Late polls show gap narrowing in New Hampshire

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) - New Hampshire voters, playing their traditional and often unpredictable role in presidential politics, went to the polls today with one survey indicating Sen. Gary Hart had pulled even with acknowledged front-runner Walter F. Mondale.

The poll, conducted Saturday through Monday for ABC News and the Washington Post, showed the former vice president and Hart, the Colorado senator, each with 30 percent support. It surveyed 446 Democrats and independents who said they were sure to vote today.

Placing third was Sen. John Glenn with 14 percent. The Rev. Jesse Jackson had 8 percent. Based on a rolling three-day average, the poll has margin of error of plus or minus 6

THE POLL INDICATED a dramatic movement of support toward Hart, who placed second in the Iowa party caucuses last week. On Sunday, an earlier ABC News-Washington Post poll showed a seven-point lead for Mondale over Hart. An even earlier ABC-Post poll had showed Mondale with a

In line with state tradition, the 27 voters of Dixville Notch, a tiny mountain hamlet, cast their ballots at midnight, with Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina receiving 3 votes and Mondale getting 2 votes from Democrats. Hart and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew had 1 each

On the Republican side, President Reagan had 15 votes, while Hollings had 5 write-ins.

Most New Hampshire polls open at 9 a.m. or 10 a.m., EST, and close anywhere from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Nationwide, a new CBS News-New York Times poll showed Mondale far ahead among those who said they were likely to vote in a Democratic primary or caucus.

That poll, released Monday, showed Mondale with 57 percent, followed by Jackson with 8 percent, Glenn and Hart with 7 percent each, former Sen. George McGovern with 6 percent. Hollings with 2 percent, Cranston with 1 percent and Askew with less than 1

GLENN, OF OHIO, whose standing in the New Hampshire polls plunged after his disappointing fifth place finish in the Iowa caucuses last week, insisted Monday that he's in the race to stay and predicted he would rebound and win the Reagan had only token opposition in the contest for the state's 22 delegates to the Republican National Convention. He also might be a factor on the Democratic side where supporters were urging voters to write in his name.

The Democrats also will send only 22 delegates to their party convention out of a total of more than 3.300

BUT THE NUMBERS aren't what matters in this primary. It's a test of whether Mondale can solidify his status as front-runner in a conservative state that has been rough on such leaders in the past as Sen. Edmund S. Muskie and George Romney.

People in this state are proud to remind visitors that since 1952 no one has been elected president who didn't first win the New Hampshire primary.

Jackson moved to an emotional close of his New Hampshire campaign as he tried to overcome the impact of allegations he had referred to Jews as "Hymies," a term found offensive by many Jewish people.

After saying for nearly two weeks that he could not remember using the term, Jackson appeared Sunday night at a Manchester synagogue and admitted he had used the term in a private conversation.

THE DAY AFTER his admission. Jackson still was being questioned about the incident. At a rally in Littleton, a questioner in the audience who identified himself as a Baptist minister, as is Jackson, asked the candidate if he shouldn't withdraw from the race.

Jackson replied that he would not pull out. "If there is anyone amongst us that can throw a stone based on perfection. the rock will stay on the floor," he said. "Even Baptist ministers can't claim perfection

Appearing on ABC-TV's Nightline Monday night, Jackson said he regretted the remark. "It was an unfortunate off-color remark in private conversation, and I was astounded at the attention that it finally did receive.

Hollings passed up lowa and invested all his efforts in New Hampshire.

City approves street repairs

Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners this · morning approved street repair and seal coating programs with a total tentative cost of more than $700,000 by voting to use emergency reserve funds · in an effort to catch up on street maintenance

Original staff recommendations on awarding bids for the project included general street repairs for designated streets throughout the city and seal coating projects for the northeast section of the city.

But commissioners voiced concern that efforts be made to take care of seal coating projects for the entire city within two years, if funding could be

"Let's be optimistic instead of negative." Commissioner Bob Curry said.

Curry was joined by the mayor and other commissioners in using emergency reserve funds to increase the area to be seal coated this year. Commissioners approved a bid from Lewis Construction of Pampa which included the northwest section of the city for seal coating projects.

"We need to get this whole project

(seal coating) behind us in two years' instead of having longer delays and costing taxpayers "even more" money for street maintenance needs, Mayor Calvin Whatley said.

City Manager Mack Wofford reported the city had $483,157 in the reserve fund as of Monday. Questioned by Commissioner Jay Johnson, Wofford said seal coating expenses for both sections would leave about $150,000 in the reserve fund if money were used to accept the bid for both sections. The original recommended bid called for $328,500 for street repairs and $196,800 for seal coating the area east of Russell and north of Harvester. Lewis had included an alternate bid including the northwest section. Total costs, based on payments for the number of square yards of material used, would be between $740,000 and $750,000. Repair work could begin immediately, with seal coating work beginning on or around May 1. according to contract terms. City Attorney Don Lane explained.

'We've got the money; we might as well use it." Curry said.

"We have to do it; we're in dire need now," Commissioner E. E. "Smiley" Henderson said

"I feel like the citizens of Pampa are so sick and tired of our streets" needing repairs that the city should begin catch-up programs as soon as possible. Mayor Whatley said.

The current operating budget had alloted only $410,000 for street maintenance and repairs. The northeast section was lasted seal coated in 1971, and the northwest section in 1973. In other action, the commission approved donating $10,000 to Clean Pampa, Inc., to aid the organization in its efforts to begin programs to eliminate city littering problems. W. A. Morgan, chairman of Clean Pampa, Inc., said the organization plans to work on getting citizens involved in efforts to attack litter

District court says Bell can't increase rate now

AUSTIN (AP) - Southwestern Bell, which scurried to the courthouse after the Public Utility Commission denied an immediate $280 million rate hike, today is deciding whether it will look for another courthouse.

A state district judge on Monday upheld the PUC's order denying an increase that would have added $2.75 a month to residential bills. Judge Mary Pearl Williams told the phone company it can't get the temporary hike until April 22.

Paul Roth, Bell vice president for revenues in Texas, said that's too late. Company officials say the delay will cost them $46 million.

"We'll have to talk to our lawyers. We have the right of appeal. We'll have to look at our options. said.

The company can appeal to the 3rd

Court of Appeals in Austin. Attorney General Jim Mattox. whose staff defended the PUC order, called the Monday decision a "victory for ratepayers all over Texas.

"We have won a battle, but the war to keep phone rates affordable still goes on," he said. "I am hopeful that this ruling will give the PUC time to make a decision that will not stick residential customers with higher rates for phone service.

Monday's courtroom battle was over the refundable rates that utility companies are allowed to charge while rate cases are pending. Bell has a $1.3 billion case pending at the PUC. Last year, lawmakers added 60 days to the waiting period between the filing of a rate hike request and the date a utility can set and collect bonded rates. The new law took effect on Sept. 1.

Bell filed its rate case in June, but did not complete the filing until Oct. 19. Company officials said the old law requiring a 125-day waiting period governs their case

But the commission said the new law rules because Bell didn't finish filing until Oct. 19. Mrs. Williams agreed

Under the 185-day law, Bell can charge bonded rates on April 22, but a final order in the $1.3 billion case is expected before then.

Larry Milner speaks at Chamber breakfast

Coal expected to contain cost of Panhandle power

Southwestern Public Service Company is banking on coal to contain the cost of electricity to Panhandle residents in the years ahead, SPS Vice President Larry Milner said Tuesday.

Milner spoke at a Pampa Chamber of Commerce Eggs and Issues Breakfast on the future energy needs of the Texas Panhandle and the Pampa area

He said SPS has investigated the possibility of using other energy sources to fire its power plants, but has found that coal will be the most economical for the foreseeable future.

But despite the use of coal to enerate 52 percent of the company's electricity, the cost of fuel has climbed from 37 percent of operating costs in 1974 to 65 percent in 1983. However, Milner said, SPS' use of coal has saved customers $107 million in the 1983 fiscal year.

"If only natural gas were used to generate electricity, boiler fuel costs alone would outstrip out total projected 1987 operating budget,"

Despite the savings from the use of coal, consumer prices will steadily increase in the next decade, Milner predicted. Current cost of electricity is slightly below 6 cents per kilowatt hour and Milner said the company expects that cost to climb to somewhere between 8 and 10 cents in

He said Southwestern Public Service is assured of an abundant supply of electrical power in the future through long-range contracts to purchase coal from Wyoming. The company is also negotiating to buy coal from Raton, N.M., and is involved in a study to determine the feasibility of a pipeline from Raton to Idalou, where the company will build its next power plant.

Milner said SPS has not been involved in reported plans for construction of a pipeline from Wyoming to the Panhandle and he doubted the feasibility of such a

Other important factors in holding down the rate of increase in cost of electricity is economic construction of power plants and maintaining a high bond rating, he explained.

Milner said the SPS Tolk station at Muleshoe was constructed at a cost of $495 per KW (dollars per kilowatt of plant capacity) while the average cost of all power plants build in the United States has been $808 per KW. He said SPS can built plants at lower cost than many other companies because it has its own staff of design engineers and does not have to hire outside

Attorney says city of Borger will appeal Grandstaff award

AMARILLO - The lawyer who defended the City of Borger said today the city will appeal a jury's verdict that awards $1,430,000 to the family of a Panhandle cowboy shot to death by Borger police in 1981.

Wayne Sturdivant, of Amarillo, said the city will appeal the damages awarded the family of Four Sixes Ranch cowboy James Grandstaff, 31, which were left unchanged in a judgment filed by U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson last Thursday.

"I'm sure they will. I don't think there's any question about it," Sturdivant said about the city's planned

The defense lawyer said he will file a number of motions on behalf of the city and call for hearings in connection with an appeal. Sturdivant said the case will be appealed to the federal 5th Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

He said two principles involved with an appeal are that the jurors ruled "everything the officers did was authorized by law," and "no one has ever proved or attempted to prove who shot the man.

Jody Sheets will relay the city council's intentions in the case later. After a three - week trial of a civil rights lawsuit that ended in Amarillo Feb. 3, a federal court jury ruled that four past and present Borger police officers "recklessly" killed Grandstaff and ordered the officers and city to pay. Judge Robinson has ordered a hearing within two weeks to determine who will pay the Grandstaffs' attorneys' fees. The plaintiffs have asked that the defendants pay attorneys' fees of $630,000 in addition to the $1,430,000 damage award.

The city was insured for only $500,000 at the time of Grandstaff's Aug. 11, 1981 shooting death.

The jurors ruled that Borger officers John Robert Alonzo and John Gill Ray and former city officers Bailey Hal Roberts and John Wayne Turner all used deadly force against the cowboy and share equal responsibility for his

Grandstaff, foreman of the Four Sixes' north camp east of Borger, was gunned down by Borger officers who said they mistook him for a fugitive they had chased from town onto the ranch property

The 1981 shooting was justified under state law because officers mistool Grandstaff for fugitive Lonnie Cox, the jurors ruled. However, the fatal shooting of the wrong man was also "reckless, malicious, wanton and oppressive" and a result of widespread incompetence" throughout the Borger police force, the jury verdict said. The City of Borger itself is mostly to blame for the shooting, because it was "grossly negligent in failing to properly train its officers," jurors said.

White launches attack on Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas Gov. Mark White has accused President Reagan of ignoring the economic plight of communities near the Mexican border and suggested that the border region might have to invite a U.S. military invasion to attract federal aid.

"If President Reagan doesn't believe there is hunger in America, then let him come to South Texas where he can see it in the face of the people," White said Monday in a speech to the National Press Club.

White, a Democrat, said he felt that 'having seen the help that Grenada got from the administration after the invasion that maybe we should invite such an invasion of South Texas and have the Marines come down and await

White said that residents of the border region, long one of the nation's poorest, were teetering on "the precipice of economic disaster."

Peso devaluations in 1982 sharply reduced Mexican buying power on the U.S. side of the border, bringing a sharp drop in retail sales and tourism and a surge in unemployment, he said.

Then a winter freeze last December 'caused record crop damage' in the lower Rio Grande Valley and thousands more farm workers lost their jobs, he

White said the signs of distress were visible everywhere, in "the boarded-up businesses on main street, the dirt streets...turned to mud by rain, ramshackle one-room dwellings in which whole families live with no running water...and large numbers of jobless people...standing in lines for soup or other basic assistance..."

'The president says America is back, but it isn't back in the (Rio Grande) Valley," White said. But he said that "we ask the president for real help, in economics or enforcement or education, and we get empty gestures, giving with one hand and taking away with another."

White was in Washington attending a meeting of the National Governors' Association. Though attacking Reagan in his speech, White did not join other governors at an earlier meeting with the president at the White House.

Ann Arnold, White's press secretary, said White did not go because he was reviewing his speech. White said he also was dealing by telephone with problems in Texas.

White said he saw no point in trying to raise the problems of the border with the president personally because such meetings "are not very substantive too

White, who for the past year has publicly urged increased federal assistance to the border region, said Reagan was already well aware of his

Superpowers not in agreement on deployment of U. N. forces

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -Government troops battled rebel militia forces in Beirut and the neighboring mountains today, while the superpowers were reported at odds on how to deploy a U.N. peacekeeping force to curb the fighting.

In Jerusalem, a cluster of hand grenades exploded in a store on the main shopping street today and injured 22 people, according to police and hospital spokesmen. One Israeli police officer at the scene said several people were detained for questioning about the explosion.

Police in Beirut said six people were killed and 13 wounded in overnight fighting around the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb and across the "green line" dividing the city's Christian and Moslem sectors. A boy and two adults died and 19 others were injured in mid-city clashes on Monday.

At the United Nations, the Security Council scheduled another round of talks today on forming a peacekeeping force for Lebanon. The United States declared its support late Monday for deployment of U.N. troops throughout Lebanon, but sources on the council said the Soviet Union wanted the forces restricted to Beirut. The Security Council has been debating whether to send a U.N. force to promote a cease-fire and protect civilians now that most of the multinational force provided by France, Britain, Italy and the United States has withdrawn from Lebanon. The resolution prepared by France, which still has about 1,250 troops in Lebanon, would deploy the U.N. force in "the Beirut area" when the multinational force has left "the territory and waters under Lebanese sovereignty.' The blasts of shells echoed through both halves of Beirut during the night and gunfire kept thousands of inhabitants awake in residential areas close to the green line. The fighting pits the army and Christian militias against Syrian-backed Druse and Shiite Warplanes swept over Beirut and the * mountain ridge east of the capital on repeated runs today, but local radio stations said they were unable to determine whether the craft were Israeli jets or American ones from the 6th Fleet squadron based off shore.

School prayer bill has a chance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although it debate on school prayer later this week. faces a tough fight on Capitol Hill, a proposed constitutional amendment to permit prayer in public schools may have the best shot at winning congressional passage of any of the so-called New Right social issues long embraced by President Reagan.

That appears to be the consensus of prayer amendment backers, and some opponents as well, as the Senate prepares to take up the measure and House sponsors plan an all-night talkathon to dramatize their support for

To date, none of the social legislation advocated by Reagan and congressional conservatives in their 1980 campaigns has won congressional approval. Those issues include school prayer and anti-abortion amendments and prohibitions against school busing.

Now, with the 1984 campaigns well under way, conservatives are joining forces and focusing their energies on winning last-ditch approval of the prayer amendment

The Senate is expected to begin

Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., a 1988 presidential hopeful, is personally leading the charge determined liberal filibuster. "He's trying to set the agenda for social issues. And on this one, there's more support than on the other issues,' said Tom Griscom, a Baker aide. He said some national surveys have showed that as many as 85 percent of the American public supports a return of voluntary prayer to schools.

Debate could tie the Republican-run Senate up for weeks, but Baker has expressed optimism that he'll be able to eventually muster the vote necessary votes to choke a filibuster threatened by Senate liberals.

The amendment requires two-thirds votes in both chambers before it could be offered to states for ratification.

Reagan has made the prayer amendment a top legislative priority, telling Americans in a radio address last weekend that the prohibition on prayer in schools is "intolerance against genuine religious freedom. Republican House sponsors of the measure have enlisted an all-star lineup of sports personalities to dramatize their support for Senate approval and to try to force a House vote. They also plan an all-night session to coincide with the start of the Senate Scheduled speakers at a planned GOP forum supporting the prayer amendment include Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs and kicker Mark Moseley, former Baltimore Colt halfback Lenny Moore, former New York Giants and Los Angeles Rams tackle Rosey Grier and Meadlowlark Lemon of the Harlem Globetrotters.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on constitutional rights. where the measure is currently bottled up, says he will hold "in depth" hearings on the measure if it wins Senate approval. He concedes the school prayer amendment is popular in Congress and he expects its approval, at least in the GOP-run Senate.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Credit surcharge law should expire

American businessmen are free, at least for a few days, from an oppressive federal law that tells them they must provide a service to consumers free of charge whether they want to or not. Beginning today, in order to cover the extra expenses they incur, businesses have the option of charging a bit extra for purchases made with

They have that option, though, only because a law that prohibited such charges expired at midnight last night and opponents of extension have so far prevented Congress from reimposing the law.

The debate on the issue is continuing and you might expect the conservative elements in this country, which talk long and loud about the merits of economic freedom and the glories of the free enterprise system, to favor allowing such repressive legislation to die an inglorious death. Not so. Leading supporter of extending the law is the American Bankers Association, which strongly favors economic freedom for its members, but apparently doesn't mind stifling the rights of others in order to make sure the banks' operations are profitable. So much for the dedication of many conservatives to preserving free enterprise.

That such a law was ever passed in the first place in a country that likes to call itself free is a bit incredible. When businesses accept credit cards rather than cash, they incur additional expenses of added paperwork and in some instances, delays in turning those credit cards into money, which affects the cash flow of their business. The fact that it costs them more is confirmed by studies of such diverse groups as the Consumer Federation of America, the Federal Reserve Board and the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency. We can think of no moral or legitimate justification for government telling a private businessman it is illegal to charge enough for his

The bankers association is opposed to allowing merchants to recoup their extra costs because the banks are afraid a surcharge would cause a decrease in the usage of credit cards in this country and reduce the profitability of their Master and Visa cards. We doubt that many businesses would impose a surcharge because of the fear it would drive away customers. But that is properly a decision for the individual businessman to make. It is not the business of the federal government.

The fact that those in the banking industry are heavy contributors to political campaigns does not make us confident that Congress will do the right thing and refuse to renew the law. You will hear a lot of pious talk about protecting the consumer from price-gouging merchants and within a few days merchants will again very likely be prohibited from charging extra for processing credit cards

But don't be misled by that talk of protecting the consumer. The consumer is going to pay for the merchants' extra cost one way or another. If the surcharge on credit cards is allowed and utilized, only the credit card user will pay the extra cost. If it is not allowed, the merchant is forced to raise his prices to cover the extra cost and all customers, whether they use credit cards or not, will pay the bill.

Every time government tells you it is acting to protect the consumer, you are going to have to pay for that protection whether you want it or not. That is something the politicians apparently are unwilling to admit, but it is something American citizens must remember if we are to preserve the remnants of the free enterprise system in

Medicare cut charges are false

As Congress wrestles with the federal budget deficit, one of the biggest issues is the upward spiral in health care costs.

No only is health care inflation, at 8.7 percent, nearly 3 times the basic inflation rate, but this year we will spend more than $390 billion on personal health—a whopping 10.5 percent of Gross National Product

The nation's health care bill has risen six-fold since 1970, when we spent only $65 billion, about 6.5 percent of GNP

Small wonder that the next major crisis facing the federal government is the bankruptcy of Medicare, which could be $300 billion in the hole by 1990 if nothing is

Over the last decade or so, Medicare costs have been rising at the astonishing annual rate of 18 percent-and even with inflation down, the Reagan administration was only able to slow that growth rate to 16 percent a year from 1982 to 1984.

You can imagine our confusion, then, when we received a very angry letter from Maggie Kuhn of the Gray Panthers Project Fund talking about "$13.8 billion in cuts already made in Medicaid and Medicare for 1982-84," saying that "The Reagan administration has turned the sharpened edge of the budget axe to our health care...'

Apparently the axe wasn't all that sharp. In the period from 1981 to 1984 (three Reagan budgets) total Medicare spending has shot up-from $42.4 billion in 1981 (Carter's last year) to an estimated $$66.5 billion, an increase of $24.1 billion in three years. Some cut! Medicaid's rate of growth has, mercifully, been slowed somewhat from 14 percent per year under Carter to 8 percent, but then overall inflation has been cut from 13 percent to 4 percent

So where are those $13.8 billion in "cuts already made in Medicare and Medicaid?" They are a figment of the Gray Panthers' fevered political imagination. In the 1982 Carter budget proposal, that "liberal" administration projected total outlays for 1982, 1983 and 1984 of $154.3 billion. The actual cost of Medicare for those three years, under old hard-hearted Ronnie, will exceed $173.7 billion, nearly $20 billion more than the Carter proposal, despite lower inflation.

Even Medicaid, which Reagan has tried to curb through the use of block grants, spend $57.5 billion over the three years, against a Carter projection of $63.2 billion.

This means that the Reagan outlays on the two programs will be a whopping $13.7 billion higher than than Carter proposed.

The truth is this administration has only just begun to deal with Medicare's mindless economic disincentives.

As David B. Swoap, Health and Welfare

Secretary for California Gov. George Deukmejian, put it in a recent Wall Street Journal article, "Today, Medicare is a system almost unrivalled for inefficiency: A system that finances hundreds of thousands of unnecessary operations, but won't pay for simple intespensive preventive Swoap argues that most of the proposed solutions to the Medicare crisis—such as higher deductibles and premiums, and shifting to a catastrophic illness approach-"would simply dig deeper into the pockets of taxpayers and the elderly. which costs (to both) continue to leapfrog anyone's ability to pay for them." Instead, he argues, "we must open up the entire health care system to marketplace forces."

This is precisely what they are doing in California with promising initial results. In 1982, the California Legislature gave the incoming governor two major pieces of

First, it gave the state the authority to contract competitively with hospitals for services for the states' MediCal (Medicaid) population for inpatient care. The state now has contracts for nearly 90 percent of this program, saving more than $126 million this

01984 Copley News Service

The program also includes contracting directly with California counties for what is called "Primary Care Case Management," with each Medicaid recipient assigned to a personal physician who in turn has incentives to "manage" that patient's care efficiently at a fixed monthly fee.

The second major step taken by the California Legislature was to allow insurance companies and other private corporate buyers of health care services to contract selectively and competitively with groups of providers and hospitals, which offer special, lower rates-known as Preferred Provider Organizations (PPO's)

The same competive market forces that are being used in Medicaid also are working in the California private health care sector. thus avoiding a "two-tiered" approach to care for the poor.

Swoap argues that the California model could "rescue the solvency of Medicare without arbitrary regulations, draconian cutbacks, or increased taxes..." All that would be needed is Congressional legislation to revoke laws in about 40 states that now forbid insurance companies from negotiating PPO-style contracts.

Then, gradually, Medicare patients could be moved to a prepaid health maintenance approach to cover all health care under a single annual rate. This, combined with deregulation of the halth care industry, could restore market reality to health care.

By The Associated Press Today is Tuesday, Feb. 28th, the 59th day of 1984. There are 307 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Feb. 28th, 1975, a London subway train crashed into the wall at the end of a tunnel, killing 37 people.

In 1704, American colonists in Deerfield, Mass. were attacked by Indians.

In 1844, Secretary of State Abel Upshur, Navy Secretary Thomas Gilmer and three others were killed when a gun exploded on a Navy ship during an excursion down the Potomac.

In 1966, astronauts Elliot See and Charles Bassett were killed when their jet trainer crashed into an aerospace plant in St. Louis. And in 1976, President Gerald Ford denounced Cuba's Fidel Castro as an international outlaw for sending 12,000 troops into Angola.

Ten years ago: The United States and Egypt re-established diplomatic relations after a 7-year break.

Five years ago: The Carter Administration said the United States had been forced to abandon an electronic listening post in northeastern Iran that had been used to monitor Soviet missile tests.

One year ago: America's three former presidents - Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter - joined about 500 Washington dignitaries in a salute to retired Admiral Hyman Rickover.

A spurious form of justice

NEW YORK (NEA) - Psst, wanna make some big money here in the Big Apple without doing any real work? Here's how: Jump in front of a subway train as it roars into the station, then sue the city's transit officials for damages because the motorman failed to stop in time to avoid causing you serious injury.

That bizarre scheme may appear to be highly risky if not totally preposterous, but Milo Stephens threw himself onto the tracks as a train approached, sued the subway system for negligence and recently received a $650,000 settlement. If you like that anecdote about a legal system run amok,

In Los Angeles, a jury late last year ordered the Allstate Insurance Co. to pay Henry Fellows and members of his family more than $40 million because Allstate refused to honor the family's $31,000 claim for a 1976 auto accident. Allstate contended that the Fellows family suffered only about $6,000 in actual damages as a result of the accident, but the jury apparently responded to the argument made by the family's lawyer who said that authorizing a massive damage award was the only way to properly punish a large and wealthy insurance company.

In compensatory damages, the jury awarded $200,000 to Fellows for whiplash, $250,000 to his wife for a broken arm, $40,000 to a son for a broken collarbone and $5,000 apiece to two nieces for minor injuries.

The piece de resistance, however, was the jury's punitive damage award to the family of $40 million.

That apparently was too much for the presiding judge, who agreed that, "There is no question that Allstate did not do what they should have done in this case," but recently ordered that a new trial be held to reassess the damage

The New York and California cases unfortunately are only two of the most recent examples of what occurs when an increasingly litigious society places an intolerable burden on a legal system that was not designed to withstand such Judicial rulings in both civil and criminal cases frequently are perceived as erratic and idiosyncratic rather than fair and just. The courts become the forum for resolving disputes which should be settled through arbitration, negotiation or conciliation. Finally, the legal system loses the respect it must have to function properly.

"The blunt, inexcusable fact is that this nation, which prides itself on efficiency and justice, has developed a legal system that is the most expensive in the world yet cannot manage to protect the rights of most of its citizens," Harvard University President Derek C. Bok noted last year.

A lawyer himself and a former dean of the Harvard Law School, Bok elaborated in his annual report:

"Our legal system leads to much waste of money that could be put to better purposes.... The law may seem enlight-ened and humane, but its constant stream of rules will leave a wake strewn with the disappointed hopes of those who find the legal system too complicated to understand, too quixotic to command respect and too expensive to be of much practi-

The court case here provides an unusually vivid example of those quixotic qualities. A young man with a history of emotional problems and a patient at a psychiatric facility, Stephens attempted to commit suicide in 1977 by lunging in front of an oncoming subway train.

Stephens then filed a civil suit against the New York City Transit Authority, acknowledging that he had considerable responsibility for the accident but claiming that the motorman also was negligent because he failed to stop sooner.

A jury was being selected to consider the case recently when the Transit Authority decided it didn't want a trial and when the Transit Authority decided it than t was instead offered Stephens $650,000 to settle his claim.

That must be what Boll was talking about when he complained of a legal system that today dispenses "a s form of justice" that is neither equitable nor rational.

Governors demanding deficit Celanese. Many seem easier to read, such as Emhart's, which enhances fine writing with large type; and some, such as the action from Reagan, Congress unsuccessful efforts to simplify reports," says Dunk, alluding to a Financial Executive Institute summary subtitled

WASHINGTON (AP) -The nation's governors say it is time to light a fire under President Reagan and Congress to get action on the federal deficit, even if that means massive new spending cuts and tax hikes.

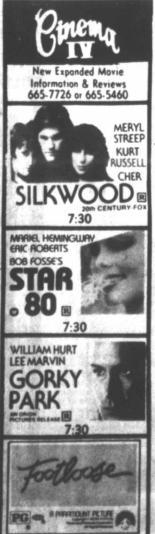

But Reagan gave the governors little encouragement that changes might be made this election year when he met with them at the White House on Monday. "He very clearly stated that 1984 is not the year to start a major campaign was a new signal of against the deficit. It has to wait until after the election." said Florida's Gov. Bob Graham, a Democrat, after meeting with Reagan. That's a very serious mistake. The governors pressed on. with a vote set at the closing session of the National Governors' Association conference today on a budget plan that would slash the deficit by $188 billion in 1989.

'The governors ought to build a fire under the president and build one under Congress as well to try to prevent them from waiting until after the election." said Michigan Gov. James Blanchard, a Democrat.

Urging adoption of some budget proposal, Illinois Gov. James Thompson, the group's chairman, said the governors "should keep the prod there

Reagan told the governors he wanted to stay the course with his hope for a $100 billion down payment on the deficit over the next three years, to be negotiated with the Democratic leadership of Congress this year.

On Monday, the president told the governors he might consider new taxes - after massive new cuts in federal spending. While Wall Street surged Monday, thinking this willingness to raise taxes. Reagan aides rushed to deny 'any new signals' were being sent.

"He says after all the spending cuts that should be made are made, if there was still a deficit that was considered harmful, he would consider raising taxes." Thompson said. "He clearly means that to follow in that one-two order. So he's not talking about a tax increase this year ... His route would be a fairer tax code rather than simply raising rates."

The governors have been united in the desire to cut the deficit, but divided over how it should be accomplished. Delaware Gov. Pierre S. Du Pont IV said a constitutional amendment limiting the growth of federal spending was needed.

The Democratic governors. unhappy with their reception at the White House, said Reagan did not seem to listen to their arguments for action now. And they said budget director David Stockman and other administration officials gave every indication that big budget changes are being readied for the first year of a second Reagan term provided he wins the November election.

The administration has "got something up their sleeve for next year and they might as well get it on the table," Michigan's Blanchard said. "The voters need to know how much is coming out of defense, how much is coming out of Social Security. how much is coming out education, how are taxes going to be raised.

Farm-state governors unload on Regan

Agriculture Secretary John Block has come in for plenty of criticism lately, but he was out of the line of fire as farm-state governors unloaded on another Reagan Cabinet member: Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan.

The governors, members of both parties, were perturbed at Regan's insinuation during a White House meeting that farmers in financial trouble were poor businessmen and had bought trouble by speculating on farmland.

According to at least five governors present at the Monday morning session with Regan and other top administration officials, the treasury secretary also sought to minimize the problem of farm debt by saying farmers get tax deductions for the interest

Regan's comments were in response to a question during the closed meeting from Iowa Republican Gov. Terry Branstad about the squeeze on farmers caught between high interest rates and low commodity prices. "His response to my question was that they (farmers) thought they were going to make some money buying land in an inflationary economy and basically tough luck," Branstad told

"I thought it was a very insensitive response. Some of these farmers are good producers who are victims of the times," he said.

A spokesman for Regan, who spoke only if not identified by name, said later that Regan was only trying to financial problems of any business owner - farmer or otherwise - who gets too deeply in debt.

Branstad and other governors sounded off later in the day at a meeting of the National Governors Association agriculture committee. Block, who was a guest for the session and has been under fire himself for the stinginess of this year's commodity programs, was forced to defend his Cabinet colleague.

"He's not as close to (farmers) as I am, there's no question about that," Block said in response to criticism of Regan. "I think he has a reasonably good understanding of agriculture."

And in areas where Block has needed help, particularly on matters involving trade and export credit, Regan "has been a very good ally of ours," Block said.

That was not enough for those like Democratic Gov. John Carlin of Kansas, whose state is the nation's largest producer of wheat.

Carlin said Regan told the governors that high interest rates were not as harmful to farmers as has been believed because they are able to deduct interest paid from their income and therefore reduce the federal taxes they

"To a farmer that's not making any money and not paying any taxes, that kind of help is of absolutely no value," Carlin said, adding that the farm plight is far more serious than Regan is aware of.

"It's not the typical cyclical problem," said Carlin. "It's to the point where the financial community is about ready to bail out. ... Interest rates are dramatically affecting, and in a very negative way, the farmers of this country.

Gov. Christopher Bond of Missouri agreed. "Maybe the number of farmers who are not in trouble is substantial," Bond said.

"But the thing that really real production farmers, the ones who have been putting out substantial quantities in good years ... It's no longer just the highly leveraged farmers, the new farmers we're concerned about getting washed out. It is the people who are sound managers who are just right up to the hilt."

North Dakota Gov. Allen I. Olson, another Republican, also was visibly upset.

"I resented it," he said "His suggestion that if we hadn't controlled inflation we'd all be millionaires is just

Block said the tough economic times on the farm are all the more reason why producers should sign up for price support protection under the 1984 commodity programs.

He repeated his contention that 50 percent to 70 percent of farmers will sign up for the programs, which require producers to idle part of their acreage in return for price and loan guarantees.

These minor incoveniences. however, are overshadowed by the thrill of being "a guinea pig" off the face of the earth. The Spacelab 4 mission is the first such errand into outer space that will be dedicated entirely to life sciences. "There have been smaller studies and specific projects on earlier flights," said Gaffney, who is also an attending physician at Parkland Memorial Hospital. "But this flight is totally devoted to looking at physiology in space.' For example, the mission will carry along toads to study "embryo genesis," how an embryo develops when there's no gravity. "They're actually having female toads, and what they'll do is fertilize the toad eggs, and with a special camera, they'll photograph how they develop in a zero

Great Salt Lake swollen

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The Great Salt Lake, swollen by two winters of record snow and rain, already has caused more than $100 million in damage without harming homes. Now officials say it threatens to back its tributaries into city

The brackish inland sea, which covers about 10 million quare acres, has been rising almost constantly during two years of record rain and snowfall and below-normal

Concerned agencies and lakeside industries are scrambling to raise dikes protecting businesses and transportation lines before spring runoffs push the levels even higher.

Almost seven times saltier than the ocean during the 1960s, the lake has been diluted so much it now is just three times

"It's incredible," said Gerald Williams, hydrologist in charge of the Colorado River Basin Forecast Center. "Last year, evaporation may have been as much as 10 inches below normal. That's a tremendous impact.'

The lake is a remnant of a massive prehistoric lake that once covered much of western Utah and parts of Nevada and Idaho. Some once thought it might eventually dry up.

Gaffney said. "If someday we had space colony in a low or zero gravity environment, would you have to return people to earth to have children?"

In addition to this question, the mission will conduct research on about 24 other scientific projects submitted by universities and institutions from around the Gaffney entered his project in 1978. At the time, some 400 other proposals were mailed to NASA for consideration. Two years later, the space agency narrowed the list, and Gaffney's endeavor was one of the winners.

In March 1983, NASA added an additional sweetener:

private scientists, instead of NASA's, could conduct their own experiments aboard the mission.

A committee of scientists from within and without NASA then interviewed potential candidates for the flight. Gaffney was one of four scientists selected. Modestly, he views this as a chance to further his studies.

'That's one of the things about being a scientist, you always stay a student. Some of us like that, and so I look at this as a chance to go to a super grad school at the age

Presumably, only two of the four scientists will actually fly as payload specialists. But Gaffney said

'NASA hasn't made a decision yet as to how many (missions) they'll fly. It isconsidering two flights for the same set of projects that year because of the tremendous time crunch on one flight," he said.

But even if he doesn't fly. he said he won't be disappointed. "If I have any anxiety it is staying healthy, doing well, making the flight. I figure once I get in and shut the door, I'm going to do fine," he said.

The Gaffneys, who have two daughters, Andrea, 8, and Lauren, 3, will be moving to Houston to be near the Johnson Space Center.

There are very few differences between American home furnishings shoppers and their European and Japanese counterparts. says Terence Conran, head of a home furnishings retailing firm headquartered in London.

Conran, who was in New York recently to attend the opening of the chain's 10th store in the United States (and 87th in the world), sells home furnishings worldwide.

"Americans took a little longer than other assembly furniture. But as more women enter the work precious, the logic of furniture you take home and assemble yourself has become inescapable," he said in an interview.

Conran's low - key friendly manner and quiet speech patterns belie tremendous energy. He is the center of a whirlwind of retail and design energy. The various businesses he heads besides Conran's (called Habitat except in the U.S. where the name was already being used by another company) — include a chain of shops selling maternity fashions and children's wear. nationalities to accept quick - a design business and a publishing company, as well as a London restaurant

Despite the responsibilities involved in directing these and other enterprises, Conran says. "I play a role in the selection of every product that is sold in Conran stores."

If you enjoy shopping in spare, yet attractive and colorful home furnishings shops for moderately - priced contemporary furniture and accessories, you can thank Conran. He pioneered this type of store and merchandise in London in

In the early 1960s, Conran's Habitat store was as much a mecca for design enthusiasts as Mary Quant's clothing boutique was for fashion leaders. (In fact, Conran designed a shop for Mary Quant.) Both were part of the London design influence that helped change retailing and fashion concepts throughout the world

It took 13 years for Conran to launch the first store in the United States - in New York. (Today, there are shops also in the Washington and Philadelphia areas.) At first, it was tough going, he said. However, as the English retailer and American customers got used to one another, store sales improved

In the learning process, Conran found there were some differences between Americans and other nationalities when it came to home furnishings tastes.

Bright strong primary colors and very large, over scaled prints are more popular here than in Europe, where tastes tend to be a little more sedate," he said.

"Bold bed linens that we can't sell at all in England also do well. Even very large pieces of furniture are wanted here." And that is despite the fact that very often the furniture doesn't fit into the hallway or can't be delivered because the doors of the residence are too small.

However, Conran has found geographic differences are fast disappearing because of the speed of communications.

"Inevitably, we are all exposed to the same news events at the same time and are therefore all being shaped by the same forces," he said, adding that, "I regret the disappearance of the differences

They tend to spend their television watchers, he said.

As a world traveler who is deeply interested in retail trends and believes well designed products can be a force for good in the world. Conran says he is encouraged as he travels around the United States.

He sees businesses that are breaking new ground in many fields and entrepreneurs who are passionate about their products, who are designing and selling products they ought to be, says Conran.

Television reporter crusades against drunk drivers

NEW YORK (NEA) -The worst thing I've ever had to do as a reporter was look at that baby," says San-dy Golden. It was 1980, he was an off-camera reporter at a Washington, D.C., television station, and the baby had been paralyzed from the neck down by a drunk driv-er. Says Golden, 39, "I had bulbar-paralysis polio as a kid for a short time and I can remember not being able to move; I could empathize with that baby."

Dear Abby

Unwed mother chose to face responsibility

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "No Regrets in Missouri," who found herself pregnant and unmarried, chose not to have an abortion. Instead she gave up her baby for adoption.

I am also pregnant and unmarried, but I am going to have my baby and raise it alone if necessary. The father of my child wanted me either to have an abortion or to give up the child for adoption, but I would not consider either alternative.

I realize there is a long list of childless married couples who are praying for a child, but there is no way in God's world that I would give away my baby.

I was raised to accept responsibility for my own actions, and since I chose to enter into a sexual relationship, I now accept the responsibility that goes with it.

I know that raising a child will not be easy, but my child will never have to wonder what kind of woman his biological mother was, where she is, and all the questions that plague most adopted children. Sign me . NO REGRETS IN IOWA

DEAR NO REGRETS: You don't say how old you are or how you intend to support yourself and your child, but you sound like a very determined and together young woman. I wish you luck. An unwed mother who chooses to keep her child and raise it alone (if necessary) will need luck in abundance.

DEAR ABBY: In recent years the subject of adoptees who have searched and found their birth parents, and vice versa, has become a popular one. We would like to know: After the adoptive child had been reunited with his biological parents, (a) how did the adoptive parents feel? (b) How was the relationship between the adopted child and the parents who raised him affected? (c) Were the adoptive parents and the birth parents genuinely happy to meet each other?

These questions are of valid concern to my wife and me, as we have three adopted children who one day might want to find their biological parents.

We hope your readers will respond honestly so that we and other adoptive parents will know what to expect.

CURIOUS IN FLORIDA

DEAR CURIOUS: I, too, am curious. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago I read a letter in your column from a reader who claimed that dogs in Holland do not bark because other dogs have never taught

Ah, were that so! Unfortunately, dogs in Holland bark just as much as dogs in other parts of the world. I know. For three years I lived next door to two dogs who must have been training day and night for the Olympic gold medal in barking. We recently returned from a visit to Holland. While there we stayed with friends who had a Great Dane who should have been named "E.F. Hutton"—when he barks, pèople listen!

worked on a four-part TV series about the infant and about Maryland's indifference toward drunk drivers that ultimately led to reforms in state law. He became the first, unpaid executive director of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.

He apparently conceived of a President's Commission on Drunk Driving and pushed until President Reagan formed it (mostly with the wrong people who aren't doing much, Golden says). And, for the past three years while his mother supported his family, he put together his new book, "Driving the Drunk Off the Road: A Handbook for Action" (Acropolis Books, $6.95).

He wrote it, he says, because "most people are still dumb as oysters about drunk driving and what to do about it. As we're talking, in the past 24 hours, at least 70 families have had to face the death of a loved one killed by drunk drivers, and 1,200 people are waking up in hospitals seriously injured because of them.

"If we knew for a fact that one jet a day would crash killing and maiming that many people, the gov-ernment would pull out all the stops to prevent it. Yet, that's the exact number killed and hurt in alcoholrelated crashes and it's not given the same attention.

Still, it's basically up to each community to sideline the drunks, he says, and the way to begin is to "demand that your mayor or gover-nor pull together a qualified, gate how drunk driving is handled in your area." Appointees should include a police official, prosecutor, judge, business leaders, an insurance company representative, plus religious leaders, victims of drunk drivers and, he says, "a school official and a student because there's a lot to be done with the schools. You want that task force to question police, for instance, about arrest pro-cedures and their year-long drunk-driving deterrents ("Most don't have any," he says); you want it to find out how rampant plea bargaining is ("I heard of one case pleaded down from drunk driving to three counts of defective mufflers"); how many judges routinely put offenders on probation, and so on down the line. "Once all the problems are task force can recommend solutions based on its expertise and strategies proven elsewhere.

The TV series Golden worked on got such a com-mittee mobilized in Maryland and while he says, "I'm not totally satisfied with what it's done, still in two years in Montgomery Coun-ty, there's been a 75 percent reduction in deaths from alcohol-related crashes.

That happened because arrests went up, and so did random police barricades to stop cars and scare the hell out of the public to keep them from driving while drunk in the first place.' And also, he says, because "the business community joined the PTA and the task force in sponsoring Project Graduation in all the high schools prior to proms. In the boys' tuxedos there was a card saying, if you drink to excess, call this number for a safe, free ride home, no questions asked. Florists put the same card in the girls' corsages. The PTA helped man the free-ride service and a cab company provided backup. At the prom, there were posters warning against driving and drinking and, before the kids left the dance, a speaker they trusted urged them to use their seat belts."

Those measures were essential since the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says that drunk drivers kill more of the nation's youth than anything else (5,000 of the estimated 25,000 who'll die this year in alcohol-related crashes will be between 16 and 24). More crucial slaughter substantially, and Golden contends that's possible by the end of this year.

Panthers slip by Blitz, 20-18

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) -The Michigan Panthers looked rusty, but in the end they did the things that champions have to do and Coach Jim Stanley likes that.

"Overall, this early in the year, you've got to think the offense did a great job," Stanley said after watching Novo Bojovic's 20-yard field goal sail between the uprights as time ran out Monday night. giving the Panthers a 20-18 United States Football League victory over the Chicago Blitz. "A lot of good things happened."

The defeat - in the season-opener for both teams - was hard for the Blitz to swallow.

"I'm disappointed and so are the players," Chicago Coach Marv Levy said. "But I think we are definitely stronger this year. I believe we are headed in a positive direction.

Bobby Hebert managed to rally his troops

Hebert looked rusty after missing most of camp in a contract dispute, but his numbers were bright and shiny as he completed 20 of 34 passes for 296 yards and two touchdowns without any interceptions.

"Sometimes I didn't feel right out there, and sometimes I felt 100 percent as good as I did last year.' Hebert said. "My lack of practice time hurt. My timing wasn't always right and I threw some bad passes. Hebert's favorite target

Hebert flipped a 16-yard touchdown strike to Carter five seconds into the second quarter but the Blitz regained the lead on a 2-yard run by Larry Canada. Bojovic kicked a 39-yard field goal as time ran out in the first half to send the Panthers off with a 17-16 lead.

The third quarter was scoreless, but Chicago took an 18-17 lead when Jim Stone blocked David Greenwood's punt out of the end zone at 6:42 of the fourth quarter. The Panthers started their winning drive from their own 33 with 2:32 remaining and were on the Chicago 2-yard line with only five seconds left when the ball was snapped for Bojovic's climactic field goal.

"I feel like I'm a pressure kicker. I think I proved that last year in the championship games." said Bojovic, who missed from 33 yards early in

Greg Monroe, a reserve freshman, hit a jumper from the corner with two seconds left after Syracuse held the hall for the final 2:30 to give the Orangemen their one-point victory. tworks say will wait to project NH winners

NEW YORK (AP) - State politicians in New Hampshire say Sytek said: "I don't know that (projections) have been a the television networks' controversial policy of projecting winners, and perhaps influencing the political process, does not appear to be a problem in today's primary.

The three commercial networks, two of which projected the results of the Iowa caucuses last week before participants officially began registering their preferences, say they will rait for the vast majority of polls to close before forecasting the outcome in the New Hampshire Democratic presidential

Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of the House communications subcommittee, was so upset that CBS and NBC used "entry polls" to make early projections in Iowa that he held a hearing Monday in Washington to question network officials about the practice.

"The networks are once again engaged in telling the voters what they have done before they have done it," Wirth said, reiterating the issue that first surfaced in 1980, when the networks unofficially declared Ronald Reagan the winner over Jimmy Carter before the polls on the West Coast had

Early leader Hollings, on strength of Dixville Notch

DIXVILLE NOTCH, N.H. (AP) - At the stroke of midnight, residents of the resort hamlet of Dixville Notch gave darkhorse Ernest Hollings a narrow lead over his Democratic opponents plus 5 write-ins on the Republican ballot in the nation's first presidential primary.

The Democrat vote was: Hollings 3, Walter Mondale 2, Gary Hart 1, Reubin Askew 1.

In the Republican primary, President Reagan received 15 votes while five more were cast as write-in ballots for Hollings.

A Hollings campaign worker who was at the Balsams resort hotel to observe the early-bird balloting said the outcome would help the South Carolina senator's chances later today. 'These are the most important votes in the nation,' said Ed

Rudd of Gadsden, Ala. "This is what's going to be on the news on election day while the other people are voting," he said. Hollings' victory may have reflected New Hampshire voters' preference for seeing their candidates in the flesh. Hollings was the only Democrat to visit the community twice. Askew had been in the mountain village once.

Just before midnight, 22 registered voters entered individual polling booths at the Balsams, where most of them work, to mark their ballots when the clock struck 12. Five others, who are either ill or out of town, voted by absentee ballot.

While the community may be the earliest to vote, its results are not necessarily a harbinger of the final outcome. For many years, Dixville earned a reputation for siding with losers. But they were almost on target in in 1980, going for Jimmy Carter, 3-to-2 over Edward Kennedy. On the Republican side, Ronald Reagan and George Bush tied for the lead with five votes each. The town went overwhelmingly for Reagan that November.

Bakery owner admits he killed 17 women

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) - A "publicity shy" bakery owner has confessed to killing 17 women over 10 years, the worst mass murder in Alaska history, and the death count could go even higher, a prosecutor said.

Robert Hansen, 44, made the confession in "bits and pieces" over the past week before pleading guilty Monday to four murders along with theft and weapons violations, said Victor Krumm, a state district attorney in Anchorage.

Superior Court Judge Ralph Moody immediately sentenced Hansen to 461 years in prison and a life sentence. Krumm said. Alaska does not have a death penalty.

Hansen was charged with four killings because authorities located only that many bodies, Krumm said. Two bodies were found by hikers and the other two were discovered after being unearthed by bears.

"Seventeen may not be the end of it," the prosecutor said late Monday. "We feel from what we've learned that there might be more bodies out there."

Krumm said Hansen, who was charged last fall with the kidnap and rape of a 16-year-old prostitute, "knew we were on to him." He pleaded guilty to spare himself and his family a "drawn-out" ordeal as police tried to tie him to the disappearance in recent years of a dozen dancers from Anchorage's red-light district, Krumm said.

Police grilled Hansen every day since last Wednesday, threatening to charge him with murder each time a body was

Mr. Hansen is publicity shy, so rather than go through that," he gradually admitted the killings until the list stood at 17, Krummsaid.
