Perot: Fine parents if kids don't learn

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas industrialist who heads a state education committee says that parents should be held financially responsible for their children's progress in school.

H. Ross Perot, chairman of the governor's Select Committee on Public Education, told members of the Texas Association of Middle Schools on Thursday that the state should establish a program requiring strong parental involvement in their children's education.

Perot said, under such a program, parents and students would be required to carry out specific objectives.

He said if those objectives were not met, a fine amounting to the cost of educating a child and, possibly, the loss of the right to attend school could be ordered.

But an Austin-based staff member for one of Perot's subcommittees said disagreement has arisen among committee members on the chairman's position and alternatives are being considered.

None of the proposals under consideration by the subcommittee have been approved, said Sally Haenelt, chief of staff of the legislative action subcommittee for Perot's panel.

The subcommittee was expected to begin voting on its recommendations as early as March 1. The Select Committee was expected to get the proposals by March 5.

Ms. Haenelt said one alternative being considered is a charge, rather than a fine, that would be levied against all parents of school-aged children.

The charges would cover the costs of training workshops the parents would attend to reinforce study skills and inform them of curriculum objectives of the students' teachers, she said.

Perot told the group that he believes an education should not be a right. He said that if parents and students fail to meet their obligations, "that service is terminated."

Perot said he believes such a system would demand more from the students, as well as their parents, by imposing requirements that would have to be met in order for the students to stay in school.

Perot said after the meeting he also did not believe school attendance should be compulsory.

Sen. Carl Parker of Port Arthur was working on legislation to amend the state education code that currently requires the children to attend school between the ages of 7 and 17, he said.

Ms. Haenelt also said, however, that the subcommittee was looking at alternative recommendations other than a complete change in the compulsory attendance law.

She said recommendations include an increased emphasis on alternative schools for "incorrigible students and juvenile offenders" who have reached 15 years of age.

County's first school building up for sale

Despite its historical significance, the first school building built in Gray County and later incorporated in Zion Lutheran Church has been put up for sale.

Bob Lemke, chairman of the building committee for Zion Lutheran, reported the church is involved in a remodeling project and needs to have the building moved.

His research into the history of the building which had been on Zion Lutheran property since 1943 discovered the building had been the original structure for "High Windy," the first school building in Gray County, erected in 1888. The building was moved into several parts of the county during its long history before the church bought it for their use. (Lemke wrote an article on the history of the building which was published in the Jan. 15, 1984, issue of The Pampa News.)

Lemke and other members of the building committee had hoped interest in the structure's historical significance would lead to its preservation. But he said no group or individual as yet has been able to insure that.

The Gray County Historical Society was contacted, but the association said it has other commitments at this time. Efforts to preserve the building would require application to the state, a process that would take six months to a year to get approval, Lemke said.

The church is moving ahead with new building and remodeling projects, Lemke said, and cannot afford to wait that long before moving the structure, which has been used recently for Sunday school classes.

The church has published notice that it is accepting bids on moving the building from the church property.

Lemke said he had hoped the building would be preserved for its historical significance for the county.

"It requires a lot of commitment" to pay the costs of moving the building and to find a place to put it, he said.

Persons wishing to make bids or to obtain information may call 669-2774, 669-2533 or 669-3116.

Steepest climb since 1980

Price of food surges upward

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest food price surge since August 1980 pushed consumer prices up 0.6 percent last month, their steepest gain in nine months, the government said today.

Half the gain came from a 1.6 percent jump in food prices, the Labor Department said. Prices rose for virtually all foods, including such staples as meats, eggs, vegetables and fruits.

Today's bad news had been expected by analysts who said last summer's prolonged withering heat and drought, coupled with the severe cold weather earlier this winter, made more expensive food inevitable.

Today's Consumer Price Index

recorded the steepest-ever rise in telephone bills, largely the result of the government-ordered breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Phone bills, the report said, rose an average of 5.2 percent last month.

Heating oil prices climbed 2.6 percent, the largest one-month gain in nearly three years, while gasoline prices, tumbling for the fourth straight month, were off 1.1 percent. Natural gas prices were also down 1.1 percent.

In all, January's increase in the CPI was three times the revised 0.2 percent advance of December and the biggest jump since the 0.7 percent of April.

Despite the fresh price pickup, however, analysts didn't foresee a return anytime soon to the torrid inflation pace of just a few years ago.

Forecaster Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University predicted that most of the weather-related rapid food price increases would slow during the spring.

Most analysts look for a 5 percent advance for all of this year.

Consumer prices last year rose 3.8 percent, their best showing since 1972.

Prices had risen 3.9 percent in 1982 after shooting up 12.4 percent in 1980 and 8.9 percent in 1981.

Today's report provided these additional details on consumer price activity last month:

—Fresh fruit prices soared 7.8 percent. Vegetable prices jumped 7 percent.

—Egg prices skyrocketed 21.3 percent while poultry prices rose 3.7 percent, both attributed to the avian flu outbreak in the mid-Atlantic states that has devastated chicken flocks.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

If last month's 0.6 percent increase held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 7.8 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

Few objections

AMA asks doctors for freeze on fees

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association's call for doctors to help heal the nation's economy by freezing their fees for a year drew objections from some physicians, but the AMA chairman predicted 85 percent would comply.

Saying doctors have a responsibility to aid in the economic recovery, the AMA's 12-member board of trustees voted unanimously Thursday to mail letters to the nation's 390,000 doctors involved in patient care, urging them to refrain from raising fees for one year.

"Among the major concerns that people have is the cost of medical care," said Dr. Joseph F. Boyle, the AMA's president-elect. "We believe that doctors have the same concerns as their patients and will share in all the sacrifices that are necessary to keep the economy strong."

Doctors will be asked to begin the freeze immediately, said AMA president Dr. Frank J. Jirka Jr. They will also be urged to consider the financial circumstances of their patients — especially the unemployed, the uninsured and those covered by Medicare — and to reduce or waive fees when warranted, he said.

About 20 percent of the nation's $325 billion annual health care bill is made up of doctors' fees, with hospital costs accounting for most of the rest. Two decades ago, the doctors' share was about 27 percent, said Dr. John J. Coury Jr., chairman of the AMA board.

Some initial reactions were positive. "Something like that would be quite appropriate," said Dr. Charles Hatcher Jr., chief of cardiac surgery at Emory University's clinic in suburban Atlanta. "Certainly, if it would help the economy, it would help us all — a short-term sacrifice for a long-term gain."

However, Dr. George Brumley, interim dean of Emory University Medical School, emphasized that physicians' fees are not the only factors responsible for the spiraling cost of health care.

"I'm sure the physicians would be interested in considering it at the same time that all other health care costs are being considered to carry their share of the responsibility," he said.

"In 1983, for the first time in a period of almost five years, physicians' fees went up faster than the all-items (consumer price) index," said Boyle. Fees rose 6.4 percent last year, compared with the consumer price index rise of 3.8 percent, he said.

The AMA made a similar appeal in 1978, according to Dr. James H. Sammons, AMA executive vice president. Doctors responded widely to that request, with figures indicating that fees increased at a slower rate than the consumer price index for the years 1978-80, he said.

About 250,000 of the nation's 400,000 doctors belong to the AMA.

Standoff near Stratford ends

STRATFORD, Texas (AP) — A 32-year-old Cactus man who kept authorities engaged in a 10-hour standoff was taken into custody early today after police stormed into a barn where he had barricaded himself.

Authorities confiscated a 20-gauge shotgun and pistol from the man, who was taken to Sherman County Jail. A warrant had been issued for the man in connection with a probation violation from the 69th state Judicial District in Dumas, officials said.

The standoff began at about 6 p.m. Thursday after the man entered a barn about 10 miles southeast of Stratford on Farm-to-Market Road 2232 and barricaded himself inside, said Department of Public Safety trooper Tom Shelton.

"He said he was not going to give himself up and would kill somebody if they tried to come in after him," Shelton said.

The man fired one shot from inside the barn after a Sherman County sheriff's deputy approached the building, the trooper said.

"The sheriff's office got a call that a guy was shot, and deputy walked up there," Shelton said. "The guy told him to get out of there or he would kill him."

Gentlemanly debate

Opponents ease up on Mondale

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Democratic campaign rivals are beginning their final push for next week's New Hampshire primary after a gentlemanly debate in which the pack left presidential front-runner Walter F. Mondale free to continue a non-stop attack on President Reagan.

"Mr. Reagan, whether it's Lebanon or arms control or the budget deficit or whatever, is a president who is not providing ... leadership. I will do so," Mondale declared Thursday night in the 90-minute televised debate.

"I know what I'm doing ... I would know what I'm doing the first day and I would take charge."

It was the final eight-way candidate confrontation before New Hampshire's voters deliver the first primary verdict next Tuesday.

There was plenty of good-natured kidding, and even a self-deprecating remark or two, such as when Sen. John Glenn conceded he was "dull but not boring."

Former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern sparked laughter with his explanation that he would agree to serve as vice president. "I don't have a job now," he said.

"Not only that but my apartment burned down last May. I don't even have a place to live. I need help," he said.

For the most part, there were none of the sharp attacks against Mondale that characterized earlier debates in New Hampshire and Iowa.

That left him free to continue his assault against the president, an approach he has taken since his overwhelming victory in Monday's Iowa caucuses.

"That government is out to lunch and we can't tolerate that," he said after the debate, which was sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

"I promise to defeat Ronald Reagan and provide presidential leadership," Mondale said.

Mondale is favored to win the New Hampshire primary next Tuesday and even one of his rivals, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, says a strong victory for the former vice president would all but wrap up the nomination.

But Hollings and six others in the party used their part of the debate to appeal directly to New Hampshire's voters.

"The idea that what was cast in Iowa is irreversible is nonsense," said Glenn, hoping to end a slide that has challenged his claim to be Mondale's principal opponent. Glenn came in fifth in Iowa with less than 4 percent support.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, his campaign struggling after a weak fourth-place finish in Iowa, tried to win back the nuclear freeze vote that apparently slipped away on Monday.

"If you vote for me, the message will be unmistakably clear ... that the president of the United States do all he can to end the chance of war," he said.

Gary Hart of Colorado is trying to capitalize on his surprising second-place finish in Iowa. "At the risk of attacking," he said, Mondale should be the candidate if the party wants old ideas.

Hollings is hoping to pick up some of Glenn's support and he claimed the Ohio senator "flunked the course" in Iowa and that he himself can save the

Missiles hit Iran

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

Iran said Iraqi missiles struck deep inside its territory today, hitting two cities, and claimed Iranian forces retaliated with an attack on Basra, an important Iraqi port.

Iran's president repeated a threat to close the strategic Strait of Hormuz, but said that as long as Iranian ships can pass through it, "We will not do anything to anybody." He said that should the United States make a move in the area "we would destroy all U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf."

In war communiques broadcast by the official Islamic Republic News Agency, Iran claimed further advances on the southern front where it has mounted a major offensive. IRNA said Iranian fighters had captured an oil field in overnight fighting.

Iraq said today only that its fighters shot down an Iranian jet over the central front.

Iranian President Ali Khamenei, in a sermon at Tehran University, accused the United States of "hatching a plot" in the Persian Gulf and the Strait of Hormuz "in order to make up for its disgrace in Lebanon," according to IRNA and Tehran Radio.

Saudi Arabia's cease-fire plan in Lebanon begins on schedule

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire mediated by Saudi Arabia took effect on Lebanon's civil war fronts today, a few hours after a flurry of battles between rival militias, and police reported no immediate violations of the truce.

The cease-fire, aimed at halting the widespread fighting so Lebanon's political disputes can be negotiated, began on schedule at 11 a.m. (4 a.m. EST).

Police said 12 people were killed and 27 wounded in battles with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns in Beirut and the Chouf mountains overnight.

The cease-fire was announced Thursday by Prince Bandar bin Sultan of Saudi Arabia after eight hours of meetings in Damascus, the Syrian capital. He said it does not address the political disputes between President Amin Gemayel and the Syrian-backed insurgents.

The fighting today pitted Shiite Moslem militiamen in the largely Moslem western half of Beirut against Christian irregulars in the eastern part of the capital, police said.

Druse rebels and Christian militiamen of rightist Phalange Party also duled with artillery and multiple rocket launchers overnight in the Chouf Mountains in the Kharroub region, northeast of Israel's defense line in southern Lebanon, police said.

The prince said the agreement dealt solely with the fighting in Lebanon and did not cover political issues, such as the rebel demands that Gemayel scrap the May 17 Lebanon-Israel accord that called for simultaneous withdrawals of Syrian and Israeli troops.

The U.S. Marines, meanwhile, continued their phased withdrawal to ships offshore, but a spokesman said there would be no decrease in "combat power" at the Beirut airport base until the final pullout.

Gemayel held lengthy discussions Thursday with advisers and right-wing Christian backers at the presidential palace east of Beirut to work out a new proposal for ending the civil war.

Lebanese government sources, who spoke on condition they not be named, said the plan would have Gemayel renounce the U.S.-brokered May 17 accord and reconvene a conference in Switzerland to draw up a new system for sharing power among Moslems and Christians in Lebanon.

The current system reserves the presidency and most political power to Maronite Christians, such as Gemayel, rather than the Moslem majority.

The question of Syrian troops occupying eastern and northern Lebanon would be referred to the Arab League, which approved Syria's entry in 1976. Syria has refused to move its troops out until Israel unconditionally removes the soldiers occupying southern Lebanon.

Moslem units of the Lebanese army, which refused to fight during the past three weeks of civil war, began policing west Beirut on Thursday at the request of Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen who have controlled half the city for 17 days.

A few soldiers carried plastic flowers in their rifle barrels and civilians greeted them with cheers. Some threw rice from balconies.

At the U.S. Marine base, a few men were helicoptered back to 6th Fleet ships Thursday.

Anti-gay group organizes at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — A students' organization at Southern Methodist University was formed by a conservative group in response to a gay rights movement, the student newspaper quotes officials as saying.

The Daily Campus reported in a copyright story Friday that the Heterosexual Students Support Organization has been sponsored by the SMU chapter of Young Americans for Freedom.

The support organization's president,

Saad Chehabi, told the newspaper he intends to "educate the SMU campus about heterosexuality," and has placed an advertisement scheduled to run next week seeking members.

The advertisement, purchased for Tuesday's edition, states "membership is open for everyone regardless of race, religion or national origin."

It says the agenda for the group's first meeting will be "morality, sex education and family planning."

Chehabi, a Syrian who is also president of the YAF chapter, said the group already has a number of members.

"We are serious. We want to educate the campus about heterosexuality," Chehabi said.

Gay students have applied for official SMU Student Senate recognition since Spring 1983, but have failed in each attempt, officials said.

The Gay and Lesbian Student Support Organization lists between 40 and 50 members.

Ted Brabham, a former student senate member and a critic of the gay and lesbian students' group, said the YAF-sponsored organization has a function on campus.

"I think they're (the heterosexuals) just forming to show how ridiculous the other group is," Brabham said.

Jim Caswell, SMU dean of student life, disagreed.

"The only reason he (Chehabi) is forming it is to capitalize on all this debate and discussion," Caswell said. "That's highly inappropriate. Normal university programming and activities are a good indication there are ample opportunities for such discussion."

Student body president Homer Reynolds called the latest group a "kneejerk reaction" to the gay rights organization.

County spelling bee slated

Ten students from Gray County will be competing with each other to see who's the best speller at the annual county spelling bee on March 9 at Pampa Middle School.

The winner will attend the regional spelling bee in Amarillo in April for a chance to advance to the national contests, according to Tom Lindsey, principal of Horace Mann Elementary School and chairman of the county spelling bee this year.

Participants scheduled for the county event are Steven Murphy, Wilson Elementary; Susan Babcock, Grandview-Hopkins; Diana Hallum, Alanreed Elementary; Joey Burnett, Travis Elementary; Crystal Follis, Pampa Middle School; Michelle Sy, St. Vincent's; David Cumpston, Mann Elementary; Sally Albear, Lamar Elementary; Hans Taparia, Austin Elementary; and Yvonne Davis, Baker Elementary.

The county spelling bee will begin at 9:30 a.m. at PMS on March 9. Lindsey said the winner should be known within an hour after the start of the contest.

A winner and an alternate will be named at the county event. The winner will compete in the regional event in Amarillo. The alternate will attend if the winner is not able to attend.

Parents urged to get involved in fighting against drug abuse

"Don't point fingers! Join hands in fighting drug abuse," advised Bob Schneider of the Texans' War on Drugs at a meeting of the Drug and Alcohol Total Education (DATE) meeting Thursday night.

"Parents should know the symptoms of drug users, be able to recognize drug paraphernalia and be observant," Schneider said.

Early symptoms of beginning drug users include withdrawal from the family and a change in friends, he said.

Schneider described marijuana (pot) and its effects on smokers; amphetamines (uppers), which speed up the heartbeat and blood pressure; and barbiturates (downers), many of which can be found in the home medicine cabinet.

He also described various inhalants that can be used and hallucinogens, including LSD, and gave information on their effects on the body.

Drugs are not only harmful to the body, but they can cause mental flashbacks up to nine years after usage, Schneider warned.

In explaining some of the teenager vernacular, Schneider said "speedballing" is the use of a combination of drugs, both uppers and downers. This can be very dangerous, he said.

"We spend too much time tearing down instead of building up our kids," he said. Some youth turn to drugs for a "high" as an escape, a release from frustration. They also become involved not through peer "pressure" but from peer "attraction," or the desire to be a part of a group.

"To work with youth who are addicted, one must be straight, be educated about drugs, have the desire to help and plenty of love, patience," Schneider said.

DATE sponsors weekly self-help meetings for youth with drug problems at St. Paul's Methodist Church Education Building, 511 N. Hobart, at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays.

BIONIC (Believe It Or Not, I Care) youth activities include a no drug, no alcohol dance at M. K. Brown Auditorium on Friday, March 9, and a junior high dance at the Optimist Club on Saturday, March 10.

Education Chairman Marilyn Voyles reported programs on drug abuse education can be taken into the homes through meetings either with parents of youth that are in a peer group or through the Neighborhood Watch block meeting program.

The Pampa Police Department "is most cooperative" and willing to present programs on drug abuse and crime prevention through the Neighborhood Watch format, Mrs. Voyles said.

In addition to the DATE self-help program, other counseling services available include the Pampa Family Services, Operation Drug Alert (with a toll-free, 24-hour number, 1-800-692-4039), and Alcoholics Anonymous.

Those wishing to report suspicious drug activity, with anonymity protected, may call Crime Stoppers, 699-2222; Department of Public Safety, Narcotics Division, Amarillo, 1-359-4751; or the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration, Dallas, 1-214-767-7151.

David's privacy still guarded

SHENANDOAH, Texas (AP) — David's privacy was guarded as fiercely in death as it was in life.

Neighbors kept his secret for a dozen years. The last name of the child forced to live his life in a series of germ-free rooms is still not public knowledge.

David died at Texas Children's Hospital at 8 p.m. Wednesday Dr. William Shearer said he was apparently killed by complications set off by an operation intended to give him immunity to disease and free him, for the first time, to enter the dirty world outside his bubble.

David's friends banded together Thursday afternoon against reporters and photographers who learned the address of the "bubble boy's" family. They eventually called law officers, who set up barricades around the house in a suburb about 25 miles north of Houston.

"Get out of here!" a woman yelled from her porch as a photographer attempted to take a picture of David's family home, a single-story brick house on a corner lot in a subdivision about 25 miles north of Houston.

Another neighbor, spotting a reporter going house-to-house, threatened to call police.

The family's only statement came in the form of a news release through Gayle McNutt, a spokesman for Baylor College of Medicine, thanking the hospital workers and others "for the many kindnesses extended us during our son's life."

"We are especially grateful to those who responded to the need of blood for David," the statement said. "Last, but not least, we wish to thank all who ever read about David and responded with letters of support and encouragement, especially for the many prayers."

About a dozen cars surrounded David's home, with a steady stream of friends and relatives coming and going. Friends removed David's room-size bubble from his home Tuesday night at the family's request.

"They knew he wouldn't make it to come home again," a neighbor who requested anonymity told the Conroe Courier. "It would have been too much to face. Taking it down may make it a little easier."

Neighbor Ed Boyd concurred with the Shearer's description of David as an exceptionally bright boy who understood virtually everything about his condition.

"I've known him since he was about like that," Boyd said, holding his hands about a foot apart. "We were not dealing with a child."

"You just can't say anything but good about him," said another neighbor, Harold Brown, a television station engineer.

Both men declined to say anything further without permission from the family.

One of the visitors at the house was the boy's priest, the Rev. Laurence Connelly, who said doctors had no choice but to perform the Oct. 21 transplant of bone marrow designed to rouse David's dormant immune system.

"It was the only thing to do. It was the right thing to do," he said. "And the next person will make it. I just thought he would make it."

"I don't think there are any regrets" about the operation, Connelly said.

Unexpected storm moves out to sea

By The Associated Press
A surprise storm that buried parts of Appalachia under more than a foot of snow spread heavy rain into southern New England today and moved out to sea while another big blow pushed into the Pacific Northwest.

On Thursday the unexpected storm deposited up to 13 inches of snow in the mountains of Tennessee, North Carolina and the Virginias.

The heavy snow in southern and eastern West Virginia also pulled down power lines, leaving the town of Bluefield without electricity. Service was restored to 90 percent of the city by 5 p.m.

Thirteen inches of snow was measured at Waneta, W.Va., and the Webster County Airport while a foot fell in the mountains of Pocahontas County and up to 8 inches fell in Pendleton County.

The National Weather Service said more than a foot also fell in the mountains of Virginia and several inches in parts of North Carolina and Tennessee.

Heavy rain dominated the Northeast and Pacific Northwest today, and travelers' advisories went up in eastern West Virginia after the Atlantic storm dropped more than a foot of wet snow in higher elevations as it moved north.

More than an inch of rain had fallen by early today many in places from Wilmington, Del., to Boston, causing some minor urban flooding which was expected to subside as the rain let up later today.

On the other side of the country, travelers advisories were posted this morning for the mountains of Washington, Oregon, and northern California and for the Lake Tahoe Basin of Nevada for heavy snow and strong winds. High wind warnings were hoisted along the Washington and Oregon coasts.

By contrast, record high temperatures in the 60s were recorded Thursday in Michigan. The 55 in Portland, Maine, broke the record for the date by 5 degrees.

Area energy needs topic of program

Larry Milner, vice president of Southwestern Public Service, will discuss energy needs of the Panhandle at an Eggs and Issues breakfast at 6:45 a.m. Tuesday in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

The breakfast is sponsored by the Environment and Energy Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Milner will present a program developed by SPS on the energy needs of Pampa and the Panhandle area for the next five years.

"Since the economy of our area is so closely related to energy of all types, Milner's presentation should be very educational and enlightening to each person attending," said Curt Beck, committee chairman.

Beck said it is important that every citizen of Pampa "be aware of the effect that energy will have on us in the near future."

Cost of the buffet breakfast is $4.50 per person.

Chamber officials have asked that reservations be made at the Chamber office by 5 p.m. Monday.

Lawyer counsels Perot on school change

AUSTIN (AP) — For the past decade, Dallas lawyer Tom Luce has counseled his millionaire client, H. Ross Perot, in exploits ranging from freeing hostages in Iran to reforming Texas schools.

Despite standing at the right hand of one of the most publicized private citizens in Texas, the 43-year-old lawyer has not clamored for more limelight for himself. But that is not really surprising for a man who struggled to found a law firm, made it a success, then scratched his name off the door of the firm to recruit better-known partners.

That kind of modesty serves Luce well in his latest Perot assignment: chief of staff to the Select Committee on Public Education, which will recommend major changes that could affect Texas schoolchildren and taxpayers for decades.

"I think the people of Texas will be struck by the extent and magnitude of the changes," said Luce. The committee is talking about lengthening the school day and year, providing day care for unattended children, expanding kindergarten, paying teachers based on classroom performance and creating the finest elementary education in the nation.

Luce coordinates a staff of 20 as it compiles the lofty goals and recommendations into a draft proposal by March 5. The task requires 12-hour days, lots of travel and an extended leave from his law firm. It is a job Luce volunteered for — sort of.

"I told Ross I was interested in education," he said. "But he has a way to turning a general comment into specific action."

It is not the first time Perot has turned to Luce.

When two employees of Perot's computer firm were jailed in 1978 during the Iranian revolution, Luce solicited help from the U.S. government. When that failed, Perot privately financed a commando rescue that was the basis of the book "On the Wings of Eagles."

"My claim to fame in the book is Ross didn't follow my advice," said Luce. As Perot's attorney, Luce had advised him of the legal hazards of taking foreign affairs into his own hands. But Luce moved just as firmly on his own as the leader of a legal team dunning the Iranians for $20 million in a breach-of-contract suit. While most American firms lost their Iranian investments, Perot's computer firm, EDS, got an attachment against an Iranian bank account in New York.

When President Carter agreed to release frozen Iranian assets in the United States for the return of the American Embassy hostages, Luce tried to enjoin the U.S. government from executing the hostage agreement. The U.S. government won the legal fight, but agreed not to return the New York bank account to the Iranians. Later, the Iranians agreed to a $16.5 million out-of-court settlement.

Luce also was a member of Perot's War on Drugs Committee, which led to tougher laws against drug dealers in 1981.

His association with Perot obviously has brought him closer to the limelight, but it was even more important for his once-struggling law firm.

After graduating from Southern Methodist University, Luce worked days as an accountant and attended law school at night. He worked for two law firms, then gambled on establishing his own firm with three other lawyers.

Eleven years ago the firm was struggling so much that Luce sold his car to help make ends meet. Then he met Perot, and his legal future took on another dimension.

"Ross has been involved in lots of matters," a deadpanning Luce said of his client. But Luce was not content to represent one well-heeled businessman.

He first recruited a nationally known tax specialist, Vester Hughes Jr., to join the law firm. The day after John Hill Jr. lost his race for governor, Luce began courting Hill as a partner.

"We wanted an institutional name," said Luce.

"Besides, who knew who Tom Luce was?"

The nameplate for the 80-member firm may now read Hughes & Hill, but the fingerprints on it belong to Luce.

Antibody run amok killed David, doctor believes

HOUSTON (AP) — David, who lived virtually his entire life in a series of germ-free bubbles because he had no antibodies to fight disease, died when one type of antibody proliferated and ran amok through his body, doctors say.

Dr. William T. Shearer said at a news conference Thursday that the "totally unexpected" proliferation of the white blood cells was probably caused by an Oct. 21 operation intended to give the 12-year-old the immunity he never had.

But the Roman Catholic priest who pronounced the last sacraments 10 hours before the boy's death at 8 p.m. Wednesday said doctors at Texas Children's Hospital had no choice but to attempt the procedure designed to let David enter the dirty outside world.

"It was the only thing to do," the Rev. Laurence Connelly said of the transplant of specially treated bone marrow into the boy's system. "It was the right thing to do. And the next person will make it. I just thought he would make it."

"I don't think there are any regrets" about the operation, Connelly said. "Science should not regret it, the family should not regret it, the loved ones should never regret what has happened. This was the right and the proper thing to do." Private Catholic funeral services for David were scheduled for Saturday.

Connelly was one of several visitors at the home of David's family Thursday afternoon.

The boy's family has never allowed hospital officials to release their child's last name. David's privacy was guarded as jealously in death as it had been in life.

Neighbors called in law officers, who set up barricades around the suburban home of David's family to keep back the curious.

David left his bubble at Texas Children's Hospital Feb. 7, but not as doctors had planned at the time of his operation. Shearer said the boy, sick for the first time in his life, had become severely dehydrated by vomiting and diarrhea which had plagued him off and on for weeks.

David deteriorated rapidly over the next 15 days, suffering first from bleeding ulcers and later from fluid accumulations in his heart and lungs, Shearer said. The rampant antibodies, a type of white blood cell called a B-cell, caused ulcerations in the boy's intestines, lungs and spleen, Shearer said.

"He knew his health was failing and told us so" during his last day of life, said Shearer, who paused several times to fight back tears during a news conference. "He said something to the effect that, 'Here we have all these tubes and all these tests and nothing is working and I'm getting tired. Why don't we just pull out all these tubes and let me go home?'"

David was placed on a respirator and sedated about 9 a.m. Wednesday, Shearer said. His heart stopped at 8 p.m., the doctor said.

Shearer said the discovery of abnormal cells, however, was "of great medical significance" because it "has taught us that there is an important connection between the immune system and the development of cancer or growth of abnormal cells."

"David's death was as unique as his life," he said. David's life "has been important for medicine, but his greatest contribution was his death."

David's parents released a statement through hospital officials Thursday afternoon in which they said news accounts of his illness and death generated an "overwhelming outpouring of prayers."

The statement thanked the news media for "respecting our need for privacy" and the personnel at Texas Children's Hospital for "loving care."

"His (David's) doctors and nurses extended themselves far beyond what was expected of them," the statement said. It also expressed gratitude for those who donated blood and sent "letters of support and encouragement."

Shearer said it will take weeks of testing to determine if the abnormal cells found in David's body were malignant, but he said such growths have been reported in other patients who received transplants.

Doctors transplanted into David less than 2 ounces of specially treated bone marrow from his 15-year-old sister last Oct. 21. Shearer said he believed the boy's death resulted from a reaction to that transplant, although he found no cells that could be traced to the transplanted bone marrow.

Shearer said David's parents initiated the decision to attempt the transplant. He said the boy understood the risks and was in full agreement to the attempt.

The doctor said in his discussion with David and his parents, he told them the possible results were death, cancer, infection and success.

It was technically possible to have kept David alive, and free of disease, in the plastic bubble, he said, but the family wanted to attempt the transplant to free David from the plastic cocoon.

"One has to be very aware of the emotional and mental needs of the individual," Shearer said.

Before the transplant was attempted in the hospital, David had spent most of his final months of life in a plastic bubble installed in his home.

Friends and neighbors removed the device from David's home Tuesday night at his family's request.

Bell rate case headed to courts

AUSTIN (AP) — The $2.75 that Southwestern Bell wants to immediately add to residential phone bills is now in the hands of the state courts.

The Public Utility Commission ruled Thursday that the phone company can't put a $280 million, temporary rate hike into effect until April 22. The company argued it could start the new rates Thursday.

"Ultimately, this issue is going to be decided by the judiciary," Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence told the commission. "The issue is in the courthouse, where it belongs. Let's get on with it and find out what the answer is."

Bell officials hoped to have a state court hearing on the matter within a few days. Dale Johnson, company spokesman, said each day without the higher rates costs Bell $700,000.

PUC Chairman Al Erwin agreed that the courts will make the final decision. "There's no doubt this issue will end up in court," he said, adding that the commission ruling against Bell was proper because it gives the company the burden of proof in court.

At the center of the battle is a pair of state laws — one old, one new — that dictate when a utility company can begin charging refundable rates.

The state allows utilities to raise rates while rate cases are pending at the PUC.

Bell has a $1.3 billion case pending at the commission. The old law said the refundable rates could be charged 125 days after a rate hike is requested. The new law, which went into effect on Sept. 1, stretched the waiting period to 185 days.

Bell filed the rate case last June, when the old law was in effect. But the company's rate filing was not completed until Oct. 19.

Under the new 185-day law, the company has to wait until April 22 to collect bonded rates. Lawrence said by that time the bonded rate question could be moot because the $1.3 billion case might be over.

Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle told the commission Thursday that $2.75 is a lot of money to some Bell customers — enough to make them think about getting rid of their phones.

"I don't think there's any question that some people will disconnect," he said.

The commission, which initially OK'd the bonded rates, reversed its decision after a second look at Attorney General Jim Mattox's opinion issued Tuesday, that said the new law should rule the Bell case.

Texas work insurance law is declared unconstitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — A portion of Texas' work insurance law, called "a badge of shame" by critics, has been declared unconstitutional by State District Judge Harley Clark.

After 2½ days of testimony and arguments, Clark held Thursday that the workers compensation law which excludes farm and ranch hands from on-the-job injury benefits, discriminates against a definite class of workers, mostly Hispanic.

"I have been deeply touched by evidence in this case, and I do believe that section of the law is unconstitutional," Clark said.

He said his ruling will apply to all farm and ranch workers in the state — of which at least 60 percent are Mexican-American — 10 days after he signs the final order next week.

In the same action, Clark issued a permanent injunction against the Industrial Accident Board, which administers the workers insurance law, that prohibits it from turning down any injury claim just because it came from a farm or ranch worker. He issued two similar orders in January.

Clark refused to make his order retroactive for workers whose employers did not have some form of work insurance before the Jan. 9 order.

In final arguments Thursday, Austin attorney Jim Harrington, who filed the suit in the name of 10 injured farmworkers, asked Clark "to remove this badge of shame in Texas."

Harrington said the exclusion deprives migrant and seasonal workers of prompt medical attention if injured, deprives them of any rehabilitation and retraining facilities, and keeps them from having a safe workplace.

"This is just one more vestige of the old plantation life that must be removed," he said.

Assistant Attorney General Bill Barbisch argued that the exclusion also applies to farm families and to year-around farm workers as well as the seasonal workers.

The original suit basically alleged that the state law is unconstitutional because it prohibits farm and ranch workers from receiving on-the-job injury benefits. It claims the law is discriminatory against a definite working class, because most farmworkers are Hispanic.

There was testimony at the hearing that many Valley growers carry insurance on workers in their canning sheds, but not on workers in the field.

Low rates make State Farm homeowners insurance a good buy.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covering commandment.

Deadlines aren't Congress' business

There is a potential for dangerous precedent in resolutions introduced in Congress urging television networks not to declare the winner of the 1984 presidential election until polls close in the West. Congress should not even consider when and what the media can report.

Many Westerners were upset in 1980 when they discovered Ronald Reagan had been elected president before they had a chance to vote. This was not entirely the fault of the networks, which are not prone to climb out too far too soon on an election limb. In 1976, it was 6 a.m. the next day before the networks said Jimmy Carter had defeated Gerald Ford. But the 1980 election was such a GOP landslide that Ronald Reagan's victory became obvious quite early.

Indeed, Jimmy Carter threw in the towel an hour and a half before polls closed in the West. This was Mr. Carter's doing and not to be blamed on the media, which had only projected Mr. Reagan as the probable winner.

Jimmy Carter didn't want to leave office looking like a spoilsport denying his fate. And the news media didn't want to feign ignorance about election results. Nor should they. When they do, they foreclose on the public's right to know.

The University of Michigan's Center for Political Studies estimates the 1980 voter turnout declined between 6 and 11 percent because of early projections of a Reagan victory. Those discouraged voters could have changed the outcome of several important local races.

The problem of Eastern polls closing before Western polls could be resolved by moving the polling times back in the East and forward in the West. Such an adjustment would allow the media to address the nation's time zones on a more equal footing and thus head off these unwise moves to gag television networks.

Regardless, it would be a major mistake for Congress to meddle with deadlines of either broadcast or print media. Once Congress starts such dictation, who knows where it will end.

Mondale honesty now questioned

DES MOINES, Iowa - As a public official for virtually all of his adult life, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale has accumulated his share of ideological opponents who have differed with him on public policy.

Until now, however, nobody has challenged Mondale's reputation as a politician of extraordinary honesty and integrity. Indeed, his record of more than two decades of public service without a trace of scandal or controversy involving his personal ethics is rare in contemporary politics.

All of that changed, however, when former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, a fellow contender for this year's Democratic presidential nomination, posed a hostile question to Mondale during the recent candidates' debate here.

Askew wanted to know about Mondale's "paid lobbying for a law that could make consumers up front pay for additions to a multimillion-dollar (natural gas) pipeline to Alaska that'll never be finished."

Mondale offered an emotional response that was one of the dramatic high points of the debate:

"I have spent my whole life, Reubin, fighting for consumers. I have led an honorable and decent public and private life. I have never permitted anything in my private affairs, including making a living, to interfere with the integrity of my position. I feel that very, very deeply and I want you to understand, Reubin."

Unfortunately, the information available about Mondale's involvement with the pipeline project indicates that his reply was inadequate if not misleading. Moreover, the Mondale campaign staff's handling of the issue in recent days suggests that there was good cause for his defensiveness during the debate sponsored by the Des Moines Register.

Some background: The 4,794-mile-long pipeline was to stretch from Alaska's North Slope, through Canada and into the "Lower 48" but the project's capital costs were so massive that even the country's largest commercial banks could not satisfy them.

To gain additional funds, the pipeline sponsors devised an outrageous "pre-billing" plan under which consumers would begin paying for construction costs after pipeline sections were completed but long before the entire project was finished and natural gas began flowing south from Alaska.

That approach required passage of federal legislation, and in late 1981 many of Washington's most influential lawyers, lobbyists and consultants began appearing on the payrolls of the companies participating in the project.

Mondale received $43,750 in 1981 for unspecified consulting or legal services provided to one of those firms. In addition, the pipeline's principal promoter, Salt Lake City businessman John G. McMillian, donated $5,000 to Mondale's personal political action committee in 1982.

"The pre-billing issue that you're talking about, I was always opposed to that," Mondale told Askew during the debate here. Regardless of Mondale's specific role in McMillian's operation, that position lacks credibility because pre-billing was the lynchpin of the pipeline's entire financial plan.

Exactly what services did Mondale perform for the pipeline project? In the days immediately following the debate here, the following replies to that question were provided to inquiring reporters by members of Mondale's senior staff:

James Johnson, the campaign's acting chairman, said Mondale worked only the matters affecting the Canadian portion of the pipeline.

Michael Berman, the campaign's treasurer, said Mondale provided "general advice" on matters wholly unrelated to the legislation.

Maxine Isaacs, the campaign's press secretary, said Mondale confined his involvement to "trade and international economics" issues.

Mondale himself avoided providing a fourth conflicting answer by tartly responding to a query: "That's private life, private income. It had nothing to do with public policy. I did no lobbying."

The man who is rightfully proud of his reputation for probity owes the public a better explanation.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Feb. 24th, the 55th day of 1984. There are 311 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 24th, 1868, the House of Representatives impeached Andrew Johnson - the only time that's ever been done to a president.

On this date:

In 1771, James Otis of Massachusetts coined the saying "a man's home is his castle" as he protested the English system of search and seizure.

In 1903, the United States acquired a naval station at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba.

In 1920, the Nazi Party was organized in Germany.

And in 1972, the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional vagrancy laws that punished people for such things as loafing and avoiding work.

Ten years ago: Leaders of 30 Islamic nations wound up a meeting in Lahore, Pakistan with agreement to aid developing countries hurt by rising oil prices.

Five years ago: The Camp David negotiations were reported to be at an intensive stage, and the delegates from the United States, Egypt and Israel were said to be determined to reach a solution.

One year ago: The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed above the 1,100 mark for the first time, amid expectations of lower interest rates and confidence that the recession was ending.

It hurts not to make the list

Whenever the government comes up with a blacklist I immediately rush out and see if I made it.

The other day it was revealed the USIA kept a list of Americans who were not to be sent abroad as part of the propaganda department's speaking program. Among the blacklisted were Walter Cronkite, the most trusted man in America; David Brinkley; economist John Kenneth Galbraith; Lester Thurow and Paul Samuelson; Washington Post editor Ben Bradlee; former Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger; former Director of the CIA Stansfield Turner; former National Security Advisor McGeorge Bundy; and feminist Betty Friedan; as well as about 80 other outstanding citizens.

The reason given for the list was that top officials of USIA did not believe foreigners should be exposed to any kind of ideology that was remotely in conflict with that of the president's.

Since some of my best friends were on the list I was embarrassed I didn't make it. It was the second major blacklist I've missed.

In 1974 I failed to make the famed Nixon "enemies" list, an oversight that cost me any clout I might have had in this town.

When it was revealed the USIA had the names of those who should not represent the U.S. abroad, I called and demanded to talk to the agency's ideological czar.

"How come I didn't make your speakers' blacklist?" I asked him.

"We had to limit it to only the best and the brightest."

"And how were they chosen?" I demanded.

"Very carefully. Whenever a name was submitted to us to represent the U.S. in our overseas speakers' program it went upstairs to our Blue Ribbon Ideological Review Board. If there was the slightest evidence the speaker disagreed with the president on economics, foreign policy, or just plain conservative philosophy, he or she was listed as a questionable spokesperson and one who could not be trusted to carry America's message to the world."

"The whole thing smacks of McCarthyism," I said.

"That's a typical liberal knee-jerk reaction," the man said. "The truth of the matter is that the USIA is the propaganda arm of the president of the U.S., and our nation's credibility would be seriously questioned if we sent Americans abroad who disagreed with Mr. Reagan's policies. The blacklist was only a guide to counteract those in the agency who thought the overseas speaking program should be bipartisan."

"All right, I'll accept the fact that the USIA does not want to send any speakers overseas who are not in tune with Mr. Reagan's conservative philosophy. But where does that leave those of us who never made the list? How do we explain the omission to the people who were blackballed?"

"There was nothing personal about the blacklist," he replied. "The reason you didn't make the list is that your name was never submitted by anyone in the agency as a candidate for our speaking program."

"Is it too late now?" I asked.

"Too late for what?"

"To make the blacklist. I have several friends at the USIA who would submit my name if they knew it meant that much to me."

"I'm afraid it is too late. We just had a directive from upstairs that since the blacklist is now public knowledge, we can no longer keep it."

"Does that mean the Blue Ribbon USIA Ideological Board is going to be disbanded?"

"Of course not. But the blackballing will be done verbally, and no longer by printed ballot. We have no intention of throwing out the baby with the bathwater."

"One more question. Did Charles Wick, the director of the USIA, know you people were keeping a blacklist of loyal Americans who didn't agree with the president?"

"Not to my knowledge. He was so busy taping the telephone calls of his friends, he left the day-to-day blacklisting to us."

The life of a political wife

They're off and running - the wives of political candidates - with schedules as frenetic as their husbands'.

Campaign swings from New York to Texas to Oregon - with or without mates - are as common for these women as the creamed chicken they eat at political dinners.

Annie Glenn, wife of Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, has a callus on her right hand from all the handshaking. Reubin Askew's wife, Donna Lou, says the worse part is "the nitty-gritty things - trying to keep clean clothes, sleeping in a different hotel room each night."

Joan Mondale, who campaigns five days out of seven for Democratic front-runner Walter Mondale, has wryly observed that people don't vote for the candidate's wife "but she's part of the package." She can also unwittingly be the target of gossip, adoration or contempt.

One who has been through it, who talks and writes about it, is Dottie Lamm, wife of Colorado's third-term governor, Richard Lamm.

She told me she knows and understands the ambivalence of political wives. Many of her insights are included in her recently published book, "Second Banana."

Eleven years ago when she felt she had a full enough life as homemaker and mother of two small children, her husband made his first bid for governor. She was thrust into the role of writing a journal - "kind of like talking to myself. It was done out of loneliness and out of some frustration with the roles I was put into."

Here are some of her journal entries from 1973:

"I am happy, now that we are truly involved in a joint venture - his campaign - at how important I have become. Yet, I am furious! Wasn't my life important before? And weren't our children a joint venture? Would we be so close if it were I who was running?"

"Absences are hell on the family: our little boy spins out of control or walks in solemn circles."

"There is now a momentum growing that is as engulfing as falling in love or finding a dream. There are no greater or lesser jobs, no stereotyping of duties, as I had heretofore experienced in marriage... I imagine us homesteading or setting out to conquer the West in a covered wagon."

And after that first victory in 1974, she wrote: "Just yesterday, we were still 'running.' Today, I feel like running away." She wondered, "Will we adjust so well to our new positions that we will not recognize ourselves when we're done?"

Blunt about the demands on the political wife, she wrote: "I can't stand to be strong, charming, tactful and careful for one more minute. I like looking beautiful and I like being grubby - I hate always looking 'proper.'"

Dottie Lamm decided she had to carve out an area of interest that was totally hers. In 1976, after going door-to-door with feminist homemakers in their campaign for the Equal Rights Amendment, she began to wonder if she could "help women see that being family-centered and being a feminist are not incompatible."

She decided she wanted to write about balancing creative mothering and creative needs, about marriage and identity, about pressures and caring. In 1979, she began a weekly column for the Denver Post that readers recently rated one of the paper's four best.

The column - now twice weekly - is a priority in her life. She writes it, isolated in a one-time maid's room at the governor's mansion in downtown Denver, where she "retreats to the world of words that I alone weave."

Her book, "Second Banana," is a selection of those columns plus excerpts from her journal and poems written in 1981 after she lost a breast to cancer. She says she is now "much more aware of how precious life is... I've dropped a lot of pretty psychic garbage."

Does she have any advice for the other "second bananas" - wives of politicians? You betcha. It's this: "Find your own arena."

That's what Dottie Lamm did. And now she's a top banana on her own.

Briefing papers caper: mystery lingers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither the Justice Department nor congressional investigators can solve the mystery of how President Jimmy Carter's debate briefing papers wound up in Ronald Reagan's campaign in 1980, but the department says no crime was involved in the transfer.

The Justice Department closed its eight-month investigation Thursday, admitting in a three-page report that it was not able to determine who transferred the briefing material and some White House documents to the Reagan camp before the crucial Oct. 28, 1980, Reagan-Carter debate.

The department concluded there was "no credible evidence that the transfer violated any criminal law" and found no evidence of "any plan or conspiracy by Reagan election officials to obtain the Carter briefing materials or any other confidential, internal Carter documents."

All documents gathered by the FBI were turned over to a House subcommittee headed by Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., whose panel is writing a report on its own investigation of the episode. All the FBI interview and laboratory reports were also made available to the subcommittee, the department said.

But House sources, who declined to be named, have said the Albosta probe also came up dry in efforts to identify the person or persons who may have been responsible for the transfer.

Asked why the department did not continue until it had found out how the papers were transferred, Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair replied, "We're not an ethics agency." He said the department's responsibility ended when it determined there was no crime.

The department said that, without evidence of theft, neither federal laws against the theft of government property nor local theft laws had been violated. It said since none of the material was classified, no federal secrecy laws were violated.

And it said that without evidence of a conspiracy by the Reagan camp to get the documents, federal election laws were not violated.

DeCair said that despite inconsistent statements by top Reagan appointees about the materials, no polygraph tests were administered because "there were no legally significant inconsistencies."

The largest inconsistency was in the memories of two top Reagan campaign officials about the briefing materials themselves.

James A. Baker III, now White House chief of staff, said he thought he had received them from William J. Casey, now CIA director. Casey said he didn't remember seeing them and would not have touched them "with a 10-foot pole."

The department concluded the Reagan camp got a rough draft of foreign policy briefing material prepared for Carter and of briefing material prepared for Vice President Walter Mondale in anticipation of a debate with Reagan's running mate, George Bush.

Fathers would face jail again 'for freedom of religion'

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP) — Six fathers of pupils at the illegal Faith Christian School, free today after 93 days in jail for refusing to answer a judge's questions, said they would go through the ordeal again "for freedom of religion."

Sarpy County District Judge Ronald Reagan ordered the men released Thursday, three months to the day after they were arrested. At the heart of the matter is a refusal by the church school to use state-certified teachers.

The six fathers were released after they promised not to send their children to the school until it complies with state laws. The children have not been attending school, and a lawyer for the six men said they would not attend school in the state.

One of the men, David Carlson, said they had emerged from the Cass County Jail with a "stronger resolution. If you had told us we would be in there for 93 days, we might have wavered. But now, we'd be willing to do it again."

"If we have to go back to jail for freedom of religion, we'll do it again," said Ralph Liles, another of the men held in contempt of court since Nov. 23.

"During this time there have been at least seven major accomplishments from the perspective of Faith Baptist Church," the Rev. Edward Roe, acting pastor at Faith Baptist Church and acting director of the school, said in praising the six men.

Roe said the Nebraska Legislature "is giving serious concern" for the recommendation of a panel appointed by Gov. Bob Kerrey that Christian schools not be required to hire certified teachers.

The judge also voided warrants for the arrest of the men's wives. The women fled Nebraska in November to avoid arrest. A seventh father was freed last month after he decided to testify. A warrant for his wife's arrest was also voided Thursday.

Reagan let stand, however, arrest warrants for the Rev. Everett Sileven, pastor of the Faith Baptist Church and director of the school, and Sileven's daughter, Tresa Schmidt, who has taught at the school. Both Sileven and his daughter have remained out of the state to avoid arrest.

A compromise Wednesday by Cass County Attorney Ron Moravec and Michael Farris, attorney for the six men, led to the release order.

Moravec "made me this offer, that the men wouldn't have to testify in exchange for their promise not to send their children to Faith Christian School," Farris said. "The men didn't want to testify against themselves, their family, the other people in the church or the pastor."

The children of the six fathers have not attended the school since the men were jailed, Farris said.

"The children won't return to public or private schools in the state of Nebraska," Farris said, without elaborating.

Two councilmen receive death threats after mayor's murder

WEAUBLEAU, Mo. (AP) — Two city councilmen say they got death threats just a day after the mayor was found killed by a high-powered rifle, and one admitted, "I've got butterflies in my stomach right now."

Curtis Bailey and Henry Jerki said Thursday that they received the telephoned threats Wednesday, a day after Bailey found Mayor Ollie Cooper lying face down in a pool of blood at Cooper's farm.

The mayor's death followed a year of violence and threats against the city council that have left some lawmakers in this small southwest Missouri town frightened and angry.

The caller Wednesday told each of the men, "You're next."

Cooper, Bailey and Jerki were all up for re-election in April. Two other council members were not threatened.

Hickory County Sheriff William V. Kennedy said Thursday that he was not treating the threats as serious. "I think they're cranks," he said.

But Bailey, 69, said, "I haven't slept all night. I've got butterflies in my stomach right now."

"At night I pull the shades and I don't know whether I'm going to be shot at through the window or what," said Bailey's wife, Irene. "This town is about to scare me to death."

Jerki said he was puzzled but not frightened by the threat.

"I'm not worried. I've been shot at in World War II — why should this scare me?" he said. "I don't know what it's all about."

The sheriff was investigating tips from residents in the town of about 400 people, located 100 miles southeast of Kansas City.

But there were no solid leads, sheriff's dispatcher Dennis Hutton said Thursday.

Last year, someone threw sticks of dynamite onto the lawns of Jerki, Bailey and another council member, Claude Davenport, Bailey said. Attached were notes warning: "Get out. You're in trouble," he said. The source was never found.

And other violent incidents occurred: Two shots were fired at Cooper's pickup truck last summer, and a horse, two bulls and a calf on his farm were killed.

Bailey, who said he was Cooper's best friend, found the body of the 68-year-old mayor at his 500-acre farm Tuesday afternoon, after Cooper's worried wife called to say he had never come home for lunch.

The death initially was believed to be accidental. Cooper was using a hay hook to move bales of hay when he died, and Hickory County Coroner Robert R. Bolter initially concluded he had suffered a heart attack and fallen on the sharp tool, causing a wound in his neck.

But a funeral director discovered another wound in his back, and the death was reclassified a homicide.

Autopsy results Thursday showed Cooper had been shot in the back and left hip with a high-powered, 30-caliber rifle from a distance of about 30 feet.

Some council members said Cooper had made enemies in some of his personal and business dealings.

"I know that several people didn't like him," said Davenport.

"Ollie was a lot more outspoken than most people around here," said Joel Verno.

School research saves Texas shrimpers money

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Research funded through the Texas A&M University Sea Grant College Program has saved Texas shrimpers almost $30 million, said a report prepared for National Sea Grant College officials.

The research was discussed this week before a review team of senior university administrators from across the country.

"This is part of our effort to be accountable to the taxpayers," said Dr. Ned Osteno, director of the National Sea Grant Office.

"Usually, when we visit campus, it is to hear about specific project funding requests. But on this visit, we want to look at the program as a whole. We also want to meet with university administrators to get their views on the program."

In Sea Grant's report to the panel, officials said that despite the declining purchasing power available to researchers, significant contributions have been made.

3M announces plans for major facility in Austin

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The 3M Company, the nation's 44th largest industrial firm, has announced plans to build a major office, research and development center near the southeast end of Lake Travis, outside Austin.

Gov. Mark White, who was heavily involved in recruiting the company, broke the news in a news conference Thursday.

"This vote of confidence in the bright future of Texas is another payoff from our healthy business climate and economic development efforts," White said.

White said the 3M facility will create 1,500 or more jobs by the end of the decade.

Lewis Lehr, chairman of 3M, said Austin was selected after the Minnesota-based company evaluated at locations in six states and rated them on 30 factors.

"Texas welcomes business," Lehr said, "and the presence of a major research university and a large, growing technical community are especially attractive."

Lehr and others in the company management have been critical of Minnesota's high tax rates, particularly high personal income taxes, which they say hamper the ability of the company to attract talented workers.

3M products range from Scotch brand tape and artificial hip joints to videocassettes and space-shuttle insulation. The company reported sales of more than $7 billion last year.

Main product areas are electronic and information technologies, graphic technologies, industrial and consumer goods, and life sciences. The company already has 1,800 employees working in Austin, Brownwood, Irving, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio.

3M is the first major company to locate the environmentally sensitive area northwest of Austin.

A decision by Motorola to build a semiconductor manufacturing plant in the area sparked a major political debate in 1981. But 3M officials said their complex would be devoted to office workers and researchers, who would use toxic chemicals only in small amounts necessary for laboratory work.

REV. BOB BROWN

Faith Promise Convention at First Nazarene Church

Rev. and Mrs. Bob Brown of Seagraves will be speaking at a Faith Promise Convention sponsored by the First Church of the Nazarene, 500 N. West, at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the church. A graduate of Bethany Nazarene College, Rev. Brown pastored in Scott City, Kan., before going into the mission field. He served for 16 years as a missionary, including four years in Haiti, seven in Nicaragua and five in Guatemala. His ministry was mainly in the areas of teaching and preaching. Mrs. Brown, a nurse, was involved in teaching in addition to her medical work. The public is invited to attend the special service.

LUIS AND GAIL TORRES

Crusade at Lamar Full Gospel

Luis Torres, New Hope Crusade evangelist, will be guest speaker in crusade services at Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, Bond and Sumner Streets, beginning at 7 p.m. Sunday. The crusade services will continue Monday through Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. daily. Torres has been seen on the PTL and 700 Club television programs. A former drug addict and fugitive from the law, he entered the Teen Challenge rehabilitation program in October, 1970, and became an active Christian. Torres has spoken in high school auditoriums, churches, camps and conventions telling people about his conversion. The public is invited to the crusade services. A nursery will be provided.

Film at Grace Baptist Church

"God's Prison Gang," a newly released film featuring Al Capone's getaway driver and the last member of Bonnie and Clyde's gang, will be shown at Grace Baptist Church, 824 S. Barnes, at 6:30 p.m. Sunday. The 44-minute film features several notorious criminals who have become Christians. Shot behind the walls of New York's Attica prison, the film is hosted by Art Linkletter. The movie tells the story of how the work of International Prison Ministry is accomplishing what more guards, higher prison walls and greater financial expenditures have failed to do: keep released inmates from returning to lives of crime. Telling their stories are George Meyer, Al Capone's favorite driver; Floyd Hamilton, former Public Enemy No. 1, the last of the Bonnie and Clyde gang; Jerry Graham, the "robber king" of California; and Ted Jefferson, convicted of crimes ranging from drugs and robbery to murder. Also featured is "Chaplain Ray," whose Dallas-based International Prison Ministry has changed the lives of thousands of inmates over the past 18 years. Rev. Billy D. Pierce, pastor, invites all citizens concerned about the problems of rising crime rates to attend the free screening of the film.

Methodists observe bicentennial

Sunday will be Jubilee Sunday at the First United Methodist Church in celebration of the United Methodists' observance of their Bicentennial anniversary. The Bicentennial will be observed throughout 1984. First United Methodist is climaxing a 12-week study of the denomination's history with Jubilee Sunday. The morning worship service will feature Wesley music with brass accompaniment. Immediately following the service, the Youth Choir will serve a turkey dinner in Lively Hall. Entertainment for the dinner will feature a film of the highlights of Methodist history. The evening worship service will be conducted by The Wesley Flames, a musical group from Panhandle State College at Goodwell, Okla. The public is invited to participate in the celebration services.

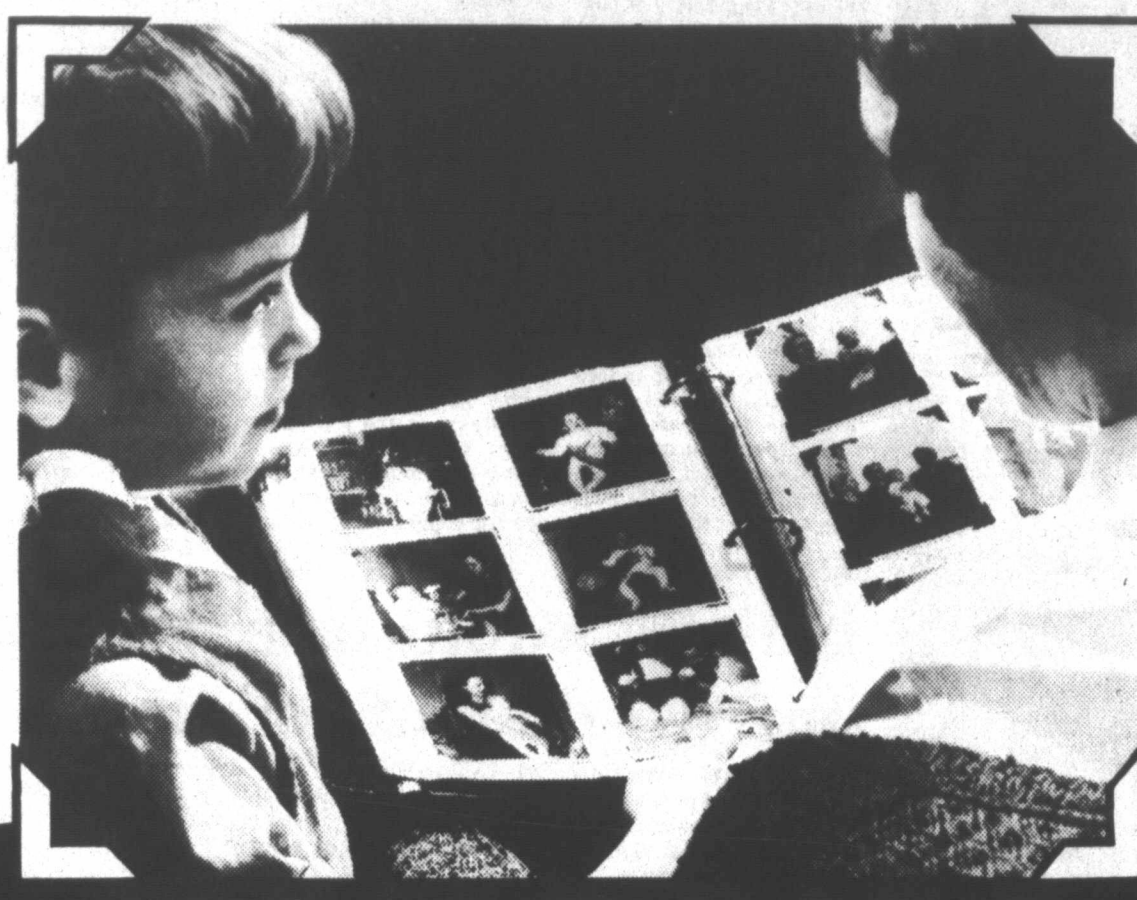

Black historians to be honored

St. Mark Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 406 Elm, will sponsor a special program honoring black historians at 3 p.m. Sunday. Pastor H. R. Johnson said the program also will honor black business people in the community and various people majoring in other fields of labor. The public is invited to attend the special program.

Guest speaker at Bible Church

Dr. Tom Constable of Dallas Theological Seminary will be guest speaker at the Bible Church of Pampa, 300 W. Browning, at three services Sunday. Dr. Constable holds degrees from Moody Bible Institute, Wheaton College and Dallas Theological Seminary. He is a professor and chairman of the Field Education Department at DTS. Dr. Constable will speak at 10 a.m., 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. The public is invited. A nursery will be provided.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

It is wonderful to look back and reflect on the joys and problems of raising a family. Remember Jane's first Christmas... and her first birthday... then there was the time she was so sick, and everyone was awake all night... How much we owe to God for his goodness to us! Yes... we should give thanks to the Lord, and seek his help in bringing up our children. Take your family to church regularly.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

LIFESTYLES

Dear Abby

Old world parents won't like daughter's lifestyle

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been living in the United States for over three years, having come from a country that is predominantly Roman Catholic. My parents are very religious and go by the book in everything.

This summer my parents are coming here for a two-week visit. They know that I am going with a nice Catholic boy, but they don't know that we are living together.

Abby, I've never lied to my parents in my life. (There have been times when I haven't told them everything, but I've never lied.) If they come and see that we are living together, I am sure they will pressure us to get married, and neither of us is ready for that yet.

What should I do?

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Write to your parents and tell them that you and your boyfriend are living together and you hope that they will not pressure you to get married because neither of you is ready for that yet.

It may come as a shock to them, but the shock would be greater were they to come and learn it then. Of course, you could ask your boyfriend to move out while your parents are visiting, but I doubt that you could handle the guilt.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. I've been married for seven months to a man I love with all my heart. Now the problem: He is a very heavy breather and he whistles through his nose when he sleeps. It is not a snore—it's a whistle that is louder than any snore I've ever heard.

I'm a very light sleeper, and this noise wakes me up many times during the night. I can't continue waking him up to tell him to turn over or put the pillow over his head. I've tried using earplugs (the kind used by people who work around noisy equipment), but they aren't comfortable and they don't stay in my ears.

Please don't tell me I'm lucky to have a husband and be glad I can hear. I am only 22 and I can't go on like this for the rest of my life.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

DEAR SLEEPLESS: If your husband has not seen an ear-noise-throat doctor, he should. (A minor surgical procedure might relieve the problem.) If that fails, check your nearest university for its sleep disorder clinic. If you strike out there, see your friendly neighborhood pharmacist for wax earplugs that can be molded to the ear, are more comfortable and stay in.

And if any readers have suggestions—short of "separate bedrooms"—I'll pass them on to you.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the unmarried secretary who thought her married boss got her pregnant. She told him, and he quickly gave her $300 for an abortion, which she never had because it turned out she wasn't pregnant after all. She said she spent the money on clothes, never revealing the truth to her boss.

Too bad! If I were she, I would have made a $300 contribution to the local family planning clinic—in her boss's name!

Gold rushes weren't just in California

By GENA WALLS

Families with ancestors that participated in the "Gold Rush" might find them in ALASKA. Most people think of California when talking about gold, forgetting about the discovery near Juneau, Alaska in 1880 that led to a growth in the American settlements. Gold was also discovered at Fairbanks, Alaska in 1902, and a 1900 census is available.

Although Alaska did not become a state until 1959, it was purchased by the United States in 1867 after the Russians defeat in the Crimean War. Four judicial districts were created between 1897 and 1901 and all have courthouses: Juneau, Nome, Anchorage and Fairbanks.

The Alaska Historical Library does participate in the inter-library loan system. Their address is Alaska Historical Library, Pouch G, Juneau, AK, 99811.

Probably the oldest records available are the early newspapers, many of them on micro-film though few are indexed. "The Alaskan," published from 1885 to 1907, does have a guide that makes searching easier.

Records of birth, death and marriage after 1913 can be purchased from the State Department of Health and Welfare, Bureau of Vital Statistics, State Office Building, Juneau, AK, 99801.

The Russians were the first to establish a permanent settlement at Kodiak Island in 1784 and then British and American traders followed, however population was sparse until the gold discovery.

Which "gold rush" should you be searching? The first gold discovered in the United States was on Cherokee land in Georgia in 1835. This discovery forced the Indians to cede lands and to cross the Mississippi. In 1848, gold was discovered in California and by 1849, more than 80,000 prospectors had emigrated to the area. If you know the age of your ancestor, you should be able to decide where to proceed with your search.

Author unaware she had sunk so low

LOSE MARBLES

LISA PATMAN

There are times when I'll do anything to get attention. Recently I came across a book in which the author suggests that dressing up in costumes not only would make me look better, but would gain the attention of the most absent-minded person. I thought it was worth a try.

At first I went for the jungle look. Wriggling provocatively in front of Old Dad, I whispered, "You Tarzan, me Jane." He looked me up and down and said, "Where'd you get the neat monkey suit?" I wasn't too bad, but still it wasn't what I was after.

Finally, in desperation, I dressed in a harem-girl costume. I dance lithely thought that was at least a start, since he hadn't, after all, called me a gorilla.

Next time I tried donning a powdered wig and early colonial dress. As I grinned demurely at Old Dad, he guessed, "Don't tell me. You're the one who chopped down the cherry tree." I told myself that being mistaken for George Washington around the room, sparking my sequins, waving my veils, and in general trying to get Old Dad to quit reading the evening paper. Exhausted from the efforts of keeping my thighs from killing each other, I dropped gently to the floor and asked, "Well, my darling, what are you thinking of now?"

"It just came to me, out of the blue," he mused, "that when you have to unbuckle your belt to bare your breasts, you're in a world of trouble."

I had known I was desperate for attention, but I was unaware that I had, if you'll pardon the pun, sunk so low.

Planning avoids health problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a half million U.S. travelers required hospitalization or services of a doctor while visiting foreign countries last year, according to a company that gathers information about Americans who get sick abroad.

"Illness or accidents while traveling can be expensive," says Tom St. Denis, president of the company, Health Care Abroad, a Washington-based travel health insurance firm. "When it comes to traveling overseas, Americans tend to disregard the risks and don't plan for the potential costs."

"When you pay for medical treatment, it's not like paying a hotel bill," he points out. "Personal checks or credit cards—even those 'accepted worldwide'—may be rejected by foreign hospitals. Many doctors require payment in cash, and hospitals commonly ask for deposits. And if you can't pay the final bill, hospitals may withhold your passport until the expenses are met."

Contrary to what many Americans believe, St. Denis adds, the highest risks of foreign travel are simple illnesses, not dramatic accidents.

"The debilitating effects of travel are a major factor in overseas illness," he says. "Changes in food, a stepped-up schedule and the excitement of travel are all great strains on your body. That's the catalyst if not the cause of most overseas illness."

To encourage better travel health planning, the U.S. Department of State advises Americans to check their insurance coverage before leaving this country.

According to James E. Ritchie, consular officer in the Citizens Emergency Center at the State Department, "It's not unusual for Americans to go abroad and run into these types of situations. A lot of them try to be wise about traveling, but they don't think about getting sick."

Medicare and most of its supplementary programs don't cover foreign hospitalization, St. Denis notes. Blue Cross covers its policyholders to some extent but only if they get an itemized bill printed in English, something that requires a special request in many countries.

Other insurance policies vary widely in their coverage and services to Americans getting sick or injured abroad.

So how do you avoid high risk, high costs and serious dangers while traveling abroad?

"Simple planning," says St. Denis, who offers these tips to would-be travelers:

—Visit your doctor before going abroad; make sure you are healthy enough.

—Check authoritative medical information sources about any public health problems prevalent in the areas you will visit. One such source is "The Worldwide Health Forecast," a toll-free hotline, at 1-800-368-3531. Others include the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., and New York Hospital's International Health Care Service in New York City.

—Information on health care regulations and customs in foreign nations is available through those countries' U.S.-based tourist bureaus.

James Smithson (1765 - 1829) was a British scientist and founder of the Smithsonian Institution. Although he never visited the United States, he willed more than $500,000 to the U.S. to establish a scientific institution. Congress accepted this gift and in 1846 created the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D.C. In studying the history of America this February, the Daughters of the American Revolution note that the history of our country can be found in the fascinating collections stored at the Smithsonian.

Phillips makes comeback to down Wheeler boys

BORGER—Phillips came from behind in the second half to defeat Wheeler, 53-43, Thursday night in a Class 1A boys' bi-district game.

Wheeler jumped out to a 14-9 first-quarter lead and was still ahead, 27-24, at halftime. However, Phillips switched from a zone to a man to man defense and Wheeler had trouble handling the switch.

Phillips, led by Joe Estes and Bryan Heatley, took a 43-36 lead going into the final quarter.

"Our kids just weren't ready to play," said Wheeler Coach Warren Besly. "We probably had more talent than they did, but Coach (Tony) Lemley did a good job with his kids. Phillips pushed hard to beat us." Estes and Heatley had 13 and 12 points respectively to lead the Blackhawks in scoring.

Steven Snapp led Wheeler with 11 points.

Wheeler, the District 4-1A champions, finished with an 18-10 record.

PHILLIPS (53)
Estes 13, Young 10, Moffitt 11, Bryan Heatley 12, Brent Heatley 4, Hough 2, Johnson 1.

WHEELER (43)
Trevino 4, Brown 2, Jones 7, Snapp 11, Hartman 8, Braunstein 10, Andis 1.

Collins: A one-man team for Andrews?

Stopping sharpshooting guard Daryl Collins will be chief among Pampa Coach Garland Nichols' concerns when the Harvesters meet Andrews at 8 p.m. tonight in a Class 4A bi-district game at Hutcherson Center in Plainview.

Collins, who scored 40 points in a practice game against Sweetwater, is averaging 23 points per game for the Mustangs.

"Collins is our only big scorer," said Andrews Coach Frank Bice. "He's a 5-11 combination, guard, center and forward. He's our big man."

"We're going to come out and play a man to man against them," Nichols said. "I'll have Craig Chapin and then David McQueen on Collins to try and slow him down. If they can't stop him, then we'll try someone else."

Andrews has a 23-7 record and finished second to Lamesa in the District 2-4A standings.

"Andrews lost by two points to Lamesa both times they played them, so there's not much difference in either team," Nichols added. "Andrews has a good pressing defense and we've been working on breaking their press this week."

Pampa, 24-5, and currently ranked second in the state in Class 4A, is making its fifth consecutive trip to the playoffs. Nichols has coached all five of those Harvester clubs.

"Pampa is awesome," Bice said. "Our coaches came back from scouting Pampa and they said we're 20-point underdogs."

Pampa's starting lineup consists of Coyle Winborn (21.3 ppg) at center, Gaylon Faggins (8.8 ppg) and Marty Cross (9.5 ppg) at forwards; Craig Chapin (9.7 ppg) and Rodney Young (7.4 ppg) at guards.

Bice is uncertain about his starters due to injuries.

"We got some players hurt. We had one that had to be stitched up after Monday night's practice game," Bice said. "We're young this year and we average about 5-10 in height." The Mustangs didn't make the playoffs last year. They finished third in the district standings.

"We're just glad to be here. We hope we can be competitive," Bice said.

The winner of tonight's bi-district game will advance to the area round of the playoffs. Area winners then go to a regional tournament and the tourney winners will advance to the state tournament scheduled for mid-March in Austin.

San Jacinto Ravens: Unsung champions

HOUSTON (AP)—Despite an impressive string of conference titles and a national championship trophy, the San Jacinto Junior College Ravens play in the shadow of mainstream college basketball.

When Coach Ronnie Arrow's team returned to suburban Pasadena last April with the National Junior College Athletic Association national title, they were almost overlooked by the University of Houston's success in the NCAA Final Four tournament.

The Cougars finished second to North Carolina State.

But Arrow would settle for a similar scenario this season.

"We'll settle for the same outcome this year," said Arrow, whose team currently is 25-2. "If we can win the national championship and they (Houston) finish second, that's fine with us."

"People say we don't get the attention we should and when you put us on a level with Houston, we don't. But on the junior college level, we probably get more publicity than any team in the country."

Arrow's teams have won six consecutive conference titles, five of his players have eventually graduated to the National Basketball Association and 10 have gone on to play at major colleges.

Arrow would like more attention in the NJCAA rankings, however.

Arrow noted the Ravens have defeated No. 1 ranked Laredo Junior College in regular season games the past two seasons and after each defeat, Laredo remained No. 1 in the NJCAA poll.

The Ravens split regular season games with Laredo last season and beat the Palominos in the regional playoffs during their charge to the national tournament.

San Jacinto's 17-game winning streak includes an 81-76 victory over Laredo but that streak will be in jeopardy tonight when San Jacinto travels to Laredo for the return match. The top-ranked Palominos are 27-1 this season.

Arrow's current team is ranked No. 4 in the nation and is averaging 102 points per game, the third highest average in the nation. Leading scorer Walter Berry is among the top five scorers in the nation with a 28.5 scoring average and 15 rebounds per game.

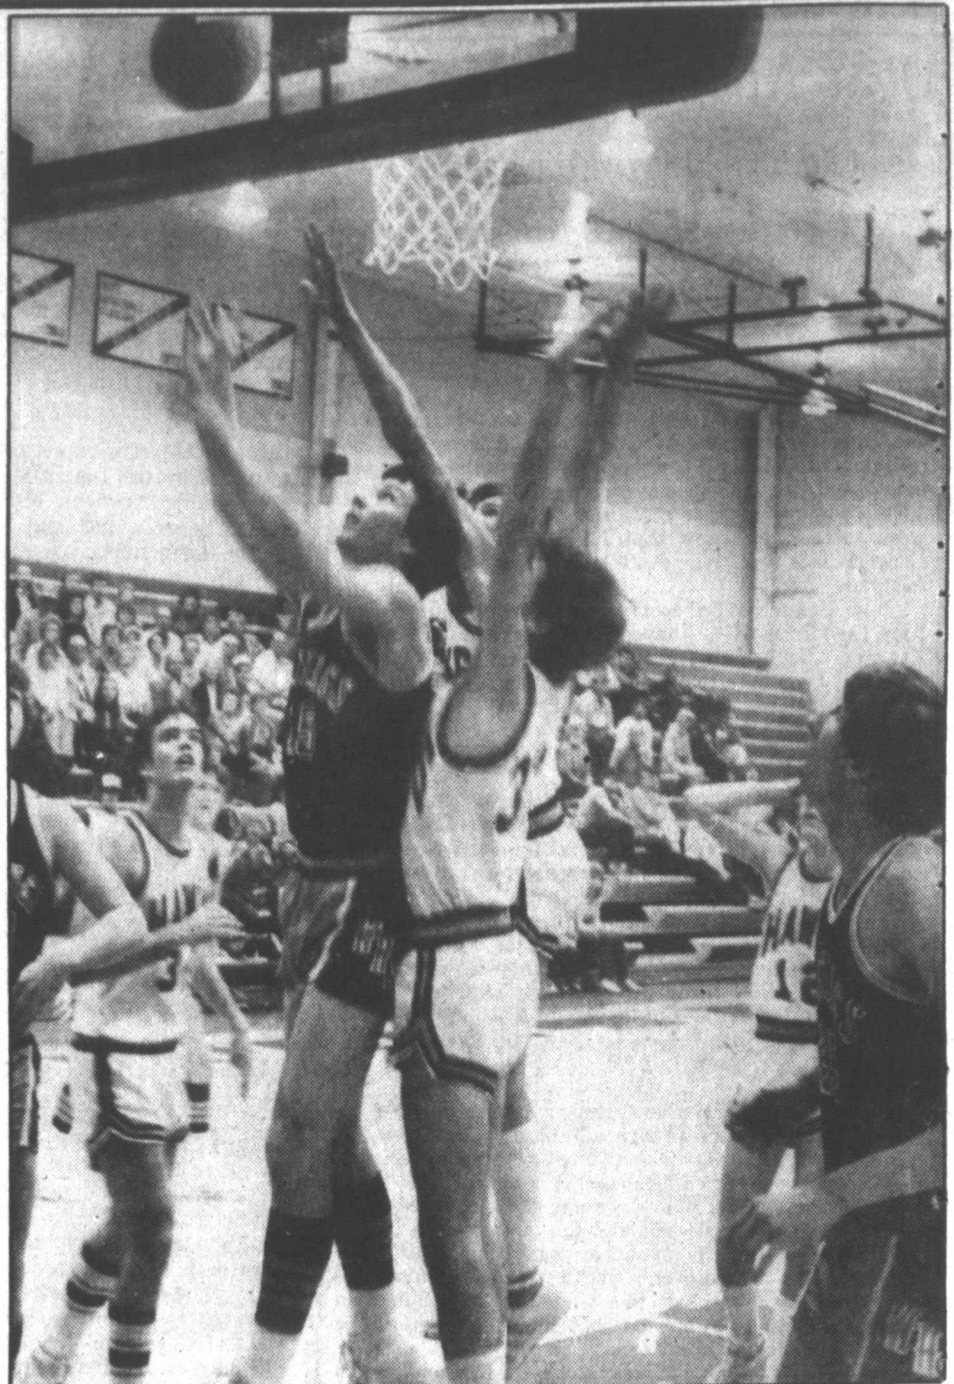

"This team is not as far along at this stage as we were last year," Arrow said. "But we've improved to the point that our young players have got an idea of what we're trying to do."

"I've told the team that we are getting near the playoff stage of our season and it's all mental now. They aren't going to get in any better shape and they're not going to get any smarter."

Four of San Jacinto's starting five last season are now playing at major colleges: Frank "Spoon" James, Nevada-Las Vegas; Carey Holland, Auburn; Nolan Gibson, Bradley and Andre Ross, San Diego State.

The Ravens have one regular season game remaining against Lee Junior College before beginning defense of their national title in the regional playoffs next week.

Arkansas outmuscles Texas Tech

The Arkansas Razorbacks were impressive in dispensing with the last hurdle in their way before Sunday's Southwest Conference basketball showdown with powerful Houston before a national television audience.

Coach Eddie Sutton's 11th-ranked squad made 20 of 33 field goal attempts Thursday night to brush aside Texas Tech, 55-49, in Lubbock.

The victory ran Arkansas' record to 12-1 in SWC play and 22-4 for the year. Only a stunning upset by Rice keeps the Razorbacks from sharing a perfect 13-0 mark in conference play.

Houston, the nation's No. 3 team, has a streak of 37 straight victories in SWC action. Arkansas fell out of the national rankings after the loss at Rice, but moved up dramatically after shocking No. 1 North Carolina last week.

Although both Houston and Arkansas have only three conference games remaining in the SWC round-robin schedule, they have not met yet. A game scheduled for Fayetteville, Ark., was moved to Sunday afternoon, March 4, so it could be televised nationally.

This weekend's match in Houston was moved back a day so it also could be shown to a Sunday afternoon national TV audience. If they meet in the finals of the SWC post-season tournament, as expected, they will clash on three consecutive Sundays.

Texas Tech, 14-10, fell to 8-5 with Thursday night's loss to Arkansas. Four of their five league defeats came at the hands of Houston and Arkansas.

"I'd say that Arkansas and Houston can be compared pretty evenly. Both of them play good defense, but Houston may have a little more depth. It should be a super game between two great teams," said Texas Tech junior forward Vince Taylor, who shared scoring honors for his team despite getting only 10 points.

Joe Kleine used his muscle on the inside over the smaller Texas Tech players to lead a tough Arkansas defense.

Pampa to host Top O' Texas girls track meet

Pampa hosts The Top O' Texas girls' invitational track and field Saturday at Randy Matson Field.

Preliminaries begin at 10 a.m. with the finals starting at 2 p.m.

Fourteen schools are entered in the meet.

This is the first meet of the season for Pampa girls, who finished third in both district and regional meets last season. Top returnees include Sandy Greenway, 800 and 400; Kristi Hughes, high jump; Stacey Brown, 100, and Tina Greenway, 400.

USFL opens Monday night

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

A mere five weeks after Super Bowl XVIII, professional football has come calling again.

The United States Football League, showcasing six new teams, launches its second season with eight games Sunday and defending champion Michigan entertaining Chicago in a televised contest Monday night.

New Jersey at Birmingham heads the Sunday slate with Houston, featuring rookie quarterback Jim Kelly, visiting Tampa Bay, site of this year's USFL title game.

The rest of the schedule has Oakland at Arizona; Philadelphia at Memphis; New Orleans at San Antonio; Washington at Jacksonville; Denver at Los Angeles and Pittsburgh at Oklahoma, where 1983 Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier debuts for the Maulers and ex-Tampa Bay Buccaneer Doug Williams starts at quarterback for the Outlaws.

The New Jersey-Birmingham matchup will spotlight former National Football League quarterback Brian Sipe and Cliff Stoudt as well as serve as a homecoming of sorts for ex-Buffalo Bill Joe Cribbs, who was a standout ball carrier at Auburn.

Another ex-NFL signalcaller, Chicago's Vince Evans, will play his first game in a USFL uniform as well, while San Antonio will go with Rose Bowl hero Rick Neuheisel out of UCLA.

Sipe, who left the Cleveland Browns for a lucrative deal with New Jersey, joins 1983 Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker in the Generals' backfield, while Birmingham is building its offensive attack around Stoudt, a starter for the Pittsburgh Steelers last season, and Cribbs, one of the NFL's best all-purpose running backs the past four years.

Kelly, a record-breaking passer at Miami, Fla., was the Bills' first-round selection in the 1983 NFL draft, but signed instead with the expansion Gamblers.

Against Tampa Bay, he will be facing a defense that ranked second in the USFL overall a year ago, yet one that gave up more points than the Bandits' top-ranked passing game could generate during an 11-7 season.

Tampa Bay, which is expecting a crowd of around 50,000, figures to rely heavily on the throwing of John Reaves whose prime targets are Eric Truvillion (66 receptions, 15 touchdowns in 1983) and speedy running back Gary Anderson.

Denver and Los Angeles are coached by a pair of former NFL quarterbacks, Craig Morton and John Hadl, who are trying to turn around losing situations.

Morton, in his first full season in Denver, will go with Craig Penrope at quarterback Sunday, while Hadl will open with former UCLA star Tom Ramsey.

Oakland, with quarterback Fred Besana, is the defending Pacific Division champion, while Arizona, which figures to be one of the league's strongest teams, compiled a 12-6 record in Chicago a year ago when Tim Spencer and Kevin Long both rushed for better than 1,000 yards and Trumaine Johnson caught 81 passes for 1,322 yards and 10 TDs.

Rivera makes emotional adjustment after mishap

HARMARVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Gabe Rivera, his professional football career shattered by a crushed spinal cord, says he has come to grips with an accident four months ago that put him in a wheelchair for life.

"I know there's hope and I hope for a cure in the future and I hope myself of maybe one day walking. But realistically, this is the way I'm going to be from now on, until I die. I can accept that," Rivera said Thursday from his wheelchair at the Harmarville Rehabilitation Center, about 13 miles north of Pittsburgh.

"It was hard trying to accept it," he said in his first public statement since his crippling accident on Oct. 20. "But then all of a sudden you say, 'What am I going to do, lie around and do nothing?'"

Rivera, 22, was paralyzed from the mid-chest down when he was thrown from the rear window of his sports car when it collided with another car.

He had been the top draft pick of the Pittsburgh Steelers after a brilliant career at Texas Tech, where he was known as "Senor Sack." At 6-foot-2, 292 pounds, he was quick enough to catch running backs and even was a pinch-runner on his college baseball team.

"The lowest spot might have been when I was lying in bed in the hospital and I finally realized I couldn't get up. But I don't think about the low spots," said Rivera, whose weight has dropped to 228 pounds. "Why get down and be sorry for yourself when you can enjoy life the way it should be?"

Police charged Rivera with drunken driving, reckless driving and speeding. In a statement issued through a spokesman before his news conference, Rivera said he would not answer questions about the accident or the events surrounding it because a hearing against him is pending.

He mentioned "the memory of the accident" once during the session, attended by about two dozen reporters and photographers.

Rivera, who joked of nervousness and bit his lip occasionally while answering questions, has about four more weeks of therapy at the center. He was admitted to the facility Nov. 23.

During his stay, he watched some Steeler games on television. And he admitted that being out of football has left a void.

"The difficult part was being away from it," said Rivera. "Retirement was something I thought I would have to cope with later. It happened all of a sudden, so that's one thing that bothered me. Could I have done this or done that? There's no way to answer that."

Rivera's wife, Kimberly, and his infant son, Timothy, who was born Nov. 11, attended the session: Rivera held his wife's hand in the delivery room while he was still hospitalized at Allegheny General Hospital.

The birth was an inspirational moment for Rivera, who also suffered a broken bone and nerve damage in his right shoulder, broken ribs, a bruised lung and a bruised heart.

"It's just been recently I've learned to change his diaper," said Rivera, wearing a Texas Tech T-shirt and sweatpants. "My first goal was to get my arm better so I could hold him and change him. It helped me through a lot of the state of depression at first."

Rivera posed for pictures with his family and also working at machines he uses in therapy to strengthen his right arm.

"It's a slow process right now. You take it day by day. There's times when I get down, but there ain't nothing I can do about it. There's a few things you wish you can do but can't do," said Rivera. Meanwhile, Rivera's attitude and work habits have impressed his doctors.

FIGHTING BACK—Former Pittsburgh Steeler lineman Gabriel Rivera takes a swing at a punching bag in a Harmarville, Pa. Rehabilitation Center. Rivera, who played at Texas Tech, is recovering from an auto accident that left him paralyzed from the chest down last October. (AP Laserphoto)

Knowledge you've gained through personal experience will be advantageously used this coming year. You are now in a cycle in which dreams can become realities.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Plans for the future should be revised at this time to face present-day realities. The right adjustments will help bring your hopes into being quicker. The Matchmaker wheel tells you your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send an additional $1 plus your zodiac sign for your sign's year-ahead predictions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Go a few extra steps today if you are helping another get what he or she wants. Your kindness will be rewarded later in a larger measure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Follow your intuitive feelings when dealing with others on a one-to-one basis today. Your insights will serve as reliable guidelines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) People will share with you today provided they sense a willingness on your part to share with them. Let your actions convey this message.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something may develop in your social affairs today requiring you to mediate a condition between two friends. You'll handle it like a diplomat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have the unique ability today to upgrade or transform things into something more useful. Use your talents to improve your home or office.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An aura of both glamour and mystery hovers about you today. These won't be affectations or airs — all you have to do is be yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Close associates will feel inspired to do things for you today that could be of considerable advantage to you materially.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Where your personal interests are concerned today, don't abdicate the leadership role. Under your direction, things will be handled properly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have a good nose for sniffing out bargains today. Follow the scent. It may enable you to obtain something you thought was too expensive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In social situations today, all eyes will be upon you, although you may not be aware of it. Fortunately, your mode of behavior will draw oohs and aahs.

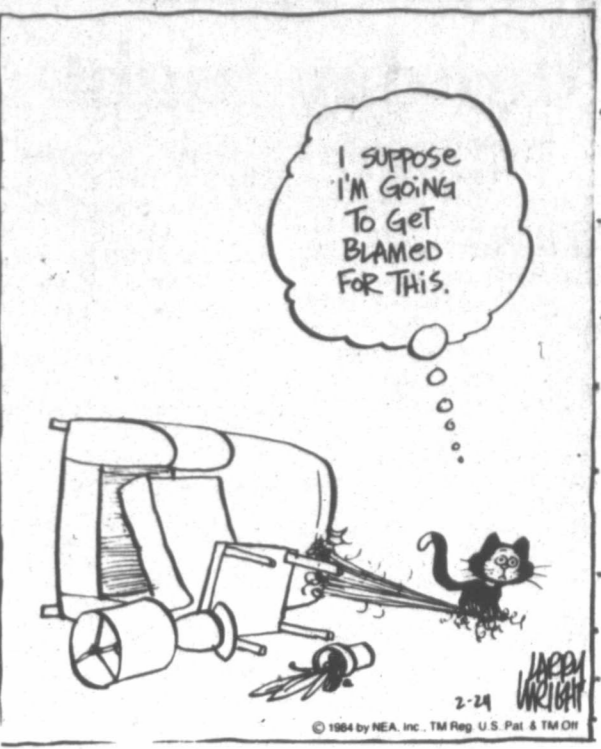

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be very selective as to whom you let in on your secret goals and ambitions today. The right choices will enhance your chances for success.

House foundation was radioactive

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — A contractor estimates it will cost $15,000 to replace the foundation on a two-story house here where investigators found radioactive steel reinforcing bar was used in its construction.

The original foundation on the house located in a subdivision here was demolished Thursday after state officials decided the radioactive steel could pose a health hazard.

"We expect the new foundation to be poured, the house reset and ready for a certificate of occupancy in about 20 days," said contractor Ken Dannenbaum, president of Ken Inc.

The house is one of two in San Juan County which state officials have determined contained radioactive rebar from Mexico. The other is in Bloomfield.

Jerre Millard, director of the state Health and Environment Department's Radiation Surveillance Division, said the radioactivity in the Farmington house was measured as high as 40 microcentgens per hour above background levels. Measurements in the Bloomfield house were as high as 120 microcentgens per hour above background, Millard said.

The maximum allowed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is 33 microcentgens per hour, he said.

He said the radioactivity did not pose an immediate health hazard but could cause health problems if someone was exposed to the radiation over an extended period of time.

Millard said the contractor estimated it would cost $15,000 to remove the foundation of the house and replace it with new concrete.

Since only a corner of the Bloomfield house was found to be radioactive, Millard said contractor Harvey Johnson might be able to jackhammer the contaminated steel from the foundation without having to move the house from the foundation.

Millard said investigators are continuing to work with Mesa Concrete, a local construction firm that bought the radioactive rebar Jan. 11 from Smith Pipe and Steel Co. of Albuquerque.

Larry Anaya, owner of Mesa Concrete, is providing a list of projects his company completed from November through mid-February. Millard said his investigators will return to San Juan County to check the houses on Mesa's list for radioactivity.

The two houses and two retaining walls are the only structures state officials have located where contaminated Mexican steel already has been used in construction. The walls were destroyed earlier this month.

The contaminated steel was found at five other sites in Albuquerque and Santa Fe but was collected from construction yards before being used in buildings.

State officials discovered the radioactive steel last month when a truck loaded with it triggered a radiation monitor at Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Since then, investigators have located the "hot" steel in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Texas.

Federal officials have said the steel was contaminated at a Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, junkyard when a pellet of cobalt 60 from a medical device was crushed along with scrap metal eventually made into rebar.

Comanche Peak nuclear plant inquiry continues

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The chairman of a licensing review panel for the Comanche Peak nuclear plant says the board should have heard testimony from a plant official about problems with a study of its quality assurance programs.

Peter Bloch, chairman of an Atomic Safety and Licensing Board panel reviewing the plant's licensing application, said Thursday that he had cut off the testimony of tampering at the nuclear plant near Glen Rose are the subject of an inquiry by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, an official said.

NRC regional counsel William L. Brown said officials were investigating whether workers improperly altered records after learning that a consultant would check the accuracy of some documents the next day.

The NRC staff, as part of the investigation, agreed to interview the manager of the plant's record-keeping division as early as next Monday and to furnish results to the safety and licensing board, Brown said.

Bloch suspended the questioning when Hutchinson was responding to allegations by a former plant employee that a quality assurance study by Cygna Energy Services had been compromised. Hutchinson's testimony was cut short Tuesday after plant owner Texas Utilities Co. revealed it had an internal investigation underway into the allegations of record tampering.

Bloch said Tuesday that he suspended Hutchinson's testimony to prevent the mention of innocent parties in connection with the incident.

"The reason given was not adequate to stop the proceedings," Bloch said Thursday, noting that a closed hearing would have been proper.

Bloch ordered utility officials not to talk to Hutchinson without recording the conversation.

Texas' chief justice calls on lawyers to unplug courts

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court says "thousands of cases" could be siphoned off the overflowing court systems if lawyers would learn to settle more disputes outside the courtroom.

Justice Jack Pope called on attorneys to help unplug the overloaded courts.

"What we should be searching for is not a substitute system, but different ways that we can use our skills," Pope said. "Our purpose is to find and fashion and develop some professional skills in addition to our courtroom skills."

Pope addressed an attorneys' conference on negotiation, mediation and arbitration Thursday, sponsored by the law schools at St. Mary's and Texas Tech universities.

Using the three skills could "siphon off thousands of cases that otherwise would find their way into the clogged court system," he said.

Pope pointed to the advent of "neighborhood justice centers," which mediate some disputes, as a way to both lessen the courts' load and involve members of the community.

"The legal profession deals with problem solving, but we've got to realize that there are multitudes of problems that can be resolved that do not have to have total losers and total winners," he said. "And we don't always need to have a judge made the final decision."

Many cases that take up valuable court time easily could be settled elsewhere, he said.

"Almost a million people turned to the courthouses in Texas last year and the year before to settle their disputes," the justice said.

"Studies show that about 65 percent of those cases are ordinary people looking for a third party to make a decision so they can get on with their business."

But too often, Pope said, cases languish in legal red tape and the citizens involved don't always fully understand the complicated proceedings.

"We really squeeze some people out of the system and leave them mostly self-help," he said.

Pope, who started as a state district judge in Corpus Christi, said the state district courts decide 98 percent of the lawsuits filed in the nation, leaving only 2 percent for the federal courts.

Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip, who as husband of Queen Elizabeth II often must hold his tongue in public, lets fly with some frank and humorous opinions in his new book, "Men, Machines and Sacred Cows."

The book is to be published Monday by Hamish Hamilton, and excerpts appeared this week in the Times of London newspaper.

In it, Philip decries the destructive forces of technology, offers amusing insights into his favorite pastimes — horseback riding and polo — and seems to argue for the banning of helicopters.

Of polo umpires, he says: "... muttonheaded dolts, totally ignorant of the simplest rules of the game and completely blind to monstrous and blatant fouls committed by the opposition." On the basic instrument of polo:

"The horse is a great leaver and anyone who is concerned about his dignity would be well advised to keep away from horses."

Although an aviation lover, the prince seems to argue passionately against the noise and smell of helicopters, saying that "this sort of thing is quite intolerable and should be stopped at once."

"If I can persuade you to join me in this campaign the disappearance of the helicopter is assured and then we shall all be able to hold our heads high — as we march steadily back towards the caves our ancestors so foolishly vacated such a long time ago."

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Seuss, whose earlier books told children II about "The Cat in the Hat" and "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," says even he is not sure how to classify his newest work, "The Butter Battle Book."

The book is the story of an escalating arms race between the Yooks, who eat their bread butter-side up, and the Zooks, who like it just the opposite. Their army includes the Utterly Sputter and the Big-Boy Boomer.

The author, who turns 80 on March 2, also relates how, as a lieutenant colonel in World War II, he once had to choose between two Hollywood actors to do the narration for an Army film.

"One was Lt. Ronald Reagan and the other was Sgt. John Beal. I listened to them both and selected Sgt. Beal," said Geisel.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock singer Ozzy Osbourne was hospitalized here after some exploding glass caught in his throat during taping of a video in London several hours earlier, a spokesman said.

"He has lacerations in his throat," said Mike Jensen, the Los Angeles publicist for the 35-year-old British singer, said late Thursday. The glass passed through Osbourne's system, he said.

Jensen said the accident occurred in a London studio at about 11 p.m. EST Wednesday. Osbourne apparently thought he was all right and boarded a Concorde flight for New York en route to a Thursday night concert in Lakeland, Fla. He began feeling discomfort during the flight, and on arrival at Kennedy Airport went immediately to nearby Peninsula Hospital Center in Queens.

Doctors there determined there was no glass lodged in his throat and transferred him to a hospital in Manhattan. Jensen did not know which hospital.

Jensen said the Lakeland concert and a Miami show set for tonight were canceled and would be rescheduled.

Osbourne, who claims to have once bitten the head off a bird during a record company sales meeting, was the lead singer for Black Sabbath for 10 years before going solo in 1979.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — One of this monied desert resort's best known residents is lending his name to a new $11 million gathering spot for arts lovers: the Bob Hope Cultural Center.

"This will be a world-class facility open to the entire desert valley," said shopping center magnate Ernest Hahn, executive vice president of a group raising money for the performing arts center.

The 80-year-old Hope, an avid golfer when he isn't cracking jokes on stage, was chosen for the honor as "the desert's most famous and deserving citizen," Hahn said. Groundbreaking is planned for January 1985 and construction should be complete by that fall or early 1986.

The center will rise on 16 acres of the College of the Desert campus, a $500,000 parcel the college will lease at $1 a year for 66 years through special legislation, college president Fern Stout said this week.

The Friends of the Cultural Center booster group has received about $3 million in cash and pledges for the center, Hahn said Wednesday, and he is leading a campaign of prominent citizens to raise the rest.
