the railroad ever stopped using it. He and the city attorney worked up the deed.

The city received a federal Economic Development Administration grant for 70 percent of the cost of restoring and renovating the depot. The chamber expects to raise the rest. Jordan said $102,000 was the maximum amount available.

He said the state Historical Preservation Office had been consulted to assure that the renovation would preserve the integrity of the building. There will be few structural changes to the interior, the Face-lift lifts spirits but raises some doubts

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband died when my son was 3, so I went to work as an aide in a hospital to support myself and my son. It wasn't easy, but it was worth the effort because he has just graduated from college.

My problem: About five months before my son was to graduate, I looked in the mirror and thought, "You look like an old lady. If you go to your son's graduation looking 20 years older than the other mothers, your son will be ashamed of you." So through the generosity of a plastic surgeon I met at the hospital, I had a face-lift. It cost me only $1,500, and it was worth it to make my son

He was very pleased when he saw me, but the women I work with were cold and unfriendly. (One said, "Even $1,500 is a lot of money to a woman in your circumstances.") Abby, many of these women spend $20 and $30 at the beauty shop every week.

Please tell me I didn't do anything so terrible. Or do you feel the way they do?

You had a face-lift for the wrong reason-to please your son. (He may have been just as proud of you the way you were.) And now you're "unhappy" because the women at work "think" you did something wrong.

DEAR GROUP: It's possible for a husband to deny it, but in view of such overwhelming circumstantial evidence, it would be impossible to believe him.

DEAR ABBY: When you advised the young girl who wanted to get married to go to college first because one day she might have to support herself and maybe a child, too, it really struck home with us. My husband and I tried to convince our daughter of that very thing, but she refused to believe that one day she might have to support herself and a child. Well, after five years of marriage and a darling little son, that's exactly what happened. Her husband suddenly decided that the responsibilities of marriage were not for him.

The responsibility, of course, became our daughter's, so she and her son are now living with us, and she's gone back to college to become a registered nurse.

It's difficult for all of us, but we are glad we can give her the assistance she needs to become self-supporting How much easier it would have been if she had finished her training and then married and had a family.

Abby, if all the young girls out there who should have taken that advice, but didn't, were laid end to end, they would reach from UCLA to the University of Maine. HOT SPRINGS MOM

Tired of cold, snowy, winter weather and the same old stews, soups, and chilies? Why not take an exciting adventure in cooking to various countries. During the past few years, American eating habits and taste have changed. Enthusiasm for international cooking has not gone unnoticed by Texans. Texas is becoming a diversified state in terms of national origin of its citizens. Many menus in Texas restaurants

Life has changed for the Klein family since Grandma moved in. At first it was fun because she could baby-sit and tell ghost stories. But lately having Grandma around has become a strain on everybody.

Mom and Dad are arguing more. The children's grades in school have slipped. And Grandma never seems happy.

Recently the family wanted to go on vacation. Everybody was afraid to leave Grandma in the house alone, and Grandma didn't want to go along.

We've known lots of families like the Kleins over the years. The stress that accompanies caring for an elderly parent is not new. Especially the stress on the parent. We've created a special living environment for important people like Grandma, who need:

- · special attention, • the warmth of companionship,
- · a sense of security,
- nutritious meals
- · and someone to rely on in emergencies.

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

Coyle Winborn and Craig Chapin combined for 45 points as Pampa downed Canyon, 84-67. Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse to move closer to a District 1-4A basketball title

Pampa remains unbeaten in league play at 9-0 with five games to go. Overall, the Harvesters are 19-5 and ranked second behind Waxahachie in the Class 4A state rankings.

Canyon fell to 5-4 and 12-11

The Harvesters were like a boxer jabbing and darting to find the opponent's weakness in the first round, then delivering the knockout blow in the second round. It's a script that Pampa has followed in several games, particulary against district

"Canyon played us tough that first quarter," said Pampa Head Coach Garland Nichols. "They came at us as hard as they could, but we were able to adjust to them the second half and played much better."

Canyon trailed by only three, 16-13, at the end of the first quarter, but the 5-11 Chapin ignited a secondquarter scoring surge that

Nichols was also proud of his bench, which contributed

'Our bench was a big factor," Nichols said, "I send them in with confidence that they can do the job, not because I have to. It's great when you've got six or seven players who can come in and deliver. It keeps the other teams off guard.

Maryland wins without Branch

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Without Adrian Branch, the Maryland Terrapins weren't the same team. But as far as Terry Holland was concerned, it didn't matter.

"It was another tough loss for us." the Virginia coach said after Tuesday night's 67-66 loss to the nation's 10th-ranked college basketball team. "We can compete with anyone - but we just can't get over the hump and beat anyone. The toughest part is getting so close and still not beating people. Actually, the Cavaliers have a 12-5 record overall, but all five losses have come in the Atlantic Coast Conference. With a 2-5 record, the Cavaliers are a far cry from the Ralph Sampson-led teams of the previous four years.

The Terps, meanwhile, managed to win despite the absence of Branch, their starting guard who was suspended Monday by Coach Lefty Driesell along with substitute Steve Rivers after the two were arrested Saturday on a misdemeaner charge of possession of $10 worth of marijuana.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 12 Oklahoma walloped Kansas 103-84, and No. 19 Auburn turned back Mississippi 60-50.

Jeff Adkins led Maryland with 15 points, including the game-winning free throws with three seconds left, while Keith Gatlin, starting in place of Branch, scored 14 points for the Terps.

Mark Fothergill's short hook from five feet gave jumper from the right corner for Virginia, and Adkins hit a pair of free throws to wrap up the Terrapins' 14th win in 17

Virginia, losing its third straight game for the first time in four years, was paced by freshman forward Tom Sheehey with a career-high 27 points

Top Twenty Wayman Tisdale scored 28 points and Tim McCalister had 27 to lead Oklahoma's rout of Kansas. The Sooners built a 59-37 halftime lead over the Jayhawks and never led by fewer than nine points the rest of the way as they improved their record to 17-3. Kansas was paced by Carl Henry with 18 points and

Kelly Knight with 17. "They deserved everything they got," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said of Oklahoma. "They made shots tonight that I've never seen any team make consistently.' Charles Barkley scored six of his game-high 22 points in the final 94 seconds and Auburn withstood a late Mississippi rally to down the Rebels.

Ole Miss, which had trailed 43-27 with 12:33 remaining. got two baskets apiece from Don Royster, Eric Laird and Ken Coghlan during a spurt that chopped the Auburn lead to 45-40 with 5:57 to play. Two free throws by Andre Laird trimmed the lead to 52-48 with 2:41 to go before Barkley went to work.

Barkley, a burly 260-pounder, scored off a missed free throw with 1:34 to play and came up with two free throws and another rebound basket to put the Tigers in front 58-48 with 25 Maryland a 65-64 lead. Rick seconds left. Barkley also had

Moved by news of a fire that art and my prints are burnt out. I was going to sell them destroyed the studio of an artist who gave lessons to underprivileged children, President Reagan has ordered aides to help drum up donations to help rebuild the gallery. Reagan directed the White House's Office of Private Sector Initiatives to line up local businesses to help Eddie McKinnon rebuild the converted boiler room where he taught children painting, pottery and sculpture.

A number of Washington businesses have already pledged to donate art supplies, equipment and construction services.

Fire destroyed the studio Friday night while McKinnon and 21 other city residents were being honored for their community service by the Downtown Jaycees and Washingtonian magazine. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

McKinnon said Reagan's efforts to help him were 'fantastic.'

"I never thought this would get this far," he said. "Mayor (Marion) Barry and Councilman (H.R.) Crawford and now the president. Maybe this is what is needed to get art back in D.C.

But McKinnon said he had mixed feelings about reopening the studio, where 60 to 80 children learned painting, pottery and sculpture.

Plan assumes farms will put millions of acres back to work

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's budget plan for the Agriculture Department assumes farmers will put millions of idled acres back to work this year, that there will be no crippling drought — and that federal price supports will

According to the fiscal 1985 budget sent to Congress today, total Agriculture Department spending will rise about 8

The proposed budget calls for more than $37.4 billion to be spent on department programs - ranging from agricultural research to food stamps — compared to about $34.8 billion in

Even so, the larger outlays anticipated by the budget would be far short of the record spending of $46.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30.

Mother says that she sensed son's danger

EL PASO (AP) — Margarite Rodriduez says she heard her son calling for her, and sensed he was in danger, even though he was thousands of miles away in Beirut.

Her son, Lance Cpl. Rodolfo Hernandez, was struck in the head with shrapnel in a clash with Shiite Moslem militiamen Monday. He is listed in critical condition.

Officials said Hernandez was flown by helicopter to the amphibious assault ship Guam off the Beirut coast. Another Marine, Lance Cpl. George L. Dranis, 19, of Cape May, N.J., died before he could be evacuated, officials said.

Mrs. Hernandez told the El Paso Times that, in her south El Paso home, she felt her son's pain Monday morning.

"I've always had that feeling when my children are in danger, when they are hungry," Mrs. Rodriguez said Tuesday. 'My mother has it. All of us have it."

She said the feeling made her nervous, and she was not surprised about eight hours later when a Marine Corps representative came to her home with news of her only son's injuries. "I just can't stop thinking of him over there covered with blood, calling for me," Rodriguez said, shaking her head. "I can't be with him. Do you think they can bring him back here? Would they do that? The Red Cross or someone? Hernandez, 28, was within seven months of being discharged from his second tour with the Marines. he was among the first Marines sent to Beirut as a peace-keeping force in September

He came to El Paso on leave last October, but was called back to Beirut after about 10 days.

On his way to Beirut a second time, Hernandez' unit was diverted temporarily to Grenada before its return to Lebanon with the 33rd Marine Amphibious Unit.

Mrs. Rodriguez said she has seen news footage of her son, behind a machine gun or asleep in a bunker, three times on national television.

"I was happy to see him, but being behind a machine gun his only protection — was not a very good thing for a mother to

Mrs. Rodriguez also has a news photo of her son and four other Marines erecting barricades near Beirut Airport. She said she recognized her son because of his "big cheeks."

After receiving four boxes of "goodies" from his mother last Christmas, Hernandez teased her about her about "forgetting the kitchen sink," she said. But in Hernandez' last letter to his mother, he was counting the days to his homecoming, she said. "He said he just wanted to come home, to mom's good home cooking." she said Hernandez, described as "restless" college student, joined the Marines about six years ago.

"He felt, I guess, like he had no other place to go," she said. Mrs. Hernandez was upset after the October bombing of Marine Headquarters in Beirut, which killed more than 240 people

"Some of his best friends were killed in that explosion," she said. "He was very perturbed about it. Of course, he was saddened by all the senseless killing there.

Although the prognosis is serious, Mrs. Rodriguez says her Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng said the new budget proposal was in keeping with Reagan's goal of holding down federal spending as much as possible during the period of economic recovery that lies ahead.

"It's tight, it's fair and it's realistic," Lyng said. One of the largest items involves spending for commodity programs - the government price supports and direct payments that apply to key farm products. Those totaled about $12 billion in 1981-82 but, in the wake of record harvests, jumped to a record $18.9 billion in 1982-83.

Some of the programs for which additional money is recommended by the Reagan budget include:

-Food for Peace aid to needy countries, $1.6 billion against $1.5 billion this year. That does not include any supplemental funds that may be sought.

-The farm operating loan program in the Farmers Home Administration would be increased by $160 million to more than $2 billion.

-Research by the Agricultural Research Service would be boosted go $485 million from $477 million this year. The total for the Cooperative State Research Service, which administers federal funds allocated to state experiment stations and other eligible institutions, would be increased to $267 million from $248 million this year.

Some of the cuts recommended in the proposed budget: -Food assistance programs would decline to about $17.1 billion from $17.7 billion estimated this year if the Congress goes along with legislation to tighten up some of the programs. If the current law is continued, total food programs would be about $17.6 billion.

Budget includes increase in Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Reagan sent Congress today a record $191.3 billion budget for the Social Security retirement and disability programs for fiscal 1985 that includes an expected 4.3 percent benefit increase next January for nearly 37 million retirees, disabled workers and their families. hike in January 1986.

And for the first time in nearly a decade, the Social Security budget is not written in red ink. The system expects to pay out $11.5 billion more next year, but it also anticipates that revenues will rise by $22.5 billion.

Reagan, in his budget message, said the bipartisan bailout plan enacted last spring has rescued Social Security "from the threat of insolvency raised by rampant inflation, excessive liberalizations and lagging growth of its tax base.

The budget forecasts that the ranks of retirees will grow by 700,000 next year. The system will pay $185.9 billion in retirement, disability and survivors' benefits, and cost

One of the changes Congress adopted to shore up the system was to delay last July's scheduled benefit hike for six months and to shift fiscal 1985. future increases to January. In addition to the projected 4.3 percent benefit hike at the start of 1985, the budget predicts a 4.6 percent benefit

The administration, which has completed almost 600,000 periodic reviews of the eligibility of people on the disability rolls in the past two years, expects to carry out 274,000 more such checks in

About 45 percent of the beneficiaries have been found ineligible, though some retain their benefits on appeal. The administration said it hopes new face-to-face hearings early in the appeals process starting this year "will improve the accuracy of decisions

Social Security's cash benefit programs will absorb nearly 21 percent of all federal spending in fiscal 1985. In addition, Medicare benefits, primarily funded through the Social Security payroll tax, are expected to cost $73.9 billion.

INCOME TAXES MADE EASY

Nearly nine million Americans continued to place their trust in H & R Block at tax time last year.

Why do millions of people keep coming back to H & R Block? Because they like many things about the service, including the care and accuracy of the work; the competency of the tax preparers and their thorough knowledge of all the new tax laws; and, especially, the tax dollars many have saved.

But that's not all. Block's customers value the good yearround service; the courteous treatment they receive; the personal, confidential attention; and the peace of mind attained in knowing a difficult task was completed at a reasonable charge.
