

City property scheduled for reappraisal this year

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

The Gray County Tax Appraisal District has started its second phase of reappraising county property, with the city of Pampa and rural areas of the county included in this year's program, according to Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard.

Scheduled for reappraisal are all land, new structures and additions in the city and rural areas. The 1984 tax statements will reflect new values on those types of property. Existing structures which have not been improved will go on the rolls at the same value as last year.

When reappraisal began in October of 1982, McLean and Lefors were first on the list because neither had "had an accurate and uniform" appraisal since the late 1960s, assistant chief appraiser Russell Garrison noted.

Reappraisal of existing structures that have not been improved will come later in the program.

After the reappraisals are completed, persons whose property valuation is changed by more than $1,000, will be sent a Notice of Appraised Value prior to the board of review hearings this year.

Buzzard said anyone disagreeing with the assigned property value may call or visit with appraisers in the appraisal office. If an individual can produce evidence that the new valuation of his property is incorrect, an adjustment will be made, he said.

If an individual property owner and the appraisal district still disagree, he can appeal to the GAD Appraisal Review Board, which is similar to the old boards of equalization.

GAD will provide applications for persons wishing to appeal to the review board at the GAD office, 400 W. Kingsmill, Hughes Bldg., Suite 196-A, in Pampa, and at regional sites located in the tax offices of school districts of Alanreed, Grandview-Hopkins, Lefors, and McLean.

Property owners over 65 who received homestead exemptions for the 1982 tax year will automatically be credited with those exemptions again this year.

New application is required when the homeowner changes his residence or becomes eligible for the first time. Application for exemptions must be made after January 1 and before May 1.

School taxes are frozen for homeowners 65 and over on January 1 of the tax year.

The county reappraisal districts came into existence after the State Legislature several years approved legislation designed to "simplify, streamline, and equalize" the tax appraisal system in Texas.

The legislation created the appraisal districts and mandated that all property in the state be appraised at 100 percent of value, with valuation based on market value, replacement cost and income potential (for commercial property).

Garrison said appraisers do not automatically or randomly raise the value of property based solely on sales of similar property in the area.

Market value is only one of the guidelines used, he said, adding that other factors include condition, age and location of the property.

Appraisal districts do not have taxing authority. They are simply charged with the responsibility of determining the value of property. After the valuations have been established, it is left up to individual taxing entities to set tax rates that will produce the amount of revenue they feel is needed to finance their operations.

Jury awards Grandstoffs $1.4 million

Attorneys Robert Wallis and Jan Fox celebrate verdict

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

AMARILLO — Borger police officers didn't break any laws when they shot Four Sixes Ranch cowboy James Grandstoffs in the back and killed him, but that still doesn't make it right, a federal jury has ruled.

The fatal shooting of the wrong man, though legally justified, was "reckless, malicious, wanton, and oppressive" and a result of "widespread incompetence" in the Borger police force, jurors ruled Friday. They ordered the city and four police officers to pay the Grandstoffs family $1,430,000 in civil damages.

The three-man, three-woman jury deliberated two and a half days in Amarillo federal court to reach the verdict returned shortly after 1 p.m. Friday.

The jurors rejected officers' testimony denying that they killed Grandstoffs in front of his ranch home on Aug. 11, 1981. The jury decided Borger officers John Robert Alonzo and John Ray and former city officers Bailey Roberts and John Wayne Turner all used deadly force against the cowboy and share equal responsibility for his death.

The verdict also says that Hutchinson County deputy sheriff Ricky Morris, the fifth officer named in the suit, was in no way responsible for Grandstoffs' death or liable for damages.

Presiding Judge Mary Lou Robinson dismissed Gray, Carson and Hutchinson Counties as defendants in the suit before final arguments on Tuesday.

The 1981 shooting was legally justified because when they shot him, Borger officers mistook Grandstoffs for a fugitive they had been chasing, the jury decided following the trial that began Jan. 9.

The legal justification under state law protects the officers from criminal violations, according to the jury verdict, but not from civil liability and the ordered monetary damages.

"We're glad it's over with whatever they found we're happy with it," Sharon Grandstoffs, the victim's widow, said after the verdict that awarded her $612,000.

Defense lawyer Wayne Sturdivant of Amarillo, representing the city and its four officers, said the city will appeal the award if presiding Judge Mary Lou Robinson signs a judgment leaving the damages intact.

Grandstoffs, foreman of the Four Sixes' north camp, was gunned down by the Borger officers after he drove down to investigate the commotion raised when the police tried to arrest a fugitive they had chased more than six miles from town onto the pasture in front of the cowboy's ranch home. The fugitive, Lonnie Cox, had fired on officers during the high-speed chase from Borger. The officers returned fire, hitting Cox once in the back. The suspect left the highway and crashed his truck on the ranch pasture. He temporarily escaped on foot.

The officers testified during the trial that they mistook Grandstoffs for Cox. They said they fired at the cowboy when he stepped out of his truck and appeared to be going for a gun at his waist.

Grandstoffs was hit once — in the back — in the volley of police gunfire. He was pronounced dead on arrival at a Borger hospital about 5 a.m. on the morning of the shooting.

The officers handcuffed the fatally wounded ranchhand with his hands behind his back, according to testimony at the trial. Former patrolman Roberts, who weighed more than 300 pounds, pounced on the wounded man's back during the handcuffing, according to the testimony. Another Borger patrolman at the scene, Mickey Davis, kicked Grandstoffs in the head each time the wounded and handcuffed man tried to raise his head and speak and told the mumbling victim to "shut up," one witness testified.

But the jury ruled the officers were not "deliberately indifferent" to Grandstoffs' serious medical needs and did not use more force than necessary in detaining the innocent man they mistook for a fugitive.

The City of Borger itself was mostly to blame for Grandstoffs' shooting death, according to the jury verdict. The city "was grossly negligent in failing to properly train its officers," and "serious incompetence or misbehavior was general or widespread throughout the City of Borger police force," the verdict says.

Chief Arthur Waigh never reprimanded any of the officers involved in the shooting, and Alonzo

$75 million satellite lost in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An official raised the possibility Saturday that the $75 million Westar VI communications satellite exploded after it was launched from the space shuttle Challenger and is now merely chunks of junk orbiting the Earth.

Bill Ziegler, mission director for Western Union, which owns the satellite, also said later that a faint signal heard by a California ground station may indicate the satellite wasn't destroyed. But he said it was useless anyway because there was no fuel left to send it up to its 22,300-mile-high orbit.

Meanwhile, a second shuttle customer — the government of Indonesia — had NASA postpone Saturday's shuttle launching of Palapa-B, an electronic twin to the Westar VI. When the astronauts went to bed, they were told that no decision had been reached whether to release it on Sunday or Monday, or bring it back home.

Another decision hinged on the second launching, whether the Challenger should stay up an extra day to accommodate the delay. On Tuesday and Thursday, mission specialists Robert Stewart and Bruce McCandless are to don back packs and perform the first space walk without a lifeline.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command said its huge radars in California and Florida determined that "two of the objects are large enough to be the satellite" and said the pieces are in the same general orbit as Challenger.

That would indicate the rocket firing that was to take Westar VI from the Challenger's 190-mile orbit to one 22,300 miles high may have spun the satellite in place like a pinwheel. The solid state fuel used in Westar's rocket stage burns until it is exhausted; there is no way the engine shuts down once the fuel is ignited.

With no fuel, "there is virtually no chance of it being useful... we could never get it up to geosynchronous orbit," Ziegler said.

A tracking station operated by Hughes Aircraft Co. in Fillmore, Calif., "received two minutes of signal from an object trailing the orbiter" about 1 p.m. EST, but it was so weak that antennas could not lock on it, Ziegler said.

Asked whether he thinks the satellite has been found, Ziegler replied, "Probably."

NORAD said the largest piece it tracked is at least 690 miles behind Challenger and poses no danger to the ship and its five-man crew "at present," and that the closest approach for 24 hours is greater than 31 miles.

A synchronous, or stationary, orbit means that a satellite is at 22,300 miles altitude over the equator. There, its speed matches that of Earth, making it appear stationary over one point.

"We attempted to communicate with some of those objects without any success today," Ziegler said. "We are not at all certain these objects are Westar VI or PAM." — the Payload Assist Module, which is pushed out of the cargo bay by powerful springs.

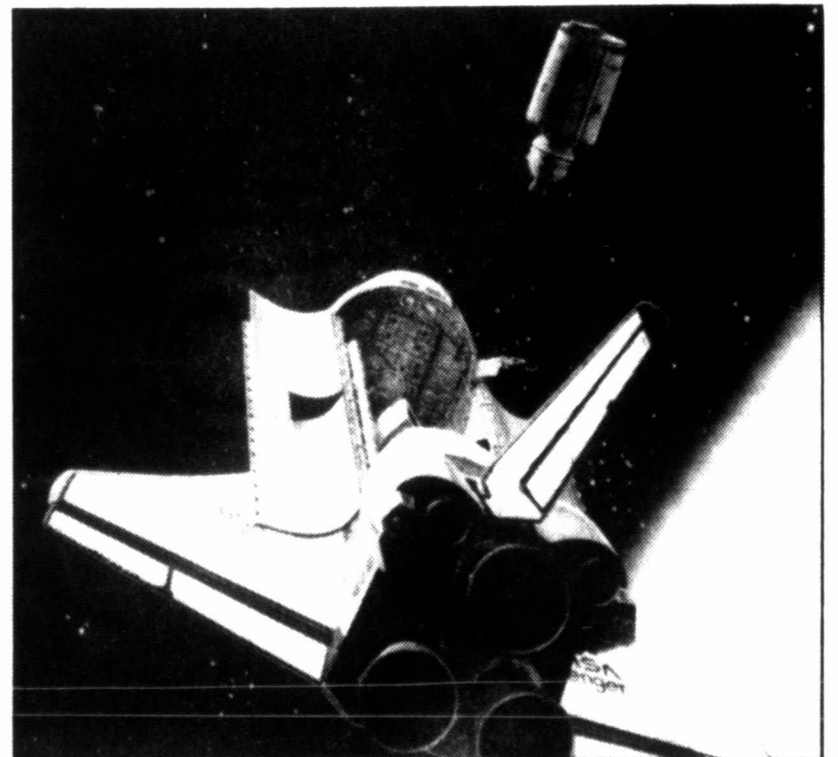

Shuttle astronauts have launched five satellites previously, using the same system.

The shuttle moves eight miles away and turns its underside to the PAM to avoid damage from the rocket blast that comes automatically 45 minutes later. Since the astronauts can't see the firing, the only indication that it is moving as planned comes from telemetry.

On Friday, a ground station thought it had received a signal, but that proved to be false.

Flight controller Randy Stone said NASA checked and rechecked its data and confirmed that the Challenger astronauts were not at fault in the failure of the satellite to move toward an orbit 22,300 miles high. He said mission specialists Ronald McNair and Stewart did "an outstanding job."

NASA's role in the launching was as a trucker, once the satellite and its attached rocket stage were released properly, the agency no longer had responsibility.

Burned youth still listed as critical

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

About 80 percent of a second skin graft has been rejected by the body of Tommy Wheeler, 13-year-old Pampa youth who was severely burned about a month ago, according to his father. "That's more (the rejection) than what the doctors want," his father, firefighter Tom Wheeler, said Saturday morning.

Because of the severity of the burns, Timmy is still listed in critical condition in the Burn Unit of Oklahoma Children's Memorial Hospital in Oklahoma City. However, his nurse said Friday he is doing much better. The doctors expected to take the splints off his hands and arms Saturday, enabling him to take a more active part in his personal care.

"He'll be able to do things such as feed himself," the nurse said. "It is terribly depressing for him when he can't even feed himself," she said.

The youth will be in the hospital a long time waiting for his body to heal, hospital officials say. While he has already received more than a hundred cards and letters from his classmates at school and Sunday School and others, Timmy will continue to need frequent reminders people still care, his dad said.

Anyone wishing to write young Wheeler can do so at this address: Oklahoma Children's Memorial Hospital, Burn Unit, 940 North East 13th, Oklahoma City, Okla. 73126.

Sometimes the youth's pain is so intense he uses a newly learned technique to "take himself away from us so he can't feel the pain," his father said.

One month ago today, Timmy was severely burned when fumes from a cleaning solvent ignited and exploded in the shop where he, his brother, James, and a friend had been working on the friend's car.

James and his friend had opened the door and were pushing the car outside, when apparently the heater came on, igniting the fumes from the solvent.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the Timmy Wheeler Fund may do so by calling Charlie Douthit or Tom Liggett at Central Fire Station in Pampa or Janelle Cochran at First National Bank of Pampa.

Gramm makes a point

Gramm won't criticize president on Lebanon

U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm Saturday said he will not criticize President Reagan's policies in Lebanon in order to help his own campaign for the U.S. Senate and he had sharp words for any of his political foes who might use that tactic.

Gramm, making his second campaign trip to Pampa, reacted to a question about a television commercial that a member of the audience said implied Gramm wanted to keep the U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

"I didn't send them there and I voted to put a time limit on their participation," Gramm said. "But I'm not going to do or say anything to advance myself politically at the expense of the president."

The question apparently referred to a commercial by Rep. Ron Paul, one of Gramm's opponents for the Republican nomination, in which Paul calls for an immediate withdrawal of U.S. Marines from Lebanon.

"There is nobody in America who wants to bring the Marines home more than President Reagan," Gramm maintained. "And I'm not take a stand that would hurt him and help me."

Gramm spoke to a gathering of about 50 persons in the Energas Flame Room during a campaign swing through the Panhandle Saturday.

"This is my second trip to Pampa and the Panhandle. And if you think that shows I consider this area important to my campaign, you are right," he said.

Gramm said he will have a campaign organization which will operate a phone bank here in an effort to win the Republican nomination.

The former Democrat who turned Republican after being punished by his party because of support for the Reagan economic program, reaffirmed that he will work for a balanced budget without new taxes. He called the budget submitted by President Reagan this week "a starting point" and expressed support for the President's call for a bipartisan effort to cut the federal deficit.

Experts disagree on declining deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traffic deaths fell to their lowest level in two decades last year, but highway safety experts disagree over how much of the decline should be attributed to campaigns against drunken driving.

The Transportation Department said 43,028 people died on the nation's highways during 1983, a 2.1 percent drop from the year before, when the number of traffic deaths plummeted by 10 percent.

Last year's drop in traffic deaths came as driving increased, resulting in a decline in the traffic fatality rate to 2.6 fatalities for every 100,000 vehicle miles driven — the lowest rate ever recorded.

"These statistics show clearly that you can save lives by focusing sharply on improved highway safety," Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said in a statement. She concluded that "a national resolve to put a halt to drunken driving" played a major role in the decline.

But other safety officials said that while stronger laws against drunken driving and stricter enforcement resulted in reductions in traffic fatalities in some areas, there is no evidence that they are having a nationwide impact.

"There have been large decreases (in traffic fatalities) in states that did not wage such campaigns, and even in some areas where there have been tough crackdowns the death tolls are going back up again," said William Haddon, president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

Grandstoffs win

and Ray still patrol Berger streets.

The verdict lists the percentage of fault, or blame, for those involved in the cowboy's death. The city shares 89 percent of the blame; the four officers were each 2.5 percent at fault; and Grandstaff himself was at fault to the degree of one percent, the judgment says.

The cowboy was slightly at fault because he failed to identify himself and put his hands up when he stepped from his truck, the jury ruled.

The officers denied at the trial that they had even arrested Grandstaff on the morning he died.

In following the instructions Robinson gave them, the jurors ruled officers did arrest Grandstaff, but it was a lawful arrest because officers thought he was Cox at that time, the verdict says. An emergency existed at the time, the jury decided, but they ruled the Berger officers "did not act as a reasonable peace officer would have acted under the same or similar circumstances." Their use of deadly force against Grandstaff was justified by the Texas Penal Code, but was "reckless, malicious, wanton and oppressive." A reasonable person or police officer involved in a similar situation would not have reacted as the Berger officers did, the verdict says.

The jury decided to punish the officers because of the reckless, though legal, killing. They ordered each officer to pay the family a total of $7,500 in punitive damages. Plaintiffs' lawyer Jan Fox said the officers must pay the total $30,000 in punitive damages from their own pockets. The plaintiffs will demand that the city pay the balance of the $1,400,000 jury award, Fox said.

"Even if a peace officer was justified under the laws of the State of Texas when he used deadly force against James C. Grandstaff, that justification is unavailable as a defense in this lawsuit, if his use of deadly force recklessly killed an innocent third person," Judge Robinson's charge instructed the jurors.

Fox said she expected Robinson to consider the jury award later this week. The federal judge could sign a judgment leaving the jury award as it is, or she could change it.

In addition to the $612,000 awarded Sharon Grandstaff, the defendants were ordered to pay $100,000 to the estate for Grandstaff's pain and suffering prior to his death; $462,000 to Grandstaff's daughter Jo Cheryl, now 10 years old; $206,000 to his father, Joe Henry Grandstaff; and $25,000 each to his stepsons, Robert and Randy Gatlin.

The lawsuit, which alleges violations of Grandstaff's civil rights, asked jurors to award a total of $5 million. The federal suit was filed after a state grand jury declined to indict the officers involved in the shooting death.

The City of Berger carried $500,000 in liability insurance at the time of the shooting. The plaintiffs offered to settle the case last summer for the $500,000 covered by insurance, but the city rejected the offer. After the first week of trial, the city had a change of heart and offered to settle for the $500,000. But with the trial underway, the Grandstaff family then rejected that offer.

Pennzoil loses in battle to block Texaco from taking over Getty

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A federal judge refused Saturday night a Pennzoil Co. request that he block Texaco Inc.'s proposed $10.1 billion takeover of Getty Oil Co. — the largest such attempt in U.S. corporate history.

U.S. District Judge James Ellison said Pennzoil had "failed to show" that it would be damaged by the successful merger of Getty and Texaco.

Pennzoil attorneys said they would appeal the judge's ruling to the 10th

U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

In closing arguments in the six-day hearing, Pennzoil attorney Ted Weiss argued that the company would suffer "immediate and irreparable" damage if the merger were consummated.

Texaco attorney Stephen Axinn called the Pennzoil case "speculative, theoretical and weak."

Pennzoil, an unsuccessful Getty suitor, claimed that the Texaco-Getty deal was anti-competitive and would serve to drive middle-sized companies like Pennzoil out of business. Pennzoil claimed the merger violated antitrust laws.

"It is within the range of illegality as defined by Supreme Court decisions. It's as simple as that," said Pennzoil attorney John Jeffers. "If this merger is permissible, then the barrier to mergers of the same size has been eliminated. This wave of mergers will occur if the antitrust barriers are removed."

The Federal Trade Commission has until Feb. 13 to examine the proposed takeover under a federal antitrust statute.

"The denial of the injunction results in no certain harm to anybody," Axinn said, contending Pennzoil has "a whole army of federal protection" available after a merger is completed.

Robert Miller, president and chief operating officer of the Los Angeles-based Getty Oil Co., testified earlier Saturday that any delay could cost Getty shareholders more than $2 million a day.

Youth meetings slated

A self-help program for youths who want to live chemically-free lives will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the St. Paul's Methodist Church education building, 511 North Hobart.

A meeting for parents of youths who use chemicals is scheduled in the same building as the same time. The sponsoring organization, the Drug and Alcohol Total Education organization, said anonymity will be preserved.

Persons wishing more information may contact Joe Van Zandt, chairman of the organization.

Substance seized in house search

A "saleable amount" of a green leafy substance and a white powdery substance were found when a search warrant was served at a residence in Pampa Thursday night, according to public records.

A search warrant was issued from the office of Precinct 2 Justice of the Peace Office Thursday, Feb. 2. The warrant authorized deputies in the Gray County Sheriff's Department to search the house and land on Duncan Street.

According to the returned warrant, an undetermined amount of "green grassy substance, a white powdery substance, a tray, scales, and 'narcotic paraphernalia' were discovered in the search.

Officials said the suspected narcotics have been sent to a laboratory for analysis. The information will then be presented to the district attorney's office.

The search warrant was issued based on information supplied by an anonymous citizen, who is, according to the authorization, a person of good character known by authorities.

Earl Davis seeking commissioner post

Earl Davis, 55, former local radio personality and now self-employed, filed Friday as a candidate in the Democratic primary for county commissioner, Precinct 1.

Davis, a resident of Pampa for more than 50 years, is currently self-employed as the owner and manager of "Howdy, New Neighbor," a welcome service for newcomers to Pampa. He started with KPND Radio Station in 1959 as announcer and salesman and was advanced to station manager in 1974. After KPND was sold in October, 1981, he accepted a position as sales account executive until June, 1982.

In community service he is a member of the Top o' Texas Kiwanis Club, of which he is the current president. He is a past president of the organization and was twice named Kiwanian of the Year. He is also a past president of the Gray County Retarded Childrens Association. He has served two terms as president of the Friends of the Library and is currently on the board of directors. He also has worked with the March of Dimes and United Way.

"I've served the community in many ways," Davis said. "This (candidacy) is a thought I've had for many years." He said he felt he could not handle the elective position in the past because of his job and work with various organizations, but he now thinks he will "be able to devote the time necessary to being a fulltime commissioner."

Davis said Pampa is the most populated area of the county, yet all current commissioners are from the more rural areas of the county. He feels Pampa should have a representative on the commission.

"I want to represent all the county, not just the rural areas, but Pampa, too," Davis said.

"The most important thing is handling the county's money wisely," he said. "If we have surpluses, why can't we cut taxes?" The 1983 Gray County audit report indicated the county had a balance of nearly $4.6 million on Jan. 1.

"I'm a conservative by nature," Davis said, indicating public money should be spent only after careful consideration of expenses.

He said he hopes "to try to talk to everybody" in the precinct in his election bid. He plans to "make an effort to canvass everybody in Precinct 1" to meet the people personally. "I don't know if it can be done in 90 days, but I'm going to try."

Davis attended Pampa High School and received his high school equivalency certificate in 1947. He served twice in the United States Air Force, receiving honorable discharges in 1947 and 1954. He graduated from the USAF Clerk-Typist School at Warren Air Force Base at Cheyenne, Wyo., in 1950. He enrolled in self-improvement night courses of speech and announcing at New York University in New York City from fall of 1955 to spring of 1956. He also has attended several sales seminars.

He is married to Ruby Winegart Davis, a teacher in the local school system. They live at 1912 Lea in Pampa.

His campaign manager is Georgia Mack. His treasurer is Mrs. Jimmie Kay Williams.

"I've got some good help," Davis said.

He lists his interests as sports, reading and "visiting with people and working for and in the community of Pampa."

New study ordered on offshore toxic incineration

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has appointed a task force to study new possible effects of a proposal to incinerate toxic chemicals aboard special ships at offshore points, an agency official has confirmed.

Jean E. Caufield, a program analyst in the EPA's Office of Planning, Policy and Evaluation, said Friday that the in-depth study was requested by EPA Deputy Administrator Alvin L. Alm because Alm felt that not enough was known about destroying chemicals by incineration.

Ms. Caufield said the study would review the impact of toxic chemical incineration both on land and at sea.

She said it will review the risks and economics of incineration, the capabilities of incineration technology and public acceptance of the idea.

Lewis Crampton, director of the EPA's Office of Management Systems and Evaluation, said, "We're committed to issuing regulations on ocean incineration within the next year." But he said the regulations would not be drawn until the task force has completed its work.

The lack of knowledge of the impact of incineration has been cited by Delaware and Maryland residents and top state officials who have tried to prevent offshore incineration.

The plan has been promoted as a possible way to safely dispose of toxic wastes, avoiding the use of landfills and incineration near population centers.

But at an EPA hearing last April, Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., Rep. Thomas Carper, D-Del., and Mayor Harry Kelley of Ocean City, Md., opposed a plan to designate an incineration site in the Atlantic Ocean about 140 miles off the mouth of the Delaware Bay.

At that time, Biden said he did not have faith in the EPA's technical data on incineration, and he said the agency's environmental impact analysis was "indefensible."

Several EPA officials said they did not know whether the creation of a new task force would postpone an agency decision on the burning of toxic chemicals in the Gulf of Mexico near Brownsville, Texas, by Chemical Waste Management Inc., which made the first formal permit request for use of the new offshore technology.

The News Journal newspapers quoted a source close to the EPA decision who requested anonymity as saying he would be surprised if the EPA made any decision on pending incineration proposals until the new task force's review is complete.

Ms. Caufield said agency officials expect to finish the study by September.

Jack Ravan, the EPA assistant administrator for water, had been expected to make a decision on the Gulf of Mexico application this spring, but he said recently, "We may have to stop what we're doing and re-examine the entire direction we've been taking. It may be time to ask ourselves again, 'What is our policy with regard to the ocean?'"

Biden called the decision to re-examine incineration "a very positive step. Until now, the ocean incineration program has had great momentum at the Environmental Protection Agency in spite of the fact that many questions about it remain unanswered. Hopefully this review will provide a serious examination of those questions."

There are already several land-based toxic incinerators in operation with EPA approval, including one in Texas run by Rollins Environmental Services Inc. of Wilmington.

Tests to be conducted Horses under quarantine

MARLIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Animal Health Commission officials have quarantined nearly 3,800 horses in Falls County while they determine if the animals are diseased.

The agency has come under fire from humane groups for allegedly letting ranchers transport horses with equine infectious anemia, or swamp fever, out of the county.

Last week three TAHC agents — a veterinarian and two regulation compliance officers — looked at more than 5,000 horses and have placed 3,779 of them under quarantine until they can be given a blood test for swamp fever or issued a permit to be slaughtered. The disease does not affect the meat.

But a regulation compliance officer for the agency, Buddy Henderson, told the Marlin Democrat that only 29 of the 30,000 horses transported through the county this year had been infected with swamp fever and all but 19 had been accounted for.

The Fund for Animals of New York and American Horse Protection Association of Washington, D.C., has asked a federal judge to stop shipment of horses to and from the county until tests prove they are healthy.

Groups angered by the deaths of starving and diseased horses in Falls County said more than 1,200 horses have died because of the harsh winter and the collapse of Horses Unlimited, which left ranchers with between $2 million and $5 million worth of horses the company could not buy back.

Horses Unlimited, which brought about 14,000 horses into Falls County during the past nine months, sold horses to ranchers and promised to buy them back later, officials said.

Jerry Owens, executive vice president of the Fund for Animals, accused the Texas Animal Health Commission of failing to stop the shipment of diseased horses into and out of the county, saying many horses have been stricken with swamp fever.

But Henderson said that allegation was exaggerated. He said that of the "thousands of horses that have moved through Falls County as part of the Horses Unlimited operation in approximately a year, a total of 29 animals have shown up as positive reactors to the Coggins test for swamp fever."

"Records have accounted for 10 of these horses. They were shipped to slaughter houses. The present quarantine is a precaution to determine if any of the remaining 19 are still in the county," he said.

Mark Range, a Mart veterinarian who worked for Horses Unlimited has volunteered to let the state agents look through his records of Coggins tests on the horses.

Rented shop sold Last 'old-time' barber gives it up

By BOB DOWNS
Terrell Tribune

TERRELL, Texas (AP) — D.C. Carpenter saw lots of history from the front door of his barber shop here during 53 years.

But he recently retired after the shop he had rented for 40 years was sold to settle an estate.

Carpenter, 74, commuted from his home in Forney, then from Dallas, for 43 of the 53 years he barbered here six days a week.

"I didn't get Monday off like other barbers," he says. "I haven't missed many days — more this year than before," Carpenter says. He "almost choked on a piece of meat," which kept him away for about a week last year. Then during the summer he had to have surgery, which grounded him about five weeks.

Ever since his landlord, Morris Brin, died early this year, Carpenter has been saying he might have to retire at any time. The Brin estate decided to sell the building and Carpenter said he did not think he could relocate and continue barbering. At least, he did not think it would be worth the effort — since he was about ready to retire, anyway.

When Carpenter learned the building with 20-foot ceilings had been sold, he began preparing for retirement.

A few days before retiring, he said he had hoped to work until 1985.

"I hate to leave Terrell and leave my customers but there's nothing I can do because they sold the building out from under me," Carpenter said.

He got his start as a barber in his hometown of Quannah at the age of 17 after completing barber college at Wichita Falls.

Carpenter moved to Terrell in 1931 and began cutting hair with Swords, whom he paid $3 a week for room and board.

In the 1930s, the United States was struggling through the Great Depression. Prices were lower — and so were wages.

Carpenter and Swords were charging 10 cents for a haircut and 15 cents for a shave then.

"Old man Greeby had a hamburger joint on the corner and you could get a nickel hamburger, chili for a dime," Carpenter said. That was in 1932.

He told of once counting 40 wagons near his barber shop, and they were selling "anything you wanted." Many were farmers selling directly to consumers glad to buy fresh fruits, vegetables and meat and perhaps save some money at the same time.

Twelve years after moving to Terrell, Carpenter began working for the late A.A. Marsee in June 1943. Like Swords, Marsee worked as a barber more than 60 years before retiring.

"When we started barbering in Terrell," Carpenter says, "we had 30 barbers and I was the youngest one and the only one that was single."

Carpenter said he has seen a lot of changes in Terrell besides changes in the barber business.

"When I bought the shop (from Marsee), it had four chairs. I sold three. I had no use for three and would have had to pay tax on them. I offered to sell one to the school district for what it was taxed," Carpenter says with a smile, but his offer was not accepted.

He used the same chair for the entire time he owned the barber shop — and it probably already had been broken in pretty well before that.

Boat of dreams sails-in a way

HIGHLAND PARK, Texas (AP) — Bob Stephens had worried and waited for three years to get his yacht off the ground before seeing the weight of his dreams — all 24,000 pounds — sail over his garage, bound for Seattle.

The 39-foot sailboat, which Stephens built in the back yard of his home in the fashionable Dallas suburb, was hoisted by crane Friday onto a truck that will take the craft to the sea.

"It's been skillfully hidden in the back yard since 1981," Stephens said. "We just figured it was time to get the ball rolling and see if my baby would sink or swim."

Crane operator Lonnie Williams, who supervised the boat's first voyage, said the 67-degree weather was perfect for "sailing" it over the garage.

"It's a beautiful day for a residential lift like this," Williams said. "Every once in a while, we get a strange call to lift a boat or something. I've never turned one over yet."

But the move could have a little tense for Stephens and his wife, Elaine Tanner.

Although the $100,000 boat is insured for the trip to Seattle, it could not be covered for any damage sustained in the move over the house and garage, Mrs. Tanner said.

"We try not to think those kind of thoughts," she said.

"because it weighs more than it did when it was hoisted in." Stephens, 42, and Mrs. Tanner, 38, built the boat from a yacht kit acquired from a Canadian manufacturer.

Now more than 90 percent completed, the yacht needs only some exterior work, installation of the mast and some final touchups.

The couple started their boat-building project as a sideline to their homebuilding and real estate business, Tanner-Stephens Intown Homes, Inc.

"We planned to sail away to Australia or some exotic spot and spend our summer vacations on the high seas," Ms. Tanner said. "We bought a (summer) home in Seattle and decided to move the boat there to complete the work. But now we both have our own babies to deal with."

Stephens calls the yacht his "baby." Ms. Tanner has been caring for her 1-year-old son, Tanner Stephens.

The couple plans to christen the craft "Prime Interest" or "Floating Prime" in the spirit of their business.

More than 25 people watched the boat's move from its back yard berth.

"We've been wondering for years how they would get that boat out of here," said a neighbor. "Every time it rained, we just thought they would float it out the backyard."

Prison guards are fired

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — An undisclosed number of high-ranking Texas prison guards have been fired following investigations into the beating of inmates, officials said Saturday.

Rick Hartley of the Texas Department of Corrections said details of the firings would not be discussed until Monday.

Prison Board Chairman Robert D. Gunn said the dismissals stemmed from allegations of brutality outlined in a report to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler.

The report, released in Houston last month, said "high-ranking" prison officers physically abused inmates "with alarming force and frequency."

It also contained 14 of 670 alleged incidents of physical abuse reported to Special Master Vincent Nathan, who was appointed by Justice to monitor sweeping reforms in the prison system.

Gunn said he was uncertain how many officers had lost their jobs and refused to reveal the rank or the prison units where they were employed.

Ex-relative is charged in Dallas bombing death

DALLAS (AP) — A 35-year-old man has been charged with the murder of his former brother-in-law who was killed instantly when a booby-trapped newspaper vending machine exploded as he opened it.

Billy Jeff Cornett, 35, was arraigned at midnight Friday before Criminal District Court Magistrate Charles McClure who set bail at $200,000.

Ward S. Keeton, 60, was killed early on the morning of Jan. 26 as he tried to buy a copy of the Dallas Morning News near his north Dallas apartment, investigators said. Police had at first said he was the victim of a random attack.

But early Thursday, Keeton's former stepson and Cornett's nephew, Marshall Dewayne Williams, 21, turned himself in to police, said Dallas police spokesman Bob Shaw. Shaw said information given by Williams led to Cornett's arrest.

Police say physical evidence links Cornett and Williams, a security guard from Mesquite, to the killing, but say they have established no motive.

Cornett, of League City, was taken into custody in LaMarque later Thursday and was returned to Dallas Friday. He was questioned until 9 p.m. Friday.

Williams, who was being held on a charge of investigation of murder under $50,000, was questioned until early in the morning Saturday but not formally charged.

"At this point we have not filed a case (on Williams) and have not made a final determination if a case will be filed," said police homicide Lt. Ron Waldrop. "Our investigation is continuing."

Neighbors said Keeton went to the Dallas Morning News vending box at about the same time every morning. He was killed at 5:15 a.m., less than half an hour after the box had been filled with papers.

Former community college classmates of Keeton said he had told them two years ago that he worked undercover for the government, infiltrating the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party.

A spokesman for the FBI said Keeton was "known to" the agency but would not elaborate.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Another scandal bites the dust

House Democrats have wisely changed their plans to hold public hearings in the case of President Carter's pilfered debate-briefing papers.

Rep. Donald Albosta, chairman of the subcommittee that has been investigating the affair, said he wanted to avoid the "circus atmosphere" that could develop during the presidential campaign year.

The Michigan Democrat undoubtedly was right that public hearings would have turned into a news media extravaganza. But we suspect there was more than that behind his move to tone it down.

The fact is that "debategate" hasn't developed into anything like the scandal some Democrats had hoped it would.

It has been fairly well established that some of Carter's briefing papers for the 1980 presidential debate did wind up in President Reagan's camp before the debate was held. Less clear is how they got there.

Democratic House Speaker Thomas O'Neill has been leery of a congressional investigation from the beginning. "Briefing book or no briefing book, our candidate was extremely unpopular in the last election," he said last June. It wouldn't be surprising if O'Neill exerted pressure to get the public hearings called off.

It isn't beyond possibility that a public hearing "circus" could have backfired on the Democrats. If nothing substantial were proven, public sympathy might have gone Reagan's way. It also could turn out that the person who passed the papers to Reagan aides was a Democrat disgruntled with his party's candidate.

Instead of holding public hearings, Albosta's subcommittee will ask some of the more than 200 persons who have been interviewed informally to sign sworn statements outlining their testimony.

Once again, the political scandal of June has turned into the minor flap of January.

A way to show real compassion

Sen. John Danforth (R. - Mo.) following his return from Africa, appeared on NBC's "Today Show" and later reported in the Washington Post, showing pictures of people starving in Mozambique. Duplicated in far too many places, it was a graphic depiction of human tragedy. Mothers with empty breasts clutching dying babies. Little children with swollen stomachs sitting quietly, awaiting the inevitable. In such a weakened state they fall easy prey to disease.

Sen. Danforth wants Congress to send $200 million to Mozambique.

For a moment my mind flashed back to my years as a teenager. We were quite poor and part of my responsibility, with my job earnings, was to buy my school lunches. More frequently than I care to admit I blew my lunch money on the weekends and required a bailout from Mom by Wednesday - or sometimes even Monday.

One time I came for the bailout, and Mom replied, "You knew you had to eat lunch on Monday when you were spending on Sunday." Despite my pleading she didn't give me money; I just knew my-Mother was the worst woman on the face of the earth. But I NEVER again blew my lunch money.

Of course, years later I now recognize the compassion and strength of Mother's behavior. It must have been painful to watch me suffer the consequences of my irresponsible behavior. I just hope if I am ever called upon to deliver a similar lesson I will have her guts.

While this irresponsible - teen experience is by no means a one - for - one comparison to that in Mozambique, there's a lesson to be learned. Mozambique's food problem results from what its politicians did to that country's agriculture sector.

Prior to gaining independence in 1975 Mozambique was a Portuguese colony. It was an EXPORTER of agricultural products when President Samora Machel took office in 1975. Machel is a dedicated Marxist who quickly applied bankrupt socialist policy to the agricultural sector. All farmland was declared to be the property of the PEOPLE, which really means the property of the state. Bureaucrats descended on the farms making financial, marketing, and distribution decisions. Even telling farmers what to plant and where to plant it.

Agricultural output fell 75 percent. Production of major cash crops, such as cotton and sisal, fell 50 percent. Mozambique is now an IMPORTER of food, necessitating the import of thousands of tons of grain from South Africa and Romania. In 1981 Mozambique instituted food rationing; and now its people are starving.

Not only did Mozambique destroy its agricultural sector, like many other African nations, its oppressive human rights policy ran its most productive citizens out of the country. At the time of independence, 250,000 Portuguese lived in Mozambique. One year after independence, all but 20,000 had fled. Now there are less than 4,000. With such an exodus, which included other emigrants, Mozambique found itself without a skilled labor force.

If you ask Machel or some other politician about their food problem, they'll blame the drought. But there were droughts before and Mozambique fed its people. The current one merely emphasized a bad system. South Africa has experienced a similar drought, but its people aren't starving, primarily because most land is under private ownership. Private land, as opposed to public land, is virtually always better cared for and more efficiently used.

Sen. Danforth proposed we help. But our help to many poor countries in the form of World Bank loans, International Monetary Fund (IMF) and general foreign aid has sustained government interference in the form of market controls, unjustifiable public works projects, and expropriation of private companies.

Our "help" has created dependency and sustained oppressive regimes that might have otherwise fallen for the good of the people.

Isn't it time we give some truly compassionate help?

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Feb. 5, the 36th day of 1984. There are 330 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Feb. 5, 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt sparked a bitter controversy when he proposed adding six new justices to the Supreme Court.

On this date:
In 1644, Connecticut enacted a law requiring cattle and swine over six months old to be earmarked or branded, with violators fined five shillings - two of the shillings going to the snitch.

In 1861, Samuel Goodale of Cincinnati patented a motion picture peep show machine.

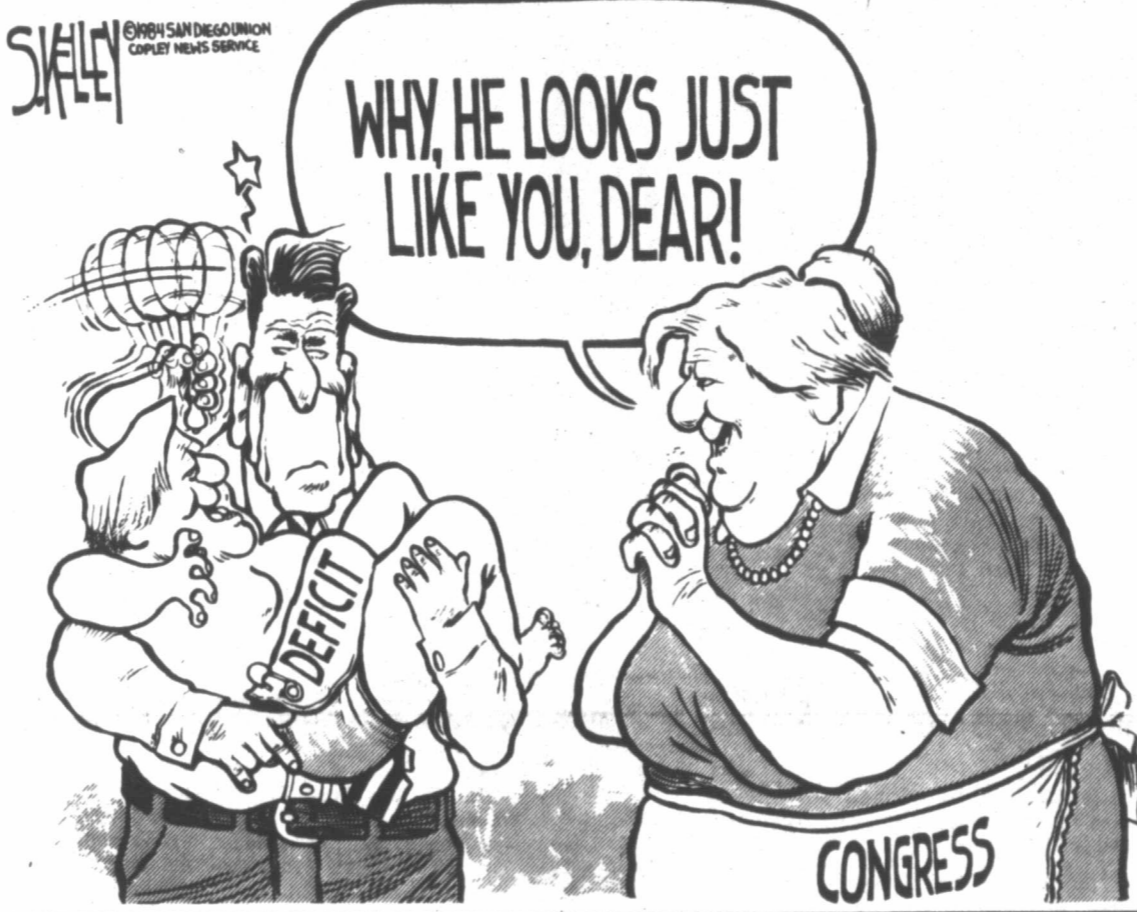

In 1900, the 1952 and 1956 Democratic presidential candidate, Adlai Stevenson, was born in Los Angeles.

In 1901, Edwin Prescott of Arlington, Mass. patented the loop-the-loop roller coaster.

And in 1971, Apollo 14 astronauts Alan Shepard and Edgar Mitchell landed on the moon.

Ten years ago: Pope Paul VI removed exiled Cardinal Joseph Mindszenty from his honorary function as Roman Catholic primate of Hungary.

Five years ago: Hundreds of farmers and their families descended on Washington in tractors, vans and pickup trucks to press their demands for higher price supports.

Why U.S. men look elsewhere

We are seeing an increasing number of ads in magazines offering Asian women as brides for American men.

Mail order marriages are not new. During America's frontier days, before the Civil War, settlers in remote outposts chose brides sight - unseen from professional marriage brokers.

The practice waned in popularity after that - until the women's liberation movement of the 1960s.

Suddenly there were a dozen different services offering long - distance courtship. Today there are fifty rival services.

With all of the beautiful young women in the U.S., why would any man look elsewhere for a bride?

The Wall Street Journal asked around and found "an increasing number of American men feel that American women are too competitive and are not likely to fulfill the role of wife and mother."

A high percentage of the men who seek Asian brides are middle - aged or older, disillusioned and divorced.

A few younger men confess feeling ill - at - ease with assertive Western women.

The one place in the world where subservient women are available is the Philippines. The catalogues of available Asian women list mostly Filipino girls and women, ages 15 to 60.

The Journal finds statistics inconclusive. While the number of visas issued to Asians coming to the U.S. has multiplied in recent years, there is no accurate count of how many are responding to a mail - order courtship.

K - 1 visas specifically require marriage to an American within 90 days. Last year 3,428 of those were issued, a hundred times more than ten years ago.

Subscribers to one of these matchmaking services may pay as little as $5 for a single referral to as much as $360. The latter contract gets the client's name and likeness listed in Asian newspapers and brings him names and snapshots of women from all over Asia.

Some of the catalogues are cheaply produced, tawdry, containing thinly - veiled enticement.

Quote: "My name mean yellow fruit which taste very sweet."

There's no way to backtrack on how many women are exploitative.

The Journal found one Filipino professional woman arrived in the U.S. to discover her husband - to - be was a California podiatrist, already married and planning to keep her as a mistress.

A retired patent attorney from Virginia explained his interest: "American women put themselves on a pedestal, are neglecting us men. It's the same thing as when Detroit keeps turning out bad products; you turn to the Japanese."

End quote.

Soviets can't handle Reagan

NEW YORK (NEA) - In their whole 67 years in power, the men in the Kremlin have never dared risk a free election in the Soviet Union. That may partially explain their fondness for meddling in other countries' elections. It must get pretty lonely up there at the top.

This being a presidential election year in the U.S., we have been singled out as the objects of Moscow's interference in 1984. Last year, you will recall, it was West Germany. When the Soviet Union deployed its IRBMs in 1979, NATO warned that unless the Soviets dismantled their NATO, in late 1983, would deploy its own IRBMs to counter them. Moscow simply ignored the request and opened a four - year propaganda campaign to turn opinion in the NATO countries against the threatened counter - deployment. The climax came last March when West Germany voted resoundingly for Helmut Kohl, who had pledged that the deployment would go forward. In December, sure enough, it did.

With its propaganda campaign a colossal failure and NATO's intermediate - range missiles now facing Russia's own, Moscow broke off its arms control talks with the U.S. and has refused to set a date for their resumption. This is risky in propaganda terms, because it makes it easy for Pres. Reagan to show the world - as he promptly did in his recent television address - precisely who is holding up negotiations on this crucial subject. But Moscow probably thinks (and certainly hopes) that it has bigger fish to fry: By refusing to negotiate at this time, it fondly imagines that it may pressure American voters into ousting Ronald Reagan and giving the Soviet Union Fritz Mondale or some other Democratic to negotiate with.

Probably no conceivable development in 1984 would please the Kremlin as much as the replacement of Ron Reagan by just about anybody else. Prior to his election, the Soviet Union had had its way with a whole series of American presidents. Richard Nixon, with his warmed - over Machiavellianism, was absolutely made for them: They bargained toughly with him, signed the SALT I and anti - ABM treaties - then coolly violated both treaties and laughed up their sleeve when Nixon's business friends refused to break off their lucrative contracts with Moscow as the strategy of retaliatory "linkage" required. Jimmy Carter was even better: As he himself admitted to the late Frank Reynolds of ABC News, Carter never even realized the Soviet Union's "ultimate goals" until Russia invaded Afghanistan in Dec. 1979, just 13 months before the end of his pitiful term.

Then came Ronald Reagan. As discussed above, Moscow's best efforts among the pacifists of the West failed to deter NATO from deploying its own IRBMs when the Soviet Union refused to dismantle its SS - 20s. Worse yet for the Kremlin, Reagan managed to persuade Congress to go ahead with the B - 1 bomber, and to authorize deployment of the MX missiles - steps which, once completed, will just about eliminate the Soviet lead in strategic weaponry. (That lead, of course, was why the Soviet Union was so eager for a nuclear freeze.)

Worst of all, the Soviet Union's habit of encouraging Marxist guerrilla warfare against selected regions of the free world not only ran into unexpected resistance but actually came under effective local counterattack: In Central America, in southern Africa, in Southeast Asia, pro - Soviet forces often found themselves, to their amazement, on the defensive.

Four more years of Ronald Reagan, therefore, is a thought calculated to undermine what little health Yuri Andropov has left. And that is why there are not likely to be any further arms control talks during 1984. The Soviets can afford to wait a year, in the desperate hope that somebody or something will prevent Reagan from being re - elected. They will also be unable to resist letting a waiting world know that they prefer the Democratic candidate - a favor that Mondale, or whoever, would no doubt just as soon do without.

Wall Street taking look at dollar's performance

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street analysts are watching the dollar closely in foreign-exchange markets for possible cues to the future course of stock prices.

Over the last four years the dollar has put on an impressive show of strength, reaching record highs as recently as last month against leading foreign currencies.

In many ways, of course, this performance has been a pleasant change from the dollar's woes in the 1970s, when it got so weak that some analysts feared its days as a world standard were numbered. But as the dollar's recovery progressed, economists say, it became too much of a good thing for many important participants in the U.S. economy.

It did help reduce inflation by pushing down prices of imported goods for domestic consumers. But at the same time, those attractively priced imports represented stiffer competition for companies in this country.

And by raising the price tag on American goods in foreign markets, it hurt sales of many U.S. companies that do a significant portion of their business overseas.

In 1983, the United States had a record $69.4 billion trade deficit.

"The drop in U.S. net exports resulted partly from the earlier and stronger recovery in the United States as compared to that of our major trading partners," economists at the investment firm of Goldman, Sachs & Co. observed in a recent report.

"But market-share analysis suggests that the high foreign exchange-value of the dollar, which makes imports cheap and U.S. exports expensive, is also significantly responsible for the slide in net exports."

Thus, when the dollar took a downward turn in foreign exchange during the past week, it quickly caught stock traders' attention. A flurry of buying quickly showed up in the stocks of international companies like Merck, Pfizer, Johnson & Johnson and Coca-Cola.

That turned out to be the only bright spot in the stock market's fourth straight declining week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 32.97 to 1,197.03, bringing its loss since Jan. 6 to 89.61 points.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index dropped 1.79 to 92.98, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down 7.19 to 213.34.

Big Board volume averaged 108.83 million shares a day, against 102.67 million the day before.

There was much noisy disagreement over whether the dollar's drop in recent days marked any sort of turning point, or was merely a temporary pause in its long climb.

HONORED—Jeff D. Bearden, general agent in Pampa for Franklin Life Insurance Company, has been named to the firm's $100,000 plus club. His selection was based on personal sales for a month, which provided his clients with more than $100,000 in permanent life insurance protection. Presentation of the award will be made by Franklin President William J. Alley, CLU.

Old theater new center for young

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

The days of drug stores as the center for activities for students have long gone by. Today students look for video machines, pool, foosball - and a snack bar instead of food counter. But the old standby, the jukebox, still retains its popularity.

Seeking to establish a place for young people in town to gather without having to worry about the presence of alcoholic beverages and rowdy older people, Kinard Theatres, Inc., owner of the local Cinema 4 and Top o' Texas Drive-In, has purchased the old Capri Theater and turned it into a center of activities for youth.

"The whole concept was to give them (students) a place to go, to keep them off the streets," said Jerry Norrod, manager of the new The Cave Arcade, 300 N. Cuyler. He also manages the local movie theatre and drive-in.

The arcade currently has five pool tables, about 25 video machines and a foosball table. In addition, there is a snack bar, with food items ranging from candy to hamburgers to chicken.

Young people in town, from late grade school to those nearing 30, have already made it an often crowded place at night, with the junior high and high school students making the largest part of the crowds on weekends.

Norrod said future plans will expand the rounds of activities available. Pool tournaments are held currently on Thursday nights. Soon a couples pool tournament series will be held on Tuesdays. Foosball tournaments will be conducted later with the arrival of another table.

Recent remodeling, at a cost of about $35,000, concerned only about the front third of the building. A new room was constructed, new walls were reformed with wire and shaped stucco glistening with glitter to give a fantasy cave-like appearance. A new sign only a few days old was placed recently on the front of the building.

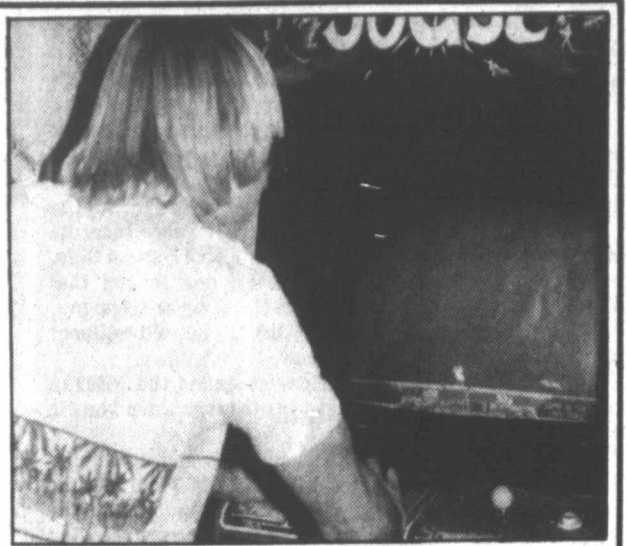

Further plans call for new construction to add additional room. More pool tables and some sit-down machines will be added. A dance floor area will be enlarged to allow for the scheduling of dances. Norrod said plans also include a 300-seat concert area for live concerts.

The place needs no publicity, already attracting as many as 100 people on some nights, Norrod said. While most of the customers are junior and high school age, some young people up into their late 20s, and a few older, come in to play pool and try the video games. Some downtown businessmen come in during lunch to use their quarters in the machines or even to eat.

The video machines are rotated regularly, some on a weekly basis. "to keep up with the latest games," Norrod said. Popular games now include the laser-disc Dragon Slayer and Mach 3. Others are standards, such as Pac Man, Centipede, Galaxia, Dig Dug, Q-Bert, the Crystal Cave and Star Wars.

The most popular now is the Track and Field game, with weekly and monthly trophies given to the highest scorers in the game which duplicates track and field events.

The juke box seems to be going constantly at night, with the latest rock and pop songs playing, a few older ones available.

QUARTERS FUN - Robert McCoy, Pampa High School student, tensely anticipates his move to avoid losing his jouster to a flying monster as he plays the video game Joust at The Cave Arcade. Norrod said he is hoping the place will become one where students can come and have a good time without having to worry about the behavior of others too much. He hopes eventually more families will come in together.

"It's important to us. We want to have a place where kids can go, a place where families can come," he said.

Rules posted inside the front door indicate the kind of behavior expected in the establishment. No alcoholic beverages are allowed, no outside drinks may be brought in. Rules also prohibit fighting and loud profanity. While smoking is allowed, cigarettes may not be laid on pool tables and machines. In addition, no chewing, spitting or dipping snuff is permitted.

Two fulltime employees are on hand during the hours of operation, Norrod said. One mans the snack bar while the other patrols the place about every five minutes to check on observance of the rules and to keep the place clean. In addition, police drop by at night to check on activities. Several off-duty policemen visit the place in plainclothes to be on hand in case anything gets out of hand.

"As a general rule, I would say we've had very few problems," Norrod said. Anyone caught using alcoholic beverages or drugs or creating a bothersome disturbance "is barred on a permanent basis," he stated. Several persons have already faced that action.

While the place is aimed generally at students, Norrod is concerned that it does not become a place for students to hang out while school is in session. "We try to discourage school kids from coming in during school hours," he said. "They don't need to be skipping school." If a student shows up when the employees know school is meeting, they may ask the student to leave, Norrod said.

The Cave is open from 10 a.m. to midnight Monday through Thursday (closing at 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday). On Sunday it operates from 12:30 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Deficit continues to cause concern

NEW YORK (AP) — As signs of economic expansion continued to surface, there also were clear reminders this past week that more than a year of growth has failed to cure a big headache — a huge federal budget deficit for the foreseeable future.

Seminar slated on oil, gas tax

The Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association will sponsor an oil and gas property tax seminar from 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 10, at the Amarillo Hilton.

President Reagan presented Congress with a budget plan that projects a deficit of in the neighborhood of $180 billion a year through 1987. Some private forecasters estimate the deficit will grow to more than $250 billion by the end of the decade.

Troy Sloan, a registered professional appraiser from Spearman and an instructor with the State Property Tax Board will conduct the seminar, which is designed to help prepare producers and royalty owners for the rendering of their 1984 property taxes.

If that was not a clear enough signal of the size of the problem, the Treasury Department provided further evidence, announcing plans for a record week of borrowing. The government scheduled the sale of $12.8 billion in short-term bills for Monday and $16.25 billion in notes and bonds over the following three days.

The seminar is open to the general public at no cost. However, cost of the luncheon is $9.

Concern over large and persistent deficits is not new, and not even a record $195.4 billion in red ink in the previous fiscal year derailed the economy's rebound from a punishing recession.

Individuals wishing to pre-register have been asked to contact the PPROA office by calling 352-5637 by Feb. 8.

Area pipeline changes name

DETROIT — American Natural Resources Company, which has a pipeline near Miami, Texas, has announced it has changed the name of its gas pipeline subsidiary.

As of Jan. 1, Michigan Wisconsin Pipe Line Co., which sells natural gas to 51 utility customers in nine Midwestern states, has become ANR Pipeline Co.

Backpack idea two decades old

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Buck Rogers-like rocket pack that astronauts test this week in space began as an idea in the mind of a young engineer more than two decades ago.

In 1961, three years before an American had taken the first hesitant steps outside of an orbiting spacecraft, Charles E. Whitsett Jr. already was thinking of how man could one day fly in limitless space without wings or tethers.

Whitsett, then a young officer at the Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio, researched the idea for his master's degree and that started him on a two-decade project of testing and design.

"It looked like it could be done," the 47-year-old engineer said. "We just had to figure out how."

By 1971, he had designed a device called the M509, a backpack that used nitrogen gas jets to move astronauts in weightlessness.

NASA placed the device aboard Skylab and during the course of those three long term flights in 1973 and 1974 the flight pack was tested by five astronauts inside the pressurized cabin of the Skylab. Each astronaut reported the device took little effort to learn and that it could be precisely controlled.

Whitsett left the Air Force in 1977 and NASA hired him to further develop the rocket belt for use by shuttle astronauts.

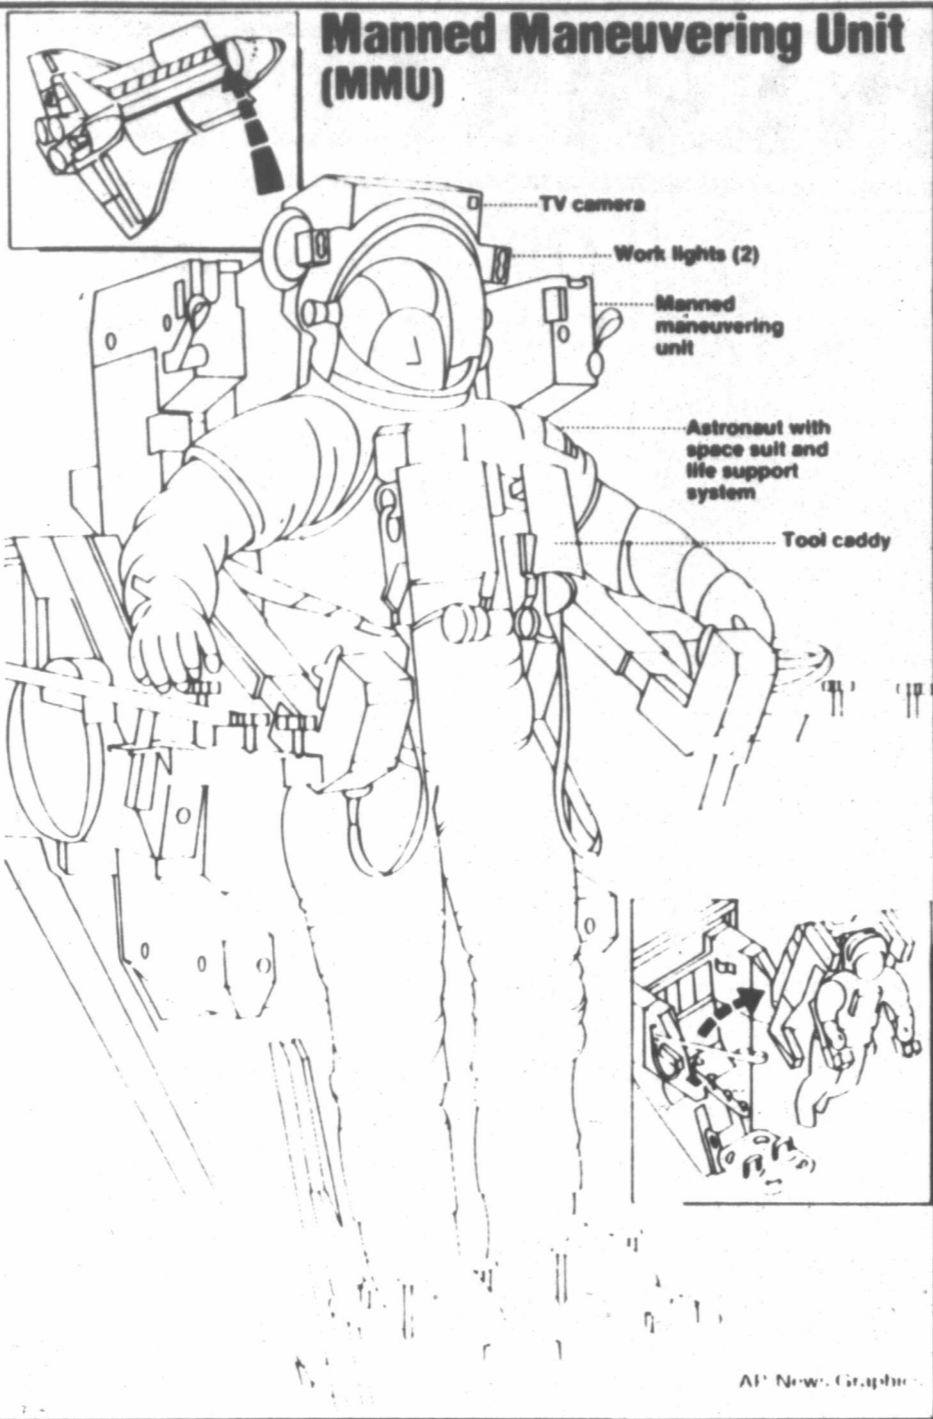

The result is a backboard-like contraption with arms called the Manned Maneuvering Unit. A space-suited astronaut in orbit has but to attach his suit to locking points on the MMU to be able to precisely glide around space with no connection to the space shuttle.

Nitrogen gas fired through 24 jet thrusters provide the propulsion. The jets are controlled with levers on each of the two arms of the MMU.

With his right hand, the astronaut operates controls that can send him spinning, tumbling or cartwheeling. With his left hand, the astronaut controls straight line movement forward-back, up-down, or left-right.

A minicomputer teamed with a gyroscope on the backpack can automatically fire the jets to hold the astronaut in one position. This will enable an astronaut to do work in space with both hands free while being held relatively motionless.

Whitsett said the automatic hold is essential for the first major job of the MMU. Next April, an astronaut in the device will fly from the space shuttle to the broken Solar Maximum Satellite that is gently rolling in orbit.

Feud boils over

Reagan team split on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan unveiled his deficit-swollen blueprint for the 1985 budget last week, but in no time at all some of his key advisers made it clear the Reagan team didn't have its heart in it.

Even the president seemed to be shying away from the budget and its enormous deficits projected years into the future. He described the red ink as "totally unacceptable" but said he wouldn't offer a solution until next year — after the election.

And, a long-simmering feud between presidential economist Martin Feldstein and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan boiled over, with Regan contending, "I support this budget; apparently he doesn't."

The result is a sense of confusion — within the administration and in Congress, on Wall Street and on Main Street — over the newly released budget and whether it is even meant to be taken seriously.

The problem is seen as stemming from the administration's growing frustration with the deficits and, perhaps more important, its distaste for politically risky steps to tackle the problem in an election year.

"There is disarray in the administration," said Thomas Thomson, chief economist for San Francisco's Crocker National Bank. "No one — in the administration or in Congress — can afford to make the tough decisions this year" to reduce the deficits, he added.

Indeed, Reagan acknowledged in the White House's economic report to Congress that political considerations played a part in the fresh budget plan for the fiscal year that starts on Oct. 1.

He noted Congress' unwillingness to accept his previous fiscal guides and said it was "clear to me that we must wait until after this year's election to enact spending reductions coupled with tax simplification that will eventually eliminate our budget deficit."

Even before the unveiling of the budget plan, the president called on Congress to join the administration in bipartisan negotiations to try to fashion a $100 billion "downpayment" over three years to wash away some of the red ink. The deficit hit a record $195.4 billion in 1983 and it's projected at $180.4 billion in the 1985 budget plan.

Both current and former government officials agreed it was unusual for a president to call — in advance of the release of his budget proposal — for negotiations with congressional leaders to try to change the blueprint.

"In the Carter administration, we waited at least two months before we jumped our own budget," said Charles Schultze, who chaired Carter's Council of Economic Advisers.

Administration officials defended Reagan's decision, saying he's trying a new tack to get Congress to trim the deficits since the more ambitious budget plans of previous years got short shrift.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The president's budget is the president's budget and will continue to be."

Even so, the lack of enthusiasm for the new plan was in striking contrast to the messages of strong support that administration officials usually carry to Congress.

Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said of the new plan, "The budget is not what we want to see happen in 1985."

He added, "We're going to have to have additional tax revenues; we're going to have to trim back on the size of the defense authorization; and we're going to have to have domestic spending cuts."

Budget director David Stockman said the defense request "isn't chiseled in stone." But Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the Pentagon's $305 billion authorization — up about 18 percent from this year's estimated total — "is necessary."

The show before Congress prompted one Democrat, Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin, to remark, "I've never seen a budget that was being run away from by so many people in my life."

Regan, questioned about the new Economic Report of the President, put together by Feldstein, said, "As far as I'm concerned, you can throw it away."

Demos soften language in Lebanon resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats on the House Foreign Affairs Committee have agreed to remove language directly critical of the Reagan administration from a draft resolution urging withdrawal of the Marines from Beirut, a key member of the panel said Saturday.

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., said the Democratic committee members also had agreed to insert language endorsing the continued presence of the Sixth Fleet offshore and asserting that Syria bears main responsibility for the failure to reach an accord in Lebanon.

The changes are intended to "broaden the base of support for the resolution," which is set to go before the full committee for a vote next week, Solarz said.

At the same time, the resolution would continue to call for "prompt and orderly withdrawal" of the Marines, based at Beirut's airport as part of a multinational peacekeeping force.

President Reagan, when asked about the Lebanon resolution, told reporters Wednesday: "I'm not going to pay any attention to it."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., contended that "we tried to build a bipartisan policy, but when it fails we have a responsibility to speak out against it."

Although the resolution would not carry the force of law, it would demonstrate a reversal of congressional sentiment from last fall, when both the Democrat-run House and the Republican-led Senate voted to allow Reagan to keep the Marines in Beirut through mid-April of 1985.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., chairman of Reagan's re-election campaign, said Saturday congressional Democrats were "playing a dangerous game" by pushing for prompt withdrawal of the Marines.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesia (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

MARKS OF IDENTITY

Beloved, now are we children of God, and it is not yet made manifest what we shall be. We know that, if he shall be manifested, we shall be like him; for we shall see him even as he is. (1 John 3:2) A person's physical appearance is not changed when he is "born again" into the kingdom of God. Yet, there is a distinctive difference in the individual. The Christians at Rome had "obeyed from the heart" and, consequently, were "servants of righteousness" Romans 6:17, 18). But their physical appearance were unchanged. The difference was in their "hearts" or minds, and thus their lives were different.

That which distinguishes the Christian from his past and the world of sin is his attitude and way of life. No longer does he engage in the things which used to be his pursuit (cf. 1 Peter 4:3-5). After conversion the child of God is different and bears the characteristics of his heavenly Father. He has "been begotten again - through the word of God" (1 Peter 1:23.) Therefore his identification marks are in the word of God.

Peter explains that baptism is not for the purpose of cleansing the flesh, or a physical bath (1 Peter 3:21) Baptism, like repentance, is in order to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38.) Thus, Saul of Tarsus was told to "arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name" (Acts 22:16.) Nothing was changed in his physical makeup, yet he was a different man after his conversion.

In every account of New Testament conversion, people heard, believed, and obeyed the gospel of Christ. This marked them as children of God and distinguished them from the children of the Devil (1 John 3:1-10.) "Wherefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature: the old things are passed away; behold, they are become new." (2 Corinthians 5:17.)

Republicans take aim at Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — One week into Ronald Reagan's re-election campaign, the president and his allies are assuming their Democratic opponent will be Walter F. Mondale and are doing their best to label him an over-promising big spender.

Justifying the Reagan campaign's assumption that he is the likeliest opponent, Mondale easily outdistanced his rivals in winning the support of House members' chosen delegates to the 1984 nominating convention last week, picked up new endorsements and lengthened his financial edge over his Democratic rivals.

"At midweek, Reagan sent his $925.5 billion budget to Congress and Democrats were quick to criticize him for overspending on defense and proposing deficits approaching $200 billion.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. called the $305 billion request for the Pentagon "ridiculous."

Republicans lost no time sharpening their attacks on Mondale.

Reagan set the attack theme in an interview timed to coincide with his re-election announcement Sunday night.

He said Mondale has "tried to be all things to all people and I think he's made more promises than probably can possibly be kept."

Referring to the former vice president as "the assumed Democratic candidate," Reagan campaign director Edward J. Rollins told the Republican National Committee on Friday:

"The Mondale machine is better than the man, the campaign is stronger than the candidate. Front-runner Mondale doesn't need to pass around the money of ward politics to hold together the special interests, he has passed around promises."

Another theme of GOP attacks on Mondale was to link him to Jimmy Carter. GOP chairman Frank Fahrenkopf, addressing the Republican National Committee, asked, "Do you remember getting that sick feeling in the pit of your stomach when you saw our fellow citizens, bound and blindfolded in Iran, as the Carter-Mondale team stood helpless, unwilling and unable to act."

The president ended any remaining suspense about his political plans in a paid political broadcast Sunday night in which he declared that "our work is not finished" and said he and Vice President George Bush would seek four more years in office.

Hours later, the president said he liked the idea of debating his Democratic opponent next fall and defended his tax cut program as "fair."

In addition to winning the backing of 76 of the 146 convention delegates chosen from House Democrats, Mondale also picked up the endorsement of O'Neill.

Democrats please feminist

BOSTON (AP) — Although the winner may be in dispute, the fact that six Democrats met for a debate on women's issues proves that President Reagan's policies are "making the Democratic party much more responsive to the needs of women," a feminist leader says.

The six candidates at Emmanuel College on Friday night agreed on some major issues: the need for a nuclear freeze, support for the Equal Rights amendment, support for legalized abortion and opposition to many of the social spending cuts outlined in Reagan's new budget.

Their liveliest exchange was over which candidate had the greatest number of female advisers in key staff jobs. "That's false. I have," Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., asserted when former Vice President Walter F. Mondale laid claim to the best record. "I'll put my women against yours any day."

Kathy Wilson, a Republican who is chairwoman of the National Women's Political Caucus, said she believed Jesse Jackson and Gary Hart were most effective in the debate.

"My own assessment is Jesse Jackson did well in his commitment to a woman for vice president. I think Gary Hart did well. There is no question that he is reaching out for the woman's vote in a more astute manner."

Ms. Wilson said Reagan and the Republican Party are the losers.

Mild weather aids farmers' land preparation

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Land preparation moved into high gear in many parts of Texas at midweek as farmers took advantage of milder, drying weather in an attempt to regain time lost to freezes and continuing rain.

Field operations were halted, however, in many Coastal, South Central and South Texas areas as rains brought additional moisture through the early part of the week. The rains hampered livestock feeding operations and wet pasture roads worsened under the pressure of vehicles hauling large round hay bales to cattle and horses in those areas, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The stocker cattle industry in the Upper Coast district suffered thousands of dollars in damages from the cold, continuing wet weather, stocker cattle operators have estimated. Throughout the state, livestock owners are continuing their heavy feeding schedules of hay and protein for their stock, and these demanding schedules are increasing feed costs and depleting existing hay supplies, particularly in the North Central and Central portions of the state, said Carpenter.

Disease pressure on onion and vegetable crops in the Rio Grande Valley also have been increased by the continuing cold, wet weather. Peppers and tomatoes have been planted in the Valley as weather permitted, and the sugarcane harvest is past the halfway mark there.

In the Winter Garden area of Southwest Texas, some wheat, onion, and spinach crops are starting to recover from the December freeze. The spinach harvest, however, has above average yields as a result of freeze damage.

Shortage of livestock water continues to be a problem in Central Texas, where some oat fields are being plowed up due to winter-kill. Most wheat pastures throughout the state are responding to recent milder temperatures.

The onion harvest in Far West Texas is at the halfway mark and some improvement is noted in wheat and native pastures there.

Nurseries in the Dallas area lost from 75-95 percent of their plant stocks from the freeze, and many plants not killed outright were severely damaged.

Reports from District Extension directors showed these mid-week conditions:

PANHANDLE: Range cattle feeding is still prevalent, and most cattle are in good to fair condition. Wheat crop is still dormant, but warmer weather is bringing some improvement. Snows of the past week have melted, but soil moisture remains short to adequate. Land preparation has resumed for seeding of spring crops.

SOUTH PLAINS: Land preparation activities moved into high gear throughout the district this week, boosted by warmer temperatures. All remaining crops have been harvested. Where moisture is adequate, wheat is making some recovery. Warmer weather has also reduced some of the supplemental feeding needs for area livestock.

ROLLING PLAINS: Clear, open weather allowed farmers to resume land preparation activities and has brought some improvement to small grain crops. Supplemental feeding of livestock is a regular activity. Gardeners have begun soil preparation for spring planting, and onion planting is under way in Wichita County.

NORTH CENTRAL: Supplemental feeding of livestock continues, with some hay shortage reported. Nurseries in Dallas area lost from 75-95 percent of their plant stock, and many plants not killed outright were damaged. Some pecan trees also may be damaged by the low temperatures. Most vegetables were killed by the freeze.

NORTHEAST: Shortages of hay for livestock feeding are being reported, with prices advancing when it is available. Livestock producers and nurserymen note that the winter has been very hard and expensive thus far for their operation. Market numbers increasing for livestock, with their condition declining in many areas.

FAR WEST: Wheat showing some recovery after the freeze, and ranges and pastures are starting to respond to the milder temperatures. The onion harvest has reached the halfway mark in some areas. Adequate moisture reported in much of district.

WEST CENTRAL: Warmer weather has stimulated some growth for ranges, pastures and small grain crops, yet most livestock are still being maintained by heavy supplemental feeding schedules. Considerable cold damage has resulted to young pecan and fruit trees, shrubs and St. Augustine grass in some areas.

CENTRAL: Some severely freeze-damaged oat fields will be plowed up, but most wheat fields are responding to the warmer temperatures. Shortage of stock water is still a problem in many areas, and heavy supplemental feeding continues for livestock. Cattle markets are reported stronger.

EAST: Land preparation and planting of onions, cabbage and other cole crops under way in upper counties of the district. Adequate to surplus moisture is reported, allowing some winter pastures to begin recovery from December freeze. Livestock mostly in poor to fair condition with supplemental feeding continuing. Some peach orchard owners are pruning and spraying with dormant oil.

UPPER COAST: Additional rain this week increased the already adequate moisture level in the district. The stocker cattle industry suffered thousands of dollars in damages from the December freeze and continuing cold, wet weather according to assessments from operators. Wheat and oat crops are making slow recovery from the freezes, and cattle feeding continues heavy.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Moisture ranges from adequate to surplus in the district, and was boosted by additional rain this week. Some oat fields are recovering from the December freeze, and wheat is in good to fair condition. Heavy feeding of livestock continues although it has been made more difficult by very wet pasture roads, which have hampered delivery of large round bales, in particular.

SOUTHWEST: Some light drizzle was received, but much of the area remains dry. In the Winter Garden area, wheat, onion and spinach crops are starting to recover from the December freeze, and spinach harvesting has resumed with above average yields being reported. Hand harvesting of carrots continues and vegetable processing plants will initiate operations soon. Ranchers continue to provide heavy supplemental feed for their herds.

COASTAL BEND: Light rains have continued and wet fields have delayed land preparation. Hay supplies remain adequate, although ranchers are providing heavy supplementation of hay and protein for their cattle and horses. Pastures and ranges are in poor condition. Some oat fields are starting to show progress after the freeze. The calving season is continuing.

SOUTH: With more rain this week, the South District has adequate to surplus moisture. The damp, overcast days have increased disease pressure on onions and vegetable crops, but have halted irrigation. Although interrupted by wet fields, the harvest of sugarcane is now past the halfway mark in the Rio Grande Valley. Peppers and tomatoes have been planted there as weather conditions have allowed. Supplemental feeding of livestock continues, since all range grasses are dormant.

Soil fertility meeting in Wheeler Monday

WHEELER — Wheeler County agriculture producers will have an opportunity Monday to obtain answers to many of their questions concerning soil fertility.

Pennington will also discuss the results of fertility demonstrations on lovegrass and a native hay meadow. Cooperators who conducted these demonstrations will have comments on value of fertilizer under their conditions.

Pennington has been director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service Soil Testing Lab at Lubbock for the past seven years, according to Eddie George, chairman of the agriculture committee. During his tenure at Lubbock, Pennington has continually upgraded the soil testing and recommendation procedures.

George said the meeting should be of great benefit to all producers.

LOWER YOUR ESTATE TAXES

A two-day seminar on estate taxes will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Rustic Inn Restaurant meeting room in Pampa. The program begins at 9 a.m. each day and will adjourn around 4:30 p.m.

Registration fee is $10, which includes both noon meals, refreshments and materials. Pre-registration is needed by Monday at the Gray County Extension office, call 669-7429 or come by.

The information discussed during this in-depth, two-day seminar is very valuable. This type of program and advice would ordinarily cost much more.

Dr. Wayne Hayenga, extension agronomist, has a unique background, raised on a farm and still involved in its management, degrees in Ag Economics and a licensed Texas attorney. He understands farm operations, estates and tax burdens. The program covers many different ways to lower estate taxes.

This seminar is sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Gray County Program Building Committee.

SPRING BARLEY POSSIBILITIES

Spring barley can be a profitable catch crop. Last year research showed that spring barley yielded from 53 to 66 bushels per acre with two or three irrigations. Profits above expenses and rent ranged from $2 to $20 per acre.

Tokak and Lud barley were planted at 90 pounds per acre on March 2, 1983, and emergence irrigation of 3.5 inches per acre was applied on March 11. In addition, a four-inch irrigation was applied at the boot stage on May 26 to both varieties. Half of each variety received an additional irrigation at heading on June 9.

It was a dry season and rainfall from March to June was 60 percent less than average. However, snowfall during the winter was almost a record high.

An all expense paid trip to New York may be at your finger tips! How? Well, to begin with, you must enter the McCall's Pattern Co. Sew 'N Show Contest.

If you are 18 years old or younger, you may enter by sewing for yourself an apparel garment, home decorating item or craft using any McCall Pattern from the current McCall catalog. You must also use a fabric which contains a minimum of 50 percent Kodel polyester.

Prizes will consist of an all-expense paid trip to New York City for the four national winners and their chaperones. The tour will include modeling for the pattern catalog, sightseeing, a Broadway show, dining in famous New York restaurants and visits to McCall Patterns and Eastman Chemical.

Reagan's budget rings co-op alarm

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group representing rural power cooperatives has reacted with high-voltage alarm over a plan in President Reagan's proposed budget to trim the financial wings of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Under Reagan's budget plan sent to Congress this week, the REA — an agency of the Agriculture Department — would have its electric and telephone loan guarantees trimmed sharply in the fiscal year that will begin on Oct. 1.

The electric loan program, for example, would be cut to a loan volume of $1.7 billion from nearly $4.1 billion this fiscal year. Telephone loans, a relatively small part of the REA's operation, would be cut to $200 million from $375.3 million this year.

Robert D. Partridge, executive vice president of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, said the Reagan budget proposal, if implemented, would "deal a death blow to the rural electrification program as an essential instrument" for helping rural America achieve economic growth.

The Washington-based association represents about 1,000 rural electric systems, serving an estimated 25 million people in 46 states.

Partridge also criticized the White House's plan to boost interest rates on loans that rural electric systems get through the REA's revolving fund.

According to a USDA budget paper, the administration plans to seek new legislation for comprehensive revisions in the REA's operations, including higher interest rates on "insured" loans made directly by the agency, and a user's fee to cover all the administrative costs of making loans available.

Partridge said that under the Reagan proposal, loans now made at 5 percent would be raised to 8 percent. He said the REA's revolving fund would be cut by $100 million, and that the agency's operating budget would be cut by $50 million.

LANDSCAPE PLANTS SUFFER FROM FRIGID WEATHER

Landscape plants suffered damages to varying degrees from the cold weather that has plagued our area this winter.

However, it's still too early to predict the overall extent of the damage.

Much of the damage to broadleaved evergreens appears to be foliage burn. These leaves will look bad until new growth comes out this spring. Homeowners will probably have to replace many of the more tender plants. Examine the base of the canes or trunk. If the bark is split and peeling, the plant probably is not salvageable.

Delay any pruning of damaged wood until March or early April. Buds should be swelling and showing signs of growth by then, making it easier to distinguish damaged tissue.

Fertilize any freeze-damaged trees and shrubs late in March to help promote new growth and healing of damaged tissue. Broadcast a high nitrogen-type fertilizer beneath the branch spread of the plant and three to six feet beyond. Apply at the rate of two pounds of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet and water in thoroughly.

It is essential to provide adequate moisture to cold-damaged plants to prevent moisture stress. So supplemental irrigation will be needed during any dry period throughout the spring and summer.

CONTAINER PLANTS NEED PROPER WATERING

Improper watering is probably the most frequent cause of failure with container plants, whether indoors or on the patio.

Over-watering causes more damage than under-watering. Too-wet soil damages plant roots and causes upper leaves to turn light green or yellowish and die.

Before watering, make sure soil is completely dry at the surface, particularly with large containers where roots in the bottom of the pot may still be moist enough to grow.

Since soil in a clay pot will dry more rapidly than in a plastic or metal one, let the soil become "dusty-dry" at the surface before watering plants in non-clay pots.

When the soil is dry enough to water, wet the entire soil mass and allow the excess water to drain out.

For containers with no drainage, watering becomes an art. A container that holds one quart of soil will probably require one-half pint of water to adequately moisten it without waterlogging the roots. Use only distilled water or rain water for plants in containers with no drainages.

Larger containers with no drainage present more problems. I suggest placing a 3/8-inch copper tube into the soil when planting so that one end extends to the bottom of the container and the other end is above the soil. This allows use of a dipstick to check the water level. A baster such as used in cooking can be used to draw out excess water.

Saucers used under pots to catch excess water should be emptied to keep the soil from becoming waterlogged and to prevent accumulation of soluble salts in the soil.

Wheeler girls clinch district championship

WHEELER—Wheeler girls wrapped up the District 4-1A championship Friday night with a lopsided 69-30 win over Mobeetie.

The Lady Mustangs controlled the boards and used fast break layups to speed to a 41-18 halftime advantage.

"We started off kind of slow, but then we came alive the second quarter," said Wheeler Head Coach Jan Newland.

Mobeetie, playing without injured James Batton, a 6-0 senior, couldn't stop the taller Wheeler girls inside.

Melony Williams led Wheeler's balanced scoring attack with 14 points, followed by Christy Pierce with 12, Renee Hogue and Marlo Hartman 10 apiece.

and Shawna Hampton nine.

Tina Densberger led Mobeetie with 16 points and Lori Collins chipped in six.

Wheeler, 7-0 in district play and 20-2 overall, is expected to play Groom on Feb. 17 in bi-district playoffs.

"We'll try and have a couple of warmup games before then," said Newland.

Wheeler, tied with Kelton for the 4-1A boys' lead, rolled to a 71-22 win over Mobeetie.

Paul Hartman led the Mustangs with 16 points, while Ronnie Jones and Steven Smith added 14 apiece.

Jimmy McDaniel had eight points for the Hornets, while Dennis Stuart and Kent McLaughlin had six points each.

White Deer cagers split loop games with Sunray

SUNRAY—White Deer posted a 58-55 win over Sunray in a District 1-2A boys' game Friday night.

The Bucks held off Sunray in the second half after owning a 34-28 halftime lead.

Darren Russell paced the Bucks with 20 points while Kent Howell contributed 14.

Robert Washburn was Sunray's top scorer with 21 points.

Sunray won a 46-44 squeaker in the girls' game.

Kim Moore's 18 points paced Sunray.

Tina Ford had 20 points for White Deer in the losing effort. Tina Ford followed with 10.

Arkansas crushes Baylor

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Reserve Darryl Bedford led a second-half explosion as Arkansas snapped a two-game losing streak by crushing Baylor 63-44 in a Southwest Conference basketball game Saturday.

The Arkansas Razorbacks improved their record to 16-4 overall and 7-1 in the league. Baylor fell to 5-15 and 1-8.

Bedford, who did not play in the first half, scored seven consecutive points in less than one minute as Arkansas pulled away to a 21-point lead, 53-32, late in the game.

Senior guard Ricky Norton led Arkansas in scoring with 16 points while handing out seven assists. Forward Charles Balentine added 12 points for the Razorbacks.

Baylor freshman guard DeWayne Brown led all scorers with 17 points. Teammate Russ Capps, a guard, added 10 points.

Joe Kleine, Arkansas' 6-foot-11 center, had 12 rebounds in the game after grabbing only one in the first half. Kleine opened the game with a three-point play but was held scoreless for the next 25 minutes. He finishing with six points.

The Razorbacks forced Baylor into 27 turnovers, 17 in the first half. Guard Dave Reichert of the Bears had 12 of those.

Bedford said he is playing better than he did earlier in the season. "People don't really think I can score," he said, "but when Joe leads the game, I have to be able to come in and put points on the board."

Baylor shot only 28 percent from the field during the first half and finished the game 16 of 38 for 42 percent.

Groom downs Lefors

LEFORS—Groom swept two games from Lefors in District 3-1A basketball action Friday night.

Groom won the boys' game, 73-50, behind the scoring of Wesley English with 16 points and Tracy Britton with 14.

Russell Taylor led Lefors with 14. Bo Lake chipped in nine.

Groom romped, 68-21, in the girls' game. Melissa Fields and Robbie Kuehler had 15 and 14 points respectively for Groom. Treva Turner led Lefors with seven points.

Miami loses twinbill

Warren Schoenhals scored 26 points to lead Darrouzzett to a 74-37 District 2-1A boys' win over Miami Friday night.

Robbie Miller chipped in 16 points for the winners.

Jeffrey Bass led Miami with 13 points while Brett Byrom added seven.

Darrouzzett also won the girls' game, 43-39.

Vicki Creed led Darrouzzett with 19 points and Wanda Boston followed with 13.

Janet Adams had 15 for Miami and Angie Trimble added eight.

Prospective coaches or team representatives of men's open, women's open, men's church and women's church teams are urged to attend as this will be the organizational meeting to set the direction of the 1984 Players Association.

Cougars rout Mustangs to extend win streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Forward Michael Young scored 26 points to lead sixth-ranked Houston to a 76-57 victory over Southern Methodist Saturday night in a Southwest Conference game.

The Cougars, 19-3 for the season and 9-0 in SWC play, extended their record of consecutive regular-season conference wins to 33. SMU fell to 18-5 and 6-3.

Houston's 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon blocked eight shots, scored 16 points and pulled down nine rebounds.

Jon Koncak, SMU's 7-footer who in Houston's 60-59 victory in Dallas last month had 21 points to 14 by Olajuwon and a 15-6 rebounding edge, scored 12 points Saturday night to lead four Mustangs in double figures. He also had eight rebounds.

Houston guard Alvin Franklin contributed 18 points, while Larry Davis scored 11 and Butch Moore and Carl Wright had 10 apiece for the Mustangs.

The Cougars outscored SMU 14-2 midway through the first half en route to a 34-23 halftime lead. Then Houston scored the first 10 points of the second half to widen their lead to 21 points. The Cougars led by as much as 27 points at 60-33.

Freshman center Greg Anderson was the only Houston reserve to see action until the final five minutes of the game.

Don Curry retains welterweight championship

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Don Curry, mixing punches to the head and body and staying on top of Marlon Starling, pounded out a 15-round unanimous decision Saturday to retain the World Boxing Association welterweight championship.

The victory at Bally's Park Place and on national television kept the unbeaten 22-year-old Curry's hopes alive for a rich title defense against Sugar Ray Leonard, possibly this year.

It was Starling's second loss compared to 31 victories and both have been to Curry. Curry scored a 12-round split decision over Starling here Oct. 23, 1982 in the fight before Curry won the championship.

Starling said he thought he lost the first fight because "the judges thought I was clowning around. I was fighting for my fans. I was showing off."

Starling did no clowning in the rematch but it did him no good. Curry was much sharper this time and also stronger.

Curry, 147, of Fort Worth, Texas, controlled the first half of the fight by being more consistent over the full three minutes of most rounds. Starling fought in flurries.

Starling, 146, of Hartford, Conn., began to come on in the eighth round when he scored a couple of hard rights and some good hooks to the head. In the ninth, Starling had the advantage because of two good rights to the head.

But then as the fight entered what is known as "championship country," the last five rounds, Starling began to tire.

Curry had a big round in the 14th, which was fought head-to-head with both men throwing a lot of punches.

Pampa boys win, 68-54,

LUBBOCK—Pampa for all practical purposes clinched a playoff spot Friday night with a hard-fought 68-54 win over Lubbock Estacado in District 1-4A action.

"Realistically we've clinched it, but mathematically we haven't," said Pampa Head Coach Garland Nichols. "We can clinch it if we beat Brownfield next Friday night."

Pampa, now 10-0 in district play and 20-5 overall, can win the loop title outright Tuesday night with a win over Borger. That would make the Pampa-Brownfield outcome academic.

Estacado, 5-5 and 10-16, was a 117-67 pushover in the first game against the Harvesters, but the Matadors fought like wild animals in their lair during Friday night's clash.

"I thought Estacado would be tough," Nichols said. "They shot the ball well all night against us. They're probably the most improved team in the district."

Pampa was behind only once when Estacado had a 18-16 lead in the second quarter, but the Harvesters didn't put the Matadors away until the final two minutes of the game.

"We started off shooting cold. They played a switching defense and it took us awhile to catch on to what they were doing," Nichols said. "We had to slow the ball down. We never could get them to play our style of game."

Pampa broke away to a 30-24 halftime advantage after the score had been deadlocked eleven times in the first half.

The Harvesters built a 12-point bulge in the third quarter, but the Matadors nibbled away at the lead and cut the gap to four, 52-48, midway in the fourth quarter.

Senior guard Craig Chapin scored 10 of Pampa's next 16 points and came up with three crucial steals to ice the victory. All but two of Chapin's points came from the foul line in the closing minutes as the Matadors were forced to foul.

"Craig had another good game for us," Nichols said.

Pampa didn't go to the foul line in the first half, but made up for it the second half by hitting 20 of 27 charity attempts. Estacado was six of seven from the line.

Chapin, who had gone scoreless in the first and third quarters, led Pampa with 18 points while 6-7 senior Coyle Winborn tossed in 17 points and pulled down 13 rebounds. Rodney Young chipped in 11 points.

Estacado's Reggie Gibbs, who kept the Matadors in the game with some torrid shooting, led all scorers with 22 points. Perry McKinney followed with 10.

Harvester fans are urged to buy their tickets Monday for the Pampa-Borger game. Tickets may be purchased at the high school athletic office.

PAMPA (68)

Chapin 18, Winborn 17, Young 11, Cross 8, Harris 7, Faggins 6, Buchanan 1.

Estacado girls use charity line to down Lady Harvesters

Lubbock Estacado girls took advantage of foul shot opportunities to defeat the Pampa Lady Harvesters, 49-42, in a District 1-4A game Friday night in Lubbock.

Estacado went to the foul line 42 times, hitting 24 shots. Pampa made 12 of 27 tries from the foul line.

"We took some pretty tough calls," said Pampa Coach Albert Nichols. "They beat us at the foul line, but if we would have made our foul shots, we would have been okay."

Rebekkah Guenther came off the bench to score 14 points for the Lady Harvesters.

"It was the best game Rebekkah has played," added Nichols.

Ella Williams led the winners with 22 points.

Lisa Crayton and Melissa Nichols had eight and seven points respectively for the Lady Harvesters. Also scoring were Kerri Richardson with six, Leslie Ford, Gaye Hendricks two and Stephanie Smith one. Nichols pulled down 14 rebounds.

The Lady Harvesters play Borger there Tuesday night and then close out the season next Friday night against Brownfield at the home court.

Tickets still available for Guenther benefit cage game

Tickets are still available for The Rebekkah Guenther Benefit Basketball Game to be played Feb. 18 in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Tickets are two dollars for adults and one dollar for students and may be purchased from any participating Noon Lions Club member, or at the Chamber of Commerce or Farm Bureau Offices.

Proceeds from the game between the Pampa Lions and Pampa Media will go to help Miss Guenther, a PHS senior, pay for transportation costs to Bethesda, Maryland where she undergoes eye treatments. Miss Guenther, who was legally blind with a rare eye disease, is being treated with an experimental drug, which has improved her vision to 20-20 and 20-40.

Miss Guenther is being sponsored by the Noon Lions Club under their sight conservation program. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Spencer.

Miss Guenther, who is a Lady Harvester basketball player, will coach the Lions in their quest for victory over the Media.

The Lions have recently unveiled their starting lineup, which includes Dunkin' Dave Smith, Doug "Digger" Carmichael, Bill "Jaws" Hite, Dr. J. Magic Johnson, Maurice Haynes, Hod Rod Caldwell, Ben "The Fin" Woodington, Tip-Up Keith Teague, John "Hook Shot" Cleavinger, Mr. G Jack Gindorf, Bob "Mauler" Menthey, Bad Brad Lee, Slammin' Sam White, Ron "Long Legs" Love and Steve "Gunnin' Guenther.

Cheerleading the Lions will be Charlotte "The Harlot" Cooley, Dalene "The Machine" West and Luscious Liza Porter, along with Sweethearts of the Club.

Federal judge to decide football future of Sims

DETROIT (AP) — A federal judge has finished hearing testimony and is expected to decide sometime next week whether running back Billy Sims will play for the Detroit Lions or the Houston Gamblers next season.

U.S. District Judge Robert E. DeMascio Friday also dismissed the Lions' $11 million lawsuit, saying that nothing arising from 10 days of testimony in Sims' suit indicated the National Football League club suffered from the running back's dealings with Houston of the United States Football League.

The Lions' suit, filed Dec. 18 in Oakland County Circuit Court in Pontiac, had asked Judge David Breck to void Sims' contract in addition to seeking damages from Gamblers co-owner Jerry Argovitz.

DeMascio is expected to rule next week on Sims' suit, which was filed in December against Argovitz and the Gamblers. It charges that Sims was misrepresented by his then-agent Argovitz in contract negotiations with the Gamblers and the Lions, and seeks to have his contract with Houston voided.

Sims asks in the suit that he be allowed to play for Detroit under terms of a $4.5 million contract he signed with the team in December.

In closing arguments, Gamblers attorney Steve Susman said Sims led DeMascio to believe "that he was just Jerry Argovitz's Charlie McCarthy," doing everything Argovitz told him to do.

"The facts just don't bear that out," Susman said.

Earlier, Susman said Sims consistently lied during testimony in an effort to prove that his contract with the Houston club should be voided.

"I'd hoped it would never get to this point," Susman said. "But I must say on over 100 occasions Billy Sims could not recall the answers to my questions."

"On 16 different occasions,

Billy Sims' prior testimony and his testimony in court differed; and they were substantial differences."

Sims' attorney, Elbert Hatchett, charged that Argovitz was guilty of conflict of interest because he did not follow Texas laws that require "a self-dealing agent must make a full disclosure."

"Fraud is presumed on the part of the double-dealing agent" unless "all facts that might touch upon the decision" of the client are disclosed, Hatchett said in continuing his quotations of the law.

If those requirements were not met, Hatchett said, any contract is voidable "even if the agent can prove that the price was fair and no advantage was taken."

Reynolds' jumper gives Raiders 47-45 victory

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — David Reynolds, a 6-8 senior from Perryton, scored on a jump shot with 5 seconds remaining to give Texas Tech to a 47-45 victory over Texas Christian in a Southwest Conference game Saturday night.

The victory raised Tech's record to 6-3 in SWC play and 12-8 for the season. TCU, which hasn't won a game in Daniel Meyer Coliseum all season, fell to 9-11 and 2-4.

Dennis Nutt, who led TCU with 16 points, missed a 20-footer at the buzzer that would have sent the game into overtime.

SIX MILLION DOLLAR MAN—Quarterback Warren Moon, right, holds up his new football jersey with Houston Oilers' owner Bud Adams at a news conference Saturday after the free agent signed a 5-year contract worth $6 million with the National Football League club, making him the highest paid player in professional football. (AP Laserphoto)

Moon signs with Oilers, becomes richest player in pro football

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzog closed one touchy issue by making quarterback Warren Moon the highest paid player in the National Football League Saturday but now must turn to another explosive problem—unhappy running back Earl Campbell.

Moon will sign a five year contract for an estimated $6 million in March, giving the former Canadian Football League most valuable player a higher salary than Denver quarterback John Elway.

Herzog made it clear, however, that there would be no renegotiation for Campbell, who has two years remaining on a contract that pays him $500,000 annually if he fulfills all bonus clauses.

"At the time we renegotiated Earl's contract we put a non-renegotiation clause in it," Herzog said. "We feel we lived up to our part of the contract and we feel Earl should live up to his part. We will not renegotiate Earl's contract."

Campbell and his agent, Mike Trope, have been talking with the United States Football League San Antonio Gunslingers owner Clinton Manges and may go to court to get the running back released from his contract.

"Anything is possible, including playing in both leagues at the same time," Trope said. "From here on out, it's going to be up to me to work out all the little details with Manges and his people."

Herzog said he risked upsetting the Oiler player salary structure when Campbell's contract was renegotiated after the 1978 season and felt that the signing of Moon was a similar situation.

"Earl had been the league MVP for two years and led the league in rushing for two straight years," Herzog said. "I said that it was worth the risk. If any other player performed as well as Earl Campbell, we'd face that when it came."

Herzog declined to discuss specifics of Moon's contract but Leigh Steinberg, Moon's attorney, said it made Moon the highest paid player in the NFL.

"It gives unique benefits to Warren because it has great cash flow in the early years of the contract and there is more security," Steinberg said.

Moon, who led the Edmonton Eskimos to five consecutive Canadian Football League championships, had narrowed his choices to the Oilers and Seattle Seahawks.

Moon maintains a home in Seattle and played college football at the University of Washington, complicating his final decision.

"There were a lot of people calling and a lot of tears," Moon said. "It was emotionally draining because I was from Seattle. Houston was a better place for me to be but Seattle was where I had been."

"I think Warren knows me well enough to know that he'll have to earn his position," said Oiler Coach Hugh Campbell, who was Moon's head coach in the CFL.

Gunslingers eager to ink Campbell

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—San Antonio Gunslingers owner Clinton Manges admits he would like to sign Earl Campbell to a United States Football League contract "real bad" but the legal problems are still to be worked out.

Campbell's agent, Mike Trope, said the Houston Oilers running back may challenge the National Football League's exclusivity rule that would keep him from playing in both leagues.

Campbell and Manges met at the Bexar County courthouse Friday, but Manges would disclose few details of the meeting.

Campbell said he was "very interested and impressed" with the Gunslingers — particularly since he wouldn't have to leave Texas to continue playing pro ball.

The running back's agent, Mike Trope, said that "anything is possible," including playing in both leagues at the same time. The USFL plays during the spring and the NFL during the fall.

"From here on out, it's going to be up to me to work out all the little details with Manges and his people," Trope said. "Basically, Earl's role is over. Earl has done his part. He wanted to look over the organization and now he's done that. Earl just wants to get back to being a football player again."

Campbell disrupted a court hearing Friday in which jurors are determining whether the Gunslingers can play at Alamogordo Stadium.

The club conceivably could be stranded without a stadium at the start of the regular season, which kicks off Feb. 26 with a game against the New Orleans Breakers.

Attorneys for the city and a neighborhood group trying to block the Gunslingers from using the stadium accused Manges of using Campbell's presence to influence the jurors.

Campbell made a grand entrance in the courtroom shortly before the lunch recess, wearing an oversized white cowboy hat.

Hockey controversy continues as Winter Olympics get set to begin

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP)—Canada threatened Saturday to protest the eligibility of players on most other Olympic hockey teams if the United States tried to take any action against Team Canada and might even pull the team out if a U.S. protest was successful.

The United States says that four Canadian players have too much professional experience to count as amateurs, but no formal protest has been filed. F. Don Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, has said he would wait until after a private meeting with Canadian officials Monday before taking such a step.

Murray Costello, the director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Saturday he would file protests stating that players on eight or nine of the 12 teams in the hockey field were ineligible if the U.S. challenges his own team.

Asked whether the Canadian hockey team would withdraw if an American protest was successful, Costello said: "We'll have a hard decision to make. That's a possibility." But Dave King, coach of the team, said the Canadians would be playing in the 1984 Winter Games even if they have only 16 eligible players.

While the officials worried about the rule book, hockey players concentrated on the possibility of a historic rematch. Both the Soviet and the U.S. teams arrived here Saturday and the Soviets made it plain that they intended to win back the gold medal the United States won in Lake Placid in 1980.

As the countdown to the first events of these Games on Tuesday continued, snow fell on the mountains around Sarajevo and rain drenched the city itself.

And, in the first men's downhill training run before the Olympics, Peter Mueller of Switzerland proved he is in fine form when he was clocked with the fastest time — 1 minute, 48.19 seconds. He was 19 hundredths of a second faster than Vladimir Makeyev of the Soviet Union. The training was halted after 46 of the 81 skiers had gone through the run because of poor visibility because of the snowfall.

It was obvious that the Soviet hockey team had only too well remembered the gold it didn't win in Lake Placid.

Goaltender Vladislav Tretiak, a veteran of three Olympics and about to play in his fourth, said as the Soviet team arrived Saturday, "We'll get the gold and there is no doubt about it."

Meanwhile, with three days remaining before the Olympics begin, IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch said he can see the day when the IOC will pay the expenses every athlete competing in the Olympics.

Samaranch said the possibility for paying athletes' expenses is becoming more real because of the millions of dollars in revenue from television.

"We think we are the favorites, but everyone has a chance. Sport is sport," said Soviet Hockey Coach Viktor Tikhonov. "Everyone will be playing their best game against us and each team will try to beat us."

"Our first goal is to end atop our group. Then we'll worry about the finals. Most of these teams are very good. I think Sweden, Czechoslovakia and West Germany also have a chance for one of the medals."

Team USA Coach Lou Vairo, whose team also arrived Saturday, said his players must think of the first round, then worry about the Soviets later.

"If we get to meet the Soviets, it would mean we were in the medal's round, which is where we want to be," Vairo said.

There are 36 hockey games to be played, the first six on Tuesday, one day before the opening ceremonies.

The United States meets Canada in an afternoon game Tuesday. Russia plays Poland in an evening contest. The other games are: Austria-Finland; Italy-Sweden; Czechoslovakia-Norway; and West Germany-Yugoslavia.

Longhorn hurlers hurt in mishap

AUSTIN (AP)—Two pitchers who were rated 1-2 on the Texas Longhorn baseball team have been hurt in a car wreck, and one, Wade Phillips, will be lost for the season.

Phillips, a sophomore from Orange, broke his left arm above the elbow in the Thursday night accident, and a team doctor told coach Cliff Gustafson that the pitcher will not play this season. Phillips also fractured a rib.

Eric Boudreaux of Houston, also a sophomore righthander, suffered a knee injury, and Gustafson said, "He (Boudreaux) thinks it's just bruised and swollen."

Texas, the defending national baseball champion was ranked only No. 11 in preseason and has games scheduled with four top 20 teams.

Swim lessons continue at center

CONSOLATION CHAMPIONS—Pampa ninth-grade girls' basketball team won the consolation trophy in the Canyon Tournament held last week. They upset Stanton, 50-35, for the trophy. Pampa entered the game with a 3-11 record while Stanton had lost only three games all season. Jackie Reed and Holly Hoganson led Pampa in scoring with 15 and 14 points respectively. Sue Gross had nine points,

Embryo network could develop

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The world's first birth resulting from an embryo transfer could spawn a profitable "adopt-an-embryo" network for the company that developed the procedure and hopes to perform about 50,000 implants in infertile women.

Buttons proclaiming "It's a Boy!" adorned lab coats Friday as doctors at Memorial Hospital announced that an unidentified California woman had given birth to a "just beautiful" child in the previous five to 10 days.

"He's a perfectly normal, healthy little guy," said Dr. John E. Buster, head of the embryo-transfer research project at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center, which was funded by $3 million from Fertility & Genetics Research Inc. of Chicago.

The controversial and historic pregnancy ended 38 weeks and five days after the April 1983 embryo transfer at Harbor. All details and names, including that of the donor, were withheld at the parents' request.

Forty-six transfers have been attempted by the research team, but only two have been successful. Another baby is due in April, Buster said.

In embryo transfer, a fertile woman is artificially inseminated with sperm from the husband of an infertile woman. After five or six days, the embryo is washed out of the donor's uterus and implanted in the infertile woman.

The procedure is different from in-vitro or "test-tube" births, where a woman with blocked Fallopian tubes has her own egg removed and surgically implanted in her uterus after it is fertilized in a petri dish. And unlike the test-tube method, the embryo-transfer procedure requires no surgery, Buster said.

Officials of Fertility & Genetics Research say they are prepared to sell an estimated 50,000 such implants at centers around the country, the first to open in Long Beach in the spring, and have applied for patents on both the procedure and its special tools.

In addition, the company plans to copyright the computer software it developed to verify the donor's general good health and match the donor and recipient's ovulation times, hair and eye color, height, weight, ethnic and religious background.

Lawrence Sucusy, an investment counselor and a co-founder of FRG, estimates that 60 percent of the women who take part in the "adopt-an-embryo" program will be infertile. The rest, he said, will be seeking to avoid "a whole flock" of genetically transferred diseases such as hemophilia and cystic fibrosis.

EDB response

State prodding finally produces EPA action

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — It was a national problem, and for months the states pleaded for a national response.

It finally came Friday, when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency all but banned the agricultural use of EDB, a fumigant used to kill insects in the soil and in grain storage bins.

But it took pushing and prodding from Florida and several other states — alarmed last year when highly toxic ethylene dibromide started showing up in ground water and food mixes — to get the federal agency to set national standards, state leaders complained.

The federal action forbids use of EDB as a fumigant for fighting insects in stored grains and in grain milling machinery and suggests safety standards for food containing EDB residues. The government had previously suspended the use of EDB as a soil fumigant.

The standards, which are only guidelines for the states, allow EDB residues of 30 parts per billion (ppb) in ready-to-eat foods, 150 parts for foods that require cooking before eating and 900 parts for raw grain intended for human consumption.

State leaders said Friday they welcomed tighter national standards, but accused the Reagan administration of foot dragging. Some said the history of EDB regulation was an example of the tail (the worried states) wagging the dog (the slow-to-act federal government).

"It has been 10 years since the National Cancer Institute identified EDB as a carcinogen," said Florida Gov. Bob Graham. "The Environmental Protection Agency should act promptly to avoid further delays in protecting American consumers."

Florida officials say the lack of federal regulations forced the state to take a tough regulatory posture that eventually prodded the federal government to act.

"I think we've been slow in regulating EDB," EPA boss William Ruckelshaus acknowledged said while visiting Dallas last month. "It is bad stuff and it is a very potent carcinogen, but we don't have any evidence that it has harmed anyone — nor do we have any that it hasn't."

Tests on laboratory animals, some seven years old, have shown that EDB produces cancer, mutations, sperm disorders and liver problems.

EDB has drawn national attention less than a year, but has a long history in industry and agriculture. It has been registered as a pesticide since 1948. Most — perhaps 90 percent — was used as a fuel additive and the rest in agri-business.

A key farming use was soil fumigation to fight destructive nematode rootworms. In Florida, EDB had been used since 1961 to control nematodes in citrus groves.

But last summer, it was found in groundwater. When Florida agriculture officials learned of water contamination in California, they began testing drinking water samples.

By the end of July, Florida had found EDB in wells and ordered a halt to its use in the nematode-control program.

On Sept. 16, state Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner temporarily suspended EDB as a soil pesticide — two weeks before federal regulators announced similar action. Conner issued a permanent ban on soil fumigation Oct. 7.

In the fall, Conner's food-testing lab found EDB in a wide range of processed grain products such as flour and cake mixes.

When Conner learned there was no federal safety level on consumption, he turned to the state's health officer, who recommended a 1-part-per-billion threshold.

In December and January, Conner stopped sale of 76 grain products with more than 1 ppb EDB, shaking up the food industry and the Reagan administration.

Grocery Manufacturers of America Inc. filed suit challenging Florida's authority to stop sale of food products, but failed to obtain a temporary restraining order. The suit is pending in federal court at Tallahassee.

Meanwhile, Florida's well-publicized food sanctions prompted other states to begin testing.

After tests last month, California had pulled nine lots of packaged mixes from the shelves for exceeding the state's 300 ppb standard.

California — not the federal government — alerted Hawaii to EDB-contaminated cake mixes, said Don Horio, a spokesman for the Hawaii Department of Health.

Nine children killed in Tacoma home fire

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Nine children ranging in age from 14 months to 10 years died today when a fire raced through a home here, fire department Lt. Arnie Johnson said.

A neighbor reported the fire at 7:45 a.m. and when fire engines arrived, "there was smoke coming out of all the windows, cracks and crevices" of the wooden, two-story home, Johnson said.

Initial reports indicated the victims were members of two families, he said. The youngsters may have died of smoke inhalation because the fire itself did not seem to be heavy, he said.

JOANNE LINVILLE stands with a few of the items desperately needed for the Red Cross Loan Closet. Linville, a dedicated volunteer for nine years, says the loan closet is her "number one project." She's seeking donations of health equipment that can be loaned to people who are ill and can't afford their own. (Staff photo by Dee Dee Laramore)

Pampan gives freely of her time and love

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

Joanne Linville, R.N., has been a nurse for "oh, 30 some-odd years," she says. Nine of those years she has been volunteering her help to critically and terminally ill patients who can't afford to go to the hospital.

She shrugs off the work she's done for these people with "I enjoy working with old people. I get more from it than they do. I know old people have their problems."

"I have four parents in their 80s (hers and her husbands). My brothers all live right there around them and look after them most of the time. My husband (R.O.) and I go down on weekends to see about them. I know what old people need."

"A lot times what I give them is far from nursing, but it's what they need. I'll help them clean up, or write their checks out for them so they can sign them or take them to the doctor, or sometimes I just go to talk to them," she explains in a matter-of-fact way.

She has one patient who becomes depressed during bad weather, she says, and finds all kinds of reasons for her nurse to check on her everyday. But Linville doesn't mind, she knows this person needs company more than anything else, and she's more than willing to provide that.

Linville also finds time to deliver government cheese to 19 elderly persons (and the list is growing) who are unable to go to the Salvation Army to pick up the cheese. Although some of these live in Pampa, others live in area communities. And while she's bringing the cheese, she's making sure that these people have all that they need. She cares about people, and it shows.

But Linville doesn't want to talk about her volunteer work with the old people. She wants to talk about her "loan closet," — her number one project, she proudly claims.

Some years ago, she says, the M. K. Brown Foundation donated $50,000 to the Red Cross for a "loan closet." This "loan closet" is a collection of health equipment for people who can't afford to buy their own. Such health equipment includes hospital beds, wheel chairs, "potty" chairs, crutches, walkers, canes and side rails for beds, stretchers, over-bed tables, and even bed pans and urinals. Linville is chairman of the Red Cross loan closet.

As chairman, she has scrimped, saved and solicited as much of the needed equipment as she can, but the need has risen beyond her efforts. What Linville needs now, she says, is more equipment. "We serviced 197 families a year with free hospital equipment. I have equipment in 69 homes right now," she explains.

"I want to appeal to anyone who has health equipment that they're not using to donate to the items to the Red Cross loan closet," Linville says.

"I keep a record of all the equipment, who it goes to and when it is returned," she adds. She also calls those who are borrowing the equipment once a month to find out if it is still being used, or if it needs to be picked up. "I make sure nothing is lost," she says with confidence.

"A lot of people aren't aware that the Red Cross is the only one with this kind of equipment that can be borrowed for free," she adds.

Many items are constantly needed, such as hospital beds, "potty" chairs and crutches. "I hate to think that health equipment could be hanging around on a nail in the closet when we need it so bad here," Linville says.

Anyone wishing to donate health equipment to the Red Cross can call the Red Cross office at 779 - 7121. Arrangements can be made to pick up items.

Peeking at Pampa

Face it, people! The business of life goes on, Super Bowl or not! Pampans were especially busy this week.

Lots of people took advantage of the first possible - night - out - dinner. Eating fish or steak were Eula and Preston Baily who apparently are enjoying retirement, Susan and Danny Winborne and children, Deb and Jim Erwin and children, Lois and Paul Barrett, Billie and John Phelps with Ann and Roy Kay. Ann and Lois are seen regularly swimming at the Youth Center. Another evening saw Billie Bruner visiting with Curtis Craddock. Pampa young business women dress and conduct themselves with plenty of know-how. Brenda Bell and Toni Morris, employed across the street from each other in ladies' ready-to-wear stores are petite, friendly, helpful and so easy to look at.

Rhonda (Mrs. Mark) Fletcher knows how to combine color, texture and fabric to delight the most discriminating taste. One day it was black jacket, pristine white blouse and grey plaid skirt. A quilted red print presented a totally different look.

Doug Bagby, accomodating and helpful, moved to Pampa a year ago this month to manage a local shoe store. Other family members are his wife Wanda, Kari, a third grader, and Kirk of the kindergarten set. Ron Hofer, assistant manager, moved to Pampa from Alva, Okla., two months ago. Both young men play racquet ball at the Youth Center.

Jan McKinney, social services director at CCH, is a Bergerite become Pampa. She's an avid golfer, too — and single!

Know how to tell it's Saturday? If you see Shirley (Mrs. Speck) Winborne and Iris (Mrs. Ralph) Day shopping, it's Saturday. That has been their regular routine for YEARS!

Several ladies of the First Christian Church go to Coronado Nursing Center for a little action in dance and exercise. Helen (Mrs. G. B.) Hogan made a big rag doll which she ties to her while she teaches dance exercises to residents. Others assisting are Lorene (Mrs. Tom) Price, Ruth (Mrs. O. W.) Allston, Shirley Winborne and Faye Biggers.

Members of ESA honored Penny Miller with a recipe and bridal shower last week. Friends are speculating that Penny, who won state honors with her sewing ability in evening dresses, will fashion and make her own bridal gown.

Billie Osborne hosted the Salvation Army Golden Agers' luncheon last week in memory of Rick Whaley. She brought a sackful of prizes for the afternoon of Bingo. A beautiful tribute to the memory of a fine young man.

Every Wednesday afternoon is Bingo day at Coronado Nursing Center. Red Cross volunteers who assist are Janette and Norman Massey, Anna Mae (Mrs. Jim) Triplehorn, Eva (Mrs. Duane) Cash and Marguerite Johnson.

Every few days a few more names of Pampa musicians surface. Eldorado Willis plays popular and spiritual music on a seldom heard but always enjoyed instrument, the accordion.

Betty (Mrs. Kenneth) Crawford plays a lively piano. She works with Alleene Coker and Iona Thompson who directs a rhythm band at Coronado Nursing Center.

About 500 people attended a biggie banquet to mark the beginning of Emphasis Week at First Baptist last Monday evening. George Warren gets credit for arrangements.

Decades ago Phillips Petroleum Company began with a small group of five rugged men that included Frank Phillips and E. E. Traywick, a Pampa resident for 50 years or more. Mr. Traywick, who died recently on the sunset side of 80, was the last of the five to go.

He will be remembered as one who played an important role in the development of one of the large oil companies in the world.

Birthday wishes thoblated to Andrew Askfeld and Ewing Cobb. Mabel and Richard Tunnell celebrated Mabel's birthday at a private club. Merdella Roberts hosted a birthday celebration for her mother Myrtle (Mrs. Skeet) Roberts.

Mabel Johnson received all sorts of recognition on her 80th birthday about 10 days ago — lunch with a friend, bouquets of flowers, cards and lots of telephone calls. Congratulations, Mabel!

Best wishes for a quick recovery to Al Bell, Glendora Gindorf, Betty and Harold Hink and Mauree (Mrs. Harl) Moore after hospital stays for surgery and - or broken bones.

The Moores are humbly proud of their daughter's recent honor. Mika was named Citizen of the Year at Wayland Baptist University in Plainview. Congratulations!

Congratulations to Beverly Teague who opens her new business this week. The name is Design Source, an interior design studio with all types of exquisite accessories, many in brass and porcelain. Last week she and her husband Dr. Keith Teague and his entire staff attended a mid-winter convention for all categories of the dental profession. Attending were Pat (Mrs. Charles) Rittthaler, Mary (Mrs. Ron) Becker and Tanya (Mrs. Gary) Meador.

Marie Houston visited her two sons in and near Houston. She looked wonderfully chic in coffee cream ultrasuede a few days ago. Eerie and Dwight and their four pre-school children spent last weekend skiing in Taos and Santa Fe, N. M. A few months ago their family list grew overnight with the adoption of two boys and a girl.

Shanta Mohan and Sarita went to India to participate in a family wedding and to visit with relatives and friends. Dr. Vijay and the boys, Salil and Sameer, are taking care of the home front.

Buster Ivory was named coordinator of the first Arizona State Penitentiary rodeo at Florence, Ariz. He and June are known world-wide as top rodeo performers. See you next week! KATIE

Craft talent evolves into pattern business

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer
TOLEDO, Ore. (AP) — A Toledo grandmother has turned a talent for making people say, "Awww, isn't that cute," into a line of patterns for baby quilts, fabric dolls and Christmas decorations that have sold over 4 million copies.

"Many people can craft as well or better than I can, but they lack a design. That was a need I could fill," said Gwen Andrews, who started The Gingham Goose on her kitchen table in 1976.

That's when she decided to quit her job as credit manager for the Sears department store in neighboring Newport.

The business now employs 16 people, mostly local women in this town of 3,200 in the coastal foothills, who stuff the patterns and instructions into plastic bags at their homes for distribution. The most popular shows a little girl wearing an oversize sunbonnet.

Following her decision to give up a regular paycheck to become an entrepreneur, Mrs. Andrews determined to put her flair for creative sewing to work. She turned the carport in her home into a shop, selling goods she, her mother, mother-in-law and daughter turned out.

As each of her four grandchildren was born, Mrs. Andrews made a baby quilt, which went on display in the shop.

So many people asked to buy patterns for the quilts that Mrs. Andrews decided it was time to expand. That was 1979.

Using jar lids and platters to trace the designs and working at her kitchen table, she turned out eight patterns — four quilts, three dolls and a Christmas wall-hanging set.

With an initial investment of $10,000, she and her husband, Vern, had 1,000 copies of each pattern printed, packed them into their camper and went to a quilt show in the central Oregon town of Sisters.

"I sold so many I lost my voice," Mrs. Andrews said of the original 360 patterns sold.

The Andrews took the patterns to a quilt show in Portland, where Stan Gray of E.E. Schenck saw them and offered to distribute them.

"They were unique and very well presented — very professionally done," Gray said.

Through Gray, the Andrews landed a contract with VIP, a division of Cranston Print Works in New York.

Until recently, VIP distributed Gingham Goose patterns through the United States and to such far-flung spots as Saudi Arabia, Japan, Australia and Great Britain, where they are bought mostly by Americans living abroad, Mrs. Andrews said.

E.E. Schenck has now taken over all distribution, keeping the entire operation based in Oregon.

"I guess the thing that made the patterns work was the way it makes you feel good," Mrs. Andrews said. "Something makes people say, 'Awww, isn't that cute,' when they look at it."

The first quilt, "Amy Sue Sunbonnet Girl," is still the best seller of the 54 patterns The Gingham Goose offers. The whimsical profile of a bloomed little girl reaching for a bird with heart-shaped wings has sold 200,000 patterns and is going strong, earning a place of honor on the wall over Mrs. Andrews' sewing machine.

The business quickly outgrew the kitchen and carport, so Andrews built a barn to house the pattern operation. As the shop and pattern business grew even more, they took over the whole house, so the Andrews built a new one higher up the hill.

Andrews quit his job as a boiler fireman at the Georgia-Pacific mill to become vice president of The Gingham Goose.

Among his duties is overseeing the packaging done by local women working in their homes.

"They'll go into a shop and if our patterns aren't on the right hook, they'll straighten them out," he said. "We've talked to other people in Portland and Sacramento (Calif.) who say they can't keep people, but we have the same people we started with."

Dear Abby

Free loading lady burdens neighbor with paperwork

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. The woman across the hall from me asked (a couple of years ago) if she could have my daily newspaper when I was finished with it. I've always obliged. The Sunday paper is too enormous to read in one day, so I've often kept it until Monday or sometimes Tuesday. Every Monday morning my neighbor asks me if I've finished the Sunday paper yet, which gives me the feeling that I am being rushed.

Also, occasionally I will come across an article or an ad that I want to save, so I clip it out. Yesterday this lady asked if I would give her the newspaper intact, and after she reads it she will return it to me—and then I can clip out whatever I want. How is that for nerve? It's much more convenient to clip something when I first come across it; it would be too time-consuming to go through the newspaper a second time.

If you were in my place, how would you handle this? I don't want her for an enemy. Oh, another thing, she doesn't subscribe to any newspaper and she's in better shape financially than I am.

IRRITATED APARTMENT DWELLER

DEAR DWELLER: Tell her it's too time-consuming to go through the newspaper twice, so if she wants it, she will have to put up with an occasional gap. And when she asks for the Sunday newspaper, tell her you will give it to her after you've read it, and you'd appreciate it if she wouldn't ask for it because you feel guilty keeping it an extra day or two.

***

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of grandchildren, ages 13 and 15, who received some very nice Christmas gifts, and had their mother write their thank-you notes? ("The kids are so busy with hockey and schoolwork that I was elected to thank you for the terrific gifts you sent them," etc.)

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: I think the kids are the losers for having a mother (and/or father) who do for the children what they should do for themselves.

A child who is old enough to print should write his own thank-you notes. It matters not that the printing is barely legible and the spelling is atrocious; the note will be considered a treasure.

Some teen-agers require more prodding than others, but it's the responsibility of the parents to stand over them with an iron hand until the deed is done!

***

DEAR ABBY: Your statement, "Pets raised in a Christian home are assumed to be Christian, and pets raised in a Jewish home are assumed to be Jewish," left me in a quandary concerning the burial of my cat.

You see, I'm half-Jewish and half-Christian, and if I follow your logic, when the cat dies, I'll have to decide whether it will be buried as a Christian or Jew.

Gevald! Or should I say, "Heavens to Betsy?"

TORN IN VOORHEESVILLE, N.Y.

DEAR TORN: Cremate the cat, and give half the ashes a Jewish funeral service and the other half Christian.

***

CONFIDENTIAL TO LIVES BY THE BIBLE IN MEMPHIS: Whom have you visited in prison lately? In Matthew 25 there is a description of the day of judgment. It explains that those who are saved are saved because "I was hungry, and you gave me food; I was thirsty, and you gave me drink; I was in prison, and you visited me."

White Deer group honors Sweetheart

Maria Diggs--Alpha Theta Omega Sweetheart

WHITE DEER — Maria Diggs, Alpha Theta Omega Sweetheart for 1984, is to be presented along with her attendants, Tonya Sue Freeman and Angie Lopez, at the annual Sweetheart Ball, Feb. 11, at the Parish Hall of White Deer.

Maria Diggs has been a member of Alpha Theta Omega for two years. She has served as co-chairman of the Little Miss and Master Rodeo contest, chairman of the budget committee and has served on the scrapbook committee. She is serves as treasurer for the chapter. Her three daughters, Layci, Lenzi and Hayli, are all legacy members of Beta Sigma Phi. She enjoys cooking, sewing needlecrafts and exercise classes.

Angie Lopez, a native of San Diego de Alejandria, Jal. Mexico, met her husband Efrén Lopez at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City. They moved to White Deer 14 years ago. Angie has been a member of the sorority chapter for four years. She is also a member of the Sacred Heart Altar Society and the Home Demonstration Club.

Tonya Sue Freeman has been a member of Alpha Theta Omega for three years. She has served as reporter and is currently recording secretary, chairman of the ways and means committee and is a member of the membership committee. She and her husband, Johnny, have two children Amanda and Justin. Her hobbies include skiing (water and snow), camping and outings with her family. The dance begins at 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Presentations are to be made at 10 p.m. Alpha Theta Omega is the White Deer chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

Diggs will also be honored with a Sweetheart Dinner, Feb. 4, and with a pre-party preceding the ball.

The theme for this year's gala event is to be "Islands in the Streams" with the band "Westwinds" proving the music. Set-ups will be provided along with a buffet to be served later in the evening.

A heart-shaped diamond necklace and several other door prizes are to be given away during the evening. Tickets may be purchased at the door at $10 per person.

Satirist claims humor has serious side

By GENE SCHROEDER

AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — According to an old Spanish proverb, living well is the best revenge.

But Robert Vare, director of the New School for Social Research's New York Comedy School, disagrees. He says "writing humor is the best revenge."

As Vare explained in an interview:

"The conventional wisdom is that humor is a low art form, because it seems to have a minor ambition — which is nothing more than to make people laugh. I think the best humor operates on much deeper currents than is generally acknowledged. Humor just wouldn't work if there weren't a serious idea behind the joking."

"I think that because a humorist works so hard to disguise his serious intention, people often don't understand how serious humor basically is, or how powerful it can be."

As for revenge, Vare says, "if you have some things that get you irritated out in the world, it's the best way to feel vindicated about them."

Vare, who teaches a humor writing workshop, often asks his students if they can think of a more powerful statement about the nuclear bomb than the movie, "Dr. Strangelove," which he describes as a scathing satire and a far more powerful statement than a thousand editorials about nuclear warfare.

In the same vein, Vare believes newspaper cartoonists and comedians such as television's Johnny Carson "had a lot to do with ending the Vietnam War."

"Humor is an underrated form, and parody is an underrated form," he says. "There is so much you can do with it, and when well executed it can really make a serious, scathing point."

Vare was one of two principal editors of a best-selling parody publication, "Off The Wall Street Journal," and last year founded a humor publishing company incorporated under the name of American Parody and Travesty (AP&T).

The firm's first publication was a parody of Playboy magazine called "Playbore," which Vare says sold between 650,000 and 750,000 copies during the first two weeks it was on the newsstands.

"In choosing Playboy as our target," Vare says, "we are satirizing our sexual times. You know, these are pretty grim times, sexually speaking."

"We take sex so seriously with our endless medical reports on new diseases, such as herpes and AIDS...and our endless obsession with sex surveys, with statistics about our sex lives and with advice about our sexual problems."

"It's time we took sex a little more lightly and stop trying to analyze it. It's time we started getting a laugh out of sex again."

Beauty Digest

By Diane Robbins, editor
Beauty Digest magazine

Tired eyes

Ann Jillian of TV's "Jennifer Slept Here" told Beauty Digest Magazine her favorite beauty secret: "When I'm tired, I get circles under my eyes. To camouflage this, I use an orange-toned base makeup under my eyes. Next I put my regular base over that and dust my whole face with a translucent pearlized loose powder. That makes your skin actually glow! The orange-colored base works for women with just about every hair color except a real brunette. She should just use a deeper shade of orange base."

Soup it

DiETING again? Try this great bit of news. If you have soup — not a heavy creamed soup, of course — as your first course, it fills you up faster and you will eat less during the rest of the meal. As a matter of fact, studies show you will eat at least 60 calories less and lose weight faster. Try this recipe for Tomato Bisque. Heat a 10 3/4 ounce can of tomato soup, and instead of using water, substitute clam juice. Add a teaspoon of plain yogurt when ready to serve and sprinkle with 1/2 teaspoon fresh dill. This makes four appetizer servings at less than 100 calories each!

Winter skin

We all know winter can take its toll on your skin. If you happen to be an outdoor sports enthusiast, you may have double trouble. Here are a few skin care tips for you skiers, skaters and the like. First, always get a good night's sleep before you go out for a day of exercise. Low temperatures are rough on an unrested body. Next, always do your warm-up exercise outdoors, not inside. This stabilizes your body temperature to your environment. Finally, when you come in from the cold, don't sit in front of a hot fire right away. Extreme temperature changes can make the tiny capillaries in your skin burst. So the best thing to do is splash some cool water on your face when you come indoors and warm up gradually.

Overeaters Anonymous chapter opens

Pampa citizens have begun a chapter of Overeaters Anonymous, a recovery program for people who can't control their eating habits.

The non-profit group meets each Monday morning from 9 a.m. until 10 a.m. in the Zion Lutheran Church meeting room, 1200 Duncan. No dues or fees for membership are required. The meetings are self-supporting through voluntary contributions by members. No specific amount is suggested.

As the name says, those who become members remain anonymous. Only first names are used at meetings.

Overeaters Anonymous began in January 1960 in Los Angeles, Calif. The organization is patterned after the principles and program of Alcoholics Anonymous. The 12-step program of recovery formulated by AA is used to overcome compulsive overeating.

The only requirement to join is that the person have a desire to stop eating compulsively. One becomes a member by attending meetings.

Here are 15 questions to see if you are a compulsive overeater?

1. Do you eat when you're not hungry?
2. Do you go on eating binges for no apparent reason?
3. Do you have feelings of guilt and remorse after overeating?
4. Do you give too much time and thought to food?
5. Do you look forward with pleasure and anticipation to the moments when you can eat alone?
6. Do you plan these secret binges ahead of time?
7. Do you eat sensibly before others and make up for it alone?
8. Is your weight affecting the way you live your life?
9. Have you tried to diet for a week (or longer), only to fall short of your goal?
10. Do you resent the advice of others who tell you to "use a little will power" to stop overeating?
11. Despite evidence to the contrary, have you continued to assert that you can diet "on your own" whenever you wish?
12. Do you crave to eat at a definite time, day or night, other than meal time?
13. Do you eat to escape from worries or trouble?
14. Has your physician ever treated you for overweight?
15. Does your food obsession make you or others unhappy?

If you answered yes to three or more of these questions it is probable that you have a compulsive eating problem or are on the way to having one. Overeaters Anonymous members believe that the way to arrest compulsive eating is to practice the 12 step recovery program of Overeaters Anonymous. Here are the steps which are suggested as a program of recovery.

1. We admitted we were powerless over food — that our lives had become unmanageable.
2. Came to believe that a Power greater than ourselves could restore us to sanity.
3. Made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of God as we understood Him.
4. Made a searching and fearless moral inventory of ourselves.
5. Admitted to God, to ourselves and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs.
6. Were entirely ready to have God remove all these defects of character.
7. Humbly asked Him to remove our shortcomings.
8. Made a list of all persons we had harmed, and became willing to make amends to them all.
9. Made direct amends to such people wherever possible, except when to do so would injure them or others.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Need to clean those windows, but forgot to get a squeegee? Try using an extra or used windshield-wiper blade instead of rushing into the store to get a regular window squeegee.

Here's a trick for eliminating the odor left by a cat who has wet on a favorite pillow, blanket or rug. Pour mouthwash directly on the smelly area. Experiment with the amount of mouthwash needed. Some brands can be diluted half and half with water, but are still effective. For particularly hard-to-get-out smells, it is helpful to let the mouthwash set on the spot overnight before washing. A cup of white vinegar added to the wash may also help if the odor is very stubborn. Before articles are doused in mouthwash or vinegar, test a small area for colorfastness. — NICKI

Medieval Feast planned Feb. 17

The Heritage Room of the M. K. Brown Auditorium is to be transformed into the great dining hall where lords and ladies will host a Medieval Feast, an evening of medieval music and food, Friday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 p.m.

The Medieval Feast, presented by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, is to celebrate the richness of the middle ages. Twenty-five singers, musicians, dancers and jesters from West Texas State University is to provide medieval music and dance. Other diversions are also planned, including jugglers and jesters, and costumed hosts of the event.

The food for the gala feast is to be prepared by Pampa Fine Arts Association members, using authentic Medieval recipes and spices. The menu includes brie tart, pork roast with galantine sauce, mushrooms and leeks, apple fritters, fried fruit slices and hippocras. Ted Gikas is coordinating the food preparation.

Tickets for the Medieval Feast are $12.50 per person, and may be purchased from any Pampa Fine Arts Association board member, or may be purchased at Tarply, Lowrey or Behrman's stores. The deadline for purchasing tickets is Feb. 11. Seating is limited. Costumes are welcome but not required.

Guests at the Medieval Feast will hear music from the Matilda Gaume Early Music Consort, named to honor a retired professor of music at West Texas State University. Members include Scott Dunn, a junior music education major from Plainview who plays tenor recorder, tenor krumhorn and rebec; Dr. Robert Krause, WTSU associate professor of music, soprano recorder, soprano krumhorn, psaltry and harp; Richard Rhynes, junior music education major from Baird, bass recorder and bass cornamuse; Katrina Story, senior music major from Canyon, alto recorder and alto cornamuse; and Suzanne Rhynes, junior music education major from Levelland, soprano and tenor recorder and percussion.

Also featured will be 17 members of the WTSU Schola Madrigalis, under the direction of Rebecca Reese. The Schola Madrigalis will sing madrigal tunes from the middle ages.

"The Pampa Fine Arts Association is proud and excited to be giving Pampa something that is unique—an opportunity to hear beautiful music from the Middle Ages performed on authentic Medieval instruments in the setting for which the music was composed—a joyous banquet."

Floaters can mean eye trouble

You may be looking at a clear sky or a light-colored background when you first notice them. In your field of vision are one or more small, gray spots or thread-like figures.

They drift in and out of the visual field and float away when you try to stare at them directly. Because they seldom affect vision, you may not realize they are present.

They are "floaters," which are common in the general population, says the Texas Medical Association. Though usually harmless, they can indicate serious eye problems.

The eye is filled with a clear, jelly-like substance called vitreous humor. In some people, imperfections within the vitreous humor cast tiny shadows on the retina, the inner surface of the back of the eye where the visual image is formed. This results in the spots or thread figures in the visual field.

Floaters are common with the elderly and in people who are nearsighted. Even if the floaters are not bothersome, it is wise to mention them to an ophthalmologist during the next visit. This medical doctor who specializes in eye care, can check to make sure the floaters are harmless and do not indicate a more serious problem.

Floaters themselves have no treatment, but the serious eye diseases that occasionally accompany them do.

If numerous floaters appear suddenly or are accompanied by flashes or "sparks" of light, a checkup is critical.

LOSE WEIGHT EVEN AS YOU SLEEP

THE 24 HOUR DIET PLAN PACK

Losing weight has never been easier, faster, more healthful, or more certain.

The GNC Research Staff had a difficult assignment: to develop a weight loss program that puts its demands on science rather than common-sense power. They screened all the most effective plans and ads now known and combined the best of the best. Although nobody expected a miracle, a lot of people are describing this three-part program as just that.

1. Glucomannan helps you shed an average one half to one pound a day. Two Glucomannan capsules, taken 1 hour before meals with an 8-oz. glass of water form a natural high fiber gel that reduces amounts of food you need to feel full, and also provides the bulk your system needs for passing more calories undigested out of the body.

2. Amino FB burns away fat while you sleep. These amino acid tablets taken before bedtime have been known to stimulate the production of growth hormones which direct your system to burn fat for energy instead of protein or carbohydrates—a reversal of the usual process. This action is continuously effective, even during sleep.

3. Preventron assures healthful nutritional balance. This high potency vitamin and mineral supplement delivers the all important nutritional requirements your body needs to look your best, feel your best and work your best.

Absolute Guarantee We unconditionally guarantee that the 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack will help you lose 5 pounds in ten days or your full purchase price will be refunded.

The 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack contains 42 easy-to-use packets that make weight control a science, not a challenge for your will power!

Many should consider estate management planning

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Estate management or planning is everyone's problem. Homes, insurance, investments (savings accounts, stocks, bonds), furnishings, automobiles, land, and other items of financial or other value that we want to go to specific individuals or groups must be designated to go to someone. Our society through state law will distribute the estate if individuals do not plan for distribution through will or other plans.

important because the nature of property ownership determines who owns the property, who has the right to manage the property and what can happen to it upon the death when there is no will. Texas law recognizes that husband and wife own equally what they work to acquire during marriage.

According to Texas law, a spouse's "separate" property consists of property owned before marriage, property acquired during marriage by gift, inheritance by will or without will, compensation for personal injuries except that recovered for loss of earning capacity, property transferred from one spouse to another by a partition or exchange agreement, income or property arising from separate property presently owned or to be acquired, and the income and property which may arise from property that is a gift from one spouse to the other.

"Community" property consists of the property, other than separate property that is acquired by either spouse during marriage. This includes all wages and earned income from whatever source and income from community property. It also includes income from separate property unless the spouses have agreed in writing that such shall remain separate.

An estate plan is a blueprint and a process for arranging your affairs to meet your wishes about the use, conservation and disposal of your property. Common estate planning goals include: to provide for financial security during the retirement years; to distribute fairly the remainder of the estate among family members and other beneficiaries; to minimize taxes and expenses and to protect against forced sale of holdings.

Estate planning doesn't happen automatically. A series of steps must be taken before an adequate plan can be drafted.

STEP 1. Initiate discussion within the family. Without an earnest effort to communicate about the inevitable, no estate planning can happen. One's attitudes toward death and dying must be acknowledged in estate planning.

STEP 2. Conduct a complete inventory of all assets and liabilities. Complete your net worth statement. Without an accurate accounting, people frequently grossly underestimate their net worth. Extension publications L-744 Estate Planning Inventory and

B-1818 What's My Financial Health, can be used to prepare the inventory.

STEP 3. Review wills and document the location of all important financial records.

STEP 4. Find the experts who can outline your options, taking into consideration your estate planning objectives. This is also a time to determine what the costs of alternate planning strategies will be.

STEP 5. Schedule a family meeting to discuss the alternatives with family members, including adult children and their spouses. This step may avoid future family quarrels over the division of personal property.

STEP 6. Refine the plan and have any legal paperwork completed.

STEP 7. Schedule periodic check ups to ascertain if your estate plan will require changes.

Two estate planning educational opportunities are to be offered Feb. 7 and 8.

Farm and Ranch Estate Planning will be a two-day seminar Feb. 7-8 in the Rustic Inn Restaurant, 318 E. Brown in Pampa. A $10 registration fee covers meals for both days. The seminar is to be from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. To pre-register, call the Gray County Extension Office.

The second opportunity is Women and Estate Planning. This two-hour program begins at 7 p.m. Feb. 7 in the Rustic Inn. (No meal is included). This seminar focuses on wills, guardianships, and basic estate planning considerations. Plenty of time will be allowed for questions. No registration fee is required.

Both of the estate planning activities are to be conducted by Wayne Hayenga, extension economist - management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. An economist and attorney, Dr. Hayenga works with individuals and firms in financial, business and tax planning.

For more information, contact the Gray County Extension office, 669-7429.

Dr. Lamb: Safe amount of fiber

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm a healthy 38-year-old male executive. Nine years ago my doctor prescribed increasing my fiber intake as part of a stress reduction program we developed together. At that time I was suffering from acute irritable bowel problems.

Since then I've refrained from alcohol and coffee and started exercising and eating more raw and steamed vegetables, broiled poultry and fish. For breakfast I've been blending a cup of raw bran, half cups of wheat germ and oatmeal with non-fat milk and orange juice, plus a small carrot and a banana. I've also been taking extra amounts of water soluble vitamins, 1,000 IU of vitamin E, plus mineral tablets - all prescribed by my physician.

My blood pressure is 105/80, my serum cholesterol is 125 and I can run five miles and hardly feel winded.

I feel great. However, I've read that high fiber diets can cause chemical binding of certain critical nutrients. The nutrients bind with the fiber rendering them non-absorbable by the body.

Could you comment on this since people have more fiber in their diet these days? Incidentally, my bouts with irritable bowel syndrome have virtually disappeared.

DEAR READER - I'm glad to hear your bowel problems have disappeared with your program. Many people find that by eliminating coffee, alcohol and increasing the bulk in their diet, such symptoms disappear.

I'm not particularly sold on your large dose of vitamin E, however. There is some evidence that large amounts of vitamin E can be harmful. You'd be getting more vitamin E than most people get anyway from your wheat germ and the rest of your diet.

I wouldn't worry too much about the effects of fiber binding minerals. It will affect the ability to absorb calcium, iron and zinc. But when people have a balanced diet and are consuming an adequate amount of calcium foods such as fortified skim milk, this really isn't much of a problem.

There are ways you can improve your absorption of these minerals, despite a certain amount of bulk in your diet. If you are taking supplements, take them between meals rather than during the meal. Most of the absorption occurs in the small intestines. Between meals the first part of the small intestines is usually empty. The bulk will have moved on and will not interfere with the absorption of minerals.

Another trick is to be sure to include an adequate amount of vitamin C in your diet. It helps improve absorption of both calcium and iron. That vitamin C can come from fresh fruits or fruit juice. Additional iron can be obtained by using iron cookware.

The fact that some fibers bind minerals is not an adequate reason for eliminating fiber from the diet. You can have both your fibers and minerals if you do it right.

Buying clothes for men

"The most common mistake made by women who buy men's clothes is trying to make the man look too fashionable, says dress-for-success specialist John T. Molloy, in a current Family Circle magazine article.

Molloy suggests that a woman should ask her mate what the other male executives are wearing. Remember the basic rule in men's clothing is to follow the boss. "Otherwise, you're not going to be one," says Molloy.

Don't have a suit dry-cleaned if it only needs a pressing. Dry cleaning chemicals can harm the suit's fabric over time. Sometimes just allowing the suit to hang overnight will get rid of wrinkles.

Remember that silk ties should always be cut on the bias so they fall straight once you've tied the knot. Some manufacturers try to save money by not cutting on the bias, which means the tie won't hang straight. So... before buying a tie, hold it across your hand. If it doesn't hang straight, it was probably not cut on the bias. Don't buy it.

To make sure the ties drape properly, make a crease or dimple in the center of the tie, just underneath the knot. Avoid tying the knot too tightly.

Other hints from Family Circle include:

- If a favorite vase has become dingy inside and difficult or impossible to scrub, fill the vase with warm water, drop in a denture tablet and let it sit. The vase will be sparkling - clean in no time.
- A piece of aluminum foil placed under a cloth napkin in a bread basket will keep rolls, biscuits and bread hot longer.
- An egg slicer is eggs - actly what you need to quickly dice potatoes for a large bowl of potato salad. The slicer also works like a charm with mushrooms.

Beverlee McKinsey will play Alexandra on 'The Guiding Light'.

Beverlee McKinsey, long known to daytime serial viewers for her portrayal of colorful Iris Carrington on the serials "Another World" and "Texas," will return to daytime television after a three-year absence when she joins the cast of "Guiding Light" the first week in February.

Miss McKinsey will portray a newly created character, Alexandra Spaulding, the long-lost sister of millionaire industrialist Alan Spaulding (played by series regular Christopher Bernal). Alexandra unexpectedly turns up in Springfield, after spending years in Europe, as the guest of honor at her brother's elegant Valentine's Day costume ball.

Professor became a singer

NEW YORK (AP) — Unlike many musicians, Michael Franks did not perform in backwater saloons or wait on tables while he sought a recording contract. Discovering that he had a knack for getting grants and teaching jobs, he lectured on the history of popular song at three universities and almost completed a Ph.D. on music's social import before signing with Warner Brothers Records in 1975.

Since then, Franks has made seven LPs. His academic career has fallen on hard times, but has served him well. The knowledge he acquired about great American songwriters may be partly responsible for the urban sophistication and intelligent lyrics that typify his music. His newest album, "Passionfruit," is perhaps his best yet. It is beautifully produced and, like all of Franks' albums, boasts a stellar cast of musicians.

"I think this album has a more urban feel than some of my earlier work," he said.

His music is marked by strikingly contemporary jazz rhythms and blues riffs.

Even if you have HBO, Cinemax, Playboy, Disney, and Bravo, you'll still miss the blockbuster of the month.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

This coming year you are likely to establish two distinct groups of friends. One set will share your career interests, the other will be purely social.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In your dealings with friends today keep everything out in the open. If you try to hide something it could pop up later and cause you embarrassment. The areas in which you'll be the luckiest in 1984 are answered in your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead. Mail $1 and your zodiac sign to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet, which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Weigh all of your alternatives carefully today. Broader choices could turn losers into winners, especially in financial areas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Ambitions aren't apt to be fulfilled today if you treat serious matters too lightly. Be realistic where it is necessary.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is a possibility today you might create a few needless problems. Fortunately, you possess the ingenuity to extricate yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In negotiations today, don't enter into arrangements where you hope to get more than you give. Things will work only if you are fair.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Protect yourself in career matters today, or else an associate might attempt to take credit for your efforts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't do anything rash or foolhardy but, if a calculated risk is required today to better your position in life, don't be too timid to try it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This can be a productive day, provided you're prepared to follow through on that which you start, regardless of the complications.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Strive to be cooperative today, but maintain the courage of your convictions. Don't agree to anything against your better judgment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The methods and means you use today in your material affairs should produce profitable results. However, don't employ these same tactics with friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to be quite fortunate today in most areas. The exception: where your finances are concerned. Be prudent in money matters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A member of your family might cause you some unnecessary frustrations today. If your attitude is tolerant and forgiving the matter will be quickly forgotten.

Motive becomes key in nurse's trial for murder

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — After three weeks of often tedious technical testimony, the case against nurse Genevieve Jones will begin this week, prosecutors say, as a motive emerges.

Officials have remained tight-lipped throughout the case about their theories of possible motives. But at week's end, the story they plan to tell was slowly emerging.

Based on courtroom hints and hallway chats, the story that will be played out before a jury Monday and Tuesday will apparently go something like this:

Ms. Jones injected a powerful muscle relaxant into high-risk infants to temporarily halt their breathing and muscle tension. She would then try to revive the infants in hopes of appearing a "hero" to doctors and other nurses.

"We've gotten some tidbits into the record that, on their own, don't mean anything and probably passed right over the jury, but it will make sense when we tie everything together," said Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton, the lead prosecutor.

Sutton forecast "some surprises" yet to come, and acknowledged the "hero" theory is their best guess as to a motive.

"We think we can go beyond that, too," he said. Ms. Jones, 33, is being tried in the Sept. 17, 1982, death of Chelsea McClellan, a 15-month-old girl who died after two injections from the vocational nurse.

Prosecutors say she injected succinylcholine, a powerful muscle relaxant that they believe killed Chelsea.

"Just stick it out until the end (of prosecution witnesses). You'll see," said Nick Rothe, Bexar County assistant district attorney.

On Thursday, Sutton filled in a calendar of Ms. Jones' employment at the office of Kerrville pediatrician Dr. Kathleen Holland. The calendar showed the days Chelsea visited the office, the days five other children were stricken while under the nurse's care, the days the office was closed and even five days of hospitalization for Ms. Jones.

"That's what this is — filling in the calendar," said Rothe when asked if prosecutors were beginning to focus on motive.

The state's case against Ms. Jones should be completed Monday or Tuesday, Rothe and Sutton said. Defense attorneys will then begin presenting their version of Chelsea's death.

Sutton took the calendar one dramatic step further when he, with Ms. Holland's testimony and medical records, produced a chart illustrating Ms. Jones' suspicious record at Ms. Holland's office.

The chart showed that, during Ms. Jones' employment in Ms. Holland's office, all five infants younger than 2-years who had a history of illness and who were subjected to intravenous solutions or injections prepared by Ms. Jones inexplicably went limp and stopped breathing.

Chelsea was the only one who died.

Defense attorney Bart Carnes objected to the chart. But Sutton, in one of the few courtroom hints to prosecutors' intentions, angrily responded, "This goes to show the motive and the intent of Genevieve Jones."

Sutton explained: "Every time she got the opportunity on a child with the right symptomatology, that child was down."

Defense attorneys have maintained that Ms. Jones did not inject infants with dangerous drugs, and further that succinylcholine was not the cause of Chelsea's death.

A gag order issued by state district Judge John Carter has tempered attorney's comments. Both sides have kept their cards close to the vest.

Earlier in the week, Sutton and Rothe won the judge's permission to introduce evidence about six children whose episodes of limpness and loss of breathing resulted in injury-to-a-child indictments against Ms. Jones.

Again, prosecutors argued the evidence was important to their efforts at establishing a motive.

Drug indictments name 37 persons

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A former chief assistant state prosecutor and 36 others from Ecuador to Pennsylvania have been indicted on racketeering and drug charges involving an alleged cartel which federal agents say operated out of Tampa between 1978-83.

Charges outlined in a 20-count indictment returned Friday include bribery, extortion, threatening a trial witness and drug smuggling. The charges related to activities surrounding the Tampa-based Angelo Bedami international drug smuggling operation, authorities said.

The indictment alleges that Norman Cannella, 43, now in private practice, and John Demmi, another Tampa lawyer, took bribes as protection for drug operations.

U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle said at a news conference that arrests were made in the Florida cities of Tampa, Miami and Ocala, and Wilkes-Barre and Pittsburgh, Pa., Atlanta and Savannah, Ga., Mobile, Ala., and Chicago.

Merkle said a cartel, allegedly run by Bedami, who was arrested last May, and Rick Hernandez of Brownsville, Texas, who was indicted Friday, managed to stay in business "through bribery and corruption of public officials."

Cannella was chief assistant Hillsborough State Attorney when state and local investigators first began making their case against Bedami. That investigation resulted in a state indictment of 24 people last spring.

Cannella had been second in command at the state attorney's office for six years before he resigned last spring to go into private practice.

He had no comment when he was arrested and led into the federal courthouse. Cannella was released on $100,000 signature bond, which means he posted no
