Patrolmen claim Gray deputies at shooting scene

Borger policeman contradicts position of county

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

AMARILLO — Two Borger patrolmen involved in the shooting death of Four Sixes cowboy James Grandstaff have testified that two Gray County deputies were also on the scene at the time Grandstaff was killed.

The officers' testimony disputes Gray County's position that deputies Paul Ortega and Rocky Ferguson arrived well after the shooting was over.

"It is the position of Gray County that it has absolutely no involvement in this case," the county's lawyer told jurors in opening remarks in the trial of a $5 million federal lawsuit filed in connection with Grandstaff's death.

Lawyer C.A. Stein told jurors that Ortega, Ferguson and Pampa police officer Charles Love arrived on the ranch pasture only after the cowboy was shot to death.

He said Borger officers chasing a fugitive early Aug. 11, 1981 had radioed the Pampa officers to set up a roadblock west of town on Texas 152. The Pampa officers went on to the ranch after hearing a report that Borger officers had cornered fugitive Lonnie Cox on the Four Sixes pasture, Stein said.

Enroute to the scene, the Pampa officers even stopped to put two quarts of oil in their car, he said. They finally arrived after the shooting was over, the lawyer maintained.

"They were at the scene five minutes or less, and returned to Pampa," Stein said Tuesday in the Amarillo trial.

Gray County, along with Carson and Hutchinson Counties and several past and present law enforcement officers are defendants in the federal suit that alleges violations of Grandstaff's civil rights.

But two of the Borger patrolmen at the shooting scene in 1981 testified they saw the Gray County deputies at the pasture at the time Grandstaff was shot.

Former Borger rookie officer John Wayne Turner, who admitted firing three times at the innocent cowboy, said, "I have my opinion, but I don't have evidence," when asked who he believes killed Grandstaff.

"I saw (Carson County deputy sheriff) Warren Hart, Paul Ortega and Rocky Ferguson immediately after the shooting. When I was walking up to the body of James Grandstaff, Ortega and Ferguson were walking up also," Turner said Thursday.

"You're saying that's some evidence they could have shot him?" Turner was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

He also said he saw Ortega carrying a 223-caliber, Mini-14 rifle at the time

Grandstaff was killed by a single 223-caliber bullet fired into his back.

Under cross-examination by Stein, however, Turner changed his story. Stein reminded the former Borger officer of an earlier sworn statement, which didn't mention the Gray County officers' presence at the time of the shooting.

Turner then changed his testimony, saying the first time he saw the Gray County officers was after Borger police went up to the Grandstaff home and found out they had mistakenly shot at the ranch cowboy.

Current Borger officer John Ray, however, during his second day of testimony on Monday, held firm in placing the Gray County deputies at the ranch at the time of the shooting.

Ray testified Monday that as he fired at Grandstaff and the cowboy went down, "I glanced over my right shoulder. At that time, I saw Rocky Ferguson and Paul Ortega. I noticed that Ferguson had a riot shotgun, and Ortega had a stainless-steel Mini-14."

Ray said as officers handcuffed the fatally wounded cowboy, the local deputies "were standing there right close by."

When Stein cross-examined him Monday, Ray said he can't say for sure when the Pampa officers arrived on the scene.

Shultz makes offer to work with Soviets

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today offered to work with the Soviet Union to reduce the risk of inadvertent war and again challenged it to resume nuclear arms control talks.

His remarks were contained in a speech prepared for today's opening session of the 35-nation European security conference.

With negotiations on nuclear and conventional forces stalled elsewhere in Europe, the conference is the only forum for East-West military talks. It also is the setting for the first high-level meeting between the United States and the Soviet Union in more than four months.

Both Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said on arrival Monday they are here to negotiate seriously. Their meeting Wednesday will be their first since an angry encounter Sept. 8 in Madrid.

Spain, that was overshadowed by the Soviet downing of the Korean Air Lines jetliner a week earlier.

Shultz did not offer any new U.S. initiatives or concessions to the Soviets to induce them to fix a date for resuming the stalled Geneva talks on intermediate-range and strategic nuclear missiles or the suspended Vienna negotiations to reduce conventional forces in Central Europe.

However, he urged the Soviets to reduce barriers between East and West.

"This division is the essence of Europe's security and human rights problem, and we all know it," Shultz said.

He advocated steps to make it more difficult to inadvertently start a war. The tragedy of World War I, "when nations stumbled blindly into a disastrous war" must not be permitted to recur, Shultz said.

Colder weather on its way here

If you think it's been cold in the Pampa area for the past couple of days, just wait: You haven't seen anything yet.

The forecast calls for the temperature to drop to near seven degrees tonight and not get any warmer than 11 Wednesday. An additional one to two inches of snow is expected by Wednesday.

The freezing temperatures are expected to remain in the area until the weekend, with lows near zero and highs in the middle 20s expected through Friday.

The long-range forecasts calls for some relief Saturday when the mercury rises into the upper 30s, then drops to around 10 Saturday night.

The snow and freezing temperatures Monday left Pampa streets icy slick and led to a number of minor accidents.

"If you're going more than five miles per hour, you're going too fast," a Pampa city police officer said.

New policies adopted

Civil rights commission divided

HUNT VALLEY, Md (AP) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights is systematically dismantling the liberal policies of its predecessor, but the panel's combative chairman insists that he's "nobody's pawn," even though President Reagan sought the change in course.

The bitterly divided commission Monday voted to study the adverse effects of affirmative action, but not the consequences of Reagan's budget cuts.

The panel voted for a new study of discrimination, but without the assumption that bias always accounts for differences between groups of Americans.

The commission was meeting again today at a motel north of Baltimore, with assurances from Chairman

Clarence M. Pendleton Jr. of more "spirited debate."

Sparks flew Monday as two holdover members from the former commission, which went out of business, gamely tried to preserve its policies.

But Pendleton said critics of the panel's new directions "forgot who won the fight" over the watchdog agency's policies.

That battle was won by Reagan, whose vision of a narrow focus for the commission was upheld often Monday by five of the eight commission members.

Before any of the substantive votes, the commission unanimously passed a resolution declaring its independence of the White House and any other groups. When the 12-hour session ended, and the new course was charted, Pendleton insisted that the panel was not acting on behalf of the White House.

"Nobody's ever said a word about previous presidencies and positions commissions took," Pendleton said in an interview. "It wasn't until Ronald Reagan came to office and if somebody happens to agree with Ronald Reagan then you are a pawn of Ronald Reagan."

"I'm nobody's pawn, have not been and will not be."

Pendleton's antagonists were commissioners Mary Frances Berry and Blandina Cardenas Ramirez. All three were members of the former commission, which expired late last year.

Borger officer tells about firing initial shot at James Grandstaff

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A Borger police officer involved in the 1981 shooting death of Four Sixes cowboy James Grandstaff testified he fired the first shot at the ranchhand, and later "got sick and threw up," when he found out the wrong man had been shot.

Current Borger officer John Ray, in his second day of testimony Monday in a $5 million federal lawsuit filed in connection with Grandstaff's death, said he couldn't even see whether the person he shot at was a man or a woman, but said he opened fire because it appeared the person was reaching for a gun.

Grandstaff, 31, was shot to death Aug. 11, 1981 in front of his home on the 6666 Ranch, east of Borger. Borger police shot it out with fugitive Lonnie Cox and chased him from town onto the ranch pasture. Cox abandoned his truck and temporarily escaped on foot.

Grandstaff, awakened about 4:30 a.m., twice drove the few hundred yards down the drive from his ranch home to investigate the commotion in the pasture. The second time, he stopped his truck near the parked patrol cars, stepped out, and was shot to death in a volley of police gunfire.

Police have testified they mistook Grandstaff for Cox.

Trial in the $5 million suit brought by Grandstaff's family against the officers and Panhandle governments entered its second week in Amarillo federal court Monday.

"It was nighttime, dark, and drizzling rain. Visibility was very poor," Ray testified.

Ray, one of the officers involved in the chase and gunbattle with Cox, said he was behind his patrol car on the gravel drive the second time Grandstaff drove up in his pickup and stopped a few feet away. The patrolman said he saw the "silhouette" of a person get out of the truck, facing toward him.

He said Grandstaff ignored repeated police warnings to get out of the truck with his hands up.

"The subject had his hands around his waist, moving his hands like he was going for a gun," Ray testified.

The officer stood up, and, moving both hands up and down around his belt, demonstrated for jurors what he claims he saw.

"He started making motions around the waist area, like he was going for a .45," Ray testified.

"That's when I shot back," he said.

Plaintiffs' lawyer Jan Fox reminded the officer he wasn't returning gunfire at that point.

"Yes, I fired a shot at that time," Ray conceded.

"I was shooting at the silhouette. I thought he had a gun," he testified.

Ray said after he fired the first shot, other officers at the scene opened fire at Grandstaff.

"Almost the same time I fired, the individual started to turn. He went down. It was just real fast together — a volley of shots simultaneously," he said.

Ray said he can't remember how many times he fired his .357 Magnum pistol at the figure he couldn't make out.

"He was laying there with his hands underneath his stomach. I thought he still had a gun underneath him. (Former Borger patrolman) Bailey Roberts had him pinned to the ground. He said, 'He's got a gun!'" the officer testified.

Ray said Roberts, who weighed more than 300 pounds at the time, straddled Grandstaff's back and pulled his arms out as officer's handcuffed the wounded cowboy.

"Officer (Mickey) Davis did fire one round (into the ground near the downed victim) in an attempt to get the individual's hands in the open," he testified.

(Hutchinson County deputy sheriff Ricky) Morris asked for a knife to cut off his shirt to see how bad the wound was. I could hear some moaning, but I can't recall I heard him say anything," Ray said.

The officer said he stayed with the wounded cowboy, when Morris, Roberts and Borger patrolman John Robert Alonzo went up to the Grandstaff home "to check and see if anybody was hurt."

"I don't recall him saying anything. He was moaning and groaning. He kept trying to get up... We still believed he was Lonnie Cox," Ray said.

Fox pointed out that the officer earlier had sworn the injured Grandstaff "told us his name."

"He was hurting, but as to how much pain he was in I don't know," Ray testified about the victim.

"They came back down there and took the handcuffs off. They said we got the wrong individual, said he was the husband of the woman up there," Ray said police learned after they talked to the victim's wife, Sharon Grandstaff.

"They came down there and said, 'We got the wrong one. I went off to the side and threw up. I got sick,'" the officer testified.

Ray said he later drove Mrs. Grandstaff to North Plains Hospital in Borger, after an ambulance had already taken her husband away.

"I told her her husband had been accidentally shot," Ray said he told the

Lebanon terrorists kidnap Saudi consul

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen kidnapped the Saudi Arabian consul from his car in a west Beirut seafront neighborhood today, and his driver was wounded in a shootout, the Saudi Embassy said.

With blood streaming down his face, the driver ran to the Saudi Embassy building in west Beirut's Manara neighborhood to report the kidnap before he was rushed to the American University hospital, according to radio reports.

The abducted diplomat was identified as Hussein Abdullah Farrash. He was going from his home in west Beirut to the embassy when his car was attacked in mid-morning, the state radio said.

The wounded driver was identified as Izzat Akkash.

A spokesman at the Saudi Embassy confirmed the abduction, but said he had no word on the whereabouts of Farrash or the condition of the driver. Saudi Ambassador Ahmed al-Kuhaimi was not involved in the attack.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the abduction, which could have any of several motives. The Saudis frequently have tried to mediate disputes in Lebanon, including recent unsuccessful efforts on behalf of a proposal to disengage the country's warring factions.

Last week, an Egyptian diplomat and the wife of a French diplomat were fired at by unidentified gunmen in Beirut, but both escaped serious injury.

Lebanese troops and police today sealed off the neighborhood and searched house-to-house for the kidnapers.

The sound of gunfire crackled through west Beirut's main commercial district of Hamra before local radio stations broke off their regular programs to report the abduction.

Critics say Reagan offer too little, too late

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who has unflinchingly used harsh terms to portray the Kremlin leaders, is holding out the prospects of better U.S.-Soviet relations in the coming year. But his critics say he is offering too little too late.

The president was meeting today with Paul Nitze, his negotiator at the medium-range missile talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

The talks have not resumed since the Soviets walked out late last year upon the initial deployment of U.S. missile components in Western Europe as part of NATO's weapons modernization program.

Reagan's speech on the state of U.S.-Soviet relations was directed at three audiences: American voters, the citizens of Europe, and the Soviet leadership.

Following a string of presidential denunciations of the Soviets and warnings about deteriorating relations, Reagan's advisers were concerned that the icy ties would lead voters to fear that Reagan's policies might lead to war and would damage his political standing in this election year. They were also concerned that in Europe, there is a perception of Ronald Reagan that is inaccurate, that he is perceived as a more dangerous president, that he has his finger on the trigger," Lake said.

Reagan's political opponents, including several Democratic presidential candidates, found much to criticize in the speech, as did the Kremlin.

In Lewiston, Maine, where he was campaigning, Sen. John Glenn of Ohio said the speech was a good idea but called it "too little too late."

"The president has literally been throwing ice water on our relationship with the Soviets for three years and now wants to make up for all that lost time," Glenn said.

"Reagan said the world is a safer place, but all the evidence points to just the opposite," said Colorado Sen. Gary Hart. Former Democratic Sen. George McGovern said: "The arms race has been exacerbated by a totally unjustified military spending binge."

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale declared: "The problem facing our nation and the world is that Mr. Reagan's policies have contributed to an increasingly dangerous arms race. Under Mr. Reagan's administration, the world has become less safe."

The Soviet Union dismissed Reagan's speech as election-year propaganda and said Reagan offered no "new ideas or constructive proposals" for peace.

The official Tass news agency made it clear the Soviets are not interested in conciliatory talk unless it is accompanied by concessions on nuclear arms control.

Tass said, "The speech does not contain any new ideas or constructive proposals that would indicate a readiness of the United States to abandon its course of acquiring dominant positions in the world and first of all in the military respect."

Two Republican allies of the president, Sens. Bob Dole of Kansas and Orrin Hatch of Utah, praised him for throwing the burden of reopening arms talks on the Soviets.

"I think what the president is saying publicly... is that we're willing to sit down and do what is right here to resolve these difficulties if they will do likewise," Hatch said.

Valley counties get $1 million grant from state

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Representatives from the office of Gov. Mark White and the Texas Department of Community Affairs promised to do "everything humanly possible" to help the Rio Grande Valley as they presented county judges with a $1 million grant to repair homes and create jobs.
 The money will help unemployed farmworkers in Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr and Willacy counties, declared a disaster area by President Reagan after a Christmas freeze destroyed the citrus and winter vegetable crops in the Valley. Each county received $250,000.
 "First priority in home repairs will be to those home suffering freeze-related damage," said Jay Kayne of the TDCA, "but the money can also be used to make other repairs to homes of low and moderate income families."
 Construction crews will be drawn from the ranks of unemployed farmworkers, laid off after the freeze.
 To obtain the funds, counties promised to hire a minimum of 50 workers and repair at least 75 homes in the next three to four months.
 Money for the project came from the a $5.6 million special emergency account set up out of federal block grant funds given to Texas.

woman on the way to the hospital.
 "Somebody at the hospital said he was dead on arrival," he said.
 The officer said he left the hospital and returned to Borger police headquarters.
 Ray said he had worked for the Borger Police Department about two months on the morning of the shooting. He said he had no police training at the time and wasn't a certified peace officer.
 The officer testified Borger city policy on the use of deadly force isn't written down, but follows the Texas Penal Code.
 Fox asked Ray whether he knows the state law calls it a crime when police use deadly force recklessly and kill an innocent third party.
 "We went through the grand jury, and they found no indictments against us," Ray responded.
 The remark resulted in a private, bench conference between lawyers and presiding Judge Mary Lou Robinson.
 Current Borger officer Wayne Schultz followed Ray on the stand Monday. Schultz, the fifth Borger officer to deny it, testified he didn't kill Grandstaff.
 The officer said he heard radio traffic during the chase of Cox. He drove toward the ranch behind the other Borger units in pursuit, Schultz said.
 He said he arrived on the ranch pasture and parked behind three Borger units already at the scene.
 Schultz said he was flat on his belly behind his patrol car when the shooting at Grandstaff erupted. He said he never fired his weapon that morning.
 "It was just a bunch of shooting all together...slightly less than five seconds," Schultz recalled.

He said he drew his pistol after another officer hollered that the person on the ground had a gun. Contrary to what other officers have said, Schultz said didn't feel threatened by the man on the ground. He said he put his gun back into its holster and watched other officers handcuff Grandstaff. He also denied other officer's testimony that a "warning shot" was fired in an attempt to get the downed victim to place his hands in sight.
 Schultz testified Ray had hollered, "Oh, my God, it's the wrong man!"
 "Mickey Davis said, 'Get those handcuffs off!'...He tried to get up. I said, 'Stay down, an ambulance is on its way,'" he said.
 Borger police dispatcher Geraldine Brucker testified next. She said the tape machine recording police radio calls the morning Grandstaff was shot apparently wasn't working that day.
 "Is there a tape of radio transmissions the evening of Aug. 11?" Brucker was asked.
 "I don't know," Brucker said.
 Brucker said she changed the recording tape about midnight the day Grandstaff was shot, but later noticed "the little needle didn't jump," during a radio transmission.
 According to the dispatcher's testimony, the reel-to-reel tape recorder just wasn't working the morning of the shooting.
 All of the Borger officers who have testified at the trial said they believed Grandstaff was Cox. They all testified that after they lost sight of Cox in the pasture, Grandstaff's truck twice headed down the drive toward them at a slow rate of speed. All said on its first trip down from the ranch home on the

Rowsey's trial is postponed

The trial of Joseph Wayne Rowsey, 42, on a charge of attempted murder was postponed this morning in 223rd District Court by agreement of attorneys on both sides. Judge Don Cain said today. Rowsey was arrested for an attack of Carol Ann Witt on July 10, 1983, in which he allegedly slashed her throat with a straight razor.
 A jury panel selected for the trial met at 9 a.m. today only to be discharged and sent home after Judge Cain discussed postponement with attorneys.
 Reasons for granting the postponement included the illness of Assistant District Attorney Joe Hendley's father in Tyler. The cold weather and snow was another factor, Judge Cain indicated. Rowsey's attorney, John T. White of Borger, said he "just barely made it over" from Borger this morning because of the slick roads, Judge Cain said.
 A new trial date has been set for 10 a.m., Monday, Feb. 13, in the 223rd District Court, with a call to the docket and pretrial matters set for that date. Jury selection will begin at 9 a.m., Tuesday, Feb. 14.
 In dismissing the jury panel this morning, Judge Cain told them they would not have to return for the trial next month. A new panel will be selected for the new trial date. Members of today's jury panel will not have to worry about returning unless their names come up again for next month's panel selection, the judge indicated.

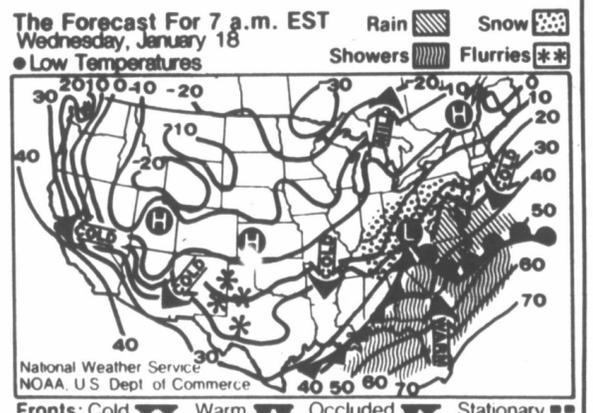

hill, the pickup stopped on the drive for several minutes. The driver said nothing, but ignored warnings to get out, they have said. The truck, its headlights on, then went slowly back up the drive to the house, all of the officers have testified.
 If, as they claim, the officers believed the dangerous fugitive was driving the cowboy's truck on both occasions, then why didn't the officers try to stop it during the first trip down the hill, the plaintiffs have asked. Why didn't they surround the truck when it stopped and sat there the first time? Why didn't they fire their weapons then? Why did they allow the truck to proceed slowly back up the drive to the house? If they thought Cox was in the truck, why didn't they go up to the house immediately and warn or protect the residents inside? the plaintiffs have asked.
 John Ray testified Monday why he allowed the person in the pickup to stop and then return to the house: "I can tell you why I didn't go up there — I was scared. That was a good enough reason to stay put."

12-cent wrench offered for $9,609
 FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A small hexagonal wrench that General Dynamics offered to the Air Force for $9,609 was originally forged in a Pennsylvania factory for 8.4 cents and sold initially for 12 cents, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram has reported.
 The newspaper said Monday it was able to trace the genealogy of the 2.2-inch tool with the help of sources inside General Dynamics and engineering drawings. The newspaper said it traced the price history despite a general "no comment" stance from both General Dynamics and the Air Force.
 The Star-Telegram said Westinghouse, which builds the radar used aboard General Dynamics' F-16 jets, purchased the tool from an industrial supply company in Baltimore for use in maintaining the radar's antenna.
 L.A. Benson Co. Inc. of Baltimore, an industrial supply firm, bought the wrenches from the Unbreako Division of STS Technologies Inc. in Jenkintown, Pa., for 8.4 cents each before selling them to the Westinghouse Defense Group in Hunt Valley, Md., for 12 cents each, the Star-Telegram said.
 "They're $12 per 100 — you can't buy any less," said a Benson sales agent last week when a reporter called to determine the price of Benson Part No. 10197. "How many boxes you want?"
 Westinghouse sliced one end of the wrench from about three-quarters of an inch to one-quarter, and added a 1.5-inch steel handle engraved with the company's part number to ensure the Pentagon ordered replacements from Westinghouse, the Star-Telegram said.

Jury selection continues in nurse's murder trial

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP)—Attorneys for Genee Jones, a vocational nurse accused of killing a toddler with a lethal drug dose, asked potential jurors what they knew about chemistry and other sciences that might come up in testimony during the trial.

Ms. Jones, 33, faces a possible life sentence if convicted in the September 1982 death of 15-month-old Chelsea Ann McClellan of Kerrville. Prosecutors say the infant died after being injected with a powerful muscle relaxant.

On Monday, opening day of the trial that was moved here from Kerrville, potential jurors answers 29 printed questions prepared by defense lawyer Jim Brookshire, including:

"Have you ever read a book about a murder trial?"

"Did you ever study law, psychology, sociology, criminology, chemistry?"

"Have you ever had an unpleasant experience involving medical or hospital personnel?"

By the end of Monday, the pool of potential jurors was whittled down to 113. Twelve will be chosen.

State District Judge John Carter refused a request to sequester the jury despite a plea by defense lawyer Jim Brookshire, who said, "We have to have them locked up."

Brookshire is concerned that jurors might see or hear news accounts of other charges against his client, who is also charged with giving life-threatening injections to a Bexar County boy and six other Kerr County children.

Carter decided not to sequester the jury, saying, "I'm of the opinion we can solve any problems we might have with numerous instructions to the jury."

The trial was moved here from Kerr County because of publicity about the cases.

Jury selection stalled Monday when Brookshire was granted a "reshuffling" of the panel. Under the process, potential jurors are randomly placed in numerical order for questioning by the lawyers. The order is crucial because the first 12 people not rejected by either side will hear the case.

State law allows defense lawyers one reshuffling if they are not satisfied with the first random shuffle. Kerr County District Attorney Sutton compared the system to dealing cards, with the defense getting a reshuffle if wanted.

The McClellan infant died after a visit to the Kerrville clinic where Ms. Jones worked. The girl suffered a seizure and died during a frantic ambulance ride.

An autopsy performed on the girl's 18-pound body blamed Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Wade, conceding that mounting public pressure brought into question the fairness of prosecution in Dallas County, agreed to the polygraph option, or a new trial, and cleared the way for Geter's release on $10,000 bond. If Geter had failed the Parker polygraph, he still would have been granted a new trial.

"We are not going to take the Bill Parker polygraph. We've had him take two polygraphs in New York and he passed with flying colors," said Sigel.

The results of the two New York polygraphs, administered by Nat Laurendi of the Polygraph Analysis Center of New York, were presented to Dallas County Prosecutor Gerald Banks, and defense attorneys asked him to accept them in lieu of the Parker polygraph.

Jury selection to begin in Moreno trial

RICHMOND, Texas (AP)—Defense attorneys have filed court papers saying that a plea of innocent by reason of insanity will be entered for a lawn mower repairman accused of killing six people in a 160-mile rampage across Southeast Texas.

Eliseo H. Moreno faced trial today on a capital murder charge lodged in the fatal shooting of state highway patrolman Russell Lynn Boyd, 25.

Defense attorney Dick Tindal said in a court filing that Moreno, 25, tried to kill himself while in a Waller County jail cell. Tindal also said Moreno's communications with his family "border at least on the bizarre."

State District Judge Oliver Kitzman said jurors will be chosen from a pool of about 160 people. He said he did not know if Moreno had yet undergone the psychiatric evaluation which his attorneys sought.

Kitzman said he expected the trial would last about three weeks.

Boyd was shot on Texas Highway 6 north of Hempstead Oct. 11 after he stopped Moreno on a routine traffic violation.

Moreno also is charged with capital murder in the slayings of Juan and Esther Garza of College Station. The Garzas, relatives of Moreno's estranged wife, were killed nearly an hour before Boyd was slain.

Murder charges also have been filed against Moreno in connection with the slayings of three people at a Hempstead house minutes after Boyd was shot to death.

Moreno also is charged with aggravated kidnapping in the abduction of a Hempstead family and with aggravated robbery in the abduction of Ronald Wayne Gangle, 29. Gangle, taken from his Pasadena apartment, was with Moreno when he was arrested in Wharton County.

Questioned about Moreno's alleged suicide attempt, officials said the prisoner was found unconscious in his cell with a plastic garbage bag wrapped tightly around his

Black engineer opts for new trial instead of polygraph test

DALLAS (AP)—A 26-year-old black engineer whose armed robbery conviction and life sentence created an outpouring of public concern will stand trial a second time in April because his attorneys rejected a lie-detector test that could have cleared him.

Prosecutors had agreed that if Lenell Geter, who spent 14 months in prison, passed a polygraph test given by a Dallas homicide detective, he could go free.

But Geter's attorneys, who had earlier agreed to have Detective William Parker give the test, on Monday said Parker was not acceptable and they'd rather go to trial April 9.

"That's it. We're going to trial," said court-appointed defense attorney Edwin Sigel.

Monday was the deadline Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade had set for the polygraph test. Defense attorneys spent the day trying to negotiate a different questioner for the polygraph test.

Geter, a former engineer at E-Systems Inc., a defense contractor in Greenville, was convicted and sentenced to life in prison in 1982 for the $615 robbery of a fast-food restaurant in Balch Springs.

His case gained national attention because his co-workers claimed he was at work on the day of the robbery, and that his arrest resulted from little more than racism and incompetent police work.

Wade, conceding that mounting public pressure brought into question the fairness of prosecution in Dallas County, agreed to the polygraph option, or a new trial, and cleared the way for Geter's release on $10,000 bond. If Geter had failed the Parker polygraph, he still would have been granted a new trial.

"We are not going to take the Bill Parker polygraph. We've had him take two polygraphs in New York and he passed with flying colors," said Sigel.

The results of the two New York polygraphs, administered by Nat Laurendi of the Polygraph Analysis Center of New York, were presented to Dallas County Prosecutor Gerald Banks, and defense attorneys asked him to accept them in lieu of the Parker polygraph.

"When we talked about the agree on the polygraph option.

"He's understandably upset. He was hopeful that something might come out of our negotiations that could avoid a trial," said Hairston.

Sigel complained that Parker did not have a national reputation for polygraph expertise. He said he had agreed to Parker during "pre-release negotiations," and did not think the agreement should be binding.

Hairston said he favored a three-man polygraph team, including Parker, because he believes the police detective would be biased by his police background.

Geter took a polygraph test in 1982, but his lawyers said its results were inconclusive.

Geter was convicted on the basis of five eyewitnesses to the robbery, even though they inaccurately estimated his height. Nine co-workers since have claimed he was at work 50 miles from Balch Springs the day of the robbery.

Geter came to the attention of Greenville police detective James Fortenberry after an elderly white woman reported a "suspicious" black man sitting in a city park. Fortenberry then distributed to Dallas-area police departments photographs of Geter and the five other black E-Systems engineers from South Carolina. He labeled them as robbery suspects, and Geter was identified by the Balch Springs witnesses from the photographs.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Free health care not worth cost

Proponents of government-subsidized health care programs are fond of making the argument that the cost of medical care keeps people away from doctors and hospitals, which in turn adversely affects their health.

Sounds logical on the surface. But a study by the Rand Corp. offers conflicting evidence.

The study randomly assigned 3,958 adults to one of 14 different health insurance plans. One of the plans provided health care at no cost to the participants. The others required the participants to pay varying shares of their own medical bills. The study began in 1975 and ended in 1982.

The results?

While those who had to pay at least a portion of their medical bills made a third fewer visits to the doctor and were hospitalized about a third less often, those who paid nothing showed only small improvements in two specific areas of health and virtually no improvement in general health or health habits.

The free medical care, the Rand study showed, did lead to small improvements in the vision of near-sighted people and to slightly lower blood pressure in poor people who were hypertensive. The Rand study concluded that these improvements, however, were not worth the expense of providing free health care.

In most significant areas of general health and health habits, free health care made no appreciable difference, the study showed. For example, free health plans, which led to an average of one or two more visits to a doctor each year, had no impact on smoking, weight or cholesterol levels. Free care did not induce people to change other health habits related to heart disease and some types of cancer.

Finally, free health care had no effect on any of five more general measures of physical and mental health.

The authors of the Rand study, which was paid for by the federal government, warned against making any broad generalizations from the study. They noted "It is not for Rand to say where free care is good or bad."

The researchers' caution should be appreciated. But the study does provide provocative scientific evidence that tends to undermine the notion that government can buy good health for anyone.

The 'Reagan revolution' is real

In the furor over White House Economic Advisor Martin Feldstein's alleged "falling out" over the deficit issue, the press largely ignored his most important message. Since November, he has been heralding "Reagan's quiet revolution, that in the past three years has changed the structure of government spending and the character of our tax system."

That "quiet revolution," is infinitely greater than Mr. Reagan's critics or supporters have grasped and may be as great as the "Keynesian revolution" that preceded it. Feldstein says, "As recently as 1929, federal government spending took only 3 percent of our GNP. But as the Great Depression then ushered in a new era for American government. In the half century after 1930, government spending exploded."

The justification for this "fundamental change," according to Feldstein, was not only the depression, but the theories of John Maynard Keynes. "Keynes' theoretical analysis convinced a generation of economists - and through them a generation of journalists, civil servants and politicians - that an economic recession will not automatically return to full employment by may require active government fiscal policies." (Big spending.)

Above all, he reminds us, "Keynes believed that the depression was caused by excessive saving. This Keynesian fear of saving encouraged the development of spending programs that reduced the need for private saving, of tax rules that penalized saving, and regulations that...discouraged saving."

Not only did this Keynesian revolution result in a dramatic rise of federal spending from 3 percent of GNP in 1930 to nearly 23 percent in 1981, but it produced a major slowdown in the rate of saving and capital formation - and this produced a drop in productivity and GNP growth, from 3 - 4 percent through the early '60s, to less than 1 percent in the early '80s.

The result was soaring inflation, lower growth, higher unemployment and rising tax revolts. These revolts "culminated in the election of President Reagan...and since 1980, there has been a remarkable revolution in government spending." For example, non - defense spending (other than interest), which went from 8 percent of GNP in 1960 to 15 percent in 1980, has already dropped to 14.5 percent in 1984, and is expected by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) to fall to 13 percent over the next four years.

Defense spending, on the other hand, which had fallen from 9 percent under Pres. Kennedy to 5.3 percent in Carter's last year, is now 6.5 percent, headed for 7.7 percent in 1988.

The big and "unpleasant surprise" of the Reagan revolution is that spending on debt service and interest, which had soared from 1.3 percent to 2 percent from 1960 - 1980, has topped 3.3 percent and will still be a husky 3 percent in 1988. As a result, federal spending which rose from 18 to 22 percent of GNP from 1960 - 1980, will rise another percentage point by 1988, although the rate of change will have been slowed.

But the real "revolution" is in the composition of federal domestic spending. Social Security, for example, which jumped from 2.2 percent of GNP in 1960 to more than 5.3 percent in 1983, is now budgeted to fall to 4.6 percent by 1988, as a result of the modest constraints on the system passed last year.

On the other hand, domestic spending, other than Social Security and Medicare, after rising from 5.9 to 9.3 percent (1960 - 1980), has already fallen to 7.7 percent this year and is forecast (by CBO) to drop to 6.9 percent in 1988, "or back to the same share that domestic spending took in the late '60s."

The biggest, and perhaps most significant, change has been in the composition and level of the federal tax burden. While libertarians have scorned President Reagan's tax cuts as "illusory," the numbers say otherwise. In 1984 the federal tax burden on GNP despite Social Security increases, will drop to about 18.6 percent. That's lower than 1960, and nearly three points below the 1981 high figure of 21.4 percent - a significant drop.

Feldstein reminds us, "A median - income family will pay 23 - percent less in income taxes next year than they would have if the Carter tax law had remained on the books. The total federal taxes paid by this family (including Social Security) will be $1,100 lower in 1984, than they would have been without the Reagan tax cuts." And, with indexing (in 1985), "higher rates of inflation will no longer raise effective tax rates."

But the most important change Feldstein feels is "a major shift away from the anti-saving bias" of the old tax law. The extension of IRA and Keough eligibility and account size limits, the reduced tax rates on investment income, and several other specific changes mean that most Americans will pay tax only on that part of their income that they do not save. In this way, for most Americans the income tax system has now actually been transformed into a consumption tax...an historic change..."

Indeed it is. So much so that liberal Democrats like Sen. Gary Hart (D. - Colo.) now actually promote further shifts in our tax code toward exempting all savings (including capital gains) and taxing only that portion of our income we spend, a "supply-side" idea.

One reason is the success of the Reagan recovery. An econometric analysis by Allen Sinai, Andrew Lin and Russell Robins of Lehman Brothers in last September's National Tax Journal concludes: "Without the Reagan tax programs (both 1981 and 1982), the unemployment rate would have averaged 10.3 percent in 1982 instead of 9.7 percent"; the GNP would have declined by 3 percent in 1982 instead of 2 percent; personal savings would have been $47.3 billion for two percentage points lower.

"If there had been no (Reagan tax program), the U.S. economy would have performed considerably worse in 1981 and 1982 than actually was the case." The revolution is working, quietly.

"I'D CALL IN TO COMPLAIN... BUT I DON'T THINK WE CAN AFFORD IT..."

Can we put Lebanon together?

Have American forces been committed to another impossible situation?

Before the hundreds of American dead become thousands - or tens of thousands - we'd better decide if it's worth it.

Lebanon is a tiny mountainous nation east of the Mediterranean - 3 million people who speak Arabic - though Islam is not their national religion.

For hundreds of years, the cacophony of religions has been in conflict: Christian Maronites, Sunni Moslems, Shute Moslems, Greek Orthodox, Druze Moslems, Greek Catholics, Armenian Gregorians, an assortment of Protestants plus some Armenian Catholics and some Syrian Orthodox.

Despite this polyglot population, until their civil war Lebanon enjoyed the highest standard of living in the Middle East, and the highest literacy rate - 70 percent - one of the highest in the world.

The Christian people of Lebanon would prefer to be part of the West, rather than of the Arab world. But Moslems have now become that country's majority.

There is a lesson for other nations in what has happened to Lebanon.

A Christian president opened the door to Palestinian refugees. They flooded in.

Also, the birthrate among Moslems is high.

So many Christians who could afford to leave the country, increasingly uncomfortable, left.

Arab oil wealth became Arab power in the Middle East.

Arab power promoted Moslem power - further challenging Christians in the Middle East in general and in Lebanon in particular.

If this is beginning to appear "a religious war," it is.

Syria, for generations, has dreamed of "Syria Al Dubra," a "greater Syria to include Jordan and Lebanon."

I went there in 1958 when Eisenhower put troops ashore to help Lebanon defend itself.

In 1983 we are too little and too late.

Palestinians used Lebanon as a base for attacks on Israel until Israel got fed up and moved in 1982. So now the country is jointly occupied by Syrians, Israelis and Palestinians - with the Lebanese - in their own country - left out.

Nobody - not they, not the Soviets and not us - nobody is going to put that Humpty - Dumpty together.

And even a rich nation could bleed to death trying.

Flood of aliens threatens U.S.

NEW YORK (NEA) - When I was in Japan last November I asked every Japanese I interviewed this question: "What concerns you most about the U.S. today?" The variety of the responses was fascinating, but one stands out in my memory.

"For this," a leading Japanese intellectual told me, "I must go off the record. Your immigration problem is completely out of control. Illegal Spanish-speaking immigrants are flooding into your country. If you don't act promptly, you are going to have a huge new population that has never heard of Thomas Jefferson or the Bill of Rights."

I tried to reassure him, saying that I thought the key was to insist that these new residents must learn to speak English. If they don't they will inevitably become second - class citizens, with all the dangers that implies; if they do, then gradually they will be assimilated into the general culture, and learn about Jefferson and the Bill of Rights.

But I knew I had not really addressed his point. Mexican and Caribbean immigration, without the slightest taint of legality, has become a tidal wave that has simply inundated the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The INS has nowhere near the money it needs to apply an effective tourniquet to his hemorrhage, and it's debatable whether any amount of money could stop it. Short of building Berlin Wall along the entire Mexican border, and another around the long coastline of the Florida peninsula, there seems no practical way of halting the inrush.

One solution, of course, would be to make residence here so unattractive for these people that they simply wouldn't want to come. But the range of social services and benefits available to any poor person in this country makes it seem like paradise to most outsiders, and it is doubtful whether our warmhearted government could bring itself to deny any of these to someone here illegally, even if the courts ruled that it was constitutional to do so.

In addition, there is another major problem about which conservatives are far too ambivalent: It is in large part the jobs available here that lure these people - jobs without security or side benefits, paying less than minimum wage, but far more attractive nonetheless than anything available back home. And these jobs are dangled by American businessmen who know exactly what they are doing and resist bitterly any attempt to keep them from doing it.

There is a libertarian argument that this is simply the old story of the willing seller and the willing buyer, and that nobody has any business interfering with their sacred freedom to interact economically. But such an argument implicitly rejects the possibility a nation might elect to have goals inconsistent with the enrichment of a particular group of its citizens in this particular way. Very considerable freedom is desirable in such matters, but total freedom would be indistinguishable from social anarchy.

There will shortly come before Congress the Simpson - Mazzoli bill, which seeks to resolve the problem of aliens already illegally in the country (which some estimates put at 12 million, or nearly 5 percent of the entire U.S. population).

Attorneys struggle with tangle

By T. LEE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what resembles a script from television's "Dallas," attorneys are still trying to untangle how the government can recover a fortune from Texas millionaire Rex Cauble because of his conviction two years ago on racketeering charges.

Cauble, 70, a cigar-puffing horseman from Denton, was convicted in January 1982 of violating federal racketeering, banking and criminal travel laws in connection with a massive drug smuggling operation in Texas.

As a result, Cauble was directed to forfeit to the government his nearly one-third interest in Cauble Enterprises, a sprawling business empire that jurors determined was linked to the smuggling operation.

Defense attorneys said virtually all of Cauble's personal estate was tied up in the business, which he managed and whose assets included ranches, steel and trailer companies and the ritzy Cutter Bill Western World clothing stores in Dallas and Houston.

Those assets have been variously estimated at between $50 million and $75 million. As a result, the forfeiture would likely be the largest in the history of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, under which Cauble was convicted, according to U.S. Attorney Bob Wortham in Beaumont, Texas.

Cauble has asked the Supreme Court to review both his conviction and sentence.

Pending resolution of his appeals, Cauble has continued to manage Cauble Enterprises through an arrangement with the government under which he draws a salary of up to $60,000 a year from the business, Wortham said.

Meanwhile, attorneys for the government and for Cauble's wife and son, the other two partners in Cauble Enterprises, have been trying to work out how the government would be paid off should the Supreme Court reject Cauble's request.

"How to give the government its interest without hurting these innocent people is fairly difficult," said Raymond A. Krell, a Houston attorney who is representing Cauble's wife Josephine and his son Lewis.

"The government realizes it is not in a position to directly manage and operate Cauble Enterprises," Krell said.

Measured service hearing set

AUSTIN (AP) — A lawyer for the office of Public Utility Counsel and Southwestern Bell agree that a hearing examiner should take her time in hearing a request by Bell to charge for local calls on a per-call basis.

Jose Varela said Monday the proposal for local measured service "deserves a long, hard look."

Jon Dee Lawrence of Bell said the company "doesn't want to rush," but neither does it "want to use delay" to deny to the public the alternative plan for charging for local calls.

Karen Hogan of the Public Utility Commission staff joined Varela in his request, saying the staff "needs as much time as possible" in preparing for the proposal.

Under local measured service, customers would be billed for local calls based on time of day of the call, distance and duration — similar to the way the cost of a long-distance call is calculated.

Varela and others also asked PUC examiner Shelia Bailey to remove from the case a proposal by Bell for "lifeline" or reduced rates for low-income people.

Varela said he thought Bell had, perhaps, included the "lifeline" proposal to make local measured service "more palatable to customers." Varela said "lifeline" should be consolidated with Bell's general request for a rate increase, which has been before the PUC since Oct. 24.

Bell spokesman Dale Johnson said the PUC approved an experimental local measured service in 1979, and it is available in a number of cities but less than 1 percent of the company's business comes from that service.

Johnson said it would be difficult to oppose local measured service, which would be offered on an optional basis, if it included a "lifeline" rate.

Taking that out of the proposal would make it "palatable to the opposition," he said.

A March 19 hearing was set but Ms. Bailey said she might change that date when she issues her order later this week.

AT&T appeals sent back to PUC

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Jerry Dellana has told AT&T Communications that its request for an immediate increase of $115.4 million in long distance tolls within the state should be handled by the Public Utilities Commission.

Dellana said Monday his court had no jurisdiction in the matter because AT&T had not exhausted its appeal to the PUC.

PUC examiner Philip Holder on Jan. 6 refused to consider the AT&T request for an immediate rate increase and set a Jan. 24 hearing.

AT&T was refused a temporary restraining order by State District Judge Harley Clark on Jan. 10. AT&T attorneys has asked state courts to overrule the PUC examiner and allow an immediate $115.4 million rate hike or block a PUC order forcing AT&T to give Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. $616 million.

Under the federal court-ordered divestiture of American Telephone & Telegraph, Southwestern Bell and AT&T Communications are separated. AT&T retained most of the intrastate long distance lines, depriving Southwestern Bell of one of its most profitable services.

To replace some of the long distance money, the PUC ordered AT&T to pay so-called "access charges" to Southwestern Bell and other local phone companies in Texas. AT&T says its rates must go up to cover those charges.

The $115.4 million interim hike, which includes a 10.7 percent increase in intrastate long distance tolls, is part of a $301 million increase package filed by AT&T.

Viewers phone attorney after TV appearance

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A San Antonio attorney concedes he might have been "a little insensitive" when he said on national television that a crime his client had confessed to was a "mild" rape.

Dozens of angry viewers called attorney Ray Taylor's home from across the nation after his remark was broadcast Sunday night on the CBS news magazine "60 Minutes."

One irate caller threatened to kidnap his child, but some viewers called to praise him, Taylor said. Most of the calls came from women, he said.

Taylor's client, Joseph Frank Smith, admitted raping a San Antonio woman twice, but avoided a jail sentence and instead was ordered to undergo controversial "chemical castration" treatments.

The injection treatments use the drug Depo-Provera to snuff out the subject's sex drive, but produce some side effects.

On the show, Taylor told correspondent Ed Bradley, "As rapes go, this was a mild one. She's (the victim) adjusted very quickly and well. She did not come across as a victim who had suffered mightily."

The conversation was taped in November, several months after jurors gave Smith 10 years probation for his guilty plea to three counts of burglary with intent to commit rape.

"I came across as a little insensitive, which I'm sorry about," Taylor said.

DEEP SNOW—Peggy Kuhn shovels snow from the roof of the Crested Butte, Colo. Post Office earlier this month. With storage reservoirs nearly full from last year's huge runoff and snowpack in the Rockies nearly twice the normal depth, authorities are warning of possible spring floods. (AP Laserphoto)

Flood threat in Colorado River basin

PALISADE, Colo. (AP) — When the flood came last spring to Plateau Creek, it claimed some of Pat Byvoet's pasture and all his hopes of building a blacksmith business.

The 28-year-old Byvoet says he doesn't think he could survive a repeat of the spring snowmelt that swelled the quiet mountain creek and caused $30,000 in damage.

"Last year the whole mountain came down at once," Byvoet said. "If I could fix everything, I might keep from more damage this year. But by the time I got through all the permits I had run out of money."

So he's rented his place, sold his dozen horses and set out to revive his business in nearby Grand Junction.

Last spring's flooding on the western edge of the Rocky Mountains was serious; farther downstream along the Colorado River it was devastating. Roads and businesses were damaged, businesses washed out, homes destroyed. People called it a "100-year flood."

And officials say it could happen again this spring across the seven-state Colorado River Basin.

Snowpack in the Rockies is nearly twice the average depth, winter is not even half over and storage reservoirs remain nearly full from last year's huge runoff.

Whether flood fears will be realized depends on a number of things: how much more snow the mountains of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming get this winter; how well repairs on the spillways of Utah's Glen Canyon Dam proceed, and how quickly heavy snow melts in May.

"It depends on how the melt comes," said Terry Holzworth, flood control director for Salt Lake County in Utah, where officials are working on $24 million worth of flood projects.

But he warned that if there is a repeat of 1983's flooding, the damage will be much worse because creek and river banks already are so eroded they can't hold high water.

Much flood damage remains from 1983, when unusually high spring temperatures triggered a quick melt of a high snowpack and caused damage from western Colorado into Mexico. Financial losses still have not been officially tabulated, but they clearly are in the millions of dollars.

"Our problem is that the water has not gone down yet," said Patrick Harrington, assistant state director for emergency services in Arizona. "It's hard to tell what damage there was unless you can see it."

Damage in 1983 was scattered over a wide area, from small dams breaking in western Colorado; rivers of water inundating streets in Salt Lake City and the flooding of homes and resorts in Arizona and California.

Financially strapped state and local governments have been hard pressed to fund repairs.

"We may have the second 100-year flood this year, right after last year," said Bill McDonald, deputy director of the Colorado Water Conservation Board. "There's just no money for any of this."

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson is asking his state Legislature to appropriate $38.1 million to cover flood costs.

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation was criticized at congressional hearings last June in Nevada and California by people whose homes were flooded. Residents wanted to know why an elaborate system of dams and reservoirs failed to prevent widespread damage.

The tourist industry complained, too. Campground operators in Colorado and casino owners in Nevada said bad publicity cut business.

Reclamation Commissioner Robert Broadbent spent the last several months touring the affected western states, trying to gain the cooperation of water district boards, state governments and other agencies in formulating an operations plan to prevent a repeat of 1983 flooding.

Last week, the Bureau of Reclamation issued its January forecast for the Upper Colorado River Basin, saying the snowpack in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah stood at 173 percent of normal.

Bud Rusho, spokesman for the bureau's regional office in Salt Lake City, said the current forecast calls for 13 million acre-feet of runoff — twice the normal amount and just under last year's 14.6 million acre-feet that caused extensive flooding in several states.

"The forecast assumes a wide margin of error and assumes normal snowfall and a gradual melt," Rusho said. "If the runoff is 13 million acre-feet, it could be handled with no great problems."

If the bureau drains Colorado River reservoirs and anticipated snowmelt doesn't fill them back up, cities and farmers downstream don't have water. If it holds too much water in storage and is faced suddenly with a heat wave and a large runoff, there is flooding.

"It's tough, almost a no-win situation," said Clark Germann, a federal Bureau of Reclamation spokesman in Denver.

But with unpleasant memories of last spring still fresh, bureau officials plan to drain down reservoirs to allow an extra 2.5 million acre-feet of water. Complicating that plan in Utah is damage to the spillways at Glen Canyon Dam, where an intense repair job is under way.

FDA approves nicotine gum

WASHINGTON (AP) — A chewing gum laced with nicotine will soon be sold with Food and Drug Administration approval as a prescription aid to smokers who want to kick the cigarette habit, an agency official said early Tuesday.

Dr. Edward Tocus, chief of the FDA's drug abuse staff, confirmed that the agency had approved an application by Merrill Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. of Cincinnati to sell the gum that will be marketed as "Nicorette."

Tocus, however, cautioned that the gum "isn't a panacea for stopping smoking... We've got data that show it can work in some people."

FDA officials said Nicorette should not be used by pregnant women or nursing mothers or people with heart conditions.

Former deputy pleads guilty

HOUSTON (AP) — Robert Rice, who worked as a deputy and was indicted with former San Jacinto County Sheriff James C. "Humpy" Parker on a charge of conspiring to deprive citizens of their civil rights, has pleaded guilty to a lesser charge.

Rice pleaded guilty Monday to misprision of a felony — concealing knowledge of a conspiracy.

Parker was convicted last September of using water torture to get confessions from prisoners.

Rice, Parker, Parker's son, Gary, and bail bondsmen Herbert Atwood and James L. Browder were indicted in October on charges of participating in a conspiracy in which drivers were stopped on the highway, charged with violations, taken to jail and then charged a bail for their release.

Living in the country becoming popular again

By MELINDA MILLER
The Houston Chronicle

EVERGREEN, Texas (AP) — Before blacktop roads snaked their way through these woods, it was a two-day ride to the closest big town, Huntsville.

Like a scene from a Western movie, local lawmen would handcuff their prisoners to trees while they slept under the stars on their overnight journey to jail.

This is still the country known by the city slickers as "the sticks." But only 60 miles from bustling Houston, Evergreen and other small communities sprinkled throughout San Jacinto County are now into a second childhood.

For the first time in 100 years, people are moving here for relatively low taxes, clean air, elbow room and Lake Livingston.

"People come in this store nearly every day asking if we know where there's any land for sale," said Doug Cox, a Houston firefighter who helps out at Everitt's Evergreen Grocery on his days off.

Cox, 43, was born, reared and married in Evergreen. Although he works for the City of Houston, when his 24-hour shift is over he can't wait to head home, where the living is "nice and easy," he said.

"Some of the older folks don't like to see the subdivisions coming in, but there's nothing they can do about it," Cox said. "I don't have anything against them. The people are real neighbors. But well, I thought I was going to be away from everybody."

With Interstate 45 to the west and U.S. Highway 59 and Lake Livingston on the east, however, it suddenly became easy for everybody to find Cox's hometown hideout.

The Evergreen Grocery, owned by Cox's sister, Falvey Everitt, and her husband, is one of several roadside general stores on Texas Highway 150 between New Waverly and Coldspring. Except for homemade signs for yard eggs posted on trees, the stores are the only sign of commerce.

Most places have a gas pump outside, a friendly face behind the counter inside and cold drinks and hot sandwiches for hungry people who find themselves so many miles from McDonaldland.

Evergreen proper is just east of Pumpkin, at an offset four-cornered intersection marked by the only traffic signal for 15 miles — a flashing yellow light. There are nearly as many churches as houses, and on Sunday they draw people from the surrounding forest for sermons, songs and socials.

The churches arrived with three of the first permanent settlers. The brothers Godfrey, Samuel and Phillip Ellisor, all Methodist ministers, led several congregations after their arrival in 1850 and in later years donated land for churches of other denominations.

A scrapbook history of the Ellisors' journey from South Carolina to the promised land between the Trinity and San Jacinto rivers and of their descendants can be found in Evelyn's Grocery. It is on the west side of "town."

The owner, Evelyn Ellisor Niederhofer, 57, has devoted 30 years of filling in the holes of her family tree with names and personalities. The best-known branch on her chart is for Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire. But Mrs. Niederhofer's obvious favorite relations are the three Ellisor brothers who came with family, friends and slaves to untamed Texas 130 years ago.

Pemex will improve quality

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The state oil monopoly Pemex says it will improve the quality of its gasoline and diesel fuel to cut down on air pollution.

In an agreement signed with the Urban Development and Ecology Department, Pemex said upgrading the fuels would reduce air contamination in this city of 15 million people by 60 percent.

Pemex also pledged to repair damage to land caused by oil drilling and exploration and clean up contamination of coastal waters, rivers and lagoons caused by oil spills.

The Urban Development and Ecology Department said Mexico City is one of the world's five most polluted cities. It said most of the contamination comes from the 2 million-plus cars, buses and trucks that jam its streets daily.

Evergreen is providing a haven for another man of the cloth, former Methodist lay minister Dearing Estes Jones of Conroe. Jones was convicted in 1982 of felony theft for defrauding two elderly sisters out of nearly $89,000 in a land-buying scheme. He is now on 10 years' probation and is paying restitution of $200 a month.

During his trial, Jones had the moral and financial support of the Interfaith Church in Evergreen, which sponsored barbecues to pay his attorney's fees. He continues to preach there every Sunday to a forgiving congregation that includes Mrs. Niederhofer.

"We can't believe he'd do something like that, and even if he did we couldn't just turn our backs on him," she said. "I would just die if anything happened to Brother Jones. He's as much a part of this church as the pulpit and songbooks are."

The church's history, however, dates well before Jones. Since it was organized in 1862, it has switched location and affiliation and now is recognized by the State of Texas as a historical site.

The church was barely 30 years old when John Jackson was born in Evergreen, the child of former slaves owned by one of the first ranchers there.

Jackson lives alone on his father's homestead, back off the main road. It's the type of isolated rural area that's last on the list to have electrical service restored after a disaster such as Hurricane Alicia.

But Jackson, 91, knows how to take care of himself. His parents, he said, were good teachers.

Every morning he builds a fire in his small wood stove to cook his day's meals. He stays in by the fire when it's cold and on the front porch when it's hot, and when he feels good he works on his baskets.

A basket built by John Jackson will probably last even longer than he has. Using skills taught him by his father, Jackson transforms poles of white oak into containers strong enough to hold as much as a man can lift. He can make them any size or shape.

"All you have to do is tell me," he said. For an extra large basket, Jackson splits his timber into 5-foot slats and slices off the webbing with a draw knife. After laying out the ribs and weaving the bottom, he shapes the basket and builds the sides. The product of a day's work costs $10.

"I'm slowing down some now. When I bend over working, it makes me lightheaded, and my hands get so sore sometimes I have to quit," Jackson said.

Jackson's son, who lives next door, drives him to his doctor, church and the market, where a few of the younger men congregate.

From the bench on the shady stoop of the Evergreen Grocery, M.J. Denson, 75, and John Lee, 71, watch the world go by and trade tales of fishing and old times with others who aren't in a hurry to get anywhere else.

Dear Abby

Teens fighting drunk driving

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: A life-saving effort has just come to my attention that I think deserves publicizing.

It's called the "Contract for Life"—an agreement signed by parents and teen-agers in an effort to reduce the number of deaths involving drunk drivers.

SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk) was launched two years ago in Marlboro, Mass., by Robert Anastas, a teacher from Wayland High School in Wayland, Mass., after two of his students were killed in a car crash.

The part of the contract to be signed by the teen-ager states:

"I agree to call you for advice and/or transportation at any hour, from any place, if I am ever in a situation where I have had too much to drink, or a friend or date who is driving me has had too much to drink."

The part signed by the parents states: "I agree to come and get you at any hour, any place, no questions asked and no argument at that time, or I will pay for a taxi to bring you home safely. I expect we would discuss this issue at a later time."

"I agree to seek safe, sober transportation home if I am ever in a situation where I have had too much to drink, or a friend who is driving me has had too much to drink."

Although the SADD program has already reached 3 million teen-agers in the United States and Canada, I would like to see it in every high school.

For a free information kit, write to: SADD, "Contract for Life," Corbin Plaza, Marlboro, Mass. 01752.

DEAR ABBY: My wife began withholding sex soon after our marriage—10 years ago. We have two children, so it wasn't total abstinence (once or twice a month). Over the last nine years, it got less and less, until two years ago when she said, "No more."

I am not demanding, abusive or repulsive and I expect only conventional and normal relations, perhaps once a week. We are both Catholic—married in the church.

I asked her what she would do if I insisted. She said she would consider it "rape." What rights have I in this matter?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: If you were to "insist"—force your wife to have sexual relations against her will—you would be guilty of rape. You have a "right" to expect a fulfilled marriage, which includes sexual relations. This is part of the marriage contract.

Talk to your priest. You may qualify for an annulment.

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, I married a 36-year-old man I'll call John. It was his first marriage and my second. I was a 40-year-old divorcee with two children, 10 and 8. John adopted my children and considers them "his."

My problem is John's mother. She loses no opportunity to tell me that she would like some "real" grandchildren—meaning John and I should have at least one child together.

Abby, I do not want another child at my age and I have told my mother-in-law that very plainly. So has John, but she harps on it constantly, hoping to change our minds. I don't want to be disrespectful and tell her off, but I have to get her off my back.

John tunes her out, but she's getting to me. Help! Sign me ...

AN "UNREAL" DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR UNREAL: Take a lesson from John and tune her out. She can "get to you" only if you let her.

Library plans showings

Children's films available

Lovett Memorial Library has announced plans to show children's films on the library's new film strip cassette projector each week from 10 to 11 a.m. Monday through Friday.

The projector is located in the Arts and Crafts Room behind the information desk. The program is a free service for library patrons.

"This service will provide diversion for young children and enable their parents to use the library with greater freedom," said Librarian Dan Snider. The library has several strollers available for the convenience of parents with infants and toddlers.

"By spring, the library will also have a borrowers' collection of books on tapes. The collection will initially feature adult fiction and will eventually include a number of books for children."

"Books on tape is a rapidly growing form of entertainment and education for persons with vision problems, for those who are ill and for those who spend a lot of time traveling in their automobiles," Snider explained. "We hope to build a collection that will appeal to a broad range of readers."

This service will be made available through memorial gifts to the library. More information is available from the library staff.

The following new books are now on the shelves of Lovett Library:

"Foxfire Down," by Craig Thomas: Riveting action and suspense with Mitchell Gant flying the Soviet MIG—the deadliest warplane ever built—out from under the watchful Russian eyes and into the heart of new danger and intrigue.

"Women in Texas," by Ann Fears Crawford: The most complete and authoritative history of the women who have contributed to the life of the Lone Star State.

"Pet Sematary," by Stephen King: Dr. Louis Creed, his wife and their two children move to a small town in Maine. Behind their new house, they discover a path leading to a place where over the years children have buried their pets, and beyond that is an old Indian burial ground where pets that have been buried appeared alive.

"Little Towns of Texas," by Kathleen St. Clair: An interesting and comprehensive book of small towns of Texas, how they originated and where they got their names.

"The Other Woman," by Joy Fielding: She was liberated and fiercely independent, which only made it worse when she fell into the oldest trap in the world: A love affair with a married man. Unlike many "other women," she became his wife. And all too soon, her mother's old-fashioned prediction came true: "If he'll do it with you, he'll do it to you."

"On Reagan: The Man and His Presidency," by Ronnie Dugger: Provides a complete record of everything significant Ronald Reagan has said and done as a public person, including much that has never been published before.

"Changes," by Danielle

Steel: The author has put her finger on the heartbeat of every modern reader. She has depicted a man and woman faced with the greatest challenge we all face today—how to deal with commitment, careers and relationships in a world where changed roles have altered the old rules of love and marriage.

"Destiny," by Paul Auerand: 102 other real-life mysteries form the series, "Paul Harvey's The Rest of the Story."

"Berlin Game," by Len Dighton: Bernard Sampson is in the British Secret Service, and so is a traitor—someone near the top. Maybe it's his immediate superior, a man whom he despises. Or the man in charge, who's disturbingly close to Bernard's wife. In Berlin, Bernard will find out as past and present unravel and hero and traitor collide.

"What is a Wife Worth?," by Michael H. Minton: The leading expert places a high dollar value on homemaking.

Girl Scouts set for cookie sales

Local and area Girl Scouts of the Quivira Girl Scout Council will begin their annual cookie sales Jan. 21.

The Girl Scouts plan to kick off the 12-day sale with a scout-type marathon on Saturday, Jan. 21.

During the final days of the month, local Girl Scouts will be taking orders for the seven types of cookies by going door-to-door and by making telephone contacts.

In observance of the 50th Anniversary of the Girl Scout Cookie Sale, a new type of cookie assortment, Medallions, will be available this year. This box of Medallions will contain a selection of chocolate-dipped Colonial Supreme Shortbread and caramel-dipped Southern Pecan Praline cookies.

Also available for orders are Samoas, a vanilla cookie dipped in caramel, rolled in toasted coconut and striped with chocolate; Thin Mints, a thin wafer made with natural peppermint coated with chocolate; Do-si-dos, an oatmeal sandwich peanut butter cookie; Tagalongs, a crispy cookie topped with peanut butter and covered with chocolate coating.

Also, Trefoils, a low calorie, shortbread cookie; and Chocolate Chunks, an old-style recipe made with chocolate drops.

All of the Girl Scout cookies are made with 100 percent vegetable shortening and no preservatives or artificial colors added.

Because they are sold only once a year, extras should be bought at this time and frozen for future use.

Not only do the girls gain experience in selling and working with the public, they are able to earn several different patches and incentives, depending on the amount of their sales, Girl Scout officials urge.

Each troop receives $3, or 14.3 percent from each case of 12 boxes sold. The cost of the cookies and other expenses claim 42.4 percent; incentives use 1.7 percent; Daisy Dollars, which can be used for camp fees, get 2 percent; designated camperships used to send girls to camp who cannot afford the costs receive 3-10 percent; the Girls Program claims 10.5 percent adn maintenance and improvement of Camp Mel Davis and Camp Cibola receive 28.8 percent of the money brought in from the sales.

While orders for the cookies will be taken between Jan. 21 and Feb. 1, delivery will not be made until the period of March 6-17 when money will be collected.

Anyone desiring to order cookies who does not know a Girl Scout may do so by contacting the Girl Scout headquarters in Pampa City Hall.

Wood stoves can be dangerous

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Sales of wood-burning stoves have soared in recent years and so have fires involving them. But you may have only yourself to blame if someone in your home gets hurt.

Studies at the Center for Fire Research in the National Bureau of Standards show that only 13 percent of the fires involving stoves and other appliances which burn solid fuels like wood were due to product malfunctions, construction defects, design deficiencies or worn-out equipment.

"Overwhelmingly, conditions related to the installation, operation or maintenance of the appliances were reported as responsible for the fires," said Richard Peacock, a chemical engineer with the bureau.

The Bureau of Standards says the most common safety rules are often the ones that are ignored and it recommends specific steps to take in installing the stove, using it and taking care of it. Here's what to do:

INSTALLATION

Install the stove at least 36 inches — three feet — from unprotected walls. You can reduce the clearance to 18 inches if the walls are protected with 24-gauge sheet metal over one-inch glass fiber or mineral wool batts and to 12 inches if the batts are sandwiched between two plates of the sheet metal.

Do not stand the stove on an unprotected, combustible floor. Mount it on an approved mat made of something like fiberglass batts covered with sheet metal, mortared bricks, stone or concrete. The mat should extend at least 18 inches in front of the stove. Make sure the stove is at least 36 inches from anything that can burn, including furniture, drapes, carpets, etc.

The stovepipe may connect directly to an existing masonry chimney or may have to pass through a wall. A single-walled stovepipe passing through a wall should be protected by a surrounding metal thimble. If no thimble is used, the hole should be covered by at least 18 inches of non-combustible material on all sides of the pipe. If you don't have enough clearance, look for a stove with a specially constructed double- or triple-walled pipe.

OPERATION

Do not put anything combustible near the stove, even temporarily. This includes newspapers you might use to start the fire. Don't use flammable liquids to start or rekindle a fire and don't use coal in a wood-burning stove unless the manufacture specifically says it's OK.

Don't overload the stove with wood or use green wood and don't use artificial logs which can create a fire that is too hot and which contain wax which can clog up the air inlet.

MAINTENANCE

Take steps to prevent a chimney build-up of creosote, which is a by-product of wood combustion and is very flammable. When you begin using your stove, check the chimney every two weeks to see how fast the creosote accumulates and use your findings to work out an inspection and cleaning schedule.

How to make sales work for you

By The Associated Press Writer

The Christmas sales have ended. The January sales are under way. And that means the February sales are right around the corner. And the March sales. And April, May, June. Never-ending, through the year.

You can make the sales work for you by keeping a calendar of what to buy when. If you're willing to devote the time, you can organize your shopping so you never have to pay full price for anything. And, with a little advance planning, you can buy gifts throughout the year and avoid the holiday crush next year.

Economists at Citibank in New York note that forecasters expect consumer prices and personal income to rise about 5 percent this year. "To stay ahead," say the economists in the bank's "Consumer Views" newsletter, "you need a long-term spending strategy."

You can save money if you buy off season — before or after the period of peak demand. Here is a Citibank list of seasonal sales:

JANUARY: Traditional white sales for sheets and towels. Heavy discounts on Christmas merchandise and gift items; watch out for things that will look dated. For general merchandise, check pre-inventory reductions.

FEBRUARY: Presidential and Valentine's Day sales for housewares. Also, pre-season buys on menswear. Look into fabric sales and specials on records, typewriters, women's suits, bedding and furniture.

MARCH: Sales on hardware, paint and supplies for spring gardening along with good buys on junior suits and dresses, rainwear, sunglasses, infant furniture and china.

APRIL: Sales on household goods. Easter and post-Easter sales start around the 15th — even though Easter isn't until the 22nd. Shop for next month's Mother's Day holiday and for pre-season specials on air conditioners.

MAY: General sales on baby needs and outdoor play equipment. Memorial Day sales feature white goods and summer sportswear. Also worth checking: luggage, women's, misses' and juniors' ready-to-wear and costume jewelry.

JUNE: Menswear for Father's Day on sale, along with small appliances, camping supplies, and bridal items, silverware and clocks. If you missed January white sales, stock up at the June variety.

JULY: Savings on sporting goods, furniture, bedding, curtains and rugs. Look for mid-summer fur sales.

AUGUST: Final markdowns on summer clothes and clearance sales on seasonal items like patio and beach gear. Freezers, refrigerators and coolers available at special prices.

SEPTEMBER: Hunting equipment and sporting goods at a discount. Also worth watching are specials on children's shoes, fall fashion accessories, auto batteries, radios, dishwashers and glassware.

OCTOBER: Start planning for winter parties to take advantage of earlier, lower prices; if you need evening wear, look at Columbus Day sales. Now is also a good time for typewriters, electric blankets, dryers, ranges, ski equipment, winter outerwear and oil burners.

NOVEMBER: Election Day, Veterans Day and Thanksgiving sales offer a chance for Christmas shopping, particularly for big-ticket items. Among other specifics to look for: men's clothing and furnishings, toys and games.

DECEMBER: Relax. Shopping done.

Nearly six million wives earn more than husbands

WASHINGTON (AP) — American women are continuing their rush to the workplace, and a new Census Bureau study shows that nearly 6 million of them now earn more than their husbands.

Women have become the primary wage earners in 12.1 percent of husband-wife households, the bureau reports. In 1981, it counted 3,997,000 couples in which both worked and the wife had a higher income, and 1,993,000 couples where only the wife was employed.

Suzanne M. Bianchi, who co-authored the report, said it was the first such study of women who earn more than their husbands. But, she added, with the growing participation of women in the labor market, it seems reasonable that the share of women who out-earn their husbands has increased.

The report by Ms. Bianchi and Daphne Spain notes that two views have been proposed to explain wives who earn more than their husbands.

The first is the so-called "female superstar," the highly educated woman in a high-income professional job.

The second is the "underachieving husband syndrome," where the husband earns less because of retirement, illness, layoff or simply lack of initiative.

Ms. Bianchi said that the two possibilities are not necessarily opposites, as "the super-achieving wife may very well have demoralizing effects on a husband, and an underachieving husband may quite possibly provide the incentive for a wife to enter the labor force and discover talents she otherwise would not have discovered."

Women who out-earn their husbands do tend to have above average educations and to hold higher status jobs than women who earn less than their husbands, the report says.

But the authors concluded that while this "may be an interesting group" they account for only about 860,000 cases of wives.

"Rather, the emphasis on couples in which the wife works at a nonprofessional job but provides primary support for her family ... because her husband has labor force difficulties appears to be the more common scenario."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

This coming year you will become interested in a number of new subjects that you can use in practical ways for both self-improvement and advancement in your chosen field of endeavor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Think twice today before volunteering to sort out a complicated situation for a friend. If anything goes wrong, you're the one who will be blamed. Major changes are in store for Capricorns in the coming year. Send for your Capricorn Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1 and your zodiac sign to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet, which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, find rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
In partnership situations, major decisions should be made jointly today. Don't take it upon yourself to make judgments if the other party isn't present.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
At work today, don't take it upon yourself to change things around without first consulting your boss. He or she may have totally different plans.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Be extra-careful today in financial matters, as well as in situations that affect your reputation or status. These are potential hot spots.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Domestic disruptions are likely today if family members fail to cooperate properly with one another. Don't be a principal instigator.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Don't try to overpower coworkers today or pressure them into doing things your way. Pushing too hard could have unpleasant results.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Your material conditions have promising potential, but a number of leaks must be plugged up. Unfortunately, you may be unable to do so today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
To appease others today you might make shifts in positions against your better judgment and end up pleasing no one, including yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Behaving rashly or impulsively could lead to your own undoing today. Take time to plan your steps carefully before jumping into the fray.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Strive to live within your means today. Subdue tendencies to involve yourself in activities that are out of your reach financially.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
In your desire to achieve today, there's a possibility you might push yourself beyond your limits and energy. These tactics could deprive you of victory.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Avoid the company of an acquaintance with whom you recently had cross words. A thoughtless comment could reignite.

Pampa welcomes Demons tonight

After a slow start in last week's game against Brownfield, the Pampa Harvesters responded with 62 second-half points to win going away, 91-57.

Brownfield had trailed by only two, 29-27, at halftime mainly because of Pampa's defensive letdown, said Head Coach Garland Nichols.

"We spent Monday trying to perfect our zone defense," said Nichols. "We were taking some things for granted and not doing the little things that you really don't notice sometimes."

Pampa, still ranked No. 2 in this week's Class 4A state high school rankings, will host Dumas at 7:30 p.m. tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse.

"Dumas has one of the best shooting guards in the district in Shawn Reed," Nichols said. "They're not a great team, but they're a good team. They beat Levelland and took Canyon into overtime before losing." Pampa is 15-5 overall and 5-0 in District 1-4A play. Dumas is 7-11 and 1-4.

Nichols said the Harvesters may be without top scorer and rebounder Coyle Winborn tonight. Winborn, who is averaging 19.1 points and 11.3 rebounds, has been suffering from flu symptoms.

"Coyle has been out since Friday, so we'll just have to play in by ear and see what happens," Nichols added. All the district teams, with the exception of Pampa, have at least two losses, putting the Harvesters in a comfortable position.

"What I thought might happen before the season started is happening," Nichols said. "The teams are knocking each other off. When that happens it puts pressure on every team to win."

Lady Harvesters lose to Brownfield girls

Pampa's Lady Harvesters downed only two of 12 foul shots in the third quarter against Brownfield last Friday night.

Those misses helped give Brownfield a 63-53 win. "We played a good game with the exception of those missed free throws," said Pampa Coach Albert Nichols. "It's tough to win those close games when you don't hit crucial free throws."

Kerri Richardson was Pampa's top scorer with 14 points while Melissa Nichols chipped in 13. Lisa Crayton and Tina Greenway had eight and seven points respectively. Gaye Hendricks, Stephanie Smith and Melanie Morgan had four points apiece.

Pampa's next game is Friday night at home against Lubbock Dunbar.

UTA wins, -76-65

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Derrick Gervin scored a game-high 24 points as the University of Texas at San Antonio beat Texas-Arlington 76-65 in college basketball action Monday night.

UTA's Charles Harris' 20-foot jumper at the 5:24 mark pulled the Mavericks to within two, 58-56, but UTSA scored 18 of the game's last 27 points to put the Mavs away. Harris was UTA's high scorer with 17.

UTA held a 31-28 lead with 3:42 left in the first half, but Gervin hit a free throw and the Roadrunners made a fast-break field goal to knot the game at halftime, 31-31.

UTA improved its record to 9-6. The Mavs' sixth straight loss dropped them to 4-8.

Buffaloes lose to Pan American cagers

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Phillip Bernard scored 17 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to carry Pan American University to a 74-62 victory over West Texas State Monday night.

James Jackson pumped 24 points for West Texas State, which led 33-32 at the half. Pan American improved to 8-5, while WTSU dropped to 5-9 in absorbing their sixth straight loss.

Kendall Walling, who scored 13 for the Buffaloes, gave West Texas State its last lead at 40-39 on a free throw 3:24 into the second half.

Troy Dingle added 13 points and Tom Fiepieke 10 for Pan American, which had trailed most of the first half.

Pan American hit nine straight free throws over the final 95 seconds after West Texas State had closed the margin to eight points.

Super Bowl Trail Branch anxious to play

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The last time the Washington Redskins saw Cliff Branch, it was from behind. The speedy Los Angeles wide receiver is anxious to give them another look from that direction.

"I can't wait for Sunday to get here," said Branch on Monday, after the Raiders had arrived at this site of Super Bowl XVIII. "I think Washington is vulnerable in the secondary. I'm healthy, I'm ready."

Branch, who is completing his 12th National Football League season, was on the receiving end of a 99-yard touchdown pass play during the Redskins' wild 37-35 victory over the Raiders on Oct. 2 in Washington.

The play came in the second quarter, cutting

Washington's lead at the time to 10-7. While it was a big play for the Raiders, it also was a big play for the Redskins since Branch suffered a hamstring injury on the play and had to sit out the rest of the game.

"I missed the next five games, too," recalled Branch, who holds the NFL record for receiving yardage in postseason play with 1,195 yards in 20 games. "I'm just glad I didn't have to undergo a knife (surgery)."

On Sunday, Branch will be in the starting lineup for a third time in Super Bowl competition. He believes he'll be a member of the winning team a third time.

"This is what you go to training camp for," said Branch, who helped the Raiders trounce Minnesota 32-14 in Super Bowl XI and whip Philadelphia 27-10 in Super Bowl XV. "We're ready, no question about it."

"There's a lot riding on this game. We want to be world champions. We can't let these guys win it two years in a row, noway."

The Redskins, 16-2, topped Miami 27-17 in Super Bowl XVII last Jan. 30 and are favored by three points over the Raiders, 14-4.

"We want to play the Redskins," said Branch. "It's fitting that we're playing them. We think we owe them something."

"They won't have the home field advantage and their fans this time," he added. "We're on neutral turf now."

College cage poll North Carolina dominates vote

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a landslide vote for No. 1 North Carolina. But for Kentucky and five other Top Ten teams in the weekly Associated Press college basketball poll, it was a case of mild slippage.

The 12-0 Tar Heels, who last week knocked off a pair of Atlantic Coast Conference rivals (No. 5 Maryland 74-62 and No. 12 Wake Forest 70-62), were rewarded with all 62 first-place votes and 1240 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The point system is based on 20 votes for first place, 19 for second, etc.

Conference play provided several surprises this week, yet nobody could have been more surprised than previously second-ranked Kentucky. The Wildcats, 12-1, were trounced by unranked Auburn 82-63 last Friday, so they became the new No. 3 team, exchanging places with DePaul.

The undefeated Blue Demons, who edged St. Mary's, Calif., but crushed Alabama-Birmingham, also improved their homecourt record to 99-3 since the late 1970s. DePaul, 11-0, received 1160 points.

Georgetown, 13-2, which was upset by Big East rival Villanova 65-63 in double overtime, and Maryland, 11-2, each dropped two places to Nos. 6 and 7, respectively.

The new fourth- and fifth-ranked teams are from Texas: Houston, now 16-2, and undefeated Texas-El Paso each climbed three notches, respectively. The Miners, 14-0, are one of four NCAA Division I teams still unbeaten.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 14-1, continued its steady climb in the poll to No. 8, while UCLA, 10-2, which lost to Pac 10 rival Oregon 62-61, fell three places to No. 9.

Rounding out the Top Ten is Illinois, 12-2, which lost to Indiana in overtime 73-68, but beat Ohio State 55-53.

The lone team to drop out of this week's Top 20 was Georgia, previously ranked No. 15. The lone newcomer is Big 10-leading Purdue, which re-entered the poll at No. 19.

The biggest improvement was shown by undefeated Tulsa, 15-0, which entered the poll last week at No. 20 last week and is now No. 13.

At No. 11 is Oregon State while Wake Forest remained at No. 12.

St. John's became the fifth team in last week's Top 10 to slide. After losing to No. 16 Boston College 69-67, in Big East play, the Redmen dropped four places to No. 14. Also dropping four places was

News in brief

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police say the curfew-violation arrests of 164 minors, especially teen-age "break dancers" and their audiences, was "to get the word out (to parents) that the streets of Westwood are not for babysitting your children at night."

All the minors arrested over the weekend were later released to their parents, said Sgt. Curt Hussey. The 10 p.m. curfew was imposed because the dancers were blocking sidewalks, causing traffic jams and attracting street gang members.

GHOST PROJECT—A pale haze hangs over the twin reactor towers at the Marble Hill nuclear generating station near Madison, Ind. late Monday after Public Service Indiana announced it would pull out after spending $2.5 billion. The move virtually dooms the project. (AP Laserphoto)

Indiana utility pulls out of costly nuclear project

MADISON, Ind. (AP) — Public Service Indiana's decision to scrap the $2.5 billion Marble Hill nuclear power plant will likely force emergency rate increases and business losses in the surrounding community, company officials and residents say.

The shutdown, announced Monday, coupled with last week's flat denial of a license to start up an Illinois nuclear plant, was also playing havoc with the stock market for utility issues, analysts said.

Indiana's largest electrical utility pulled out of the Marble Hill project because it is "financially unable to proceed," utility Chairman Hugh A. Barker announced after a directors' meeting Monday.

Barker said the utility will file an immediate petition with the Public Service Commission for about $105 million in emergency rate relief to cover operating costs and winding-up expenses at Marble Hill. Two groups announced they would oppose the hike.

"Even with the most stringent internal cost controls, we have not been able to generate a sufficient amount of cash to continue to operate our system, much less to finance construction at Marble Hill," Barker said. While apparently dooming the plant, the pullout by the utility, which owns 83 percent of Marble Hill, does not mean the project is officially canceled. That decision depends on Wabash Valley Power Association, a group of power cooperatives which owns the rest of the plant.

Wabash officials will meet soon to discuss what to do, said spokesman Craig Palmer. "We feel that there is just too much money invested to date to discount any feasible option," he added.

The project was announced in January 1975 with a projected completion date of the first reactor in 1983 and the second unit in 1984. In January 1976, the utility estimated construction would cost $1.4 billion, but the estimate has risen to $7 billion or more.

The plant's first reactor is 60 percent complete, and the second unit is 30 percent complete. Construction was delayed 18 months while the Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigated charges of construction flaws.

The 150 workers at the plant were informed of the company's withdrawal Monday, utility spokesman Brad Bishop said.

Bishop said it's doubtful the plant could be converted to other uses. "I would expect it to sit there," he said.

Others affected by the utility's cancellation include the common stockholders of Public Service, who face a 65 percent loss of their dividend income. The board of directors announced a quarterly dividend cut that it said would save the utility $100 million this year.

Barker said owners of Public Service stock have lost $750 million as the company's financial condition deteriorated.

Public Service stock was one of the 10 most actively traded issues on the New York Stock Exchange on Monday, closing down 1 1/2% at 10. It was 2 1/2% on Dec. 31, 1982.

The most actively traded stock Monday, dropping $3.75 to $22.50 a share, was Commonwealth Edison, which plans to appeal the Nuclear Regulatory Commission licensing board's unconditional denial last week of an operating permit for the Byron nuclear plant in Rockford, Ill. The commission cited lapses in construction quality control.

Court hears arguments on exclusionary changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is considering, for the second time in less than a year, whether to soften its "exclusionary rule" barring all illegally obtained evidence from criminal trials.

The court was to hear arguments today in two cases from California and Massachusetts in which it is being urged to carve out a "good faith exception" to the 70-year-old rule.

One of the most controversial of law-and-order issues, the exclusionary rule is meant to keep police conduct in check by tossing out evidence obtained in violation of someone's constitutional rights.

The rule often is blamed for letting criminals go free on technicalities.

The high court appeared close to altering the rule last spring in a closely watched case from Illinois, but the justices decided that case on another issue. "We reserve for another day the question of whether the exclusionary rule should be modified," the court said then.

After hearing today's arguments, the justices will take a tentative vote in the matter Wednesday afternoon. Announcement of the court's decision is expected by July.

The Massachusetts case perhaps offers the best illustration of how fine a line the exclusionary rule can draw.

The badly burned body of Sandra Bouliware, 29, was found in a vacant lot in the Roxbury section of Boston on Aug. 3, 1979. An autopsy disclosed that the victim was severely beaten and set afire while still alive.

When police officers sought a warrant to search suspect Osborne "Jimmy" Sheppard's home the day after the murder, no suitable warrant form could be found on that Sunday afternoon.

Instead, the officers used a document for drug searches, and a judge signed it. A search of Sheppard's home turned up incriminating evidence, and it was used at his trial.

But Sheppard's murder conviction was thrown out and a new trial ordered.
