Legislature agrees on most reforms

AUSTIN (AP) — Compromise talks begin Sunday on the Senate and House versions of a public school reform bill that Speaker Gib Lewis says are already "very close."

The first meeting of the 10-man conference committee picked to make the final draft was scheduled for 11 a.m. Differences over the methods of helping property-poor school districts and a House provision for mandatory competency tests for teachers were expected to be major points of disagreement.

"They're really not very serious," Lewis said after the Senate passed its bill 22-9 about 1 a.m. Saturday.

The House bill was approved 119-29 Thursday night.

Meanwhile, legislators turned their attention to the money needed to pay for the school improvements in the week remaining of the special session.

Gov. Mark White has recommended increases in state sales taxes, gasoline taxes and "sin" levies on tobacco and alcoholic beverages. Lewis said he hopes the tax-hunters will turn first to eliminate some of the present exemptions to sales taxes.

Rep. Stan Schleuter, D-Killeen, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee which has first say on any new or revised taxes, said Friday that the money question must be settled by midnight July 2.

That deadline must be met in order for the bills to take effect Oct. 1, the start of a calendar quarter for collecting taxes, he said.

The special session normally would end at midnight July 3.

White, who called the Legislature into session and can call another if necessary, wants a $4.8 billion tax hike over three years to pay for education and highway improvements.

The state's three-year share of the Senate education bill would be nearly $3.6 billion, approximately $800 million more than the House version.

Many portions of the Senate and House bills followed recommendations of the Select Committee on Public Education, and its chairman H. Ross Perot.

— Both include a temporary appointed State Board of Education that later would be elected from 15 districts over the state. The present board has 27 members, one from each congressional district.

— Both House and Senate plans include teacher pay raises, a funding plan designed to help poor school districts, a minimum salary schedule, a "career ladder" that rewards teachers for skill and extra training and restrictions on students' unexcused absences and extracurricular activities.

— Both bills also would give the Board of Education power to review rules adopted by the University Interscholastic League, which has governed extracurricular activities since 1910.

The Senate bill calls for adding four days to the current 175-day school year by dropping four teacher in-service training days. The House bill retains the current 175 days.

Seeks hospital administrator

Hemphill board takes no action

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Hemphill County Hospital District board members met in a special session Friday afternoon to talk about replacing hospital administrator Rocky Woolman, who has announced his resignation, effective Sept. 10.

Board members took no official action at the session and wound up "talking about what we wanted to do at our next meeting on July 9," Chairman Vance Stickley said.

Stickley said the board is looking for Woolman's replacement.

The administrator announced his resignation on June 11, saying the board has interfered in the day-to-day operation of the hospital and created "constant turmoil."

The chairman denied that the board has stuck its collective nose into the administration of the hospital.

Stickley said one area of dispute stems from the board's attempt to lower hospital charges and Woolman's attempt to "jack them up."

Woolman was reportedly out of town when the board met Friday and was unavailable for comment.

The board chairman said the Canadian hospital has lost patients since Woolman took over as administrator in March, 1983. He said patients have deserted the hospital for those around the area. Stickley said Canadian doctors have also complained to the board about the charges.

The chairman cited one example: Woolman priced a disposable IV that costs $1 at $19, he said.

Stickley also said that hospital employees don't like their administrator. He said part of the reported ill-will will result from Woolman's past Army days and his institution of "Army discipline" into the civilian hospital.

He said the board has looked at the resumes of two possible replacements, one from Throckmorton and one from Sonora. Stickley said the board may take action on the personnel matter at its July 9 meeting.

In Woolman's resignation letter, he cited "many misunderstandings between the hospital board and myself," as one reason for quitting.

The administrator said in his letter that he expects to be paid for 90 days from the date of his June 11 announcement, regardless of when the board hires a replacement. He said he will continue to run the hospital and will brief his replacement.

"When I was hired, there was a clear, verbal understanding as to the duties and responsibilities of a board member and an administrator. Since that time, a certain member or members have taken it on themselves to breach that understanding and cross the line into administration. When a board starts interfering with administration policies as well as board policies which they have already approved, constant turmoil will prevail in the hospital. This has been a proven fact in the industry, and has proven itself here," Woolman's letter told the board.

The lame-duck administrator also cited a number of improvements he said are needed at the hospital.

The hospital board had rejected the administrator's contract in a meeting May 15.

At the same meeting, hospital board member Carol Story resigned from her position, saying the other board members have interfered with the hospital's administration. Former board member Don Schaefer, who was defeated for re-election last April, was appointed by the board to replace Story.

Woolman came to the Canadian hospital from Boise City, Okla., where he also was a hospital administrator.

He directed the hospital in its change from a county facility to one operated by the hospital district. Hemphill County voters approved the formation of the district in June, 1983.

Tax increase $50 billion; spending cuts, $11 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has taken a big step toward its promised election-year down payment to trim enormous budget deficits, with negotiators agreeing Saturday on a package of nearly $50 billion in tax increases and about $11 billion in spending cuts.

It was nearly dawn when House and Senate tax writers, who had worked through the night, settled the last of 282 differences between tax measures passed by the House and Senate.

No new taxes were included in the compromise. It included primarily changes in existing taxes, especially those affecting businesses, tax shelters and some complicated tax accounting practices.

The agreement, which came at 5:17 a.m. EDT, capped three weeks of bargaining and ended only after a non-stop round of public and private talks that lasted nearly 21 hours.

The full House and Senate now must vote whether to accept the conferees' agreement.

The struggle was necessary so Congress could meet a goal set by leaders to pass a package of deficit-reduction moves by the time the House and Senate recess at the end of the month for the Fourth of July and the Democratic National Convention.

Among provisions of the tax agreement:

—The 3 percent excise tax on local and long distance phone service, due to expire after 1985, would be extended through 1987.

—The federal tax of 16 cents per pack on cigarettes will drop, as scheduled under current law, to 8 cents after Sept. 30, 1985. The House had passed a bill which would have permitted it to drop only to 12 cents, but the conferees rejected this.

—The tax on liquor, now $10.50 per proof gallon, will rise to $12.50 effective Sept. 30, 1985. The conferees rejected a House move to raise the tax to $14.25. Beer and wine would not be affected.

Action on the tax parts of the package was stalled until Thursday, when the negotiators approved more than $11 billion in companion spending savings, including a hike in premiums paid by Medicare beneficiaries and a freeze of doctors' fees paid under Medicare.

Gramm draws line

GOP candidate says Senate race offers voters clear choice

BY WALLY SIMMONS
Managing Editor

Phil Gramm, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, Friday painted a distinct line between himself and his opponent, Lloyd Doggett, and invited voters to choose their side.

His message was clear: I'm the conservative, he's the liberal; I'm with Reagan, he's with Mondale; take your choice.

"Never before has Texas faced such a clear-cut choice between different philosophies of government," Gramm said. "The differences between my opponent and me on the key issues are stark."

Gramm, a U.S. congressman from College Station, spoke to a small group of supporters and held a press conference at Perry Lefors Airport Friday while on a 75-city campaign blitz.

Gramm listed a number of issues on which he said he and Doggett disagree.

"On my first day in Congress, I introduced a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, while Doggett voted against a resolution calling for a balanced budget in the Texas Legislature," Gramm maintained.

The GOP candidate said he has always favored a strong national defense, but said Doggett opposes "virtually every element of our effort to strengthen national defense."

"He even called it 'gunboat diplomacy' when our troops rescued the Americans trapped in Grenada last year," Gramm said.

Gramm said he favors "the basic right of every Texan and American to work without having to join a union," and charged that Doggett opposes right-to-work laws.

Gramm expressed support for voluntary prayer in public schools and said Doggett voted against silent prayer in schools while a member of the Legislature.

"It all boils down to one simple fact: we have two candidates with two completely different philosophies and approaches to government," Gramm said. "I have worked six years to control spending so the working people of Texas can keep more of what they earn. Lloyd Doggett is committed to raising taxes so the government can go on spending as usual."

Gramm also made a pitch for support from those who voted for Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock in his runoff against Doggett for the Democratic nomination.

"If I had voted in the Democratic primary, I'd have voted for Hance," Gramm said. "But you still have a choice," he said to Hance supporters. "You don't have to accept a liberal as your next U.S. Senator."

County Judge Carl Kennedy told Gramm that many Gray County voters who supported Hance during the Democratic primary have said they intend to vote for the Republican candidate in the general election.

Gramm said he had mixed feelings during the Democratic runoff because of his long friendship with Hance.

"I knew I'd rather run against Doggett because it provides such a clear choice. But at the same time, I hated to see Hance lose," he explained.

Gramm said he feels comfortable running on the same ticket with Ronald Reagan and Doggett feels comfortable running with Walter Mondale.

"The only way the liberals can beat Ronald Reagan is to defeat me in Texas and open the door for Ted Kennedy to become Senate Majority Leader," Gramm said.

Gramm wasn't certain if amnesty for illegal aliens will be an issue in his race against Doggett as it was in the contest between Hance and Doggett. But he pointed out that he opposed amnesty and the immigration bill passed by the U.S. House this week and said Doggett has supported amnesty in the past.

The Republican candidate pointed out that he voted against the immigration bill, even though it was supported by President Reagan.

"I am concerned that the amnesty provision might make 4.5 million aliens eligible for public assistance," he said.

Texan cleared of rape charges says nobody ever apologized

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Clarence Von Williams says his life was ruined when he was convicted of a rape to which another man eventually confessed.
 "Nobody has ever apologized to me for what happened," said Williams, 45, who spent 51 days in jail before Jon Simonis, of Lake Charles, La., admitted he committed the crime. "I was very definitely raped by the criminal justice system."
 Williams said Bridge City police could easily have developed evidence which would have cleared him of the 1979 rapes of a woman and her teen-age son and daughter.
 The three victims identified Williams as their attacker. His first trial ended in a mistrial, but a second jury convicted him and sentenced him to 50 years in prison.

On Dec. 4, 1981, one day before Williams was to be transferred from Orange County Jail to the state prison system, he was released. Simonis, 32, admitted to the Bridge City rapes as well as more than 80 others attributed to the so-called "Ski Mask Rapist."
 Simonis, who pleaded guilty to all charges against him, is serving 21 life terms, plus 2,681 years, in the Louisiana State Penitentiary at Angola.
 Williams' attorney, Don Kelley, said local police investigated the crime rather than calling in technicians from a regional crime lab based in Beaumont.
 Kelley said police failed to collect evidence from a wet mattress found in the victims' home, allowed a muddy footprint found outside to be destroyed when crawfish dug holes through it and failed to collect other evidence which might have cleared his client.
 "My family has suffered," said Williams, whose $15 million federal lawsuit against law enforcement officials was dismissed last week by U.S. District Judge Joe Fisher of Beaumont.
 "They had their chance in court," Williams said. "I'd like to have mine, too."

JP's charges dismissed on defective indictment

An indictment charging Ochiltree County Justice of the Peace Billy Conner with official misconduct, a Class A Misdemeanor, has been dismissed because the document is defective, according to a special prosecutor assigned to the case.
 The charge was made in connection with the alleged mishandling of fine money collected by the JP's office.
 25th District Judge Naomi Harney of Amarillo, who was appointed to hear the case, signed an order dismissing the charge on Wednesday.
 84th District Judge J.E. Blackburn and Perryton prosecutor Bruce Roberson had asked to be dismissed from handling the case.
 Prosecutor Richard W. Brainard of Vega, who was appointed to replace Roberson, said the indictment isn't specific and fails to allege that Conner was acting in his official capacity when he received funds belonging to Ochiltree County.
 A special 84th District grand jury returned a sealed indictment charging Conner on May 7. The sheriff's office, however, didn't serve the indictment and arrest the JP until May 11. Chief Deputy Melvin Drum said then that a busy schedule delayed serving the indictment.
 The Perryton grand jury asked for and received an extension of its term last month, apparently to continue an investigation of Conner's office.
 The grand jury heard witnesses for three days before handing down the official misconduct charge.

Hispanics may withhold votes

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The president of the nation's largest Hispanic organization on Saturday amended a proposed boycott of first-ballot voting at next month's Democratic National Convention to include a call for non-Hispanic, as well as Hispanic delegates, to refrain from casting an initial ballot.

Mario Obledo, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said withholding a vote on the presidential nominating convention's first ballot would signal Democratic candidates that they have ignored Hispanic issues.

On Friday, Obledo said the 291 Hispanic Democratic convention delegates would be pressured to help the Rev. Jesse Jackson stop Walter F. Mondale from being chosen on the first ballot as the party's nominee.

At a news conference Saturday, Obledo issued a five-point "Hispanic Manifesto" that at first reiterated a call for Hispanic delegates to withhold their Mondale votes on the first ballot.

But after reporters questioned Obledo about several contradictory statements he had made, the Sacramento, Calif., attorney said he was asking that delegates "not vote for any candidate" on the first ballot.

He added that Hispanic delegates would be asked to "secure commitments from at least two non-Hispanic delegates present (to a candidate) follow this policy on the first ballot."

Obledo said that would result in at least 873 votes being withheld.

Obledo said he was not endorsing any candidate, but was trying to show the "two leading Democratic candidates" that they have failed to adequately address Hispanic issues.

He also said the "Hispanic Manifesto" had not been voted upon by LULAC, which boasts a membership of more than 100,000 Hispanic nationwide.

"This is from me," Obledo said.

LULAC is a nonpartisan organization and does not issue candidate endorsements. But Friday after Jackson gave a fiery 45-minute speech to the group, Obledo said "we will walk alongside you until there is, in this land of ours, equality for all."

Since the opening of the LULAC convention on Thursday, Mondale has been assailed for refusing to speak at the meeting.

Officials of the group said the former vice president has been unresponsive to Hispanic needs, and he added that Democratic Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado also has ignored the nation's fastest-growing minority group.

Mobeetie Post Office to put history on display

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MOBEETIE — More than 100 years have passed since George A. Montgomery manned Wheeler county's first post office in what is now Mobeetie.

He worked almost alone, sorting mail, then traveling miles to deliver it to waiting residents. Technology and mail volume aside, it's not much different at the small Mobeetie Post Office today. Postmaster Ada Lou Lester is responsible for the office's operation while assistant Maggie Myers works two hours a week. And when Lester is absent, a relief carrier drives 85 miles each day delivering the mail.

The Mobeetie Post Office will hold an Open House from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday in the post office lobby. Lester said that visitors are invited to visit the large mail sorting room to see how the post office operates.

Lester wants the Mobeetie open house to show more than just the workings of a post office, but also what she feels is the interesting history surrounding the post office. Shamrock resident Adde Turnbow and Myers will set up a display showing some historic items from the post office.

In preparation for the open house, Lester studied records of the early days of the area. What she found were vague and often conflicting stories.

According to Lester, the post office was established in 1879, after the town's name changed from Sweetwater to Mobeetie. Before that, "Dad" Barnes made occasional trips to Dodge City delivering mail at 50 cents a letter.

The original post office in Old Mobeetie doubled as a general store. When the town moved north in the 1920s, the post office moved with it. The post office was located in the back of a drug store. The Depression shut down the drug store, but the post office stayed where it was.

Sitting in the sparse room where the letters are sorted, Myers pointed to where parts of the drug store were located. A long soda fountain was set along one wall. The post office was way in the back.

Lester, who will begin her 10th year as postmaster in August, said until U.S. Postal Service was formed in the early 1970s, postmasters were politically appointed.

"Almost all were thrown out when there was a change in the presidency," she said, adding that the term postmaster originally meant "master of the post."

She explained that in earlier times, the postmaster would put a rag on a post to signal when the mail came in.

"I don't know if they ever did that in Mobeetie, but they certainly could have," she said.

Lester's schedule is not as bleak. She comes in at 8 a.m., sorts the letters, dispatches the mail and attends to the window. The first 10 days of each month, when bills and payments are sent, are the busiest, she said.

Although she maintains a hectic schedule when the mail comes in, she manages to keep an 8-5 workday. Myers works for two hours each Saturday and when Lester is absent.

Mobeetie grocer Don Moore, a relief rural carrier, delivers the mail to area boxes.

"We do not now have a full rural carrier," Lester said.

The postmaster, who has had to deliver the rural route only once when the carrier and relief carrier could not, said the carrier's job is a thankless one.

"It's the longest 85 miles, and more than half of it is on dirt roads," she said. "It's hot in the summer and cold in the winter and you have to keep the window down."

Luckily, she said, that one delivery trip was during a nice spring day.

"But the postmaster is the most interesting job I've had," she added. "At Christmas, you get to be Santa Claus. At Valentine Day, you get to be Cupid. At Easter, you're the Easter Bunny."

"You get to play all those roles as postmaster, especially at a small post office like this one," she concluded.

Won't talk about son

Parents firm in refusing testimony

HOUSTON (AP) — Bernard and Odette Port, a middle-aged couple widely respected in their community, may be sent to jail on Wednesday because they refuse to help the state in what they believe is an attempt to execute their teen-age son, charged with murder in the death of a female postal worker.

The parents twice have declined, respectfully, to answer the questions of a grand jury investigating the murder. They remained silent even after granted immunity from prosecution and ordered to testify by a judge.

If on Wednesday they again do not testify, the Ports could be charged with contempt of court. Ironically, they would face jail while their son remains free on $20,000 bond.

David Port, 17, pleaded innocent to murder Friday. He also waived his right to a grand jury hearing in hopes of keeping his parents of going to jail.

But prosecutors say they are going to continue the grand jury investigation.

Randy Schaffer, an attorney representing the couple, said the state could be fishing for facts that could turn the murder charge into a capital murder indictment.

"If they speak, it could mean that the state could kill their son," he said. "That's just our theory, but that's the bottom line."

The Ports also are fighting, he said, for the belief that family rights are superior to the needs of the state, that to preserve civilization, civilization must first preserve family.

To do otherwise, Schaffer said, arouses memories of societies ruled by government terror — jackboots on cobblestones, children taught to betray parents, a life bereft of that basic sanctuary known as family.

The law provides that spouses may not testify against each other in criminal cases. Why, Schaffer asks, shouldn't such privilege be extended to parents and children. Is this not a relationship that is as precious as marriage?

Prosecutors and judges hoot at the idea. They denounce it as a desperate ploy to withhold information the state may need to prosecute David Port.

"Why should we cut them (the Ports) some slack and let them go running around free ... shooting a finger at the court's order?" Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. said.

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers said that to complete the murder investigation the state needs information that only the Ports have.

"They have evidence we'd like to have on this case," Beers said.

For the Ports, the nightmare that threatens to destroy their family started June 7.

Reagan's offers deserve better

For someone labeled a "warmonger" by the Kremlin and leftist demonstrators in the West, President Reagan is almost setting records for making arms limitation proposals. The latest—we've lost count of the number of Reagan Euromissile concessions made over the past two years—was made before a joint session of the Irish Parliament.

Although little new was mentioned in terms of specifics, the president said the United States was "prepared to halt, and even reverse the deployment" of intermediate-range missiles in Europe, pending the outcome of "a verifiable and equitable agreement" with the Soviets.

Soviet reaction, predictably, played up commentary from Western news reporters to the effect that the speech was merely designed to soften the president's "trigger-happy" image with Europeans upset over U.S. deployment of Pershing and Cruise missiles on the continent.

Certainly, Reagan's peace offering was intended to bolster NATO allies under domestic political pressure to copy the Dutch government's recent decision to delay missile deployment. But after initially seeking U.S. missile backing from the Carter administration, European leaders have been egregiously at fault for encouraging the notion that the missiles are being foisted off on them by President Reagan. Also, one should not forget that the Soviets are walk-out champions in arms talks as well as the Olympics.

It's questionable whether the Soviets will be in the mood for any sort of bargaining, so long as the president's Democratic challengers bicker over who among them first called for a nuclear freeze.

But the president's repeated willingness to go out on a limb with the Soviets should at least get a better reception from our NATO allies—especially after 40th anniversary remembrances of the U.S.-led liberation of Western Europe.

Teens can't influence Congress

President Reagan has made good on his campaign pledge to try to change those laws that junk jobs for kids. With total teenage unemployment at 22 percent and black teenage unemployment over 50 percent, kids need some relief. The major villain is the minimum-wage law, currently $3.35 per hour which, by the way, does not include other costs to the employer - Social Security taxes, and the costs of withholding, accounting for, and sending taxes to the state and federal bureaucracies. So we're really talking about $4.00 or so as the minimum hourly compensation.

The minimum wage discriminates against low-skilled workers. Take a worker who is so unfortunate as to have skills enabling him to produce only $2.00 per hour worth of work. A law mandating payment of $3.35 per hour, plus Social Security, plus the costs the company employer must be willing to make a gift of at least $1.35 per hour - the difference between the worker's output and the minimum wage. Employers that generous will soon go out of business.

Since the minimum wage discriminates against low-skilled workers, it will affect black teenagers more - one reason being that most black teenagers attend public schools that deliver grossly inferior education. The National Commission on Excellence in Education reports 47 percent of black seventeen-year-olds are functionally illiterate. Many of these kids have already completed the 9th and 10th grades.

Reagan's "Youth Employment Opportunity Act" would allow teenagers to work at a minimum wage of $2.50 per hour from May to September. If Congress approves the act it will increase employment opportunities for kids. Naturally it won't help all kids; some can't even produce work worth $2.50 per hour and will continue to be unemployed. But it will help many others.

Self-serving union bosses have joined the attack on relaxing minimum-wage requirements for kids. They say firms will fire adults and hire kids. Nonsense! The union officials claim it will lead to exploitation of kids. Nonsense. Employment at two-fifty per hour beats being unemployed at zero per hour.

Actually, the little bit of money of kid earns over the summer and on weekends is small compared to the other benefits of a special teen minimum wage. Early work experiences teach kids how to find a job, the value of punctuality, respect for superiors, and other invaluable work habits, not to mention the pride and self-respect from earning one's own money - legally. These lessons will make them more valuable producers in the future. All kids need work experiences. For many black kids early work opportunities are their only hope since public schools aren't teaching them anything that will make them more valuable as individuals.

The president's proposal is good, but it is just a tiny first step. The larger issue is freedom. For example, if a druggist agrees to pay your sixteen-year-old $2.00 per hour, and your sixteen-year-old agrees, and you as a parent go along with it, who else's business is it?

Minimum-wage laws are only part of the conspiracy against teens. Union-supported labor laws and collective bargaining agreements exclude teens from many areas of employment. Were it not for these arrangements teens could get jobs like cleaning airplane interiors, sweeping floors in hotels, supermarkets and factories, clean-up and helper-type jobs on construction sites, just to name a few. Congress, acting on behalf of special-interest groups, has ruled out many jobs for teens. Why did it do this? No congressman owes his seat to the teenage vote. That may be cynical, but that's the politics.

Williams is an economics professor at George Mason University.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, June 24, the 176th day of 1984. There are 190 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 24, 1948, the Berlin Blockade began as Soviet forces halted all land traffic between the isolated city and West Germany.

On this date: Ten years ago: The White House revealed that President Richard M. Nixon had been suffering from phlebitis, an inflammation of a vein in his leg, but that the condition had presumably abated.

Five years ago: Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza rejected a call by the Organization of American States for his resignation.

One year ago: The space shuttle Challenger - carrying America's first female astronaut in space, Sally Ride - made a safe landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Today's birthdays: Actor Al Molinaro is 65. Comedian Jack Carter is 61. French movie director Claude Chabrol is 54. Actress Michelle Lee is 42. Rock musician Mick Fleetwood is 37.

Women have been 'found out'

Let's get a familiar objection out of the way first so that we can talk about women.

First, some resent being categorized, insisting that women, even as men, have different attitudes, different abilities, proclivities and interests.

Not because they are women - but because they are individuals.

Having acknowledged that - they are individuals - it is nonetheless generally accepted as fact that women are not as good at mathematics and that women are less adept in dealing with technology.

Don't you believe it. Women have been found out!

Claremont Graduate School, California, has been two years studying men and women and their computer skills. Hundreds of men and women in 22 states were evaluated; their spatial, quantitative, sequential and logical attitudes.

One of the subtests involves the ability to estimate the number of darkened and undarkened squares set in a pattern. On this one women performed better than men.

Another subtest involved choosing a series of figures that form a graphic pattern. Men scored slightly higher.

Other subtests required the participants to complete a logical sequence or analogy made of letter and numeral sequences.

Men and women scored similarly; no difference.

If this sounds tedious, stay with me; I promise women have been found out!

Now we get to the measurement of an individual's "interest" in computers and computer literacy. Women scored much lower.

Women know less about computers and care less about them.

Professors Mary Poplin, David Drew and Robert Gable note that all previous research has indicated most women can't handle mathematics as well as men.

This survey - measuring attitude as well as aptitude - reveals they can if they want to. But most just don't want to.

In order for a person to have computer abilities he or she must have both the aptitude and an attitude of interest.

Women approach life's problems more qualitatively than quantitatively.

They are thus disinclined to pursue mathematics and computer-related professions.

They have altogether as much aptitude and ability to deal with technical subjects.

So - when she says, "You men repair the video game," you might as well. She has never been interested in learning how.

But we know - she could if she wanted to! (C) 1984, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The vote: What's in it for you?

Why does anyone go the trouble of voting on election day? Among those answering would be a large bloc of potential voters who frankly admit that they never bother with it. Clearly, they don't think they'll get anything out of it that makes a trip to the polls worth the effort.

I'm concerned with those who do go. It would appear that those who take the time and trouble to register and mark a ballot believe they get something for the effort. Few people perform a specific chore, such as voting, for no reason at all.

There are three major reasons, and a host of variations:

1. It's my patriotic duty. (Some were taught this in school and parrot it without necessarily thinking what it means.)

2. I favor the policies of one or another of the candidates. (A variable has it that the voter favors a specific bond issue, referendum or recall.) The person expects to get something he wants and is taking steps to reach a desired objective.

3. I am against one or another of the candidates. (And the obvious variable, the voter does not want a specific issue, referendum or recall to succeed. Or he opposes tax increases or taxation per se.) In this case the voter hopes to prevent something he doesn't want and acts accordingly.

1984 is a major election year and we are being treated to the spectacle of three important Democratic candidates spending millions of dollars (including sums wrested from taxpayers) to win votes on election day.

On the Republican side, the president is wrapping himself in the flag and hurling himself, via television, into the nation's living rooms as the reincarnation of Washington crossing the Delaware.

Each candidate proclaims his own glory, tells you the splendid things he will do for you if you grant him power over the lives and treasure of the people of the U.S. (If you care to be rational, you might recall that no citizen has any claim to the lives and treasure of any citizen other than himself. By voting, we seek to bestow upon another a power and privilege none of us has. We are too far gone in political subservience, however, to be rational during an election.)

Those who vote, knowingly and unknowingly, seek benefits from the general public either by the police power of taxation, or the police power of intervention. Or they might be seeking to reallocate seized resources: i.e. taxation for warfare vs. taxation for welfare.

All members of the House of Representatives and a third of all senators are in the hustings as well. One legal bit of fuddyebumble is called the "Political Action Committee" or PAC. There are scores of such committees.

Why do you suppose the National Association of Realtors has laid out more than $2.1 million to get you to cast a ballot for the people they favor? Why did you slip your widow's mite into an envelope and mail it to Democratic or Republican headquarters? Are the Realtors (or you) just being patriotic? Or is a favor of some kind sought?

Do you suppose that was the American Medical Association being benevolent when it handed over better than $1.7 million while the PAC of the Machinists Union was ponying up for an additional $1.4 million, plus?

Consider the National Education Association PAC which, along with the PAC of the American Bankers Association, have put more than $2 million into political coffers.

I have consulted my unabridged dictionary. The first (and therefore preferred) definition of bribe, reads as follows: "A price, reward, gift or favor bestowed or promised with a view to pervert the judgment or corrupt the conduct esp. of a person in a position of trust (as a public official)."

I don't believe Americans knowingly are venal. But what manner of conduct is sought from alleged "representatives"? What do the special-interest PACs want? What of the conduct of the would-be agents as they offer their services in exploiting the masses and taking their money to provide favors? Doesn't everyone rail at the victorious politician who welves on his promises and refuses to exploit?

If you have never looked at voting in this light, I would like to suggest that you do so. Can you imagine that those elected will not be called on to deliver by those who put up hundreds of thousands?

When November comes, do as you please. But you might begin to total up the damage already done to this great country by majority vote.

Hart Warren the golf pro will become Hart Warren the golfer in a few days.

That may seem a bit contradictory, but it's not. Despite their title, club pros are usually so involved with other duties that they don't have much time to actually play golf.

But Warren is retiring Saturday after 29 years as the head pro at Pampa Country Club and he plans to do something about that lack of time of the golf course immediately, listing golf, fishing and a bit of traveling as activities looming large in his future.

"I couldn't hustle the members on the golf course while I was the pro, but they'd better watch me now," he joked as he looked to the future.

Pampa County Club has designated July 2 at Hart Warren Day and will honor its long-time pro with a retirement party following a pro-am tournament as Warren turns over the head pro duties to his assistant, Mickey Piersall.

"He's been with us for 29 years and has been a tremendous asset to the club and to the members," said Club President Jim Gardner. "We're going to miss having him as our pro, but we're glad he'll still be with us as a member."

"He has been just outstanding for the growth of the club, not only the golf course portion," Gardner continued. "He's had to fill in as interim manager on several occasions and has helped us in a number of capacities. He's taught a lot of young people how to play golf and many are back now as members."

Later in July following his official retirement, Warren will start keeping that pledge to play more golf. He and his son Skip plan a nine-day golfing trip to Scotland, with one of the highlights a chance to play at the famed St. Andrews course.

Warren didn't become a golf pro by design, but sort of wandered into the field. As a schoolboy in Florida, his main interests were baseball and golf.

"The war came along and wrecked baseball and I realized pretty quickly that it takes two to play tennis," Warren recalled. "But I could always go out and play golf."

"I also realized that I could play baseball until I was, perhaps, 32, but I could play golf all my life," he said.

After graduation from high school, he was playing professional baseball with a St. Louis Cardinal farm team in Pennsylvania when World War II broke out and he entered the armed services.

He was assigned to special services and his ensuing involvement with golf and golf courses led to his lifelong occupation.

After the war, Warren got a job as a club pro in Kentucky. His brother, an assistant coach at Texas Tech, heard about a pro job at the Levelland Country Club and told Hart about it. He applied, was hired and came to Texas in 1954.

He had been at Levelland for six months when he learned about the Pampa Country Club opening. He came here Dec. 1, 1954, and has been an integral part of the Pampa golfing scene ever since.

Warren has been a member of the PGA since 1948. Membership in the country club has about doubled, from around 300 to about 600, since he arrived.

The main difference in the golf course now, Warren said, is the number of trees.

"There were very few trees on the course when I came," he said. "I must have planted a thousand trees here in the last 25 years."

Warren says he has enjoyed his association with members and golfers through the years and feels that and the outdoor life of his occupation has been physically beneficial. You have to believe him. He's 65 now and moves, acts and talks with the mannerisms of one much younger.

In recent years, Warren has turned over teaching duties of his assistant, Piersall, but he has taught the fundamentals of the game to many golfers through the years.

Warren said he had no special technique for teaching. "I always thought I was pretty good at detecting a flaw in a golfer's swing quickly showing them how to correct it," he said.

Perhaps his top student was Richie Ellis, who now lives in Dallas. Ellis has won the Top 'O Texas Tournament five times, including one string of four in a row.

Warren is also proud of the fact that four of the five members of a Pampa High golf team in the fifties are now club professionals, themselves.

Warren has two sons and two grandchildren. Skip is an attorney with the well-known law firm, Fulbright and Jaworski of Houston. Thomas is an engineer with a Houston oil company.

Warren was married in Sanford, Fla., in 1941. His wife died in 1961. He married Ava Swafford in 1963 and they observed their 21st anniversary in April of this year.

As he looked back over his career, Warren said "It makes you feel good to think you might have accomplished some things and helped some people through the years."

"I thought you were going to ask that and I've been thinking about it," he told an interviewer who questioned him about any particular highlights of his career.

"There's nothing in particular that stands out. But one of the things that amazes me is those trees. They were just twigs when I put them out, but look at some of them now. I just marvel at their size."

So that might be something for Pampa Country Club golfers to remember. Don't cuss the trees when your tee shot catches a limb or you wind up with a huge trunk between your ball and the green. They may be frustrating obstacles to you. But they're kind of a memorial to Hart Warren.

Strap up your children

Dear editor,

The most important thing in my life are my children and husband & all of you whom I have the pleasure of being friends with; but I am having a very hard time trying to figure out how I am going to be sympathetic to you when one of your children dies because you did not put their seat belts on or put them in the child - safety seat that sits vacant in the back seat of your car.

My five-year-old even notices other children in cars that go by us on the road that are not strapped in and he says "why don't their moms make them put their belts on?"

Moms, our kids feel like it is our responsibility to take care of them even though they fit and fuss about what we make them do, and I feel they are being let down when we say, "It's just down to the end of the block" or "We're only going to be store" or "I'll be real careful", etc...

The drunk down the street is saying the same thing and so is the person whose brakes fail and the person who is arguing with their children and doesn't see that they are on the wrong side of the road.

I can hardly believe it when one of you says "I had to stop quick today and 'Jimmy' hit the dash" and then the very next day I see you driving and your Jimmy is still standing in the front seat. How in the heck are you going to live with yourself if Jimmy dies and you live.

I just shake my head and cry because one of these days one of my dearest friends is going to call and tell me that some idiot ran into them and Jimmy didn't make it. It breaks my heart because I know that your children mean as much to you as mine do to me... the world.

Enforcement supported

Dear Editor,

In 1980, City Ordinance 861 was passed, which provides penalties for trashed lots. In 1981, City Ordinance 902 was passed, which provides penalties for junked vehicles.

In 1984, we have more trashed lots and junked vehicles than one person can count in many days. How come? Possibly, one reason is that those who oppose these ordinances have been vocal while those who favor them have kept quiet.

We believe that these ordinances were passed for the community good and support their enforcement. If anyone else out there wants to add their voice to the chorus or seek support for their own neighborhood improvement program, please call our coordinator, Dolores Spurrier, 665-7079.

Market investors tough group to please

NEW YORK (AP) — If there was ever any doubt, stock-market investors have made it plain lately that they're a tough bunch to please.

The economy right now looks, on paper at least, like a classic picture of prosperity. Its growth is strong and persistent, and inflation remains at bay.

In a "flash" estimate issued Wednesday, the Commerce Department put growth of the gross national product, the nation's total output of goods and services, at a 5.7 percent inflation-adjusted annual rate for the second quarter of the year.

At the same time, it raised the figure for growth in the first quarter from 8.8 percent to 9.7 percent.

To top that off, the department calculated the annual inflation rate for the second quarter at 2.8 percent, down from 3.9 percent in the first quarter. No sign of "overheating" there.

President Reagan called the latest report "remarkably good news." Many analysts said his elation was understandable, since it seemed to reinforce his chances for re-election in November. But the response to the numbers, which were a lot stronger than just about everyone expected, was much different on Wall Street. Bond prices tumbled, sending long-term interest rates higher, and stocks sold off, too.

IBM shakes up industry

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM's price cuts on its personal computers are quickly rippling through the industry.

The most notable effect is on those companies that make computers compatible with software designed for International Business Machines Corp.' own desktop computers.

The success of these "plug-compatible" makers depends on their ability to sell me-too products at a lower price than IBM's own computers, or at least to offer a similarly priced machine that has more features than IBM's.

But IBM recently threw those companies a curve by slashing prices by up to 23 percent across its entire personal-computer line.

Industry trackers said the plug-compatible makers had no choice but to follow suit, and some did this past week.

ITT Corp. in New York cut prices on some of its Xtra personal computers by up to 24 percent. Corona Data Systems Inc. of Thousand Oaks, Calif., dropped prices from 11 percent to more than 20 percent on its computers and from 22 percent to 34 percent on add-on products.

Some analysts said IBM's price cuts reflect its push to triple personal-computer shipments this year to more than 1 million units, which is quickly lowering the company's manufacturing costs.

The same cannot be said for many of the small plug-compatible makers, said John Kiefer, a senior analyst at the research firm InfoCorp in Cupertino, Calif.

"In this price-cutting round, I suspect that given fairly modest expectations, they'll do fine," Kiefer said. "But they won't continue to experience stellar growth and, as IBM continues to bring prices down, clearly they'll be in real trouble."

Wal-Mart's assistants are named

Richard Barbour, manager of the new Wal-Mart store in Pampa which is preparing for its opening, has announced the appointment of four assistant managers for the store.

They are Gary Rohde, Herbert Bridgeman, Jack Nickels and David Smith.

Rohde and his wife, Denise, have moved to Pampa fromushing, Okla. They have one child, Kristin, age 16 months.

He has been with Wal-Mart for over seven years, working in three different stores in Oklahoma. He started with the company as an hourly associate in Stillwater, Okla.

Nickels is a native of Amarillo who said he is looking forward to working and living in Pampa. He recently joined Wal-Mart as an assistant manager, bringing with him 7½ years of discount retail experience.

Bridgeman and his wife, Louise, are moving from Pochontas, Ark., store. They have one son, Joseph, who plans to attend college at Abilene Christian in the fall.

Bridgeman joined Wal-Mart in 1978 and has worked in four different Wal-Mart stores in Arkansas and Missouri.

Smith has been with Wal-Mart for only a month, but he has an extensive retail background.

He and his wife, Vickie, have two children, Shawn and Dawn.

Salvadoran rightist linked to envoy's death plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior U.S. official said Saturday there is "lots of information" linking Salvadoran rightist leader Roberto D'Aubuisson to an alleged assassination plot against Ambassador Thomas Pickering.

But Sen. Jesse Helms, D-N.C., a D'Aubuisson supporter, called the charge "a fabrication" and attributed the allegation to erroneous newspaper accounts.

Nonetheless, the Reagan administration found the evidence compelling enough to dispatch Ambassador-at-large Vernon Walters to El Salvador last month to meet with D'Aubuisson.

D'Aubuisson, who lost the May 6 national elections to President Jose Napoleon Duarte, accused Pickering of providing financial support to Duarte's campaign.

Helms also objected to Pickering's alleged activities and called on President Reagan to fire him. Reagan ignored the appeal.

The U.S. official, speaking on condition he not be identified by name, said the evidence against D'Aubuisson and his followers is "circumstantial" but clearly indicated an attempt on Pickering's life was being planned. The official said there was "lots of information" about the alleged plot, but he had no idea when and how it was to be carried out.

Helms said linking D'Aubuisson to an assassination plot against Pickering is "an absolute falsehood. There is no evidence that I have seen that he has even been said to be linked to. This is all a fabrication, insofar as I've been able to check, by the various newspapers." Helms, in an interview with the Raleigh News & Observer, also denied a published report that Reagan had called him into the Oval Office to tell him that his activities were inflaming a delicate situation in El Salvador.

"That's sleazy journalism, because there's not a word of truth in it, insofar as the president calling me down to the White House and chiding me," Helms said.

The administration has maintained that it did not take sides in the Salvadoran election.

Helms complained that the U.S. embassy in El Salvador was converted into an adjunct of the Duarte campaign, and he also criticized members of Congress who visited El Salvador for stating publicly that American aid would dry up if D'Aubuisson were elected.

Countdown under way for shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown began Saturday for Monday's maiden launch of the space shuttle Discovery, and the ship's first commander says his craft will continue the "rich tradition" of famous sailing vessels that bore that name.

The count started right on time at 3 a.m. EDT when test conductor Frank Merlino issued the traditional "call to stations" that summoned more than 50 engineers and technicians to their consoles in the control center three miles from the launch pad.

Liftoff for the 12th shuttle voyage is set for 8:43 a.m. EDT Monday, with return to Earth scheduled one week later at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. NASA opted to land at Edwards instead of returning Discovery to the launch site landing strip because it is a new ship and the wide-open California desert provides plenty of margin for error.

The six-person flight crew, including America's second woman in space, spent much of Saturday meeting with flight officials and reviewing the complex flight plan.

Commander Henry Hartsfield, the only space flight veteran in the group, and pilot Michael Coats practiced landings on the three-mile runway here in a Gulfstream jet modified to handle like a shuttle.

The other crew members are mission specialists Judy Resnik, Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane and payload specialist Charles Walker, a non-astronaut who is to refine a drug he says could help tens of millions of people.

The crew's official mission patch has a picture of a ghost ship, a full-masted 17th century sailing vessel.

Hartsfield explained that it "represents all the namesakes of the space shuttle Discovery."

Hartsfield, who flew on the fourth shuttle mission aboard Columbia two years ago, said Henry Hudson commanded a vessel of that name in exploring Hudson Bay and the Hudson River in the 17th century. Capt. James Cook explored the Pacific in another Discovery in the 18th century and three ships of that name have explored Antarctica. All five were British-built.

Hartsfield also noted that "Hudson's crew mutinied and put him afloat in a small boat and he was never seen again, and Captain Cook was killed in the Hawaiian Islands. It's my intention to come home with my ship," he added with a grin.

Discovery, which joins Columbia and Challenger in the shuttle fleet, will even hoist a sail in space — a 10-story-tall solar sail, part of a device which one day may convert the sun's light to electricity to power space stations. The crew also will deploy a communications satellite for the Navy, conduct experiments and take thousand of Earth mapping pictures.

Walker is the shuttle's first paying customer. His employer, McDonnell Douglas Corp., is reimbursing NASA $80,000.

He is to operate a machine that will take advantage of the weightlessness of space to separate biological materials in an electric field to produce a drug, identified only as a hormone extracted from protein.

Speculation on the identity of the substance has focused on interferon, a natural material which helps the body resist viral infections, including certain cancers, and urokinase, which dissolves blood clots.

Bullock hits Mattox

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock says effectiveness of Attorney General Jim Mattox's tax division is lacking and that additional funds and personnel are not a solution to the "problems" of the office.

"I do not think throwing money at the attorney general's office is going to solve the problem. It is going to take an awakening and a commitment... which I do not see," Bullock said in a letter sent to tax division chief Nolan Ward and the press on Friday.

Two weeks ago, Ward wrote Bullock and said the Legislature would be more likely to finance additional positions if Bullock would certify that each additional attorney would generate a minimum of $1 million in revenue for the state.

In reviewing the tax division collection record,

Confers with Mondale

Bentsen: No 'yes' man

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale talked about the vice presidency with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen on Saturday and, while conceding their differences on several issues, said, "I'm not looking for a homogenized ticket."

For his part, Bentsen said: "I will speak my views and I'll be candid about them and I think that's important. I don't think any president ought to be surrounded just with 'yes' people."

Bentsen was the first of two potential vice presidential choices who came to Minnesota to talk to Mondale Saturday. The other was Mayor Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco.

While Mondale moved ahead with his search for a running mate, aides disclosed that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy planned to appear with him on Monday, presumably to endorse Mondale for the presidential nomination.

When Mondale and Bentsen met with reporters after their two-and-one-half hour meeting, the questions centered on their differences on issues and on the perception that the Texas senator is a colorless campaigner.

Bentsen defended his campaign style by pointing out his record of overwhelming victories in Texas, most recently in 1982.

Bentsen supported much of the Reagan economic program in 1981 and also differs with Mondale on the nuclear freeze and the B-1 bomber.

"On many of these fundamental economic questions, there's a lot of common ground," said Mondale. "On arms control, he supports SALT II. He agrees with me on the annual Soviet summit conferences."

On the nuclear freeze, Bentsen said he backs an initiative that was supported by President Reagan that called for a freeze only after the United States was certain it had achieved parity with the Soviets.

Bentsen added that "just the other night, I voted to shelve the MX missile." The senator supported continuing research and development but not production. Mondale is flatly opposed to the MX.

Maxine Isaacs, Mondale's press secretary, confirmed that Kennedy would fly to Minnesota Sunday night and make a public appearance with Mondale on Monday. She refused to say whether the Massachusetts senator would endorse Mondale, but other campaign sources said that was the purpose of the trip.

On the Republican side, Vice President George Bush told a voter registration rally in Houston — one of 700 being held around the country Saturday — that President Reagan has done such a good job of improving the nation's economy the Democrats must invent "gloom and doom" to use against him in their campaign.

"I think the country is tired of hearing the gloom and doom of the Democrats," Bush said. "They talk about war when we are at peace — when this country is more secure than it has been in 40 years. They talk about depression in the midst of the strongest economic recovery in three decades."

In Washington, meanwhile, the 184-member Democratic platform committee scheduled an all-day session to complete work on the platform that will be submitted to the convention in San Francisco next month for final approval.

Mondale's forces were dominant in shaping the campaign document. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson say they support most of it.

Jackson flew to Panama early Saturday for meetings with officials from three other Latin American nations trying to work out a peace plan for the region. He also plans visits to Nicaragua, El Salvador and Cuba before returning to the United States.

Hart remained in Washington where he has been meeting with aides to plot his strategy between now and the convention.

Two of his top advisors — Frank Mankiewicz and Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado — said Saturday they have recommended that Hart consider announcing a woman as his vice presidential running mate prior to the convention.

AGRICULTURE SCENE

Rains expected to help South Plains crops

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The South Plains of Texas, the state's major crop production area, finally got some rains this week, which should give a big boost to agricultural conditions. However, most other western areas remained dry.

The rains came in the nick of time to get the dryland crop up and off to a good start, said Dr. Zerie L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. And the moisture should also take some of the pressure off watering schedules in irrigated areas of the South Plains.

Parts of the Panhandle also got good rains to boost crops and ranges, but some counties remained dry, as is the case in Far West Texas. But the drought continued over the Rolling Plains, West Central and Southwest Texas and in South Texas and the Coastal Bend.

Most cotton farmers in the Rolling Plains and West Central Texas (San Angelo area) have "dusted in" their crop and need rain to get it up, Carpenter said.

Livestock conditions in these drought-stricken areas continued to deteriorate as forage and stock water declined. Ranchers are continuing to sell a lot of livestock; many have reduced herds 50 to 75 percent of normal and are having to feed animals they keep, noted Carpenter.

Wheat harvesting is making rapid progress and is centering on the Panhandle and South Plains, where operations are about to get into full swing. Only scattered fields remain to be harvested in the Rolling Plains and in northeastern and north central counties. This year's crop will be short, Carpenter said, due to the dry spring which reduced yields and also caused a lot of farmers to bale wheat for hay or to allow cattle to graze the crop.

Grain crops are moving toward maturity over much of South Texas and the Coastal Bend, with some early harvesting of grain sorghum along the Coastal Bend. Grain sorghum harvesting should start next week in South Texas, Carpenter said.

Reports from district Extension agents show the following:

PANHANDLE: Agricultural conditions have improved some from recent rains, but parts of the region remain dry. Recent heavy rains and hail caused heavy damage to some wheat, with losses up to 50 percent. Dryland wheat is being harvested, and harvesting of the irrigated crop will start soon. Most dryland cotton farmers got enough moisture to plant their crop. Ranges are below average.

SOUTH PLAINS: Good rains over most of the area have given a big boost to crops and pastures. The rains should get the dryland cotton crop off to a good start. A little cotton is still being planted, and grain sorghum planting remains active. Wheat harvesting is well under way, with yields better than expected.

ROLLING PLAINS: Most of the wheat has been harvested, with good to poor yields. A lot of cotton has been dry-planted and farmers need rain to get the crop up. Potato harvesting has started in Knox County. Ranchers are continuing to reduce herds — many herds are at 50 percent of normal — due to a shortage of forage and stock water.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat harvesting is about complete, with generally good yields. Cotton is squaring and looks good, but corn, grain sorghum and hay crops need rain. First hay cuttings are light. Pastures and ranges are declining due to lack of moisture.

NORTHEAST: Crops and pastures are in need of rain. A good wheat harvest is winding down. First hay cuttings have been completed; yields have been low. Peach harvesting continues; the crop is generally good. Farmers markets are active. Cattle are in fair to good shape.

FAR WEST: Scattered rains continued to boost crop and range conditions although parts of the region remain dry. Cotton is making good progress, and onions and cantaloupes look good. Pecans are developing on schedule.

WEST CENTRAL: Drought conditions continue to plague the area. Most cotton has been dry-planted and needs rain to germinate. Some cotton is up and stands are skippy. Most of the wheat has been harvested, with short yields of 10 to 12 bushels per acre. Freestone peaches are being harvested in Gillespie County. Livestock conditions continue to decline due to a lack of forage and stock water. Marketings and feeding remain heavy.

CENTRAL: Most cotton is making good growth, but corn, grain sorghum and hay crops need rain. Greenbugs are increasing in grain sorghum. First cuttings of hybrid sudan have produced low yields due to the dry spring. A good peach harvest is in progress. Some producers are feeding hay to livestock due to poor grazing conditions.

EAST: Hay making is active, with low yields. Harvesting of vegetables and peaches continues; brown rot is a problem in some peaches. Casebearer damage is widespread in pecans. Pastures have improved with recent rains but more moisture is needed.

UPPER COAST: Grain crops are moving toward maturity in some counties. Cotton is fruiting and looks good but bollworms are building up. Soybeans and peanuts are up to good stands. Hay making is in full swing, with fair to good yields. Pastures will need more rain soon for continued growth.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Some grain sorghum is turning color and cotton is setting bolls. Hay harvesting is in full swing, with rain needed for additional cuttings. The pecan crop and pastures need additional moisture.

Livestock are in good shape.

SOUTHWEST: Harvesting of cantaloupes, onions and cucumbers is active. The watermelon crop is down sharply due to drought conditions. Corn is in the roasting ear stage and grain sorghum is blooming. Cotton remains stunted due to recent cool temperatures. Most dryland crops have been grazed out or baled for hay due to poor prospects. Livestock feeding remains heavy since grazing is short.

COASTAL BEND: Dry conditions are continuing to hurt crops and livestock. Cotton is fruiting and needs rain. Some grain sorghum is being harvested while baling of corn for hay continues. Moisture is needed to plant peanuts and to boost hay crops and ranges. Cattle are in fair to poor shape, with supplemental feeding continuing.

SOUTH: Grain sorghum is maturing and harvesting should start next week. Cotton has set bolls and looks good although the egg lay of bollworms is heavy. Hay making continues, and tomatoes, squash, okra and peppers remain in good volume. Melon harvesting is winding down. Grazing remains short.

In Agriculture

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

When the weather changes - it can sometimes really change - who would have thought we would have this much cool, cloudy weather with the occasional showers at this time of the year. Especially after the hot, dry May.

A few early reports of wheat yields indicate that yields and test weight may be better than expected. Let's hope we can get this wheat crop harvested before we begin to have weed problems.

BINDWEED CONTROL

The Texas Highway Department will continue their bindweed control spray program using Roundup. They will spray bindweed on this highway right-of-ways where farmers certify they are trying to control bindweed in adjacent farmland.

They will again use Roundup since there is no drift problem or soil sterilant action. It kills the foliage and root system of green, growing vegetation that it is sprayed on. Since our recent rains have perked up bindweeds, maybe we can get better control this year than in the past when the weather and soil has been too dry for very good results.

Farmers need to come by the County Extension office and sign a certificate that you are actively trying to control bindweed on farmland adjoining state highways. Do this as soon as possible. We have a map and certificates to sign - up for this program in the Gray County Extension office.

While we are discussing bindweed control, let me mention that Dow Chemical Co. has recently obtained a new label on Tordon 22K for use in Texas and Oklahoma. This new label allows use of Tordon 22K for the control of annual and perennial broadleaf weeds such as bindweed between crops of small grains.

Rates of 1/4 - 1 pint per acre of Tordon 22K herbicide, tank mixed with 1-2 pints of 2,4-D, may now be applied following small-grain harvest for bindweed control in Texas. The new low rate is possible through a special local need registration that allows the next crop of wheat, barley, or oats to be sown on schedule.

The federal label for Tordon 22K calls for 1-1 1/4 gallons per acre for bindweed, but the land must be removed from cropping for one to two seasons, i.e., at least 15 months. This treatment virtually eradicates bindweed.

Weed control researcher Allen Wiese, Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, Bushland, has studied the 1-pint Tordon 22K plus 1-pint 2,4-D treatment for 10 years. According to Wiese, he has achieved an average of 71 percent bindweed control in 19 studies. Similar studies resulted in an average of 65.9 percent bindweed control with 2 pints of Banvel and 65 percent control with 1 gallon of Roundup.

The low rate of Tordon 22K can be applied in two ways under continuous cropping. One is to apply 1/4 pint of the herbicide tank mixed with 1 pound of 2,4-D after harvest. The land is left undisturbed until fall planting. A 1-pint rate may be a better choice of bindweed infestation is high, but stand reduction is a possibility.

The other application method is to put out 1 pint of Tordon 22K with 1 pound of 2, 4-D after wheat harvest and let the land lie fallow for one year. Then in May or June, 1/2 pint of Tordon 22K may be applied with 1 or 2 pounds of 2,4-D, followed by fall planting.

GRAIN SORGHUM INSECTS

Seeding grain sorghums has two potential aphid problems. It is very important that producers know the difference between these two aphids. The corn leaf aphid routinely infests sorghum, early. It is olive green in color with black legs. The whorl of the sorghum plant is the preferred feeding site, but they will occur on the leaves. They suck plant juices and produce considerable honeydew, but seldom cause enough damage to justify the cost of treatment. They are very helpful in establishing predator and parasite populations (beneficials) which may be important in controlling pest problems later in the season. The greenbug aphid occasionally is a problem in seedling sorghum. They can be very devastating when they hit grain sorghum this early. They are light green in color with a darker green area along the back. The greenbug sucks juices from the plant at the same time injects a toxin that kills plant tissues. Over time, entire leaves and plants can be killed from the feeding activity.

Some reports have been received indicating very isolated infestations of greenbugs in seedling sorghum of the northern Panhandle. Most indicate that the greenbugs are winged likely having come out of wheat as it matures. Producers need to check their fields. If greenbugs and their damage can be found on the seedling sorghum, an insecticide application may be justified.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

CITIES SERVICE OIL AND GAS CORPORATION

Panhandle East and West Gathering System Gray County

It has come to Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation's attention that some residences are receiving natural gas through unauthorized connections, or "tapping," onto the field gas pipeline serving the Panhandle East and West Gathering System. The residue pipeline system is not designed for safe use by residential owners. The gas is extremely hazardous for residential use since it is not odorized, and it may be subject to explosion and/or fire due to possible loss of pressure.

Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation will not accept liability for personal injury, death or property damage that may result from any unauthorized use of this natural gas. For the safety of those unauthorized users, and the public in general, we ask that action be taken immediately to disconnect any such gas pipeline connections and that all future tapping cease. Any failure to immediately disconnect unauthorized pipeline connections serving residences or other buildings will result in Cities Service taking whatever action is necessary, including legal action, to protect and retain Cities Service's property and to eliminate the safety hazard created.

Dixie Parts advance to tourney finals

National Little League champions Dixie Parts advanced into the finals of the City Tournament with a 5-4 win over American League champs Dean's Pharmacy Friday night.

Dixie will play again Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. for the championship. Dean's drops into the loser's bracket and will play the Vance Hall-Duncan winner at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Dixie scored three runs in the top of the first against Dean's on a two-run triple by Matt Brock and a single by Jason Becker.

Dean's rallied in the third on hits by Brad Cryer, Chris Morris and Cedrick Wilbon.

Dixie scored again in the fourth on a solo homer in the fourth by Brock.

Dixie scored its final run when Becker got on base on an error and then scored on a wild pitch by Quincey Williams to make it 5-3.

In the bottom of the sixth, Greg Wilson and Morris singled, then a flyball by Williams was dropped by the left fielder to score Wilson. Morris tried to score the tying run on the play, but was tagged out by catcher Donny Hulsey on a relay throw by pitcher Robert Hinds.

Hinds, the winning pitcher, allowed five hits while striking out 10. Williams allowed just three hits in the losing effort while striking out 11.

Dixie ended Dean's 16-game winning streak. Dean hadn't lost since the first game of the regular season. Dixie is now 16-2 overall while Dean is 16-2.

In other games Friday night, Vance Hall stayed alive with a 9-2 win over Glo-Valve. Winning pitcher was James Bybee while Ryan Teague took the loss.

One Bull Ranch remained in contention with an 8-2 win over Cal Corporation. Winning pitcher was Heath Summers and loser was Tony Peet.

NBA meeting

Layden named league's top executive

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — Frank Layden, who earlier was selected as the National Basketball Association's Coach of the Year after directing the Utah Jazz to its finest season in a decade of existence, on Saturday was named the league's Executive of the Year.

The announcement was made here at the league's annual meetings and during a luncheon where the jovial Layden was the object of a roast by his NBA peers.

Layden, who also is the Jazz general manager, received 31 votes from a 76-member panel of sports writers and broadcasters who regularly cover the NBA.

The runner-up was Norm Sonju, the Dallas Mavericks' general manager, with 14 1/2 votes. Boston Celtics President-General Manager Red Auerbach and Detroit Pistons General Manager Jack McCloskey tied for third with eight votes apiece.

Seven other team executives received one vote each.

Layden, 52, guided Utah to a 45-37 record and the Midwest Division championship this past season. The Jazz also advanced into the playoffs for the first time, losing to Phoenix in the Western Conference semifinals.

Layden assumed the dual role of coach and general manager in December, 1981, replacing Tom Nissalke. Utah finished 25-57 that season.

The Jazz wound up 30-52 a year ago, despite losing high scoring Adrian Dantley and John Drew to an injury and a drug problem, respectively, for most of the season.

Some of the Layden moves that gave Utah its finest season ever in 1983-84 included the acquisition of Dantley in 1979, the signing of All-Star guard Ricky Green three seasons ago when he was playing in the Continental Basketball Association, and the drafting of such pivotal players in Utah's success as center Mark Eaton, guard Darrell Griffith and Thurl Bailey.

Layden came to Utah as general manager from Atlanta in 1979, when the Jazz moved from New Orleans to Salt Lake City. Before then, Layden served three seasons as an assistance coach with the Atlanta Hawks, and prior to that, eight seasons as head coach of Niagara University.

Pryor wins rugged encounter with Furlano

TORONTO (AP) — It's not often that two boxers emerge from a 15-round war wearing smiles, but champion Aaron Pryor and challenger Nicky Furlano each had a great deal to be happy about after their encounter.

Pryor, appearing in the ring for the first time in eight months, successfully defended his International Boxing Federation junior welterweight crown Friday night with a unanimous decision against Furlano, who was knocked down twice in the first three minutes.

"I was predicting a knockout, but you know... I was trying," said Pryor, 28, of Cincinnati. "Nicky gave me exactly what I needed."

Furlano, 26, of Toronto, recovered from his early knockdowns and pestered Pryor the rest of the way.

"He hurt me at the start, but after that I was catching most of the punches on my gloves," said Furlano, the fifth-ranked contender for Pryor's title and the first fighter to take Pryor the distance since October, 1977.

Although Pryor hadn't been in the ring since he knocked out Alexis Arguello last Sept. 10 to retain his World Boxing Association junior welterweight title, most observers felt Furlano stood little chance of lasting the opening rounds against the champion.

Two crushing left hooks in the first round sent Furlano to the canvas in a heap and quickly silenced an outdoor crowd of about 5,000 fans. But just as the fans began to sense an early end, Furlano rose from the canvas and survived the round.

"There was no way in the world I was going to get knocked out," said Furlano, who weighed one-half pound more than Pryor in barely making the 140-pound limit.

"If you go down, you've got to get up and fight. I'd been hurt worse than that before."

Judge Vincent Rainone scored the bout 146-138, Chuck Williams had Pryor ahead 146-139 and Frank Brunette scored it 148-140. With the victory, Pryor pushed his record to 35-0, while Furlano fell to 38-8-1.

Pryor was in control from the outset but was tagged more than once by Furlano's well-aimed head and body shots.

"Nicky cranked me a couple of times," said Pryor. "He exposed me as being a little rusty."

"I have to respect Nicky because he's the first guy who's gone the distance with me in quite a while," he added. "Nicky tested me, it was the kind of fight that I needed."

Furlano, whose $75,000 payday was the largest of his eight-year career, said he has nothing but the utmost respect for Pryor, who earned $350,000.

"I don't think there's anybody in the world who's going to beat Pryor," said Furlano. "He's the greatest fighter I've ever fought."

"Pound for pound, he's the greatest fighter in the world."

Pryor said he now would like to meet WBA lightweight champion Livingstone Bramble and suggested Furlano challenge Ray Mancini, who lost his title to Bramble earlier this month in Buffalo, N.Y.

Tigers belt Brewers

DETROIT (AP) — Howard Johnson hit a three-run homer and Kirk Gibson had a solo shot Saturday behind the four-hit pitching of Milt Wilcox over eight innings as the Detroit Tigers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-1. Wilcox, 8-5, did not allow a runner past second until the eighth. Doug Bair pitched a hitless ninth for the Tigers.

A's down Rangers

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The lineup read Tom, instead of Tim, Conroy and the southpaw on the mound didn't pitch like Tim Conroy had all season.

But the Oakland A's think they've found the real article at last after watching Conroy fire fastballs past the Texas Rangers and allow only one hit in eight innings for a 5-1 victory Saturday.

"That's the Conroy we've been waiting on," said A's skipper Jackie Moore, who returned him to a starting role June 12 two weeks after taking over as manager. "We felt all along there was no doubt about his arm and his ability. It was just a matter of his confidence."

"One of these days we expect him to be a dominating pitcher," Conroy, 24, certainly was that against the Rangers, whose only hit was a solo homer by Alan Bannister on a 3-2 pitch with two outs in the fifth inning. Conroy walked two and struck out five before tiring in the eighth but he got hitless relief help from Bill Caudill in the ninth.

"This was what we all needed," said Conroy, 1-3. "I had a good fastball, tailing away, and that's almost all I threw."

It was Conroy's best game since coming up for the minors late in the 1982 season. He had a complete game five-hitter last season against Toronto, but against the Rangers he threw

Cubs edge Cardinals

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Owen's pinch-single with the bases loaded in the 11th inning gave the Chicago Cubs and Ryne Sandberg a 12-11 win Saturday over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Sandberg had tied the game 9-9 with a leadoff homer in the ninth off reliever Bruce Sutter and tied it again 11-11 with a two-out, two-run homer in the 10th off Sutter. Lee Smith, 4-4, was the winner; Dave Rucker, 1-1, took the loss.

Willie McGee had a bases-loaded triple in the second, a single in the fourth and a two-run homer in the sixth, then cracked an RBI double in the 10th that sent St. Louis ahead and made him the first Cardinal to hit for the cycle since Lou Brock did it in 1975.

The Cubs rallied in the bottom of the 10th with two runs.

Dernier belted a two-run double and Sandberg delivered a two-run single that highlighted Chicago's five-run rally in the bottom of the sixth that pulled the Cubs within 9-8.

Dodgers throttle Braves, 10-2

ATLANTA (AP) — Bill Russell hit a three-run double Saturday to spark the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 10-2 win over the Atlanta Braves.

With the score tied 2-2, the Dodgers started their sixth-inning outburst with two outs with two singles of loser Pascual Perez, 7-2, who walked the bases loaded, setting the stage for Russell's double.

Russell also had an RBI single and Candy Maldonado added a two-run double for three more runs in the eighth off reliever Donnie Moore.

The Dodgers also scored twice in the ninth off Gene Garber.

Winner Fernando Valenzuela, 7-8, retired the first 10 batters he faced and struck out eight of the first 10.

Dale Murphy doubled to start the Atlanta fifth and scored on a single by Ken Oberkfell, who later scored when second baseman Steve Sax booted Perez's grounder.

Valenzuela allowed four hits and finished with eight strikeouts before leaving in the seventh after walking the leadoff batter, Orel Hershiser worked the final three innings and gained his second save.

Amarillo sets first Triathlon

The first Amarillo Triathlon, patterned after the Hawaiian endurance event featuring swimming, bicycling and running, is set for Sept. 8 at Southwest Park in Amarillo.

"We are anticipating between three and four hundred people participating in the event," said Kevin Knapp, co-race director.

The limit will be 500 entrants and the cutoff date for entering is Aug. 27. All checks should be made payable to "The Amarillo Triathlon."

The Amarillo Triathlon, sponsored by the Amarillo National Bank and the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, will include swimming 800 meters (1/2 mile), bicycling 40 kilometers (24.8 miles) and running 10 kilometers (6.2 miles).

"We have had approximately 100 requests from throughout the state and surrounding states," said Tom Stauder, co-race director. "There has been a dramatic increase of interest in this sport within the last two to three years," he continued.

to Southwest Park and run 10 kilometers up 45th Street to Coulter and return.

Although the official starting time is 7 a.m., some athletes may not even enter the water until 9 or 10 a.m. The computer will figure out total clock time compared to starting time and produce the total race time. In essence, participants are competing against the clock, rather than against each other.

The announcement of the Triathlon is being made at an early date to give interested people time to sign up and prepare for the event. D. Tracy Skeen of 2606 Harmony in Amarillo was the first one to sign up for the competition.

"There are a lot of athletes in Amarillo who are extremely good in at least one of the three events," said Stauder. "We are hoping to generate enough excitement about the race to have these people train for the other two and compete in our triathlon," he continued.

The entry fee for the event will be $20 per person. The entrants will receive a t-shirt, bike cap and water bottle at the beginning of the race, and upon completion will be awarded a finishing prize.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in the nine different age groups, with separate categories for men and women. The overall men and women winners will receive a special award. Age categories include 60 years and up.

Aid stations will be located at the pool, the run and the cycling course.

There will be an awards banquet held at the Fifth Season Inn after the race to present the winners with their trophies.

"Because of the complex computer program system, we cannot register athletes for the race after Aug. 27," Knapp said.

To obtain registration forms, contact Kevin Knapp, Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, Box 9480, Amarillo, Tex. 79105. For more information, call (806) 373-7800.

Canadian rodeo starts July 2

Canadian's 96th annual Fourth of July Rodeo will be held July 2-4.

Performances are scheduled for July 2 at 8 p.m., July 3 at 7 p.m. and July 4 at 2 p.m. Events include saddle bronc riding, bareback bronc riding, bull riding, bull dogging, calf roping and girl's barrel race (one go). Each event will pay the first four places. Each winner will receive a buckle and an all-around buckle will go to the highest money winner.

Entries will be taken by calling (806) 323-5761.

A queen contest will also be held for girls 16 and over, single or married. The winner will receive a buckle. For more information on the queen contest, call 323-6994.

Kite takes lead in Atlanta Classic

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Kite, seeking a second title of the season, shot a 6-under-par 66 and took one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic.

Kite, the steady man who has finished in the top 10 in six of his last eight starts, completed three trips over the leg-straining hills of the Atlanta Country Club course in 202.14 strokes under par.

Don Pooley, twice a runner-up in this tournament, held second going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize. He was at 203 after a third round 67.

Pooley, playing in the same group with Kite, had a 2-shot lead after he scored four consecutive birdies beginning on the 11th hole, but lost three shots to Kite on the next two.

He regained part of the lead with a 10-foot birdie putt on the 17th, but could not match Kite's birdie-4 on the water-guarded final hole.

Tommy Valentine, who held the second-round lead, had to work hard to salvage a round of par 72 and drifted back to third at 205.

Scott Simpson, a winner at Westchester two weeks ago, vaulted over 53 players with his brilliant 63 that left him at 206.

Simpson, whose 36-hole total of 143 was the figure necessary to qualify for the final two rounds, played with the new U.S. Open champion, Fuzzy Zoeller, in the first group off the tee.

He was tied with Mike Donald, who had a 69. Payne Stewart was alone at 207 after a 69 that included an eagle-3 on the 18th.

Masters title-holder Ben Crenshaw could do no better than a 73 and was 10 shots back of the leader at 212. Zoeller also had a 73 and was at par 216. Hale Irwin withdrew because of an illness in the family.

Kite, winner of the Doral Open earlier in the season, holed three long putts — 25-35 feet in length — reeled a par-5 in two and 2-putted for birdie, but still was losing ground to Pooley's strong effort.

Pooley, who calls this "my favorite course," went two shots clear of the field with a wedge shot to seven feet on the 14th hole, his fourth consecutive birdie.

On the 15th, however, Pooley drove into deep trouble, had to play a shot away from the hole to get back in the fairway and made bogey-5. Kite birdied the hole from 10 feet. The 2-shot swing tied them.

Kite, however, went for the green with a 3-wood second shot on the par-5 finishing hole, got it in green-high in the rough, chipped close and birdied.

"I was just on the borderline of going for it," Pooley said. "Today I didn't. Tomorrow, I would."

He made a routine par that left him one back.

Peterson loses qualifying bid in decathlon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After working with handicapped kids who "have to hop to run 50 meters," decathlete Orville Peterson said the least he could do was finish what he started.

"I didn't want to be known as a dropout," said Peterson, who lost a bid to make the U.S. Olympic team Friday night but won a standing ovation for running his 1,500-meter finale despite a painful leg injury.

Limping so badly that he was overtaken early in his second lap, Peterson, finished dead last in the 13-man heat, his time (9 minutes, 44.80 seconds) so slow that he received zero points for the effort.

That left him with a final total of 7,124 points in the grueling two-day event, dropping him to 32nd in the 35-man field. John Crist of Atlanta, winner of the heat in 4:28.95, won the event with a score of 8,102.

Tim Bright of Santa Cruz, Calif., was second at 8,098 and Jim Wooding of Coatesville, Pa., finished third with 8,072 points.

Earlier this month, Peterson, from Vero Beach, Fla., amassed 8,015 points, the third-best total by an American this year.

But a hamstring strain in the first event of day, the 110-meter hurdles, crippled the chances for the 23-year-old from Campbell (N.C.) University.

It got worse in the discus and pole vault, but Peterson said nothing to the team trainer until the javelin competition, when the leg started "aching real bad. I didn't say anything because I was afraid they might make me withdraw."

"I had worked too hard to quit," he said after the race, as competitors and coaches expressed their admiration.

Earlier, when the seriousness of the injury was apparent, veteran decathlete

Fred Dixon, who was making his final appearance in the event, offered Peterson some personal advice. "Fred said 'Finish it if you can. You'll feel good about yourself.'"

Peterson said he never seriously considered withdrawing.

"I owed a lot more to other than I did to myself," said Peterson, whose father is a minister in Gifford, Fla. "A lot of people prayed for me and believe in me ... little people who could hardly help themselves."

After running his first lap in 1:24, Peterson's pace slowed to a painful crawl.

Rosario retains WBC lightweight title

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Edwin Rosario of Puerto Rico, gained a split decision over Howard Davis Jr. Saturday to retain his World Boxing Council lightweight title and remain undefeated.

The 21-year-old champion hit the challenger from Glen Cove, N.Y. with a stinging left hook with about 15 seconds remaining in the fight to put Davis on the canvas. It was a blow that decided the fight.

Referee Mike Jacobs of London, gave Davis a mandatory eight-count and it looked like Rosario would move in for a knockout. But the bell ended the 12-round fight.

In the final scoring, Sidney Nathan of London and Angel Tovar of Mexico gave the fight to the champion by a count of 115-114 and 117-113, respectively. Jose Juan Guerrero of Mexico, had Davis ahead by a 114-113 score.

The stunning finish of the fight was the second time Rosario was able to knock Davis, a gold medalist in the 1976 Olympics, down. The first time came in the second round, when Rosario unleashed a left hook, similar to the one that decked Davis in the final round, that put the 28-year-old down. But the Puerto Rican was unable to do much more with the challenger, ranked No. 2 in the lightweight division coming into the fight.

Rosario seemed content to box with Davis during the middle rounds, trying to be aggressive with right-and-left-hand combinations at the beginning and end of those rounds. He apparently was attempting to stay away from the long arms of Davis, who had a six-inch reach advantage over the champion.

At 5-foot-9½, Davis also stood nearly four inches taller than the champion and weighed 1½ pounds more.

Davis, who has outstanding speed, was never really able to capitalize on his physical advantages.

Rosario started the 10th round striking Davis with six consecutive right hands, almost at will. He was successful with the same tactic in the fourth round. Otherwise, it was a rather dull championship fight.

With the victory, Rosario moved his undefeated record to 28-0, while Davis suffered his second loss in the same number of fights.

Rosario must now fight Jose Luis Ramirez of Mexico, ranked No. 1 in the division, within 90 days.

The champion, in making his second defense — he won the title from Ramirez by decision on May 1, 1983 in San Juan.

Gunslingers kick off against Outlaws tonight

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Gunslingers Coach Gil Steinkamp would like to see his team finish this year's United States Football League season with the second-best record among the expansion teams.

His dream will either come true or be dashed tonight when the Gunslingers take on the Oklahoma Outlaws at Alamo Stadium.

The Gunslingers are favored by nine points in the Central Division rematch. The Outlaws won the first game 14-7.

Both teams own identical records of 6-11 and are tied for the third best mark among the league's six expansion teams. A San Antonio victory and a Memphis loss would move the Gunslingers into a tie for No. 2 with the Showboats.

"It would be nice if we could wind up with the second-best record for expansion teams," Steinkamp said. "Considering how bad some people thought we were going to be, that would be a pretty good accomplishment."

San Antonio is coming off a 29-26 loss to the Houston Gamblers, who came from behind to win on a 30-yard pass from Jim Kelly to Ricky Sanders late in the game.

"It's been a long season," Steinkamp said. "I hope we can suck it up and play well against Oklahoma. I think we had pretty good week of practice."

"The Outlaws have been a little stronger on defense than offense lately, but they still have enough firepower to be dangerous. This game is important to us and it's important to them," he said.

Oklahoma's attack has been hampered by the loss of quarterback Doug Williams, who underwent knee surgery two weeks ago.

Also on the injury list is running back Ernest Anderson, who sprained a foot in the Outlaws' 34-24 loss to Michigan last week. The Outlaws will also have to turn their minds a possible move to Norman, Okla., next season.

Outlaws owner Bill Tatham wants a more up-to-date home for his team than Skelly Stadium. If a suitable alternative isn't built or put on the drawing boards, Tatham has said he may move the team to Norman.

Norman is home for the University of Oklahoma and Owen Field, a modern 75,000-seat stadium. Tatham says "it's impossible to say" where the team will be next year.

More rooms for rent as motels springing up on I-30

By BILL WEBB
Texarkana Gazette

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Real estate developers say that may have been a hotel and motel shortage in Texarkana a few years ago could turn into a glut if current trends continue.

The situation has come into focus with the announcement of a new Sheraton Inn to be built in Texarkana and the possibility of another new hotel. A Dallas developer, Jerry Green, went before the Texarkana, Texas Planning and Zoning Commission several weeks ago for preliminary approval for a six-story hotel. Green indicated at that time that the new hotel might be a Hilton.

This comes on the heels of the opening of several new economy motels near the intersection of Interstate 30 and State Line Avenue. Super 8, Motel 6 and La Quinta opened in the last year and Holiday Inn, also located at that intersection, says it plans to build an additional 33 rooms to its existing, 75-room, three-story structure.

"We talked to the La Quinta people when they announced they would build here and asked them why they chose Texarkana," said Stuart Daniels of The Texarkana Chamber of Commerce.

"They said Texarkana was a good growth potential market. They said while it isn't tremendously strong right now it shows good growth potential and is a good place for a motel investment."

Chamber of Commerce figures show Texarkana has just under 2,000 rooms available throughout the city. But Green said his firm's market survey showed there was room and a need for a luxury hotel in the city.

"There have not been that many properties brought into the market in the last 15 years," Green said. "And none of those have been what is considered luxury lodging. The market we're after is the traveling businessman and a share of the convention business and our part of the family lodging."

But Darius Gray, assistant manager of Holiday Inn in Texarkana, says what might be a shortage now could turn into a glut in the years to come.

"I would say in the next five years the market is going to get pretty flooded," Gray said. "All these places are popping up here in about a one-mile radius, and before long someone is going to be going out of business or not getting very much business at all."

Daniels said the location of the major highways through Texarkana makes the State Line intersection the most obvious location of lodging outlets.

"There is a tremendous traffic count that goes through that intersection there," Daniels said. "You're looking at 500,000 people a year stopping at the tourist bureaus. But there are some other areas in town, especially with the development of the new fairgrounds and the loops, where we could see this type of growth."

But Green said those growth areas are limited. "In my opinion that intersection out there on I-30 and State Line is the only place feasible enough to build the kind of development we're looking at," Green said.

"Our market study shows the area can support one luxury hotel — such as the one we're looking at — but not two."

Gray said Holiday Inn is at full occupancy most weekdays and that most of that business is generated by business travelers. But that is contradictory to figures released by the Texas Highway Department.

Those figures show that a majority of the one-night lodgers, 76 percent, are vacation travelers while 20 percent is business traffic and the other 4 percent convention travelers.

Howard Johnson's in Texarkana has recently completed a new convention center, and plans for the two new hotels in Texarkana call for convention facilities. Daniels said he feels the convention business will continue to improve.

"I think the convention business will definitely pick up," Daniels said. "Howard Johnson's has developed convention facilities and I think more will follow."

"I think the entire picture looks better and will continue to improve."

For Horticulure

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

The rains have certainly helped our landscapes perk - up and wake on a pretty - spring - like appearance.

It seems that landscapes are just like field crops - when it is rainy weather, irrigation water just doesn't do as good of job as rain from mother nature.

Gardens, flowers, shrubs and grass have really grown during the last two weeks of cool, rainy weather.

I still see shrubs that should have already had all of the dead growth pruned out. Better to do it now as later. I pruned several shrubs in my yard very severe - almost to the ground. They are coming out with new growth, and I expect to have new looking shrubs later this summer.

A lot of homeowners will have an extra amount of grass clippings after these good rains. Don't waste those clippings - either mulch your garden or flower beds, or make a compost pile.

Benefits from organic mulches such as grass clippings occur primarily in the summer by reducing soil temperatures and saving soil moisture. Organic insulating effect and keep the soil temperature cool. This will result in delayed maturity of most of the popular home garden vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers and squash.

Mulches composed of organic matter should be applied to the depth of two to three inches around growing plants. When organic mulches are used such as grass clippings, compost leaves or cottonseed hulls, it is usually necessary to increase the amount of garden fertilizer by about one third to compensate for the nutrients used by the microorganisms during the breakdown process. The biggest benefit of using organic mulches is that they can be turned under at the end of the garden season to improve the physical condition of your soil.

Compost is a good chance of organic matter for gardens and flower beds. Furthermore, composting is an excellent way to dispose of garden debris, leaves and similar plant material.

Make the compost pile 4 to 6 feet wide and any length, depending on material and space available.

The simplest composting method is to alternate 4 to 6 inch layers of plant matter, such as leaves or grass with 2 to 4 inches of good garden soil. Add manure to the soil layer if it's available, and sprinkle commercial fertilizer on each layer of plant matter to hasten decomposition. Use a cupful of fertilizer with a 1 - 1 - 1 ratio per 10 square feet.

The top layer of the compost pile should be soil and the surface should form a basin to hold water. Water each layer of organic matter before adding the soil layer.

Water the pile thoroughly when completed. Add water as needed to keep the material moist but not soggy. Leaves decompose slowly if too dry.

Turn the compost every three to four months to aerate the material and speed decomposition. Within six months to a year, your compost will be ready to use and you'll be glad you saved those grass clippings.

Belize: rustic charm personality intrigue

Belize? Where's that? Well... do the British Honduras ring a bell? Belize is the name of a British colony in Central America once known as the British Honduras which is now independent — only Guatemala doesn't know it. Guatemalans have always thought that Belize belonged to them.

Brian Hanson of Pampa recently returned from two weeks of scuba diving off the Great Barrier Reef of Belize and touring the surrounding countryside and ancient Mayan ruins found in the region. A veteran world traveler, Hanson discovered that Belize — his 70th country to visit — was full of rustic charm, personality and intrigue.

Hanson met four of his frequent traveling companions at Belize: Max Gallimore and Larry Aucin, both of Atlanta, Ga.; Cliff White of New Orleans, La., and Perry Boone of Memphis, Tenn. Their intent: to scuba dive the longest barrier reef (175 miles) in the western hemisphere. Gallimore, a member of the prestigious Explorer's Club, was to study the ecology of the barrier reef.

The dives were based at San Pedro, a quaint fishing and diving village on Ambergris Caye off the coast of Belize. One particular dive stands out in Hanson's memory — his encounter with a hungry shark.

The group was diving with their dive master — a Belizean named Adolpho. Hanson explains, when Adolpho speared a red snapper, then beat the fish on a rock to kill it. Naturally, the fish's blood spread through the water.

"It wasn't long before a six- or eight-foot bull shark came tearing toward us," Hanson said. "I have seen a lot of sharks when diving, but I had never seen one so aggressive before."

The divers waited without moving while the shark continued to circle them, looking for the fish he smelled. Finally, Adolpho let the shark have the fish and the predator swam away, leaving some shaken divers to rise slowly to the surface. The least-experienced of the group, Hanson said, was left with less than 100 pounds of pressure in his air tank which is the same as barely having any air to breathe. A close call to be sure.

One day, Hanson and some of his friends decided to rent a car and drive to Guatemala to see the majestic temples of Tikal, Mayan ruins.

The Guatemala-Belize border is guarded by 1,600 British troops who try to insure Belize's independence. As was said before, Guatemalan authorities do not recognize Belize as a separate country. Guatemala is split internally between guerrillas and federal forces. Hanson found out about this, first hand.

Vigilantes stopped the car, forcing the men out to be searched. As the guerrillas were searching through the car Hanson's heart nearly stopped as he remembered a book on Vietnam he was reading. The book contained graphic pictures from the Vietnam war. He prayed the soldiers would not be offended by what they saw. Sure enough, the book was found. The men flipped through the pages, commenting in Spanish on the pictures. But, Hanson and his friends were released and allowed to go on into Guatemala.

But that wasn't the end of their troubles, however. The muffler fell off of their rented car, a nondescript 1979 Ford. Hanson wired the muffler back as best he could with what wire he could find. "It sounded like a tank," he said. With the political unrest of the country the way it was, the last thing they wanted to do was attract attention.

Somehow, despite the guerrillas, "federales" — who also stopped them, and the loud muffler, the travelers made it to the ruins of Tikal.

Perhaps the best known of the ancient Mayan temples of Tikal is the Temple of the Jaguar. A gigantic pyramid shaped building rising from the jungles of Guatemala. Hanson was impressed with the size of the temples as well as the Mayan ingenuity of building the temples from stone without mortar.

Other Mayan ruins Hanson visited included Xunantunich on the border of Belize and Guatemala and the jungle-clad ruins of Altun Ha, a Maya city-state and ceremonial center which flourished 10 to 17 centuries ago.

Hanson found Belize City a charming town, although he said, "Belize City will never win a prize as one of the world's prettiest towns." He enjoyed the narrow streets lined with quaint seaside cottages and filled with people whose faces reflect the varied heritage of the country — shipwrecked British sailors, fugitive pirates, African slaves and European adventurers and, of course, the Mayan descendants.

While in Belize, Hanson attended church services at St. John's Cathedral, the oldest Anglican church in Central America. Its corner stone is dated 1812.

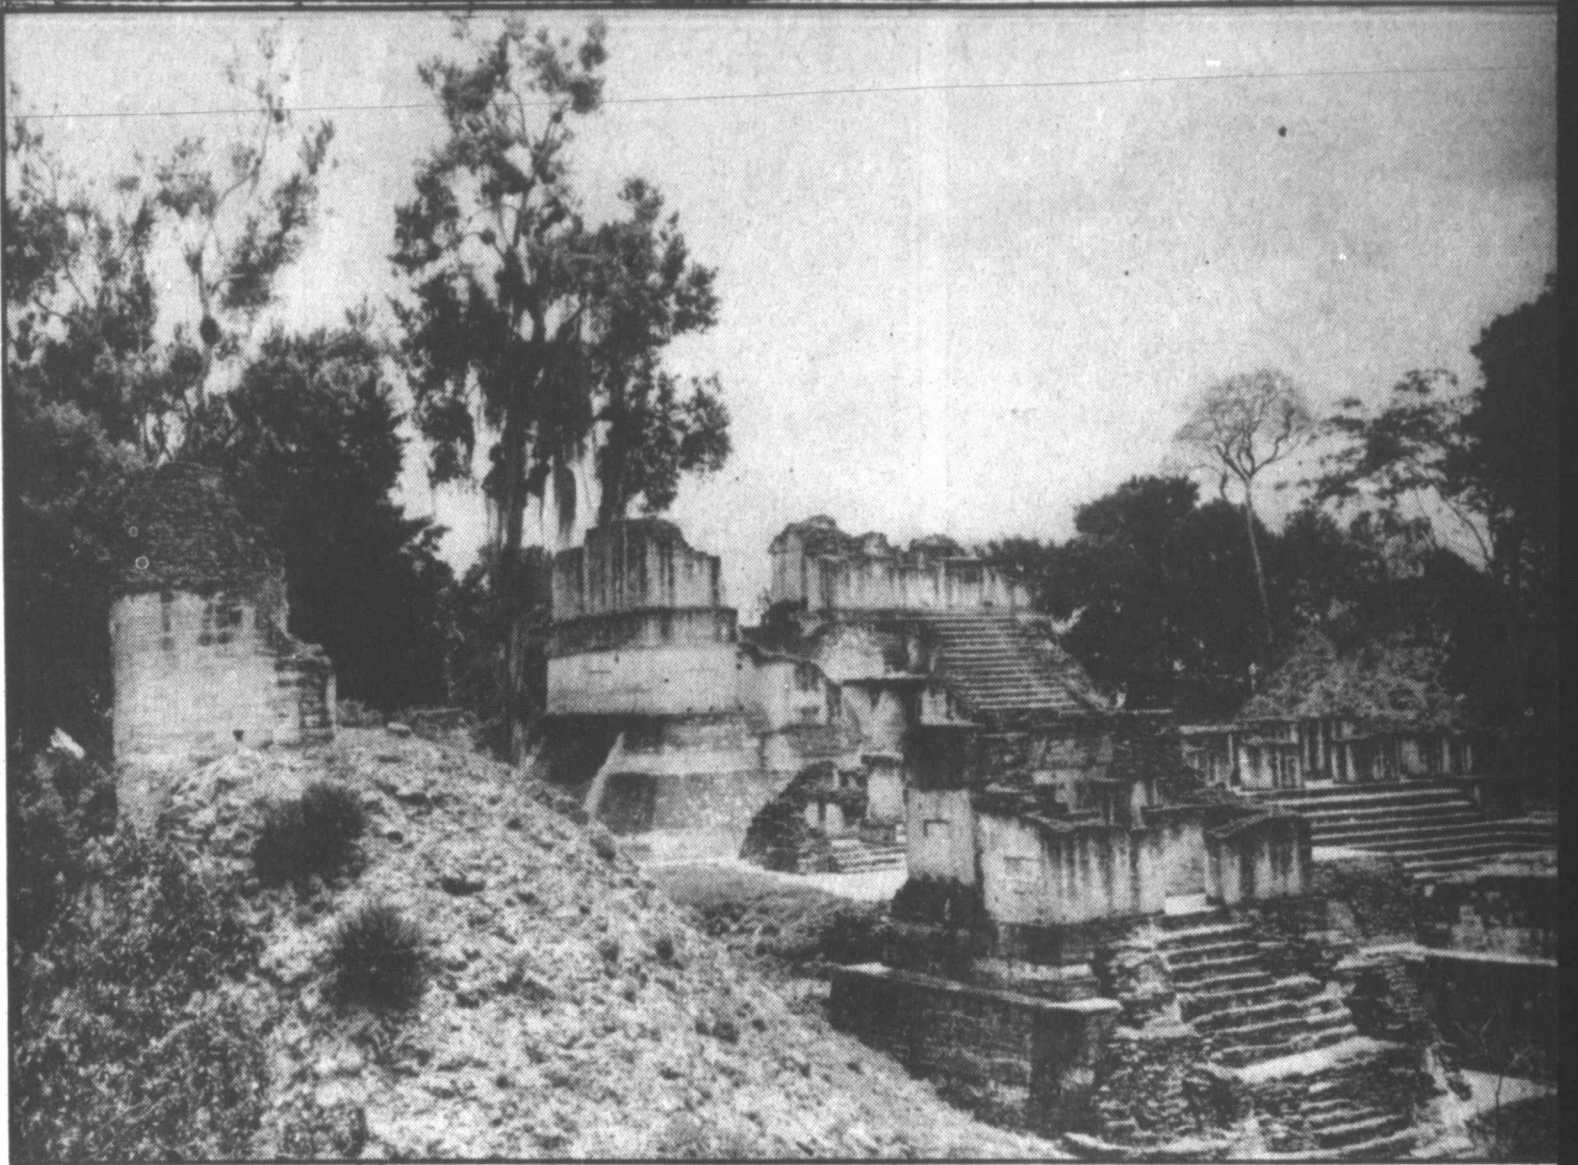

Another of Hanson's favorite spots in Belize is beautiful and unspoiled Pine Mountain Ridge area near the Guatemalan border with its spectacular waterfalls and endless pine forests.

German Mennonite settlements are scattered throughout Belize, Hanson said. Hardy, plain-living Mennonites have carved beautiful farms from the dense Belizean jungles. It is through this sect's efforts that Belize receives most of its dairy and farm products.

English is the central language of Belize, although Spanish is commonly heard. Some Mayan and Creole dialects are also spoken in the country.

The average family earns about $1,000 per year in Belize, compared to the U.S. per capita income of $13,000. However the country's literacy is extremely high at 80 percent.

First inhabited by the Mayans, Belize was later explored by the Spanish, but not inhabited by westerners until the early 1600s. Loggers came in to harvest the great hardwood forests, filled with such woods as mahogany. These loggers brought the English influence to Belize. Black Carib Indians, Chinese and Lebanese have also left their marks on this country.

TEMPLE OF TIKAL — Although centuries of jungle rains and vegetation has taken their toll, this huge Mayan temple in Tikal still retains its regal pose. Look closely about two thirds of the way up the temple steps, and you'll see the tiny figure of Brian Hanson which will give you an idea of the immensity the ancient structure.

OPEN AIR MARKET — a young Belizean, probably a descendent of the Black Carib Indians who came to Belize, stands at a fish stall in the Belize City open air market. Fish caught from the waters of the barrier reef are a staple of the coastal city residents' diet.

New addition to McCall family arrives from Korea

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

Nancy McCall of Pampa doesn't know who wrote this little verse, but when she read it she knew that these few lines said perfectly what she and her husband, John McCall, felt about adopting little Mee (beauty) Rim (beautiful precious stone) from a Korean orphanage.

She had the verse written in calligraphy and underneath it their daughter's new name, Sarah Beth MeeLee McCall. Framed, it now hangs in Sarah's room.

Tiny, five-month-old Sarah was placed into the arms of her new family on June 14 in a Dallas airport, five months after the McCalls had begun adoption proceedings — this in itself is miraculous, Mrs. McCall believes, considering that adoptions now sometimes take as long as seven years and seldom less than two.

John and Nancy McCall, the parents of two blonde-headed sons, Andrew, 9, and Michael, 4, decided they wanted another child, a daughter. They had a good home they decided, and they wanted to share their home with a child who might not have one otherwise. So they chose to adopt their next child.

The McCalls tried to adopt through a local agency, knowing that finding an infant would be next to impossible. They hoped to be able to adopt a little girl, toddler age to about six years old. After 14 months, the couple still had not been successful in finding a child.

Then they heard about Dillon International Inc. out of Tulsa. Mrs. McCall said she had heard of the agency before, but they had not been handling adoptions for some time. Then the agency began arranging adoptions again last fall, she said.

The McCalls began adoption proceedings through Dillon in January, the same month little Sarah was born. "She was just meant to be ours," Mrs. McCall said.

Adoptions are not simple. Prospective parents don't just lay down their money and walk out with a child.

The McCalls began with a pre-application costing $15. After passing that step, they proceeded with the formal application.

Here's a few of the things needed when applying for an adoption: a family photo, a photo of the inside of the house, a photo of the outside of the house, proof of good mental and physical health, certification that the wife is not pregnant, birth certificates, fingerprints, high school diplomas, proof of citizenship, marriage certificate, brief autobiography, letter of recommendation from employer, current balance of checking and savings accounts plus a letter from your banker concerning your reputation, copies of last years income tax return and then you go through a homestudy by an outside agency. Adoption is not easy.

Since the McCalls were adopting a Korean child they also had to go through basically the same process with the immigration department. Living in Pampa the McCalls were to work through the Dallas immigration office. Mrs. McCall found, however, that only tape recordings answer the phones in Dallas, so she went through El Paso's immigration office to get all her phones. She was never able to contact a live person in the Dallas office, she said.

Once all the formalities were passed, all the McCalls could do was wait. On June 12, they received the call — their daughter was on the airplane heading towards the U.S. from Korea.

But their waiting had only begun. The McCalls knew that Sarah could be taken from the plane at any stop if she showed signs of illness. And they would know nothing until the airplane arrived in Chicago. Usually, officials phones from the Chicago airport to tell the adoptive parents that the baby had arrived in the U.S.

The McCalls headed for Dallas as soon as they heard Sarah was coming. On Thursday, however, they never heard from Chicago. Finally — although it seemed like an eternity — they contacted someone in Chicago who saw Sarah's name on one of the flight lists. They knew their daughter was only hours away.

Waiting in the airport, Mrs. McCall remembered seeing a fat, healthy Korean baby brought off the plane. She thought it was Sarah, but the baby was handed to someone else. And then finally, a beautiful, tiny Korean baby with shiny black hair cropped in front and standing up in back was placed in her arms.

"I wanted her to be healthy, but I'm so glad she's pretty, too," Mrs. McCall said. She doesn't know why her hair is cut the way it is, Mrs. McCall said. "We just call her our little punk rocker."

McCall has spent the past few days passing chocolate bars around with a cover that says "It's a She," Mrs. McCall said. She said he came in one evening to find her standing by Sarah's bed. "It's different having a baby in the house," she said he told her. "But it sure is nice."

Mrs. McCall emphasized that it is quite possible for couples wanting to adopt a baby to find one through Dillon Inc. "I want everyone to know that anyone has a good chance of getting a baby real soon."

Anyone interested in more information, may write Dillon International Inc. at 7615 E. 63rd Place South, Tulsa, Okla., 74133 or by phoning Mrs. McCall at 665-7852.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

There are four kinds of people who buy garments with a label inside that reads, DRY CLEAN ONLY.

There are those who don't sweat, those who do not declare all of their income to the government, and those who cannot read a word of English.

I belong to the fourth group. I'm an idealist who never believe a bird will spritz us when we are indoors. We never imagine there will be a fresh blueberry (for which there is no antidote) on a park bench. We never consider the odds of reach for salt and having our bosom drag through the gravy on our roast beef.

No, we just dance along the yellow brick road like we have some sort of immunity to the stains and spots of life. Clothing manufacturers wait for people like me to be born — people who pick up a garment that looks like you can throw it in the washing machine and who never read the label until we have fallen in love with it and taken it home.

I would like to think I am the same person when I wear a DRY CLEAN ONLY as I am when I'm wearing a MACHINE WASHABLE, but who am I kidding? I'm as tense as a bullfighter entering the arena with irregularity problems. As I slide a pure silk dress over my head (that I THOUGHT was polyester when I bought it), I pinch my lips together until they turn white. Not good enough — I still get lipstick on the collar.

As I wash my hands, water splashes down the front of it. The oil from the car door grabs at it. When I walk into a room, friendly dogs come out of nowhere and small children with sticky fingers throw their arms around my neck. Speaking of necks, I am careful not to put makeup on it, yet it secretes a ring-around-the-collar that cries for the work of a professional cleaner.

What's a woman to do? I bought a little cotton jacket the other day that I thought was "safe." It was one of those casual, perma-wrinkle things where you pushed the sleeves up and wore it over slacks. I threw inhibitions to the winds. I ate tomatoes in it and an ice cream bar. I stood under trees, pumped my own gas and brushed my teeth while wearing it. When I went to toss it into the washer, I saw the label, "DRY YOU KNOW WHAT."

As a friend of mine said when I gave her a hand-painted bib at a baby shower that said, "DRY CLEAN ONLY" ... "Erma, you're a loser."

Dear Abby Stepchild casts approving vote for loving stepparents

DEAR ABBY: With both Mother's Day and Father's Day behind us, I would like to make a pitch for a forgotten minority: stepparents. I have two wonderful parents who divorced, and each married another wonderful person.

My stepdad has helped me out through some tough times—financially and emotionally. My stepmother is a caring, considerate person who makes our time together special and fun.

It's hard to be a stepparent. They have to work twice as hard to get the love and respect that natural parents get automatically.

For Mother's Day, I bought two presents. And I did the same for Father's Day. I feel lucky to have four parents who love me.

I hope this letter makes other stepchildren realize that some stepparents really care.

STEPKID

DEAR STEPKID: What a lovely letter. If other stepkids learn from it, it will be a step in the right direction.

DEAR ABBY: I should have realized I had chosen the wrong man when we went shopping for an engagement ring and he said to the clerk, "Show her the cheapest ring you have."

We had no honeymoon because he thinks honeymoons are a waste of money. He has never given me a birthday or anniversary gift. He's never complimented me on my appearance, cooking or anything else.

He says I shouldn't waste money on clothes or beauty shops because I'm only a housewife and don't need to look nice. I gave up outside employment four years ago to become a full-time mother.

Major decisions that should have been made jointly, such as selecting a house, he made alone, without consideration for my taste or opinion.

Because of the way he treats me, I no longer have any sexual interest in him. He was always very selfish in that respect anyway.

After eight years of this so-called "marriage," I am sick of being a doormat. I've begged him to see a marriage counselor, but he refuses, saying, "If you don't like things the way they are, we should just split up."

I would do just that, but being a single mother with two young children to support would be a terrible burden. I might add, he is from a foreign country where wives are expected to do as they're told and shut up.

What do you advise?

STUCK IN CHICAGO

DEAR STUCK: You have two choices: You can spend the rest of your life in a loveless marriage with a selfish man who treats you like a doormat, or you can give this ultimatum: "Either make an honest effort to improve our marriage with counseling, or it's all over."

There are worse fates than being a single mother with two young children to support. And one of them is continuing as you are.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "CAN FORGIVE BUT CANNOT FORGET IN MANHATTAN": What you are saying is that you cannot truly forgive. Heed the words of George Herbert, 17th-century English poet and philosopher: "He who cannot forgive others destroys the bridge over which he himself must pass."

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Conserve water in summer

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

The summer fun of swimming, cool drinks and even car - washing, all require an ample water supply that we often take for granted. By now, most of us realize that groundwater supplies are being depleted faster than they can be renewed. Even with our recent rains, lakes are still below normal levels and water supplies have not improved greatly. All of this means that everybody needs to do their part to conserve water.

Here are some suggestions for reducing the amount of water we casually waste at home:

Keep a thermos of cool water on the kitchen cabinet or a jug of water in the refrigerator. Running the tap to wait for cooler water sends about five gallons of water per minute down the drain.

Take a quick shower. Every inch of water in a tub represents about 4 1/2 gallons of water and a shower without a water - saving device typically uses 5 - 10 gallons per minute.

Use full loads of laundry to clean those summer clothes. Washing machines can use 40 to 60 gallons of water per load.

Resist using the toilet for a trash basket. Every flush uses four to seven gallons of water.

Watch out for water hoses with the water left running. A water hose can deliver several hundred gallons of water in an hour. For that reason, it's probably better to fill the kid's wading pool than let them play with the hose.

You can save water as you wash your car, too. After you wet the car down, turn the water off or use a hose with a shut - off nozzle. Use buckets of soapy water to wash it and then give the car a final rinse with the hose.

About one quarter of all household water use can be traced to the kitchen and laundry room. With just a few adjustments, families can cut the amount of water they use for cooking a washing dishes.

Cut down on the number of utensils used in preparing meals and on the plates and glassware used with the meals themselves. Plan more one - dish meals in which vegetables are cooked or baked in little or no added water and save nutrients, too.

Because a kitchen faucet can deliver five gallons of water a minute, find ways to avoid running water. For example, use a pan of water to wash fruits and vegetables instead of doing it under the tap. If you wash dishes by hand, use a dish pan and rinse all the dishes at once rather than a few at a time.

Find ways to make double use of water. Ideally, the liquid from cooking vegetables and other foods should be used again as stock for soups or broth. But even if you don't intend to use it for cooking, don't throw it away. Cooking liquids can be used to sauté - on food off of cookware before washing.

Washing dishes by hand requires anywhere from eight to 20 gallons of water. A dishwasher typically uses between 12 and 16 gallons of water, so the dishwasher should not be automatically considered a water waster.

However, a dishwasher uses the same amount of water whether it is completely full or only partially full, so it pays to wait until the dishwasher is loaded to capacity. Most of the newer models of dishwashers are designed to make pre-rinsing unnecessary. Many automatic dishwasher owners use their appliance more as a sanitizer than an actual dishwasher because they essentially wash their dishes before loading them into the machine. Pre-rinsing is often a habit begun when they used earlier model machines without the same cleaning capabilities.

Think water conservation as you work and play this summer!

Mr. and Mrs. G.B. Hogan are to observe their 25th wedding anniversary today, June 24.

G.B. Hogan and Helen Madeira were married June 24, 1959 in the Lamar Christian Church of Pampa.

Hogan retired from Texaco Inc. in 1977. He is no production superintendent for Pan Resources Inc. of Borge Mrs. Hogan once owned a millinery shop and school of dancing here for many years. They have both lived in Pampa since 1933.

The couple have six children and 12 grandchildren.

Back combing's in

Remember those teased up bee-hive hairstyles of the 1960s? Not very attractive — and horrible for the hair, right?

Yes. But today's stylists have adapted the only good aspect of that style to modern needs. Today's back-combing or teasing gives height to styles, but doesn't harm the hair if done properly. It gives volume around the crown of hair and gives your style a fuller line.

Peeking at Pampa

The days of June whirl by as Pampans whirl through a variety of activities. Here's the patter about town.

Would you like to hear a real fish story? Rusty Neef caught a 6 lb., 13 oz., small mouth bass — 2 1/4 inches long at a private lake near Pampa. It must be true, since it is to be certified. Congratulations, Rusty!

Misti Neef sang an hour's program at Fun Fest in Amarillo earlier this month. Kevin Knapp, husband of former Angela Day and an employee of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, also sang an hour's program. Last year Kevin played the lead in "Texas".

Doris (Mrs. Lyle) Gage made the rounds of family appearances at Garland and Abilene. In Garland, little Kristy Reynolds, daughter of Lila Beth and Lee Reynolds graduated from pre-school and participated in a big way in singing and dancing roles. She happily shared her talents with the crowd!

Members of Rho Eta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority held their End of the Year party (swimming and a cookout) at the home of Joyzelle and John Potts. Another night there was a Kidnap Party. Kidnappers were Karen Lang, Cheryl Harris, Pam Garner, Jan Parks, Lynn Ferrell and Jamilou Garren. Rho Eta's list of activities is never ending.

Ray (Carolyn) White was named Lion of the Year at the annual meeting of the Evening Lions Club. L.B. (Laura) Penick received a life membership in the Crippled Children's Home in Kerrville. Kerrie Carter was the club sweetheart and pianist. Her mother, Almeda, was a special guest.

Kathleen and Jim Greene received a sweet 25th anniversary gift from their three children. The children, Amy who used part of her 4-H livestock winnings, Jamie and son Casey Coleman, and Thad and daughter Cecilia presented them with round-trip tickets to New Orleans. Thad and his family recently moved back to Pampa from Sanger after his wife Tammy received her degree in homemaking from North Texas State University at Denton.

A few Pampans who are attending the healing services conducted by Father D'Orio on a recent Sunday in Amarillo included Dorothy and Fred Neslage, Ethel and Eddy Dunigan, Majunta and Forrest Hills, Mrs. Alfred Willis and her son, Alfred Jr. There is a certain eye-catching allure connected with beautiful deep suntans, especially when shown off by pretty sun dresses. Three deeply and beautifully tanned women are Nancy (Bill) Gabelman, Pat (Jim) Ward and Sandra (David) Bronner. Caught a glimpse of Georgeanna Organ, Sandra's mother, getting out of a car near a local private club at lunch time. She looked so dressy in white.

Brian Hanson showed his slides and narrated the presentation on his recent trip to Belize and Guatemala for the Noon Lions Club. Sherry (Jerry) Carlson presented a program on the Sheltered Workshop at a recent Rotary Club meeting.

"Welcome Aboard!" to Richard Barber and his family. Ebbie Ann and three pre-school children, Keith, Will and Amy. Richard, a Borger native, is the manager of the new WalMart store. Richard's hobbies are fishing and "just people." At the moment, Bobbie Ann spends her time raising children. They are to move back to the Panhandle from Port Arthur.

Not quite two years old, little Kimberly Cory, daughter of Karen and David is a little lady, make no mistake! Sunday, all dressed up in lace, frills AND a hat, Kimberly objected long and loudly to having her hat removed, the better to eat. A true test of a real lady.

The whole world knows how proud Ruth and Jerry Carter and Janis Bryant are to be grandparents. The by now well known little boy is Wesley Graham, son of Vickie and Sam Bryant. Ruth's ad for her store said more about the little grandchild than about her store! How cute!

Special and warm belated birthday wishes to Cora Patterson, who was 93 years young last week! And more happy belated birthday wishes to Nona Payne who celebrated her 95th birthday on June 14. A special occasion for a special lady.

During the fiscal year 1983-84 CCH auxiliary gave scholarships and loans totaling $14,000 and 8,000 service hours. Topping the service hours and still going are Eleanor Gill of Miami and Bernice Goodlett with 3,000 service hours each. Sam, Bernice's husband clocked 400 hours since retirement.

Eleanor slides in from Miami on even the iciest days and drives in in the hottest weather — five days last week.

Recently the auxiliary added a new service worth noting. Volunteers handle the patient education video cassette tapes for the hospital's closed circuit TV. Check at the information desk for tapes on subjects that include surgery, diabetes, pneumonia, and more.

Eight men, two sets of fathers and sons, took motor homes for a leisurely tour on their way to a fishing spot 500 miles deep in Canada. The touring fishermen included Charles and Greg Langen, Fred Epperly, Eugene Hamilton, Raymond Neff, Paul and David Turner and D.P. Williams. Colleen Hamilton and Dana Epperly joined a large group who spent Sunday School week at Glorietta. They are all home from both directions now.

Hal Brown and his wife Dora Mae send out vibes of courage, inspiration and positive attitudes wherever they go. Injured in an explosion last Thanksgiving, Hal spent months in the hospital as a bed and wheelchair patient. He's glad to be home now.

Several members of First Baptist Church will form a construction crew to build Meredith Mission at Lake Meredith. Volunteering construction time so far are Lynn Morse, Terry Teel, W.B. Franklin and James Baird.

Alease Moseley, R.N., has been taking a refresher course in bedside nursing. For 20 years before a brief retirement she was a nurse-anesthetist at the VA hospital in Amarillo. She decided to re-enter the work force after moving to Pampa.

Of course you've heard of Mothers' Day Out programs. Well, Lynn (Greg) Acker gave Donna (Wayland) Acker a Mother's-in-law Day Out by preparing lunch for the harvest crew so that Donna could spend a day in town with friends. Lisa and Greg will be moving into their new country home next month.

On June 22, Lisa's sister Leslie Michael, daughter of Geneva and Dan Michael, became the bride of Glen Schafer. Leslie was the last Michael chick to leave the nest.

June 20, Andrew Lewis, daughter of Charlotte and Harold Lewis and granddaughter of Edith (Mrs. Bob) Anderson will become the bride of Rodney Caison. Andrea is the fourth (and last) twin of the family to be married.

The Rev. Claude Cone is to officiate at both ceremonies, as he did for Lisa and Glen and the three Lewis twins. Heard one young - married telling another that Claude cooperated in every way to make her wedding the most memorable event of her life. Ministering to a congregation covers many areas — and Claude gives his best to each area.

While vacationing in California, Rosamond and Chet Reeves rode bicycles through the Napa Valley, visited a daughter in the San Francisco area and toured the Olympic facilities.

Did you know that Chet had a successful career in industry before becoming a teacher? And that his life-long ambition was to teach? He's a popular, well-loved PHS science teacher.

Dawn (Michael) Seery, Shane and Kevin Patrick have been visiting Majunta and Forrest Hills all the way from Freehold, N.J. Joyce Please see "Peeking," page 23.

Course teaches microwave cooks at home

A home study course containing information and experiments to help you learn about microwaving with your own oven is now available from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Research studies show that most people use their microwave ovens for simply reheating and defrosting foods rather than actually cooking. Therefore, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service is offering this course for people who want to get full cooking use out of their investment in a microwave oven.

Participants in previous Extension home study courses have reported significant changes in the way they use their microwave ovens after completing the course, said Donna Brauchi, county extension agent.

The course contains eight lessons for you to complete at your own pace. The first three lessons include information on the oven, accessories and utensils; factors that influence cooking, reheating and defrosting times; and meal planning and recipe conversions.

The remaining five lessons cover microwaving breads and cereal; dairy products; vegetables and fruits; meats; jam, jelly and candy, as well as foods for children to cook. Although these five lessons follow a logical progression, each can stand alone so you can do them in a different order or skip over some.

Darrouzett plans 1984 Deutsches Fest

DARROUZETT — It's time again for the 11th annual "Deutsches Fest," July 6 and 7 in Darrouzett, commemorating the German pioneers who settled in Lipscomb County.

Planned for the 1984 festival is a baby contest, horseshoe tournament, parade, entertainment under the V.I.P. Canopy and a flea market. Topping it all off is to be a German meal of bierox, German sausage, pork and kraut, butterballs and noodles, kuchen and pie. The Deutsches Fest is to kick off in the Darrouzett School Auditorium Friday, July 6, at 8 p.m. with a Pretty Fraulein contest followed by the revealing of the Darrouzett Citizen of the Year. The first performance of the melodrama "Zoro's back in Town" will also be presented at 8 p.m.

A parade down mainstreet at 11 a.m. opens Saturday's events. Entertainment is scheduled under the V.I.P. Canopy and visitors may browse through the flea market or attend the afternoon performance of the melodrama. The play will also be presented in the evening. A dance on the tennis courts will round out the day. A community church service is scheduled under the V.I.P. Canopy on Sunday morning.

Profits of the festival are used to provide necessary improvement to keep the village one of the neatest areas. Some of the accomplishments include the "Deutsches Gartens," tennis courts, Senior Citizen building, large steel canopy, baseball diamond, park area on the Kiowa.

Tin Can Ice Cream one of many frozen delights

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

How about a good ol' bowl of ice cream made in two coffee cans? Sounds impossible? It's not. Tin Can Ice Cream was one of several delightful frozen desserts featured in a recent seminar at the Gray County Courthouse annex.

Recipes for frozen desserts such as ice cream, frozen yogurt and fruit ices were included in the Gray County Extension office's "Frozen Delights" session of their six-part Summer Savings Series.

that have been bought from the grocery store — never farm eggs. The grocery store eggs have been processed which helps prevent food spoilage, she said. "Ninety percent of the time if you use eggs from the store you won't have any problem," she said. Many ice cream recipes can be made without the eggs with no loss of taste, she added. And many recipes do not call for eggs.

When packing an ice cream freezer, Brauchi reminds ice cream makers to use eight parts of ice to one part ice or cement slab for 10 minutes. (Get the kids to do the rolling.)

Open outer can. Remove inner can with ingredients. Remove lid. Use a rubber spatula to stir up mixture; scrape sides of can. Replace lid. Drain ice water from large can. Insert smaller can; pack with more ice and salt. Roll back and forth for five more minutes. Makes about three cups.

Those who are trying to make their diet more healthful would enjoy this nutritious and slightly tart recipe for "Frozen Peach Yogurt." This recipe makes a small amount, so you might want to double or triple the recipe in order to fill your ice cream freezer.

FROZEN PEACH YOGURT
1 and 1-3rd c. sliced soft ripe peaches (or other fresh or frozen fruit)
¼ c. sugar
Dash of salt
¼ t. almond extract
2 c. plain yogurt
In blender or food processor, coarsely puree peaches (1 cup). Mix with sugar, salt and extract. Stir in yogurt just to blend. Turn mixture into can of electric ice cream maker (no more than 2-3rds full). Insert dasher, cover and follow manufacturer's directions for use.

When very thick (25 to 90 minutes, depending on ice cream maker), turn into 9-inch square pan or tray container, cover airtight and ripen in freezer about two hours. Remove from freezer 15 to 20 minutes before serving. Makes about one quart or six servings.

FREEZER VERSION:
Turn yogurt mixture into nine-inch square pan. Freeze until set at edges, about one hour. Turn into large bowl of mixer and beat at low speed until smooth. Return to tray and freeze until firm. Cover airtight. Volume is slightly less than that of frozen yogurt prepared in electric maker. Blueberry Ice would make a light and colorful dish, especially for a special day like the Fourth of July.

BLUEBERRY ICE
¼ c. sugar
½ envelope unflavored gelatin (1½ teaspoons)
1½ c. water
1 (9 oz.) carton unsweetened frozen blueberries, thawed (1½ cups)
3 T. lemon juice
In saucepan, combine sugar and gelatin; stir in one cup of the water. Heat and stir over medium heat until sugar and gelatin dissolve. Remove from heat; add remaining water, berries and lemon juice. Freeze in three-cup refrigerator tray until firm. Break into chunks; beat with electric mixer until smooth. Return to tray; freeze firm. Let stand at room temperature five to 10 minutes before serving. Serves eight.

ICE CREAM
2 cans Eagle Brand milk
¼ to one cup sugar
2 pints half & half cream
2 (½ pint) containers 2 T. vanilla
Mix well; pour into freezer and fill to the fill line with milk and freeze. This recipe may be used for fruit ice creams by adding fruit.

Gray County Extension Agent Donna Brauchi discussed both commercially made and homemade frozen treats beginning with consumer tips for buying commercial ice creams, ice milks and sherberts.

Some consumer tips Brauchi shared included careful reading of the frozen treat carton label to be sure consumers are buying what they think they are buying. If ice cream is the product wanted, she said, cream should be listed first on the label.

If low-calorie frozen treats are what is wanted, check the label for number of calories per serving. Ice milk is lowest in calories and fat content, and more nutritious than sherberts.

A half cup of plain vanilla ice cream (16 percent butterfat) has 165 calories — added flavors add calories. Ice milk has 100 calories per half cup serving and sherbert has 130 calories. And remember, Brauchi said, products that use artificial sweeteners cost more.

Frozen yogurt is lower in saturated fats and cholesterol, she said, as well as being slightly lower in calories. Frozen yogurt also will aid digestion.

Brauchi suggested that she has often heard of people getting food poisoning from ice cream made with eggs which have not been cooked. She suggests that if the recipe calls for eggs and the mixture is not cooked before freezing, be sure to use only eggs cream salt. And when using a cooked mixture to make ice cream, be sure the mixture is cooled before putting into the ice cream freezer, she said.

If you don't have an ice cream freezer, don't despair. Tin Can Ice Cream is easy, quick and fun to fix. Kids love to make it and eat it, too! All you need is a one-pound coffee can, a three-pound coffee can and ice cream makings.

TIN CAN ICE CREAM
1 c. milk
1 egg (optional)
1 c. whipping cream
½ c. sugar
½ t. vanilla extract
Nuts or fruit as desired
Put all ingredients in a one-pound coffee can with a tight-fitting plastic lid (very important). Place lid on can. Place can with ingredients inside a three-pound coffee can with a tight-fitting plastic lid.

Pack larger can with crushed ice around smaller can. Pour at least ¾ cup of rock salt evenly over ice. Place lid on three-pound can. Roll back and forth on a table

Dr. Lamb:

Slow-resting hearts

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'd like to know what is good to take if you have a slow pulse. What is a good pulse rate?

DEAR READER — You didn't give me much to go on. What do you mean by a slow pulse rate? Roger Banister had a heart rate below 40 when he was training to break the world's record for the mile. He was the first person to run the mile in less than four minutes. For him, that slow resting heart was completely normal. He didn't need to take anything, just turned loose to run his world's record mile.

But before he trained for the event his resting heart rate was in the 70s. That shows you what physical training can do to the resting heart rate. Almost all long-distance runners have slow-resting heart rates. So do many young, healthy, active individuals. Most of the well-trained athletes for endurance events I've examined have had resting heart rates below 50 beats a minute.

I expect a young, healthy man in good physical condition to have a resting heart rate around 60 or less. Women have a slightly faster resting heart rate. Many individuals who have resting heart rates of 80 or above either have medical problems or aren't in good physical condition. Being overweight, not exercising and smoking or drinking too much coffee are all factors that significantly increase the resting heart rate. It follows that a fast-resting heart rate isn't a sign of good health.

Finalists multi-talented

NEW YORK (AP) — A young scientist was the winner of the 1984 All-American Girl contest, while among the other finalists were a cable TV producer, a beekeeper, a dancer and a harpist.

Gina Lazaro of San Antonio, Texas, 17, won first place and a $5,000 educational scholarship in the sixth annual competition co-sponsored by Teen Magazine and the makers of Noxzema.

Showing an early aptitude for science, she was granted a life membership in the Junior Academy of Science for her work on acid rain at age 14. For her current research project on the cardiovascular system, she recently received a grant funded by the National Institutes of Health.

Gina was elected the 1983-1984 national youth vice-chairman of the Science and Engineering Division of Exploring, a national career-oriented program for young adults. This summer she will help coordinate a week-long science conference. She also excels in art, dance, speech and journalism.

Doreen Custer, 17, of Granby, Conn., is perhaps one of the youngest experts in all aspects of beekeeping and is the owner of a thriving honey production business. She takes pride in her "swarm removal service" which she makes available to the county police department because, as she says, "They're not equipped to do that sort of thing."

In addition, Doreen provides a free pollination service for local orchards and has also conducted pioneering research on the "effect of sound on honeybees." Her other activities include participating as a Certified American Red Cross Lifeguard, playing the piano, and conducting a School Bus

Safety Program.

Since the fifth grade, Elizabeth Hainen, 17, of Toledo, Ohio, has been studying the harp and has acquired an impressive list of awards and achievements for her musical abilities. She is a two-time winner of the Toledo Symphony's Young Artists Competition and has performed with the orchestra at several Young People's concerts.

With the assistance of a full tuition scholarship to Indiana University in Bloomington, Elizabeth will continue her music studies there next year. She is also an active member in her county 4-H program and has won seven first-place awards in competitive style shows for her sewing projects.

Modern dancer Jacqueline Atkatz, 15, of New York City, is the youngest member of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Company's Advanced Teen Program. She began her study of dance at age 10 when she and six others were chosen out of 60 applicants to study with the prestigious Alvin Ailey Children's Group on a merit scholarship.

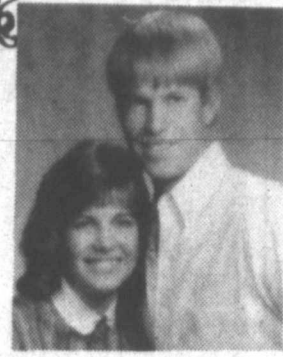

In addition to her intensive dance studies, she has a noteworthy collection of medals in field and track and recently won first place in an essay-writing contest sponsored by the New York City Police Athletic League.

Two years ago, 16-year-old Leza Raffel's dream came true when the Springfield, Pa., teen produced, edited and hosted her first cable television show: "Teens on the Town with Leza Raffel." The half-hour program, filmed mostly on location, airs twice a week on the American Cablevision of Pennsylvania and includes such topics as how to buy teen fashions on an affordable budget; where to go on a date for $10 and under; and where to find the best ice cream in town.

A second show, "After School," soon followed. A third show, "College Bound" will air on cable TV this summer, exploring the varied curricula offered by several colleges and universities.

The five teens, chosen on the basis of talents and achievements, scholastic record and community involvement, were awarded a trip to New York City that included sightseeing, parties and theater, plus a complete beauty makeover and a magazine fashion photography session.

Hear! Hear!

Don't talk too fast

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — By the time he finishes a sentence, you're apoplectic. On the words out at all is an achievement, she says. "Breathing, the movement of the lips and tongue, the ability to put a whole bunch of sounds together to form a spend pausing while we're talking accounts for a lot, says Dr. Katherine Harris, professor of speech and hearing sciences at the Graduate School of the City University of New York. "If I talk to you without any pauses," she says, "that will make you very tense because I'm making you work much harder to understand what I'm saying." This may be why some people get the jitters from a fast-talking news announcer on the radio. One reason for his tearing through the day's events, however, is that "people can talk a lot faster if they're reading out loud," Dr. Harris says. "The decisions about what to say have already been made for them and they don't have to pause to think. But listening is a big job and someone who talks too fast or reads badly and doesn't break up the information correctly, doesn't make listening any easier."

As for the conversationalist who falls silent for eons between words, that puts some teeth on edge, Dr. Harris says, because "people are set up to receive pauses in a reasonable amount of time. Also, the slow speaker is frustrating your short-term memory."

Too fast, too slow, anything outside what we're used to can make us nervous, concludes Dr. Eagle. And the best way to deal with either extreme, if you must, she says, is to prepare for it. "Before you enter the room, remind yourself that you'll receive a barrage of words, or have to wait 15 minutes for something that should take five. Also, to help counterbalance any tension that may build if you take this behavior personally, keep saying to yourself, this is just how this person is. Think of it like a hairdo you may not be able to stand it, but this is how this individual wears his hair."

word all require the finest motor coordination. Just to say "pot," you have to put your lips together and hold the air back to make the 'p' sound, then form the low vowel, 'ah,' in the back of the mouth and finally bring the tongue forward to make the 't.' Human oral motor patterns develop from birth to age 5. From 5 on, you're not only coordinating articulation — the speed with which we do that is very individual — but you're deciding, "How do I wish to talk to my friend vs. my teacher or boss?" All that goes into the rate of speech.

So does stress. During a job interview, you'll take time to come up with the right words, as you would when telling someone that a loved one has died. Yet, during the flurry of an argument, says Ms. Seekamp, "You may babble nonsensically. Then again, you may speak very slowly. The latter is learned behavior. Somewhere along the line we all agreed that someone speaking slowly with clenched teeth is really angry and we'd better be scared." Clint Eastwood confronting a thug is proof enough of that.

So, rate of speech can be a means of communication in itself and there are other examples of that, Ms. Seekamp says. "To get off the phone, you may begin speaking rapidly," she says. "On the other hand, I get very annoyed when someone I'm speaking to doesn't look at me, so to force his or her attention, I'll slow my speech or stop speaking entirely."

Actually, the time we

DR. KATHERINE HARRIS, professor of speech and hearing sciences at the Graduate School of the City University of New York, says talking and listening are highly refined skills.

other hand her haste makes you just as jumpy.

Why some people speak extremely slowly or quickly — and why that can be irritating — is hard to pin down, but theories exist.

"Most people don't intentionally say, 'I want to speak faster or slower, but some do,'" says Dr. Carol J. Eagle, head of child adolescent psychology, division of child psychiatry, Montefiore Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. Many who speak very rapidly say, "Listen, that was the only way I could get a word in edgewise when I was growing up."

What's fast to one ear isn't to another, of course. Still, the normal rate of speech ranges from 170 to 220 words a minute, according to Sandra J. Seekamp, M.A., speech-language pathologist at Montefiore Medical Center. "We're all very unique in our speech rhythm, how we combine words, stress them, the flow with which we speak," Ms. Seekamp says. "But what's most important in determining rate of speech is the nature of the conversation and who's talking to whom."

"A mature adult will quickly try to assess what he has in common with the listener," adds Ms. Seekamp. "For example, I'm presuming you don't know as much about speech and language as a colleague of mine would, so I'll slow my speech in order to choose words you can understand and to give you time to digest this new information. On the other hand, if we were talking about the weather, I wouldn't have to do that."

The proof will be in the picking

Wise harvesting can extend your fresh eating season by many weeks and greatly increase your overall yield.

Just keep some basics in mind.

The key is to start harvesting as soon as there's something to eat. Some think bigger means better, but that's only true if you want to show off produce at the fair. The larger a vegetable grows, the tougher it becomes. Younger, less mature vegetables are at their tender best, both for fresh eating and for preserving.

Commercial growers have to harvest their entire crops at once. But home gardeners have the luxury of harvesting just before mealtime, choosing vegetables at their prime.

Early and regular picking staggers the harvest and keeps you from being swamped with more vegetables than you can handle.

Since plants only grow to fulfill their natural mission — producing a seed — you can keep them flowering and fruiting almost indefinitely if you keep up with the harvest. Beans, cucumbers, summer squash and peas should not be allowed to ripen fully, unless you don't want the plants to produce any more. With luck, you'll be harvesting all summer.

Keep broccoli, lettuce and spinach cut to stop them from going to seed, or bolting. With root crops, improve the growing condition for the entire row by continually pulling the largest roots. Start when some are only the size of a marble (beets) or your little finger (carrots). The remaining roots will grow into the spaces left, and your supply will be that much more bountiful.

Here is harvesting advice

Plan now for fall landscapes

COLLEGE STATION - Planning now can mean a brilliantly colored landscape this fall.

Four popular plants well-known for their fall color are the chrysanthemum, the candle tree, the copper plant and Joseph's coat, says Everett Janne, landscape horticulturist with the Texas Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Each had advantages and disadvantages, but they all offer beauty and eye-pleasing color.

The chrysanthemum, or mum, is considered the queen of fall flowers, Janne says. The plants, which are generally 12 to 24 inches tall, are covered with colorful blooms. Mums require a well-drained soil, ample water and fertilizer. Janne suggests using a high phosphorus fertilizer, such as 5-15-10, at the rate of two pounds per 100 square feet.

The horticulturist suggests completing transplanting of mums in June or early July. Keep terminal buds pinched through July to promote side branching.

The candle tree offers showy yellow flowers in the fall and is best used as a background for wide flower beds. The plant also has attractive foliage and grows to a height of 4 to 6 feet.

Candle trees prefer rich, moist soil and should be fertilized each month with a complete fertilizer such as 5-15-10 at the rate of two pounds per 100 square feet of soil surface.

Copper plants, with their rich bronze foliage, are attractive in summer as well as fall. They normally grow at 15 to 30 inches tall in moist, fertile soil. For best results, fertilize at a rate of about two pounds per 100 square feet of soil surface, using a complete and balanced fertilizer such as 10-10-5, says the horticulturist.

Several varieties of Joseph's coat, famous for its colors of red, orange, green and yellow, are available. Usually under 15 inches tall, this native of Brazil is most commonly used as a low spreading border. Janne says.

Like the other fall plants, Joseph's coat flourishes in moist, well-fertilized soil. Small plants are available at nurseries and garden centers, or cuttings may be easily rooted from larger plants.

for some specific vegetables:

Asparagus: Only cut shoots 6 to 8 inches tall and thicker around than a pencil, leaving the thinner ones to mature into ferns for next year's crop. Harvest for 6 to 10 weeks and leave tallest, darkest beet tops for greens, even if there's no beet at the bottom. Harvest on a regular basis.

Broccoli: Harvest the dark green, compact cluster or head while the buds are shut tight — before any yellow flowers appear. Most

Carrots: Start pulling whenever there's a root the size of a finger or larger. Always pull the largest carrot. Just look for the darkest tops. This method works for all root crops.

Corn: Corn silk darkens and dries out as the ears idly grow enough for a second cutting — and you can get three or four cuttings in all.

Onions: Harvest onions for fresh use whenever you need green tops or bulbs. Just pull and eat. The rest of the onions in the row will benefit from the added space.

Peas: Pick peas before the pods are fully mature, when they're about 3/4 full. Leave the very young pods to fill out for future picking.

Potatoes: New potatoes can be harvested anytime after they start to form around the roots of the plants. Just dig down and take as many as you need. The plant will replace them.

Squash (summer): Pick them when they're still immature, about 5 to 7 inches long, for a continual harvest.

Good gardening in small places

the last shoots to grow and go to seed.

Beans (snap): Start harvesting before the beans reach the diameter of a pencil — when the seeds inside have just begun to form. Snap the whole bean off the vine. The more you pick, the more they're going to produce. Use two hands, so you don't damage the plant.

Beets: Start pulling the View minutes of serenity each day help KIM ULRICH (Diana, ATWT) from feeling the strain of a busy soap schedule.

KIM ULRICH (Diana, ATWT) has been playing hostess to her mother, Betty Johnston of tiny Ripon, CA for the past ten days. Mrs. Johnston, an avid ATWT fan, got a dream come true when she visited CBS Studio 52 with her daughter. When queried as to who her favorite Oaklandian is, she responded like a true mother. "Frank Andropoulos, because he's being so nice to Kim." Betty, who came to celebrate her birthday with Kim, was treated to a birthday dinner at none other than the posh Windows on the World. The maitre'd made quite an impression when he recognized Kim and asked her to autograph several of the eatery's exquisite menus for him and other fans amongst the staff. As Betty observed, "They're not cheap paper ones either."

Mrs. Johnston also got an opportunity to accompany Kim on a promotional jaunt to Washington, D.C. where Kim guested on the local magazine show, "Panorama." Relates Kim, "When the show was over, Mom and I got back in the limo to return to NY and remarked how nice it would have been if we could have seen the sights in D.C. The limo driver, upon hearing Mom had come all the way from California, promptly treated us to a first class tour of Washington!"

never mistreated anybody." His "Shenandoah Waltz" in 1948 earned him three trips to the White House to perform for President Harry Truman. It was high cotton for a boy who left his North Carolina mountain home at age 14 to play guitar.
 Moody toured with a young Elvis Presley in 1955 and never drank a drop of alcohol despite spending so much time in nightclubs.
 He played with country music legends Roy Acuff, Ernest Tubb and Bill Monroe, and in the middle of his career earned the reputation of a rebel -- a kind of Willie Nelson of the '40s.
 He still does some shows with the 72-year-old Monroe, and after Moody received a lengthy standing ovation recently, Monroe said, "Well, I guess the old man's still got it."

With little coaxing, the talkative Moody will share his memories and relate how country music performers of his era differed from "these kids," as he calls the current generation of entertainers.
 For one thing, he thinks the big concert fees today reflect a greedy spirit. His era was one of occasional lonely pockets.
 "Lots of times I didn't collect (accept) anything, on a bad day or something," he recalled. "I'd say to the promoter, 'Catch you on the next round.'"

"I've had people come in wagons with their mules, and they'd use lanterns for lights," he recalled. "Lots of times, you'd play in a school auditorium; you'd get 200, you were lucky, and sometimes the crowd would spill out into the school yard. It would cost 10 or 15 cents each."
 Moody's specialty is waltz music, and he earned the title "the country and western waltz king."
 "I wanted a country son with a Glenn Miller sound," Moody said. "Some people said I'd lost my mind."

Actor survived 'The Survivors'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jan-Michael Vincent says "Airwolf" is his first venture into series television, then suddenly remembers a series from the dark ages.
 "Yeah," he says as it comes back to him. "I did do a show that ran for 13 episodes. It was 'The Survivors.'"
 That unaptnly named ABC show in 1969 was also the first TV for Lana Turner, who played Vincent's mother (and didn't try TV again until she took a role on "Falcon Crest" 12 years later), and novelist Harold Robbins, who created this ahead-of-its-time soap opera.
 "The only thing I can remember about it is it seems like we did the same story every week," Vincent says.

 Vincent's having much better luck the second time around in "Airwolf," an action-adventure yarn created for CBS by Don Belissario ("Magnum, P.I."). The title refers to an awesome, futuristic helicopter appropriated by Stringfellow Hawke, the laconic, reclusive hero played by Vincent, to fight the bad guys.
 "Airwolf," a midseason replacement renewed for the fall, also stars Ernest Borgnine and Alex Cord.
 Vincent is probably best known for his role as Byron Henry, the son of Robert Mitchum and husband of Ali MacGraw, in the ABC miniseries "The Winds of War." He was also in such movies as "Hooper," "Big Wednesday," "Bite the Bullet" and

"The Mechanic."
 After the yearlong stretch of "Winds of War," Vincent spent three months sailing in the Caribbean before returning to work.
 "I put out word that I was interested in a TV series," says Vincent. "I wanted to work for a while. You can't sail forever. I was offered 'Airwolf' and that was it."
 "I think it's time now to expand and take my character to another level. The guy I play is totally out of touch. He's been a recluse since Nam. He had a brother who was also a copter pilot and he went down over enemy territory. I'm waiting for the brother to show up. Maybe the producers will get mad at me and they'll bring on the brother instead."

Singer still going after 50 years

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—During a career that has spanned more than 50 years, country music singer Clyde Moody performed at the White House three times, wrote and recorded "Shenandoah Waltz" and wore out 21 Cadillacs driving from show to show.
 He's still performing at 68 and still sings in the same key. And as he looks back on his career, Moody is proudest of being an honest man.
 "I had 50 years of success, and I never knowingly hurt anybody," he said. "I've been considered a gentleman and was trusted. My father was part Indian, and I never learned how to lie and cheat."
 "I've never gone any place where I couldn't go back," Moody said, wearing one of his beloved Western suits. "I never mistreated anybody." His "Shenandoah Waltz" in 1948 earned him three trips to the White House to perform for President Harry Truman. It was high cotton for a boy who left his North Carolina mountain home at age 14 to play guitar.

President hopes for industry revival

By CONCEPCION BADILLO
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid is calling on the leaders of the Mexican movie industry to recover the quality and prestige the country's film business once enjoyed.

De la Madrid says his government is open to all ideas that might contribute to regaining for Mexican movies the status they held during the so-called Golden Age of the 1940s and 1950s.

"We have the means to do it, and we must recover the levels of production and popularity of our cinema," the president told a convention of the National Chamber of the Cinematographic Industry.

Mexican movies during the Golden Age enjoyed distribution throughout Latin America and elsewhere, with films featuring such actors as Jorge Negrete, Pedro Infante, Dolores del Rio and Maria Felix. Among the directors were Emilio "Indio" Fernandez, who recently celebrated his 80th birthday and is no longer active, and Spanish exile Luis Bunuel, who died last year.

Critics now lament the poor quality of Mexican movies and their dominance by cheap sex comedies or lame, violent adventures. To emphasize the point, last year no picture was awarded the Ariel — the Mexican equivalent of the Oscar — as best movie of the year.

"Cinema is culture, cinema is entertainment and education, and we are going to regain it, as we have recovered each one of the aspects of national life," de la Madrid said.

In the past, Mexican movies provided an important source of foreign exchange.

Although figures are not available, their percentage of Mexican exports has declined significantly. An important market for Mexican movies, however, has developed in theaters in the United States that screen Spanish-language movies for the expanding Hispanic audience.

The government is trying to promote all non-petroleum exports to net badly needed foreign exchange.

The movie business leaders and producers asked de la Madrid to authorize increased prices for tickets at theaters, provide part of the government's advertising time on television to promote Mexican movies and to reduce or eliminate taxes on movie production.

The government has set the maximum price of a ticket at movie theater here to 100 pesos — about 55 cents.

The Mexican Academy of Cinematographic Arts and Sciences, which hands out the Ariel awards, this year has nominated three movies for best film of 1983. The prize will be awarded June 25 to "Knockout," "Under Machine Gun Fire" or "The Black Widow."

The latter is the story of the romance between a widow and a young priest. It was banned by the previous administration of Jose Lopez Portillo, although it had been produced by the government company CONACINE.

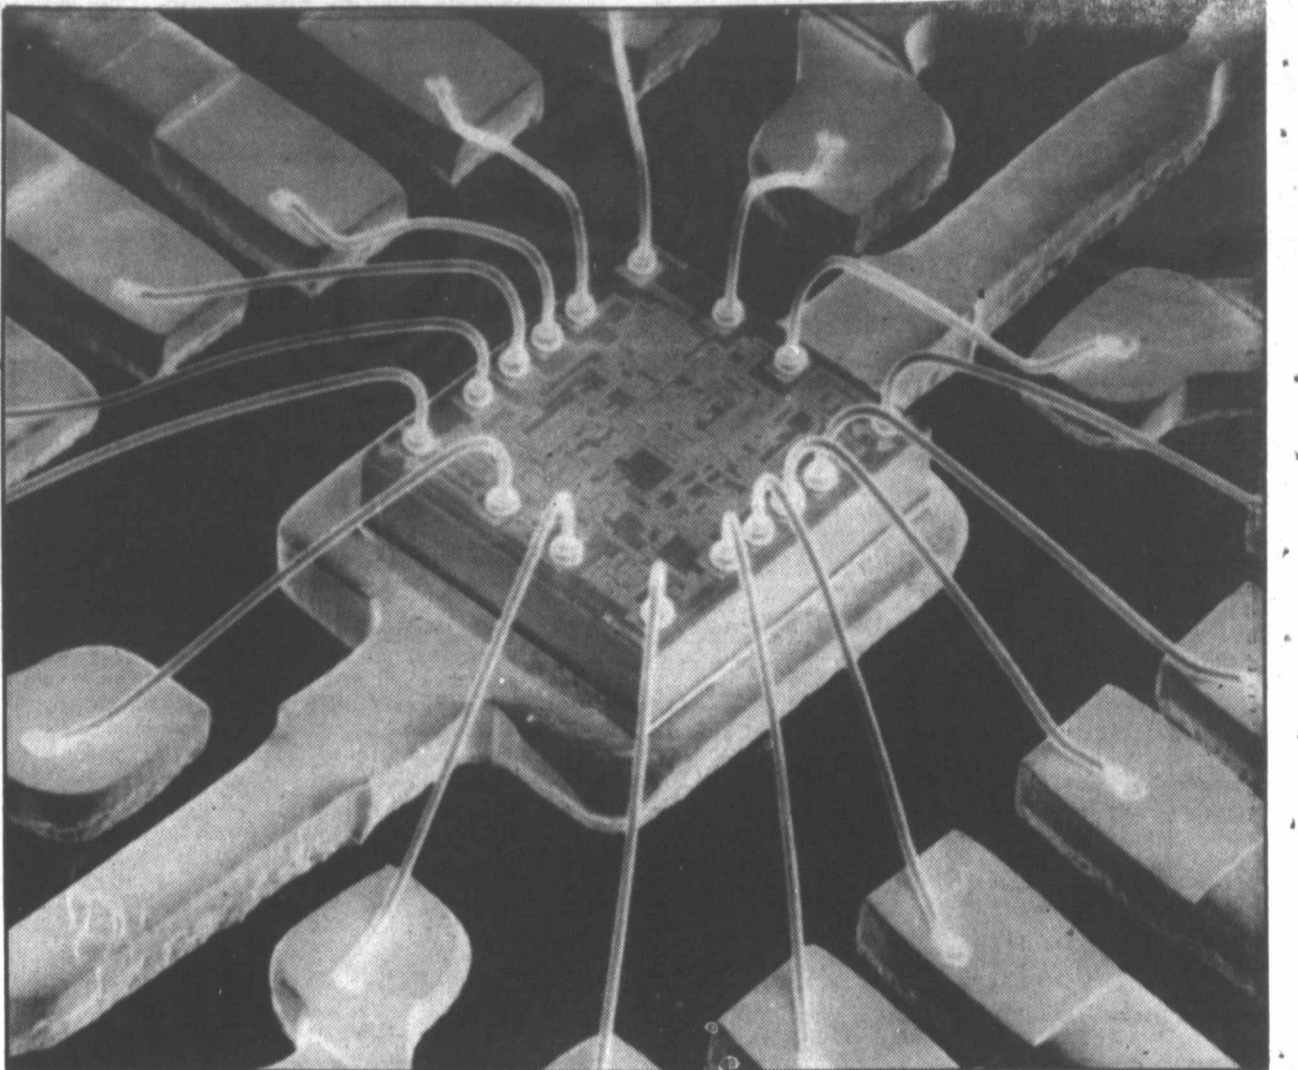

Lopez Portillo, whose six-year term ended in December 1982, put his sister Margarita in charge of the government's Radio, Television and Cinematography Department.

Its biggest investment was "Red Bells," a co-production with the Soviet Union starring Ursula Andress and Franco Nero that was an expensive critical disaster and a box office flop.

By contrast, the new administration helped with the production of John Huston's "Under the Volcano," which was praised at the Cannes Film Festival last month and opened June 13 in New York to good reviews. Its cinematography was done by Mexican Gabriel Figueroa and the aging Fernandez is among the supporting cast of actors.

Another prestige movie filmed in Mexico, "Erendira," with a script by Nobel Prize-winner and Mexico resident Gabriel Garcia Marquez, also is playing now in New York. It was a co-production with France.

The government owns the two major studios here, but films can be made with or without government participation.

Texan lists best things to do in state weekly

By ANN LEVIN
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph

TYLER, Texas (AP) — State Treasurer Ann Richards, Athens professor James Smith and Tyler attorney Jackee Cox have one thing in common.

They receive a roundup of the best things to do in Texas every week from Bowen Davis, a high school librarian in Temple and self-styled publisher.

Davis, 53, crams the newsletter with capsule book reviews, quotes from the famous and recommended television programs, movies, recitals, chili parlors and honky tonks, all in the cramped printing style he calls he learned in the U.S. Army.

"Why don't I type it? I can't pack as much information in," says Davis, who every week mails off 1,000 to 1,500 words at his own expense to 50 friends and relatives. He calls it "networking."

"This is a networking country. Even though people don't know the phrase, they do it," says the bearded, stout librarian.

To fill an 8 1/2 by 14-inch weekly mailer, Davis distills information from 200 magazines he receives at home and at work in the Temple High School Library. He scans 80 flyers, calendars, periodicals and press releases daily.

At night, a video cassette recorder tapes worthwhile television programs so nothing of value will be missed. Besides scouring the electronic and print media for enlightenment, Davis has a 20,000-volume personal library.

"I think he's marvelous. I admire him for getting all that stuff together," says Camille Smith, whose husband, James, teaches English at Henderson County Junior College.

The Smiths, who met Bowen and Martha Davis when all were undergraduates at the University of Texas, have been on Davis' mailing list for four years.

"The weekly sheet represents my personal taste of the best that's happening," says Davis, who is as wont to advise readers whom to vote for as how to keep lawns from succumbing to drought.

No official count exists of the number of newsletters in the United States, but Davis estimates at least 100,000 are mailed nationwide.

From church letters to surfing condition reports, newsletters come in all shapes and sizes. Some, like the "Executive Fitness Newsletter," are circulated to thousands. Others are like "The Fertilizer Newsletter," which reaches an audience of 488.

Davis wants to keep his soapbox small. He says the few "people I like" can have a big impact.

"I hope the people I do get to are like the yeast in a loaf of bread," the Mensa dropout and intellectual gaffly says.

One newsletter started with a quotation from Albert Einstein: "It is the duty of every citizen according to his best capacities to give validity to his convictions in political affairs."

Davis recommended these television programs, as well as others: "MacNeil-Lehrer," "Washington Week" and "Inside Story" on PBS, NBA basketball, "Austin City Limits" with Willie Nelson and Guy Clark, "Sneak Previews" with clips from "The Natural," "The First Olympics," William Hurt in "A Midsummer's Night Dream," College Bowl Championships, "When Women Kill," "Entertainment" with Grace Jones, "Strokes of Genius: The Living Willem de Kooning," plus the following movies: "Tootsie," "Psycho," "Lenny," "Barbarosa," "You Can't Take It With You," "Hud," "Hero," "Sounder" and "Through A Glass Darkly."

This, however, is a mere fraction of what Davis judged to be worthwhile. Under the category of novels, he suggested Nora Ephron's "Heartburn" and Rebecca Goldstein's "Mind-Body Problem."

A former English teacher with a master's degree in library science, Davis has processed and spit out reams of information for years. Since 1983, he has edited the "Intellectual Freedom" column in the "Texas Library Journal." Temple High School faculty and fellow members of the Central Texas Torch Club are treated to lengthy memoranda of cosmic musings.

No subject is too obscure to be included. Formerly a professional poker player, stevedore and U.S. postal carrier, Davis exhorts his friends in the Torch Club, a 5,000-strong national organization to "adopt a new profession."

In fact, the idea for the current newsletter, "Wie Geht's in Der Centroplex," (German for "How It is Going in the Centroplex") was spawned three years ago when his wife, Martha, decided at age 40 to adopt a new profession and go to law school.

The family, uprooted from Austin in 1972 for his Temple librarian's job, was disrupted again.

In a reflective mood, Davis says the newsletter provides a sense of continuity and community to people who belong together spiritually but are separated by distance.

"When people are not plugged into something, they feel burned out," Davis says. "The purpose of the newsletter is to get rid of feelings of isolation and pointlessness."

His wife, Martha, says Baylor Law School in Waco left little time for entertainment decisions. Instead, she relied on her husband to keep her in good humor and well-informed.

Friends from Davis' college days supply him with unofficial bulletins of interesting happenings at the University of Texas.

More information comes from state agencies, where many friends Davis politticked with in the 1950s now hold political office.

Although no fee is charged, Davis encourages readers to send local information, events and tips back to the Temple mothership.

Thus, scrawled on the back of a mailing to attorney Cox is an urgent request for information on seafood restaurants and book stores in the Tyler area.

Davis is offended by the suggestion the highly condensed guide is superficial. He once stopped sending the letter to a reader who called it "trivial." In self-defense, he compares himself to a cork that "floats on top and doesn't get pulled under."

Waxing philosophical, Davis says many middle-aged people start to write novels in mid-life "because they feel they are tanks of information and sensitivity" and want to release their, dearly achieved insights to the population at large.

Davis says the newsletters serve the same purpose.

"I have talked out or written out all my novels in newsletters," the Temple librarian said.

Oklahomans going to look for Noah's Ark

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Two Oklahomans are going treasure hunting again this summer, and they've got what they consider the best "treasure map" going — the Bible.

Bobby Jones and Pat Frost are looking for Noah's Ark. And Jones, a plumber and pipefitter in Muskogee, says his faith will bring the search to a successful conclusion.

"The Lord wants me to do it," Jones said in a telephone interview. "I'll leave it up to him."

Jones and Frost of Kingfisher believe the Ark will eventually be discovered among the rocky crevices and hidden valleys of Mount Ararat, a massive volcano in northwest Turkey.

"I really believe it will be found when the Lord is ready to reveal it," said Jones. "It will show the world that the Bible is God's word," said Frost, 53.

"When it's exposed, the whole world will know it," Jones said.

They recently shared their experiences in telephone interviews.

Frost and Jones have been venturing to Ararat, dubbed by the Turks as "The Painful Mountain," each summer since 1977.

After an unusually mild winter with less ice and snow, Frost and Jones are hopeful that areas previously inaccessible will be open in August. A massive earthquake earlier this year may have also opened up near search areas.

Much of this summer's search will take place in the Ahora Gorge in the northwest quadrant of the mountain.

"But that includes a good deal of territory," Frost said. That area was blown out when the volcano erupted on July 2, 1840.

Both men believe the Ark will be found intact when it's discovered.

Frost said he's talked to people who have claimed to have seen the Ark and said it was 95 percent intact.

"It has to be in solid ice to stay preserved so long," Jones said. "I hope it's melted enough to see it."

If it's intact, the men expect the boat to be about 600 feet long and 100 feet wide.

The men hire Turks to guide them up the mountains and Frost said he has natives looking for the Ark before the expedition arrives.

Neither man had mountain climbing experience before they started trekking up Ararat.

"I can handle Mount Ararat," Frost said.

"The Lord is with me. I've never been hurt," said Jones, a plumber and pipefitter in Muskogee. "The Lord wants me to do it. I'll leave it up to him."

"People don't have any idea how dangerous and winding all these canyons are," Jones said.

Ararat, located in northeast Turkey, covers about 500 square miles and rises to a height of 17,000 feet. It is adjacent to both the Soviet Union and Iran.

Both men say their faith will not be shaken if they can't find the Ark.

"We really don't need the Ark, we've got the Bible to go by," the Muskogee man said. "The search for the Ark has opened up a whole new life for me," Jones said.

"When it is revealed it will be a witness to Russia which is the most atheistic country there is," Jones said.

Each said they would like their expedition to find the Ark, but both said they would be thrilled if anyone found it.

Jones said he didn't know how many more years he will be going to Turkey to keep searching for the Ark. "I guess I'll keep going if I don't get too old."

Frost said he had entertained thoughts of searching for the other lost Ark — the Ark of the Covenant, but the grade school principal said, "One is all I can handle."

In the biblical story of Noah's Ark told in Genesis, after the Ark with its load of animals endured the deluge, it landed on Mount Ararat.

Joining Frost and Jones are Dr. Jim Davies of Bend, Ore.; a physician; Dr. Don Shockley, an Albuquerque optometrist; Howard Davis, president of Artesia Christian College in Artesia, N.M.

Each member of the expedition pays his own expenses. Frost and Jones are taking their wives and, according to Jones's estimates, his trip will cost $5,000 to $6,000.

Both men are members of the Baptist Church and met when Frost worked in Muskogee.

Insurance plan gets OK

AUSTIN (AP) — The lawmaker who helped kill a bill to provide workers' compensation benefits to farm workers last year says he supports a compromise measure now.

"I feel good about this compromise. We covered the migrant workers and protected the small farmers," said Sen. Bill Sarpaluis, D-Amarillo.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, sponsor of the new measure, said he expects Gov. Mark White to expand the agenda of the special legislative session to include the bill. The measure would extend workers' compensation insurance coverage to migrant and seasonal farm laborers.

White told a news conference Thursday he and legislative leaders are discussing that, but repeated that he first wants the Legislature to take action on school reform before he does "anything that would divert attention away from the educational issue" for which he called the 30-day session.

Uribe's bill provides that most migrant and seasonal farm and ranch laborers would be covered by benefits for job-related injuries by 1991.

are arrested

DALLAS (AP) — Two administrators, a social worker and an attorney with the Texas Department of Human Resources were arrested in a Dallas courtroom on a misdemeanor charge of contributing to the delinquency of a child. Judge Pat McClung of the 304th Family District Court ordered the arrests Friday during a court of inquiry into conditions at a DeSoto foster home owned by the Society for Abandoned and Neglected Children Inc.

The four were accused of letting eight teen-age boys remain in the home even though they knew the boys had been exposed to sex devices and pornographic photographs by their foster parents.

McClung also issued warrants for the foster parents, Ray and Joy Marshall of DeSoto.

Austin residents wanted to keep their lifestyle a secret, but the word got out

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — For years Austin residents felt about the city like a diner might about a five-star restaurant that's cheap and never crowded: They hoped to keep it a secret.

But word got out, apparently in the mid-1960s, and the state capital has never been the same. City planners and developers say Austin is having a "growth spurt" far above the national average with no end in sight.

One developer got so frustrated at trying to follow growth on a map that he began making monthly helicopter flights over the city "to keep in touch" with what was going on.

Even some environmentalists gave up on proposed "no-growth" policies and grudgingly accepted the idea of "managed growth."

Donna Kristaponis, assistant city director of planning, says "no-growth" tactics such as voting down bond issues for water and wastewater bonds have backfired. One result she cites was the cutoff of new sewer service at an overloaded treatment plant, which was polluting the Colorado River.

"We've come through being a big town, and we're headed toward being a small city," Ms. Kristaponis says.

Figures back her up: a tax base that rose from $2 billion in 1974 to $11 billion in 1984; a population growth rate of 3.3 percent a year — one of the fastest in the nation; a projected population increase of 65 percent, or 226,000 people, by the year 2000, which would push metropolitan Austin over 1 million, and a spread from 36 square miles in 1960 to possibly 175 square miles in 1995.

The city estimates it will need to build 52 new schools in the next 15 years.

Flashback to the mid-1960s. Austin was growing, sure. The city had come a long way from the frontier village of Waterloo, whose first census in 1840 listed 856 inhabitants — 711 white and 145 slave.

Drive-in bank and grocery store lines were backed up, but no one seemed especially upset. The 27-story University of Texas Tower and the Capitol were still the tallest buildings in town.

Kaye Northcott, a UT student in the 1960s, wrote recently in Third Coast magazine, "Austin, my Austin, is tumbledown Victorian rent houses on big lots with old dogs and porch swings."

A leader in the arts, recalling Austin's laid-back days, says that when he approached the top banker in town for a corporate donation of $500, the banker replied, "What, over 10 years?" That same bank recently gave $5,000.

In 1976, the U.S. Department of Labor said a family of four could live more cheaply in Austin than anywhere in the country.

Author Larry McMurtry, a Texan, called Austin a "third-rate university town," but another Texas author, Larry King, said, "Austin makes good music to my ears."

Science Digest rated Austin the fifth healthiest place to live in the nation. Among numerous accolades that year, however, was a statistic that disturbed many: Austin was No. 1 in the nation in economic growth over the decade 1967-1976.

Living costs remained the lowest among urban areas as the 1980s approached, and more and more people shopping for a home chose Austin. Take John Diggins, for example.

Neither Diggins, retired U.S. consul general in Toronto, nor his wife knew anyone in Austin, and they checked 30 cities in 13 states for the "perfect community." Their six-year search ended with their move to the hills of northwest Austin.

Bird lovers noted that development in the picturesque area chased away the golden cheeked warbler and the blacked capped vireo.

Ben Barnes, a former Texas lieutenant governor who moved here from West Texas, told a reporter, "I always thought there were only two kinds of people: those who live in Austin and those who would like to live in Austin."

Barnes not only lives here now, he owns a chunk of Travis County. Barnes and his business partner, former Gov. John Connally, who also is building a house here, recently bought 3,280 acres southwest of Austin for more than $50 million. He is now planning the county's largest residential and commercial development.

Others have come from afar, and by 1977 the city had so many immigrants from the Frostbelt that a Damn Yankees club was founded.

When a woman from Wisconsin asked Ellie Rucker of the Austin American-Statesman what Austin was like, Ms. Rucker replied in her column that one had to be careful of muggers, Indians and snakes.

Despite the warnings, a United Way survey showed that less than half the city's adult population in 1982 had lived there 10 years or more.

Many Texans consider Austin the state's prettiest city, and accept lower wages just to live there. Some cars display signs that say, "The Universe."

Austin residents think they've got it all: sweet-smelling springs; mild winters; a central location; the Texas Hill Country to the west; a chain of lakes on the Colorado River, which cuts through the city; a stately Capitol; great Tex-Mex restaurants, and lovely parks.

They point with pride to a restored downtown area with restaurants and entertainment that attract people from outside; a first-class amateur athletic program at the University of Texas; the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library and Museum; and, perhaps, best of all, pockets of small-town life where no one is a stranger.

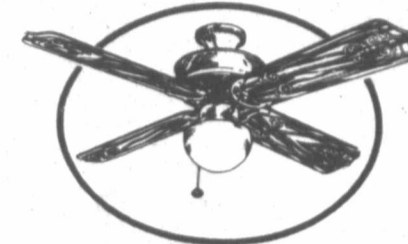

The decision by Microelectronics and Computer Technology Research Corp. to locate its high-technology think tank in Austin touched up the image of the city as being a great place to live.

MCC governmental affairs officer Bill Stotesbery said the 12-company consortium chose Austin in May 1983 after a three-month search of 57 cities in 27 states. The major reason for selecting Austin, he said, was the commitment of UT and Texas A&M University, 100 miles away, to develop world-class computer science and microelectronics programs.

4-H — AN AMERICAN INVENTION

An American invention, the 4-H program of the Cooperative Extension Service, originated near the beginning of the 20th Century as a result of a vital need to improve life in rural areas.

Introducing methods of farming and homemaking, 4-H taught youth to "learn - by - doing." Designed for both boys and girls, the first 4-H "projects" included home canning of tomatoes as well as raising corn and hogs.

The school and the home have a close affiliation in this early 4-H program, and adults in the family often were persuaded to adopt new practices as a result of successes experienced by 4-H youth.

In 1914, the Smith - Lever Act established the Cooperative Extension Service, an organizational entity of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the land - grant college system. Created by this act and subsequent legislation to conduct educational programs of an "informal, non - resident, problem - oriented nature," the Cooperative Extension Service provided the professional staff and support needed to direct the growth of the early 4-H program.

Today's 4-H program involves youth as the primary audience and adults and teens as volunteer leaders.

No single Cooperative Extension Service program is more widely known or recognized than 4-H. The technique of organizing boys and girls into clubs through which Extension programs could help youth learn practical knowledge and skills in agriculture, home economics and related areas was one of the early innovations in education - and it succeeded admirably.

4-H projects, strictly rural in the early days, have now been diversified to appeal to boys and girls in urban areas as well. They stimulate adults to apply new knowledge and often lead to a closer sense of partnership between parents and their children.

4-H clubs give identity to learning activities, enhance personal development through project work, establish a formal vehicle for involvement of adults, and develop an esprit de corps of great significance. Many clubs today join together in construction community projects.

In addition to clubs, 4-H uses many other means of meeting the needs of today's youth. Learning opportunities are provided through informal groups, camps, educational television, 4-H programs in schools, family programs and special events.

Through international programs, exchange opportunities and overseas activities also have evolved, and many nations have developed a youth program similar to 4-H.

4-H DAY AT TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY

4-H members from the West Texas area will participate in the second annual 4-H Day at Texas Tech University. The special day is scheduled for November 17, 1984.

The activity will promote careers in agriculture and home economics and give leadership experience to senior age 4-H members.

All senior 4-H members, parents, volunteer leaders, and extension personnel are welcome to attend this event, which is sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with the Colleges of Home Economics and Agricultural Sciences.

The activities will begin with a career assembly in the University Center Theatre. A luncheon in the University Center ballroom will follow. Then all participants will see the Texas Tech - SMU football game.

The registration fee is $6. Contact the local Extension office 669-7429 for more information.
