

Parched Pampa welcomes 2-inch rain

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

The parched Pampa area finally received soaking spring rains Sunday — just in time for summer. An official two inches of rainfall recorded in Pampa in the 24-hour period ending this morning came too late for the area's sickly, but ripened, dryland wheat and too early for the recently-planted sorghum, but home gardeners and cattlemen with dry and dying grassland had cause to rejoice. Thunderstorms that moved into the Panhandle early Sunday afternoon loosed a welcome downpour, along with some severe weather and tornadoes. Most of the severe activity, however, was confined to the countryside and little damage was reported. Instead, the area enjoyed a soaking rain that wouldn't come during earlier weeks of drought. Southwestern Bell's district office reported it was swamped with calls about telephone problems caused by wet cables. Although the local problems were called "sporadic," customers in Pampa and Canadian may not get their telephones repaired until Wednesday because of the large number of service calls. The heaviest rainfall in the Panhandle on Sunday, 4.92 inches, was recorded in the rain gauge at the National Weather Service station in Amarillo. Employees at the station didn't have to travel far to see damage from the storm. "We had a windshield knocked out of jeep out here at the weather service," Weather Service Specialist Bill Weaver said. The marble-size hail that knocked out the vehicle window at the weather service was reported at several locations around the Panhandle, and golf ball-size hail was reported near Hereford. A Pampa police officer watching the weather Sunday reported that pea-size hail fell briefly on the north end of town. Twisters also bobbed and weaved out of the storm, but only landed blows to a barn and to the roof of one home west and southwest of Claude. "We had quite a bit of severe weather, but it didn't hit populated areas. It was generally a good rain," Weaver said. Most locations in the Panhandle picked up two to three inches of rain, he said. A weather observer in Miami reported 3.21 inches of rain in one hour Sunday evening. Weaver said some street flooding occurred in low-lying urban areas, but no damage was reported from the high waters. Highway 287 near Masterson also was closed for a short time because of high water. Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said water was running curb-to-curb on East Browning in the heaviest part of the storm, but the rain slackened off before reaching homes on that Pampa street. "Red Deer Creek looked like Red Deer River in Central Park," Ryzman remarked, adding that no flood damage was reported to police. Law enforcement officers, members of the local REACT radio club and other spotters watched for tornadoes around Pampa Sunday, but none were sighted here. Most of the Panhandle was under a tornado watch until 10 p.m. Sunday, Weaver said. The watch was upgraded to tornado warnings during the evening in counties where twisters or funnel clouds were confirmed. Gray County Agricultural Extension Agent Joe VanZandt said the welcome rain helped area pastureland more than it helped cash crops. VanZandt said the rain, which he said was the first decent rain here in about two months, came too late to help local wheat crops, which are ready for harvest. The rain also came too soon to help irrigated sorghum crops, he said. The ground in the sorghum fields now will crust over, requiring replanting of some of that crop, he said. "Our grass was in a more critical situation," VanZandt said.

...But Northeast still sweltering

By JIM PENSIERO
Associated Press Writer

Fortified with air conditioners and ice water, people in the steaming Northeast sweated through the fifth day of a record-breaking heat wave today which has caused three deaths, buckled highways and sent over 1 million people scurrying to beaches. In the nation's tornado-weary mid-section, meanwhile, violent thunderstorms packing 70-mph winds and several twisters dumped up to 5 inches of rain overnight on parts of the Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma. Hugh Crowther, a meteorologist with the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today that the Northeast could expect a brief respite from the blistering heat as a band of thunderstorms moves east from the Great Lakes tonight. "I can't say how long it will provide relief," Crowther said. "Maybe a day or so." "More of the same" was Crowther's forecast for the Plains and Midwest, where powerful but widely scattered thunderstorms were reported from Texas to Kansas overnight. "A fairly strong thunderstorm system will produce severe weather over the same areas of Texas and Oklahoma later today," Crowther said. The storms, which dropped golf-ball-sized hail on parts of eastern Colorado, caused no injuries or major damage, he said. Throughout the Northeast on Sunday, there was a run on air conditioners and ice as more than 1 million people braved miles-long traffic jams and heat-buckled highways to reach crowded seashores. The Northeast wasn't alone, however, as 50,000 people jammed Belle Isle Park near Detroit to escape a second straight day of 90-degree heat in Michigan. Three heat-related deaths were reported Sunday in New York City as emergency squads scrambled to keep up with thousands of calls from people sickened when the mercury reached a record-tying 95 degrees. In Boston, where the mercury also hit 95, the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority imposed 10-mph speed limits on trolley lines due to heat-warped rails. There was a run on ice — blocks, cubes and crushed — at O'Neill Ice and Oil Co. in Boston as customers lined up to pay $4 per 40 pounds. "Days like this make it all worthwhile," said John O'Neill. "Because no matter how good a businessman I am, if it ain't hot, people won't come." Beaches were packed from Cape May, N.J. to Cape Cod, Mass., as water temperatures in the low 60s lured people from their homes. There were at least 100,000 people down here, said police Officer John Sullivan in Nantasket Beach, Mass. "Every parking lot was filled to capacity." In New York City, officials said about 740,000 people jammed city beaches while more than 160,000 would be beachgoers were stalled in a seven-mile traffic jam to get to Jones Beach on Long Island.

Serious crimes decline second year in row

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rates of personal larceny and household burglary dropped to record lows in 1983 as the amount of serious crime in the United States declined by 7 percent. These were among the preliminary figures from the government's most reliable crime data, released Sunday by the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics. It marked the second year that major crime has declined and bolstered earlier reports that the number of crimes reported to the police had declined in 1983. The bureau estimated there were 36.9 million rapes, robberies, assaults, personal larcenies, household burglaries, household larcenies and motor vehicle thefts last year.

That total is 2.9 million crimes, or 7 percent fewer than the 39.8 million calculated for 1982. There were 568,000 fewer rapes, robberies and assaults than in 1982, producing a 9.8 percent drop in the rate of violent crime, down from 34.3 to 30.9 violent crimes for every 1,000 persons in the country. Among property crimes, the rate of personal larceny without contact between the victim and the criminal dropped by 8 percent, from 79.1 to 73.1 larcenies for every 1,000 persons. This was the lowest rate of victimization for personal larceny in the 11 years the data has been gathered. As always, personal larceny was the nation's most common crime, occurring more than 13.9 million times in 1983. The rate of household burglary, which hit a record low in 1982, declined again by 8.9 percent, from 78.2 to 71.2 burglaries for every 1,000 households. Every crime covered by the bureau's National Crime Survey showed a decline except rape, but the rise from 0.8 to 0.9 rapes for every 1,000 persons was statistically insignificant. The crime survey data is based on interviews twice a year with 128,000 persons over the age of 12 in some 60,000 households. It is considered the most reliable government crime data because the sample is enormous and because it gathers information on crimes that victims have not reported to the police as well as on those which have been reported. In April, the FBI's Crime Index also showed a 7 percent drop in seven major crimes in 1983, but the index covers only crimes reported to the police. In 1982, the last year for which final figures are available, the FBI found 12.8 million serious crimes reported to the police while the crime survey estimated there were a total of 39.8 million serious crimes. The two sets of statistics cover the same crimes, except that the FBI counts murder and the survey does not, because it is based on victim interviews. Murder, however, is the least frequent major crime, occurring barely more than 20,000 times each year.

Post office slates open house Tuesday

The Pampa Post Office will hold open house from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. Tuesday, Postmaster Richard Wilson announced. Hosts for the event will be all retired employees of the Pampa office. "This is just one way of saying thanks to our customers," Wilson said. The post office was built with WPA funds during the depression years of the 1930s. Total cost of $165,000 included the lot and building, but not the furniture. The Pampa Post Office is noted for its unique design and arrangement.

The cornerstone of the building was laid in June of 1933, with Congressman Marvin Jones as chief speaker. A unique feature of the local post office is the limestone carving out the outside walls, just below the edge of the roof, telling the economic history of Pampa. Figures include the plow, shock of wheat, an oil derrick and a honey bee hive on limestone shields. The red mission tile roof expresses both durability and beauty and is a departure from anything usually seen in this section of the country.

Reagan says demonstrators not majority

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the anti-nuclear demonstrators who dogged his 10-day trip in Europe do not speak for a majority and are advocating policies that could lead to "the peace of the grave." The president was back at the White House on Sunday, with a relaxed schedule today, after the 8,000-mile journey to his ancestral home in Ireland, the D-Day beaches of Normandy and a seven-nation economic summit. In a post-summit news conference on the lawn of Winfield House, the residence of the U.S. ambassador, the president was asked why he believed the anti-nuclear dissidents who rallied and marched in Ireland and London disagreed with his policies.

They seem to think they have a simple answer to warfare, that if we just lay down our weapons and stand back empty-handed, somehow peace will come to the world," he replied. "They haven't stopped to figure that it might be the peace of the grave." The state of U.S.-Soviet relations, particularly Moscow's refusal to resume nuclear arms reduction talks, was a topic that arose repeatedly on the president's trip, often by Reagan himself. A senior American official, speaking on the condition that he remain anonymous, said Reagan was pressed at the economic summit by Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to adopt a new approach toward the Soviets. "He (Trudeau) felt the United States was wrong, (that) we should be more forthcoming," the official said Sunday. When Reagan heard that, the official said, he "took his glasses off and said, 'Damn it, Pierre. I have said everything. What the hell more can I do to get those guys back to the table? You are telling me we haven't done it?'" U.S. officials said other summit participants — the leaders of Britain, Germany, Italy, France, and Japan — supported the administration's refusal to offer any concessions to get the Soviets back to the table. The summit leaders issued a joint statement Saturday calling for the speedy resumption of nuclear arms talks, which the Soviets broke off last December in the wake of NATO's decision to deploy 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe. The demonstrators in Ireland and in London, where an estimated 50,000 turned out Saturday, also were protesting the deployment decision. Reagan said he didn't believe all demonstrators on Saturday were against him alone. "I don't think yesterday picked out any single individual," he said. "Demonstrations have become a fact of life," he added. "Somehow people have felt that that's the way to express their ideas in a democracy in spite of all the legitimate channels that are open to them." "But I don't think they're speaking for a majority," he continued. "And I think sometimes they are unreasonable in that as yesterday, have any of them ever stopped to think that no one is demonstrating and they are not demonstrating in the nation that has the most nuclear weapons of all?"

Deaf student hopes to find job for summer

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

At 19, Gregg Butler has the calm excitement and confidence that most students have at his age. He enthusiastically shares his hopes to attend law school and to make friends in Pampa. But first the deaf Pampa resident must find a job. A recent graduate of the Austin School for the Deaf, Butler lives with his grandfather, J.W. Bullard of Pampa. He is looking at a possible job with the U.S. Postal Service. Government jobs are often considered more secure and are willing to hire people who are handicapped. But such a job may not be open until September and Butler wants a job to carry him through at least until then. Butler's aunt, Quannah McIlveene, and Helen Dimmler, a Pampa woman skilled with sign language, are helping in his search for work. The two women early in June at a church service where Dimmler was showing sign language to children. Although Dimmler has known Butler for less than a week, she speaks as if she knows him very well. "He loves hard work and he loves to use his hands," she observed. "He's a nondrinker and very clean." Butler is currently helping his grandfather with plumbing. "But he wants more," McIlveene said. "And he's willing to learn." Dimmler noted "Any time anyone can show him how, he can do it. He's good at plumbing, carpentry and painting." Although he knows how to operate computers and is familiar with the BASIC computer language, Butler said he prefers a job where he can dress casually and work with his hands. Butler is willing to work as an apprentice to learn a skill. "He wants to be a helper," Dimmler said. Butler graduated 15th out of a class of 88 at the Austin School for the Deaf. He plans to attend an institution at Big Spring which prepares deaf people for work or study in a hearing world. "He has a real good outlook on what he wants," Dimmler observed. "And that's what we're trying to do."

McIlveene said Friday that she visited with Pampa post office officials and that she plans to meet with the Texas Employment Commission and the Texas Commission for the Deaf. Butler has lived in Pampa for nearly two months. But finding a social life or other deaf friends has not been easy. He has known his girlfriend, Judy Comeaux for about a year-and-a-half. A graduate of the Austin school, she lives in Freeport. He plans to visit her some time this summer. "They are trying to get her to go to Big Spring also," McIlveene said. "But, first things first." "You can't have a good time without a job," Butler signs. "The job comes first. The good times, second." According to Dimmler, Butler isn't alone. "When I first came to town, I wanted to see what I could do to help," she said. "My first thing was to try to get deaf people in town to form a club." While she found school activities for deaf children, finding involvement for deaf teens and adults has been harder.

Walesa says Solidarity to 'carry on'

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa says Solidarity will carry on its struggle against Poland's Communist authorities despite the arrest of a major figure in the underground movement for worker's rights.

Authorities on Sunday announced the arrest of Bogdan Lis, a close friend and former aide of Solidarity founder Walesa and the most important underground figure captured since the military crackdown against the union in December 1981.

Walesa said the seizure of Lis, 31, was a great loss, but that Solidarity would nevertheless "carry on for another 50 years."

Walesa, contacted by telephone at his apartment in the Baltic port of Gdansk, said he last met secretly with Lis about six weeks ago. He declined to elaborate "for security reasons."

Lis sat on Solidarity's five-man fugitive Temporary Coordinating Commission, known by its Polish initials TKK. He represented Gdansk, birthplace of the now-outlawed union which, during its brief period of legitimacy, was the only free trade union in the Soviet bloc.

A former member of the Communist Party, Lis was considered the No. 2 figure in the underground after Zbigniew Bujak, the elected chairman of Solidarity's Warsaw regional chapter before the military crackdown. Bujak remains at large.

State-run Polish television announced the arrest of Lis on its main evening newscast, but did not say when he was captured or give any details.

"The Gdansk security service has arrested Bogdan Lis. He was a member of the National Commission of the former Solidarity," the report said. "In hiding since the imposition of martial law, Lis was a member of the so-called TKK."

Walesa said the arrest of Lis "is a great loss because he was a good activist. Still, we can manage."

"To teach them a lesson, we shall put three men on our commission (from each region) instead of one, and by using this tactic, we shall be able to carry on for another 50 years," said Walesa.

The capture of Lis followed intense police action to discourage support for the Solidarity movement's call for a boycott of local elections June 17.

Union leaders say a big turnout for the elections, the first since the creation of Solidarity, would legitimize suppression of the union. In Poland, as in other Soviet-bloc countries, candidates are carefully screened by Communist authorities and a voter turnout of about 99 percent is expected to be reported.

The state-run news media has run dispatches recently about police successes against the underground.

Among them were the reported discovery of an illegal printing plant in Warsaw and the arrest of 15 people linked with it, and the detention of seven people accused of putting up boycott posters in Tomaszow, Mazowiecki in central Poland.

Officials to investigate nursing home death

SAVOY, Texas (AP) — State health officials were to launch an investigation today to determine how cleaning fluid ended up down the throats of five nursing home patients, including an elderly woman who died after drinking what was thought to be cranberry juice.

Dorie Emerson, 83, died after she was fed two glasses of an industrial-strength cleaning solvent with dinner Friday night at the Savoy Nursing Home in Savoy, northeast of Dallas, officials said.

A second woman, Emma Zuver, 57, was reported in satisfactory condition Sunday at a Denison hospital with second-degree burns to her mouth and throat. She was fed two glasses of the cleaning fluid, family members told the Dallas Morning News.

Three other patients who drank the cleaning fluid did not have any side effects and were not hospitalized, said nursing home administrator Joan Pierce, who called the incident a "freak accident."

Ms. Pierce said that remodeling in the kitchen had been "chaotic" and that cranberry juice may have been mixed up with chemicals used by a painting crew.

She refused to identify the liquid but said it was "non-toxic, non-corrosive, non-flammable cleaning solution."

However, a Texoma Medical Center nursing supervisor told The News the liquid was corrosive and that Mrs. Zuver suffered burns in her throat from drinking it.

"We're watching her throat. She drank a caustic material, so we're watching for burns throughout," said the nursing supervisor, who was not identified.

The Dallas County medical examiner's office completed on Sunday an autopsy on Mrs. Emerson, but authorities said it could be several weeks to determine the exact cause of her death.

Mrs. Emerson was paralyzed from a stroke and required constant care. Bill Johnson, the assistant administrator of Fannin County Hospital in Bonham, where Mrs. Emerson was taken, said she had been given two glasses of the fluid before she died.

"At this point, we do not know if there's a direct cause-and-effect relationship between what happened and the death of the patient."

House taking up immigration reform bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is facing a tough election-year vote on curbing the influx of illegal aliens, legislation that has divided two key Democratic constituencies — organized labor and the growing Hispanic population.

The vote, tentatively scheduled for later today, could clear the way for a full-scale debate on the so-called Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill, a major issue in recent Democratic presidential primaries. Or, the House could limit discussion of numerous proposed changes in the measure.

If full debate is permitted, arguments are expected to focus on two provisions: one that would allow millions of illegal aliens in America to legalize their status and another to fine employers who knowingly hire illegals.

The measure reaches the floor after months of delay — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill twice postponed action — and amid an expressed lack of enthusiasm from the Democratic leadership.

President Reagan has come out in favor of the Senate-passed version of the legislation, which is tougher than the House measure.

The Democrats are split on the matter, which has become a political hot potato in an election year. Lawmakers are aware of the growing strength of Hispanic voters and organized labor's backing of sanctions against employers.

In other action on Capitol Hill this week, the Senate plans to resume debate on a $291 billion defense package.

Father dies in rescuing daughter from lake

DALLAS (AP) — A 44-year-old man who didn't know how to swim gave his life to save his drowning daughter by diving into a lake to rescue her, fire officials said.

Cornelio Aguinaga disappeared below the surface of the Old Fishing Hole on Sunday, moments after he managed to pull his 17-year-old daughter from the water and hand her to another man aiding in the rescue.

Family members said Aguinaga, the father of 10, dove into deep water when his daughter, Yolanda, fell into a deep underwater hole.

Aguinaga's body was recovered three hours later, about 40 yards from shore in 35 feet of water.

Fire officials said that Yolanda was uninjured and did not require medical treatment. One of her brothers who tried to save her also had to be rescued but was not injured.

"He reached his daughter and saved her, but was unable to save himself," said Dallas fire Captain Wayne Haygood.

Gene Garza of Combes, a bystander, said that he dove into the water with his cousin, Raul, to help rescue the girl and her brother but were unable to find the father.

"We were exhausted getting the boy and girl out, so we couldn't save the man," Garza said. "The wife was pleading with me to go back in, but there was nothing we could do. We tried our best, but I wish we could have saved the man."

Aguinaga, a native of Guadalajara, Mexico, was a landscaper. His seven sons and three daughters, ranging in age from 7 to 22, were working with him during the summer.

Family members who had accompanied Aguinaga on a Sunday afternoon outing told rescuers that the man was unable to swim. He entered the water completely clothed, except for his shoes, they said.

"She started screaming and her father asked, 'Is she playing or is it really happening?'" Marjorie Powell, Aguinaga's employer, said, she was told by the victim's wife, Micaela.

Aguinaga's body was recovered at 8:20 p.m., officials said.

Fort Worth firefighter saves last life Saturday

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Firefighter Bobby Wayne Abshire believed he could make the difference between someone dying and someone living. So, when he was hit and killed by a car while trying to help a stranded motorist, he was doing what came naturally to him.

There was the time when Abshire jumped from a helicopter under fire to pull 23 wounded soldiers to safety during the Vietnam War.

But Abshire, 41, saved his last life early Saturday morning, when the rescue mission he attempted cost him his life.

"I remember one night we were coming home from the ballgame, and a young kid had been hit on a bicycle," his wife Jean told the Fort Worth Star Telegram Saturday. "He had to stop and help. He was always doing that. He'd tell me 'I could be the difference between someone living and someone dying because I know what I'm doing.'"

A fire engineer with the Fort Worth Fire Department, Abshire was killed at 2:30 a.m. Saturday by a car operated by a driver suspected of being drunk.

The car hit him on Airport Freeway in Bedford after Abshire had stopped to assist a stranded motorist.

"It was typical of something he'd do, he'd always stop and help someone," said Fort Worth Fire District Chief Jim Noah, who worked with Abshire for several years in District 13.

"In an emergency when somebody was sick or hurt, he was terrific," added Noah.

Northeast Community Hospital officials said Abshire died of multiple injuries after 3 a.m. after he was brought in by ambulance.

He was on his way home from working late at a second job as an insurance agent when he passed a stranded car, police said.

Bedford police arraigned a 19-year-old suspect on investigative charges of involuntary manslaughter and driving while intoxicated.

"We heard tires squeal and saw the lights," Gary Thomas, 28, whose car had broken down, told the Dallas Morning News. "He yelled 'Watch out,' pushed me off the side of the road and it hit him. He was just one of those nice guys that stops to help anybody."

Police said no one else was injured in the incident.

Abshire served three one-year tours in Vietnam, the first as a Marine foot soldier, the two as a medical evacuation specialist aboard a helicopter, his wife said. He was awarded the Medal of Valor in 1966 by the U.S. Navy.

Freeze kills thousands of palms

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Cities along the Texas coast are considering ways of handling the costly replacement of thousands of stately palm trees, a seaside landmark devastated by a killer frost last December.

The same cold snap plunged the mercury below the freezing mark for days and reduced the multi-million dollar citrus and vegetable industry of the Lower Rio Grande Valley to ruin.

Since then, efforts have been started by city officials, civic groups, businesses and private citizens in Galveston, Corpus Christi and other places to replace the lost palms, some of which were more than 50 years old and stood more than 70 feet tall.

The palms were originally planted during the 1920s by promoters of a South Texas land boom and by owners of citrus orchards who planted them around their fields as a wind break.

Replacing the trees will be a long and costly process, officials said. Some cities don't have the funds to clear out the dead trees, much less replace them.

The Rio Grande Valley Chamber of Commerce is considering replanting the palms, but it will be about two years before the trees will be available in sufficient size and quantity to begin the project, spokeswoman Marge Johnson told the Dallas Times Herald.

In nearby McAllen, City Manager Jose Escamilla said it will take about two years to replace $500,000 worth of dead palms on city property.

Some cities faced with severe economic problems resulting from the killer freeze, such as Pharr where 821 dead trees have been counted, may not replace the palms at all.

"My concern is not to replace them but just to remove them," said City Manager Ray Vela, who added that the city is seeking federal funds for the clearing effort.

In Corpus Christi, where the freeze killed 1,400 palms on city property, the city has launched a "Palms Up" campaign to raise money for the replacement trees. The city has asked local citizens and businesses to put up $300,000 to help pay for 1,100 new trees, which will cost $300 each.

Ted Turner Sr., owner of a Corpus Christi nursery, said the freeze was the worst in his 30 years in the nursery business and killed 50 percent of the city's palms.

Farther north in Galveston, the city has replaced 140 of the 300 to 400 palms killed in the freeze, said Bernard Davis, director of the city's Parks and Recreation Department.

Six killed in head-on crash

SAVOY, Texas (AP) — Six people were killed when a van crossed into incoming traffic and collided with a Datsun in an alcohol-related accident, the Department of Public Safety said.

Five of the six in the small car were killed on impact Sunday night and the sixth person died as authorities rushed to cut the top off the car, a Fannin County sheriff's dispatcher who asked not to be identified said.

DPS spokesman Larry Todd said authorities planned to file charges against the driver of the van, a Denison man who remained in serious condition today at the Texoma Medical Center with multiple head and internal injuries.

Todd said DPS trooper R. L. Dorrough reported that the driver was intoxicated.

The accident occurred just east of Savoy on U.S. Highway 82, Todd said, at about 6:20 p.m.

The victims, all of Ravenna, were identified as Harry L.

Senate primary runoff recount continues

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic Party officials say they expect the recounts in the runoff for the U.S. Senate nomination to be completed this week as more counties recheck their vote tallies today and Tuesday.

A spokesman for State Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin said Sunday that more than half the votes in the runoff have been recounted, showing Doggett holding about a 1,000-vote over opponent U.S. Rep. Kent Hance.

"We are somewhere around 1,000 ahead," said Rich Paul, Doggett's press secretary. "I'd rather be on this side than the other side. I can't imagine paying for a recount and losing votes."

Doggett finished just 467 votes ahead of Hance out of more than 970,000 votes cast in the runoff, according to results compiled by the Secretary of State. Hance, a Lubbock conservative, then asked the Democratic Party for the recount.

Both campaigns have had representatives monitoring the recount, which party officials say should be completed by midweek.

Paul said recounts have been completed in most of the state's major urban counties, including Tarrant, Dallas, Harris and Travis. Doggett had been strong in the cities, while Hance ran strong in urban areas in the runoff.

Hance aides said no one was available Sunday to discuss the recount.

On Saturday, Hance spokesman Craig Tounget conceded that Doggett's margin appeared to be increasing.

"We're not catching up, yet," he said. "Actually, we've lost a little ground."

However, Tounget said, "There is still a great chance it can change."

More recounts were scheduled for Monday, Paul said, "with a smattering on Monday and Tuesday."

Hance gave the Texas Democratic Party $28,000 to begin the recount. Party officials have estimated that it could cost the candidate between $50,000 and $70,000 to recount the ballots in all 254 counties as Hance requested.

The winner of the Doggett-Hance race will face Republican U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm in November for the Senate seat being vacated by retiring GOP Sen. John Tower.

Immune deficient youngster is much improved

HOUSTON (AP) — When T. J. Davis arrived in Houston last December he was a 7-month-old youngster who seemed unlikely to reach his first birthday.

He is a victim of severe combined immune deficiency, a condition in which the body has no defenses against germs. An infection already had taken hold in his face and T.J.'s cheek was twisted and enlarged, almost closing one eye.

His parents, Terry and Linda Davis, brought T. J. to the Texas Children's Hospital here in a last-ditch effort to save his young life. He had been treated at hospitals near his Caldwell, Idaho home, but few medical centers have the experience to treat his rare immune condition.

T. J., just a month before his first birthday, now is much improved and is developing as any other youngster.

His infection has been reduced. He is learning to walk and even run. And he now is beginning to eat ordinary food.

And he may be on his way toward a permanent cure.

Within days after his arrival at the Texas Children's Hospital Feb. 7, T. J. was given a transfusion of a specially treated bone marrow.

It was hoped that the transplanted marrow would take root in T.J.'s bone and start producing the lymphocytes that the youngster needed to fight infection.

Marrow transplant is the best way to treat SCIDS, doctors believe, but until recently such transplants required marrow that precisely matched the tissue type of the host. Once the T cells are killed, the marrow is injected into the host.

T. J. received 2½ ounces of treated marrow from his father and doctors said it would take at least six months to determine if the marrow worked.

A similar transplant was used on David, Houston's famed "boy in a bubble," but it was unsuccessful. David, whose last name was never announced, died after spending all but a few days of his years of life in a sterile plastic bubble. Doctors said his death was caused by an adverse reaction to the bone marrow transplant.

T. J., however, has been progressing well, according to hospital officials.

Baby smuggling trial expected to begin today

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A Utah woman who has described herself as "an angel of mercy" was scheduled to go on trial today in federal court on charges she smuggled Mexican babies illegally across the border for adoption.

Nelda Karen Colwell of Layton, Utah, is accused of smuggling two Mexican babies into the United States for adoption by two Utah couples, and is believed by law enforcement officials to have helped at least 50 Utah couples adopt Mexican infants since 1980.

She has waived her right to a jury trial and asked U.S. District Judge George P. Kazen to decide her guilt or innocence. Attorneys expected testimony to begin this afternoon.

Mrs. Colwell, a homemaker and member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, was indicted with three other women April 10 and accused of running an infant smuggling ring.

The three other women — Laredo residents Sanjuana "Cucu" Martinez-Lopez, Celestina "Celina" Rios-Rivera and Juanita Melendez-Calderon — pleaded guilty to lesser charges last month in exchange for their testimony against Mrs. Colwell.

The attorney for Mrs. Colwell, George Handy of Utah, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the trial will pit the "absolute truth" of his client's testimony against the three government witnesses.

"I have no doubt there was baby smuggling going on and they already have the smuggler, but Mrs. Colwell had nothing to do with it," Handy said. "If the absolute truth were told, (the government's witnesses) would testify that Mrs. Colwell would have nothing to do with bringing a baby in illegally."

The government charged that Mrs. Colwell was on the receiving end of a smuggling operation, finding adoptive couples in Utah willing to fly to Laredo and pick up children.

The children, the government claims, were born in a Nuevo Laredo birthing clinic and then smuggled across the border by Ms. Rios-Rivera and Ms. Martinez-Lopez. Ms. Melendez-Calderon, a midwife who worked at the clinic, then falsified the infants' birth certificates to indicate the children were born in the United States, prosecutors contend.

Formal adoption proceedings were then begun in the home state of the adoptive couples.

The Star-Telegram quoted a source close to a two-year Immigration and Naturalization Service investigation as saying authorities believe at least 50 Mormons in Utah have received Mexican children through the operation.

Accused bomber was 'a very sick boy,' family says

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of setting 20 bombs in three Midwest states was a "very sick boy" who was only recently released from a Texas mental institution, according to a close relative.

Earl Steven Karr, 24, was charged in connection with the random bombings on Saturday, just hours after he was seriously injured when a bomb exploded in his car in Mason City, Iowa.

He was transferred for treatment at a St. Paul, Minn. burn center. Officers who removed Karr from his flaming auto said he gave them a Houston address, Mason City Police Capt. Duane Jewell said Saturday.

A woman who agreed to be identified only as "a close family member," told The Associated Press that Karr grew up in Chicago, a member of a "typical middle class family," but that he had been under psychiatric care since he was age 6 or 7.

The woman said she became concerned about Karr after he came to Houston to visit her last September.

"I tried to have Earl committed to the Harris County Psychiatric Hospital and had to tell them that he was a very sick boy and I was afraid he would hurt himself or others," the woman said. "They took him in for observation for three weeks. Then they wanted to treat him only as an out-patient."

She said she finally persuaded authorities to place Karr in the Austin State Hospital in Austin, Texas, but that he was released within two weeks.

"I begged and fought and pleaded and nobody listened," she said.

The woman said psychiatrists concluded that Karr suffered from a "personality disorder" that had to do with "not developing fully."

"He hated life and life has been terrible for him," she said.

She said Karr became interested in explosives and had books on the subject, but that she had never seen him with the equipment to make bombs. She said she didn't know of any particular group against whom Karr had a grudge.

"He had no friends," she added. "He's a loner."

A prosecutor in Minneapolis said Karr had been living in a rooming house in downtown Minneapolis for a short time before his injury and arrest. Officers found pipe bomb parts in the rooming house. They believe he was injured when a bomb went off in his rented car while he was in Mason City.

Karr has been charged with illegal possession of an unregistered firearm in connection with the bomb parts found in his room. The federal prosecutor, U.S. attorney James M. Rosenbaum, said he believes Karr is the person who planted more than 20 pipe bombs found in cities.

The pearl brings with it, as the birthstone of June, the promise of health and longevity. Although the pearl is not a stone but an organic product of shell-fish, it is the only gem that does not have to be cut and polished before wearing. It has always been considered to be the gem of modesty and purity and has been believed to have the power or good. The Romans learned of the pearl's beauty from the Egyptians, Persians and Hindus who held the gem in high esteem. The Romans adorned many of their furnishings with pearls. Roman women actually wore them to sleep, as a reminder of their own wealth.

Reaping benefits of oil decontrol

It is worth noting that one element is missing from the discussion of the current Persian Gulf crisis, and worth understanding just why it is missing.

Nobody is especially worried about a U.S. "energy crisis," even if oil from the Persian Gulf is cut off entirely.

This is not to dismiss the consequences that might arise in the event of such a cutoff. While the U.S. is hardly dependent at all on Persian Gulf oil, Japan and Western European countries are. The U.S. is a signatory to international treaties that could well require us to "share" oil with these countries if their Persian Gulf supplies are eliminated or interrupted.

There is a danger that an oil cutoff could lead to the kind of heightening of international tension that could impel the U.S. government, probably unwisely, to become more heavily involved, perhaps with military force. If Persian Gulf oil supplies are cut off, world oil prices are likely to rise, though it's almost impossible to forecast exactly how much.

The kind of shortage that led to gas lines, confusion and near-panic in 1974 and 1979, however, is probably not in the cards for the U.S.

The major reason for this turn of events has to do with government policy, chiefly the happy absence of rigid controls and regulations on petroleum. When President Reagan decontrolled the price of oil 10 days after taking office, he did the single most helpful thing he could to avert a future "energy crisis."

Most authorities now agree that the maze of controls erected in response to the oil embargo of 1974 did more to worsen the crisis than to alleviate it. With so many controls in place in 1979, response to the cutoff of Iranian oil met with a rigid, bureaucratic, inflexible and generally inappropriate response - thus the gas lines.

Since petroleum prices were decontrolled in 1981, U.S. reliance on Persian Gulf oil has steadily declined and OPEC has nearly disappeared as an effective entity. This is due in part to increased supplies from Mexico and Alaska, but also due to increased domestic production unleashed by price decontrol. Prices have shown squiggles upward and downward, but have definitely not gone through the roof, as many opponents of decontrol had predicted they would.

A long-term interruption of Persian Gulf oil could create long-term problems, to be sure. We do not face, however, the immediate prospect of gasoline lines and rationing in this country, no matter what happens in the Persian Gulf in the short run.

Instead of trying to "solve" the problem in advance by regulation, government has permitted the infinitely more flexible and responsive mechanisms available in the marketplace to operate for petroleum products. How many more real and potential problems might be alleviated or eliminated if government would have the foresight to return them to the voluntary sector of society?

Memories of 'rolling paradise'

Of the glorious old Red Train I hadn't thought in a coon's age, and suddenly there it was, all red, orange, and black, stretched out lazily in the sun like a benevolent, if gigantic, garden snake. And how come that lump in my throat, anyway?

The Red Train was our family's name, thirty-odd years ago, for the Southern Pacific Railroad's Daylight train: a thing of gaudy colors and inexpressible power. In the late '40s we would drive in from Dallas or Houston - an event that the Red Train brought off with obliging grandeur.

I confess it: always I was a little afraid of the Red Train, especially of the terrible white-faced steam locomotive with the six-foot drive wheels - afraid and exhilarated by it, as were the Northmen by their warrior gods.

What a long, long time ago it was! The SP took off all the Red Trains back in the '50s, when people stopped riding them and started driving or flying - for the perverse pleasure of going faster, or, still worse, alone.

It was an Event of the first order, then, when the Louisiana World's Fair Daylight train, under sponsorship of a West Coast train buffs' society, huffed into Dallas Union Station, bound for New Orleans. Hundreds puffed down to the platform for a closeup look at the old beauty, twelve cars long. A chair car and a smoker were open; the locomotive cab was likewise accessible. The Murchison boys sat proudly in the engineer's seat; for a moment, if only in fantasy, they were as mighty as this mightiest of mortals.

Well, I mean, it's heartening, isn't it? Here we are, in the age of the space shuttle, and people are clambering, mouths agape and eyes awater, through a passenger train drawn by a steam engine. Could there yet be hope for the race?

The train - most of all the passenger train - is unique among forms of transportation. It is loved for its lovable self.

An airplane is in its own way a splendid thing. But what small boy ever grew up waving to planes as they flew over his home? For that matter, name one ballad about an airplane or a pilot. (And I don't mean "Lucky Lindy" which is sheer Tin Pan Alley.)

The plane, except to passengers and crew, is mostly an abstraction - a hum of engines, a glint of metal. Still more so the ship, which hardly anyone ever sees anymore, now that passenger liners are defunct.

Ah, but the train! As Lucius Beebe has written: "For three full generations the railroad was the essential tangible fact of American life. With the exception of a very few mileposts of the years such as the Dred Scott decision, woman suffrage, and the boll weevil, almost every fact of life in the American record has been in some way affected by the railroad."

Not only was the train unutterably powerful - so was it gorgeous. Beebe, a connoisseur of such, adored the diamond smokestacks and the ornamentation of the 1850s and '60s but considered the locomotive in general "the most beautiful and compelling machine ever devised by man."

Fittingly the depots built to receive these titans at journey's end were mansions, utterly unlike those garish, workaday airports everyone hates - or should.

The passenger train itself could be lordly, as was the New York Central's 20th Century Limited. There were drawing rooms and staterooms. Valets, barbers and maids awaited the passenger's beck. The dining-car tables boasted starched linens, fresh and flowers and porterhouse steak. The conductor was a pink flower in his buttonhole. Here was a kind of rolling Paradise.

I don't know, honestly, whether the Red Train itself was ever this elegant. Probably not. By comparison the version reconstituted for the Louisiana World's Fair, while showy on the outside, was downhome ordinary on the inside.

But a lot depends on what you're comparing things to. Compared to a 727, or an inter-city bus, the Red Train, being just that - a train - is the wonder of the age. May it flash forever through the forests and meadowlands of memory, blowing a horn blast more stirring than Roland's.

Today in History

Today is Monday, June 11, the 163rd day of 1984. There are 203 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 11, 1947, sugar rationing came to an end in the United States.

On this date: In 1942, the United States and the Soviet Union signed a lend-lease agreement to aid the Soviet war effort in World War II.

In 1970, the United States presence in Libya came to an end as the last detachment left Wheelus Air Base, which was the only major American military facility left in North Africa.

That's what cameras are for

Everybody is in a snarling mood these days in Washington. The latest hassle seems to be over television coverage in the House of Representatives. A group of Republican conservatives were using TV as a method of attacking liberal Democrats when they weren't there. While the House was not in session, the conservatives appeared at the podium and launched into vitriol against the opposition. Since the House rules demanded that the cameras stay on the speaker, the C-span cable viewer had no idea the Democrats being attacked were absent.

This enraged Speaker Tip O'Neill, who ordered the cameras to show that the Republicans were addressing their remarks to an empty House. This, in return, enraged the conservatives, who thought they had found a new way of getting a lot of free TV time to sock it to their liberal colleagues.

Since Congressmen are now in show business, many of them are putting TV scriptwriters on their staff.

I was in Rep. Sadness's office during a "story conference" last week.

The head writer said, "Congressman, the boys think you should attack Rep. Steeple for his stand on wanting to ban handguns in elementary schools."

"Is that Steeple's position on handguns?"

"We don't know and neither does the public, so whatever you say Steeple stands for is what they will believe."

"Suppose Steeple gets up after me to defend himself?"

"You're not going to attack him while Congress is in session. You'll do it after 'legislative hours' while no one is there, but the TV cameras are still rolling."

"Tip O'Neill is wise to us and has ordered the cameras to show an empty House while I'm speaking," Sadness said.

"We think we've solved that problem. For a few bucks we persuade one of the night cleaning people to sit at a desk and scowl the whole time you're questioning Steeple's patriotism. Keep pointing your finger at the cleaner as you accuse him of every dirty commie trick in the book."

"But how can the cleaning man be Steeple?"

"You're never going to say he is Steeple. But by looking at him with contempt while you're speaking, viewers are just going to assume he is. Nobody knows what Steeple looks like except for a few voters in his district."

"What happens when I'm finished hitting Steeple below the belt? Does the cleaning man come up and respond?"

"He can't answer you if he isn't Steeple. He'd be arrested for impersonating a congressman. But if he slinks out with his head bowed and his broom between his legs, the TV audience will believe everything you said about Steeple was true."

The congressman said, "It's a great idea. I know a cleaning man who looks like an unshaven Attila the Hun. He'd be perfect for the Steeple role. Suppose Tip O'Neill finds out what we've done and he attacks me."

"We're counting on it, because if Tip loses his temper, his words can be 'taken down' for violating House rules against personal attacks on members," the chief writer said. "Then we've got ourselves a real TV show."

"Let me take a look at the script." "Be as mean as you want," the writer said. "When you finish, yield to your pal Vanderlip, who will get up and congratulate you on your brilliant analysis of what the Democrats are unwittingly doing to help sell out the country."

"After Steeple, can I smear Congressman Rigor for voting against poison gas?"

"That's what the congressional TV cameras are for." (c) 1984, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Social Security still not solvent

By JOHN SLOAN

In December 1977, Congress enacted the first of the recent Social Security bail-out plans. That solution would "restore the fiscal soundness of the cash - benefit program for the remainder of this century and into the early years of the next one," according to the 1978 annual report of the Social Security Board of Trustees.

By 1980, that same board of trustees said in its annual report that the assets of the Old - Age and Survivor Insurance Trust Fund "would soon become insufficient to pay benefits" and "changes in the law are needed."

In 1983, the National Commission on Social Security came up with a new plan - much of it in payroll tax increases. Yet despite the tax increases that have already gone into effect and those projected for the remainder of the decade, Treasury Secretary Regan said recently that Social Security will be in need of fixing again before the end of the 1980s. The Heritage Foundation reports that a former chief actuary of the Social Security system, A. Haeworth Robertson, thinks the system is in such bad shape that to honor obligations to today's workers, payroll taxes of over 40 percent may be required. That hits the small - business owner's hot button.

Payroll taxes are the most regressive and discriminatory of all taxes. They are taxes on jobs. Small business is the principal source of new jobs in the U.S.; but whenever a small - business owner hires a new worker, the government immediately slaps a tax on that employee.

The payroll tax already accounts for 30 percent of all federal revenues - up from only 10 percent in 1952. Because small companies tend to be labor - intensive, a much greater percentage of their total taxes are payroll taxes. A survey for the National Federation of Independent Business on the impact of taxes on the small, independent business revealed that payroll taxes made up more than 70 percent of the tax liabilities of the five "typical" companies studied. In some cases, small - business people pay as much as 90 percent or more of their tax burden in payroll taxes.

For several years, the NFIB has been urging the adoption of a S.S. reform plan to decrease the reliance on payroll taxes and to make the system solvent. Under the NFIB plan, the system would be divided into two parts. The first part would be a retirement insurance program. Those who pay S.S. taxes, could expect to receive all of the money they and their employers put into the system - plus interest - through an annuity insurance plan. This step would save billions of dollars: While few people realize it, most Americans now in retirement get back six to seven times the money they contribute to S.S. The result is that the ratio of retirees to workers is increasing rapidly. In 1960 there were 16 people "supporting" each retiree. Today, three people are working for each person collecting S.S.

The second part of the NFIB plan would pay a supplemental retirement benefit to those whose Social Security check, combined with all other sources of revenue, is insufficient to maintain a minimum standard of living. That portion of the program would be funded from general revenues - income taxes - because all Americans should assume responsibility for supplemental retirement benefits for the needy.

The election year offers us the opportunity to make Social Security reform, and payroll - tax policy, major issues in congressional campaigns throughout the country. Small - business owners should be giving legislators and candidates a crash course on the impact of payroll taxes. Those lawmakers who don't get the message should be given a falling grade in November.

John Sloan is President of the National Federation of Independent Business, representing more than half a million small - business men and women.

Congress nearing completion of work on the 'sodbuster bill'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress may finally be ready to do something about the long-term soil erosion problem that has become a creeping threat to America's ability to feed itself and the world.

House and Senate negotiators will get together next week to work out their differences on an ambitious new conservation program aimed at curbing the washing away of the topsoil which is the basis for the world's largest food production machine.

Known as the "sodbuster bill," it would deny federal farm program benefits to producers who plow up land designated as particularly subject to erosion. One version also would create a new three-year program paying farmers rent on fragile land they agree to idle for seven to 15 years.

Senate negotiators will come to the table with the most lenient version of the bill. Theirs would penalize farmers only for the crops actually grown on highly erodible land, and it includes no payments for idling such acreage.

The House enters the discussions with a much tougher bill that would deny any federal help — price supports, crop insurance, disaster payments and the like — for any farm on which even a single acre of delicate land is plowed.

And the House version, pushed by Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., would authorize $225 million to pay farmers to plant grass or trees on their fragile acreage under seven- to 15-year contracts.

Both House and Senate committee aides said they do not anticipate great difficulty in reaching a middle ground.

The two sides probably will settle on a bill that denies a farmer benefits for all of the particular crop which he plants on land designated by the Soil Conservation Service as highly erodible.

For example, a farmer who plants 100 acres of corn, 10 acres of it on newly broken erodible ground, would receive no program benefits that year for any of his corn. He could, however, still receive benefits on his wheat or other crops, so long as they do not involve acreage deemed delicate. And he would not be penalized for delicate land already under cultivation before the new law went into effect.

The Senate is likely to accept some form of the House's "conservation reserve" program, aides said. The only question is how much money to allocate. Negotiators are likely to go along with a pared-down temporary reserve program, with the assumption that a more long-term version will be included as part of the four-year 1985 farm bill.

The Reagan administration supports the sodbuster provisions of the measure but opposes the conservation reserve because of its cost at a time when budget deficits are out of control.

Past government conservation efforts, which have failed to keep pace with the problem, have used the "carrot" approach: offering farmers technical assistance and cost sharing to implement erosion-stopping measures.

The sodbuster bill represents an abrupt policy turn to using the "stick" of penalties.

That rather severe step is needed because of the growing seriousness of the problem, Jones says. U.S. farmland is eroding at 14 tons per acre annually, while natural processes replace only about 5 tons per acre. The loss causes soil to be less productive, forcing farmers to increase their uses of fertilizer at a time when they can little afford it. And the soil washed downstream pollutes water and causes reservoirs and waterways eventually to silt in.

"This bill addresses a here-and-now problem that is a clear and present threat to our future ability to produce," Jones said during House floor debate last month.

The alarm stems in part from a recent update of the National Resources Inventory which found that between 1977 and 1982 U.S. land under cultivation had grown by 8 million acres to 421 million acres. Half of the newly plowed land was classified as highly erodible.

"These highly erodible lands seem to be eluding most methods of conservation treatment as well as the services of traditional government conservation programs," noted a House Agriculture Committee report. "In many cases, the cost-effective conservation tillage systems, the most promising soil conservation technology, are not extensively used on highly erodible land."

Theresa's back - so are the blues

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rolling Stones played in her gritty basement tavern before they were famous, and for 34 years music lovers made pilgrimages to the South Side to see legends in the making.

After a brief, forced intermission, Theresa's Tavern is back — with music six nights a week, all of it blues.

The new club is a few blocks from the down — the — steps "home" where Theresa Needham introduced some of the genre's greatest musicians before her establishment was shut down last fall when she lost her lease.

The "mother of the blues," a feisty 72 years old, is clearly happy to be back in business.

Last week, on the one night when the microphones, amplifiers and even the customers were quiet, she took some time out to talk about the old nightclub and the new one.

"All the musicians that amounted to anything at all at one time or another worked down in that basement. All the musicians except old Old Man Muddy (Waters) and B.B. King have worked there," she said.

The blues were born on the Mississippi Delta, but Theresa's provided a stage for some of its greats — guitarist Buddy Guy, harmonica players "Big" Walter Horton and James Cotton, pianist Otis Spann and Paul Butterfield, leader of one of the first white bands to be accepted by the blues community.

The music stopped when Mrs. Needham's landlord, who took over the six-story apartment building in 1981, refused to renew her lease. William Walls Jr. said at the time that he wanted to renovate the building but couldn't obtain a special loan for residential properties if he had a commercial tenant.

Mrs. Needham said she couldn't renew her liquor license without a lease.

"I admire her establishment," Walls said then. "But I can't afford to keep alive her legend and monument."

After the club closed, Mrs. Needham spent a cold, quiet winter looking for another place.

Most of her support during that time came from benefit concerts staged in blues bars on Chicago's North Side, where college students have supplanted the audiences that once packed the small, smoky taverns that dotted the predominantly black South Side.

And when Theresa's returned two weeks ago, Junior Wells, Florence Montgomery, Muddy Waters

Jr. and a cast of other blues dignitaries were on hand for the grand opening. As always, the owner also cooked the ribs.

Repair shops have increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans holding on to their automobiles for an extra year or two are giving a boost to the auto repair industry, while putting a sizable dent in both new and used car sales.

The number of automotive repair shops increased by nearly 10 percent between 1977 and 1982, Census Bureau reports show. During the same period, used car dealers declined by 13 percent and new car sales operations fell 16 percent.

Responding to high prices and interest rates in recent years, Americans have tended to keep their autos longer than in the past, according to figures collected by the American Automobile Association and the R.L. Polk Co.

Polk, which compiles statistics on motor vehicles, estimated the age of the average auto in the United States at 6.5 years. The firm says that's the longest Americans have held onto their cars since 1950.

And at AAA, Richard White estimated that the average age of the cars on U.S. highways increased from 5.7 years in 1972 to 7.2 years in 1982.

The dramatic recovery in the U.S. auto industry since 1983 was not covered by the data. So far this year, domestic cars have been selling at an annual rate of 8.6 million. At the bottom of the

Homebuyers seek, receive loans that have fixed rates

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — As interest rates rise, the wisdom, fears and long memories of homebuyers seem to be confirmed. A large number of them have been choosing fixed-rate loans, when they can get them.

You might not think this would be so after viewing the efforts of lenders, who seek to avoid long-term commitments at set rates — the kind of loans that got so many of them into trouble in recent years.

And if you looked back at statements by lenders two years ago you might be convinced that the fixed-rate loans no longer are available. They were dismissed at that time as relics never to be seen again.

Homebuyers, however, have remained determined. Seeing a future of rising prices and higher interest rates, they seem to be setting anchors to ride out the storms. And a stable monthly mortgage installment is one way to do it.

A survey by the National Association of Home Builders shows that 63 percent of single-family buyers last year got fixed-rate loans, despite offers of substantial starting discounts on adjustable loans.

The tendency to seek fixed-rate loans in spite of the enticement offered on adjustable loans suggests that many buyers anticipated the problems that could develop from the latter, even if lenders did not.

As interest rates rise, those problems are becoming more evident each day, and for an obvious reason: Most young families buy the most expensive home they feel they can afford.

When interest rates rise on adjustable mortgages, many families find themselves trying to hold onto a house they no longer can afford.

The Home Builder survey suggests how critical this situation can be.

Had payments been 25 percent higher, the survey revealed, only 13 percent of 1983 buyers would have bought the house they did. Forty-six percent would have bought a less expensive house and 34 percent said they would have remained in their existing home.

In many instances, it appears, decisions were based on the absolute maximum the family could afford, leaving no room for increases in interest, taxes, insurance, heating, repairs or other costs.

The potential danger is more obvious when it is realized that higher interest charges are often accompanied by higher costs in general, an experience long to be remembered by homebuyers in the 1970s.

Fears that adjustable rate mortgages will cause severe problems for both lenders and borrowers over the next year are expressed.

Sikh deserters reportedly kill general

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sikh soldiers murdered their commanding officer, a Hindu general, in the eastern state of Bihar and more than 500 of them hijacked buses and trucks to head for embattled Punjab, a newspaper reported today.

The Defense Ministry said in a prepared statement late Sunday that a few Sikh soldiers had deserted and joined Sikh civilians heading for Punjab. It said Brig. R.S. Puri was shot by "an unknown miscreant" at Ramgarh, near the border with Uttar Pradesh state.

The independent Statesman newspaper quoted a police superintendent as saying a section of the Sikh Regimental Center in Ramgarh killed Puri on Sunday. It said the deserting soldiers shouted "Go to Punjab" as they left the center.

The soldiers reportedly were protesting last week's army assault on the holiest Sikh shrine, the Golden Temple complex in Amritsar, which routed heavily armed Sikh militants. The government has said 300 to 400 people perished during the assault. Army and police sources told The Associated Press that about 1,000 people died.

The Statesman said a colonel, a lieutenant-colonel and several members of Puri's family were wounded in the mutiny. It said heavy firing broke out between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. Sunday, and could still be heard three hours later inside the Sikh Regimental Center when a Statesman reporter arrived.

The newspaper quoted witnesses as saying that after the shooting broke out, soldiers left the center and seized private buses and trucks at gunpoint on the National Highway.

At least 35 vehicles with soldiers left the center shouting slogans against the government and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, the report said.

Army headquarters in New Delhi sent reinforcements to quell the rebellion, and the soldiers remaining in the center surrendered Sunday afternoon, the newspaper said.

India's 13 million Sikhs, most of whom live in northern Punjab state, comprise less than 2 percent of the more than 70 million population.

Dear Abby
This Father's Day, give your love along with your present

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Next Sunday (June 17) is Father's Day. Many believe Father's Day was invented by the merchants who saw a way to play on the sentiments of the buying public (after all, almost everybody has a father) and stimulate business. (Look what Mother's Day has done for the florists, greeting card people and retail merchants!)

Regardless of whose idea it was, it's a good one that has taken hold, and continues to bring joy to dear old Dad.

Last year, my Father's Day column brought a surprising number of requests from editors of church bulletins, newsletters and other publications asking permission to reprint it. Many readers wrote to say that they had put my suggestions to use, and found it more appreciated than any gift they had given Dad.

I was encouraged to run it annually, so here it is:

DEAR ABBY: The week before Father's Day, you wrote: "Don't give Dad another tie, shirt or wallet; give him something he will cherish forever—a letter telling him how much he means to you."

Well, I composed a letter on the bus to work that very morning, typed it on my lunch hour and mailed it to my father in a beautiful card that evening. He was actually my stepfather, but he had been more of a father to me than my real father. I knew it would mean a lot to him, especially since he was in the hospital at the time.

He died on July 5, and I'm so glad I wrote that letter. Now I can live with myself, knowing that he knew how I felt about him.

Thank you so very much for making me put my thoughts of love and gratitude on paper. If this letter helps just one person to do what I did, it was worth writing.
 CLAUDIA IN SAN PABLO, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My father wrote to you at least 12 years ago, and you put his letter in your column. You printed it twice on request. My father had it framed, and when we brought him here to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might be damaged or lost.

When he heard his letter had been framed and hung in the chapel of a cemetery, he said, "What a pity it will be seen only by those for whom it is too late. It would accomplish more on the bulletin boards of high schools and colleges."

Abby, he made me promise that after he died I would write to you and ask you to run it again.

He died one week ago at age 72. Please print it once more for my beloved father.

FAITHFUL READER

DEAR READER: The letter that meant so much to your father has been requested more than any other. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat home alone, loving me just the same.

It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them.

I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have their parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

High blood pressure during pregnancy

By LUELLA KLEIN, M.D.
 President The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

No one really knows why some women get high blood pressure in pregnancy and others do not. Most of the women who get it have never had high blood pressure (preeclampsia) before, and most will never have it again. But when it happens in pregnancy, it's a condition that has to be treated with care.

High blood pressure affects seven out of every 100 women who become pregnant and will affect most of these women during their first pregnancy. Women with the highest risk are those who have their first pregnancy after age 30 or as teenagers. Overweight and diabetic women, those with kidney disease, and daughters of women who had high blood pressure all have higher than normal risks.

If you have chronic high blood pressure before you become pregnant, make sure your doctor knows, because the condition can get worse during pregnancy. It's important for a woman to check with her doctor before she becomes pregnant or as early as possible in pregnancy to let the doctor get a reading against which to compare blood pressure during pregnancy.

With high blood pressure, less of the mother's blood flows to the placenta. This means that less food and oxygen reach the placenta, and the growth of the fetus slows down. If this happens, the fetus may be underweight and may have to be delivered prematurely.

If preeclampsia occurs late in pregnancy, and the baby is delivered near the 36th week, there will be fewer problems because by that time the baby is almost fully developed.

If preeclampsia is detected in mild stages and the mother's blood pressure is controlled by bed rest, the baby shouldn't be affected by high blood pressure.

There are a few warning signs that can help alert you to problems. If you suddenly gain more than two pounds a week or if your face or fingers start swelling, blurred vision or other visual problems, or pains in the upper abdomen, check with your doctor quickly.

Bed rest is the standard treatment for small increases in blood pressure while the only treatment for severe preeclampsia is to deliver the fetus either through induction of labor or by cesarean section.

Once the baby is delivered, your blood pressure usually returns to normal. If you suffer from this condition during one pregnancy, it doesn't mean that it will happen again during later pregnancies.

If you are well nourished, follow your doctor's advice about bed rest, and your blood pressure doesn't go too high, preeclampsia should not cause problems for you or your baby.

Single, free copies of "High Blood Pressure During Pregnancy" are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave., SW, Washington, D.C., 20024.

Scald burns reduced with lower water temperatures

Of the approximately 112,000 people admitted to U.S. hospital emergency rooms with scald burns each year, more than 2,600 of these are caused by hot tap water.

Scald burns from hot tap water tend to be more severe than other scald burns, with about 25 percent of these patients requiring hospitalization, says the Texas Medical Association.

The problem is that many water heaters have been pre-set at the factory at dangerously high temperatures and remain that way in many households.

This poses a particular hazard for children, the elderly, and the physically and mentally disabled.

Most electric water heaters have been pre-set at 150 degrees, and most gas heaters at 140. Studies show that serious burns of adult skin can result from two seconds of exposure to 150 degree water and from five seconds with 140 degree water.

In contrast it takes 30 seconds of 130 degree water to produce a serious burn.

Martina at top of tennis world

PARIS (AP) — Martina Navratilova has come a long way since defecting from her native Czechoslovakia nine years ago.

When she defeated her old rival Chris Evert Lloyd in the singles final of the French Open on Saturday, she became the first player since Margaret Smith Court in 1970 to win all four Grand Slam tournaments — Wimbledon and the French, U.S. and Australian Opens — consecutively.

When she teamed with Pam Shriver on Sunday to win the women's doubles title, Navratilova carved out a place in tennis history as the only player ever to win the Grand Slam in both singles and doubles at the same time.

The Grand Slam has always been accomplished in the same calendar year. But two years ago, the International Tennis Federation, finally giving official credence to the feat, decided any player who wins all four in a row will win a Grand Slam.

Only four other players — two of them women — have ever won the singles Grand Slam. Until Sunday, no one, male or female, had done it in singles and, with the same partner, in doubles.

"It's absolutely fantastic. You don't really expect to win two of them," Navratilova said with a smile after she and Shriver had downed the Czechoslovakian-West German partnership of Hana Mandlikova and Claudia Kohde-Kilsch in the women's doubles final.

It was in 1975 when a young Czech by the name of Navratilova first reached the final here on the slow red clay courts at Roland Garros Stadium — her first Grand Slam championship match. Her opponent was Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who had won the French singles and doubles and the Wimbledon singles the year before.

Later that year, Navratilova teamed with Renata Tomanova to lead Czechoslovakia to its first Federation Cup title — the women's team championship.

Then, following her early loss at the U.S. Open that September, she defected, deciding to stay in the United States so that she could become "the best tennis player I can."

Her decision to play a tournament in Amelia Island, Fla., without first obtaining permission from the Czechoslovakian Tennis Federation, got her in trouble back home. The federation refused to allow her to leave her native country except for the major tournaments, thus keeping her from competing every week against the world's best players.

Joining the women's tour fulltime after her defection, she raised her ranking quickly, becoming third in the world by the end of 1975 and finally reaching the No. 1 spot at the end of 1978.

By then the victories were numerous.

She captured the doubles at Wimbledon in 1976, teaming with Evert. She won the doubles at the U.S. Open in 1977 with Betty Stove and in 1978 with Billie Jean King.

In 1978, she captured her first Wimbledon singles championship and was voted Player of the Year by the Women's Tennis Association, an honor she repeated in 1979.

With seven Grand Slam singles tournament victories and a host of trophies from other women's circuit events, the world's No. 1 player has amassed more than $8 million in prize money, including a $1 million check she received Saturday from the International Tennis Federation for winning the Grand Slam.

Asked about the bonus after beating Lloyd on Saturday, Navratilova replied: "I never really thought about it. Maybe I'll go shopping in Paris before I leave."

Simpson streak overtakes field

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — A stunning four-hole burst in which he made up six and seven shots on the two men he was chasing fashioned an easy victory for Scott Simpson in the Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic.

That decisive spurt, with Simpson reeling off four consecutive birdies, while Chip Beck and Jay Haas chopped around in the deep, difficult rough, removed any doubt about the outcome before the leaders reached the turn Sunday.

Simpson won by five strokes, matching the largest victory margin of the season on the PGA Tour.

"Walking up the eighth fairway," said Mark O'Meara. "I told my caddy, 'Scott Simpson is going to win this golf tournament.'"

"I'd played with him a week ago. I knew how well he was playing, how well he was swinging the club.

"And, with a four-shot lead, I knew he wasn't going to back up. I just figured we all were playing for second place."

They were, indeed.

Simpson, who started the sweltering final round two shots behind, started his four-birdie string with a 30-foot putt on the fourth hole. By the time he reached the turn, he was four strokes in front and no one ever got closer.

Simpson's winning total of 269 was 15-under-par par for the hilly Westchester Country Club course. His final round was a no-bogey, 6-under-par 65.

HORSESHOE BAY, Texas (AP) — Scott Verplank and John Slaughter have been battling down to the wire for top honors for the past three years in the Texas State Amateur Golf Championship.

It was Verplank, of Dallas, who came out on top Sunday as he fired an even-par 72 to

Rangers have Oakland's number

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers may be last in the American League West and 11 games under .500 but that hasn't stopped their dominance of the Oakland A's.

Texas defeated Oakland, 3-1, Sunday night as Larry Parrish had two homers and Pete O'Brien added a solo homer. It was their third victory in a row in the four-game series that concludes tonight.

Not only has Texas made a habit of downing the A's recently. Oakland has now dropped 10 straight and 13 of their last 14 games at Arlington Stadium. Oakland has not won at Texas since September, 1982.

Rangers starter Charlie Hough, 6-6, who has won in his last four starts, and has taken four in a row from Oakland, added to the Rangers dominance. He allowed seven hits, one run, walked four and struck out seven.

Bill Krueger, 4-2, suffered the loss for Oakland.

"I was just flipping it up there and hoping they would hit it at somebody and they did," said Hough, whose knuckleball was clocked between 54 and 68 mph.

"I was throwing about 50 or 60 mph and it was almost embarrassing throwing so slow," said Hough, who is 7-2 lifetime against Oakland.

"I have no idea why they dominate us so," said A's Manager Jackie Moore. "It's not just this Hough stuff either. I am sick of it and the players are sick of it."

Parrish and O'Brien have almost singlehandedly beaten the A's in this series.

Parrish had a solo homer in the sixth just inside the left field foul pole to score the game's first run. It was his eighth homer of the year.

"When you're swinging good, it doesn't matter who is throwing," said Parrish. "And when you're swinging bad, it doesn't matter who is

Sheehan wins biggest prize in golf history

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Patty Sheehan said she tried to put the $500,000 out of her mind. But it was there all the time.

Sheehan, 27, won the McDonald's Kids' Classic on Sunday at the White Manor Country Club — and collected a $500,000 bonus.

She posted a 65-72-74-70-281, a tournament record 7-under-par, to edge Amy Alcott by two strokes in a head-to-head duel in stifling heat over the 6,283-yard layout in suburban Philadelphia.

Alcott, who led by a stroke heading into the final round, finished with a 73 for a tournament total of 283.

First prize was $52,500 but that was dwarfed by the $500,000 bonus awarded for winning two of the past three LPGA tournaments.

Sheehan won the LPGA

Kareem pain for Celtics Lakers send NBA series into seventh game

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley never had any doubt that Kareem Abdul-Jabbar would play.

Abdul-Jabbar, suffering from another excruciating migraine headache, was listed as questionable for the Game 6 of the NBA Championship Series Sunday after missing the pre-game warmup and a team meeting.

But he was there when the game began, scoring 30 points, nine in the closing minutes, as the Lakers made up an 11-point deficit and beat the Boston Celtics 119-108 to force a deciding seventh game Tuesday night.

"I had no doubt that he would play," said Riley. "If two trucks ran over his head, he'd be out there. He was an inspiration."

Abdul-Jabbar said the headache cleared an hour before the game. The 37-year-old center scored 31 points in the series opener after overcoming another migraine.

"I'm going to try to order another migraine for Kareem on Tuesday," said Riley.

He also said he had "hired 5,000 people to pray for rain" in Boston, remembering the stifling 97-degree heat in Boston Garden Friday night when the Celtics won 121-103 and took a 3-2 lead in the series.

The heat which has been baking Boston since Thursday is expected to break tonight and temperatures in the mid-80s are forecast for Tuesday.

The Boston arena relies on ceiling fans instead of air conditioning.

While Abdul-Jabbar, the league's oldest player, led the way, the Lakers got a big effort from rookie Byron Scott, at 23, their youngest player.

Scott provided some spark off the bench after the Lakers were trailing 84-73 with five minutes left in the third quarter. His outside shooting, a couple of key steals and two assists seemed to ignite Los Angeles, which then went on to outscore the Celtics 36-21 in the final period.

Scott, a rookie acquired from the San Diego Clippers in the controversial trade involving Norm Nixon, had spent most of the series on the bench but Riley said he called on him in this instance because he is the team's best outside shooter.

So, now it's back to Boston where the Celtics have won twice in three final series games there.

Riley, worrying about the heat there, said that the Lakers' medical staff was going to figure out what the players could do to minimize its effects on the players, including giving them nutrients.

Boston Coach K.C. Jones, whose Celtics let the Lakers off the hook with the fourth-quarter letdown, said he expects the seventh game "to be a bang-up, knockdown game."

Larry Bird led the Celtics' scoring in the sixth game with 28 points, and also had 14 rebounds and eight assists.

Gerald Henderson added 22 points and Dennis Johnson 20

Lendl loses 'choker' tag

PARIS (AP) — Ivan Lendl, the consummate "money player," had just broken into the select circle of those men and women who had won a Grand Slam tennis tournament.

And the stony-nerved, steely-eyed Czechoslovakian was in what for him passed as an expansive mood after

Horns lose title game

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Cal State-Fullerton left fielder John Fishel says defending champion Texas didn't have the edge heading into the NCAA College World Series baseball title game Sunday night, even though the Longhorns had beaten the Titans three times in four meetings this year.

"It was whoever got in front," said Fishel, who was named the CWS most valuable player and tied a CWS record with his 13th hit of the tournament in Sunday night's 3-1 championship win for the Titans. "We had something to prove out there. We had a goal of Omaha all year. It was in three parts — the regular season, the regionals and the College World Series. We won 'em all."

Fishel said the entire tournament had been an offensive show until Fullerton's Eddie Delzer and Scott Wright took to the mound to combine for a three-hitter against Texas.

"Eddie pitched a championship game," said Fishel.

"I was throwing strikes," said Delzer, a 5-foot-8 senior left-hander. "Everything went well."

Delzer allowed Texas only two hits, both infield singles in the first inning. Texas' Elan Westbrooks beat out a slow roller to third to lead off the game. He was sacrificed to second by Bill Bates and scored when Rusty Richards' grounder over the mound was knocked down behind second by Fullerton's Jose Mota.

From that point, Delzer didn't allow a hit and only three Texas batters reached base until a leg cramp sidelined Delzer while taking warmup pitches in the eighth inning.

beating America's John McEnroe 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-6 in the final of the men's singles at the French Open.

"It's great," he said. "I finally be able to answer some different questions."

The question that had been haunting the 24-year-old Lendl, among the top three players in the world for the last four years, was why he had been unable to win a Grand Slam tournament. He even became known as something of a "choker artist" — runner-up at last year's Australian to Sweden's Mats Wilander, runner-up at the last two U.S. Opens, both to Jimmy Connors, a runner-up here in 1983 to Bjorn Borg of Sweden.

But when money, rather than prestige, was on the line, Lendl's shots were true. In 1982, he won a single-season record $2,028,650.

But there was a peculiar price to be paid for going for the big money, and Lendl himself admitted that he burned himself out a bit and was in less than top form when the big tournament rolled around.

But this year, he acknowledged that his status as one of the world's best players would not be assured until he won one of the big events. He cut back his schedule and came into the tournament fresher than usual.

McEnroe was superb, taking the first two sets. But he tired under Lendl's relentless hard-stroking game. Lendl's legs were strong at the end, and that was the difference.

"We were both a little tired," Lendl said. "But I guess John was a little more tired. Maybe I'm in a little better shape than I was last year."

Lendl's victory means American men will have to wait until 1985 to try to break a jinx on the slow, red clay Roland Garros Stadium. U.S. man has won here since 1955, when Tony Trabert successfully defended his title.

McEnroe, rated the best player in the world by the computers, was clearly disappointed by the defeat.

"I'm a little down because I thought I had chance to win it," he explained.

Gamblers' Kelly shatters records

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Gamblers have more than lived up to their lofty pre-season expectations in an inaugural year that has seen the expansion team take a United States Football League Central Division title and develop a record-shattering quarterback in Jim Kelly.

In a 38-13 win over the Chicago Blitz on Sunday, Kelly established three different American professional football records to give him a total of five for the 11-5 Gamblers.

Kelly, a rookie from the University of Miami, completed 21 of 31 passes for 335 yards and four touchdowns.

Kelly's performance against Chicago gives him 4,825 yards passing for the season to move him past San Diego's Dan Fouts' 4,802 yards in the National Football League for the most passing yards gained in a single season by a player in an American professional league.

His 40 touchdown passes in season eclipses the records of 36 established by George Blanda and Y. A. Tittle in 1961 and 1963 respectively. It also ties the all-time record of Peter Liske of Calgary of the Canadian Football League set in 1967.

Yet another mark fell Sunday as Kelly threw for 300-plus yards for the ninth time, passing Fouts, who had eight in 1980 for the Chargers.

Kelly had already set the rookie standards for passing yards and touchdown passes.

"Anytime you break a record of Dan Fouts it's a great feeling," Kelly said. "It wasn't one of my best days but the receivers did a great job instinctively."

One of those receivers is Richard Johnson, who set another American football record with 103 catches in one season, including Kelly's record-breaking 37th and 38th touchdowns on completions of 10 and 30 yards.

The old mark was 101 by Charles Hennigan of the 1964 Houston Oilers.

In the champagne-soaked Gambler dressing room, Kelly gave a glowing appraisal of the coaching staff.

"The coaches are real professionals. They let us do what we wanted in the run-and-shoot offense. They took it easy on us rather than pounding their philosophy into us," Kelly said.

Giants pay the price

Borrowed bats boost Houston

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

The Houston Astros haven't been doing much with their bats this season — and Sunday was no different.

While the song suggests that people leave their hearts in San Francisco, the Astros left most of their bats there — along with many gloves, shoes and some bubble gum, too — after they were stolen from the Houston clubhouse in an overnight burglary Saturday.

Undaunted, the Astros borrowed what they needed from the San Francisco Giants and then went out and beat them 7-4.

"They cleaned me out — five bats, four pairs of spikes, all my batting gloves, even knee pads," said Ray Knight, who went 3-for-3 to pace Houston's 12-hit attack.

"Losing the gloves hurts the most," he said. "I had two that I loved. They were perfect. I'd pay $1,000 to get one of them back."

Knight used a bat he got from Joel Youngblood of the Giants.

Said Youngblood: "We've been real good friends for a long time. Ray loaned me a bat last year and I hit five homers with it. I guess whatever goes around, comes around."

In other NL games, Los Angeles shaded Atlanta 3-2, Chicago blanked St. Louis 2-0, San Diego rallied past Cincinnati 7-5, Montreal nipped New York 3-2 and Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia 12-6 in 12 innings.

Terry Puhl, who delivered two sacrifice flies for the Astros, also used one of Youngblood's bats.

"Shoot, I had to use Denny Walling's glove, Kevin Bass' spikes and Joel Youngblood's bat," Puhl said. "I felt a little shaky in right field without my own glove."

The Astros broke the game open early, scoring five times in the first inning. A three-run homer by Jose Cruz keyed the uprising against Jeff Robinson.

Steve Nicosia provided a highlight for the Giants by going 3-for-3, giving him eight straight hits over three games. The NL record is 10 straight hits, accomplished nine times, the last by Woodrow W. Williams of Cincinnati in 1943. The major-league record is 12, set by Mike Higgins of Boston in 1938 and tied by Walt Dropo of Detroit in 1952.

Nicosia saw little to cheer about, though.

"After Houston scored five runs in the first, there was no enthusiasm at all in our dugout, no life," he said. "It shouldn't be like that."

Dodgers 3, Braves 2

Ken Landreaux homered for the third straight day — all helping fuel Los Angeles victories over visiting Atlanta — while Alejandro Pena and five relievers stopped the Braves.

Pena drove in the game's first run with a bases-loaded groundout. Landreaux hit his fifth home run of the season in the fourth.

Each team scored in the fifth before Atlanta loaded the bases in the sixth but rookie reliever Rich Rodas, making his first appearance of the season, got Chris Chambliss to ground out to end that threat.

In the eighth, the Braves again loaded the bases but Carlos Diaz induced pinch-hitter Bob Watson to ground out to finish the inning.

Pena, 7-2, was the winner and Craig McMurtry, 5-7, took the loss.

Pirates 12, Phillies 6

The two teams battled four hours in 98-degree heat in Philadelphia before the Pittsburgh scored seven times in the top of the 12th inning to end its six-game losing streak.

Jim Kern, recently signed by the Phillies and making his first appearance since April 1983 after arm problems, pitched the entire 12th and was shelled.

Marvell Wynne singled home the first two runs of the inning and then Lee Lacy lined an inside-the-park homer. It was his fourth home run of the season for Lacy and the third inside-the-parker of his career.

The Phillies, who scored once in the bottom of the 12th, had tied the game in the ninth against Kent Tekulve when Juan Samuel doubled and Garry Maddox followed with his fourth home run of the season and third in three days.

Padres 7, Reds 5

Cincinnati scored five runs in the top of the first inning before the Padres mounted their comeback.

Graig Nettles hit two homers and drove in four runs for host San Diego, while Bobby Brown and Tony Gwynn added solo shots.

Gwynn's home run tied it in the fifth. Brown followed with a triple and Nettles delivered a sacrifice fly to put the Padres ahead.

Padres starter Andy Hawkins retired just one batter and was knocked out when Reds starter Tom Hume singled home the fifth run of the first inning.

Cubs 2, Cardinals 0

Chicago's Chuck Rainey and Joaquin Andujar of the Cardinals hooked up in a scoreless duel through seven innings in St. Louis.

Then, in the Chicago eighth, Jody Davis singled with one out and went to third on Larry Bowa's double. Pinch-hitter Jay Johnstone was intentionally walked and Andujar got Bob Dernier on a popout. But he hit Ryne Sandberg with the next pitch, forcing in a run.

Leon Durham stole home in the ninth with the bases loaded, two outs and relief pitcher Lee Smith batting. It was the first steal of home against St. Louis since Montreal's Andre Dawson did it in August 1977.

Rainey, 5-4, went seven innings and Smith the last two for his 11th save. They combined on a five-hitter while Andujar, 10-5, allowed just six hits.

Expos 3, Mets 2

Tim Lincecum and Jim Wohlford singled home first-inning runs as Montreal went on to end New York's six-game winning streak.

Tigers looking like themselves

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Detroit Tigers are looking more like themselves these days — and the Baltimore Orioles are looking like anything but the defending world champions.

"Because of the minor slump we went through, this reassures everybody and pumps everybody's confidence up," Detroit catcher Lance Parrish said after the Tigers crushed the Orioles 10-4 and 8-0 in a double-header Sunday to take three of four games in their weekend series.

Sunday's sweep, coupled with a 5-3 loss by second-place Toronto to New York, boosted Detroit's lead in the American League East to seven games over the Blue Jays and 11 over third-place Baltimore. Just four days earlier, Detroit led the Blue Jays by just 3½ games.

Before Sunday, the Tigers had lost nine of 15 games, but they had 26 hits and benefited from sloppy Baltimore base running and defense.

In other American League action, Cleveland beat Seattle

3-1 in the opener of a double-header before losing the nightcap 4-3; Boston nipped Milwaukee 5-4; Minnesota walloped Chicago 12-5; California blanked Kansas City 2-0, and Texas turned back Oakland 3-1.

The Tigers benefited from five Baltimore errors leading to seven unearned runs in the double-header which was played before a crowd of 51,764, the fifth largest regular-season turnout in Orioles' history. Yankees 5, Blue Jays 3.

Oscar Gamble and Don Mattingly each hit two-run homers, with Gamble's blast snapping a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning, as the Yankees downed Toronto and completed a three-game sweep of the Blue Jays in New York.

Clay Christiansen pitched four innings of four-hit scoreless relief to gain his second victory in four decisions. Three more relievers finished up, with Dave Righetti gaining his seventh save. Indians 3-3, Mariners 1-4.

Carmen Castillo homered and Bert Blyleven pitched 2-3 scoreless innings in his first regular-season relief appearance since 1972 as the Indians beat Seattle in the first game in Cleveland.

Blyleven, reactivated Saturday after being on the disabled list with a broken foot since May 23, took over for Neal Heaton in making his first relief appearance after 271 consecutive American League starts. The AL record for consecutive starts without a relief appearance is 272 by New York's Mel Stottlemyre.

Red Sox 5, Brewers 4

Rick Miller's pinch-hit triple drove in Bill Buckner from second base with the tie-breaking run with two out in bottom of the eighth inning, lifting Boston over Milwaukee.

Buckner began the eighth with a single off Rick Waits, 0-2, the third Milwaukee pitcher. After Rich Gedman moved Buckner to second with a sacrifice, Moose Haas relieved Waits. One out later, Miller followed with a triple, his seventh hit in 22 pinch-hit appearances.

Twins 12, White Sox 5

Tom Brunansky's three-run homer in the first inning and a seven-run outburst in the fourth carried rookie Ed Hodge and Minnesota over Chicago. The victory snapped Chicago's four-game winning streak and ended the Twins' seven-game road losing streak.

Brunansky hit the homer, his seventh of the year, off loser Britt Burns, 2-6.

Hodge is now 3-2.

Angels 2, Royals 0

Geoff Zahn blanked Kansas City on six hits and Mike Brown and Brian Downing hit run-scoring singles to lead visiting California over the Royals.

Zahn, 7-3, won his second straight game after missing two starts because of a groin injury. He has allowed only one earned run in his last 26

Despite rain, drought lingers

RANKIN, Texas (AP) — The severity of a drought that has held West Texas ranchers and farmers in its grip for more than two years lessened recently when rain fell across the parched plains of the state.

But, most troubled landowners say the end to the worst drought since the Dust Bowl is not even near.

"These showers we've had aren't doing much," lamented J. Lane, who ranches 9,000 acres near Rankin. "The end to the drought only will be a whole lot of rain — it's the only thing that will help."

The recent rain has provided "some relief" for the hundreds of ranchers and farmers across the state who are struggling to survive the worst agricultural recession since the 1930s, said Upton County agricultural agent Ken Powell.

"But it's still dry," he said. "We could surely use some more now."

Powell said the main complaint still among ranchers is that the rainfall, which in some areas has matched the annual average amount of precipitation, "doesn't make up for the past two to three years' losses."

"We've needed rain for so long and it's great to have gotten what we did," he said, "but we need enough to make up for the dryness of the past."

Lane, who lived through the droughts of the 1930s and 1950s, said current conditions "couldn't be any worse. I just don't see how I can keep (my remaining cattle) more than a month if it doesn't rain a lot."

He already has sold the majority of his cattle, choosing to retain only breeding stock.

Many ranchers have done the same, selling more stock than usual, said John Gargile of the Producer's Livestock Auction in San Angelo, where since early April an average of 10,000 cattle and 20,000 sheep per week have been sold.

"We've been moving between 50 and 75 percent more livestock through than normal," Gargile said. "They've all gotten rid of most of their livestock — they can't afford to feed it."

Producer's normally sells livestock on Thursdays and Fridays, but lately auctions have been held as often as five times each week, Gargile said.

The high cost of feed is what ranchers say worries them the most, next to the lack of moisture.

"Unless it rains for days and days, we can't grow anything for the cattle to feed on. Then we do what we've been doing for two or three years — feed. But that's mighty costly," said Lewis Smith, the owner of a 22,000-acre ranch near Rankin.

Despite a 1983 federal government feed program, which allowed livestock growers to purchase government-owned, low-grade corn at 75 percent of the federal floor price, most ranchers are continuing to buy their own feed.

And Powell said, another feed program is not the answer. With little vegetation left on the ranchers' arid land, all animals in the area, including deer that usually end up dead along a highway, are competing for feed.

And because pastures are so dry, Smith said, any "traffic on them, any hooves on them, it just breaks up the ground and makes the matter worse."

"That's another reason we're all selling what we can," Smith said. "My land probably needs two real good seasons to get back in shape."

Powell said only 900 head of cattle remain in Upton County, where usually more than 9,000 to 11,000 head graze.

"We're down to almost nothing and some folks are getting out," he said.

One family in his area has vacated its land, moving to Wyoming to pasture its cattle, Powell said.

"Most are holding on as best as they can, but the question continues to remain: 'How long can it go on?'" he said.

Smith said he will continue doing "the only thing I know" as long as the banks stay with him.

"If they don't chicken out," he said, "I won't."

Fred Lundgren, special assistant to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, said 82 West Texas counties currently are eligible for federal disaster loans.
