Water project discussed at Canadian

CANADIAN — On the eve of a July 28 water bond election, residents here learned what's behind the city's push for a $1.7 million water and sewer improvement program Thursday at a public forum at the Canadian Middle School.

The forum was conducted in an effort to inform residents of what projects the proposed water and sewer improvement issue will fund and how the project will be funded.

The Canadian City Council is seeking a $1.715 million loan from the Farmers' Home Administration to fund the project. The city plans to repay the loan through water and sewer revenues. City officials say that while no new taxes or sewer increases are anticipated, there would be an increase in water rates from $7.50 to $10 per first 1,000 gallons per month. In June, a group of residents presented the council with a 277-name petition seeking an election on the bond issue. Council members set the election for July 28.

Residents circulating the petition maintain that they have not been fully informed on what the city proposes to do with the water project.

Although emotions are heated on both sides of the issue, the attitudes of the petitioners, council members and other residents remained relatively cool during the forum. City engineer Dwight Brandt showed a 30-minute slide presentation showing the city's problem tanks, pipes and booster pumps.

Also featured at the forum was a panel consisting of the city's financial consultant Joe Smith of First Southern Company of Abeline, city water superintendent Dean Looper, city manager Van James and Brandt. James prepared a 13-page description of the proposed water program. Residents who wanted to ask the panel questions had to write their names on pieces of paper and drop them in a box. Attorney Mack Sansing, the "moderator" for the forum, then called the names from the box and allowed limited time for questions and answers.

Several residents expressed concern about whether volunteer fire fighters will be provided with free water.

James answered that as one of the terms and conditions of the city loan, FmHA requires that no free service will be provided, or if such service is provided, the city shall pay for such services from sources other than revenues from the city's water and waste systems.

James and Looper also confirmed that city council members also receives free water. Council member George Arrington is the one council member who pays for his water.

James said. Looper said that the cemetery will now be billed for water.

"The cemetery has been metered, and we found that they use a tremendous amount of water," Looper said.

Another area of concern was how the city would handle its water program if bids from water contractors were higher than the $1.715 million the city had set.

James explained that some minor water improvements would be dropped from the project.

Another resident asked if there was a guarantee that sewer rates would not be increased.

"There's no way to guarantee that rates will not increase," James answered. "Sooner or later there will need to be improvements on the sewer system. But sewer rate increases were not anticipated."

Bulls too bad for champion riders

MUGGIN' A COW—Crickett Lowrey, left, and Gary McFall get a firm grip and hold on in the Double Muggin' contest during the first performance of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Thursday night. Top O' Texas Rodeo continues tonight; parade slated Saturday

Some of the best professional cowboys and cowgirls from 10 states, including former world champions, mixed it up with "rank" stock Thursday in the first performance of the three-day Top O' Texas Rodeo, the Panhandle's only PRCA rodeo.

The champion riders had just limited success with the wild stock, called one of the best bucking herds ever assembled by rodeo producer Benny Beutler.

In the bull riding event, the bulls won. Only two riders could stay the required eight seconds Thursday, and one nearly lost his arm from its socket.

The professional bull riders, though, fared better than one local team entered in the amateur Double Muggin' contest. Two members of that unfortunate team were tied up and immobilized by a struggling yearling they had attempted to rope and subdue.

The calf received no score. The rodeo continues tonight and Saturday. Each performance begins at 8 p.m. The Country Critters, who cue the rodeo events, precede each performance with a concert at 7:30 p.m. General admission to the rodeo is $5 for adults (ages 12 and up) and $3.50 for children. Reserved seats are $1 extra.

James and Michael Younger will play for a rodeo dance tonight from 9 p.m. to midnight in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion. Ed Bruce and the Tennessee Cowboy Band will play for the rodeo dance Saturday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

A rodeo parade is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Saturday. The parade will form at 10 a.m. in the M.K. Brown Auditorium parking lot and leave a half hour later. The parade will move from the auditorium to Hobart Street; will travel south on Hobart to Ward; then southeast on Ward to Francis; east to Cuyler; and finally south to Craven, where it move one block and disband.

The parade has received 21 entries, and sponsors expect more

Pair honored by rodeo association

Approximately 100 members of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association, wives, children and guests attended a special late-night dinner after Thursday's rodeo performance to honor two long-time association members.

Bill Tidwell and Lois Stewart were honored for their 26 years of service to the association at the dinner, held in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion.

"We went in together and went out together," Tidwell said of his and Stewart's years of the service in the association. Tidwell has served on the association's board of directors and Stewart has served as association secretary.

Wayne Stribling, current association president, said the association has appreciated their service and thanked them "for everything you've done."

Tidwell received a silver buckle and Stewart a silver serving tray. Both were engraved with "1957-1983," indicating their years of service.

Stribling commended Stewart for her years of service as secretary, adding "There's no way this association could run without these women."

After the presentation of the gifts, the members and guests had a meal of ham, potato salad, chips and desserts and visited, relaxing after the conclusion of the opening performance of the 38th annual Top O' Texas Rodeo.

Tidwell and Stewart have also received lifetime passes to the local professional rodeo.

Group may attempt to force recall vote inside today

Several Pampa citizens who are upset because the city has removed pipes from their driveways are considering attempting to force a recall election, according to Floye Christensen, a spokesperson for the group.

Mrs. Christensen said the group met Thursday night and decided to go forward with the recall effort if it determines there is sufficient public support for such action.

She said the group authorized release of the following statement:

"A substantial number of people met to discuss our city officials in general and the destruction of our driveways in particular. The nucleus decided that a recall election was necessary to elect public officials that would represent taxpaying citizens of Pampa and would be responsible to them.

"There will be a public meeting on this matter soon."

The statement also included a request that persons interested in the recall effort contact members of the group.

Mrs. Christensen explained that the purpose of the request is to determine how the public feels about a recall election over the driveways issue. She asked people interested in the effort to call 665-8178, 665-3618, 665-2574, 665-6135 or 665-4512.

She said eight residents attended Thursday night's meeting, but that several others who supported the effort were out of town. She said the group did not decide whether a recall effort should be aimed at the entire city council or at selected members.

Mrs. Christensen said she has obtained a recall petition from city hall and determined that the signatures of 30 percent of the number who voted in the last city election are required to force an election. Since 444 voted in the last city election, about 135 signatures would be required.

The controversy erupted several weeks ago when the city started removing pipes from the streets at the end of a number of residential driveways in the city. The pipes had been installed years ago, with the help of the city.

City Public Works Director Allyn Moore said the pipes are being removed because they damage streets when they clog and cause standing water on pavement and they hinder street cleaning and snow removal.

Residents whose pipes have been removed say they have a difficult time getting in and out of their driveways and face substantial costs in having their driveways repaired.

About 30 residents appeared at Tuesday's city commission meeting and presented a petition with 572 signatures asking the city to halt removal of the pipes and to replace those already removed.

The group started considering the recall effort after no member of the city commission would make a motion to accept the petition and implement its demands.

Texas Democrats are worried that Walter Mondale's choice of Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate may mean the Republicans will carry the state, not only in the presidential race, but in the U.S. Senate contest as well. Details, Page five.

Wheeler Water District sets tentative date for bond vote

WHEELER — County residents may go to the polls Aug. 11 to vote on an $18 million bond issue for the proposed Sweetwater Creek Dam if local and state authorities can agree on a contract for construction and operation of the project.

The Wheeler County Water Supply District met Thursday to tentatively set the election and approve the contract between the district and the Red River Water Authority, a state water control agency. At issue is how control and operation of the 2,500 acre lake will be divided between the local district and the state agency.

The two parties discussed a tentative contract last week. The Red River Authority was to meet Thursday to approve the contract, but was unable to get enough members for a quorum.

"Our local district wants a contract before we call for an election," said Wheeler attorney Kent Sims, a member of the water district board.

However, local board members voted to go ahead and have the ballots printed for an Aug. 11 election. They will meet July 23 to formally call for an election if the RRA accepts the contract.

District members approved their side of the dam contract Thursday.

According to Sims, there's "no real dispute" between the Wheeler Water District and the RRA. There was some question on the amount of money the RRA will get out for past operating expenses.

The Red River Authority began work on the project in 1963 and reportedly has spent about $200,000 on the project.

After the board met, a public hearing was held in the Wheeler County Courtroom to explain funding, construction and operation of the lake and water distribution project.

Engineer John Nichols of Freese and Nichols, the engineering firm designing the lake, presented the audience of Shamrock and Wheeler residents lake dimensions and current construction cost estimates.

Located about seven miles east and two miles north of Wheeler, the lake will have a drainage area of 281 square miles and a water supply capacity of 49,260 acre feet, according to Nichols. He estimated a shoreline of about 32 miles and an average reservoir depth of 26 feet.

Basing his figures on July 1984 costs, Nichols estimated the School inks collection pact

Trustees of the Pampa Independent School District approved a contract with the Gray County Appraisal District Thursday night to consolidate tax assessing and collecting operations.

The contract will take effect Aug. 1, turning over property tax assessing and collecting duties for the school system and the city to the appraisal district.

The action cancels the contract between the PISD and the City of Pampa in which the school district had handled the tax collection operations for both entities. The city had approved the contract Tuesday.

Under the new contract, collective costs for the school system and the city will be $88,760. The city's share will be $25,730, with the PISD paying $63,030, based on statement charges.

The chief appraiser will be designated as the tax assessor-collector for the two governing entities.

John English, assistant superintendent, presented the annual evaluation of the Five-Year Priorities Plan. He said the report was needed "as part of our accreditation program."

The plan is in its second year of implementation to improve student learning in the areas of reading, writing and mathematics. The success of the program is measured by the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills (TABS), English said.

The objective for the five-year plan aims at having 85 percent of fifth-grade students and 90 percent of ninth-grade students in the district demonstrating mastery in

Comedian finds way to be funny

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Lifestyles Editor

Don't ask me why Bobby Kelton is funny. He shouldn't be if you compare him with most club comics nowadays. He didn't say one thing about the presidential race and neither his jokes nor his language would have embarrassed my grandmother too much. But I still found myself giggling most of the way through his act, and one or two times I laughed until the tears ran.

Kelton played to a small and at times rather indifferent gathering Wednesday night, July 10, at the Club Biarritz in the Coronado Inn. His lead-in, Don Becker, a young comic from Denver, relied heavily on left-wing political, health food and generally liberal material which would go over great in a bar full of young people in Colorado but fell pretty flat with his more conservative listeners here in Pampa.

Kelton will give performances tonight and Saturday night at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m.

Through his act, I gathered a little bit of information about

In review

Kelton. It seems he hails from a New York City where he's been involved in many major programs, "unemployment, food stamps and welfare." He came from a large family - "eight parents and one sister." While growing up in New York, he was involved in farming, he says. At least he must have been because his mother always called his room a pig sty and his father always referred to his as a horse's (behind). He recalls once going to a seafood shop where the bathroom doors were signified by a herring and a mackerel instead of "men" or "women." He asked a passing woman if he looked like a mackerel or a herring to which he says she replied, "I don't know. You look like a shrimp to me."

But enough about Kelton's life. Much of his humor reminds me of George Carlin in the way he shows the incongruity of many sayings and situations. For example, houses with a sign in front saying "For sale by owner." "What should it say, for sale by neighbor?" he asks. He muses about a birthday cake - "the only thing I know of where someone blows on it and spits on it and then everybody else can't wait to get a piece of it."

Kelton almost met his match when he started with a series of waitress jokes and discovered a large table in the audience was filled with waitresses. But instead of offending them, he had them tickled to have their profession included in his act. Although they promised he'd pay when he came down to breakfast in the morning.

Kelton uses good timing to get a laugh out of some tired jokes, much in the form of Milton Berle. He hasn't the fire nor the freshness that marks some of today's rising comedians such as Robin Williams and Eddie Murphy. But then again, he's not offensive in any way, a trap some young comedians fall into in their effort to see just how far they can go.

I'd recommend seeing Bobby Kelton's show for a fun and different type of entertainment, something we could use more of in Pampa.

School board

the three areas by May, 1987.

At the end of the second year, the students had reached or exceeded district goals for the year in all but one of the categories, English said. There was a 10 percent decline in attainment in the writing area for ninth grade students.

English said this resulted from the Texas Association of School Boards' setting of higher standards for compositions this year. New programs are already being instituted to improve scores for next year, he said.

The board accepted the report as required by TASB guidelines.

Rev. Norman Rushing, pastor of Central Baptist Church, appeared before the board to request its support for efforts to obtain the American Christian Television System (ACTS) in the city.

Rev. Rushing, who serves as president of the local ACTS board, said local churches are trying to obtain the ACTS Network for local cable television systems "to provide an alternative to regular television viewing."

He said the board is not trying to change what is already available on TV but instead to provide more wholesome entertainment and informative programs.

Too many children receive negative influences from the violence, sex and use of drugs and alcohol on too many TV programs, he said. As a result, too many young people are wrongly answering problems in their lives by what they see on TV, he said.

The ACTS Network will have 16 hours a day of programming including music, talk shows, senior citizens information, sports, cooking, gardening and handymen shows, religious programs and children's programs, he said.

He said the programming is being funded by the Southern Baptists Association, with no costs to the cable subscriber. "No money will be solicited," Rev. Rushing said.

The local ACTS board also will use the system to support some local community and civic activities, including some sports and fundraising drives, he said.

Community support is needed to persuade the local cable system to provide the network to Pampa residents, he said.

In other action, the board designated Radio Station KSNZ as the official radio station for the 1984-1985 school year to broadcast school sports events and other school news.

Supt. James Trusty discussed the use of 1983-1984 ECIA Chapter II Funds, provided by federal funding. Trusty said the funds were used in the development of computer assisted instruction programs for the PISD.

For the next school year, $30,740 has been allocated from the funds, he said. The district will use $30,332 for the purchase of computer equipment, with $408 to be spent to purchase library books for St. Vincent's School, he said.

The board adopted updated policies as suggested by TASB. The changes include guidelines in areas such as reporting communicable diseases through the health department, filling of vacancies on the school board and handling drug and alcohol abuse problems in the schools.

The trustees also adopted updated policy changes concerning special education programs, mainly relating to confidentiality of student records.

In personnel matters, the board accepted the resignations of the following: Jill L. Duggan, Mann kindergarten; Amy Parnell, Lamar second grade; Harold Murray, Lamar fifth grade; Debra D. Tolbert, Pampa High School Spanish and English as a Second Language; and Virene Jefferson, diagnostician.

to show up Saturday. Events in the rodeo include the bull riding (two go-rounds), steer wrestling (two go-rounds), barrel racing, bareback bronc riding, calf roping, saddle bronc riding, the muggin' contest and specialty and comical acts.

The only scorers in Thursday's bull riding were Brent Hanks with 73 and Terry McIlvain with 64.

Veteran rodeo clown and bullfighter Rex Dunn is impressed with the contestants and stock in this year's rodeo. Dunn said Beutler's bulls are especially "rank," and he wasn't referring to their smell. He said five bulls in the stable could win top honors this year. Two have thrown every rider to climb on, and one nearly killed a man, Dunn said.

"He's got a set of bulls that are awesome. It's the best set of bulls that I've ever seen," the clown said.

The toothless and battered Dunn called one of Beutler's animals "the best bucking bull I've ever seen in my entire career."

The bull, named 018 Brindle Velvet, has "horns about two feet long" and still waits for a cowboy who can stay on.

"He is rank," Dunn said. Another in the herd, "Kiss Me," nearly killed former world champion Charlie Simpson at a rodeo in Washington, D.C., he said.

"He just literally crushed his face. It's a wonder he lived. He had to have a lot of plastic surgery," the clown added.

Thursday's results verified Dunn's comments about the bulls, and the meanness of the bunch won't come out of the gate until tonight and Saturday.

Former world champion runner-up Randy Magers had no luck with Frontier Airlines in the opening show. Magers crashed just after take off. His riding arm hung in the rope in mid-spin. Another spin jerked the champion and his dangling arm in a full circle.

Magers escaped with his life and no score.

High scorers in the saddle bronc riding were Terry Chapman, 75; and Lyle Sankey and Cary Frost, each with 70.

Stan Williamson, a two-time world champ, had the best time in steer wrestling. Williamson scored 5.4 seconds, followed by Eugene Weakley and Delbert Davis, each at 6.8. 1964 world champ C.R. Boucher, who works the show as a pickup man, had problems and struggled in at 39.5.

Stoney Zolman took Thursday's high score in bareback with a 72. Kent Robinson scored 68, and R.C. Patterson was third best at 67. Pampa favorite Lee Lowry also scored with a 66.

Darrell Lambert's 10.0 time was the best in calf roping. Rick Kyle followed at 10.3. Smitty Smith was next with 10.4.

Nancy Eaton had a 17.89 best time in the cowgirls' barrel race. Lee Ann Nuckols came home in 18 seconds flat. Monica Barnard was third best at 18.08.

The muggin' contest, with local contestants providing a hilarious highlight for the home crowd, was won by the team of Olen Douglas, Gordon Taylor and Bill Billingsley. The team roped, tackled and tied a kicking, 300-pound yearling in 77 seconds flat. Lee Lowery, Gary McFall and Crickett Lowery broke the barrier but finished second at 93 flat. Bob Howard, Jim Watson and Chuck Timmons finished in 118.7 seconds.

Announcer Clem McSpadden glanced at his wristwatch and announced the latter time as "nine thirty-one central standard."

Ed Bruce will perform Saturday night

Ed Bruce, writer of the hit "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up To Be Cowboys" and co-star with James Garner and Stuart Margolin in the resurrected version of television's "Maverick," will headline Saturday's rodeo dance.

Bruce and the Tennessee Cowboy Band will play after the final performance of the Top O' Texas Rodeo. Bruce and the band will play two sets at the dance, scheduled from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion. The Country Cousins will play between the sets.

Tickets, available at the door, are $7 for a single and $10 for a couple. Bruce is probably best known for his role as the marshal in the new "Maverick," but acting for television came later in life for the songwriter and singer with roots in Keiser, Ark., and Memphis, Tenn. The entertainer, who owns up to being "forty something," has worked to get to the top of the music business for 25 years. En route to Nashville, Bruce picked and sang in bars across the south. He cut his first records in the late '50s for the Sun label, the same recording company handling his idol at the time, Johnny Cash. Bruce also appeared on American Bandstand, a gig for which he said he wasn't paid.

But the moderate success he enjoyed in his own singing career didn't match his success as the writer for other artists' smash hits.

development cost at $27,323,000. He reported that it would cost about $13,580,000 to buy the dam and reservoir property; $3,162,000 for a water treatment plant, $392,000 for a water transmission system to Wheeler and $1,452,000 for a transmission system to Shamrock.

Also included in the figure is $2,602,000 for water distribution systems to such area towns as Allison, Kelton, Mobeetie and Briscoe. Nichols said that the distribution to these towns will depend on the communities' ability and desire to support the water system.

Nichols added that, contrary to reports that his firm will charge up to $5 million for its services, the cost estimate budgets $1,135,000 for engineering services and $150,000 for administration.

District financial advisor, Frank Medanich of First Southwest Investment Banking of Dallas, explained how the lake project would affect the county tax structure.

Basing his figures on current county valuation of $1,194 billion, Medanich said he would expect a tax rate of about 25 to 30 cents per $1,000 in county property valuation. "In the later part of it, after you pay the $17 million bond, the rate will drop," he added. "I don't know how much, if any, interest would accumulate."

He added that he arrived at his calculations without taking into account any revenue from water distribution or recreational use.

Governor signs education and tax bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White signs into law today a $2.8 billion education reform bill that will affect every Texas school, then signs a $4.6 billion tax bill to pay for it and highway improvements.

The tax bill doubles the current 5-cent a gallon motor fuels tax on Aug. 1. Vehicle registration fees also go up on Aug. 1. The rest of the tax package — including a one-eighth of a cent increase in the state sales tax — takes effect Oct. 1.

After almost four weeks of controversy over improving public schools, the special legislative session finally approved the comprehensive measure on June 30. The tax bill was sent to White, who called the special session specifically for education and highway improvements, on July 3, the last day of the session.

The education bill, based largely on recommendations from the Select Committee on Public Education, not only attempts to improve conditions in the classrooms but funnels more state money to poorer districts where education has suffered because of a lack of funds.

The tax bill, which includes a one-eighth of a cent increase in the state sales tax, is the first major tax bill passed in 17 years.

"The strongest thing for the education bill is the fact that it is the only major bill in 20 years that deals more with academic quality and the emphasis is on students, not the benefits for personnel," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

The weak point about the bill, said Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, chairman of the House Public Education Committee, is that it is not complete in setting up competency testing for teachers, one of the most controversial issues, particularly with the Texas State Teachers Association which withdrew its support of the measure at the last moment.

"We don't know how or who will appraise the teachers," Haley said. "That will be up to the next Legislature and the new State Board of Education."

Ironically, one part of the bill requires all teachers to pass the unwritten test by June 30, 1986.

"I think the 1985 Legislature is going to take a close look at this (competency tests)," Parker said. "I think they are a big waste of money."

A major provision of the education bill abolishes the current 27-member elected State Board of Education and replaces it with an appointed 12-member board — no later than next Jan. 1.

Effective this year, all Texas teachers will get at least a $170 a month pay raise. Minimum starting teacher salaries will go from $1,110 a month to $1,520.

By the 1985-86 school year each teacher will be assigned to a career ladder level where a promotion from one step to another is worth $2,000 a year. Because of opposition from TSTA and other teacher groups, legislators expected this to be subject to revision by the 1985 Legislature.

Beginning in spring 1985, students with failing grades will not be allowed to take part in extracurricular activities, including sports.

The State Board of Education also must have ready for the 1985-86 school year a plan for "exit level" tests in mathematics and English for juniors or seniors. A student must pass to get a diploma.

Social promotions in schools are outlawed immediately. A student must earn a grade of at least 70 in every course to advance to the next grade.

Beginning in the 1985-86 school year, schools must offer pre-kindergarten programs for educationally deprived 4-year-olds.

Jailer turns in own jail as sub-standard

SAN SABA, Texas (AP) — The chief jailer of the San Saba County Jail has written the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and the American Civil Liberties Union to complain that the facility he has operated for the past two years is substandard in at least 13 areas.

Tim Atkins, who lives at the jail with his family, told the San Angelo Standard-Times on Thursday that he wrote the letters "to try to get what needs to be done legally."

County officials have refused to take the steps to maintain the jail properly, Atkins said.

His letters said the 13 violations of jail standards range from lack of security and supervision to safety hazards.

Atkins said twice jail keys have fallen into the hands of jail inmates because of negligence on the part of a deputy.

One of the complaints pertains to Atkins' attempts to get county commissioners to give his wife back pay for her services over the past two years. She is in charge of the jail whenever he is away, he said.

"I've done everything a jailer has to do. I've had to book and lock up state and Department of Public Safety prisoners, and when bondsmen come I've booked prisoners out," Atkins' wife, Julie, told the Standard-Times.

San Saba County Sheriff Brantley Barker said he doesn't think the jail standards commission will find any serious violations, but added, "We're going to fix them, whatever they say."

Barker said he received notification to meet with the state group later this month.

Barker, who has served as sheriff 34 years, said this is the first time a jailer has lodged complaints on the jail's standards.

The jail standards commission wrote the sheriff and the county commissioners court immediately after getting his letter, Atkins said.

Ben Wheeler: study in survival

By DOUG COSPER
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph
BEN WHEELER, Texas (AP) — Who was Ben Wheeler?

The old timers in this rural community tucked away just south of Texas Highway 64 between Tyler and Canton say they know — or at least they've heard the stories. And they remember when Ben Wheeler was home to many more than the estimated 250 souls it claims today.

"I can remember when people were so thick on the sidewalks you had to walk on the streets to get across town," says retired Ben Wheeler barber Shad McNeill.

McNeill cut hair in his shop on the main street (it doesn't have a name) for 50 years. At 83, he says, he's the community's oldest resident. Well, almost.

"One man here is about three or four months older than I am," he confides. But, he adds, that gentleman hasn't lived here for as many years. McNeill has 60 years sunk in Ben Wheeler.

When he was 23, he recalls, he was on his way to Colorado from his home community of Colfax, also in Van Zandt County.

"I came to Ben Wheeler to get a shave and a haircut, and asked the barber if he needed a hand." The barber needed help, and McNeill stayed.

"This town's been up and down the hill," McNeill says.

When the young barber started cutting hair for 25 cents in 1924, Ben Wheeler was on top.

Pre-Depression Ben Wheeler boasted three barber shops, two drug stores, two doctors, a bank, a hotel, a school with 11 grades, even a college — but no bars — McNeill recalls.

M.L. Moore, Booster Moore's father, built the first grocery store in Ben Wheeler in 1905. Booster Moore was 2 then.

"M.L. Moore's General Merchandise" store is still the focal point of the community, and his son, M.L. Moore Jr., seems destined to carry on. The younger Moore and his family opened a new convenience store and service station on the highway this month. When talk turns to the future in Ben Wheeler, the new store is usually first on residents' lips.

Booster Moore recalls the community's boom times, and his childhood spent in them with grins.

"I can remember as a kid on Christmas holidays, one side of the town fought the other side of the town with Roman candles — 30 shooters," he says. Ben Wheeler had a central square then, Moore says. But the merchants whose stores were set back about 200 feet from the main street moved their buildings forward on wooden rollers. "That took up half of the town square."

During one Roman candle duel, "One fellow 'bout got burned up when a ball got in his coat pocket," Moore recalls. The flaming youth beat a hasty retreat to the fire station where his coat was doused.

Ben Wheeler's boom wound down with the nation's when the bottom dropped out of the stock market in 1929. Memories of the Great Depression are fresh on Leland Davidson's mind. The retired farmer's grandfather settled in Ben Wheeler, and Davidson has spent his entire 71 years there.

Davidson recalls the times of no work. "They said they needed men to spread gravel on the highway for 33 cents per hour. More than 150 men turned out," he says. "I happened to be one of the lucky ones."

McNeill got by — barely — by cutting hair. "You didn't make debts 'cause you couldn't pay 'em back," he remembers of those times.

The 1929 discovery of the Van oil field took some of the edge off the bad times, Davidson says. He recalls the town's dance halls with names like "The Blue Moon," and "Texas Slim." An enterprising daredevil once spent 30 days buried alive in front of a dance hall, he says. The man charged 10 cents a peek down a wooden shaft that led to the caskeet.

The hotel burned down in 1933. Times were still hard in Ben Wheeler, but the community had its diversions.

"There was some real nose busters," Davidson recalls. An outdoor fighting ring was built near the center of the community. "They'd go down there to fight, and not for money." The boxers weren't professionals, he says. "Instead of fighting in the streets, they'd fight in the ring."

Ben Wheeler's population dwindled by one-half through the 40s and 50s, Moore says.

"The farmers all went broke and moved to town... It seemed people couldn't make a living," he says.

The face of Ben Wheeler changed further during the 1960s. Coastal Bermuda moved into the region, and many farmers went into the cattle business. Moore says the community reached its lowest trough during the '60s.

McNeill laments the exit of any of the community's youth. "They have to leave, there's nothing to hold 'em," he says.

Now, Ben Wheeler has become "an old age pension town," Moore says, adding "I've been a pallbearer so many times I can't even count 'em up."

Moore recalls a time during the 1960's when several of the community's widows lived on one street. Townspeople called the street Sand Street because "the sand was so deep a car couldn't get through."

"We counted 'em up one time," Moore says of the widows.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP 'O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

News media helps push statist bias

The day after the Texas Legislature approved a far-ranging tax increase, The Associated Press sent a story to its member newspapers that started like this:

"A tax bill to pay for better public schools had just passed...."

Before we used that story in The Pampa News, we changed it to read:

"A tax bill to provide more money for public schools had just passed...."

Do you see the difference?

The Associated Press writer presented as a fact, although not directly, that the higher taxes will pay for "better public schools." But nobody could possibly know that for a fact until the schools do get better. All we really know now is that the Legislature increased taxes and some of the money will go to the public schools. We don't know whether they'll be better or not. So we changed the story so that it would reflect only the known facts.

Unfortunately, though, other Texas newspapers we've seen didn't see anything wrong with the AP story and published it as written. And, unfortunately, that is only one example of what we call "statist bias," something that has too widely permeated both the print and electronic media and has contaminated the mental processes of too many citizens.

What we call "statist bias" is the unthinking acceptance of something as truth simply because it has been labeled as truth by someone or some agency in government. The AP writer, in the story we mentioned, casually implied that the higher taxes will create "better schools" simply because supporters of the tax increase said they would.

This is an insidious use of the language that is more dangerous to public understanding of truth than direct falsehoods. If the story had said, "higher taxes will create better public schools," many citizens would reject that contention. But when the same premise is slipped into a written article or a telecast as though it were already an accepted fact, we fear that it might be more widely accepted.

Do you think that no one can be misled by such "statist bias"? If you do, then think again. Haven't most citizens in this nation accepted the "Reagan budget cuts," as established fact after hearing and reading about them in the media for the last four years? But that is a myth. There have been no Reagan budget cuts. The federal budget has grown tremendously since the president took office?

How about cuts in social programs? We know about them because the media has told us, right? Wrong again. Spending on social programs has increased 11 percent during the tenure of the Reagan administration.

That's not all. Have you ever heard or read about a government entity "needing" more revenues for some particular purpose when, in fact, that government entity actually "wanted" more revenues for that purpose? What about references to government "providing benefits" to one group or the other when government has nothing to provide to anybody? Don't we use the term "anti-discrimination laws" to describe legislation that actually discriminates? The list could go on and on, but you get the point.

The danger in all this is that it corrupts the language. And as language is corrupted, so is thought. If thought is corrupted by corrupt language, man's ability to find the truth about anything is diminished. And if government is responsible for that corruption, then government, to some degree, controls the thoughts of citizens.

We attempt to eliminate, sometimes without success, this statist bias from the news columns of The Pampa News. But most in our profession don't bother. The reason is that it has become such an accepted part of our national thought that most members of the media don't even recognize it as a problem.

That's what's really disturbing.

New 'Koreagate' brewing

When the Democratic National Convention comes to order next week in San Francisco one of the gathering's co-chairman will be missing. Korean-American businessman Harvard Jee, one of 40 members of the National Democratic party's headquarters building project, reserved for those who have contributed $100,000 each, and a major fundraiser for Walter Mondale, Jimmie Carter, and House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill was indicted in Los Angeles Federal Court on May 24 on fifteen counts of defrauding three banks of $34 million.

Jee's indictment, on what federal prosecutor Richard Callahan, Jr., called "one of the largest fraud cases in recent years," followed disclosures in a Los Angeles bankruptcy court that Jee had used bogus certificates of deposit in non-existent accounts in two West Indian banks as collateral for large loans from Lloyds Bank of California and two Korean Banks, Hanil Bank Ltd., and the Korean Exchange Bank (KEB).

These loans were used to purchase the First State Bank of California from KEB. During the course of Jee's earlier bankruptcy proceedings, Judge Robert Ordine said Jee's behavior was "calculated to be dishonest and was an effort on his part to cheat, steal and defraud."

Jee was named "Co-Chair of the 1984 Democratic National Convention" in a publicity release from the Democratic National Committee (DNC) dated November 9, 1983. The release described him as "the first Asian-born American in history to hold a leadership position at that level at a party nominating convention." It quoted DNC Chairman Charles Manatt as saying, "We are pleased that Harvard (Jee) has agreed to serve in this important role at our 1984 convention. He has been an active member of our Democratic Business Council since its creation (in 1981), and he has been an active participant in national and state Democratic party affairs."

It went on to point out that "Jee is also active with the Democratic Senatorial and Congressional Campaign committees," and is "chairman of the Democratic Congressional Caucus; task force on Far Eastern affairs, and is an adviser to the Congressional Joint Committee on Science and Technology."

Jee apparently owed these prestigious congressional positions to his special relationship to Speaker O'Neill. As a series of articles by Mike Otten and K.W. Lee in the Sacramento Union in May pointed out: "One Korean-language newspaper in Los Angeles said O'Neill referred to Jee at a public dinner affectionately as 'my son' and presented him with a certificate of appreciation on behalf of the House of Representatives and himself 'for his devoted service.'"

That "devoted service" included not only contributions of more than $150,000 of his own money to various DNC and congressional campaign funds (including a $20,000 maximum limit contribution to the DNC in 1980, just nine months before bankruptcy proceedings were filed), but specific involvement in the fund-raising machinery for Jimmy Carter in 1976, and 1980, and for Mondale in 1984.

Jee's indictment, while as yet showing no direct connections to his Democratic party activity, nevertheless raises the spectre of another embarrassing "Koreagate" incident for prominent Democratic leaders, especially O'Neill. According to sources close to the investigation, Jee has bragged openly that he made undercover and "unreported" contributions to various DNC and other campaign funds for introductions to Democratic congressional leaders, including O'Neill.

Similar allegations were made against Korean Tong Sun Park, regarding his relations with thirty congressmen, including O'Neill. Park was at the heart of the 1978 "Koreagate" affair in which one Democratic congressman went to jail for accepting campaign contributions and bribes from Park's export-import trading company; three others were formally reprimanded. During that investigation, O'Neill came under heavy criticism for appearing to drag his feet and dampen the congressional inquiry. The House speaker was accused of having received a number of Park contributions and favors, including a well-publicized birthday party.

Now, O'Neill has apparently been the beneficiary of substantial contributions by Harvard Jee to various Democratic congressional campaign funds and has been instrumental in providing Jee with access to staff and leadership of various House committees.

This last May, O'Neill and Mondale made prominent statements that the so-called "sleeze-factor" would be an issue against the Reagan administration in the 1984 election. That may now be blunted by an incipient new "Koreagate" scandal.

Today in History

Today is Friday, July 13, the 195th day of 1984. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 13, 1863, rioting against the Civil War military draft erupted in New York City. The violence would result in the deaths of about 1,000 people over the next three days.

On this date:

Ten years ago: The Senate Watergate Committee proposed sweeping reforms in campaign procedures and other statutes in an effort to prevent another Watergate scandal.

Five years ago: Four Palestinian terrorists seized the Egyptian embassy in Turkey, demanding freedom for jailed comrades in Egypt.

One year ago: With Vice President George Bush casting a tie-breaking vote, the Senate voted to authorize money for new nerve gas weapons.

Today's birthday: Actor Harrison Ford is 42.

Thought for today: "There are people who want to be everywhere at once, and they get nowhere." — Carl Sandburg, American writer (1878-1967).

Movies for your children

I walked into Sullivan's house and found him in a serious conversation with his 12-year-old son, David.

"Am I interrupting anything?" I asked.

"No," replied Sullivan. "We were discussing going to a movie together. What would you like to see, David?"

"I'll leave it up to you, father," David said. "If you think a film is too violent or has sexual content not suitable for someone of my age, then I would hope you would not let me see it."

Sullivan was very perplexed. "You're not helping me much."

"The decision is not mine to make. After all, you're my parent, and you know what is best for me,"

Sullivan picked up the newspaper with the theater listings.

"How can I tell what is in the movies if I haven't seen them?" he said.

"You must be guided by the Motion Picture Association ratings. At my tender age I certainly would not expect you to take me to a film with an R rating, since it would contain improper language, excessive violence, or even nudity that we both would find morally offensive."

Sullivan said, "Yeh, I guess you're right."

"We can also eliminate X-rated movies since you couldn't take me to one even if you wanted to."

"Who said anything about taking you to an X-rated movie?"

"I was just making it easier for you to select the right film for me. You can forget the G category as we'd both be bored, even if we could find one," David said.

"So what we're looking for is a PG or Parental Guidance film?" Sullivan said.

"That would be a good place to start. Of course, there is a new rating, PG-13, which is a warning to you that there is more violence and sex in it than a PG film, but not enough to rate an R."

"Would you like to see a PG-13 picture?"

"The question is not whether I would like to see one, but whether you and mother would want me to view it," David replied. "It's a grown-up decision that, as a child, I don't feel I should be part of."

"Every film in this paper sounds like either a sophomore college joke or a stupid comic strip adventure. What kind of guidance can I get from that?" Sullivan complained.

David said, "You can't blame the motion picture producers. Grownups don't go to the movies, and therefore Hollywood no longer has to pander to their tastes."

"Where the heck did you hear that?" Sullivan wanted to know.

"I saw Jack Valenti on the 'Today' show and he said it while defending the rating system," David replied.

"What else did he say?"

"The PG-13 rating places an even larger guidance responsibility on the parent. You, in effect, Dad, are the final arbiter as to how much violence or sexual permissiveness I will be exposed to in my developing years."

I could see Sullivan was losing his patience. "If it was up to me I wouldn't let you see any of these idiotic movies," he said, throwing down the paper.

"I may not agree with your assessment of the current crop of summer films, but as a 12-year-old, I respect your right as a parent to protect me from them."

"Here's five bucks, said Sullivan. "Go see anything you want."

"Thank you, father, David said.

"What are you going to see?" I asked David as we left Sullivan steaming in the living room.

"Indiana Jones," he whispered to me. "We go through this charade every week."

Democrats miss chance to revise rules

BY ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) The Democratic party has forfeited a rare opportunity to revise the procedures that proved to be inequitable during the selection of delegates to this year's presidential nominating convention.

Structural flaws in the current rules produced distorted results whose principal beneficiary was former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, now presumed to be the party's presidential nominee.

Mondale received 38.6 percent of all votes cast in the primaries and caucuses but he has the support of 52.5 percent of all convention delegates selected as of late June.

Sen. Gary W. Hart, D-Colo., got 36.2 percent of the primary and caucus votes but only 31.8 percent of the delegates. The biggest loser, however, was the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, who got 18.3 percent of the primary and caucus votes but only 9.8 percent of the delegates.

When the convention's Rule Committee met here in late June, Hart's campaign aides offered a "Democratic Package" of reforms specifically designed to prevent the perpetuation of that inequitable situation at conventions in future years.

Jackson, for example, was the victim of a rule that requires a candidate to receive at least 20 percent or 25 percent (depending on circumstances) of the votes cast in a primary or caucus in order to qualify as a participant in the delegate distribution process.

The Hart reform proposal would have eliminated the 20 percent to 25 percent minimum threshold and imposed instead a 15 percent maximum threshold in the future.

Hart gained Mondale's approval of the "Democracy Package," apparently in return for Hart's commitment not to challenge the credentials of approximately 600 delegates pledged to Mondale.

The two campaign organizations planned to seek quick approval of the reform package from the Rules Committee, then from the delegates at this year's convention, thus making it mandatory for the 1988 delegate selection process.

But Jackson's political advisors - for reasons that remain incomprehensible - insisted that all of the proposals be referred instead to a party commission that would not be established until after this year's convention.

That procedure was reluctantly accepted to mollify the Jackson forces. As a result, the politicians and others who benefited from the current inequities will have an opportunity to perpetuate them through protracted negotiations during the commission's deliberations.

Mondale's veep choice may lose Texas for Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — By eliminating the two Texans he interviewed as potential running mates, Walter Mondale may have eliminated Texas from the Democratic column this November, said some of the state's politicians.

Mondale on Thursday ended the suspense and elected New York Congresswoman Geraldine Ferraro as his vice presidential running mate.

Expected to win the nomination at next week's Democratic convention, Mondale had interviewed Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros as possible vice presidential nominees.

Though he reportedly impressed Mondale, the 37-year-old Cisneros had been viewed as a long shot because of his youth and relative inexperience. Most Texas Democrats were pushing for Bentsen.

Bentsen friends had said earlier this week the senator was told "indirectly" by the Mondale campaign that he would not be selected.

"I congratulate Vice President Mondale on his selection of Rep. Ferraro as his running mate," said Bentsen in a statement released from his Washington office. "I have a good deal of respect for Rep. Ferraro and I look forward to working with her when she presides over the Senate as the first woman vice president in the history of the United States."

Cisneros told reporters in San Antonio he was also "very, very pleased" with the choice of Ms. Ferraro, the first woman selected by a major party candidate to run for vice president.

"I could not have been prouder to have been involved in a process that results in this historical achievement," Cisneros said. "My family is honored, my city is honored, my heritage has been paid respect by my involvement in the process."

Ms. Ferraro's geographic and political background — not her gender — was of more concern to politicians in Texas, where the top of the ticket could affect the outcome of the U.S. Senate race between state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, and U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station.

"I think it will make it more difficult for us in Texas to carry the state," said Gov. Mark White at a Capitol news conference.

"It would have been easier if she were from Houston," he said.

"The Senate race, I think, is riding on the success of the (presidential) ticket," said Houston Congressman Mickey Leland, a Mondale supporter and chairman of the Democratic National Committee's Black Caucus. "With Mondale being painted as a liberal and another liberal on the ticket and Doggett — there's no philosophical balance. It's going to present some problems."

"It was my opinion at the beginning that it was going to be hard enough to carry Texas even with Bentsen on the ticket."

Doggett met with campaign aides in Austin on Thursday and issued a brief statement calling Mondale's selection of Ferraro "wise and courageous," though he had preferred Bentsen or Cisneros.

Gramm issued a statement congratulating Ferraro on her selection, noting the two entered Congress the same year — 1978 — and served together on the Budget Committee.

But, Gramm said, "I do not believe that voters will be swayed one way or another by the fact that Geraldine Ferraro is a woman. I think they will judge her on the basis of qualifications and experience."

Republican U.S. Sen. John

Tower, whose retirement is giving Democrats a shot at retaking his Senate seat, said through an aide in Washington that Ferraro's selection "will help Reagan in Texas simply because Mondale chose a northeast liberal as his running mate."

Former Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss previously had said Democrats had to win Texas to win the election and the best way was to put a Texan on the ticket. But he called Ferraro's selection "splendid."

"This is the first real good day for the Mondale campaign," Strauss said from his Dallas law office.

"I think she's a winner and she'll look like one. She's a class act."

State Treasurer Ann Richards, who was at a conference in Santa Fe, N.M., called the selection of a woman "an historic day for all of us and most especially for our daughters. What this does for them is just wonderful."

Ferraro's ability to help is questioned

By The Associated Press

Political leaders welcomed Geraldine Ferraro to the No. 2 spot on the Democratic presidential ticket with praise for her style and achievements, but many expressed doubts that the liberal New Yorker can help her party gather the much-needed votes of conservative Southerners.

Virtually every Democrat asked to describe the 48-year-old Ms. Ferraro, an Italian-American, a Roman Catholic mother of three and a three-term congresswoman from the New York borough of Queens, offered nothing but plaudits. Her rivals for the Democratic vice presidential candidate spot were among the most lavish with applause.

But amid the approval, some party leaders voiced skepticism of the decision Walter F. Mondale made after five weeks of deliberation. Mondale is assured of the majority he needs to win the presidential nomination at the Democratic convention in San Francisco next week.

"I'm a good Southern Democrat, and if she is on the ticket and Mondale is the nominee I will support her," Tennessee businessman and longtime Democratic fundraiser Marshall Ledbetter said Thursday. "But I'm not ready for a lady in that high place, and my people aren't ready."

Virginia State Republican Chairman Donald Huffman of Roanoke said he felt Mondale's choice would do nothing to enhance Democratic chances of overtaking what many consider an overwhelming Reagan lead in his state.

"A woman from New York City won't appeal that much to Virginians," Huffman said.

Alabama GOP Executive Director Marty Connors said information from polls indicates that the selection of Ms. Ferraro "shows this is an indication that Walter Mondale is willing to write off the South. The very fact he did not choose a Southerner ... is an indication he knows how strong the president is down here."

Other prominent Democrats, however, enthusiastically applauded the choice of Mrs. Ferraro. And most agreed Mondale attracted the attention of women voters.

South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings, once thought to be in the running for the vice presidency, called Ms. Ferraro "very smart and effective on her feet. She has gained a great deal of respect in a very short time," the Democrat said.

Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, who was also considered Mondale, said Ms. Ferraro is "extremely well qualified. She's a dynamic person with a great deal of enthusiasm."

"I think she's a winner and she'll look like one," said former National Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss. "She's a class act."

"Her public record on behalf of working people of America is outstanding," said Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, an early Mondale supporter.

Another man is executed

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — David Leroy Washington, who admitted killing three people and said he'd rather die himself than rot in jail, was executed today in Florida's electric chair.

Washington was the second U.S. death row prisoner to be executed in as many days.

His death was announced at 7:09 a.m. by corrections Sgt. Don Gladdish to the 42 witnesses in death chamber.

"I would like to say to the families of all of my victims. I'm sorry for all of the grief and heartache I have brought to them," Washington told the witnesses shortly before he died. "If my death brings them any satisfaction, so be it."

Addressing the 220 other condemned inmates in the prison, he said: "I'd like to say to all the guys on death row, don't bow to defeat, don't bow to a victory, don't bow to a defeat without a fight."

"I'm kind of nervous. That's all."

A chin strap was placed over his mouth, a skullcap was tightened over his head and a black rubber mask dropped over his face.

At 7:04 a.m., the jolt of 2,000 volts of electricity made his body jump briefly and sweat darkened his shirt. He tightened his fist, and the fist remained closed throughout the 85-second cycle of electricity. About 30 people demonstrated outside the prison against the death penalty, while a half-dozen showed their support.

The U.S. Supreme Court late Thursday rejected last-ditch pleas by Washington's lawyers to step in and halt the execution, voting 7-2 against further argument.

Washington was under his third death warrant for killing University of Miami student Frank Meli, elderly Miami resident Katrina Birk and homosexual minister Daniel Pridgen in an eight-day murder spree in Miami in 1976.

As he waited in a holding cell near the death chamber at Florida State Prison, Washington was "stoic" when told of the high court's decision, a prison official said.

His appeals were based on a lawyer's claim that the death sentence was arbitrary and discriminatory.

A second Florida inmate also scheduled for execution today was spared by the high court.

Washington ordered a last meal of fried shrimp and oysters, french fries, lemonade, a half-pint of vanilla ice cream, hot rolls and catsup for his last meal, said prison spokesman Vernon Bradford, and was visited by his mother and other relatives Thursday. His execution made him the 22nd inmate, and the seventh in Fpppppxxx, upreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976. On Thursday, Georgia executed convicted murderer Ivon R. Stanley for the death of an insurance collector who was beaten and buried alive.

The 34-year-old Washington, confessed to all three slayings, saying that he hated Pridgen; that he had planned a robbery at the home of Ms. Birk; and that he had abducted Meli after answering a newspaper advertisement for Meli's car.

After pleading guilty, he asked the judge to sentence him to death rather than send him to prison.

"I don't want to die — you know what I mean? But if I sit up in some jail and rot, I'd rather be killed," he said.

While the Supreme Court refused to block Washington's execution, a separate ruling by the justices Thursday spared a second Florida inmate from the electric chair today.

The high court refused to overrule a stay of execution granted by the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta to Jimmy Lee Smith, 30, who was convicted of slaying a mother and daughter.

Trial of four Solidarity unionists gets under way

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The long-awaited trial of four top Solidarity advisers charged with plotting to overthrow the Communist system began in a Warsaw military court today.

Authorities rejected a request by Lech Walesa, founder of the now-outlawed labor union, to attend the trial, but he strode to the front of the courthouse surrounded by supporters and police to greet the defendants' families before leaving.

"I will try to be as close to the trial as I can," Walesa said.

Defendants Jacek Kuron, Adam Michnik, Henryk Wujec and Zbigniew Romaszewski — former members of the Committee for Social Self-Defense — face a maximum 10-year prison sentence if convicted. They had rejected a government offer of amnesty in exchange for political silence.

The government was expected to restrict admittance to the trial, set for Warsaw military court. Family members of the defendants said they had received two tickets each.

The government refused to say whether Western reporters would be permitted in the courtroom.

The four defendants, along with seven Solidarity leaders, are the most prominent Solidarity activists still imprisoned as a result of the Dec. 13, 1981 imposition of martial law.

Solidarity, the first independent trade union in the Soviet bloc, included a majority of Poland's workers. It was suspended and later outlawed under the martial law government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who continued as premier after martial law was lifted.

Authorities last spring offered the 11 Solidarity leaders and advisers freedom if they would promise to avoid political activity or accept temporary exile. All rejected the offer.

"I won't accept an amnesty, as I don't feel guilty at all," Michnik, a 37-year-old historian, said last month in a letter smuggled from Rakowiecka Prison in Warsaw. "I demand... an open trial and will be strong enough to wait for the not-guilty verdict."

There has been widespread speculation that the government was preparing an amnesty for most or all of the more than 600 political prisoners in Polish jails on July 22 to mark the 40th anniversary of the proclamation of Communist rule. But it was unclear if such an amnesty would include the four defendants.

Walesa, who won the Nobel Peace Prize for his work as leader of Solidarity, told ABC News Thursday that he would attend the trial.

"It is my place to be there with them," he said.

But today, authorities refused to let him past the foyer to the courtroom.

"Please get in your car and leave," a uniformed policeman told the 40-year-old shipyard electrician, who is on vacation this month.

Walesa replied that he was prepared to "set up a tent here with my friends."

Dancer to take Dallas by storm

DALLAS (AP) — Sporting the obligatory Sgt. Pepper jacket and white sequined glove, Michael Jackson tonight will strut and dance his way to the top of a five-story stage built just for him and try to thrill thousands.

Jackson and his road crew already have turned Texas Stadium from Cowboy country into a laser-lit sound stage, with nine-story speaker columns, and even the Cowboys are impressed.

Five Cowboys players tried to pay the singer a visit Thursday afternoon at his hotel suite. He wasn't in, but Dexter Clinkscales, Tony Dorsett, Tony Hill, Drew Pearson and Dennis Thurman were invited backstage to one of the three Victory Tour concerts.

Some critics say Jackson's appearance in Dallas has brought out the worst in people. Ministers complain about the underlying tones of his music, and fans protested ticket policy. But crowds have come out to see Jackson and his family so far during his stay.

"Michael is really up for the concert," said Jackson's spokesman Norm Winter.

Officials said some seats for the concert series remained unsold in the second leg of his nationwide tour. But stadium spokesmen said workers are preparing for a flurry of medical emergencies when the concerts begin at dark each night.

"We're prepared for panic, fainting spells — just about anything that can happen, although we don't think anything will," said Texas Stadium spokesman Joe Cavagnaro.

The National Weather Service predicts temperatures at dark each night should be about 90.

Cavagnaro said that six medical stations will be open during the concerts, instead of the usual two for Cowboys games. Each will be staffed with a doctor, a nurse, two paramedics and an emergency medical technician, he said.

Concert-goers will have to pass through metal detectors, and bags will be searched, officials said.

Jackson himself has been accompanied by heavy security in his stops in the Metroplex.

Bus crash 'like dynamite' kills 3 and injures 30

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — A gravel truck and a bus carrying teen-age missionaries collided head-on with a sound "like dynamite going off," killing both drivers and one passenger and injuring about 30 other people, officials and a witness said.

A 13-year-old boy was critically injured in the crash Thursday eight miles north of Flagstaff. Another 13-year-old boy was listed in serious condition.

Bongo Brake, co-owner of the Silver Saddle Trading Post near the accident scene, said he heard the crash and grabbed a first-aid kit before running to help.

"I went into the bus," said Brake, a former Army medic. "There was pandemonium, blood all over the place. It was a total mess and people were screaming." The sound of the crash was "like dynamite going off," he said.

Passengers prayed as a helicopter ferried those with the most serious injuries to the Flagstaff hospital.

Dr. Paul Hildebrand, an emergency-room physician who happened on the scene almost immediately after the accident, took charge at the crash site and "ran it like a MASH doctor," said DPS helicopter pilot Dave Ruhman, who made three trips to the hospital.

Sgt. Allan Schmidt of the state Department of Public Safety quoted witnesses as saying that the truck, loaded with 80,000 pounds of gravel, first collided with a car traveling in front of the bus.

"We do not know why, but the truck crossed the center line and struck the Mustang in the rear," Schmidt said. "It then struck the bus, head-on."

The DPS identified the dead as Richard Herman Zumstein, 48, of Flagstaff, a driver for B.B. Bonner Jr. Enterprises Inc. of Flagstaff; bus driver Ronald L. Siders, 48, of Merritts Island, Fla., and his wife, Marian.

A spokeswoman at Flagstaff Medical Center identified the critically injured youth as Derek Tong of Findlay, Ohio. Jonathan Sean Tomlin, 13, of Georgetown, Ohio, was listed in serious condition.

Children wait for missing father

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — When a jet roars overhead, Ziad Halwani, 8, and his 5-year-old brother, Ghassan, often run outside and search the skies for a flight from Paris bringing their father home. The plane will never come.

Ever since their father, Adnan Halwani, was abducted 22 months ago, their mother, Wadad, has been writing letters and sending presents to them signed "Daddy."

Wadad Halwani has found it impossible to explain to her sons that their father is one of more than 2,000 people believed kidnapped by various militias in Lebanon. Most of the missing are feared dead.

Adnan Halwani, a member of the Lebanese Communist Party, was 36 when two gunmen took him away on Sept. 24, 1982, Mrs. Halwani said.

The men came to their home in the Ras el-Nabeh neighborhood, in a disputed area close to the confrontation line separating Beirut into two sectors — the Christian east and the Moslem west.

They flashed official cards, identifying them as Taharri, or secret police, and said they were going to take him away for brief questioning "concerning a traffic accident," Mrs. Halwani recounted.

"We were surprised. We hadn't been involved in a traffic accident," she said. "They put guns to both sides of his head."

She ran downstairs with them and saw her husband driven away in a white Peugeot. She then went to the Taharri police station and to the military tribunal in search of her husband but had no success.

Ziad asks why he has no father to take him to school in the mornings like most of his classmates.

He and Ghassan cannot remember what their father looks like. So their mother tucks pictures of him into the letters she fakes.

"I have told them their father is in Paris and every time a plane come over, they ask, 'Is this daddy coming home?'"

The government has promised the families of the kidnapped that it will investigate and resolve the issue.

Waiter tries suicide in cell

DALLAS (AP) — An unemployed Moroccan waiter was being held in an infirmary observation cell today following a suicide attempt that came after he was ordered to stand trial for the slayings of six bar patrons, authorities say.

Abdelkrim Belachheb, 39, received 18 stitches at the infirmary of the Lew Sterrett Justice Center early Thursday after slashing himself twice in the left arm with a razor blade at his cell, officials said.

"Since he's given us an indication that he may be suicidal, we'll keep him there (in the infirmary) for the duration," said Bob Knowles, Dallas County sheriff's department detentions commander.

Belachheb's court-appointed attorney, Ted Calisi, said he would question jail officials about why his client was allowed access to a razor in light of earlier statements by the suspect that he has previously attempted suicide.

Calisi, who said he is planning an insanity defense for his client, added the attempted suicide was prompted "by many factors, including mental illness."

He claimed Belachheb was upset after he was interrogated by investigators Tuesday night from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 a.m. "without the benefit of counsel."

Calisi said he will use the police interrogation as part of the insanity defense that he plans to use at Belachheb's trial.

"You have to look at his state of mind," Calisi said. "The man is sick. He has a mental defect. He has a mental illness."

A guard making a routine, hourly check on Belachheb's cell at 7:15 a.m. Thursday noticed the inmate lying on his bunk with blood dripping from his arm.

"He just cut his arm with a razor blade that he dismantled," said a jail official who asked not to be identified.

Belachheb had two gashes on his left arm between his wrist and his elbow, said Knowles. Officials said the injury was never life-threatening.

Belachheb is charged with six counts of murder and one count of attempted murder in the June 29 shooting of seven patrons at Ianni's Restaurant and Club in North Dallas.

During the onslaught, four women and two men died and another man was hospitalized.

Belachheb was ordered to stand trial after a probable cause hearing Wednesday. A police detective testified that several witnesses had identified Belachheb in a photograph lineup as the man who did the shooting.

Sgt. Bill Parker said that witnesses picked Belachheb's picture from among several they were shown as that of the man who fired a 9mm automatic weapon at seven restaurant patrons.

Belachheb was identified despite the dramatic change in his appearance since the night of the shootings, said Parker.

He said Belachheb had a full head of hair, apparently a wig, and no mustache that night.

Country hiding from reality

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States is hiding from the reality of its big bad loans to developing countries, is actually worsening the consequences of those bad debts, and is ignoring a sensible, workable solution.

That is the contention of William Dunkelberg, Purdue University economist and a man recognized among economists and others for insight that penetrates clouds of confusion and other obfuscations.

"There must be a better way," said Dunkelberg, who believes that existing U.S. policy endangers the American banking system, and earns the contempt of debtor nations that may be forced into economic misery and political revolt.

The bottom line, he contends, is an enormous fiction, a fabrication that the United States is using against its own interests.

The better way begins with two assumptions: To minimize disruption of the U.S. financial system while maximizing the political potential of the loss.

With this in mind, says Dunkelberg, the United States must admit the debts are not repayable and then make sure that the costs of debts are absorbed in an orderly fashion, "under our control, not the debtor countries'."

An outline of his plan would proceed in this manner:

- Announce that the debts are more or less forgiven.
- To maintain soundness in the banking structure, foreign loans would be exchanged for special government securities having a low but guaranteed rate of interest.
- Finally, in exchange for this relief the debtor countries would agree to make the interest payments on the declining principle balances.

Police say youth wanted to hurt mother

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A 15-year-old boy who said he wanted to hurt his mother because she made him break up with a girlfriend has been accused of trying to kill his parents with ant poison.

The mother and stepfather called police Wednesday night after a light yellow powdery substance came out when she poured water into her coffeemaker. Moments earlier, the woman said, the boy seemed very nervous and said he had to leave the house.

The couple said the 15-year-old had been the only other person around the coffeemaker that afternoon and that he had been using a commercial poison to kill ants in their yard.

A patrol officer took the coffee maker and the contents to the police department for chemical analysis.

The youth denied to police officers that he had placed poison in the coffee maker but later told them he had wanted to hurt his mother because she made him end a relationship with a girlfriend, authorities said.

The youth signed a statement about the incident and was taken to a juvenile detention facility, police said.

He offers what he says is a better way—and it might very well be.

"Virtually no knowledgeable observer feels that these loans will ever be repaid," says Dunkelberg.

"In other words, everyone, including the banks that lent the money, regard these as 'bad' loans."

So long as present attitudes prevail, he suggests, big banks are endangered, and therefore, so is the banking system. As of 1982, he reminds you, the nine largest U.S. banks had $60 billion in loans to about 40 non-OPEC developing countries — while themselves having only $25 billion in capital.

Instead of dealing with this immense exposure, however, the United States has "allowed debtors to control our fate, leaving to them the decision of whether or not to formally declare abrogations of the debts."

Moreover, the possibility of abrogation becomes more likely because the International Monetary Fund is acting, says Dunkelberg, as if it doesn't even recognize the danger. It is, he points out, imposing economic austerity, a condition that lessens the ability of debtor nations to repay debts.

Wholesale prices expected to climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — After holding steady for two months, wholesale prices should start climbing again, pressured partly by higher food costs, private analysts say.

Still, the analysts see little likelihood of an inflation surge in the coming months.

Indeed, Robert Gough, economist at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., says, "Consumers really needn't worry about inflation in 1984."

More light was being shed today on inflation at the mid-point of the year. The Labor Department was releasing its June report on the Producer Price Index for finished goods.

Also scheduled for release today were reports from the Commerce Department on sales by U.S. retailers in June and from the Federal Reserve Board on last month's output by the nation's factories and mines.

The twin reports will be closely analyzed for clues to the rate of growth of the economy, and many analysts were predicting the signs would point to a moderate slowdown.

The expansion has been much stronger so far this year than most analysts expected, and some fear the vigorous performance could mean higher inflation in the future and further pressure on interest rates. An easing of the expansion, they say, would relieve that pressure. Resurging inflation was not expected in today's report.

Producer prices didn't move at all in April and May. That meant inflation at the wholesale level was running at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.5 percent through the first five months of the year. It was 0.6 percent last year, the best showing in two decades.

Strong dollar spurs largest invasion of Americans since D-Day landings

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — When Donald Schilling of Granville, Ohio, was budgeting the family holiday in Europe a few months ago, he figured a British pound would cost him as much as $1.60.

Now that he is here, the pound costs just over $1.30. That means a hotel room for him, his wife and two sons is about $17 less than he budgeted for. A ticket to a play on London's West End is down from around $15.20 to $12.35, a bus ride between Buckingham Palace and St. Paul's Cathedral from 80 cents to 65 cents.

The strong dollar (the pound traded late Wednesday in London at $1.3185) is helping to attract 5.5 million American tourists to Europe this year, up 15 percent from last year's record of 4.8 million.

It's the biggest influx of Yanks since the D-day invasion of 1944. And to hear Americans exclaiming "how cheap this is!" is a sharp contrast to the late 1970s, when a weak dollar put Europe's delights beyond the reach of the average U.S. visitor.

In Italy a dollar buys more than 1,700 lire, 200 more than a year ago. The dollar gets nearly 2.4 Swiss francs, up from 2.1 francs. It buys 147 Portuguese escudos, 30 more than last summer.

It all translates into savings of 12 to 30 percent, depending on which country you're visiting. Inflation rates also are generally low because of recession. Switzerland's is just 2.9 percent a year. Britain's rate is down from double digits in the late 1970s to 5.3 percent today.

And since the average tourist visits Europe once in five years, he will be relieved to discover that many currencies have fallen by more than 100 percent since he was here last. The French franc, for instance, is down from 25 cents in 1979 to less than 12 cents this week. An average meal on the Champs Elysees costs $10.50, up 50 cents over last year but far below 1979 costs.

Once-costly Swiss restaurant prices are suddenly almost reasonable. Soup, salad, main course, and dessert in a medium-priced Geneva restaurant is about 25 francs. In dollars, the drop is from $12.70 last summer to $10.45.

"This is a real bargain," said Rock Morris, 29, of Fairview, N.J., holding a genuine Swiss Army knife at a Geneva store. "It's about $10 cheaper here than back in the States."

In London, Debbie York of Fresno, Calif., was delighted to discover crystal at 20 percent less than it would have cost a year ago.

In Amsterdam, Leslie Johnson, 25, of Fresh Meadows, N.Y., said: "I wouldn't have taken this trip but for the dollar's value. I'm traveling on a limited budget and shopping has been much cheaper than I expected."

Copenhagen has gone from one of the most expensive cities in Europe eight years ago to one of the cheapest. Jacob and Irene Kaplan of White Plains, N.Y., said they planned to load up on glass and porcelain. "It's half the price it would cost you at home," said Mrs. Kaplan.

Elsewhere in the world, shaky economies may bewilder tourists, but almost everywhere they go they will find it cheaper. Even in Israel, where inflation is running at 400 percent, prices in dollar terms are largely unaffected.

In Yugoslavia, the dollar's value has doubled in just 12 months. Despite 50 percent inflation, a good meal costs less than $10.

For the tourist who can afford to get to South Africa, a hotel room in a luxury Eastern Transvaal game reserve costs the equivalent of $102 a day, compared with $136.50 last year. The rand has plunged from 91 cents to 68 with the slide in the price of gold, South Africa's biggest export.

In Kenya, the percentage of American tourists has doubled from 20 to 40 percent. In Australia, visa applications by Americans rose 34.5 percent in the first quarter of 1984.

The U.S. State Department says passport applications have jumped 50 percent so far this year, with 600,000 documents issued in May — a 53 percent increase over last year.

Most economists say high U.S. interest rates, which raise the yield on dollar investments, are the main reason for the dollar's continued strength. European governments complain that it is draining investment and hurting their own economic recovery by driving up the cost of imports.

But for European tourist industries, it is a boon.

Britain reports a record $4.55 billion in tourist revenues so far this year, an increase of $650 million over the first half of 1983.

The problem, says Michael Montague, head of the English Tourist Board, is that "Victorian attitudes" make it difficult for the traditionally reserved British to put on a welcoming face for tourists.

"One must be charming," he told a television interviewer. "One must be pleasant and nice. The Swiss do it naturally. The Americans say 'have a nice day.' I don't know whether they mean it or not. I hope they do. Let us hope that everybody in England can say 'have a nice day.' That's what it's all about."

WAIT OF THE WORLD—As Atlas bears the weight of the world, passport seekers bear their wait in line outside Rockefeller Center in New York. The New York Passport Agency has been processing passport applications at a rate slightly under 1,000 a day and people often wait in line for half the day before they get into the agency. Granite speaks to Texas sculptor

By ARTHUR CAVAZOS
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Sculptor Jesus Bautiste Moroles lets the stone speak to him.

A cutter and molder of granite for more than 12 years, Moroles has only been showing work the past three years. His granite cuttings evoke immense power through simplicity, which does not immediately betray the difficulty of granite as an artistic medium.

His works can be found in bank lobbies in Houston, Dallas and in private and corporate collections. His most recent work, "Floating Mesa Fountain," is in front of the museum of art in Albuquerque, N.M.

Moroles was recently in Abilene speaking at the Abilene Fine Arts Museum. He'll be returning to the Big Country soon to install a work at the Old Jail Foundation museum in Albany.

The son of a Mexican National, Moroles was born in Corpus Christi, reared in Dallas and now works and lives in Rockport on the Texas Gulf Coast.

He admits to being a struggling artist, and he warned a group of art students assembled for his slide lecture at AFAM, to be certain of their commitment to art.

"I knew I wanted to do this since I was in the third grade," he said, adding "I believe art is something that you jump into with both feet."

After graduating from North Texas State University in Denton in 1978, he created nothing for sale until 1981.

He spent the intervening years working, including one summer as an apprentice with noted El Paso artist Luis Jimenez, who had one of his outdoor sculptures in Abilene along North First Street in 1982.

Along with his degree from NTSU, Moroles used industrial arts as a minor, which he said really helped him support himself doing work such as installing fountains, welding, and operating machinery.

All these skills have come in handy for Moroles, especially operating heavy machinery. A video about Moroles screened at the museum showed him operating a heavy crane, understandable considering the size of some of the stones he retrieves from quarries.

Other special tools are necessary when one considers the medium. However, Moroles' abstract works belie this difficulty.

His works have a smoothness and fine detail that impress the viewer about this man's talent to take a static stone and carve some character out of it.

Moroles' most prevalent works mesh, fitting together like so many pieces from a giant marble erector set. Some of the pieces are sculpted to allow viewers to toy with them. He calls them "playscapes," and in one instance the miniature granite pieces were arranged in a mini-Stonehenge at one exhibition.

People touching his works doesn't bother Moroles as much as it annoys museum officials, he said.

He's successful at outdoor exhibitions. His as yet untitled work for the Albany museum will be outside in a sculpture garden, he said.

All Moroles' work are abstract. That comes from his philosophy of letting the stone talk to him.

He said that on occasion, he has let a piece of granite sit in his back yard for days, weeks, waiting for the "work" inside the stone to express itself.

Moroles said he likes "simple straightforward titles" for his sculptures. Some that resemble Mayan temples are titled simply, "Temple." Yet other slick pieces have names such as "Squid Fossil" and "Moonbeam 4."

The Texan works with different types of granite such as Texas, Oklahoma and Georgia granite, he said, explaining the hardness and consistency of each to the art students and aficionados.

Moroles also spoke about the "business of art."

If one is going to be able to afford to eat, one has to have commissions, he said, adding that learning to market one's work as well as oneself is an important step for artists who are going to be successful commercially.

Moroles has plans for a book with photographs of his sculpted pieces. While some points aren't finalized, he said he knows it will have "no words, no page numbers."

"It will be very abstract. Like what I do," he said.

Repairs inspire motorists

HOUSTON (AP) — The irritation of constant repairs being done on Houston freeways can prompt even the most obedient motorists to shout obscenities, pull pistols and hurl bottles at freeway workers and police officers hired to protect them, state officials agree.

Richard Christie, a spokesman for the Texas highway department, says the "never-ending cycle" of repairs seems to kindle aggression that is out of proportion to the problem.

Some drivers have jumped curbs, scattering workers, and then roared away, laughing, he said, while others have pretended they were playing in a high-speed bullfight.

"This might in itself be more dangerous (than police work) because when I'm out there, it's just my frail, 250-pound self trying to stop that two-ton piece of steel moving 80 miles per hour," Tom Rogers, a police sergeant who guards freeway crews while off duty, told the Houston Post.

Rogers recalls early one Saturday morning he was standing beside a freeway lane blocked off with barricades when one driver accelerated and headed at him.

"He did it on purpose because he was a full lane over," Rogers said.

Rogers said he ran for the median. As the car passed, it clipped his right hand and scraped the skin from his knuckles. The driver never stopped, he said.

"They think it's funny 'cause there's nothing I can do. I'm usually out on foot and my car is running distance away," he said.

In recent years, authorities said, several workers have been killed.

Conversion of plants to diesel fuel is sought

By BILL CORTES
The Phoenix Gazette

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Dr. James Kuester wants to remove a few million years from the making of petrol-fuel.

At the moment, oil companies pump the remains of prehistoric plants and animals — dinosaurs included — out of the ground, refine it and sell it as diesel fuel and gasoline.

Kuester, however, is a relatively impatient person. He doesn't think we can afford to wait a few million years more to replace the ancient plants and animals rapidly being consumed. So he has a plan: devise an economical way to convert new plants and organic wastes directly to diesel fuel.

In fact, he already has a way; it's the economical part that needs work.

And work it's getting. Kuester's been researching biomass conversion — as he terms it — since 1976 from a laboratory at Arizona State University's chemical engineering department. Kuester, a chemical engineering professor on the ASU faculty, keeps a small office on campus.

His research laboratory, though, is the size of a small warehouse; it's a flight of stairs and about 30 feet removed from his office. At the heart is a complex of tubes, vessels and dials. This is the conversion unit. It works like this: you feed a ground-up plant — feedstock — into one end and collect diesel fuel at the other.

For the most part, the main plant ingredients that make conversion work are carbon, hydrogen and oxygen; they form cellulose. Such cellulose — after decomposing over the eons — also lies at the base of any standard petroleum product.

"It forms a fossil fuel, but everybody knows the fossil fuels are going to be gone one of these days. And if you want molecules of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen for fuel, you're going to have to go right back to the basic building block. Biomass."

The idea, of course, is to make biomass conversion work well enough to pay for itself; only then would such a process look attractive to private industry, Kuester says. To reach a break-even point, the conversion unit equipment would have to process 300 tons of plant material a day, he adds.

"We'd like for that number to be much smaller, and that's an integral part of what we do here in the laboratory. That is, to render higher yields in order to get that break-even scale."

Kuester and his staff have done much to increase yields since they first undertook the project. All the same, he adds, he has a way to go before the oil companies raise an eyebrow.

"They're monitoring us, and when they deem it's economically viable to snatch this up, that's when they'll do it. But their business is petroleum."

St. Mark CME schedules prayer breakfast Saturday

The men of St. Mark's CME Church, 406 Elm, will sponsor a prayer breakfast at 8:45 a.m. Saturday in honor of John Wesley, founder of the Methodist Church.

The public is invited, said Rev. H. R. Johnson, pastor. The meal is free, but donations to the church will be accepted.

The church will have a special program at 3 p.m. Sunday, sponsored by the Laymen's Board of Christian Education and the Christian Youth Fellowship.

Guest speaker will be Rev. S. M. Berliner, Jr., pastor of the Carter Chapel CME Church of Amarillo.

Rev. Johnson invited the public to attend the special service.

Jehovah's Witnesses to meet in Amarillo

Area delegates will be attending a Jehovah's Witnesses district convention July 19-22 at the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum.

The convention is one of 119 district conventions in a series sponsored by The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York for this summer.

Stanley Weigel, official spokesman, said 65 separate sites, including Amarillo, will be utilized for the annual meetings. More than 1,150,000 persons are expected to attend the conventions in the United States. Projected attendance for the Amarillo convention is 5,500.

Theme for the 1984 conventions is "Kingdom Increase." Much of the program content will center on the growth of the religious movement in recent years.

The conventions are marking the centennial of Jehovah's Witnesses. The movement started 100 years ago with a small number of Bible students. Today the Witnesses conduct ministerial and preaching activities in 205 lands with associated worldwide membership of 2.6 million.

Americans are weak on morality

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Americans are strong on religion but weak in morality, says a 1984 compilation of the latest surveys about those aspects of life.

They add up to a "giant paradox," says veteran pollster George Gallup Jr., whose organization conducted the numerous studies over the past year and consolidated them into a 100-page report, "1984 Religion in America."

"Religion is growing in importance among Americans, but morality is losing ground," he says in a summary.

While levels of religious involvement are high, and most people say they are more interested in religion than five years ago, "widespread cheating is found in all levels of society," Gallup says.

"Two-thirds of Americans hold the view that the level of ethics in the U.S. has declined during the last decade."

What makes for the seeming paradox, he adds, is that "very little difference" is found in "the behavior of the church and unchurched on a wide range of items including lying, cheating and pilferage."

However, dramatic differences were found in behavior of the "highly spiritually committed" compared with those of less spiritual commitment, with the committed showing a much higher level of moral conduct.

Using various yardsticks, the studies find only 12 percent of the population is among the "highly spiritually committed." Gallup says these people "are a breed apart from the rest of the populace."

The majority fall into "the category of nominal Christians" and their ethical behavior is little different from that of the unchurched, Gallup says.

He says this means that if the level of the country's morals are to be brought up to the level of religious interest, then churches must do a better job of strengthening people's commitment.

The studies show 90 percent of Americans believe in God and have a religious preference, that 70 percent are church members, that 60 percent attend worship services at least once a month and 60 percent say they are more interested in religion than five years ago.

An overwhelming majority pray and believe in prayer, want children to have religious training and want religion to play a bigger role in society, Gallup says.

Ninety percent of Americans want "more emphasis on family ties" and "more respect for authority" while only 12 percent want "more acceptance of marijuana usage" and only 20 percent favor more "sexual freedom."

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

What Does It Take To Build A Church?

Perhaps you glance at the church on the corner once in a while and wonder what it would be like to visit during a service. What is it that draws those people to that particular building every week? What built that church?

The only possible answer is — the love of God. Their love of God prompted them to sacrifice and give so that the sanctuary might be built. The love of God compels them to meet there with others who serve Him. Their love of God compels them to "go, and tell others".

We pray that you will be drawn to such a church this week and that you will align yourself with it. You can help build it into something even better.

Mentone wins battle for historic church

MENTONE, Texas (AP) — Members of the Mentone Community Church say they will proceed with their plans to improve their historic building, now that Texas Tech University has backed out of plans to move it 150 miles to a ranching heritage center on the university campus.

"We need to put some (ceiling) fans in there. One thing and another," Edna Dewees, chairwoman of the Loving County Historical Commission, told the Odessa American.

Loving County commissioners agreed nine months ago to donate the church to the Ranching Heritage Center after a group of West Texans proposed moving the building from Mentone, a town of about 20 people located 20 miles north of Pecos near the Texas-New Mexico line.

But about the same time, some of the people in Mentone and neighboring towns began regular church services in the building. Dewees said church members spent about $3,000 on improvements and secured another donation for a $2,250 piano. Ms. Dewees and other community members argued that the church belonged in Mentone — not 150 miles away at the heritage center. "No ranch ever had a church," she said.

Ranching center directors asked the historical commission to waive a 60-day waiting period before moving the church. The waiting period is mandated by state law for buildings with historical markers.

However, Curtis Tunnell, executive director of the commission, wrote in an April 26 memorandum that the commission not only would not waive the 60-day waiting period, but was opposed to the church being relocated.

Texas Tech officials said the opposition of the state historical commission was a major factor in a decision to abandon any attempts to locate the church at the ranching center.

Bees a miracle, Texas keeper says

By ROBIN LICHTENSTEIN
Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Although he's worked with bees for 25 years and understands their likes and dislikes, the honey-making insects still consider him an enemy.

That's the contention of James "Britt" Brittingham, a good-natured, 59-year-old retired telephone company employee whose hobby seems to have become a habit, if not a passion.

"It's nature's work," Brittingham said last week as he pattered around a white, wooden beehive next to his Odessa home. "God put insects on Earth to help mankind. And the honeybee is one of the most interesting insects on Earth," he said.

Although most beekeepers help their bees by providing a hive forever stocked with thin sheets of wax to be used as a honeycomb foundation, man still is an intruder "robbing them of their harvest," Brittingham said.

After pumping some smoke into the hive and popping a piece of honeycomb into his mouth, he said, "If I'm careful, they'll ignore me." Brittingham explained bees react to the smoke by gorging themselves with honey in preparation for escape.

The gorging, Brittingham's wife, Dean, said, makes the bees too sluggish to attack.

The couple is among about 43 members of the Permian Basin Beekeepers' Association. But Brittingham estimated there are more than 150 beekeepers in Odessa alone.

The association, now about 10 years old, meets at 7:30 p.m. the second Tuesday of each month at the Odessa College Student Union Building, Mrs. Brittingham said.

The Brittinghams also are among about 400 members of the Texas Beekeepers Association, said that organization's former president, G.C. Walker, a professional beekeeper from Rogers.

While most West Texas beekeepers are hobbyists, selling some of their honey locally, Walker said honeybees are a "multimillion-dollar business" in Texas.

Professional beekeepers are concentrated in Southwest Texas "where wild trees and shrubs grow," said Walker, also a former American Beekeeping Federation president.

Nationwide, domestic and export honey sales combine for a $150 million to $200 million business, he said last week, estimating there are 5 million bee colonies nationwide — about 200,000 colonies in Texas.

But the real money is in pollination, Walker said.

Agriculturists "get $10 billion to $18 billion worth of pollination out of our bees" each year, he said.

Beeswax, used in a variety of products from cosmetics to rifle shells, constitutes about 2 or 3 percent of the industry, he added.

Brittingham, who sells his beeswax to manufacturers, said a hive can be started with a $100 investment for beekeeping equipment, a queen and some worker bees.

Despite precautions of smoking the hive, wearing a net over the face and covering most of the skin with thick clothing, getting stung is inevitable in the bee business, said another Odessa keeper, Gayland Reed.

Both Reed and Brittingham keep the bulk of their hives at a local ranch. Because the two beekeepers fear vandalism and theft of the hives, they declined to give the ranch's location.

Noting the theory that the smell of bee venom from one sting could trigger other bees to attack, Reed said, "It's how you react to them."

"The other day, I went out there (to the ranch) on a cloudy day, but that's not the time. They got kind of mean," said the 34-year-old Reed, who was stung "six or eight times" on the hand during that episode.

Another time, he said, "Britt and I went out there all afternoon robbing a pickup load of honey and we didn't get one sting."

The mood of the bees has a lot to do with the weather, Brittingham said, adding he gets stung 75 or 80 times per year.

Stormy weather, he said, makes the bees "a little bit angry," while sunshine brings a calmer mood to the hive.

But the bees' relationship with the weather isn't nearly as interesting as their intricate relationships with one another.

Each bee has its own job, such as tending to the needs of the queen bee, collecting water or pollen, guarding or fanning the hive's entrance or making "royal jelly," Brittingham said.

That jelly, he said, is fed to each bee during the first three days of life. The queen, however, is fed nothing but royal jelly during her lifespan of two to five years.

"If she has the room," Brittingham said, a healthy queen bee can produce 1,500 to 2,000 eggs during a 24-hour period.

The lifespan of the average honeybee is six weeks during the summer, Brittingham said. During hibernation, which occurs from November through March in West Texas, bees will live up to 5 months but do little more than exercise when the temperature reaches 45 degrees, he said.

While most honeybees help man by pollinating crops, producing honey and providing enjoyment for bee enthusiasts, a variety from Africa — commonly known as "killer bees" — pose a threat.

The aggressive strain of insects were imported to Brazil about 20 years ago "for breeding purposes," Walker said.

"But the man who was supposed to breed them let some swarms loose," he explained.

While opinions vary on how killer bees might affect the American bee industry if they ever reach this country, Walker said the U.S. government is "trying to breed the viciousness out of them."

Northward migration of killer bees currently is being tracked in Central America, and the insects are traveling about 400 miles a year, he said. "That leaves them a few years away from us."

Rotary governor addresses local club

Charles E. Beil of Big Spring, governor of the Rotary Club's district which includes Pampa, spoke of the importance of Rotary to a meeting of the Rotary Club of Pampa Wednesday, July 11.

Governor Beil told 75 Rotarians: "Rotarians must discover new means of service in today's world."

During his visit, Beil was told of the local club's activities this year, including the "Wonderful World of Travel" annual film series which benefits local charitable organizations and activities, a career clinic at Pampa High School co-sponsored with the Altrusa

Club, the sponsoring of two Pampa High School young men to attend Camp Ryla and an award of a $1,000 college scholarship.

Beil discussed various youth projects for this Rotary district and efforts to further peace and understanding in the world through Rotary.

Rotary, with nearly 20,000 clubs in 160 countries, is an organization of business and professional men who provide humanitarian service, encourage high ethical standards in all vocations and help build good will and peace in the world.

Children of divorced

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 5 million children under age 18 in the United States, or 9 percent, are living with a divorced parent, according to Pediatric News, a medical publication.

The number of children affected by divorce increased between 1980 and 1981, the latest year for which figures are available from the National Center of Health Statistics.

The 1981 total falls only slightly short of the record year of 1979. In 1981, 1.18 million children were involved in divorce.

The number of children whose parents were divorced each year increased 55 percent between 1950 and 1960, 88 percent between 1960 and 1970, and 36 percent between 1970 and 1981.

The total of 5 million living with a divorced parent does not include children residing with a parent who has remarried.

Davis. Her grandfather, FRANK (FRANCES) DAVIS was born about 1861 in Mississippi and died in 1930 in Broken Bow, Okla. His wife, (first name unknown) BLACKWELL died about 1916 or 1917 in Oklahoma and no other information is known about her. What was her first name? When did they marry? They had a son, OSCAR, born in 1908 in Hugo, Okla., and a daughter, VERA GERTRUDE, born in 1913 in Broken Bow, Okla. Based on other information about the lines, it is possible that this family was in Lawrence County, Miss., moving from Laurens County, S.C., then into Oklahoma. (I am also searching the BLACKWELL surname and would like to hear from others with that lineage.)

I am pleased that my columns are being sent to various parts of the country. That is the best way to help each other — by sharing. Appreciate your support!

Dear Abby

Unethical therapists wreck what they claim to build

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I want to warn women against psychotherapists who have sex with their patients. It happened to me, and a year later, I am still devastated.

Two years ago I went into psychoanalysis because of some recent personal tragedies that I couldn't handle. After many sessions, my therapist started to touch me—beginning with friendly pats and affectionate hugs. I didn't see what was coming. I was "in transference" at the time—projecting onto him the love that other important men in my life had rejected.

Then an entire session of "therapy" was spent rolling around on the floor of his office locked in embraces. (He billed me for that hour!)

I was in a state of emotional shock, terminated the analysis immediately, and sought help from an ethical analyst, the local rape and assault committee and a lawyer. I also filed a malpractice suit for these reasons:

When a woman is in therapy she's like a child—emotionally at the mercy of her therapist. (I read that 5 percent of psychiatrists admit to having sex with their patients—which means there are probably more, but they won't admit it.)

The American Psychiatric Society has taken the official position that once sex occurs with a patient, the therapy is destroyed. Few women take action against their therapists because they feel so ashamed.

So women, be warned. If a mental health practitioner starts to hug you, kiss you or go further, run like hell. He is sicker than you are!

I'm signing my real name and address, but please don't use it.

ANONYMOUSLY GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: All licensed therapists (psychiatrists, psychologists and counselors) are accountable for their professional conduct.

Patients should call their local mental health association to learn where to address their complaints. And they should do so promptly.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who has a sneeze like no other sneeze I've ever heard. His sneezes sound like a massive explosion, resembling a horrible bark!

It seems to me that everyone has some kind of warning that a sneeze is coming on—if only a few seconds—but that should be ample time to muffle it to some extent.

Yesterday my husband was right behind me in the kitchen and I wasn't aware of it until he let go with one of his thunderous sneezes. I nearly scalded my feet with a kettle of boiling water I was holding! His surprise outbursts affect me as though a firecracker had suddenly gone off right next to my ear. I'm afraid one of these days I will automatically start swinging and hit him in the mouth. Any advice? KERCHOO IN AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR KERCHOO: You and your husband have a communication problem—which is nothing to sneeze at. Tell him that when he comes into a room, he should give you a "yoo-hoo" so you'll know he's there. And when he feels a kerchoo coming on, have him either head in another direction, muffle it or risk a punch in the mouth.

DEAR ABBY: How would you define "bedroom eyes"? JOHN, ANNETTE, JULIE AND KRIS

DEAR JOHN, ANNETTE, ETC.: Bedroom eyes are the kind of eyes that suggest mattress acrobatics. (P.S. "Bedroom eyes" often lie in the eye of the beholder. And sometimes they just lie.)

...

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Parents can increase child's reading ability

LUBBOCK — Parents can increase their children's reading ability by reading, talking and planning trips with them, says a Texas Tech University reading specialist.

Dr. Lester G. Butler, director of the Texas Tech Reading Laboratory and president of the Texas Association for the Improvement of Reading, says parents play an important role in improving reading. He suggests a few guidelines.

"Read to your children, from shortly after they come home from the hospital on," he said, recommending that ever parent have the resource book, "The Read-Aloud Handbook."

The book, he said, offers tips on how to talk to your child and what to read for each grade level. It also has suggestions for tying reading in with television.

Butler said parents can watch for books that go along with children's television programs or are counterparts to the latest movies, and encourage children to read them in addition to watching the shows.

Parents should also provide their children with a constant variety of interesting experiences which the children can talk about — a trip to the zoo or an archeological project or the airport.

"Keep curiosity alive," he says.

"Talk to the child as one adult to another, using words that expand the child's vocabulary and stretch his or her mind."

Butler says parents should encourage children to go to the library and to participate in library programs by making reading and library visits regular family activities. They should "make books come alive."

It is important, Butler says, for parents to listen and respond to their children. When children are reading aloud "don't get uptight over the mistakes; let them go ahead with the story line," he says. "Most of the time the mistakes are not that big a deal," Butler says. "It is more significant for the child to understand what he has read and to communicate it with someone."

These are some of the tips Butler offers parents who bring their children to the Reading Laboratory with reading problems.

The lab serves students from elementary school through college. Student and graduate student reading specialists diagnose reading problems, tutor students and prepare individual education plans which include recommendations for parents, teachers and other tutors, for a fee. Forty-nine students are being served this summer, most referred to the lab by concerned parents.

Skin cancer most easily cured

Skin cancer is one of the most easily cured and easily prevented of all cancers. Yet some 7,000 persons will die of the disease in 1984.

Most of the cases of skin cancer might have been avoided simply by putting on a hat or shirt or both. Prolonged over-exposure to the sun should be avoided, and even "sun-worshippers" should use common sense. Skin cancer is almost 100 percent curable when diagnosed early and treated promptly.

A good rule to follow is: Have a look - see by your doctor if any sore, blister, pimple or newly developed blemish in the skin does not show signs of healing within two weeks. Don't stop with the skin. Any sore of the lip, tongue or anywhere in the oral cavity should be watched. These symptoms usually do not mean cancer, but only a physician can determine definitely whether cancer is there or not.

More information on cancer's warning signals can be obtained from your American Cancer Society District Office at 1500 Wallace Blvd., Suite A, Amarillo, 79106 or call Public Education Chairman Jo Love at 669-7624.

Build the doll mansion of daughter's dreams

By APRIL BAIL
When I was a little girl (my daughter can't imagine such a thing), I dreamed of having an enormous house with lots of rooms and fancy furnishings. I even considered building my own.

But when I was finally introduced to the real world, I was disturbed to learn that in order to get my dream house, I would have to sign over the rights to my first-born child.

I finally built my dream house, and even retained the rights to my child. The Mansion Doll House, pictured here, is a small-scale version of the one I've always envisioned. It is, without a doubt, the closest I'll ever come to the real thing.

You can turn your child's dream house into a reality at a surprisingly low cost, using our easy-to-follow plans. They include complete, step-by-step instructions, full-size patterns, scale drawings, assembly diagrams and a materials list.

To order plans for the Mansion Doll House, please specify Project No. 707-4. Also available is Project No. 705-2 which includes instructions, full-size, iron-on patterns, and assembly diagrams for making eight rooms of doll house furniture from solid birch plywood.

Send $3.95 for either plan, or save money and receive both for only $6 by specifying Project No. 3327-2. Now available is the new edition of our color catalog featuring our most recent handcrafted creations as well as our most popular oldies but goodies — all for only $2.95.

Mail your order to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 159, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

Built from 3/4 inch plywood, the mansion doll house stands 28 inches tall. It features three floors, including an attic, a peaked roof, balcony and front porch. The finials, banisters, columns, and porch rails are stock materials you can purchase at most hobby or home improvement centers. The windows are constructed from plywood and wooden dowel rods.

The base of the house measures 30 1/2 x 28 by 3 1/4 inches. The peaked walls each measure 10 x 26 inches, pitched to 18 inches on each side. The rectangular inner walls are each 10 x 18 inches. The back of the house is left open for easy access to the inside.

The T-shaped inside floors measure 29 inches across the back and 19 inches from front to back, with 9/4 inch extensions for each room.

Proverbs valuable in dealing with life

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The homegrown sayings that parents use to give advice to their children may be considered banal by many sophisticated adults. But those sayings and the conventional wisdom they impart are needed right now in American society, believes Dr. W.R. Coulson, a psychology professor at United States International University here.

"In this age of sophistication the advantage is to the people who aren't afraid to be commonplace," Coulson explains. He has made a habit of collecting sayings from students in his classes on the USIU campus as well as from other sources, and he says the sayings make it possible for people to connect across generational barriers.

Coulson recalls that he first became interested in sayings — which he refers to by the Spanish name "dichos" — when his mother would copy them down and post them on the bulletin board in her kitchen.

In his classroom, he's been able to collect dichos from all over the world because students come to USIU from nearly 80 countries. But he's also collected quite a few from the American students who make up half of his classes.

Coulson says adults who have been reared on sayings tell him that "when they are in trouble and can't reason their way out of it, they recollect a saying and the saying is a useful crutch to get them through a difficult time."

Dichos evoke feelings and capture experiences much as poetry does, Coulson says, and he believes they also bring consolation.

Coulson cites the example of one dicho he learned at a seminar for salesmen: "Every adversity carries the seed of opportunity."

"Adversities come when you are not expecting them and they tend to throw you," he says. "You don't know what to make of them until you remember that they are gifts. I can remember that an adversity is a gift because I have this saying which I first stuck in my wallet and have now committed to memory."

Dichos help us to make what Coulson calls focus shifts. "A focus shift can be useful when something is troubling you because you are not seeing through it to what it means, but you are instead stumped by the immediacy of it and it overwhelms you."

The saying helps you "look through the problem to the opportunity that lies behind it," he adds.

Here are some of the sayings Coulson has gathered, many of which are from other countries:

"For someone who pays attention and understands, you don't need many words to explain" (Mexican).

"A person who does not look back at his past will never reach his destination" (Filipino).

"Better run than fight badly" (Swedish).

"Hurry, hurry has no blessing" (Kenyan).

"Nothing scratches your own skin like your own fingernails"

(Mid-Eastern).
"Drop by drop, a lake is created" (Turkish).

"A parrot is green anywhere" (Mexican).

"Men are like steel, of little use when they lose their temper" (American).

"Don't say hello before you have crossed the creek" (Swedish).

"The gun, the horse and the woman — you don't lend" (Mexican).

"It's not my business to think of me" (Hungarian).

"When a beautiful woman smiles, some man's purse weeps" (Italian).

And Coulson especially prizes these three which he found in his grandmother's elementary school autograph book, dated 1893:

"True friends are like diamonds, precious but rare; false ones like autumn leaves, found everywhere."

"Hearts like doors will open with ease for very, very little 'keys.' And don't forget that two of these are 'Thank you, Sir' and 'If you please.'"

"Friendship is a knot tied by angels' hands."

"The domestic philosophy of dichos sums up a great deal in very few words," Coulson points out, adding that their value is in the way they "knit the generations together and remind us to lean on one another's wisdom for support."

More M.D.s Quit

The rate of smoking among doctors has decreased from over 50 percent in the early 1950's to about 15 percent today, reports the American Cancer Society.

Old timers look back on their early days

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
TASMANIA, Fla. (AP) — It might be said that the only similarity between the island of Tasmania and this central Florida flatlands area given its name by a seafaring man is the eucalyptus tree.

Tasmania, the island, is off the southeastern corner of Australia and is famous as a vacationland. Florida's Tasmania flourished a century ago during the homestead days and became a part of the state's cattle ranges.

What was loosely referred to as Tasmania is about 20 miles due west of Lake Okechobee in Glades County. These days, most of the land is covered with palmetto, scrub pine and eucalyptus. Homes are few and far apart — simple one-story structures with shade trees nearby, some flower beds, vegetable patches, an idle tractor and herds of cattle basking in the midday sun.

In one of these homes off County Road 731 live Lula and Sam Farabee — she's 82 and he's 89. Both have spent their lives around Tasmania.

"Years ago I visited other states, but I'm not fond of mountains," Farabee says, sitting on the front porch during a visit with old friends. "I always liked the level land."

A new acquaintance asks Farabee how he spends his sunset years. A suggestion he might be watching a lot of television causes him to chuckle.

"I'm busy all the time — fixing a fence and taking care of the place. There's always something to do."

There has been little idle time in the lives of the dwindling number of oldtimers remaining around Tasmania. Their roots here began in 1862 when Congress passed the Homestead Act.

The community grew to several hundred people and spread over miles, each homestead connected by a dirt path or road. Its center, recalls Farabee, was a country store and post office and a one-room schoolhouse.

"They came from everywhere," says Joe Nolan, tall and rangy at 86. "They got 40, 80 or 160 acres and tried to farm it for a living."

Nolan has been a cowboy all his life. He prefers to call himself a wrangler or rangerider. He's also a professional hunter and has served as a deputy sheriff.

Despite his age and a "bad leg," Nolan keeps four horses and still rides. His appearance reflects a lifetime on the range — tanned, leather-like skin, the ever-present cowboy hat, straight hair hanging down the back of his neck and a drawling speech.

The two men remember when the area was called "Fisheating Creek" for the narrow waterway that cuts through this portion of the state.

In 1916, it was time for a change. One resident, who is remembered only as "Captain Johnson," had been a ship's captain until he retired here. Of all the places in the world he had visited, Nolan says, Tasmania intrigued him most. Homesteaders approved a petition and the place became Tasmania.

As the United States prepared to enter World War I, Tasmania's demise began — caused, in part, by a lack of good roads linking the farming community with busy Florida cities. Young men left to fight in the war and never returned. Tasmania became a ghost town.

Tom Gaskins is another fixture in the area. In the Depression years, he moved from Arcadia to the northwest to Palmdale several miles from here. He still operates his Cypress Knee Museum on U.S. 27 and holds a patent on the natural wood sculptures he sells.

At 75, he remains in good health, rarely wears shoes and runs two miles each morning.

When Farabee, Nolan and Gaskins get together, the conversation among them becomes a series of, "Do you remember...?"

But the most common subject of discussion is wild turkeys, prevalent around Tasmania. All three are skilled hunters, while Gaskins is world famous for the turkey-callers he makes.

Alcott, Washam tied for Open lead

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — Consistent Amy Alcott firmly believes that the tougher the golf course the tougher she plays.

That could spell bad news for co-leader Jo Ann Washam and 148 other rivals entering today's second round of the U.S. Women's Open championship at the Salem Country Club's exacting 6,285-yard course.

The par-72 layout, designed by the late Donald Ross, took its toll Thursday as the 72-hole event returned here after a 30-year absence.

Starting just 16 minutes apart in mid-morning, Alcott and Washam fired one-under-par 71s, the only players among 120 professionals and 30 amateurs to break the standard.

"This is not an easy golf course, it's not set up for phenomenal scores," Alcott said. "However, I had a very consistent round and consistency means success in professional golf."

Washam, two strokes over par with a 38 on the front nine, charged back with a 3-under 33 for a share of the lead.

"I was not disappointed to be two-under at the turn," Washam said. "I just tried to be patient."

Alcott, winner of 19 tournaments in 10 years on the LPGA Tour, and Washam, winless since 1979, took a one-stroke lead in the 72-hole test with $225,000 in prize money, including $36,000 for the winner.

Defending champion Jan Stephenson, bidding to become the fifth player to win consecutive Opens, Japan's Ayako Okamoto and amateur Joan Ellis, were all at 72.

Ellis, 22, a 1983 Furman University graduate, registered a hole-in-one, the ninth since the U.S. Golf Association became sponsor of the Open in 1953. Using a driver, she sank her tee shot on the 203-yard, 15th hole.

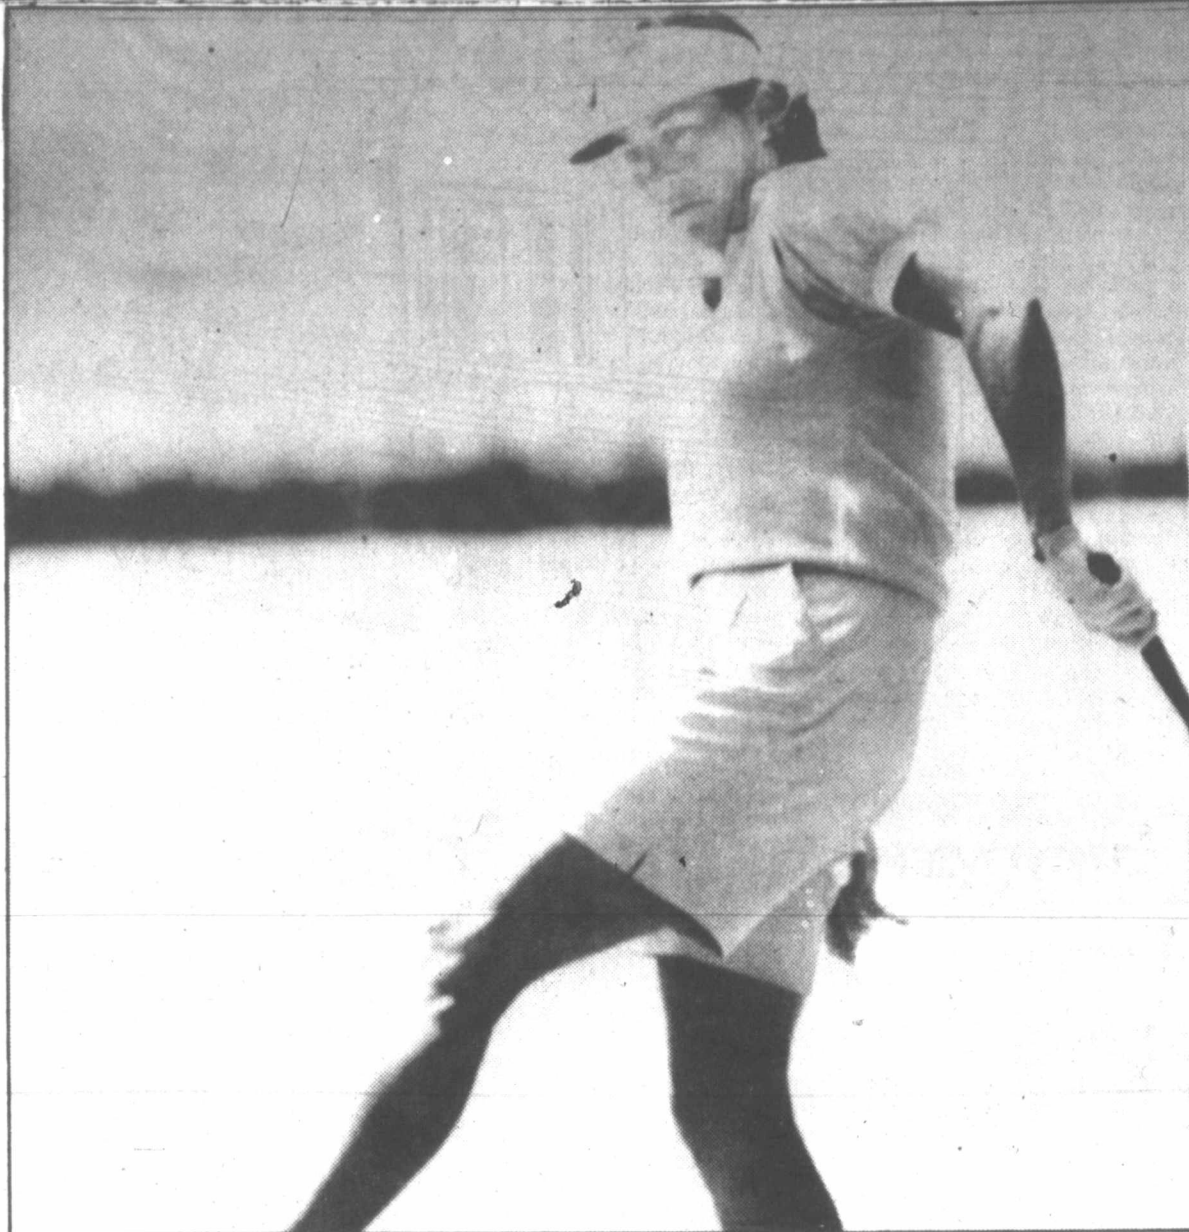

Deadlocked at 73 were Patty Sheehan, two-time LPGA winner and the leading money winner on the tour this year; veteran Kathy Whitworth, winner of 84 LPGA events but seeking her first Open title in her 25th year as a pro; Alice Miller, who earned her first victory last year, her fifth on the tour; veteran Rosie Jones and rookies Amy Benz and Heather Drew.

Two-time U.S. Open champions Donna Caponi and Hollis Stacy were in a pack at 74.

Local favorites Pat Bradley, the 1981 Open champion, and Jane Bialock were locked in a group at 76, while Nancy Lopez was at 77.

Stephenson, winless on the tour this year, said she didn't hit the ball as close to the hole as she usually does, but "I'm happy with my start." She began the tournament with a bogey-5 on the first hole, and "lagged two or three putts after that." However, she was satisfied with a round finished with a birdie on the 11th green and pars the rest of the way.

Olympic cagers beat pros again

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic basketball team has romped to six straight victories over various all-star competitions this summer, but the coach of the latest victim says the team shouldn't start counting its gold medals just yet.

Coach Bobby Knight's team swept to a 96-85 victory over a group of National Basketball Association stars in Greensboro behind Michael Jordan's 25 points. It was the fifth straight triumph over the NBA players after the Olympians opened their exhibition schedule with a 124-89 rout of former Indiana University stars.

Billy Cunningham, the Philadelphia 76ers' coach who led the NBA team in its latest outing, was impressed with the performance before a crowd of 15,771 at the Greensboro Coliseum. But he doesn't think the team can start thinking gold.

"They had some great spurts of basketball," Cunningham said. "The only thing I'm concerned about is that they don't get a false sense of security. It's going to be a lot different in the Olympics. They're going to play against teams who have played together for many, many years."

Jordan's play might mark the beginning of the improvement phase for Knight's club. The University of North Carolina star, who was named college basketball player of the year last season, had been mired in sub-par shooting for the last several weeks. He entered the sixth game at 46 percent from the field.

But Jordan's inside game delighted the audience, many of whom cheered him on as a collegian. With an array of layups, reverse moves and dunks, Jordan finished 10 for 19 from the field, including an eight-for-14 effort in the second half.

Quick is the best way to describe the U.S. start. After Steve Stipanovich scored on a jumper from the right of the lane, the Olympians ran off eight straight points. Georgetown's Pat Ewing scored four of the points, while Jordan had two free throws and Indiana's Steve Alford canned a 10-foot jumper.

Kenny Carr broke the four-minute NBA drought with two free throws with 15:17 left before intermission. The U.S. raced off again, however, and scored seven unanswered points. One of the points was Alford's free throw, the result of a technical foul called on Cunningham, who spent a lot of time yelling at officials Joe Forte and Dave Dodge.

The complaints did little to slow the U.S. team, which ran to a 30-19 edge at one stage and held a 42-30 lead at halftime.

Both teams shot well above 50 percent in the second half, but the NBA was staggered by the first-half runaway, and actually lost ground. When Chris Mullin of St. John's hit a baseline jumper at the 6:41 mark, the U.S. held its biggest advantage at 80-61.

Alford, who also was shooting below 50 percent, hit seven of 10 from the field—six of seven in the second half—for 15 points.

Pampa Nationals advance in tournament

The Pampa Nationals defeated the Pampa Americans, 11-3, Thursday night to advance into the finals of the Area Little League Tournament at Claude.

The Nationals will meet High Plains West in the finals tonight. The Nationals must beat High Plains twice to win the championship.

Mark Wood and Ryan Teague led the NL's hitting attack with a home run apiece. Also collecting hits were Chris Roden, Jason Becker and Robert Hinds, a single apiece, and Tory Peet, a double.

Quincy Williams, the losing pitcher, led the AL with a double and single. Others with base hits were James Bybee, Shawn Sims, Mike Cagle, Brandon Knutson and Chopo Rivera.

Winning pitcher was Mark Aderholt.

Dumas used a triple play to help eliminate Pampa, 7-5, in the 15-year-old Babe Ruth Tournament last night at Optimist Park.

Pampa was trailing, 7-4, in the fourth inning when Dumas made the triple killing with runners on first and second.

Pampa loaded the bases in the fifth inning, but could score only one run.

Girls' softball tournament results

Pampa Americans defeated Borger, 19-16, earlier this week in an Optimist Girls Softball Tournament.

Pampa Nationals lost to Dumas, 9-6, in a 4-inning rainout game.

The Pampa Americans advanced against Dumas Wednesday night, losing 15-3. Tonight, Pampa Nationals go against Borger.

Tri-State Tourney

Old golfing buddies will be re-united once again when the Tri-State Seniors Tournament gets underway July 23 at the Pampa Country Club course.

There will be a bit more reminiscing than in past years because this is the 50th anniversary of the tournament. Pampa's Chamber of Commerce is working on a Golden Anniversary Souvenir of the tournament, which, I'm sure, will be cherished by the Seniors. The souvenir program will contain a year-by-year account of the tournament.

Retail merchants are planning another "Treasure Hunt" for the golfers' wives.

It's always interesting to speculate on who will win this prestigious tournament. I'd go with Plainview's Jack Williams if he can overcome back problems that plagued him in last year's tournament. Williams won the title in 1982 and is one of the youngest of the senior golfers. He has won the West Texas Tournament three times.

Amarillo's Bob Giese, a two-time winner, is always a threat. J. Rowland Ferguson of Dallas and the 1981 champion is another possibility. J.B. White of Lubbock always seems to be in contention, although he's never won.

No Pampa golfer has ever won the tournament. Chester Darnell and Chunky Leonard of Pampa made the championship cut last year and finished seventh and ninth respectively.

After 50 years, it's time for the law of averages to play a round.

Midseason Guesses

I never got around to guessing the winners of the Major League division races before the season started. Now with a big dab of hindsight and a slight touch of foresight, here's how I see the races at midseason:

AL East Division: Look for an exciting finish. Toronto will overtake Detroit. The Bluejays had the best-hitting team in baseball, according to first-half statistics, and they're going to get even better. Toronto is ranked second to Detroit in American League pitching, but Stieb, Leal and company will take a backseat to no one down the stretch.

AL West Division: Chicago will not only win another division title, but also the World Series. Remember, you heard it here first. The White Sox have been like sleeping giants, but they'll awaken the second half.

NL East Division: Warren Hasse's Chicago Cubs will win a division title. The Cubs have strengthened themselves considerably with trades, making them the best-hitting team in the National League the first half. Pitching is ranked 10th in the NL, but the Cubs' mound staff have been tough in the late innings.

NL West Division: San Diego will win, but both Atlanta and Los Angeles will give the Padres a scare. The Padres will defeat the Cubs for the NL pennant. Sorry, Warren.

Senior staff writer Jeff Langley is an avid baseball fan who makes annual pre-season predictions on the pennant races.

His great modesty has prevented him from publishing his picks before, but at mid-season he finally relented with a little (very little) arm twisting.

Jeff takes a very realistic approach...no crystal-ball gazing or flipping coins for him. He goes with the experienced, veteran teams.

Jeff picks the defending world champion Baltimore Orioles to win the AL East while giving the edge to the Chicago White Sox in the AL West. He picks the St. Louis Cardinals in the NL East and the Los Angeles Dodgers in the NL West.

Jeff says Baltimore and Los Angeles will meet in the World Series with the Orioles winning the rings again.

"Baltimore will win because of their hitting," says Jeff. "I may have gone with the Dodgers if they still had Steve Howe in the bullpen."

Flashback: July, 1970. Dick Kastein of Pampa scored the first hole-in-one in the history of the Sunset Hill Golf Club in Waupun, Wisconsin. Kastein got the ace on the 170-yard, par 3, No. 4 hole. Kastein was visiting his parents in Waupun.

Injury to Pearson may force retirement

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson could be forced to retire by a liver injury that will keep him off the playing field until late fall at the earliest. The Dallas Morning News reported today.

Pearson learned Tuesday it could be fatal for him to play with the injury, which resulted from a March 22 auto accident that killed his younger brother, the News said.

The accident left Pearson with a 7-centimeter hole in his liver. Any physical contact to the liver could cause fatal bleeding, the newspaper said.

directors.

Matches will consist of two out of three sets with a 12-point tie-breaker. There will be no-ad scoring until the finals.

Call Cindy Forson at (806) 665-7707 for more information. Check should be made payable to Pampa Tennis Club.

"It could rupture on impact and he could bleed to death before he gets to the hospital," Pearson's physician, Dr. Lee Bourland said.

Bourland advised Pearson not to play until his liver heals and that could be mid-October at the earliest.

"The timing of this is going to be enough to keep him off the field this year," Bourland said.

"It would be hard for me to keep in shape until mid-October," Pearson said. "1985? It would be hard for me, at the age of 33, to sit out a year and come back."

AL roundup

Pitchers have enjoyable evening

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For the young and the old, the right-handers and the lefties, it was a pitchers night in the American League.

From 45-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro, the oldest player in the majors, to 24-year-old Frank Viola, and from one Baltimore ace (Scott McGregor) to another (Storm Davis), the pitchers were in paradise Thursday night and the hitters were in despair.

The knuckleballers had a terrific time. New York's Niekro tied Detroit's Jack Morris for the American League lead in victories with his 12th and has a 1.88 earned run average after he combined with reliever Dave Righetti on a 5-2 Yankees victory over Kansas City.

In Texas, Charlie Hough threw a four-hitter for his seventh win in the last eight games and AL high 10th complete game as the Rangers belted Cleveland 7-2.

Viola used more classic stuff to win his sixth straight start, 4-2 over slumping Detroit, lifting the Twins into undisputed possession of first place in the West.

The Orioles swept a doubleheader from the White Sox behind the strong hurling of Davis and Sammy Stewart in a 2-1 opening-game victory and a four-hitter by McGregor in a 3-0 decision in the nightcap.

California's Mike Witt threw a five-hitter as the Angels beat Milwaukee 5-2. Seattle rookie Mark Langston three-hit Boston for eight innings but needed ninth-inning relief in a 3-2 decision.

Oakland beat Toronto 7-4. Niekro scattered seven hits over seven innings, then Righetti threw a perfect two innings for his 11th save.

"I had to stay right on top of them," said Niekro. "They are the type of team that if you give them an inch, they will take a yard."

The Yankees built a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Butch Wynegar started it with a walk and Dave Winfield singled. Don Baylor followed with a check-swing single to right, scoring Wynegar and moving Winfield to third, and Roy Smalley and Don Mattingly lined run-scoring singles.

KC came back with two runs in the third on RBI singles by Darryl Motley and Steve Balboni.

"I said to myself after that inning, 'That's all, they're not going to get any more.'" Niekro admitted.

"They didn't." Winfield's two singles raised his major league-leading batting average to .371.

Rangers 7, Indians 2
Buddy Bell drove in four runs with a double, single and sacrifice fly to aid Hough, who says his strong work is based on strong confidence.

"If a player has doubts of what he's capable of doing, he's not going to be a major leaguer for very long," he said. "It's just a matter of keeping your head and continuing to work hard."

Twins 4, Tigers 2

Viola gave up just one run on five hits over eight innings to win his fifth consecutive game since the birth last month of Frank John III. He allowed only a solo homer to Barbaro Garbey before pulling himself from the game with a stiff shoulder after the eighth. Ron Davis pitched the ninth for his 17th save.

"Maybe I ought to be a daddy more often," Viola said. "Maybe it's the added responsibility or maybe it's just that I'm not sleeping at night so I walk out there and don't know what I'm doing."

A three-run seventh was decisive for host Minnesota. Gary Gaetti's RBI double and run-scoring singles by Houston Jimenez and Kirby Puckett did the damage.

East-leading Detroit is 22-23 since its torrid 35-5 start.

Orioles 2-3, White Sox 1-0
Chicago had won seven in a row before journeying to Baltimore, where it was stymied by Davis, Stewart and McGregor. Eddie Murray and Wayne Gross homered in the first game and Cal Ripken Jr. had a home run and triple in the nightcap.

While Hough spoke of confidence, McGregor thought concentration was the key as the Orioles picked up 1½ games on Detroit to trail by 10.

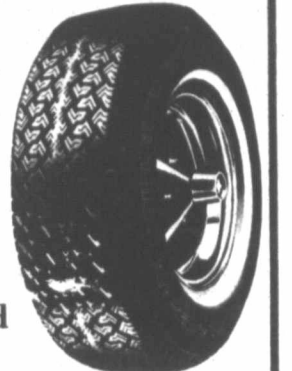

"Concentration is the key to everything," said McGregor. "Once you get your mind in the right frame for the second half of the season, you can roll along pretty good."

July 14, 1984

More attention than usual is likely to be devoted to commercial enterprises this coming year. Keep in mind that quality is more important than quantity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not be erratic or impulsive in business matters today. Rash behavior could chalk up losses where you should show a profit. Want to find out to whom you're best suited romantically? Send for your Matchmaker set by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It reveals compatibilities for all signs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to avoid companions today whose ideas and views are not in harmony with yours. You're not apt to be too tolerant with those who disagree with you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're a keen observer today and the infractions of others won't escape your attention. However, don't make a big deal over petty issues.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In competitive games with friends today, don't let wagers enter the picture. Betting could result in bad feelings, regardless of who wins or loses.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Domestic peace could be disrupted today, due to external influences. Don't create openings for outsiders to butt into the family's affairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Normally you're a philosophical and easygoing person, but today you could take things that should be treated lightly far too seriously.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Unless you keep a lid on small expenses today, they could get out of hand and you might end up spending far more than you intended.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Instead of following the course you charted for yourself today, you might let another talk you into a less effective way of doing things.

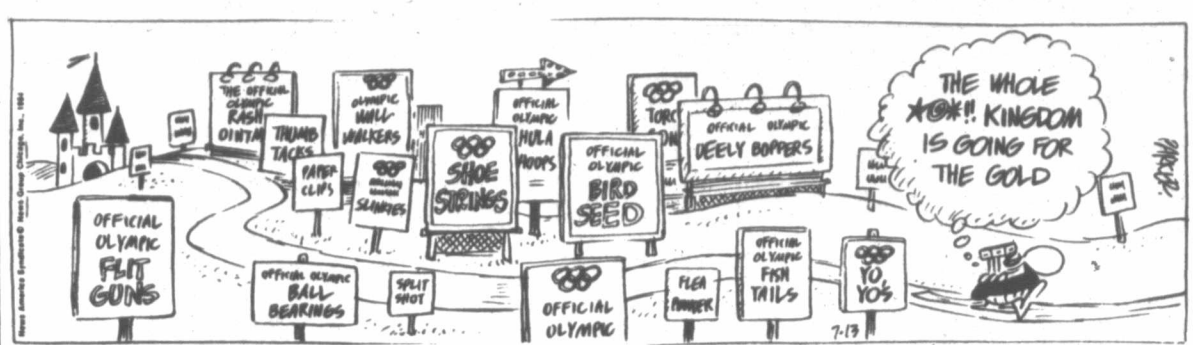

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be sure your work is up to par today before criticizing co-workers. They'll be angry with you if you set standards for them by which you don't abide.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Undue curiosity today could cause you to ask friends embarrassing questions about matters that they wish to keep secret.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Goals could elude you today if you do not carefully plan your moves in advance. Don't try to lift off the ground without your propeller.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone you like could momentarily annoy you today and, if you fail to think before speaking, you might make nasty remarks that will be difficult to retract.

LONDON (AP) — Sotheby's auction house says it has indefinitely postponed next week's scheduled sale of the diaries of Che Guevara, the late Argentine-born revolutionary, because of legal action by Bolivia.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A federal appeals court has given the nation's top military tribunal 90 more days to complete the trials of former armed forces leaders charged with human rights abuses.

charges against nine members of the three juntas that ruled after the 1976 military coup. He said the proceedings should be completed during a 180-day period that ended in June.

The Bolivian government claims that it owns the diaries and that they were stolen. Sotheby's spokeswoman Anne-Marie Arpels said Thursday it could be 18 months before the case is resolved.

The civilian court on Thursday also ordered the Armed Forces Supreme Council to report in 30 days on the progress of the trials. The charges stem from kidnappings, torture and murders carried out during the nearly eight years of military rule that ended in December.

A commission investigating abuses by the former regime has documented 8,000 cases of leftists or suspected leftist sympathizers who disappeared during an anti-subversion campaign by security forces in the late 1970s.

GEORGE STEINBRENNER

JAN-MICHAEL VINCENT

Names in the news

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Thanks to New York Yankees head George Steinbrenner, a band of youthful Scottish soccer players who were stranded by Air Florida's grounding are finally on their way home.

Vincent lives in Malibu, the exclusive coastal enclave 30 miles west of downtown Los Angeles. The fresh-faced actor, whose numerous film credits include co-starring with Burt Reynolds in "Hooper" and Charles Bronson in "The Mechanic," is currently playing Sturtingfellow Hawk on "Airwolf," an action drama.

He was talking about their trip to the United States — an odyssey that had them worrying whether it would ever end after the airline they expected to fly quit flying. The 27 soccer players and 16 family members were short $11,000 to ferry the contingent of 43 to Edinburgh, Scotland.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch says he'll continue to eat at a favorite restaurant despite a Health Department inspection which turned up a dead rat and other unsanitary conditions.

Steinbrenner, principal owner of the Yankees, footed the bill after reading of the team's plight in the Tampa Tribune last week. "I didn't want them to go away with an unpleasant feeling about the United States," Steinbrenner said about the team that had come for an exchange with a soccer team in Land O'Lakes, 25 miles north of Tampa.

Inspectors found cockroaches, dirty floors, peeling paint and other infractions at the Bridge Cafe during an inspection April 23, according to Health Department spokesman Marvin Bogner.

The boys already had bought their Air Florida tickets for a trip to London, but were left hanging when the Miami-based carrier stopped flying and filed for bankruptcy protection and other airlines refused to honor them.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors Gregory Peck, singer Pat Boone, comedian Rich Little and a host of other notables are joining an estimated 15,000 people to pose for promotional "snapshot" of the city's skyline.

At the airport, the boys turned toward Steinbrenner, tossed their baseball caps into the air, and let out a chorus of "For He's a Golly Good Fellow," and "Flower of Scotland."

Billed as an historic "Big Picture" — a 140-degree crowd shot framed by the city skyline and an arch of balloons — the photograph will be "a time capsule of what life in Los Angeles was like in 1984," said the promoter, Nann Miller.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent, who plays the taciturn pilot of an attack helicopter on CBS-TV's "Airwolf," turned himself in and was charged in connection with a bar fight that left a man unconscious.
