Few candidates file in area city, school elections

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

With the filing date only about three and a half weeks away for city and school board elections, most area cities and school districts Friday reported very few candidates had filed their intentions to run yet for the April 7 elections.

Deadline for filing in the elections is 5 p.m. on March 7, according to Pampa City Secretary Erma Hipsher.

Pampa has two city commissioner positions up for election, with the terms of Jay Johnson in Ward 2 and Clyde Carruth in Ward 4 expiring. Johnson has already announced he does not plan to run for re-election. By Friday afternoon, no one had filed to seek either position.

In the elections for Pampa Independent School District board of trustees positions, in contrast, all three incumbents had filed by Friday, reported Jerry Haralson, PISD business manager. Filing for the three 3-year terms are Wallace Birkes, Place 1; Darville Orr, Place 2, and Dr. Robert Lyle, Place 3. No other candidates have filed as yet.

For Lefors City Council, positions up for election include the mayor spot, currently held by Ben White, and councilman positions currently occupied by Darrell Keckler and Henry Wells, reported City Secretary Yvonne Pittman. None of the incumbents had filed Friday, but Mrs. Lea Welch has filed for a council spot.

Two positions are up for election for the Lefors Independent School District board of trustees. Incumbents are Garrel Robertson and Joe Watson. Only Robertson has filed his candidacy.

Two alderman positions are up for grabs in the Skellytown city council, for spots currently held by Larry Brown and Walt Barnett. Neither of the incumbents have filed as yet, but, in contrast to most other cities, six others have filed their candidacies. These are Jim Wise, Ralph Tice, Claud

Parks, Wesley Russell, Diann Woods and Mary Veale.

In White Deer city elections, the mayor's post and two councilman posts are available for potential candidates. The spots are currently held by Mayor Virgil James and Councilmen Raymond Blodgett and Dwight Huffman. R. W. Standeser has filed for the mayor's race. Incumbents Blodgett and Huffman have filed, as has Bill Weaver.

In the White Deer - Skellytown school board elections, two 3-year term positions currently held by Carl A. Mynear and Orville Craig, Jr., are facing election. Mynear and Jerry O'Neal have filed their candidacies.

In McLean city elections, alderman positions currently held by Jim Barker, Bill Thomas and June Suggs are up for candidacies. Wayne Bybee had been the only candidate to file by Friday afternoon.

McLean Independent School District has three board positions available. The two 3-year terms occupied by Tony Smitherman and James Hefley will be available for the April 7 elections. In addition, one 2-year term post is available due to one member moving out of the district. No one had filed for any of the posts Friday.

Alderman positions held by Susan Brown, Jerry Crowell and Jerry Gaines in Groom are open for election this year. No candidates had filed by Friday afternoon.

In Groom Independent School District two 3-year posts held by Louis Ruthardt and Don Lyles expire this year. Again, no candidates had filed their intentions to run for the school board offices.

Miami also has three alderman positions up for election in April. The spots are currently occupied by Randall Gill, Tom Stribling and Ronald Fields. But no candidates had filed Friday.

Snow fails to show, but winds rake area

Dark clouds, brief rain, some hail and blasts of wind over 80 miles an hour struck Pampa Friday evening through Saturday, but no snow appeared despite earlier forecasts a winter storm threatening up to three inches of accumulation.

While the snow missed the area, the cool high winds combined with moist air to create thunderstorms which formed near Pampa and swept northeastward into Oklahoma. Severe thunderstorm watches and tornado watches were issued for Gray County and surrounding areas of the eastern Panhandle about 7 p.m. Friday, with some sections under the watches until 1 a.m. Saturday.

Dust-laden skies gave way to dark clouds shortly after 6 p.m. Friday in Pampa. A brief heavy rain with some light hail hit the city about 6:45 p.m., leaving .01 inch of moisture.

Areas around Pampa received large hail, with some marble-sized hailstones reported near Pampa. McLean reported marble to golf-ball sized hail around 7 p.m., while Shamrock had heavy hail around 8 p.m.

Winds calmed down after the storm passed through Pampa but picked up late Friday night and continued through Saturday morning. Gusts over 80 mph were reported during the night, creating minor damages throughout the city.

The south side of the Sirloin Stockade sign on North Hobart was severely damaged as winds broke the plastic and scattered pieces over the parking lot. A power line reportedly blew down in the 800 block of North Christy, with residents calling fire and police about the danger of electrical sparks.

A big limb on an elm tree in Alameda

Park was broken off by the winds. Small limbs and branches were scattered throughout the city Saturday morning.

Road construction barricades and highway signs were blown over on North Duncan and Hwy. 70. Other highway signs blew over near the intersection of Price Road and Alcock. Other small signs were knocked over by the winds throughout the city.

Some flower arrangements at Fairview Cemetery were blown off graves and scattered about, many ending up in the gutter of Harvester Street at the south end of the cemetery.

Winds blowing around 35 to 40 miles an hour shortly after dawn dropped the chill factor to about 4 degrees below zero as the low dipped to 30 degrees. Friday's high had reached 63 degrees before the front entered the area.

The clouds which had hung over the area Friday night had generally disappeared Saturday morning, with the sun shining under partly cloudy skies. The northerly and westerly winds blew dirt across the city early Saturday morning, with the western parts of the city and areas near the mall and hospital receiving most of the dirt.

Winds of 30 to 40 mph continued throughout Saturday.

Temperatures had climbed into the mid 40s by Saturday afternoon. Earlier forecasts had indicated temperatures would reach only the upper 30s with wind-whipped snow drifting across area roads.

Forecasts for today called for fair skies with a high in the upper 40s following an overnight low near 20

Potent blizzard spreads snow across Plains

By DAVID L. LANGFORD Associated Press Writer

A powerful blizzard stormed into the Plains with winds gusting as high as 100 mph Saturday, spreading snow from the Texas Panhandle to the Dakotas and halting travel across parts of the Midwest with chest-high drifts.

Blizzard warnings were posted in the southeastern plains of Colorado, the Oklahoma Panhandle, and southwestern and north-central Nebraska, and many highways were barricaded or impassable.

Thousands of stranded travelers packed motels and truck stops as the storm swept out of the Rockies, where it had deposited up to 2 feet of snow earlier, and pushed toward the Great Lakes, fanning a foot of snow or more with winds gusting up to 60 mph across Kansas and Nebraska into Iowa and South Dakota.

In the Texas Panhandle town of Stratford the snow was hurled by winds gusting between 75 and 100 mph.

Wind gusts of 75 mph also were clocked at Boise City, Okla., where U.S. 287 was closed. Ben Harris, an employee at the Shamrock Truck Stop said, "You couldn't find a parking spot here if you wanted to. We're packed, with about 300 to 400 truckers."

In eastern Colorado, where nine highways were barricaded, including Interstate 70 from east to Denver to the Kansas border, Limon Police Chief Jim Trahern said all roads into town were closed with drifts of 4 to 5 feet.

In the northeastern Nebraska town of Norfolk, where 14 inches of snow had fallen by noon, mail carriers couldn't make their appointed rounds. "People are getting stuck all over," said Earl Meisinger, delivery and collections supervisor for the Norfolk Post Office.

With blowing snow making it impossible for drivers to see, Jack Billings, district superintendent of the Nebraska Department of Roads in Norfolk, said he might have to pull the snowplows off the streets.

In Oakley, Kan., about 60 miles east of the Colorado state line, about 15 busloads of travelers were among the hundreds stranded when Interstate 70 was closed. The motels filled up and about 400 people were waiting out the storm at a truck stop.

Among them was Carol Marcks, an elementary school principal from Kansas City, Mo., who was with a busload of about 40 teachers who had been on a ski trip to Vail, Colo. She said most people were "trying to help each other," but added, "It's not neat to be stuck here."

In Norton, Kan., about 80 miles northeast of Oakley, high school wrestlers from 10 cities who were in town for a regional wrestling match couldn't get home.

For Saturday night and Sunday, storm watches were in effect for southern Minnesota, northwestern Iowa, southeastern South Dakota, and eastern Nebraska as the storm tracked northeastward.

"The wind is probably going to be creating the most havoc," said Bill Sammler at the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Price of life $125,000 for ex-Miami resident

By JEFF LANGLEY Senior Staff Writer

Terri (Williams) Lenz, a 22-year-old woman who grew up in Miami, has at least three reasons for wanting to live — her children, Jesse, 3, Tasha, 2, and Brandi, 1.

What she needs most to stay alive is at least $125,000 to pay for a transplanted heart and lungs.

Terri, the daughter of former Miami residents Elroy and Carolyn Williams, celebrated her 22nd birthday two weeks ago, but her doctor says without a heart-lung transplant, it could be her last.

She suffers from a rare, incurable disorder called primary pulmonary hypertension. The disease with an unknown cause has quickly closed off her pulmonary artery, destroying both her heart and lungs.

"She has a rather desperate need of a heart-lung transplant at Stanford University; and as of this date, is just barely being maintained on medication. Her overall prognosis for the next year is very poor," her doctor, Charles C. Freeman, an Oklahoma City heart specialist, wrote in an appeal for funds.

Terri attended schools in Miami, where her father worked for the Michigan - Wisconsin Pipeline Company. The Williamses lived in Miami 12 years and were members of the Miami Church of Christ, before they moved to Laverne, Okla., in 1978.

Terri soon will suffer cardiac arrest and die without the difficult operation, according to her doctor.

Until last year, the young woman led a normal, healthy life. She graduated from high school in 1980. Then, in November 1983, Dr. Freeman diagnosed her fatal illness.

"When the doctor first told me, I automatically started crying. I was scared. I'd never heard of a heart-lung transplant," Terri told the Daily Oklahoman.

But the Stanford University Medical Center won't accept her as a patient until the operation's estimated cost of $125,000 is on deposit in a bank, according to sponsors of several funds set up to raise the needed cash.

Accounts for Terri's heart-lung transplant have been established at Citizen's Bank & Trust in Pampa, the First State Bank in Miami, and at the Central Church of Christ in Amarillo.

Churches of Christ in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Colorado also have been asked to help raise the money for the new heart and lungs.

"We ask your help in a matter of life and death," the Rev. David Brown, minister at the Miami church, wrote in a letter sent to Church of Christ congregations.

Terri and her unemployed husband are divorcing, according to family friends. Terri and the children moved in with her parents in their Laverne home. Mrs. Williams recently quit her job so she could stay and home and take care of Terri and the children.

The young mother with a failing heart and lungs has no medical insurance, and state and federal medical programs won't help pay for the heart-lung transplant because it is considered an experimental procedure.

"It was like getting hit in the head with a bat," Elroy Williams told the Oklahoma newspaper. "I'm not a wealthy man, and I have pride, but I would beg, borrow or steal to help her...It is a lot of money. I'd sell off everything we have, but it still wouldn't be enough."

Because of her age and will to live, Terri is a prime candidate for the risky operation, according to her doctors. With the operation, they say she has a 70 percent chance of returning to normal activities. Without it, her heart and lungs may fail in less than a year.

The $125,000 would cover only the cost

Terri (Williams) Lenz ...must have double transplant of the operation itself, the sponsors said. If she raises the needed money and is accepted as Oklahoma's first heart-lung transplant patient, Terri must live near the California medical center and be ready for the operation on a moment's notice. Travel and living expenses before and after the operation and the costs of any complications would be added to the cost of the heart-lung transplant.

To make a donation to the Terri Lenz funds, contact the banks. For more information, call Cheryl Varner after 6 p.m. at 665-2456.

Area cities may face higher phone bills

General Telephone Company of the Southwest Friday announced it has filed a request for an $84.8 million rate increase with the Texas Public Utility Commission, which, if granted, would increase residential and business telephone costs in seven Pampa area cities.

Towns and communities in this area served by General Telephone include White Deer, Groom, Wheeler, Miami, Mobetie, Panhandle and Clarendon.

The request seeks permission to increase the monthly basic rates for a one-party telephone in those towns from $8.55 to $14.10. Cost of one-party business phones would jump from $22.15 to $36.55 per month.

In addition, the company also seeks increases for service connections, miscellaneous services and equipment charges.

The cost of service connections in pre-wired homes would increase from the current charge of $59 to $104.50.

In addition, GTE wants to tack two "additives" onto monthly bills. Residential customers, in effect, would pay $1.30 per month toward buying the phone in their homes and a 45-cent per month charge as a "depreciation update."

The phone company, in filing the request, said it needs more money to make improvements demanded by its customers.

About $62 million of the increase is needed to allow GTE to make a profit on its "new investments," company president E.L. Langley said. The new investments are improvements made in response to customer dissatisfaction.

"The new investment dollars were spent to expand the local network in order to meet the increase in the number of customers served, to improve and modernize service as required by the mandates of customers and the Public Utility Commission, and to expand services to meet the needs of today's customers," Langley said in a press release.

The Public Utility Commission is already considering a request for rate increases from Southwestern Bell, the telephone utility that serves other cities in the area.

Panel recommends hefty hike in salaries of Texas teachers

AUSTIN (AP) — Public schools in Texas will have to offer teachers starting salaries of $15,200 a year if they want to compete with other professions for top college graduates, a subcommittee of the Select Committee on Public Education was told Saturday.

Currently the minimum salary for a beginning teacher in Texas public schools is $11,110 a year, and the average salary for a new teacher is $14,400 a year.

Subcommittee chairman Rep. Bill Haley said no estimate has been made on how much a proposal to raise the recommended minimum to $15,200 would cost the state or school districts.

The subcommittee took no action Saturday, but it is scheduled to make a recommendation by March 5 to the entire committee, which is studying Texas schools.

The proposal to raise salaries for beginning teachers was made to accompany a proposed "career ladder" for teachers that the subcommittee is considering.

The proposed promotion system would include four steps that would rank teachers on classroom performance, job-related education after college, years of experience and at least one exam on subject matter and teaching methods.

Consultants who studied teacher salaries suggested to the subcommittee that the new salaries take effect in September.

They also suggested that the new promotion system be phased in during the next two years.

Subcommittee member Will Davis of Austin proposed a method of evaluating teachers for promotion from step to step of the career ladder. Davis' proposed system would have included a written test as well as evaluation of classroom performance.

"We're going to have to have some kind of testing or we won't be able to get the salary increase through the Legislature," said Haley, D-Center.

Ed Small of Austin cautioned against putting too much emphasis on the written test instead of evaluation of teaching skills.

"We're hurrying through something here that could destroy morale in a minute," Dean Corrigan of Texas A&M said.

The consultants told the subcommittee that by fall of 1986, beginning teachers should be paid $17,000 a year and so-called master teachers with a minimum of nine years' experience and outstanding records should make a minimum of $25,970.

The salary figures were based on a 10-month work year.

Local youngster's condition serious

A 5-year-old Pampa boy injured Thursday evening when his bicycle was struck by a vehicle was listed in serious condition at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo Saturday.

Curtis Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson, 2304 Rosewood, was critically injured about 6:20 p.m. Thursday when the bicycle he was riding was hit by a Ford Bronco driven by Gary Wayne Niccum, 417 Lowry, in the 1200 block of East Kingsmill, according to police reports.

The child was taken by Pampa Medical Services ambulance to Coronado Community Hospital, where medical personnel worked until about 11:45 p.m. to stabilize his condition. The boy sustained severe multiple injuries in the crash, according to medical personnel.

He was then transferred to NWTX in extremely critical condition. NWTX personnel reported his condition as critical Friday.

No citations were issued in the accident. Reports indicated Niccum had pulled out from a parked position and had not seen the youth. The accident was still under investigation Saturday.

Board to meet Tuesday

Pampa Independent School District board of trustees will meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Carver Educational Service Center to hear a budget report on expenses and revenue through Feb. 14.

Board members also will hear a request from representatives of the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation to implement a Waste in Place program in the elementary schools for next school year. The program is designed to help control litter problems in schools.

In other business, the board will consider on first reading a policy approval, approve due bills and invoices and hold a possible executive session on personnel matters.

Elections scheduled

George W. Arrington, Ben Mathers and Lonnie Donaldson expire this year. Incumbent Donaldson and Carl Hornback have filed their candidacies.

Canadian Independent School District reported one 3-year term, held by Elise Krebbel, and an unexpired term will be available for candidates. Incumbent Mrs. Krebbel and William Rogers had filed by Friday.

Wheeler city posts up for election in April are the mayor's spot and three councilman posts. Current mayor is Lewis C. Stas. Place 2 councilman is David C. Ross, and Place 4 councilman is Joe D. Montgomery. Place 1 councilman post is up for election due to a resignation. The city secretary was not in Friday, so no information on candidacy filings was available.

Wheeler Independent School District has three 3-year term spots up for election. Currently holding those board positions are Don Whiteley, Place 1; Mrs. Betty Hennard, Place 2, and Dr. Mike Smith, Place 3. Incumbent Whiteley and Chris Gately had filed for Place 1. Incumbent Mrs. Hennard had filed for her Place 2 post. No other candidates had filed.

Perryton has the mayor's position and two councilman posts up for city elections. Current office holders are Mayor Quentin Rizey and Councilmen Wayne Sexton and Charles Kelly. None of the incumbents had filed Friday, but Troy Barclay had filed for a councilman's post.

In the Alaneered school board trustee elections, three 3-year terms held by R. D. McLain, Ed Seiler and Olin J. Weldon are open for election. Filing by Friday were incumbent Weldon and Sid Keese.

In the Grandview - Hopkins Independent School District, three 3-year terms and two unexpired terms are facing elections in April. Six candidates had filed, but names were not available Friday afternoon.

Also not available Friday, due to closed offices or inability to reach personnel having the information, were filing reports on the Mobeetie city and school board elections and the Miami and Perryton school board filings. Information on those will be provided later this week.

City secretaries and school officials said the sparse filings are not uncommon. Most candidates will wait until the last week, if not the last day, to file for election, they indicated.

State of Texas catches a tough case of the flu

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press Writer

A flu epidemic that swept into Texas on the heels of one of the state's worst cold spells has closed schools from the Panhandle to Pineywoods and sent businesses scrambling to find replacements for stricken workers.

"It's just been devastating," said Frank Jennings, superintendent of the tiny Lake Travis school system west of Austin.

His was one of several small school districts forced to close doors when the flu hit the classrooms, claiming teachers and students alike.

Temporary help agencies, meanwhile, say they've had problems coping with an unprecedented demand.

"Business has been wild," said one agency supervisor.

Texas is one of 13 states reporting widespread outbreaks of influenza, said Karl Kappus, an epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Children, who aren't old enough to have developed immunities to current strains of the flu, have been the bug's most common targets in Texas, he said.

Texas schools normally have absentee rates of about 5 percent, but nearly 65 percent of the state's schools have been reporting rates exceeding 10 percent, said Jeff Taylor, staff epidemiologist at the State Department of Health.

"Statewide, more than 60 percent of the schools are experiencing absenteeism above 10 percent," Taylor said. "They don't say it is all from the flu, but there is only one infectious disease in the United States today that causes that kind of absenteeism, and that is influenza."

The epidemic began about the middle of January and should run about eight weeks, Taylor said.

"We are probably about in the middle of our activity," he said.

That activity is measured mostly at the doctor's office and the corner drug store.

Dr. Ray Rhodes, a Fort Worth pediatrician, said 75 percent of the patients he's seen the past several weeks are flu victims with "fever, headaches... muscle aches."

"With most of them you treat the symptoms — tell them to stay in bed and drink plenty of liquids," Rhodes said.

He said the flu in his patients has been running a two-to-five-day course.

It was about three weeks ago that the outbreak in Fort Worth began, Rhodes noted, and "in a day or two you could really see it start. It's been pretty much in full swing since then."

Molly Bennett at Whitten's, a Fort Worth chain of neighborhood pharmacies, said they've had a run on flu remedies.

"They are coming in and asking about antibiotics, cough syrup, and stuff for the nose, aches and pains — we're getting it all." She said many flu victims come in for over-the-counter products but then return a few days later "with three prescriptions in their hand."

She estimated about a 50 percent increase in such products because of the flu.

Taylor said three different flu viruses have been found in the state, most of them from two types — Influenza B-Singapore or Influenza A-H1N1 (either Russian or English), he said.

"It's thought that people above their mid 30s were exposed extensively to the ancestors of these strains when they were prevalent before the mid 1950s," Kappus said. "Their immunity appears to be very strong... after all those years."

Cold spells like the one that hit Texas in December may aid the spread of flu, but that has not been scientifically proven, he said.

The economic impact of flu epidemics is significant, but difficult to measure, experts say. A study in the 1960s estimated that each case cost the economy $100, a figure that would be significantly higher today, Kappus said.

The impact would be severe enough on small business and school districts — whose budgets are most taxed by overtime pay and temporary employees — to make it worthwhile for employers to offer workers inoculations each year, said David Warner, a University of Texas health economist.

"As long as there isn't a health risk (from the immunization), it would certainly be cost effective," he said.

"But of course you don't know if 20 percent of the population is going to have that type of flu."

If school absentee rates are any indication, the epidemic may have peaked about a week ago when most of the school closings were reported.

Schools in the Lake Travis district closed for two days that week — when 30 percent of the 750 students stayed home.

In the Panhandle town of Happy, schools were closed Feb. 3 for two days after the absentee rate hit 35 percent.

"The kids were really looking drooped," said Superintendent Harley McCasland.

Schools at Early, near Brownwood in West Central Texas; at Salado, west of Waco, and in Palestine and the adjacent Westwood district in East Texas, also closed for two days. Twenty of 65 teachers were ill in Early at one point.

"When you have subs (substitute teachers) in a class and half your students out, you're wasting time. Then it got to the point when you couldn't even find subs," said Esther Falitsy, secretary to the Early school superintendent.

Bigger school districts, with their larger pools of substitute teachers, managed to stay open.

Austin reported absentee rates of 15 to 20 percent; Texarkana, 20 to 30 percent; Port Arthur, 18 percent; and Lubbock, 11 percent.

Dallas had three schools with rates exceeding 20 percent. In nearby Fort Worth, the district-wide rate hit 10 percent.

Dismissal move fails

Geter must face retrial

DALLAS (AP) — A judge Saturday cleared the way for Lenell Geter's April retrial, denying the black engineer's motion to throw the case out "in the interest of justice" because there was no basis for it in Texas law.

State District Judge John Ovard, who heard five days of testimony during which defense attorneys tried to paint a picture of racism and police overzealousness, said the case raised two important Constitutional questions.

"After hearing the evidence and researching the law, I have concluded that under current Texas law this particular court does not have the authority to grant this motion," Ovard said.

The judge also "carried" a motion questioning the validity of photographic lineups used to convict Geter of armed robbery in October 1982, saying he would rule on it later.

"Both (issues) really reach significant Constitutional questions and we'll carry them in that light," said Ovard, who earlier in the week of the pre-trial hearing said he thought the questions may require U.S. Supreme Court rulings.

Geter, 26, was convicted and sentenced to life in prison for the Aug. 23, 1982, robbery of a Balch Springs fast-food restaurant. He was released in December after nearly 16 months in prison following wide-spread news coverage questioning his conviction and protests by blacks.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade agreed to a new trial, scheduled for April 9, conceding that news reports of the case, including a lengthy CBS News "60 Minutes" segment, had raised doubts about the validity of the conviction.

"I'm disappointed and I felt that this could be the end of my trials and tribulations," Geter said after Ovard's ruling. "But I understand he was acting within his powers. I was just hoping and praying I wouldn't have to go to trial."

Ovard said even though he was denying the novel "interest of justice" motion, he would allow defense attorneys to file more briefs and possibly present additional testimony on it.

Defense attorney George Hairston said he believed the judge was sympathetic to his argument.

"I think it's clear that had he had such authority, he might have dismissed it (the case)," Hairston said.

Assistant District Attorney Gerald Banks questioned why, if the judge did not have legal authority to rule on the issue, he listened to five days of testimony.

"I think that with the law and the evidence, the judge could have reached this decision (last) Monday instead of today," Banks said.

Police officers' aggressive pursuit of Geter, a South Carolina State College graduate who had no police record and became a suspect only after an elderly white woman became frightened by the "colored man" in a park in front of her house, forms the foundation of the defense's claim of police misconduct.

Geter claims police had no reason to place him in lineups other than the fact that he was a black, from out-of-state, in a predominately white Texas town.

'Wiskey maker' sues Aramco

HOUSTON (AP) — A U.S. oil worker sentenced to 200 lashes and two years in a Saudi Arabia prison for running a whiskey still in that anti-alcohol nation has filed a $60 million lawsuit against his employer, Aramco, claiming the firm was responsible for his plight.

Robert Taggart, of Bartlesville, Okla., claimed in the suit that Aramco, the Arabian American Oil Co., provided instructions and supplies to make alcoholic beverages but later told police in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, that he was running a still at his home.

Taggart also contended in the suit, filed last week in Houston federal court, that Aramco turned against him so his job as division manager could be filled by a Saudi citizen under the company's program to replace Americans with native employees. Aramco also fired his wife, Mildred, who worked as a computer programmer, the suit said.

Jim Knight, an Aramco spokesman in Washington, D.C., declined to comment on the suit.

"It's inappropriate to discuss this case in view of the pending litigation," Knight told the Houston Chronicle in a story published Saturday.

The couple has asked U.S. District Judge George Cire to order Aramco to pay $60 million in compensation and punitive damages. Aramco, a consortium of major American oil companies, employs about 61,000 people. About half the employees are Saudi natives.

The couple's attorney, Bruce Locke of Houston, said Taggart is appealing his sentence, which he received in December, and the 200 lashes will not be administered until the matter is settled. Mrs. Taggart is under house arrest, Locke said.

An unnamed spokesman for the State Department said the case is being monitored but the U.S. government has not lodged a protest with the Saudi government.

Taggart went to work for Aramco in Houston in 1978. He was transferred to the Middle East two years later.

Use of alcohol is forbidden by the Islamic faith. But the suit claimed that Aramco assured Taggart he would not get into trouble for using alcohol in the company compound, because Saudi authorities respected "the sanctity of the home."

The suit said the company distributes the book, "Blue Flame," showing employees how to make alcohol and sells bulk sugar and yeast at its commissary.

According to the suit, Aramco security personnel told Taggart on Nov. 13 that his house had been under surveillance but that the case would "remain in Aramco hands" if he signed a statement admitting he used, manufactured and sold alcohol.

Top schools are chosen

AUSTIN (AP) — A state education official says 12 high schools and 10 junior highs have been nominated as the best in the state, and will compete for national presidential awards.

The high schools selected by the Texas Education Agency include Arlington Lamar, Austin McCallum, Brazoswood, Corpus Christi King, Houston Bellaire, Houston Stratford, Klein Forest, Nacogdoches, Richardson, San Antonio Clark, San Antonio MacArthur and Sherman.

The 10 junior highs chosen to compete for the national award are Andrews; Bleyl Cypress-Fairbanks; Desert View, Ysleta; Hubbard, Tyler; Lincoln, McAllen; McCulloch, Highland Park; Parkhill, Richardson; Rancier, Killeen; Schlimpfeign, Plano.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Can government compel education?

Does government have the right to force you to become educated? And if it tries, can it succeed?

We think the answer to both questions is "no." And that's why, despite the steady stream of proposals flowing out of Austin aimed at improving public education in Texas, we advise you not to hold your breath in anticipation of our public schools suddenly becoming citadels of educational excellence.

We are not optimistic about widespread improvements despite the multitude of curriculum changes and mandatory new standards currently being proposed by the state board of education and H. Ross Perot's Select Committee on Education.

We are not optimistic because most of those proposals are based on even more compulsion, coercion and force than has been applied to the public schools in the past and, in the long run, they would do as much harm as good.

In the past several months, we have heard it proposed that children be compelled to start to school at the age of three; that they be compelled to attend school the year around; that they be compelled to stay in school as late as 5:30 p.m. each day; that they be compelled to embark either on a vocational program or academic program before reaching high school; that they be compelled to take more courses than some people consider important whether they are their parents' agree to their importance; and so it goes. That is not education. It is tyranny.

There are only three ways a nation's education system can be operated. It can attempt to use democratic principles; it can use totalitarian principles or it can use freedom of choice.

We have tried democratic principles combined with totalitarianism in the past, and they haven't worked. The quality of education in public schools has declined steadily. Now, all the new ideas flowing from Austin and Washington indicate we are going to expand the totalitarian aspects, and that won't work either. The one thing nobody in the education establishment is thinking about is free choice and that's why we're pessimistic about the future of education in this country.

Application of democratic principals to public schools has not and cannot produce excellence because any government-operated system of education is doomed to eventual mediocrity despite the most sincere and dedicated efforts of state education officials, local trustees and classroom teachers. It is not the fault of those who operate the system; the fault is in the system itself.

Why? Because, first of all, a government-operated school system, because it is operated by government, must serve all the people. Its standards have to be within reach of the brightest and slowest; of the industrious and the lazy. Standards of excellence in government-operated schools must be within reach of a majority of the students. And, if they are attainable by a majority, then they do not represent excellence.

So, those standards must eventually sink to the lowest common denominator of mediocrity. They simply have to if we are to preserve Democratic principles. It would be unjust and unfair for schools which are paid for by all the people to function in such a manner that only the brightest students could achieve success.

Also, in a democracy, public schools are owned by all the people and all the people do not agree on what is excellence and what is mediocrity. If you think they do, then you haven't heard the howls of protest that go up each time the Select Committee on Education comes forth with a new proposal.

Whether the proposals have merit or not is irrelevant. The point is that the people who pay the bills have a right to set the agenda. And, since it is not remotely possible that more than a bare majority of citizens, if that many, can agree on an agenda for public schools, any agenda in order to win acceptance must of necessity be a compromise. Compromises are never the right solution to any problem. They are solutions that are part right and part wrong. And anything that is only partially right is totally wrong.

In an effort to erase the mediocrity that has developed over the years, we are now apparently moving into an era in which professional educators want not only to maintain, but seek to expand, the compulsion that has been a part of public schools for years now. Parents who disagree with what they propose will still be compelled to pay for the operation of public schools and be compelled to send their children to participate in programs of which they disapprove. That will not produce excellence because excellence can be achieved only by those who want it. Government cannot mandate excellence.

That brings us to the choice that is not even being considered these days—freedom. We wonder of those who are determining the future of education in this country ever considered that most citizens feel the mediocrity now causing concern is limited to the elementary and secondary schools, where there has been only limited freedom of choice. At the same time, the colleges and universities of this country, where students are free to choose the schools they attend and the courses they study, are generally considered as pretty good providers of education.

Those who wring their hands about the current status of education and say we are losing our competitive edge with other nations because the quality of education in this country has declined, and propose as a remedy more controls and more compulsion from Washington or Austin are more than a little mixed up.

Education is not what made the United States of America a great and prosperous nation. Education does not cause prosperity; it results from prosperity.

The one thing that the United States had in its beginning that other nations didn't have was freedom. We became the greatest nation in the history of the world only because we were the freest nation in the history of the world. There is no other reason. We became an educated nation after we became a prosperous nation, not before.

Therefore, if we diminish freedom, we diminish prosperity. And if we diminish prosperity, we diminish education. The advocates of more compulsion are wrong.

Freedom is not only more desirable than compulsion. It works better. It's a pity that apparently nobody in this country's education establishment or government believes that.

Aren't sports shockingly racist

We began this year with a reconstituted U.S. Civil Rights Commission. Reagan appointees, headed by Mr. Clarence Pendleton, give us a rational conservative majority. Of course, rationality and conservatism are not always embodied in the same person. Anyway, being a light mood today, we began to wonder about the 1984 agenda of the Civil Rights Commission should be: What should it study? What court cases should it bring? How can it guarantee a "fair" society? Since speculation over the requirements for a fair society is infinitely easier than actually producing something of value, we decided to turn on the television while mulling over this problem.

There right before my eyes were racial disparities: a college basketball game between North Carolina and North Carolina State. While blacks comprise only 12 percent of the population, there on the court 90 percent of the players were black. White members of both teams held down less prestigious jobs - like warming the bench. We have seen such blatant racism at other college games. It is the same thing over and over. Racism is amateurish, so we decided to watch the pros. It was worse.

Whites didn't even have their proportionate share of bench - warming positions - 75 percent of the National Basketball Association (NBA) players are black. Plus they are the highest paid. Not only is there discrimination against whites, but Orientals, Hispanics and Armenians are conspicuously underutilized. NBA abuse of women needs no comment.

This writer loves basketball, but morality dictates I boycott it, so the TV set was switched to an ice hockey game.

Good grief, there were only white players. Figuring this was the reverse of basketball, and the other race would be on the bench, we waited for the camera to pan the reserves. It did; not only were there no blacks on the bench, there were none in the stands. This kind of racial disparity becomes even worse when you consider that the hockey teams playing were the Washington Capitals and Philadelphia Flyers, cities whose populations are 75 percent and 40 percent black respectively.

These racial disparities in sports are rampant yet are completely ignored by government agencies, civil rights organizations, and others striving for a fair society.

Look at professional football. How come the guy who runs back the kickoff tend to be black while the quarterback, tends to be white? Does this mean there are unspoken white jobs and black jobs in sports? What about sexism in professional football. There are no women players, which may be understandable since some of the poses required of the players, especially the center, are very un ladylike. There's even sexism. When you have seen men flashing their bare midriffs as members of such groups as the Dallas Cowperson's Cheerleaders.

While basketball, hockey, football and other sports have their racial problems none of them match that of professional boxing. How come, particularly in the heavier divisions, it is always the white boxer on the canvas getting up with a bloody face? If we had a racial justice, it would be blacks on the canvas with bloody faces 90 percent of the time.

There will not be full equity of opportunity and fairness in our society until all these blatant racial and sexual disparities in sports are eliminated. The U.S. Civil Rights Commission must do something about it. A good start would be to require teams to institute specific hiring guidelines, like those in the nation's fire and police departments, to insure the multi - billion dollar sports industry truly reflects the American society.

Wake up America!

Letter to the editor

School board decision supported

Dear Editor,
I am writing concerning the Pampa schools' Board of Trustees' recent decisions. The decisions exhibit an intelligent and progressive approach toward the difficult, long standing problems of education in Pampa.

I commend the students who wrote the letter to the editor which was published in Sunday's Pampa News. The letter was well researched and written. I understand that this is "high anxiety" time for Pampa students (in my own children included). I have seen the importance of extracurricular activities to my own children - not just in ability in their chosen activities, but also in their self confidence, self discipline, and social acceptance.

However, I don't feel that a more academic approach to education in Pampa will undermine the effectiveness of extracurricular activities. On the contrary, the proposed changes should only enhance education in every area. The various activity groups should actually be stronger. Those students involved will be more committed and will place a higher value on participation in the activity. More youngsters who lack natural talent in an activity, but who have tremendous drive and desire will be more likely to receive the coaching - teaching and encouragement they need to achieve. Elective classes that specialize in advanced training in an activity can be added to the curriculum to meet the needs of those students with special talents and interests. There should be less friction between teaching factions, and a more mutually supportive atmosphere should prevail. Students should perform better in activities because their minds will be better honed to act and react intelligently.

Our youngsters seem especially concerned about the number of classes they will be allowed to miss for participation in a given activity. Actually, that's not the kids' worry. It's the job of the coaches - teachers to do some creative problem solving and scheduling. As is already true, the coaches - teachers will decide the schedules and then inform the participating students when to be where for what activity.

As for the top students participating in activities: Those students can't possibly be hurt by a return to academics. They will continue to excel in school work and extracurricular activities. However, their education will be enriched by challenges and opportunities which were previously available.

An element in the trustees' decisions that seems to have eluded our young people is the element of care. The decisions show that the trustees are responsible adults who care enough about our children's futures to make drastic and unpopular changes. These people care enough to put themselves on the firing line knowing they will have to withstand criticism and possible harrassment. They care enough to risk alienating those they care the most about - Pampa's youth!

I believe in the sincerity of the people who make up the Pampa public school system. I believe Pampa has the potential for producing one of the finest school systems in Texas. The problems we are tackling now did not develop overnight and they will not disappear overnight. However, we have many dedicated teachers and school administrators. We have community support for our youngsters, that is hard to beat. We have parents who care and participate. And, let's face it, we have terrific kids!

I realize that the changes and goals of the Pampa schools' Board of Trustees are far reaching and challenging, but they are realistic and obtainable. I'm excited about the new possibilities for the discovery and growth of abilities as yet uncovered in our children. One of the beautiful fringe benefits Pampanos can look forward to will be the improved self image of our youngsters when they realize they are worth the very best education Texas has to offer.

Thank you for the opportunity to express myself.

P.S. Regarding the letter to the editor complaining that the school decisions were made while certain board members were at a balgame: whoever the absent members were should evaluate their priorities. Wasn't their attendance at such a heavyweight board meeting more important than a balgame?

Smart politics, but bad policy

NEW YORK (NEA) - The transfer of our Marines in Beirut to offshore troop transports will go far toward defusing their presence in Lebanon as a political issue. But the way in which congressional Democrats have played with this whole subject raises anew the question of how long the American people can afford to go on electing Republican presidents and then giving the Democrats control of one or both Houses of Congress.

It probably strikes many voters as amusing, or even shrewd, to distribute the Constitution's already carefully balanced powers to diametrically opposed political parties. ("They can't do us as much harm if they're paralyzing each other, right?")

But this primitive analysis overlooks some important facts. A president, after all, is elected to lead this country for four years. In order to do that effectively, he must surely be allowed, at least within reason, to lay down the policies he wants to pursue, designate the administrators who are to carry them out, and obtain from Congress the necessary appropriations. The party "out of power" is entitled, and indeed expected, to oppose his policies, look critically on his appointments and resist appropriations aimed at effectuating his programs - again, within reason. In parliamentary democracies such as Britain, where control of the executive branch depends squarely on possession of a majority in the legislature, this state of affairs is automatic.

But consider what has happened recently in the U.S. Of the 19 Congresses elected since the end of World War II, 10 have been controlled in whole or in part by a political party hostile to the incumbent president. This is obviously highly inconvenient for the president (though he is likely to minimize the problem as long as possible). But it is almost equally, albeit less obviously, inconvenient for the other party. It cannot abandon its basic constitutional role as the vigilant opposition, yet the voters have given it the power to insist on actual participation in the formulation of policies.

The result, as one might expect, has been near - paralysis on any issue big enough and controversial enough to require a united effort by both the president and the Congress. The classic example is Social Security: a "killer issue" for any politician careless enough to let himself get depicted as hostile to the elderly, yet festooned with promises no future administration could possibly keep. President Reagan dared to propose a minor reform, Tip O'Neill and his Democrats swiftly made political hay at his expense. Mr. Reagan finally resolved S.S.'s basic problem (temporarily) by the strictly extra - constitutional technique of appointing a bipartisan commission to hammer out a set of recommendations. It took a similar commission to save the MX missile. These were acts of high statesmanship - but also declarations of pro tanto bankruptcy, so far as concerns America's orthodox but divided (and therefore paralyzed) political processes.

The situation is even worse in the field of foreign policy. It used to be taken for granted in this country that "politics stops at the water's edge" - meaning, in practice, that Congress (and even, for many purposes, the courts) left foreign policy strictly to the White House and the State Department. All that came to an end in the final stages of the Vietnam War. A Democratic Congress pulled the plug on further aid to South Vietnam despite the appeals of a Republican president - and down the drain went South Vietnam.

Since then, and especially when Congress and the White House have been controlled by different parties, Congress has deemed it its duty to jerk the president around on matters of foreign policy. Any commitment of U.S. troops abroad must now end within 90 days unless Congress approves a longer stay. Military aid to foreign nations is often conditioned upon semi - annual reports from the president to Congress certifying that those nations are "making continued progress" toward free elections or human rights or whatever. Having first authorized the Marines to stay in Lebanon for 18 months, the Democrats in Congress were preparing to call on Mr. Reagan to pull them out at once, when the deterioration of the situation in Beirut inspired the House leadership to hold off and "let him stew in his own juice."

That may be smart politics, but it is hurting America. If the voters want Reagan, in heaven's name give him a Congress that does, too.

Lebanon president warns that his country is dying

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria denounced the new eight-point Lebanon peace plan and insisted Saturday on unconditional abrogation of the Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal accord. President Amin Gemayel appealed for compromise and warned that "Lebanon is dying."

Sporadic fire rattled back and forth across the "green line" dividing Beirut's Christian and Moslem sectors.

Saudi envoys who shuttled between Beirut and Damascus said Syria rejected the eight-point plan. The Syrian government's first response to it was a Friday night statement calling the plan "an open trick" to secure implementation of provisions in the May 17 accord.

The plan included many provisions of that accord, including simultaneous Israeli and Syrian withdrawals from Lebanon. Leaders of the Syrian-backed Druse and Shiite militias have rejected it.

Gemayel says he is ready to discard the May pact, but only as part of the new plan. It was believed to be Saudi-sponsored, but that government disavowed it, saying it was put forward by Gemayel.

There was small arms fire between Christian and Syrian-backed Druse militiamen near Damour, on the coast south of the capital. An Israeli army armored unit took up a position near the Druse-controlled town, 10 miles north of its Awali River defense line in south Lebanon, but there were no reports of any Israeli involvement in the fighting.

4,000 said killed in Iran-Iraq war

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

Iran said today it had "liberated" 60 squares miles of borderland and seized "strategic waterways" in its offensive against Iraq.

Iraq, meanwhile, said it sent jets on mock air raids over Tehran and 11 other cities deep inside Iran overnight "as a reminder of the capabilities of the Iraqi air force."

The events followed a major battle on Friday in the center of the 700-mile border the Persian Gulf nations share 100 miles east of Baghdad. Dispatches from both sides said total casualties from two days of fighting exceeded 4,000.

Iraqi communiques said Iran lost more than 2,000 killed, but did not give a figure for the battle on Friday.

President Reagan ordered the 1,200 U.S. Marines in Lebanon to begin withdrawing from their base this weekend, and several landing craft carryin men and gear were seen leaving the Marine beachhead Saturday.

But the chief spokesman for the Marines, army Col. Ed McDonald, denied the pullout had begun.

In Damascus, Saudi Prince Saud al-Faisal said Syrian President Hafez Assad refused to accept the eight-point plan and was sending Saudi mediator Rafif Hariri back to Beirut with Syrian counter-proposals.

Up Close...

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Ed Barker, 44, has had a varied career in the past few years, moving from pastoring a church to serving as a patrolman with the Pampa Police Department and then taking over as the new Gray County juvenile probation officer.

But he says he has seen all three jobs as having the same purpose: being able to help others.

Barker said he saw the jobs as giving him "a chance to be helpful to society."

"I think everyone needs faith in God, but they also need more than just that," he said. That other thing includes having people willing to work together to improve opportunities to better themselves and avoid situations that could lead to problems requiring conflicts with the judicial system.

He was born and raised in Louisville, Ky. After high school, he attended Nazarene Bible College at Colorado Springs, receiving an associate degree in Bible studies. He earned his bachelor of arts degree in education, with a minor in elementary education, at Rockmont College in Denver. He then attended California Graduate School of Theology in Glendale, Calif., earning a master of arts degree of counseling in psychology. He lived in another town, however, and drove 120 miles a day for 16 months while finishing classroom work on his master's degree.

He had pastored churches in Colorado and California while attending college. He also pastored churches in Indiana before moving to Pampa in 1980.

Here he served as pastor of the Church of the Nazarene from August, 1980, to February, 1982.

While serving as pastor in Pampa, he worked with the Pampa Police Department as a chaplain. He developed the chaplaincy program with the PPD, writing a constitution and getting local ministers involved in riding in patrol cars with policemen.

Enjoying his association with the police work, he resigned his pastorate and went to work fulltime with the PPD as a patrolman. He said he saw the policeman's job as being another opportunity to help others.

He worked as a patrolman for nearly two years. During his time there, he left for awhile to attend the Jefferson County Sheriff's Academy in Colorado, receiving 128 hours of classroom training. He has also had 320 hours of law enforcement training with the Panhandle Regional Law Enforcement Academy at Amarillo College. In addition, he has about another 100 hours of training in such areas as Crime Stoppers programs and police investigation techniques.

His final assignment with the PPD was as school liaison officer with the Pampa Independent School District, working with school officials to consider student problems and education involving law enforcement.

When Bill Leonard announced he was retiring as juvenile probation officer after 24 1/2 years, Barker applied for the position.

The city interviewed seven candidates, Barker said. He was interviewed on Jan. 25 and was offered the job on Jan. 26. The next day he resigned from the PPD and took over as juvenile probation officer on Feb. 1.

"The transition was very quick," he said.

Of his tenure with the Police Department, Barker said, "I enjoyed my work there. I didn't leave for any negative reasons." He said he sees the career change as "just a different side" of law enforcement and justice. And as another opportunity to help others.

The change from being a policeman to serving in the juvenile probation office is "a chance to widen that field of helping society." He sees his new position as "more of a ministry to society" in helping youths now instead of having to deal with them "down the road." Barker said he hopes to be able to help many youths "before they get to that point."

"I enjoy working with young people," he said. He added that he sees his new position as a preventive measure to keep young people out of the judicial system and to keep them from having a court record which could follow them throughout their lives.

His responsibilities include making a preliminary investigation in cases involving juveniles and determining if there is a justification in following the case through the juvenile court system.

If there is a need for the court to handle a situation, he presents the case to the County Judge, who decides if a Juvenile Court hearing is needed.

The court could place juveniles on probation, either by voluntary request or by a court order. Youths on probation then check in regularly with Barker. He said he currently has about 25 juveniles on probation.

Sometimes he may have to decide if the probation needs revocation, in which case the youth is taken back before the Juvenile Court for further disposition.

Other responsibilities include counseling with the youths and their families. He also makes referrals to the Department of Human Resources, Pampa Family Services and health organizations as needed.

"There's a wide scope of responsibilities" in his new job, Barker said.

On the job for only about three weeks, Barker said he has spent much of his time going over records left by Leonard. "He kept good records," he said; "it makes a responsibility to follow in the same path."

He's also taking time to get acquainted with people in the Court House and with members of the Juvenile Board. He noted that his exact job title is "chief juvenile probation officer," since his job is part of the Juvenile Board, the Juvenile Court and other probation officer staff members.

As part of the quick transition, Barker also is working on decorating his office with potted plants, photos, new paint and wooden mallard ducks he plans to bring into the office.

"People have been so kind," he said, in acknowledging his new job, offering him congratulations, showing interest in his work and "just being helpful."

He said he's looking forward to his new work. "To have a job well done, a person has to be interested in what he's doing," he explained. And his talk indicates he is very interested in the work. He plans to attend Sam Houston University at Houston later for juvenile probation officer training school.

"I don't do much of anything any more" outside of his work, Barker said. He plays some golf. "And I like to fish when the opportunity presents itself."

He and his wife, Jennie, have two children, both now living in Denver. His son Dan, 22, works as a subcontractor for building houses. His daughter Kelly, 20, is an optician.

Stock market sending out different message

NEW YORK (AP) — These are uneasy days for anyone who looks to the stock market for economic forecasts. All the official readings on business activity seem to point to a continuation of the strong growth that occurred last year. But stock prices, with their steep decline over the past six weeks, appear to be sending out a much different message.

"Investor-perception of the economic outlook has dramatically changed in recent weeks," said Lee Idelman, director of research at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "Talk of a new slump is becoming more commonplace."

"The stock market seems to be telegraphing an SOS regarding the prospective health of the economy later in 1984," Thomas Stiles, research chief at E.F. Hutton & Co., said in the firm's latest bulletin to clients.

The market has long been noted for its respectable, if less than perfect, record of signaling future trends before they are visible to the average forecaster's eye. Its reputation on that score was enhanced a year and a half ago when it surged upward, foreshadowing the end of the 1981-82 recession many weeks before it occurred.

Nevertheless, many analysts like Idelman and Stiles believe there is plenty of reason for hope that the market has missed the call this time.

"Any changes we might make at this time would be to strengthen, not weaken our forecast of overall activity," Idelman said.

"If we are right in this view of continued economic expansion, then it should only be a matter of time before the stock market rediscovers the healthy profits outlook."

Whether or not its crystal ball is malfunctioning, there is no disputing the damage the market has inflicted on optimistic investors since early January.

Jay Donnaruma at the Albany, N.Y., brokerage firm of C.L. King & Associates said many stock charts of late "have the glide path of a brick being thrown from a tenth-story window."

In the past week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 11.83 to 1,148.87, bringing its loss since Jan. 6 to 137.77 points.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index down .48 at 89.59, and the American Stock Exchange market value index off 1.31 at 205.66.

Big Board volume averaged 86.45 million shares a day, against 106.81 million the week before.

Regardless of the degree of their economic optimism, most analysts agree that taking a plunge into the stock market at the moment is a risky proposition. "This is hardly the time for reckless speculation," Stiles said.

NEW POSITION—Freda LeMond has been elected vice president of the National Bank of Commerce and will soon join the bank to accept her new responsibilities, according to an announcement by Larry Ables, president. She had 42 years of experience in local banking and will work in community relations and providing personal banking relationships with customers, Ables said. She has been active in a variety of civic organizations in Pampa and holds memberships in state and area banking associations.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

During the past weeks we have been discussing income-directed investments. We have covered equity or ownership investments in the form of common or preferred stocks.

There is another category of income securities probably more popular with the income-bonds and debentures. We call them debt securities because that is exactly what they are. You are loaning your money to a company. We will limit our remarks to corporate bonds or debentures as we have discussed the tax exempt bonds in previous articles.

The income generated from a corporate bond is taxable income. Investors seeking income and safety of principal often choose high grade corporate bonds as the vehicle. The bonds generally offer safety or principal. The corporations issuing the bonds are selected for their stability and credit risk. The bonds are often mortgage bonds and thus backed up by specific property. They are issued for a specific period of time and at that maturity the holder receives the face value of the bond back. Likewise the corporation has assumed a legal obligation to pay interest at a fixed specified on the bond.

For investors who seek this income from their investments, a high grade corporate bond will usually answer the demand.

Debentures are a specific type of bond. They are not secured by any specific property or other assets. Their promise to pay is based on their ability to meet their obligations. It might be compared to a signature loan to an individual by their bank. If the bank knows the customer and is secure in their feeling the customer is able and capable of repaying a loan plus its interest they might consider loaning the money solely on the customer's signature and good name, not asking for additional security to back up the loan.

The same comparison might be used for the debenture. You as a lender have faith enough in this corporation to make it a loan and require no property or additional assets to back it up. Putting it exactly in these words might sour one on debentures but the fact is that there are millions of dollars invested in high grade debentures of this country's top corporations paying interest and returning principal as they have been for years.

FDIC says state bank in Brownfield insolvent

BROWNFIELD, Texas (AP) — A West Texas bank has been declared insolvent and turned over to new owners because of excessive loan losses.

State Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton on Friday closed the Brownfield State Bank & Trust Co. and placed it in the receivership of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

A spokesman for the FDIC in Washington said the bank's two offices would reopen on Tuesday as branches of a new bank to be known as Brownfield State Bank, a newly formed subsidiary of American State Financial Corp. of Lubbock.

Brownfield is 35 miles southwest of Lubbock.

Sexton said the bank was closed because of "loan losses exceeding total capital funds, and the failure of its owners to replace the depleted capital."

An officer of the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas announced approval of the application of the American State Financial Corp. of Lubbock to acquire the bank.

Depositors of the failed bank will automatically become depositors of the new institution, the FDIC said.

The deposit assumption was made possible with assistance from the FDIC and avoids the necessity for a payoff of the 4,776 accounts in the failed bank, the FDIC spokesman said.

In addition to assuming about $36.9 million in deposits and other liabilities, the new owners have agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $2.5 million, the federal agency said.

To facilitate the transaction, the FDIC purchased some of the loan accounts that were on the books of the failed bank, the agency said.

"The assuming bank gets to pick over installment loans and decide which ones they want to keep. The shaky ones, we take. In this case, the loans we accepted have a book value of $19.7 million and we gave $16.6 million for them. Obviously we are not going to recover the full $19.7 million, but part of the loss will be made up by the $2.5 million premium the new owners paid," the FDIC spokesman said.

Condo promoters sued

DALLAS (AP) — Promoters of suburban Dallas condominium-investment packages conspired to misrepresent the deals, forge land appraisals, alter documents and used "high-ranking state officials" to give their scheme credibility, according to a federal lawsuit.

Attorneys for John Zervas, an investor in six condominium projects along Interstate 30 east of Dallas, said he borrowed $15 million on the basis of misrepresentations the condominium promoters allegedly made.

Zervas' lawsuit, filed last week, claims those promoters also "artificially manipulated land transactions in the area as part of the scheme to fraudulently inflate the alleged value of the land in the area." State and federal law enforcement agencies have been investigating more than $500 million in questionable loans that financed a massive development that led to a glut of condominiums in the area.

Being examined were intricate patterns of price-inflating "land flips" — some land changed ownership several times in one day — and the use of inflated appraisals used to support mortgage loans, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Zervas was one of more than 150 investors who personally guaranteed loans for the projects.

Zervas alleges that even though Faulkner and Toler assured him that the area would not be overbuilt and that the projects would be marketed promptly.

Recent warmer, open weather aid to farmers

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers have been taking advantage of recent warmer, open weather to get their fields ready to plant, and some corn and grain sorghum planting is about to start in southern areas.

Farmers in South Texas and the Coastal Bend should start planting corn and grain sorghum in a week or so, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Some early season vegetable planting has already started in some areas, including onions and potatoes.

Farmers getting ready to plant corn and grain sorghum are keeping an eye on soil temperatures to make sure the soil has warmed to at least 55 degrees F. at the 4-inch depth for a week or so. This is the minimum soil temperature level for good seed germination, noted Carpenter. Planting of corn and grain sorghum is also expected to start soon in Southwest Texas (Uvalde area), where harvesting of carrots and spinach remains active.

Some harvesting of carrots and cabbage continues in the Rio Grande Valley, and sugarcane harvesting is about 80 percent complete. However, sugarcane quality continues to decline due to freeze damage suffered in December.

Fruit growers are trying to decide whether to prune freeze-damaged trees or to replace them and are awaiting new growth which should come soon with the warmer weather. Some pruning as well as total grove removal is already under way, noted Carpenter.

Livestock feeding continues heavy in most areas of Texas although there has been some letup due to the recent warmer weather. Hay supplies are running short in many areas due to the prolonged feeding brought on by the December cold spell.

Freeze-damaged small grain crops are continuing to recover slowly but are providing little or no grazing, Carpenter said.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Farmers are busy getting their cropland in shape for spring planting. Wheat is starting to green up with the warmer weather but needs rain. Cattle are in fair to good condition, with supplemental feeding continuing.

SOUTH PLAINS: Land preparation is moving ahead at full speed although preplant irrigation has not yet started. Wheat is making good growth where moisture is available. Most livestock are in good shape, with supplemental feeding declining some with the warmer weather.

ROLLING PLAINS: Some light rains and warmer weather have given a boost to small grains still struggling to recover from freeze damage. Farmers are busy with land preparation for spring planting. Some early vegetables are being planted in Wichita County, and potato planting will start soon in Knox County. Livestock feeding remains active, with hay prices high.

NORTH CENTRAL: Recent rains and warmer weather have improved the growth of small grains. Farmers are getting cropland ready for spring planting, and some early season vegetables are being planted. Grazing conditions remain poor, so supplemental feeding is active.

NORTHEAST: Rains the past week along with warmer temperatures have helped wheat and native pastures. Farmers and gardeners are getting land ready for spring planting. Cattle are in fair shape, with feeding active. Hay supplies are getting short.

FAR WEST: Warmer weather has allowed farmers to make good progress with land preparation and has taken some of the pressure off livestock feeding. However, feeding remains active due to poor range conditions.

WEST CENTRAL: Small grains are making some growth due to recent warmer weather but need rain. Open weather has allowed farmers to get a jump on land preparation for spring planting. Heavy livestock feeding continues, with hay supplies getting short. Some sheep have been lost in Irion County due to bitterweed poisoning.

CENTRAL: A lot of farmers are plowing up freeze-killed oats to plant sorghum sudan later in spring. Some early season vegetable planting is under way, and farmers are preparing land for spring crops. Livestock feeding remains heavy. About 30 percent of the area's dairymen have signed up for the new dairy program.

EAST: Hay supplies continue to decline due to heavy livestock feeding. Small grains are making some recovery from freeze damage but are providing little grazing. Livestock are in fair to poor condition, with lice a problem in some areas. Gardeners are planting onions and cole crops.

UPPER COAST: Farmers are continuing with land preparation although scattered rains have caused some delays. Gardeners are also gearing up for the coming season. Heavy feeding of livestock continues, with adequate hay supplies. Winter pastures are recovering slowly from the December cold wave.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Warmer weather and scattered rains have helped small grains and pastures make some growth although grazing conditions remain poor. Cattle are in fair to good condition, with feeding continuing. Land preparation remains active as farmers get ready for spring planting.

SOUTHWEST: Farmers are ready to plant corn and grain sorghum. Soil temperatures are warming up and peach trees are starting to bloom. Spinach and carrot harvesting continues although vegetable processing plants remain closed due to the December freeze. Livestock feeding continues due to lack of forage on pastures and ranges.

COASTAL BEND: Farmers are putting the final touches on land preparation and are about ready to start planting corn and grain sorghum. Cattle feeding continues due to poor grazing conditions, and hay supplies are starting to get short. Livestock are showing signs of stress and weight loss due to the recent cold weather.

SOUTH: Corn and grain sorghum planting will start in a week or so as field conditions permit. About 80 percent of the sugarcane has been harvested, with crop quality declining due to the December freeze. Carrots and cabbage are in light supply. Fruit growers are awaiting new growth on trees to determine pruning or tree replacement needs. Some pruning of freeze-damaged trees and total grove removal are already under way.

Corn farmers are planning on turning back the clock

By DON KENDALL, AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers say they plan to turn the clock back two years and plant 8.8 million acres of corn this spring, virtually the same as they did in 1982 when the harvest broke all production records.

The Agriculture Department said Thursday in an annual report involving surveys of 40,000 farmers, that if intentions are carried out, corn plantings will be up 36 percent from last year when government acreage programs held plantings to 60.2 million acres, the smallest area in more than a century.

Drought and the government's $9.7 billion payment-in-kind program, which gave farmers free corn, sorghum, wheat, cotton and rice for cutting back acreages, trimmed 1983 crop output by more than 25 percent, overall. That included a half-size corn crop of 4.2 billion bushels, compared to the record of 8.36 billion bushels in 1982.

As a result of PIK and last year's drought, some commodity prices — notably feed grains — have risen significantly from the depressed levels of a year ago. Now, with millions of acres of idled land being put back to work, economists say there is a good chance that 1984 could mean an improvement in the farm financial picture.

Corn is the largest and most valuable farm crop grown in the United States and is the basic feed ingredient for the production of livestock products, the meat, milk and poultry that makes up about one-half of the American food bill.

"Actual acreage planted may vary from intentions because of the 1984 farm programs, the effect of weather, availability of production inputs and changes in market conditions prior to planting," the report said.

The new plantings figures came as Agriculture Secretary John R. Block was pushing for a big farmer sign-up in this year's federal crop programs. Except for a scaled-down version for wheat, there are no PIK features in this year's programs. Sign-up began on Jan. 16 and will continue at county offices through Feb. 24.

Last year, burdened with surpluses and depressed market prices, farmers flocked to sign up in the government programs, including PIK. In all, they signed up to take about 83 million acres from production last year and wound up actually idling about 77 million acres, one-third of the nation's normal cropland. According to USDA estimates, farmers could sign up to idle between 20 million and 30 million acres under this year's programs, although some officials say that is on the optimistic side.

Block told farm groups in telephone conferences Thursday that despite pressure from Farm Belt members of Congress, he does not favor extending the sign-up period.

TOP DRESSING WHEAT

As spring approaches and farmers are deciding on farm program participation — wheat fertility requirements need to be assessed.

The amount of nitrogen that will produce optimum yields in wheat will vary considerably with environmental conditions such as temperature and available moisture during the spring, as well as residual soil nitrogen levels, plant population and timeliness of application.

The application of nitrogen to small grains in the spring allows the producer to adjust his yield goals and resulting fertilizer requirements based on current crop conditions such as moisture, stands and general appearance.

Wheat has a protein content ranging from a low of about eight percent to a high of over 20 percent, with an average figure in the 12 to 14 percent range. A 50 bushel yield of wheat will have around 65 pounds of nitrogen in the grain and another 40 pounds in the roots and straw or around 105 pounds of nitrogen in the grain and residue.

DATES
Feb. 20 — Horse Project Group meeting is cancelled.
Feb. 21 — 7 p.m., Lefors 4-H Club meeting, Lefors Senior Citizens building.
Feb. 21 — 10 a.m. to noon, 4-H Clothing Leader training, Courthouse Annex.
Feb. 23 — 7 to 9 p.m., 4-H Clothing Leader Training, Courthouse Annex.

METHOD DEMONSTRATION
Method Demonstration should be well on their way with individual 4-H'ers. At this point, each 4-H'er should have his or her demonstration topic decided upon and they should be gathering information in order to begin pulling the demonstration together. Each person who has expressed an interest in a Method Demonstration and who attended the workshop held in January will be contacted. At that time, you will need to make an appointment with the Extension agents to work on your demonstration.

If anyone is interested in doing a demonstration, who has not already expressed an interest, please contact our office.
4-H'ERS STAR IN HOME MANAGEMENT
Americans tend to think of money as their only valuable resource. However, it's important to look closely at another resource that we seem to have less and less of as we become busier and busier. That resource is time.

Time, money, energy, skills, material things, brain power: all are valuable resources. Learning to mobilize them to reach specific personal and household goals are girls and boys from nine to 19 in the 4-H home management program.

4-H members in the program learn that decision making is what management is all about. They might tackle family food bills and come up with cost-cutting techniques. They organize personal work schedules that set realistic goals and conserve time and energy.

Whatever projects they choose, 4-H'ers can earn awards donated by Beatrice Foods Company and arranged by the National 4-H Council. Eight outstanding 4-H'ers are awarded national college scholarships of $1,000 each. One top program member from each state receives an expense paid trip to National 4-H Congress in Chicago each fall. And four members per county are eligible for medals of honor.

All winners are selected on the basis of their records of accomplishment by the Extension Service, which conducts the 4-H program.

If you want to learn more about the 4-H home management program and how to use all your resources to the best of your ability, contact the county Extension office.

TREES AND SHRUBS NEED ANNUAL 'LUBE' JOB

Have you given your fruit trees and landscape plants their annual "lube" job? This refers, of course, to an application of dormant oil to control scale insects.

Why control scale insects? The answer is simply to save the tree or shrub. If a scale insect such as the San Jose scale, white peach or euonymus gets started, it could kill your plants.

Dormant oil can be purchased at many different stores where garden supplies are sold. Be sure to follow all label directions and apply the mixture when the temperature is between 40 and 70 degrees F. Do not apply if a freeze is likely within 48 hours after application, and do not apply after the tree has budded out. Dormant oil is applied when the tree is dormant. Spraying flowers and leaves could cause leaf burn and flower drop.

Scale insects are difficult for most people to detect, so dormant oil should be applied once each year. Sooner or later your tree will probably be attacked by scale insects, so be ready by guarding against them with an application of dormant oil.

In addition to dormant oils, there are other types of petroleum oils available — summer and superior. Oils on the market today are greatly improved over the earlier formulated oils. They are lighter, more highly refined, well standardized and consistent. These petroleum oils can be used with few problems if the user reads and follows label directions.

Properly timed and applied, an application of petroleum oil either dormant, summer or superior can substantially reduce and sometime eliminate scale, aphid and mite problems that occur later in the season. We have a new leaflet

L-2090, that discusses the use of various oils. Also, it discusses mixing other pesticides with the oils. Come by the County Extension office for your copy of Petroleum Oil Spray.

Young Kennedy is guilty

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy Jr. has admitted that he had heroin with him when he became ill on an airplane last fall, but the felony won't necessarily prevent him from practicing law in his home state of New York.

Pennington County state's attorney Rod Lefholz admitted to being nervous as he read the charge Friday to the 30-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

A crowd of 50 people, including sketch artists and reporters from the television networks, packed the heavily guarded courtroom as Kennedy entered, accompanied by two lawyers and his wife, Emily.

Mrs. Kennedy stared at her feet and into space during the 25-minute hearing on the felony charge of heroin possession.

Circuit Judge Marshall Young asked Kennedy what happened when he arrived in Rapid City on a Republic Airlines plane on Sept. 11.

"At that time I had two-tenths of a gram (of heroin) in my possession," replied Kennedy, who said in answer to another question that his guilty plea was voluntary.

Defense lawyer John Fitzgerald said Kennedy had been "coming to South Dakota for treatment realizing he had a (drug) problem."

The plea surprised Lefholz, who said he had hoped Kennedy would admit to the offense but was prepared to prosecute in event of an innocent plea. Kennedy was released on his own recognizance.

South Dakota laws allow a maximum penalty of two years in jail and a $2,000 fine for the charge, but Lefholz said a first-time offense usually results in a suspended sentence.

Young ordered Kennedy to return to Rapid City for sentencing March 16. A probation officer is to perform a pre-sentence investigation.

U.S. delegation seeks MIA data

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The highest-level U.S. government delegation to visit Vietnam since the end of the war heads to Hanoi on Sunday in an effort to resolve the fates of some 2,500 Americans servicemen who did not return.

The five-member team will be led by U.S. Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage and will include Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Families, a private lobby group concerned with the issue, said the Vietnam News Agency.

It is the highest-level team to travel to Vietnam since the war in Vietnam ended in 1975. U.S. officials said. Armitage visited Hanoi in February 1982 when he was a deputy assistant secretary.

The U.S. government said in a statement the trip was not related to reports that Vietnam was prepared to hand over the remains of three Americans to the Vietnam Veterans of America. But it said the visit was "mutually agreed on by the two sides," and the U.S. government hoped any remains would be handed over on a "government-to-government" basis.

Both Armitage and Mrs. Griffiths, who arrived in Bangkok aboard a special aircraft, declined to talk to journalists. They are to return to Bangkok from Hanoi next Wednesday.

The other members of the team would be Richard Childress of the National Security Council and two officials from the U.S. State Department, the Vietnam News Agency said.

"The governments of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the United States of America have expressed their belief that the issue of Americans missing in Vietnam is a humanitarian issue which would be settled through cooperation and the good will of both sides," the agency said.

Last month the three communist Indochinese nations of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos agreed to pool any knowledge they may have of Americans missing in Indochina and to work with American non-governmental organizations in the search for them.

The three countries, however, have insisted that no Americans are left alive in Indochina.

They are to return to Bangkok from Hanoi next Wednesday.

Blizzard of activity

Demo candidates make last big effort in Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A blizzard of phone calls and rhetoric hit Iowa Saturday as Democratic presidential candidates fought for support in the last weekend before the state's precinct caucuses.

A real snowstorm threatened to play havoc with campaign schedules.

Former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida had to cancel appearances in western Iowa over snow falling at the rate of 3 inches an hour. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio also planned to campaign in that area.

At a news conference in a Des Moines soup kitchen, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado called the Reagan budget deficits "this administration's Vietnam" and offered his own plan to reduce them.

Walter Mondale used a five-minute radio broadcast to appeal to his backers to attend the Monday night caucuses. "Don't take anything for granted," said the former vice president. "You are needed."

The Mondale campaign bought radio time on 13 Iowa stations immediately following President Reagan's paid political weekly broadcast. The president urged people to demand that the House pass a revision of federal criminal laws that has cleared the Senate.

Sen. George McGovern campaigned in a farm town and at Trainland U.S.A., a model train exhibit in Colfax.

In New Hampshire, which holds its primary Feb. 28, was Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina. Sen. Alan Cranston of California was in Massachusetts and planned to be in Iowa on Sunday. The Rev. Jesse Jackson campaigned in Providence, R.I., and Albany, N.Y.

Though not all candidates were in Iowa, the campaigns of the six contesting the caucuses — all but Jackson and Hollings — were making thousands of calls over the weekend to get supporters out to vote.

Mondale's effort got a big boost from phone banks set up by the AFL-CIO, United Auto Workers and the National Education Association urging their members to support Mondale.

Hart's budget plan included defense cuts, tax hikes and boosts in domestic spending that he said would cut the deficit to $78 billion by 1989, based on assumptions by the Congressional Budget Office.

"If you make more optimistic assumptions, those deficits shrink substantially below that," Hart said. "If you were to adopt the president's assumptions, that deficit would be at zero. Indeed, it might even show a surplus." Hart's tax increases were aimed principally at high-income taxpayers.

He would put a 5 percent surtax on those with income of more than $100,000 and cap the final year of Reagan's tax cut for those making more than $50,000 a year. He would push "a partial and temporary deferral of indexing" of income tax rates that would save $45 billion a year by 1989 and impose a 10 percent surtax on corporate income, designed to raise $12 billion a year by 1989.

Hart's tax ideas are similar to those of Mondale and Glenn.

The Coloradan said he would cut an average $28 billion a year from the defense budget and would add $20 billion in new spending each year, with the money going for education, nutrition, job training, housing and rebuilding the nation's roads, bridges and sewers.

Most of Mondale's Democratic rivals were saying they expect him to get about 50 percent of the delegates chosen in the caucuses Monday.

"I AM THE WAY"

In response to the question of Thomas, "How know we the way?" Jesus said unto him, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6.) There is absolutely no way for anyone to reach heaven without Jesus Christ.

But many apparently are confused as to what is meant by Jesus being the "way". Does this mean that He, personally, in some miraculous way, is going to lead a person to heaven? Jesus said that all would be judged by His words in the last day (John 12:48) We are warned not to go beyond His doctrine (2 John 9.) He gave commandment to His disciples to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15.) By this we can see that His word, or the gospel, reveals the way spoken of in John 14:6.

Paul said the scriptures furnish the man of God completely unto every good work and they will make the man of God complete (2 Timothy 3:16,17.) Jesus had promised that His disciples would be guided into all the truth by the Holy Spirit (John 16:13.) There is nothing to indicate that the scriptures are lacking in furnishing the essential information in regard to salvation. Recorded in the book of Acts are numerous accounts of people finding the "way" through the preaching of the apostles and others. If what they preached then showed people the "way" then the same word which they preached will show people the "way" today. Jesus did not appear to each one converted and personally show them the "way" to heaven. But people did learn of His "way" through the word preached by His apostles. "...it was God's good pleasure through the foolishness of the preaching to save them that believe." (1 Corinthians 1:21.) Thus we learn of God's "way" through Jesus Christ by what is revealed in the inspired word, the Bible.

Pampa closes unbeaten loop season

LUBBOCK — Pampa stamped the seal on a perfect District 1-4A season with a 69-57 win over Lubbock Dunbar Friday night. Pampa finished 14-0 in loop play and 24-5 going into bi-district action. Fired-up Dunbar came out and threatened to take the Harvesters right down to the wire. The Panthers led, 16-11, at the end of the first quarter, but Pampa ran off 16 consecutive points in the second quarter to take a commanding 36-24 lead at halftime. Reliable Coyle Winborn had a 25-point, 15-rebound night and scored eight points during that 16-point run. Al Buchanan's fast break layup at the 3:49 mark of the second quarter gave Pampa its first lead of the game at 24-22. Craig Chapin added 11 points for the Harvesters and Randy Harris came off the bench for 10. Joey Torres tossed in 18 points to lead Dunbar, which finished at 15-12 overall and 7-7 in district play. Pampa led by as many as 17 the second half and held a 15-point advantage (54-39) going into the fourth quarter. Dunbar cut the gap to nine (64-53) with 2:07 left, but couldn't come any closer. "The kids played with a lot of heart and a lot of desire," said Pampa Head Coach Garland Nichols. "They could have just played mediocre after they had clinched district, but they played hard every game. That's a compliment to them."

Pampa will play Andrews in the bi-district game, but the date and site have not been determined yet. Borger clinched the district runnerup spot with an 83-48 win over Lubbock Estacado Friday night. PAMPA (69) Winborn 25, Chapin 11, Harris 10, Cross 6, Buchanan 6, Faggins 5, McQueen 2, Young 2, Davis 2. DUNBAR (57) Torres 18, Jones 12, Johnson 9, Collins 8, Zamora 6, Guy 2, Henderson 2.

Russians, Czechs in hockey finals

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia faced their toughest challenges in the Winter Olympics hockey tournament and still shut out their opponents. They are that good. It is widely thought that the Soviets are better, but Czechoslovakia can chip away at that belief in the gold-medal game Sunday. "The Soviets are far more skilled," said Canadian forward Carey Wilson after his team held the Soviet Union scoreless for half the game Friday night but still lost 4-0. It came two days after Canada lost to Czechoslovakia by the same score. "Judging from the way we played the two teams, the Czechs were better, but judging from history, the Soviets seem better," he added. Czechoslovakia beat Sweden 2-0 Friday after being blanked for the first two periods. The Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia, both 2-0 in the medals round, play for the gold medal after Canada and Sweden, both 0-2, vie for the bronze Sunday. A tie would give Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union the same records, but the Soviets would win the gold medal because they have a better goal differential than Czechoslovakia. For the same reason, Canada needs only to tie Sweden for the bronze medal. The Soviet Union is trying to regain the gold medal it won in four consecutive Olympics before the United States took it away in 1980.

Czechoslovakia, which missed the medals round four years ago, is going for its first hockey gold medal. In Friday's other games, Scott Bjugstad scored two goals as the United States beat Poland 7-4 to finish in seventh place, its poorest Olympic hockey finish ever, and Erich Kuehnhaackl erased a 4-1 Finnish lead with three consecutive goals to lead West Germany to a 7-4 victory in the fifth-place game. Canadian Coach Dave King tried to stop the Soviets' awesome attack by dropping three men, instead of the usual two, back on defense. It worked for a while against the Soviets, who outscored their five opponents in the qualifying round 42-5. Wilson said the Soviets, who are 6-0 overall, were frustrated. "They were coughing the puck up in their own end and they didn't score once on the power play," he said. "We played a better team and, considering everyone was expecting us to get walloped, we played pretty well." "It's always frustrating when you can't score," said King. "We were very patient, not committing ourselves too much and getting trapped. We took them off their game." The shutout was the second in a row for goalie Jaromir Sindel, but the narrow victory margin was unusual for Czechoslovakia, which held a 38-7 goals advantage in beating all five previous opponents.

Mahre makes final bid for medal

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — A funny thing happened to Phil Mahre on his way to the Olympics. The skills that had carried him to three consecutive World Cup overall titles suddenly left him. Traditionally a slow starter in December, the first month of the World Cup season, Mahre is always expected to catch fire in January and rocket past his competition. This year, the fuse seems to have fizzled. Mahre makes his final bid for a 1984 Olympic medal Sunday in the men's slalom, a race in which he finished second four years ago. He attributes his season-long struggle to a "lack of concentration," to the fact that skiing "doesn't hold the mystique for me it once did," and to a change in priorities in which "my family is more important than skiing right now." "I've accomplished all I wanted and I don't have anything more to prove," he says. Mahre's main competition Sunday includes Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein, Franz Gruber of Austria, Bojan Krizaj of Yugoslavia, Stig Strand of Sweden and Steve Mahre, his twin brother. "It should be a wide-open competition," Phil said. "My chances are as good as anybody's." Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden and Marc Girardelli of Luxembourg, who have combined to win six of the seven World Cup slaloms this season, are not competing. Stenmark is barred because he accepted endorsement money directly, instead of having it funneled through his ski federation, and Girardelli, an Austrian, does not have citizenship in Luxembourg. Mahre's troubles on the slopes are new. The roots of his frustration are not. The 26-year-old from Yakima, Wash., is in his 10th season skiing competitively on the U.S. team. He has invoked these themes of being tired with his sport for several years now, hinting that each season would be his last. But when he achieved one World Cup overall crown, he decided to come back for another, then another. The prospect of an unprecedented fourth consecutive title, plus pressure from U.S. Ski Team officials and fans to go for the gold at Sarajevo, is what made him give it one more shot. His World Cup hopes have been all but mathematically dashed. He needs to win the majority of the seven remaining races — three slaloms and four giant slaloms — and finish high in the others, and hope that the standings leaders, Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland and Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, falter badly.

Stallions shoot down Gunslingers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Scott Norwood kicked three field goals and quarterback Bobby Lane threw for one touchdown to lead the Birmingham Stallions to a come-from-behind 23-15 win over the San Antonio Gunslingers in a United States Football League exhibition game Saturday.

San Antonio led 9-3 at the half on field goals of 33, 39 and 48 yards by Nick Mike-Mayer. But the Stallions scored on their first four possessions of the second half to raise their preseason record to 2-0. Norwood, who kicked a 26-yard field goal in the first half, opened scoring in the third quarter with a 27-yard field goal. Lane tossed a 1-yard pass to tight end Jay Repko who four minutes left in the third period. Ken Talton opened the fourth quarter with a 1-yard touchdown run and Norwood followed with a 44-yard field goal to give the Stallions a 23-9 lead. San Antonio's Karl Douglas threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Marcus Bonner to narrow the score to 23-15. The Gunslingers, who finished preseason with a 1-2 record, will host the New Orleans Breakers in their first regular season game on Feb. 26. The Stallions will host the New Jersey Generals on the same day.

Canadian upended by Littlefield

AMARILLO — Canadian hit only one of 18 field goal attempts the first quarter, and that was all the advantage Littlefield needed on the way to a 44-32 Class 3A girls' bi-district win Friday night at the Amarillo Civic Center. "We had the good shots, but they just wouldn't fall," said Canadian Coach Steve Zurline. "We played a good defensive game, but our inconsistency in scoring really showed up last night." Littlefield was leading 16-0 when Canadian finally scored on Stephanie Byard's follow shot with just five seconds to go in the first quarter. Canadian, which finished 18-9 and won its second straight district title, outscored Littlefield, 15-11, in the second quarter, but in the first-quarter scoring lapse was just too hard to make up. "The kids did a good job of staying in there and fighting back," Zurline added. "We had to put Littlefield on the foul line in the last half to try and get back in the game." Teresa Burnett led Littlefield with 14 points while Laurie Ratliff chipped in 11. Dana Johnson and Melinda Vanhooser led Canadian with seven points each. Regina Cano and Stephanie Mitchell added six points each, while Liz McPherson and Stephanie Byard added two each, Beth Ramp and Penny Kendall one each. Both teams had 21 rebounds each. Johnson and Vanhooser led the Lady Wildcats with seven each. "It would have been nice to win this one, but I'm tickled to death at the way the kids played during the season," Zurline said. "It was better than I expected. We lost only two games after Christmas." Littlefield, 23-8, goes onto play Slaton.

Pampa golfers open at Hereford

Pampa High's golf squad enters a three-day meet at Hereford, starting Feb. 29. The Harvesters were scheduled to open the spring season last week in the Lubbock Invitational, but disciplinary problems forced Coach Mike Brent to pull his team out of the meet. "I honestly felt like we could have won it, but if you can't have discipline you may as well not have a team," Brent said. Three players were suspended until March, Brent said. "We should have a real good team this spring," Brent said. "We should win district pretty easily if we work hard at it." Varsity players include Paul McIntire, David Fatheree, Ron Crosier, Reid Sidwell, David Snuggs, Derek Dalton and Clay Jett. Pampa's first home match is March 16, the second round of district play.

Pampa's Pope qualifies for regional swim meet

Amarillo High boys and girls successfully defended their District 3-5A swim titles Friday night at the Maverick Boys Club Pool in Amarillo. Amarillo High boys collected 125 points to take first while AHS girls garnered 153 points. Pampa boys and girls placed fourth and fifth respectively among the seven teams entered. Pampa's Brad Pope placed third in the 500 freestyle (5:56.35) to qualify for the regional meet March 2-3 at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Date changed for softball meeting

The second meeting of the 1984 Players Association has been changed from Monday to Sunday, starting at 4 p.m. in Room 202 of City Hall. Coaches or team representatives participating in the City of Pampa Parks and Recreation summer-fall slow pitch softball leagues are urged to attend. Association goals and objectives will be discussed.

Perryton falls

Perryton was downed by Abernathy, 69-48, Friday night in a Class 3A bi-district girls' game at the Amarillo Civic Center. Phoebe Dunn led Abernathy with 21 points while Vicky McKenzie tossed in 18. Abernathy held a comfortable 35-18 lead at halftime. Traci Smith's 14 points paced Perryton. Lececa Schickendanz added 10.

Brown faces recruiting woes at Rice University

HOUSTON (AP) — Watson Brown accepted a six-year $1.3 million challenge last November to lead the Rice football team out of its woeful string of 21 consecutive losing seasons.

It was a step into the eye of a hurricane. The recruiting battle Brown faced with other Southwest Conference and out-of-state universities was a minor skirmish compared to the war he has encountered for acceptance among the faculty and students.

Brown was met with resentment and fear from many Rice faculty members, angered at the emphasis placed on athletics at a school that bragged more about its high percentage of National Merit Scholars than its athletic All-Americans.

Faculty members saw a proposal to add a business curriculum for athletes as merely a shelter for players unable to cope with the rigorous academic standards at Rice. They saw it as the cornerstone for building a football factory where "the Harvard of the Southwest" once stood.

Many students have joined in the concern over about 40 to 50 hours per week practicing and playing football is insanity.

Greg Smith, another student Honor Council member, said admitting unqualified students does both the players and school a disservice.

"When you admit a student who already is not qualified and then put such a work load on him, it's impossible that he could improve himself," Smith said. "When they (athletes) tell me what they have to go through I think, 'Gee, there's no way I could keep up.' I'd be studying about one or two hours per day."

Marshall said he recently encountered another problem in dealing with two athletes called before the council on cheating charges. "This case was an in-class incident but it's been difficult to get any other students to testify," Marshall said. "They've been intimidated because there have been threats by the athletes involved."

Despite the early obstacles, Brown sits in the eye of the storm confident that his goal of winning football games with qualified student-athletes is possible. "Some of these problems will be solved by the type of players we are bringing in," Brown said. "We know they are intelligent by looking at their transcripts. Now we've got to find out if they are football players."

Brown hopes his antagonists will notice the caliber of students among his first group of recruits. He said the average entrance scores for the 23 players signed on Feb. 8 was 1,100. Brown has sought out campus officials, including the masters of the colleges.

faculty members and admissions administrators to deliver a message. "Talk from us is cheap right now but I'm trying to assure them that we are proud of what they have (academically)," Brown said. "They haven't all been negative."

Brown also wants it known that he doesn't favor any kind of sheltered course for athletes. "The day I walked on campus I said I didn't want anything special for the athletes," Brown said. "I'm not for putting athletes in a corner with their own curriculum and letting them graduate."

Some faculty members are at least willing to give Brown enough rope to hang himself. "I'd like to see Rice make one more serious attempt to find out if it is possible to recruit students who are REAL students and also athletes capable of competing at this level," history professor Francis Lowenheim said.

Brown could represent that last chance, but because of Rice's low athletic stature, the task will be difficult. "The first school we went to were fourth in line to see the kid," Brown said.

Brown did not sign that prospect and the Owls also faded badly in the final day before signing. Brown said of 15 players who had narrowed their choices to Rice and one other school, only three chose Rice.

Michels insisted there was no excessive risk in Leonard fighting again and said of the fighter's decision: "I think he has weighed the risks and is aware of all the issues involved."

The 27-year-old Leonard described the press reaction to his latest setback as hysteria and contended "everything was blown out of proportion."

"It was just crazy," he said. "I knew it was not as serious as they made it sound. Everybody was out of their minds. Everyone jumped to conclusions. No one actually knew what happened, and they said it was a 'baby detached retina.' I knew it was not."

He said the "scars and tears" on his right retina were normal "in my line of work because of being thumbed continuously."

Leonard's wife, Juanita, who previously said that she wanted her husband to retire, said Friday, "Whatever he's for, I'm for."

Leonard ready to box again

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, unfazed by two eye operations, says he is ready to resume his boxing career.

The comeback attempt of the former world welterweight champion had been on temporary hold until he passed an eye examination on Friday.

Pending the results of another eye examination in Boston, possibly next week, Leonard has been cleared to return to training.

"I'm ready to go to work," Leonard said after his optimistic outlook was reinforced by a report from Dr. Ronald Michels of the Wilmer Eye Institute at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

"His vision in both eyes is normal and stable," said Michels, who performed surgery to repair Leonard's partially detached left retina on May 9, 1982. Six months later, with a 32-1 record, Leonard announced his retirement from the ring.

But he announced last Dec. 10 he would fight again, and was training for a Feb. 25 bout in Worcester, Mass., against Kevin Howard when a problem was detected in Leonard's right eye.

In Boston last Monday, one day after his arrival to begin training for the scheduled 10-rounder, Leonard agreed to a preventive nonsurgical procedure performed by Dr. Edward Ryan.

Although abnormal areas in the right eye had been detected previously by Michels and had not been considered a threat, Ryan apparently felt deterioration had occurred and treatment was necessary.

Ryan applied cryotherapy, or a freezing probe that created an adhesion around the weak area of the retina and headed off possible future detachment.

After reporting that the left eye continues to be stable and the right retina is properly attached, Michels said, "Dr. Ryan and I are in agreement that Mr. Leonard should be permitted to resume his boxing career."

Yarborough favored to win 500

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Defending champ Cale Yarborough will have the burden of being the favorite Sunday in the 26th annual Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race at Daytona International Speedway.

Yarborough, who will start from the pole position in the $1.1 million race after qualifying at a track record speed of 201.848 mph, solidified his favorite status by posting an easy victory in one of Thursday's twin 125-mile qualifying races.

"I guess I would have to be the favorite," said Yarborough, a three-time Daytona 500 winner. "It doesn't bother me. But I won't take anything for granted."

Trouble has been on everyone's mind this week, with three crashes — all in about the same spot on the 2.5-mile track.

"The fourth turn has become kind of a scary place," said Bobby Allison, who won the other qualifier and will start behind outside pole qualifier Terry Labonte and alongside Bill Elliott in the second row of the 42-car field.

The problem, which caused the virtual demolition of cars belonging to Ricky Rudd, Randy LaJoie, Natz Peters and Jim Hurlbert, appears to include a worsening dip over the infield tunnel entrance in the middle of Turn 4, a continuing loss of traction because the track has not been repaved since 1979 and higher speeds at a spot where a narrow patch of infield grass is hemmed in by an 10-foot wall. Rudd slid off the fourth turn banking during last Sunday's Busch Clash and spun wildly through the air, narrowly missing the wall which juts out toward the entrance to the pit wall.

LaJoie, in his first Grand National event, lost control at virtually the same spot in one of Thursday's qualifying races, skidded across the grass, became airborne and smashed into the wall.

Rudd and LaJoie were lucky, escaping with bumps and bruises. Peters and Hurlbert collided after Peters bounced off the same infield wall. Peters had first- and second-degree burns on his face, and Hurlbert had first- and second-degree burns on his face and left arm, a broken right ankle, a fractured jaw, broken teeth and facial cuts.

"You can't help but think about what's been happening," said Richard Petty, a seven-time winner of this race. "You have to keep your eyes open and try to see as far ahead into the turn as you can, to see if anything is going on that you want to avoid."

Allison concedes Yarborough is the favorite going into the race, which will be televised live on CBS starting at 12:15 p.m. EST. A crowd of more than 100,000 is expected for the race.

Tar Heels win

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Michael Jordan scored a season-high 32 points to lead top-ranked North Carolina to a 95-71 Atlantic Coast Conference rout of North Carolina State Saturday.

The Tar Heels, whose 21-game winning streak was broken last Sunday by Arkansas, broke quickly and left the Wolfpack in a hole it never could recover from.

N.C. State's turnovers combined with North Carolina's pressure defense gave the Tar Heels a 20-6 lead in the first six minutes. Jordan had six of those points.

Jordan led the final surge which put the game out of reach for N.C. State. He poured in eight of the next 12 Tar Heel points for a 68-52 margin with 11:11 left.

Panhandle wins bi-district title

Panhandle held off Fritch in the fourth quarter to claim a 33-32 win in Class 2A bi-district girls' action Friday night at Phillips.

Fritch almost caught the Panthers after trailing by nine (20-21) going into the fourth quarter. Monica Reining, Amy Kennedy and Lesley Koetting had eight points each for Panhandle. Lindy Morgan led Fritch with eight.

Dayton upsets DePaul

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Ed Young hit a twisting bank shot with one second left to give the University of Dayton a come-from-behind 72-71 upset of No. 3 DePaul in college basketball Saturday.

DePaul, 19-2, saw an 11-point lead fade away in the last 6:13 of the game, and missed three free throws in the closing minute that could have secured the lead. Dayton improved to 15-8 with its second straight home-court victory over DePaul.

Guard Larry Schellenberg hit two free throws with 13 seconds left to bring Dayton within 71-70. DePaul's Raymond McCoy was fouled, but missed his first free throw with 11 seconds left. Schellenberg rebounded and passed to Roosevelt Chapman, who fed Young for the winning shot and Dayton's only lead of the second half.

Forward Tyrone Corbin had a game-high 27 points for DePaul, 17 of them in the first half as the Blue Demons took a 34-29 halftime advantage. DePaul led 65-54 with 6:13 to play before Dayton started its furious comeback.

Dayton rolled off 10 of the next 13 points and eventually cut the lead to 69-68 with 32 seconds left on Schellenberg's tip-in, setting the stage for Young's winning shot. Chapman led Dayton with 19 points, but guard Sedric Toney sparked the second-half comeback by scoring all but two of his 16 points after the intermission. Young had 18.

Groom wins bi-district

Groom raced by Wheeler, 78-46, Friday night to claim the Class 1A girls' bi-district crown in Pampa's McNeely Fieldhouse.

Groom's aggressive defense forced Wheeler into several turnovers, and when the Lady Mustangs did have open shots they couldn't hit them.

Groom combined the inside scoring of Robbie Kuehler and the deadly outside shooting of Melissa Fields to build a comfortable 45-22 lead going into the fourth quarter. Groom never cooled off in the final eight minutes, hitting 11 of 15 field goal attempts and outrebounding the taller Lady Mustangs, 14-5. Fields hit for 14 points in the final quarter. Groom also avenged an earlier loss to Wheeler during the regular season. "We didn't play well and Groom played real well," said Wheeler Coach Jan Newland. "Of course we're disappointed in the way our season ended, but a lot of positive things happened to us this season. We had a 24-4 record and we won our second straight district title."

Groom, 15-10, is coached by Frank Belcher, a former Pampa High football and track coach.

Summers wins silver medal in figure skating event

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Katarina Witt of East Germany coupled triple jumps and a ballerina's charm Saturday to win the Olympic gold medal in women's figure skating, while Rosalynn Summers, with one perfect mark for style, took the silver medal.

Summers' free skating performance drew cheers but not enough points to complete the U.S. dream for a sweep of the men's and women's solo skating medals.

Witt is the second consecutive East German woman to win the gold medal following Annett Poetzsch, who was champion in 1980.

Kira Ivanova of the Soviet Union won the bronze medal.

Tiffany Chin of Toluca Lake, Calif., was fourth and Elaine Zayak of Paramus, N.J. was sixth.

The battle between America's world champion and the European champion settled not only who could skate best, but who could display the charm and style expected of an ice queen.

This time, Summers, 19, of Edmonds, Wash., often called the Grace Kelly of ice skating for her poise and reserve, couldn't match the Brooke Shields look alike from Karl-Marx-Stadt.

By finishing second, Summers failed to match the U.S. hopes of sweeping gold medals in individual figure skating for the first time since 1960, when Carol Heiss and David Jenkins were winners.

Scott Hamilton, who was among the crowd at the Zetra Arena watching the women skate, ended the 24-year drought for U.S. men figure skaters by taking the gold Thursday night. The last women U.S. gold medalist was Dorothy Hamill in 1976.

Summers had the lead after compulsory figure event, but was knocked to second place in the short program by Witt. Summers two-footed a double axel in the short program and that proved to be her big flaw. Witt, who won the final free-skating portion, took the lead after the short and held it for the gold medal.

Summers was ready to go all out for the biggest title of her career, but couldn't pass Witt in the final four-minute program, despite the perfect mark for style from the Italian judge.

"It's the happiest moment of my life," Witt said. "I saw Rosalynn skate and I did not think I could win."

Witt, 18, a high school student, opened strongly with a double-triple combination jump and completed two more triples before her balletic program ended. She had planned to complete four triples, but managed only a double instead of a triple flip — all performed to a medley of "I Got Rhythm," "Embraceable You" and "Mona Lisa."

Witt was resplendent in a raspberry-colored sequined costume with matching berets in her brown hair. She has been European champion the past two years, but finished fourth to Summers at the 1983 World Championships, where her free-style program was excellent but her poor finish in compulsories kept her out of the medals bracket. She was second at world in 1980 behind Zayak.

Summers, lovely in a white costume with green sequined trim, was the last of 23 competitors and came out skating with a vengeance.

She started with a double lutz and completed two triples before going into laid-back spins and swan-like glides. She appeared to skate flawlessly in performing all her planned jumps and spins to "Overture For Gwendolyn" and "Amazing Grace."

While the Italian judge said Summers was perfect, the Yugoslav judge gave Summers a 5.6 in both the technical and artistic portions of the scoring. The other 5.6 came from the East German judge in the technical portion.

Motta's most cherished NBA victory

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Dick Motta wrung his hands, licked his lips, and gave referee Ed Middleton a laser glare.

"This is a big game for us, a big game," Motta snapped.

Middleton wearily looked up from the scorer's table and replied "It's a big game for me, too."

Motta then returned to a huddle of his players, firing a parting shot over his shoulder that included a word heard in a lot of pool rooms.

This exchange occurred just before the second half of National Basketball Association victory No. 650 for Motta.

The salvo was Motta's way of making sure his Mavericks were going to get their fair share of the calls against the world champion Philadelphia 76ers, a team they had never beaten.

Cunningly, he picked halftime for the critique to lessen his chances of a technical.

He has so many (16) that the Mavericks public relations office logs a running total in the media notes to fend off questions.

Motta kept up the fusillade during the tense 76er struggle that had a playoff atmosphere.

"Dr. J—a big man," Motta yelled when Julius Erving drove the baseline and drew a foul.

"It's automatic, automatic 76ers," Motta screamed after a scramble under the basket when Middleton ruled the Mavericks touched the ball.

Finally, John Richard Motta, the NBA's fifth all-time winningest coach, could count one of his most cherished victories, a 119-116 double overtime triumph, the first win for the Mavs over Philadelphia in their three-year history.

Later in the dressing room forward Dale Ellis mentioned how it felt to have Motta on your side.

"I've never seen anything like the psychology or the intimidation that he uses on the referees," said the rookie

No. 1 draft pick from Tennessee.

Ellis added quickly "I don't know if you should print that because I don't want him to...But, he is always behind you, arguing for you, and supporting your case."

Ellis knows how it feels to be the target of Motta's razor tongue.

When he wasn't ripping Middleton or partner Walley Rooney, Motta was tongue-lashing somebody.

In Ellis' case, he was singled out for not shooting and trying to pass too much.

"Shoot the ball," Motta yelled. "We want you to shoot."

"When we are really screwing up he lets us know about it, too," Ellis said.

Motta, a 15-year veteran of the NBA wars, is molding the Mavericks into a model of his own personality.

The Mavs are a feisty, clever club. They don't mind diving for loose balls and have blood dripping down their arms like guard Brad Davis did the other night.

They squeeze out every ounce of talent they own in an effort to compensate for the lack of a big man.

If Motta has to join the famed San Diego Chicken in kicking a dummy referee around to make his point so be it. He's also done that this year.

Cougars top Virginia

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's unsung Michael Young, who is never there unless Coach Guy Lewis needs him, finally got his wish — a good performance before a national television audience.

Young poured in 22 points and helped blunt a late second-half Virginia surge Saturday to lead the fourth ranked Cougars to a 74-65 victory.

"Nobody appreciates him, maybe, except me," Lewis said. "I'll tell you this, I appreciate him a lot. We're getting down toward the end of the season and I'm already getting pangs of regret that he's not gonna be there next year."

Young is the No. 3 all-time Houston scorer and leads the Southwest Conference with a 20.8 average. But he lamented two nights earlier that he'd never had a big game before the television lights.

"It was pretty obvious that Houston's play early in the game gave them control of the game," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "They shot ery well from the perimeter and their defense made it tough for us to get easy shots."

Despite Young's 11 for 17

shooting performance from the field, the Cougars had to hold off the fast-finishing Cavaliers in the closing minutes.

Houston, 23-3, was leading by 14 points at 61-47 midway in the second half when the Cavaliers started a charge led by guard Othell Wilson, who scored 11 of his 13 points over the final 10 minutes of the game.

Temper flared in the final minutes when Houston's Akeem Olajuwon elbowed Virginia's Olden Polynice in the face as the two players ran down court. Polynice fell to the floor and left the game for good after shouting and pointing a finger at Olajuwon.

"Obviously, he didn't hit himself," Holland said.

Polynice said Olajuwon hit him in the throat intentionally.

"He looked at me and then elbowed me," Polynice said. "The next thing I knew I was on the floor. All I heard was footsteps and I knew it wasn't good for us."

Olajuwon said Polynice was trying to run in front of him to draw a charge. "I took it as long as I could," Olajuwon said. "Yeah, I threw the elbow. He was playing defense like a football player on the break."

UTEP wins overtime game

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Greed is turning into a virtue for Texas-El Paso senior Fred Reynolds.

"The guys have been looking for me more on offense, and I've been trying to take the ball right at the basket," Reynolds said Saturday after he poured in a game-high 27 points to lead 10th-ranked UTEP to a 73-66 overtime victory over Wyoming in Western Athletic Conference play.

Reynolds also led both teams in rebounding, pulling down nine.

"I've just been trying to get the ball every time I can," said Reynolds. "I want to shoot it as much as I can."

UTEP improved its record to 22-2 overall and 10-2 in the WAC. Wyoming fell to 13-11 and 6-4.

Troy Washpun was the high scorer for Wyoming with 20 points. Rodney Gowens added 19 and Jamal Hosey had 14 to help the Cowboy attack. Luster Goodwin backed Reynolds with 10 points and was the only other Miner in double figures.

UTEP head coach Don Haskins says Reynolds' desire to score has definitely been an asset for his team.

Reynolds, a 6-4 forward, hit two free throws with 20 seconds left in overtime and then tipped in a missed shot to clinch the Miners victory.

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in-depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Local theatre group presents "who-dun-it"

DISTRICT JUDGE Don Cain (in real life) (Al Hall) in preparation for Act I's presentation of "Witness for the Prosecution." hands over his gavel to "Justice Wainwright"

A number of Pampa's aspiring actors and actresses are putting the finishing touches on Act I's presentation of "Witness for the Prosecution," an Agatha Christie play featuring the many twists of plot for which she is known.

What makes this particular presentation of the play unique is the fact that it will be put on in Gray County's District Courtroom on the third floor of the courthouse. The mystery opens at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 24, continuing again at 7:30 p.m., on Feb. 25 and finally, a Sunday matinee on 2 p.m., Feb. 26.

The play takes place in London during present times and features the typical and completely unpredictable Agatha Christie ending.

Actors and actresses in the local production include Gary Kelton, Gus Shaver, Doug Cronberg, Cheryl Every, Paula Simpson, Debra Tolbert, Ronnie Holmes, Jim Guest, Skip Sumners, Elizabeth Carter, Cindy Grundler, Clare Dunn, Sharon Holmes, Bud Behannon and Al Hall.

Only Agatha Christie could have conceived such a suspenseful thriller as this, and then capped it with an uncanny triple flip ending.

The story is that of a young married man who spends many evenings with a rich old woman. One evening she is found murdered, and the young man is the chief suspect.

Since he is quite naive and innocent, the testimony of his wife is expected to result in acquittal. But the wife turns out to be a shrew who damages his case and all but hangs him.

However, a vindictive mystery woman appears with some letters against the wife and the young man is freed. But, wait, it doesn't end here.

JOAN MAYHEW (Gus Shaver) reviews a piece of evidence with Sir Wilfrid Roberts (Gary Kelton) before court begins.

"DEATH WOULD have been instantaneous," reveals Dr. Wyatt (Clare Dunn).

I READ that the police were anxious to interview me, so of course I went to the police station," Leonard Vole (Doug Cronberg) tells the jury.

"THERE IS" clear authority to support my proposition to be found in the case of King vs. Stillman," Sir Wilfrid Roberts (Gary Kelton) tells the Judge (Al Hall).

KINDLY MAKE your remarks to the jury, says the Judge (Al Hall). Mrs. MacKenzie (Elizabeth Carter).

Ideas that work

To add longer life to the workshirts of the handyman around the house, take a tip from the current Family Circle magazine. Press a knee - sized iron - on patch to the inside of the breast pockets to prevent nails, screws and sharp tools from poking through and tearing holes in the shirt.

To protect your furniture from scratches, slice discs from a pencil eraser with a razor blade and glue them to the bottoms of alarm clocks, ashtrays, staplers and similar articles. Besides protecting furniture from accident scratches, the rubber pads also cut down on noise created by vibrations.

Roll up a blanket, pack it in a plastic bag, and slip it behind the spare tire in your car trunk. The blanket will be handy for emergencies without taking up excess trunk space, and the bag will keep the blanket clean.

Franzblau-Coffee

Dr. and Mrs. Arnold H. Franzblau of Hilton Head, S. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Adele, to Keith Allan Coffee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Coffee of Pampa.

A wedding date has been set for April 1 in a garden ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Franzblau is completing her third year of law school at the University of South Carolina School of Law in Columbia.

Coffee has recently returned to the United States after serving more than two years with the Peace Corps in Togo, West Africa.

Both Miss Franzblau and Coffee received bachelors degrees from the University of Texas at Austin in 1981.

Old movies affect her lifestyle

By ERMA BOMBECK

There used to be a joke about laugh tracks that some of them were so old that all the people laughing on them were dead. I forgave them for dying, but I could never forgive them for laughing themselves into a hernia when Laverne rubbed cooking oil all over Shirley's body. That should have been in their contract.

Thanks to the magic of films, I don't think anyone in Hollywood dies anymore. They just go into reruns and live forever. With the demands of the three networks, independent affiliates, PBS and all the cable programming, there are at least 135 movies starting in this country every 15 seconds.

I'm talking old movies. I saw Tarzan the other night in a movie so old he thought because a papaya was soft, it was a girl. Another night, I watched a silent film in which Dorothy Gish was wearing the same dress I bought last week. I saw a Western so old no one even bothered to notice that the Indians had vaccinations and capped teeth and the women settlers wore living bras that

Correction

Because of incorrect information provided to the Pampa News, it was reported that the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department's dance was to be held in the Lefors High School. The dance is to be conducted in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion in Pampa from 8 to 11 p.m. on Feb. 25. Proceeds are to go to the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department.

lifted and separated.

The point is all these movies are having an effect on our lifestyle. I have no taste. I watch anything that moves. Recently, when I went on a book tour, I got up one morning to watch Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery. I promised myself when it was over, I'd take my shower and put on my face in preparation for an appearance on the Donahue show.

I was about to leave the room when Eleanor Parker, Patricia Neal and some other woman appeared in a movie where all three of them had given up a baby for adoption and a child having the same birthdate was in a plane crash and the adoptive parents were killed. The three mothers went to the bottom of the mountain to wait out the rescue of the child, not knowing which one was the natural mother.

What would you have done? Been on time for the Donahue show or seen which mother had actually given birth to the child?

On New Year's Eve, I said to my husband, 'We've got to get away from this TV set and all of these movies. We're living in a tinsel world that is unreal. Life is not like a movie set and endings aren't always happy with the music coming up. The real world is out there!' (I pointed to the door.)

We went to a New Year's Eve party and they had rented a movie for the evening.

Getting hooked on all these movies is a national problem. Phil realized that when I apologized to him. He's up on those sort of things.

Peeking at Pampa

Why don't we take a look-see at what Pampans did last week as they went merrily on their way?

The newly formed high school student group BIONIC (Believe It or Not, I Care) and concerned parents sponsored a drug and alcohol-free dance last Saturday night at M. K. Brown Auditorium. The response was even better than anticipated with a full house of students having a wonderful time of clean fun. Red and white balloons were everywhere and streamers with fresh flowers dressed up the refreshment table. The group promises monthly activities for high school, junior high and elementary students.

"Grease" has been proclaimed one of the liveliest musicals ever produced by the PHS choir. The production will long be remembered for the rhythmic numbers sung by the "Greasers" (Dean Birkes, Jeff Steward, Todd Hardin, Brent Chapman and Danny Boddy) and the Pink Ladies (Kerri Richardson, Sheri Rogers, Kari Coffee and Stacy Bennett) — the finale belted out by the leads — macho Dean and demure Beth — the dance routines choreographed by Madeline Graves. "Grease" was full of laughs and energy that only a group of high school students directed by talented Billy Talley could produce!

A large group of women enjoyed the first in a series of monthly ladies' luncheons at the Pampa Country Club last Thursday. All the waitresses wore black slacks and pink blouses to carry out the valentine theme of red, pink and white. Chef Chester Greenwood was all decked out in black trousers, pink shirt, pink chiffon ascot with a valentine smack in the center of his chef's hat. His wife, Emma, was there in pink and black, too. The food was larapin! the Rev. Carol Wood spoke on love.

Friends were pleased to see Frances (Mrs. George) Cree in town about a week from her home in the Honduras. She presented the freshest fashion picture dressed in vanilla from head to toe. By now she is visiting grandchildren in New Mexico.

Willie McConnell spreads sunshine and smiles wherever she goes, whether dressed in rose ultra suede or a plaid suit topped with a blouse ruffling softly at the neck. Georgeanna Organ exudes vivacity and vitality. Mary Fain qualifies as a real neat lady, too.

Cay (Mrs. Mark) Warner hosted a reception to honor Carol Hance, wife of Kent — a Democratic candidate for a seat in the U. S. Senate. Co-hostesses were Carol (Mrs. Ken) Fields and Nancy (Mrs. Mike) Ruff. Carol, Ken, Nancy and Mike were Kent's students when he was a professor at Texas Tech University.

Pat (Mrs. Elmer D.) Young was honored with a reception at Citizens Bank to celebrate her 25th year there. Congratulations, Pat.

At least 75 people helped Thelma Paris celebrate her 84th birthday last week. Party hostess was her granddaughter Marth (Mrs. Stephen) Porter. Betty Sloan and Martha's father, J. D. Paris, are Thelma's children. Congratulations, Thelma!

Jean (Mrs. Dale) Ladd and Ola Mae (Mrs. John) Nunn helped Cora Mae Hood celebrate her birthday with a tasty barbecue lunch. Happy belated birthday wishes to Harvey Nenstiel!

Hear Dixie Dixon, known for her hospital reports given to Earl Davis over the once-KPDN radio, will be celebrating a birthday for the first time in four years. She's a leap year baby who only has birthdays on Feb. 29 — once every four years. She worked for Highland General Hospital 21 years.

Word has arrived that Mary Ann and Steve Purves, former Pampans now living in Knoxville, Tenn., are proud parents of a baby girl born last week. Steve was assistant administrator at CCH and Mary Ann, R.N., worked like a beaver in the emergency room.

Two happy parents are Joyce and Don Walberg, proud of Cindy's recent college graduation — and eager to be grandparents in May.

Congratulations to Dr. and Mrs. Fred Juan, proud new parents of a baby born last week!

Juanita (Mrs. Bob) Brower spends hours upon hours working with the youth of St. Vincent's Church. Example: She often bakes umpteen dozen plain cookies. The youth then decorate them and distribute them to various members of the parish.

Best wishes to Nadine Fletcher as she recovers from recent surgery — and to Nancy (Mrs. Brian) Duncan who has been hospitalized.

Shirley (Mrs. Speck) Winborne is out and about and looking her cheerful self following recent surgery.

Friends of Amy New, who suffered a fractured wrist not long ago, will be interested to know that Amy is recuperating in the Pampa Nursing Center. Amy is a bright-eyed dear little lady in her early 90s.

Liz and Ken Edwards are back from a trip to their former home site in Franklin, La.

"Goodbye!" and "Good luck!" to Belinda and John Stafford who are being transferred to Houston. Belinda will be missed as a regular and dependable CCH volunteer.

Elizabeth Hurley, eyes sparkling, knew where she was headed for in a big hurry. She was dressed in a perky pantsuit, red jacket over black pants.

"Granny" Condo, as she is affectionately known, may have retired from a school cafeteria — but not for long. She is back in the field again, baking pies, banana nut bread and other baked goodies for family members who opened a restaurant in the Hughes Building.

Lanora McPeak, a former Pampans, returned recently from Amarillo to serve as assistant manager at Furr's Cafeteria. Welcome back home, Lanora!

Ruby Saltzman seemed to be everywhere and to know everybody she saw all last week. She is always in a hurry — and always has a pleasant greeting and a minute to chat.

Several times each week Iva and Jack Back are seen taking a long walk.

Anita (Mrs. Jim) Davis has a pleasant and relaxed manner wherever she goes. Saw her pause to visit with a friend while shopping.

Melody Langford and her dad Ronny Johnson focused full attention on Melody's precious little dark-haired girl on a recent outing. No wonder! The tiny miss could best be described as a living doll, all frilled and ruffled. So cute!

The winter banquet for all adults of Central Baptist Church was held last Thursday. The name fit the decorations of snowflakes hanging from the ceiling. Evelyn (Mrs. Tommy) Richardson, adult coordinator, supervised arrangements and Carrie (Mrs. Bob) Hardin, decorations. The Living Water Gospel Band, a newly formed musical group composed of Marilyn and Mike Russell, guitar; Wanetta, electric keyboard and Richard Hill; David Nall, guitar and Lyndon Field, drums, presented the program enjoyed by a crowd of 200. All six sang — and beautifully.

Enjoy your cherry pie tomorrow and I'll see you back here next week.

Local college student wins Miss Garland

Brandi Huff, Miss Top O' Texas 1983, was recently crowned Miss Garland in the Garland Scholarship Pageant. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Huff of Pampa.

As first place winner she is to receive a $2,000 scholarship. She also won the talent award, receiving an additional $500 scholarship. For her talent she performed a classical Hungarian piano piece by Bartok.

On Feb. 4, Miss Huff was named first runner up in the Miss Grand Prairie Scholarship Pageant and was awarded a $500 scholarship.

She is currently studying music and music performance at Texas Christian University in Denton. She is to be a contestant in the Miss Texas Pageant in July.

Beef cook-off rules given

Top O' Texas CowBelles, as part of the Texas CowBelles, will sponsor the 1984 Texas Beef Cook-Off. To enter send a typed copy of your best beef recipe using chuck, round, rump, fresh brisket, plate, ground beef or shank. Include your name, address, and phone number and a brief statement about the origin of your recipe.

Send your entry to Mrs. J. M. Sterling, Rt. 1, Box 152, Colorado City, Tex., 79512.

Contestants must be 18 years old or older with non professional status in the food industry. Anyone who lives in a household where any person has owned cattle in the past year is ineligible. CowBelles and employees of the Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board or state beef councils are also ineligible.

Each recipe must contain a minimum of one pound of beef (not two as previously) and each serving of the recipe must contain at least three ounces of cooked beef. Cooking time can not exceed four hours. The recipe must be specific with no use of brand names. It must state the number of servings and approximate preparation time.

Five finalists will be selected from these entries. These winners will receive an expense-paid trip to the Texas Cookoff on April 27-28 in the College of Home Economics, Texas Tech University in Lubbock. First ($500), second ($300) and third place ($200) prizes will be awarded.

The state winner will compete in the national contest for $5,000 first prize, $2,500 second prize, $1,000 third prize or any of five honorable mention awards of $300 each. The national Beef Cookoff is to be held in September in Albuquerque, N.M.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — For chipped or worn painted cabinets, furniture or paneling, try painting the marred areas with artists' acrylic paints. These mix and clean up with water and can be purchased in tubes for under $2 for most colors. The exact shade needed for a fixup may be available or you can purchase several tubes and mix the correct shade. Once dry, the acrylics can be varnished. Leftover acrylics, kept tightly secured from the air, last for years and will be available for more touchups. — NICKI

Five students selected DAR 1984 "Good Citizens"

Randi Matson-Pampa

Las Pampas Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) are to honor five area high school students as "Good Citizens" at the annual Colonial Tea today at 2:30 p.m. at the Pampa Senior Citizens Center.

DAR Good Citizens are selected for their dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. Candidates must be high school seniors. They are elected by their classmates, teachers or both. To qualify for state competition, the students must answer a personal questionnaire, complete a civic and patriotic quiz, and write an essay on "Our American Heritage and My Responsibility to Preserve It." Each local Good Citizen will receive a DAR Good Citizen pin, a certificate and a copy of a DAR publication entitled "Washington Landmark."

Randi Matson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matson of Pampa. She is a member of the National Honor Society and the Student Council at Pampa

High School. She has served as the secretary of the Future Homemakers of America for two years. Randi is also vice president of the youth council at the Calvary Baptist Church where she sings in the choir. She plans to attend college and major in some area of business, possibly accounting. She enjoys sewing, drawing and making latch hook rugs.

Sid Whiteley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Whiteley of Wheeler. He has been a member of the Student Council for four years, serving as president his junior and senior years. He belongs to the National Honor Society and the Society of Distinguished American High School Students. He has served as president of the Key Club. Sid has won academic awards in physical science, typing, English and band. He plans to attend West Texas State University and earn a degree in accounting. One of his special interests is working with the handicapped. Becky Bridges is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Truman Bridges of Groom. She is active in the band, being a member of the All-Region band four years and a state qualifier on the clarinet. She has also been a state qualifier in poetry interpretation and has been a member of three UIL one-act play all-star casts. She has been an outstanding student in both math and home economics. Offices she has held include band captain, FHA pianist, head cheerleader, secretary-treasurer of the junior class, and president of the local 4-H Club and the county 4-H Council. Becky plans to attend Baylor University as a music performance major in voice. Her main hobbies revolve around music and sports.

Judd Wheeler attends White Deer High School where he has been a member of the National Honor Society for three years. This year he is vice president of the society. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wheeler of Skellytown. Judd has participated in UIL number sense for four years and has been a regional qualifier. He was good citizen boy for the junior class and holds letters in football, basketball and track where he was athletic manager. He plans to attend college and major in computer science. His hobbies include working with computers, playing chess and reading.

Dayn Croslin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Croslin of Clarendon. She has been active in UIL competition in twirling, feature writing, headline-writing and typing, winning fifth place at state in headline-writing. She has won numerous Division I ratings in twirling, both in solo and ensemble, and is currently head twirler for the CHS band. She has held several offices, including president, in the Future Homemakers of America. Dayn plans to attend Texas Tech and major in journalism and education. Her special interests include arts and crafts and music of all kinds.

Karen Pryor tries to accentuate the positive side

By Ellie Grossman
NEW YORK (NEA) — If there's one thing Sylvia does like a pro, it's complain — which wouldn't bother you if you didn't have to work (or live) with her.
Well, there's nothing you can do, except change her, by changing how you react to her. That's one of the messages in Karen Pryor's excellent new book, "Don't Shoot the Dog!" (Simon and Schuster, $13.95), subtitled "How to Improve Yourself and Others Through Behavior Training." Don't cringe. There's nothing Machiavellian here, and no bewildering maze of scientific jargon to stumble through.
There's simply what Ms. Pryor has learned in 20 years as a behavioral biologist working primarily with dolphins, simply a variety of non-threatening procedures which she shares with the National Science Foundation, NASA, the National Geographic Society and anyone else who asks.
Oddly enough, she stumbled into the whole thing, although her interest in marine biology was there from the start. Daughter of novelist Philip Wylie, she says, "My father loved to fish and I was snorkeling around coral reefs when I was 9, before snorkels were invented."

In those days, however, little girls grew into marriages, not careers, so after graduating from Cornell (she was an English lit major), she followed her husband to Hawaii where he began graduate studies in marine biology and, for the fun of it, she did too. Then, in 1963, she says, "He started an oceanarium but there, Sea Life Park, and through an emergency I took over the dolphin training although I'd only trained horses and dogs for obedience competition."
What she didn't know about dolphins, they taught her and it was a revelation. She discovered they could only be trained through the "rules of positive reinforcement," and the potential of those rules soon fascinated her. If you could get dolphins to walk on water with these methods, she reasoned, you could probably also get kids to stop dropping clothes all over the house and the dog from dropping something more objectionable.
And so she could. And so you can, she says. Mind, you won't be able to change the whole world. Still, at the least, you can probably prevent Sylvia from giving you an ulcer.

First, Ms. Pryor says, "Be aware that we're actually talking about controlling yourself, not another person or animal," as contradictory as that sounds.
Now, then, Sylvia lumbers over and starts complaining about how much work she has to do, and she gets just what she wants. "Everyone swivels around to her," says Ms. Pryor. "They respond to her. One reason people complain is for attention and even if it's negative, that's better than being ignored."
So this time, give Sylvia something else. Give her less. "Withdraw a little," she says. "Be polite, but turn your face or shoulders away. Absent your attention. Then, the minute any word comes out of her mouth that is not a complaint, reinforce it positively by lighting up and giving her your full attention."

Keep doing that — two steps back when she kvetches, four joyous leaps forward when she doesn't — and, says Ms. Pryor, "Her non-complaining behavior will tend to occur more often. Remember, though, you must reinforce the behavior you want while it's occurring, so notice what you are actually reinforcing." And keep doing it for as long as it takes to get the results you want.
Now say there's some troubling personal habit of your own you'd love to be rid of. For instance, years ago when she was free-lancing as a writer and scientist after her first marriage, Ms. Pryor says, "I'd awaken at 2 every morning and lie there brooding about money for two hours."

Finally, bleary-eyed and fed up, she decided to modify that behavior using another of her psychological tools. "It seemed to me that doing something incompatible with running those self-castigating tapes in my head was the best way to go," she says, "so I took a course in meditation. That might not work for everyone but it turned out to be a good device to shut down the quarrelsome lady in my head always picking on me. I simply could not recite a mantra and worry at the same time. The dog begs at the table? Train him to lie in the doorway and feed him after dinner. He can't beg and lie in the doorway at the same time."

But new behaviors don't come easily, and they don't come without positive reinforcement. So, while she was learning to meditate herself to sleep, she says, "I colored in a square on a card for every night I meditated. I pinned the card to the bulletin board and looked at it all the time so I could get satisfaction from what I'd accomplished. Even if there were gaps, I could still see the full squares and you want to stack the deck in your favor so what you're trying to do pays off."

Winning diet is healthful one

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent
Through all types of media, the Olympics has become a household word in 1984. Many young Olympic hopefuls, as well as the middle and older generations, are really into sports and fitness. Along with sports come many nutrition myths. Let's look at some of the fallacies and truths of sports nutrition.

FALLACY: Athletes should take salt tablets to keep from dehydrating.

TRUTH: Concentrated salt tablets, taken without adequate water, draw water from body tissue and can increase the risk of dehydration and heat stroke.

FALLACY: "Carbohydrate loading" is an effective way to peak before a big contest.

TRUTH: "Carbohydrate loading" is a non-productive way to prepare for uninterrupted activities lasting less than 1 1/2 to 2 hours. Carbohydrate loading is a tactic developed especially for long distance cyclists and marathon runners, that require continuous, maximum exertion for many hours. It is not recommended for athletes who compete in stop and start sports such as football, baseball, basketball or soccer, even if the overall contests last several hours.

FALLACY: Extra vitamins provide more energy.

TRUTH: Vitamins themselves are not a source of energy. They only help release energy from the carbohydrates, proteins, and fats we eat. Research shows that megadoses of vitamins do not strengthen performance, improve strength and don't prevent injuries or colds.

FALLACY: Increasing protein intake will build large, strong muscles.

TRUTH: Only exercise can build muscles, and although some extra protein is needed, the amount is very small. Research indicates that the key factor in increasing both size and strength of muscles is an appropriate exercise program supported by a conventional well-balanced diet.

FALLACY: Taking water before and during competition is harmful.

TRUTH: Athletes should drink plenty of water before, during and after practice or competition. Not drinking water can be harmful.

FALLACY: The pre-game meal can make or break an athlete's performance.

TRUTH: There is no magic to the foods eaten at the pre-game meal unless the food gives some type of psychological boost. It is well documented that the ingestion of any kind of food is not followed by an immediate increase in physical efficiency. The pre-game meal should not be depended on as a source of energy for the event. One possible exception would be distance athletes such as marathon runners.

There are many guidelines athletes can follow for pre-game meals until they find what works best for them. The pre-game meal should be relatively high in carbohydrates — starches and sugars; contain foods that the individual can digest easily; consist of foods that the athlete likes and has eaten before; be low in fat, which delays emptying time of the stomach, be of reasonable size — about 500 to 1,000 calories, so the stomach is relatively empty for the contest and be taken with large amounts of water.

It is best to remember that there is no magical formula nor scientific evidence that athletic performance can be improved by modifying a basically sound and nutritious diet. In the end, those athletes who concentrate on eating well-balanced meals that contain a variety of the basic food groups: fruits and vegetables, cereals and grains, meat, fish and poultry and dairy products, and who drink plenty of water before, during and after competitions will be the winners.

America's hospital bills soar during past 30 years

From aspirin at a few cents a pill to an operating room at a few hundred dollars an hour, America's hospital bill is soaring. It is rising faster than the rate of inflation and faster than the gross national product. It is even rising faster than the federal budget.

Hospital charges make up the biggest chunk of U.S. health care expenses — 42 percent, up from 30 percent in 1950. Hospital expenditures in 1982 were $135.4 billion, according to the Department of Health and Human Services. That's 35 times the 1950 level.

A random check by The Associated Press of several cities showed that a routine adult appendectomy cost anywhere from about $1,800 to $3,200, depending on where you are, how long you are hospitalized, how many tests and drugs are required and what the surgeon charges.

That total does not include the services of personal physicians; their fees are extra, usually based on the number of times they visit you in the hospital.

Since most hospital bills are paid by someone other than the patient — by commercial insurers or by the government through Medicare and Medicaid — many people have at best only a hazy idea of what they are spending.

Look at what has happened to hospital bills:

In 1950, they accounted for 14 percent of the GNP; in 1982, they accounted for 44 percent. The GNP itself grew elevenfold from 1950 to 1982, but hospital expenditures rose three times faster — multiplying by 35. Even the federal budget went up only half as fast.

From 1980 to 1982 alone, the over-all Consumer Price Index went up by 17 percent; the segment measuring hospital charges rose by 30 percent.

Where is the money going? The AP decided to look at the bill for an appendectomy, a fairly standard operation. It selected several hospitals, picking small- to medium-sized communities instead of big cities where research facilities often attract more complicated cases. It chose non-profit hospitals in the general range of 100 to 200 beds, a typical size according to the American Hospital Association.

Hospital and health insurance representatives interviewed for the survey pointed out there were several factors to keep in mind when looking at a hospital bill.

—The charge on your bill represents not only the cost of your care, but also the cost of caring for other patients. Hospitals with a large number of charity cases often have higher charges because the paying patients — the ones covered by insurance — must underwrite the cost of the free care. The paying patients must also cover the difference between hospital costs and reimbursements by Medicare and Medicaid.

—The amount you are billed for an individual item probably doesn't reflect the cost of that particular item. George Maroney, administrator of Memorial Hospital, a 150-bed facility in Carbondale, Ill., said the real cost of caring for a patient in a semi-private room was much higher than what was charged.

"If you charged the actual amount for that, room rates would be $350 or more and there would be a public outcry," Maroney said. "So you take some of the costs and shift them over, charge in other areas. For instance, charging $17 (more than the actual cost) for a CBC, a complete blood count. Most hospitals do it. You take the cost and spread it out..."

The practice of spreading out the cost is why you may be billed $1 or more for a pill you can buy at the drugstore for only a few cents.

—Expenses depend partly on your doctor. "We don't control what happens to the patient — the physician does," said Maroney. "We provide the services, but physicians order tests and procedures and determine how long patients stay. We're just carrying out the orders of physicians."

The largest part of the hospital bill is often for the room. The AP found charges for a semi-private room ranged from $134 at Grace Hospital in Morganton, N.C., to $220 at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, Colo. The charge covered the bed, routine nursing care and meals. (The Health Insurance Association of America said that as of July 1982 the average daily charge for a semi-private room in U.S. hospitals was about $180.)

The typical appendectomy patient spends from three to five days in the hospital and from 30 minutes to an hour in the operating room.

Other charges on the bill include the recovery room (another half hour to an hour), anesthesia, intravenous fluids for nourishment after the operation, X-rays, blood and other laboratory tests, medical and surgical supplies like bandages and thermometers, and drugs, ranging from simple painkillers like aspirin to sophisticated medicines to prevent infection.

Many hospitals also offer what they call a "convenience kit," including basic toiletries like toothpaste, at a price of $5 to $10. In some cases, it's provided only if the patient asks; in other places, the kit — and the charge — are automatic.

Surgeons' and anesthesiologists' fees are generally billed separately; they contribute about $700 to $1,000 to the total cost.

Bearing in mind that charges vary among hospitals not only because of geographical factors, but also due to differences in the proportion of charity cases, in cost accounting procedures and in the amount of detail officials were willing to provide, here is some of what the AP found:

—Memorial Hospital, Carbondale, Ill.: Maroney said a routine appendectomy ranged from $1,800 to $2,400, including anesthesia and surgeon's fees. A semi-private room is $190 per day, including a television and convenience kit. The average length of stay for a routine appendectomy patient is 2.67 days, for a typical room bill of about $507. Standard pre-operative tests include a complete blood count at $17 and a urinalysis at $10. If the patient is over 40 or there is a suspicion of a heart or lung problem, an electrocardiogram at $48 and a chest X-ray at $41 are also required. Other pre-surgical charges include $20 to $25 for an intravenous solution, $6.50 for a pre-sedation hypodermic injection and $4.40 for surgical "prep."

Operating room charges vary from $350 to $425, for surgery taking 30 minutes to one hour. The charge for anesthesia — administered by a nurse anesthetist supervised by a staff anesthesiologist — is $375 to $425. An hour in the recovery room is $110. After the operation, the hospital examines the tissue removed at a charge of $35, provides another IV solution and does another complete blood count. Drugs include four to six injections of the painkiller Demerol at $5.50 an injection. Tylenol with codeine, another painkiller, is $2.50 per capsule. A typical surgeon's fee is $667.

—St. Mary's Hospital, Grand Junction, Colo.: Spokesman Wayne Allen said the 222-bed hospital charges about $1,500 for a routine appendectomy, with charges by the surgeon and anesthesiologist adding $840. A semi-private room, including television, is $220 a day, with an average stay of 2.3 days. Allen said the patient could expect a laboratory bill of $120 for blood and other tests. A standard abdominal X-ray is $45. The fee for the operating and recovery rooms would be $569. Drug charges would add $160, with about 80 percent for intravenous solutions, and medical supplies, including bandages and surgical packs, would be $103.

—Grace Hospital, Morganton, N.C.: Controller Gary Shull said an appendectomy at the 161-bed facility would cost about $1,500, including anesthesia; the surgeon's fee would boost it to just over $2,000. A semi-private room is $134 and a typical stay is four days for a bill of $536. (Television is extra, $1.50 per day.) Shull said other charges included $260 for the operating room, $48 for the recovery room, $28 for a complete blood count, $13 for a urinalysis, $47 for intravenous fluids, $209 for medical and surgical supplies, $25 for medicines, and $233 for the anesthesiologist and accompanying drugs.

—Northern Dutchess Hospital, Rhinebeck, N.Y.: Administrator Mazzarella said a recent patient at the 120-bed hospital paid $1,851.90 for a five-day stay for an appendectomy; the surgery and anesthesia fees added about $1,000. A semi-private room, which may include up to four beds, costs $139 per day. Telephone service is about 80 cents a day and a television is $2.50 a day.

Dear Abby

Choice of wedding dress involves too many moms

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from the 22-year-old bride-to-be who invited her future mother-in-law to go along and help pick out her bridal gown:

I don't know what kind of relationship the bride had with her own mother, but I can tell you that the day my daughter invites her future mother-in-law along to help pick out her bridal gown, I will be busy elsewhere. And the two of them can pay for whatever they purchase together!

MRS. A. IN PINCKNEY, MICH.

DEAR MRS. A.: So far, to my surprise, the mail is running 2-to-1 in favor of your point of view. But read on for a heartwarming letter for the opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: I was very proud of my daughter when she asked her future mother-in-law to come with us and help pick out her bridal gown. The three of us went shopping together and had a wonderful time!

Her future mother-in-law was thrilled because, since she had only sons, she thought she'd never know the joy of helping a daughter pick out a wedding gown.

IRENE IN ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: You were asked what you thought of a woman who would play cards in her home the same evening she buried one of her parents.

Thank you for saying it's not possible to make a fair judgment without knowing what was in that woman's heart.

Abby, people often laugh and carry on after a funeral to keep from breaking down, because if one breaks down, the rest would follow.

BEEN THROUGH IT

DEAR BEEN: It's true. But what's wrong with breaking down? It's appropriate for one who has lost a loved one to break down and weep—and even to cry out in anger. "God, why me?"

My advice to those who feel the pain of grief would be: Don't try to put on a show of "strength"—cry your heart out. Tears are healing.

***

DEAR ABBY: After 13 years of marriage, I am seriously considering calling it quits.

For the last three years, "Don" has worked away from home on various construction jobs. When our children aren't in school, we go to wherever he is to be with him. He is never on one job long enough for us to move there.

Don has always been overly jealous, even though I've never given him any reason to be. The problem is that it keeps getting worse. Abby, I have never fooled around and Don knows this, and in his more rational moments he says he loves me so much he's afraid someone might lure me away from him.

Last Sunday a car turned into our driveway, and Don said (right in front of the children), "That must have been Mommy's boyfriend, checking to see if I was home."

The phone is worse. He always answers. If it's a wrong number, he says, "Probably one of your boyfriends calling to see if I'm home."

How do I convince Don that I love him? Frankly, I am glad to see him leave. I want our marriage to work, but I don't know how much longer I can put up with his insulting accusations.

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Persistent, excessive jealousy without provocation is a sickness. Tell your husband that if he really can't control it, he should see a shrink because you have had it with his groundless suspicions. And by the way, there's an old French saying, "A man rarely looks under the bed unless he's been there himself."

***

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, the subject of "religious preferences" for pets came up, and you said, "Pets raised in a Christian home are assumed to be Christian, and pets raised in a Jewish home are assumed to be Jewish."

Abby, not all pets accept the religion of their masters, even though you once knew a Jewish terrier who refused all food that wasn't kosher. That canine puts my Boston terrier, Benny, to shame!

When I was 9 years old, one Friday my mother had thoughtlessly prepared a lunch of pork and beans. I saved the day by suggesting, "Give the pork and beans to Benny—he's not Catholic."

She did, and Benny gobbled it up!

Bone up on San Antonio style fish

Mexico, with its two long coastlines, boasts a wealth of seafood and a variety of delicious ways to prepare it. Some of the more exceptional dishes have long been popular in the border states, where they evolved to fit the cooking styles of busy Americans.

In San Antonio, where Mexican food is considered the most authentic north of the border, the preparation of Mexican fish favorites is simplified while the recipe's original appeal is consciously preserved. Easy-to-find ingredients replace the exotic.

While fish has gained in popularity because of its healthful light and lean image, in some parts of the country it is paradoxically presented with a high-fat butter or cream sauce. In San Antonio, favorite fish dishes are served with light Mexican style sauces which compliment without overpowering delicate fish.

Red Snapper is Mexico's most plentiful and popular fish. When prepared Veracruz style with a well-flavored tomato sauce, it is one of the country's most famous dishes. Easy Red Snapper Veracruz is a Texas interpretation of this colorful dish which makes impressive company fare. Ready to serve in about 30 minutes, the low-calorie sauce features lime juice (a seasoning staple in Veracruz), fresh tomato, olives, capers and picante sauce. No red snapper available this week? Substitute fresh or frozen cod or haddock fillets for an equally delicious dining experience.

EASY RED SNAPPER VERACRUZ
2 lb. red snapper fillets
2 to 4 T. lime juice
Salt and pepper
1 med. onion, thinly sliced
2 lg. cloves garlic, minced
1/4 c. olive oil
4 c. chopped fresh tomatoes or 4 c. canned tomatoes, chopped and drained
1-3rd c. picante sauce
12 pimiento-stuffed green olives, cut in half
2 T. capers, drained
1 bay leaf
Brush fish with lime juice;

season with salt and pepper. Place in large skillet and set aside. Cook onion and garlic in oil in large saucepan until onion is tender but not browned. Add remaining ingredients except fish. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes.

Pour sauce over fish. Bring to a boil over medium heat. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 8 to 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork. Remove fish from skillet and arrange on platter; keep warm.

Return skillet to medium-high heat; cook, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickened, 8 to 10 minutes. Serve sauce with fish. Makes six servings.

Even on the busiest weeknight there's time to prepare Pescado Al San Antonio, sure to become a family favorite. Finely crushed packaged tortilla chips form a tasty, crunch crust as the cook's choice of fish fillet bakes briefly. For greatest time savings, crush the chips in a food processor or blender. While the fish is baking, an easy sauce of stewed tomatoes and picante sauce heats on top of the range to become a flavorful Mexican-style topping which belies its ease of preparation.

PESCADO AL SAN ANTONIO
1 egg, beaten
2 T. milk
1 lb. fish fillets
1/2 c. finely crushed tortilla or corn chips
1 (16 oz.) can stewed tomatoes
1/2 c. picante sauce
Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Combine egg and milk; mix well. Dip fish into egg mixture; coat well with tortilla chips. Place in a well-greased shallow baking pan. Bake 8 to 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork. While fish bakes, drain tomatoes, reserving juice. Coarsely chop tomatoes. Combine tomatoes, juice and picante sauce in small saucepan; simmer 10

RED SNAPPER VERACRUZ is a San Antonio style interpretation of the colorful Mexican classic. The light yet full-flavored sauce is prepared easily with tomatoes, olives, capers and picante sauce. "Weighing in" at only six calories per tablespoon, the sauce adds a lively flavor boost which complements, without overpowering, the delicate fish.

SCULPTED WORLD'S LARGEST—Lincoln Borglum, who worked on Mount Rushmore until 1941, says the monument will be a great wonder when it is finished. (AP Laserphoto)

Son of Mount Rushmore's creator says the monument is incomplete

By SYDNEY RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
LA FERIA, Texas (AP) — Lincoln Borglum says Mount Rushmore will be a great monument when it's finished. Guidebooks may say the monument in the Black Hills of South Dakota is already one of America's wonders, but Borglum calls it a work-in-progress and he should know.

Borglum worked on the mountain for a decade under the direction of his father, Gutzon Borglum, who designed and supervised construction of Mount Rushmore. In 1941, Gutzon Borglum died and his son took over, working until funds ran out.

Forty-three years later, at age 72, Borglum still hopes to return to the mountain and complete his father's dream.

"We took everything down off the mountain and packed the drills and such in grease, thinking we'd be back," Borglum says. "But then the war started and there wasn't any money to do the rest of the work."

Gutzon Borglum's plan called for a great Hall of History behind the 60-foot high, granite faces of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt. Panels in the hall were to identify the carved faces, explain how and why they are there and provide a little bit of the history of the United States of America.

From the time work began in 1927 until he died, Gutzon Borglum raised $250,000 for the project from federal and private sources, finding funds even during the Depression. Lincoln Borglum says he expected to raise more money, too, and drilled a 90-foot deep cave in anticipation of completing the hall.

But when World War II began money went to artillery, not art.

"So now there's nothing up there," Borglum says. "But if we don't finish it, someday Mount Rushmore will be a mystery like the heads on Easter Island which we don't know anything about."

"We shouldn't leave another puzzle for people

10,000 years from now." Gutzon Borglum knew from the start he was creating a work for the ages. He designed each face to be twice as high as Egypt's Giza Sphinx and carved them from granite which erodes from natural forces at about one inch per 100,000 years.

"But we didn't think of the atom bomb in those days," Borglum says.

He thinks of it now. And Borglum says the Hall of History could be more than a celebration of the past. It could be a well-marked tool shed for building a future.

"I think the Hall of History should be finished as a hall of records where we put some of our better inventions to help future civilizations rebuild should ours be lost," Borglum says.

America has buried time capsules "all over but they don't know where many of them are."

"Assuming that everything else is gone, this landmark could stand as a beacon" marking the location of a new beginning.

Borglum says "you don't have to look back very far" to see that the end of American civilization "might be a possibility."

To help Borglum finish Mount Rushmore, a non-profit organization has been set up in Harington to raise funds for the hall — the Mount Rushmore Archives Foundation.

Borglum hopes money can be raised to complete "a monument which equals in size the greatness of America."

Texas may seem a peculiar place to try to raise money for a monument located in South Dakota.

But Borglum says his father did some of his finest work at his studio in San Antonio. In fact, the first model for Mount Rushmore was built there.

The Borglums called Texas home during winter months when sub-zero temperatures brought work in South Dakota to a halt. And San Antonio welcomed the well-known artist who had sculpted work for the Capitol rotunda in Washington, New York City's Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Gettysburg battlefield.

Borglum became involved in the state's civic affairs and ran the WPA's civic improvement program in Texas during the Depression.

Lincoln Borglum came to Texas in the 1950s after selling his South Dakota ranch, and raised cattle near Beeville before retiring to the Rio Grande Valley.

He has returned to his first love and spends afternoons sculpting in his garden, surrounded by citrus trees.

Lippizzans at home in Whitesboro

By MARK STUTZ
Sherman Democrat
WHITESBORO, Texas (AP) — If not for Gen. George Patton and several Allied soldiers in 1945, Lisa Brown of the Tin Cup Farms might never have taken up raising Lippizzan horses.

Patton, according to Mrs. Brown, swung a deal with the Germans just before the fall of Berlin to run most of the remaining Lippizzans out of territory that was about to fall to the advancing Russian army.

"The entire European herd had ended up in what is now Czechoslovakia as the Russians were advancing. Russians have a real affinity for horse meat, as in eating it and confiscating it," Mrs. Brown said.

"The Germans turned their heads while the Americans came through and drove them up to Northern Austria," she continued. "They (Europeans) always credited Patton with saving the herd."

Today, she and her husband Larry Brown, a pilot with American Airlines, own a spread just south of here where they have eight Lippizzan horses and three others on the way.

Mrs. Brown readily admits that the herd is small in numbers by quarterhorse standards, but large by Lippizzan standards because there are only 700 to 800 in the country.

"We're the largest breeder in the Southwest. Most of the large breeders only have 10 to 12 horses," she said.

The couple moved to Whitesboro from Chester, N.H., last year. At the time, they were the largest Lippizzan breeders in New England, but felt that the warmer weather in Texas would be an advantage.

Mrs. Brown said her fascination with Lippizzans began when she was a teen-ager in Atlanta, Ga., where she took riding lessons at a farm that had the show horses.

The horse on which she learned to ride was Melodia, and after a stay in Colorado where the couple also raised horses, she was able to purchase the 20-year-old mare in 1980.

Mrs. Brown said the history of the Lippizzans is one of the most colorful of all breeds of horses. They first were bred about 400 years ago by the kings of Austro-Hungary who wanted "a horse that royalty could play around with."

But as the borders of Europe changed, so did the breeding grounds for the horses. They first were bred in what is present-day Yugoslavia and later, in areas near Italy.

After World War II and Patton's rescue, the horses were bred in Austria, where in Vienna the famous Spanish Riding School can be found.

"The Spanish Riding School is where they gained their fame as show horses," Mrs. Brown said.

The horse did not appear in America until after Patton's rescue, Brown said, because most Europeans felt the Americans would not take care of the horses.

"About five horses were ultimately given to Patton because of the rescue, but there was no registry at that time and we only know where one of them ended up," she said.

Steel magnate Temple Smith of Chicago is officially credited with bringing the horses to America when he imported 26 Lippizzans in 1958.

Mrs. Brown said that today Temple Farms is the largest breeder of Lippizzans, although its herd is only about 250 today, after once having as many as 500.

With her move to Texas, Mrs. Brown said she is trying to convince people that Lippizzans are more than just show horses.

"I'd like people to know that they're very versatile and can do a lot of different things," she said. "They're very intelligent horses."

Mrs. Brown said a normal-size Lippizzan weighs about 1,000 to 1,200 pounds and stands 15 to 16 hands high. She said she thinks the horses will sell well because people in this area have a good knowledge of horses.

"People are very open-minded around here about new things, especially those involved in the horse industry," she said. Currently for sale is a stallion named Frisbie, who she said should sell for $5,000.

"We'll always have buyers because they (Lippizzans) are a novelty, but no one can make a living selling them as a novelty," she said. "I'd like to sell the horses to someone who wants to take them out and show them."

Unorthodox Texas dentist is embroiled in legal tangles

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Signs hanging on the walls of Dr. Barry Solomon's dental clinics proclaim "We cater to cowards," and a 12-foot molar armed with a smile stands guard outside one of the modest brick buildings.

Solomon and his partners have used advertising, discount coupons and word of mouth to attract some 40,000 dental patients and, in an unusual twist, offer a money-back guarantee.

An energetic, self-styled crusader for both tooth and truth, Solomon is not exactly popular with other dentists, which he attributes to "competitive jealousy."

But Dr. Neil Morgan, a member of the San Antonio District Dental Society, sums up the situation with a pithy question.

"You can't like someone who's got a $3 million lawsuit pending against you, can you?" Morgan said.

Solomon and some of his partners in the Family Dental Health Centers have filed a $3 million antitrust suit against the local dental group and the Texas Dental Association, contending they were wrongfully suspended from membership.

The suspensions, the June 1983 suit contends, were a "vindictive retaliatory scheme" intended to "kill price competition in the field of dentistry."

Now the maverick dentist is preparing for a battle that could end with his license being suspended or revoked.

The Texas State Board of Dental Examiners has docketed a complaint against Solomon, taking exception to his use of the words "totally preventable" in an advertisement concerning gum disease.

"He's a marketer and marketeering is legal now," said Morgan, who also is secretary of the state board.

"It's when he borders and walks the tightrope of legality — that's when the proper authorities walk in."

Solomon, 42, maintains that dentistry has become stodgy and "at least 20 years behind the times."

"Very little of what I've done is innovative or new," he said. "It just hasn't been done in San Antonio. This is a new era of consumer marketing and dentistry is part of that."

Offbeat touches scattered around Solomon's two roomy San Antonio clinics are aimed at easing the nagging apprehension that most people feel at even the thought of dentistry.

Small white chairs squat in the shape of molars. A clock over the receptionists' desk looks like a smiling, jovial tooth. Rainbow-hued signs are posted on the ceiling over some of the reclining chairs, gently telling white-knuckled patients: "Smile."

And conspicuous, of course, are Solomon and Co.'s reassuring plaques, shaped like molars, naturally.

"We cater to cowards," they read, "because we believe there is never an excuse for an uncomfortable experience in a dental office."

Solomon says he truly doesn't understand why other dentists seem to resent his unorthodox approach.

"We were conditioned in dental school to believe that professionals shouldn't advertise," he said. "Well — why not?"

"And if you pay your hard-earned money to a dentist, why aren't you entitled to a guarantee? It's not any different than Sears-Roebuck guaranteeing their products," he said.

Solomon was suspended from the local dental society in June 1982, after stating in a television interview, "We gear our practice towards completely painless dentistry and we do something that is somewhat unusual, we completely guarantee the work to our patients' satisfaction."

He contends the dental society members heard only the buzzwords "painless" and "guarantee," and suspended him for spouting "false and misleading" information without fully examining the statement.

A slot in the local dental society is considered important because of its affiliation with the national American Dental Association, which offers prestige and many lucrative benefits.

In addition, Solomon's antitrust suit says, several qualified members of his Family Dental Health Centers were refused entrance to the local group simply because of their association with him.

After much argument, the dentists were offered membership on a probated basis — the probation to end

"when the new issue of the Yellow Pages comes out," a reference to Solomon's heavy advertising, he said.

Dr. Dan Peavy, president of the San Antonio District Dental Society, wouldn't comment on the particulars of the suit, but denied any vendetta against the Family Dental Health Centers.

"Dr. Solomon started the suit and he can stop it," Peavy said. "We're meanwhile having to show his attorneys that there has been no restraint of trade or conspiracy against Dr. Solomon or his partners. We're proving that those accusations are false."

It was a February 1983 newspaper advertisement concerning gum disease that prompted the state board's complaint against Solomon, which is set for a hearing in May.

Solomon's repeated comments that most gum surgery now is unnecessary — and "almost criminal" — already had outraged many periodontists, but saying gum disease was "totally preventable" could be consumer fraud, Morgan said.

"I don't think any scientist or doctor around the world would say anything is totally preventable, except maybe polio," Morgan said. "He did not qualify his statement in any way."

Solomon counters that "in the light of today's knowledge, surgery is controversial. These guys are getting away with murder by charging a lot of money — plus, you're getting cut on."

The antitrust suit, which is in the deposition stage, asks that the suspended dentists be reinstated to the societies, in addition to the $3 million.

"I'm certainly sorry that anyone has to have bad feelings in life," Solomon said. "I would still like to be their friend, but I realize that's not likely to happen. I'll take my chances with a jury of 12 consumers."

Caine is uncomplicated

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Michael Caine was amusingly philosophical about winning a Golden Globe Award for his role of the boozing, bitter professor in "Educating Rita."

The outspoken Englishman said the last time he had won an award was for "most promising newcomer."

"I was beginning to feel I'd let the people who gave it to me down," said Caine, a direct, uncomplicated man who is able to adapt himself to any role without the introspection of method-style actors.

Chosen by the Hollywood Foreign Press last month, Caine said in a recent interview: "It's true, I've won nothing — except a couple of Academy (Award) nominations ('Alfie' and 'Sleuth'). Those are the only things that have happened to me in between."

But before becoming a "promising newcomer," his career had the usual pitfalls. He was once broke and out of work, and auditioned for the part of Bill Sikes in the musical, "Oliver!" He didn't get it.

For Caine, who still bares traces of his cockney past, it was a big disappointment. "If I couldn't get a role as a tough cockney, what could I get?"

Now he is churning out movies as fast as would-be actors get turned down at auditions.

Next comes "Blame It on Rio," which 20th Century-Fox is releasing this month. He plays a businessman who takes his daughter on a Brazilian vacation and is seduced by the teen-age daughter of his best friend. The seducer, played by lovely Michelle Johnson, appears semi-nude in scenes with Caine.

"I told my wife to stay close to me at all times," the actor remarked.

He was recently in "Beyond the Limit," and has an unreleased film, "Jigsaw," about defecting British spies. Caine has two more movies to shoot over the year: "Water," a far-out farce by George Harrison's Hand Made Films; and "The Pirate," a comedy that Roman Polanski will make in Tunisia.

Between his emergence as a star in "Alfie" in 1966, and his recognition for "Educating Rita," much has happened to the Londoner who was born Maurice Micklewhite 49 years ago.

He has earned millions. He's made some dreadful films, such as "X,Y and Zee," "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure" and "The Hand," and some good ones: "The Man Who Would Be King," "California Suite" and "Deathtrap." He also married, fathered a daughter and moved to the United States.

He said he came here "because I wanted to become a name in American films; because I considered the English tax system unjust; because I believe it's healthy to shake up one's life now and then."

"At the age of 18, I was serving in the army in Korea," he said. "I went through 11 years of abject poverty trying to be an actor and became a millionaire overnight. Then I changed my home and country. If that isn't shaking up one's life, I don't know what it is."

NOT TAKING THE BLAME—Michael Caine, who recently won a Golden Globe for best actor in a comedy film for his portrayal in "Educating Rita," has his hands full as he takes on Michelle Johnson in 20th Century-Fox's "Blame It on Rio." Caine plays a businessman who takes his daughter on a Brazilian vacation and is seduced by the teenage daughter of his best friend. (AP Laserphoto)

Opera has a Superman

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bass Samuel Ramey is, in many ways, the Superman of the opera world. This tall, handsome, mild-mannered fellow goes into a phone booth — in opera it's a dressing room — and emerges in a flamboyant costume, to swashbuckle all over the place.

Of course Superman rights wrongs. Ramey is usually stirring up the trouble. His Don Giovanni is trying to seduce the girls. He sings Attila the Hun and the three evil geniuses in "The Tales of Hoffmann." When he made his Metropolitan Opera debut in January, he sang the Saracene general Argente, who tries magic to defeat the Christian Crusaders, in Handel's "Rinaldo." Ramey's bold entrance aria, sung from a chariot, was the opera's high point.

Ramey is considered America's leading operatic bass, praised for his vivacious acting as well as his voice.

His teacher thinks that when the even-tempered Ramey, in costume and makeup, walks out on stage, he becomes a different person.

Ramey says, "I do know that on stage I'm not at all like I am as a person. I wouldn't say I'm shy, but I'm not terribly extroverted. I'm low-key. I seldom get angry or upset or excited. On stage I'm very extroverted."

Ramey, at 42, is a superstar in the New York City Opera, where he has sung since 1973, and a star zooming toward superstardom in Europe. But the Metropolitan Opera has been cool.

The bass says that James Levine, the Met's music director, "told my agent that he considered me too big a star at City Opera to bring to the Met. People could hear me for $20 there. Why would they come to the Met and pay $50?"

The Met offered Ramey the bullfighter role in "Carmen" in 1978, though not in the first "Carmen" of that season, when the critics attend. The Met also offered a small role in "Rigoletto" at a student performance. Ramey's agent turned both down.

When "Rinaldo" came to the Met, it was with the cast Marilyn Horne, in the title role, had chosen for a Canadian production. Canada loaned the sets and costumes.

Controversy surrounds museum

PARIS (AP) — A transparent triangle, inspired by Egypt's Giza Pyramids, has plunged the massive plans to restore the Louvre Museum as the world's greatest treasure house into controversy.

If French President Francois Mitterrand gets his way, a broad two-story glass pyramid will soar out of the stately courtyard between the Louvre's two major wings to form an entrance. It is part of the multimillion-dollar transformation to be completed in 1989.

The triangle is the brainchild of architect I.M. Pei, Mitterrand's personal choice. Pei's blueprints, which call for three mini-pyramids and fountains surrounding the glass triangle, are expected to get final approval from Mitterrand this month.

The plans have caused an uproar among architects at the government's Department of Historical Monuments, who say the panoramic view of the classical building will be spoiled by an "incongruous and unusual" structure.

France's daily Le Monde newspaper directly attacked Pei: "Just because he likes the Pyramids doesn't mean he can treat the Louvre courtyard as an annex to Disneyland," Andre Fermigier wrote in a recent editorial.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

This coming year you will be in a very good achievement cycle. However, patience will be required so that you do not become disturbed by your rate of progress.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think carefully today before committing yourself to plans with others too far in advance. Coming events may cause you to regret being tied down. Major changes are in store for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Pisces Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 and your zodiac sign to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet, which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your instincts urge you to remain quiet regarding your confidential affairs, it's best not to discuss them with friends today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be asking for trouble if you fail to shoulder your share of joint responsibilities today. Don't leave everything up to your mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Pay close attention to instructions today where your work is concerned. If you're a poor listener, your performance will later reflect it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not gamble on anything sight unseen today. This could cause you to bank on false hopes. Look for facts, not fiction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though it may be difficult, make a concerted effort to keep your promises today, especially those made to members of your family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Disappointment is likely today if you expect others to do things for you that you wouldn't do for them if the roles were reversed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep a tight grip on your credit card today or extravagance could gain the upper hand. Purchase only what you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Domestic issues which normally wouldn't faze you could cause you to get unduly upset today. Strive to be tolerant and understanding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Steer clear of involvements with acquaintances today that are not in line with your code of ethics. Stick to your high standards.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You must handle career matters very skillfully today, or else undeserving associates may gain more from your efforts than you do yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your ambitions are easily aroused today. This is admirable. However, you may fail to accomplish your objectives, due to impractical procedures.

Mini-movies planned

Showbiz, pizza combine

DALLAS (AP) — Doug Trumbull and Bob Brock predict that a revolution in movie-making will occur this year — at your local pizza parlor.

Brock is the owner of Brock Hotel Corp. of Dallas and Showbiz pizza parlors. Trumbull directed "Brainstorm" and "Silent Running" and provided the special effects for "2001: A Space Odyssey," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," "Star Trek: The Motion Picture" and "Bladerunner," among other movies.

The unlikely pair have joined forces to give the public a new special effects thrill called "Showscan" — wide-screen movies that give the illusion of three-dimension without the glasses.

Trumbull said he developed the process in 1976 for a company created by Paramount Pictures to research new movie-making techniques.

"We experimented with just about every film process known to man," said Trumbull, who was in Dallas to meet with Brock in preparation for the premiere of the new movie venture on Feb. 9.

"We experimented with everything, just looking at how movies are made — screen surfaces, brightness levels, flicker rates, non-flickering movies."

After examining Cinemascope and 3-D and other movie innovations that never really took hold, Trumbull said he realized the one variable he hadn't changed was frame rates.

Most movies are photographed at 24 frames per second, the minimum number the human eye sees as continuous motion, not individual pictures. Trumbull increased the frame rate to 60 per second.

"We tried some very preliminary tests and were startled by the results, that we suddenly achieved this tremendous illusion of three-dimensionality and realism."

The effect comes from the ultra-high resolution produced by the 70mm width coupled with the rapid frame speed. For optimum effect, the movies must be shown on a curved screen in a box-shaped theater with a special projector.

Trumbull said tests of viewers showed a heightened response to the new process. Everyone who saw it, from studio executives on down were "simultaneously thrilled and excited," Trumbull said.

"The big problem came when we faced the fact that it would cost somewhere in the realm of $100,000 per theater for all the new equipment," he said.

Paramount dropped the project because of the cost and other studios, though impressed, "couldn't figure out how to do it as a business," Trumbull said.

He got the rights to the process and began to look for a partner.

Enter Brock, who said he met Trumbull through a mutual friend.

Before meeting Trumbull at a nearby hotel, Brock, seated in the theater of a North Dallas Showbiz pizza parlor with robots singing soft rock to a herd of pre-schoolers in party hats, said he was looking for a new entertainment attraction for the 200 Showbiz pizza parlors he owns or franchises.

Besides the "robotics," the stores feature video games and other arcade-like attractions, and, of course, pizza.

He won't say exactly how much he is investing in Showscan, but initially Brock has built four Showscan theaters to test the draw of the movies in Dallas; Springfield, Mo.; Huntsville, Ala.; and Fairfax, Va., a suburb of Washington, D.C.

Two 22-minute movies — one starring Gerrit Graham and Christopher Lee in a showcase of Showscan effects, including ground-level motorcycle rides, 3-D tricks and extreme close-ups; the other about dune buggy drivers — will be shown at the four test theaters from Feb. 9 until April 30, Brock said.

After a marketing firm examines the results, Brock may or may not invest the millions it would take to outfit his Showbiz pizza parlors nationwide.

"We're counting on the 14 to 25 age group," he said, "which is the same age group that eats pizza."

"We'll probably know in the first few weeks," without the test data, he said. The marketing research is necessary to get financial backing. If the numbers look good, "we're going to be building a lot of theaters," Brock said.

For Brock, the venture is business. For Trumbull, it seems to be more of an escape.

"People say, 'Well, why do you want to put movies in pizza parlors?'" Trumbull said.

"All I want to do is make movies and get them to the public as readily as possible in the finest quality possible," he said.

It will take only three to four months to produce and put into the theaters a 22-minute Showscan film, Trumbull said, as opposed to the minimal two years it takes for a full-length feature film.

"In that amount of time, heads roll at the studios, executives change, projects go up and down and things don't get released, millions of dollars are out and no income's coming back," he said.

Trumbull himself had to fight to get "Brainstorm" released after star Natalie Wood died before filming was complete.

"I just came out of spending about seven years getting 'Brainstorm' to the screen under the most adverse Hollywood conditions," Trumbull said.

"I like the idea of working in an industry where we can make decisions, go into production and get a movie on the screen very, very quickly. That's a lot of fun for me as a director. No so much waiting, not so much frustration."

For the time being, the Showscan pictures will be short stories because, Trumbull said, the venture is aimed at the family market which demands convenience. The films will be shown every half hour.

Brock said the cost of admission is still under study, but will be considerably less than the cost of a regular movie, since the Showscan films are so much shorter.

Trumbull feels with Showscan, less is more.

"If you really look, you'll see how many feature films are really padded out great moments," Trumbull said. "A great car chase or a great love scene, but the rest is filler to get you there. 'Close Encounters' is a wonderful movie, but it's about a two-hour buildup to a 20-minute payoff."

Trumbull said he has shown the process to "many major directors" who are interested in making movies in Showscan.

"Steven Spielberg saw this process six or seven years ago, loved it very much. But there is nothing for him to do until it exists as a business and there are theaters out there," Trumbull said.

Three state agencies aggressive in recruiting minority employees

AUSTIN (AP) — When Jerome Senegal was a public funds officer at First City National Bank in Houston three years ago, he delivered a $4 million check to the state Treasury Department.

There was something peculiar about the agency, he recalled. "I saw only one black, a janitor."

"I never thought that someday I'd be working for the state treasury and be responsible for a $3 billion investment portfolio," said Senegal, who is black.

At 27, Senegal holds a post that a little over a year ago was filled by a white man.

In fact, before Treasurer Ann Richards took office Jan. 1, 1983, the executive suites of the agency were made up of white males, a reflection of Texas financial institutions as well as state government.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION CLUBS OF AMERICA

Feb. 19-25
National DECA Week

The DECA Creed

I Believe in the future which I am planning for myself in the field of distribution and in the opportunities which my vocation offers.

I Believe in fulfilling the highest measure of service to my vocation, my fellow beings, my country and my God—that by so doing, I will be rewarded with personal satisfaction and material wealth.

I Believe in the democratic philosophies of private enterprise and competition, and in the freedoms of this nation—that these philosophies allow for the fullest development of my individual abilities.

I Believe that by doing my best to live according to these high principles, I will be of greater service both to myself and to mankind.

Members of our Marketing and Distributive Education Advisory Committee have contributed greatly to the success of our program. We thank:
