

Cordova taken into custody

Cupid's arrow may shoot down kidnap charge

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

In what could turn out as little more than a modern-day version of Romeo and Juliet, police have released two kidnapping suspects and the 15-year-old girl that they supposedly abducted from her Pampa home a week ago today.

After dropping from sight for five days last week, Francisco Unsuela Cordova, 22, and his alleged victim, Bertha Rodriguez, of 1056 Varnon Dr., showed up at her parents' home Friday afternoon and declared that they're in love, officers reported. "They've been off in South Texas. They said they decided to get married," Pampa police investigator J.D. Laramore said.

After a week-long disappearance, the sweethearts—separated in age by seven years—came back to Rodriguez's Pampa home, the same place where her family said she was abducted, about 1:30 p.m. Friday.

Police picked up Cordova and the girl at the South Pampa residence and took them downtown for questioning.

Police decided to release the girl and the two suspects on personal recognizance Friday, pending presentation of the confusing case to a grand jury, Laramore said.

The case has baffled police from the start. Sergeant Ken Neal had the task of sorting out the tale of kidnapping or romance when the Rodriguez family first reported the girl's disappearance shortly after 5 p.m. last Sunday.

Neal said officers initially had trouble figuring out what had happened, because the reported victim's relatives don't speak English and because police weren't sure whether the girl left with Cordova voluntarily.

He said the family insisted that young Rodriguez was kidnapped and also reported that Cordova had grabbed her twice before. In the previous incidents, both since 1982, the suspect drove the teenager to Juarez, Mexico, and returned her unharmed. Neal said at the time. The family declined to press charges on both earlier occasions, he said.

The third time they ran off wasn't a charm, but a crime, police figured, because one of the witnesses swore he saw a man grab the crying girl by the wrist and drag her into a pickup truck, where another man waited, police have said.

Laramore said Friday that police quickly pursued charges against the men because of their concern for the welfare of young Rodriguez.

"We didn't want to find a dead girl," he said.

About four hours after the family's first call to Pampa police, Armando Dominguez, 36, of Dumas was alone when he was arrested in the wanted pickup in Dumas, according to police. Police charged that Dominguez helped Unsuela unlawfully corral his teenage girlfriend. The alleged partner and possible matchmaker was arraigned here in connection with a charge of kidnapping on Monday. Dominguez's bond was set at $25,000.

The girl's family signed the formal complaints against the men.

In a parallel to the Bard's centuries-old tale, the Rodriguez family won't accept a relationship between the juvenile and the 22-year-old Cordova, according to police.

"She says one thing, and the parents say another," Laramore said.

"The charges are not dropped, just pending a grand jury investigation. We're going to see if the citizens of the community want to charge them," he explained.

Heating woes

Pampa charities say utilities not cooperative on late bills

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Early this year Pampa utility companies told the public that customers suffering from sky-high utility bills in the coldest winter on record could count on the companies' understanding and cooperation in arranging to pay out the higher heating bills in installments.

But in many cases, the companies have cooperated about the same way the lions worked with Christians in the Roman Coliseum, according to four local charities that help poor people pay utility bills.

Representatives of the companies, however, say the offer to work with people trying in good faith to pay their bills still stands. Southwestern Public Service Company and Energas have lived up to their ends of any arrangements made with customers to pay out unusually high utility bills, company representatives said.

SPS and Energas announced that they would work with customers on a pay-out basis in response to pleas for cooperation issued in January by the Texas Railroad Commission and Public Utilities Commission.

The key to keeping the utilities on, the representatives said, is setting up a partial-payment plan BEFORE a termination notice is sent, or service is cut off.

"Somebody led them to believe the service will be left on if they make a partial payment, but that isn't the case," said Bill Ragsdale, director of Good Samaritan Christian Services, a charity supported by 16 Pampa churches.

Representatives with Good Sam, the Salvation Army, Community Action and SHARE, all which have helped the less-fortunate pay utility bills in the killing "Big Chill," the name given this year's winter, say dozens of their Pampa clients report that the local electric and gas companies haven't lived up to their story of understanding benevolence.

Take the case of Mr. B. Ragsdale points out.

Mr. B's elderly wife was dying of cancer at home in bed. Mr. B, staggering under medical bills in the last days of his wife's life, went to the Energas office, told them about the terminal situation, and pleaded that the company leave on the gas, the source of heat in the couple's home.

"He lost his gas," Ragsdale said. "He came here (the Good Samaritan office) wanting a blanket for his wife. We had a new electric blanket, thank God."

"About a week later, his wife died," he said. "Mr. B tried to warm his wife and home by turning on the burners and oven of an electric range, not a very efficient means of heating a house."

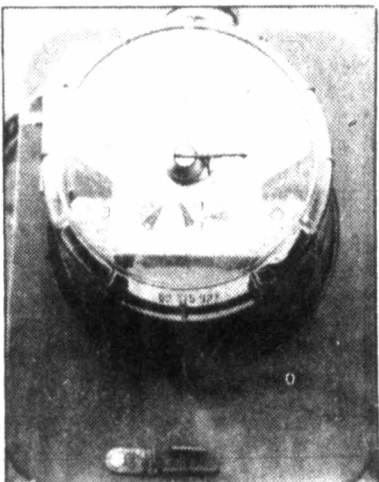

"Now he has a big electric bill he can't pay," Ragsdale said.

Joe Gidden, SPS manager in Pampa and Judith Kerr, Energas public relations spokeswoman in Amarillo, both said the companies would never knowingly turn off service in the home of a customer with a serious illness.

"Miss X" has two children, ages 1 and 3. Miss X, according to Good Sam's files, doesn't work and hasn't bothered to try to qualify for government welfare or food benefits.

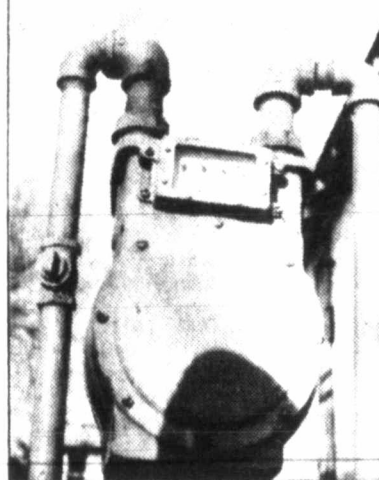

She also didn't bother to try to pay her more than $100 gas bills for heat in the freezing months of December and January. X's live-in boyfriend also doesn't work, and he didn't try to pay the bills, either.

When her gas was shut off, Miss X's children were sick with pneumonia. A local doctor treating the children for the illness at no charge appealed to Energas to turn on the disconnected gas, at least until the children were better.

High costs

The utility meters in Pampa have registered some sky-high heating costs during the past three months, and local charitable organizations say a number of residents have had their utility service cut off and are without heat.

The company turned it on for another week, but cut it off again, despite the doctor's continued plea, according to the service organizations.

Salvadoran election eve marred by rebel strike

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP)—Leftist rebels killed 30 soldiers in an ambush east of here Saturday and hit an army communications center, increasing the fighting the day before the first presidential election in seven years.

Officials expect 1.8 million Salvadorans to vote Sunday. Security forces were on alert for rebel attempts to disrupt the balloting, which the Reagan administration hopes will provide an underpinning of popular support for continued military and economic aid.

Military sources said 30 army and national guard troops were killed and 27 wounded when guerrillas surprised them just north of Tecoluca in San Vicente province, about 45 miles east of San Salvador.

They said rebels attacked the communications post five miles west of San Miguel about dawn, sweeping the hilltop post with automatic rifle fire for about 20 minutes, then fell back. There were no known casualties or damage.

Guerrillas also set up a roadblock at El Triunfo on the Pan American Highway, about 70 miles east of San Salvador, but troops chased them away with no casualties to either side, the sources said.

Not far away along the highway, two civilians were wounded when a bus hit a mine. The guerrilla threat to mine highways had paralyzed most transportation, especially in the east.

Small arms fire was heard in San Salvador before dawn. The capital and much of the country to the east were temporarily without electricity after attacks on power installations. Power was restored in the capital by dawn, but four eastern provinces were blacked out hours later. Officials predicted it would not disrupt voting.

Phone service also was cut to the northeastern province of Morazan.

The guerrillas said last week they would not attack voters and polling places, as they tried to do in an election two years ago for the Constituent Assembly. About 1.5 million Salvadorans voted under the eyes of Western observers in 1982. The outcome was seen as a propaganda victory for the government.

The Reagan administration, trying to push an emergency, $93 million military aid package for El Salvador through Congress, hoped for a similar or better turnout this time. Congress last week postponed consideration of the aid request until after the election.

The United States sent 30 official observers for Sunday's election, and they were joined by about 300 more from 27 other countries.

Leftists are boycotting the election, as they did in 1982, dismissing it as a "farce" and saying their candidates would be endangered by death squads.

Although there were eight candidates, the race was believed to be a two-man contest between Roberto A. Aubuisson and Jose Napoleon Duarte. Duarte, 57, head of the Christian Democrats and a former president, expects close to a majority of votes and an easy majority of more than 60 percent in the event of a runoff.

The leader of the ultraconservative Republican Nationalist Alliance has been widely linked to the rightist death squads accused of killing thousands of civilians. He has denied those allegations.

Mondale the winner in Hart's native state

BY JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

Walter Mondale and Gary Hart pitched their appeals to voters in New York on Saturday as Democrats caucused in Virginia and Kansas. Mondale took Hart by surprise, winning in Hart's native state of Kansas, and Mondale forged into the lead in Virginia.

The third candidate for the nomination, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, returned to Virginia to urge his supporters to overcome what he called "a bad system" there and turn out en masse on his behalf.

Mondale in Kansas rolled up big margins in major cities to claim what state party officials said would be 20 or 21 of the state's 37 pledged delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Mondale forged into the lead in Virginia, where Jackson had run up an early lead in that state's biggest city, Norfolk.

Montana Democrats caucus Sunday to select their 19 pledged delegates.

The next big prize is the 304 delegate clump at stake—52 in Connecticut and 252 in New York—during the next 10 days. Sandwiched between Tuesday's Connecticut primary and the April 3 vote in New York are the Kentucky caucuses next Saturday to pick 53 delegates.

At a labor rally in New York City, Mondale compared his battle with Hart to a fight between average Americans living from paycheck to paycheck and those who are on the make.

JOE GIDDEN: 'We'll help anybody in trouble'

Langley places first in state writing contest

FORT WORTH—The Pampa News was the recipient of two awards in the annual Associated Press Managing Editors newspaper contest in ceremonies Saturday.

Pampa News Senior Staff Writer Jeff Langley won first place in the feature writing contest, competing against all newspapers in the state with circulation of less than 15,000.

Langley's award-winning story was entitled "The Boys came to buy." It was an account of the auctioning of former congressman Bob Price's property last year.

An editorial written by Pampa News Managing Editor Wally Simmons received an honorable mention in the competition. The editorial characterized politicians' promises to help certain groups with taxpayers' money as a form of vote-buying.

Two other Panhandle newspaper won awards.

Amarillo's veteran sports columnist, Putt Powell, tied for second in sport column writing.

The Borger News Herald's Pam Coffey won an honorable mention in the feature series competition and Borger photographer Don Rice received honorable mention in feature photography.

City to discuss beautification project

Pampa city commissioners will discuss the beautification of city-owned properties in keeping with the aims of a newly certified Clean Pampa, Inc., its meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.
Clean Pampa, Inc., is a non-profit group formed to institute programs to encourage residents to clean up trash and litter and beautify property. A number of city officials attended the group's certification meeting last week.
The commission also will hold a public hearing on a request by Roy C. Arkman and I. W. Tinney for a zoning change from agriculture to commercial strict for Block 1, Medi Park North. Commissioners will consider final plan approval for Pampa South Estates Unit 1 south of the city off Hwy. 70.

Commissioners also will hear a report concerning activities, operations and programs of the Pampa Police Department in a continuing series of reports from department heads.
In other business, the commission will hear recommendations from city engineers to approve traffic signals for the Hwy. 70 project, Duncan and 23rd St. improvements and water and sewer lines for the West Gate Addition project. Commissioners also will consider final acceptance of 28th Ave. street improvements in the West Gate Addition.

Other items to be considered include appointment of members to the M. K. Brown Auditorium advisory board, a request from Austin Sutton for funding in support of Crime Stoppers Association and authorization of payment of accrued interest on Certificates of Obligation, Series 1981 and 1982.
Commissioners also will consider approval of the 1984 contract with the Pampa Umpires Association and Pampa Scorekeepers Association and a concession agreement in connection with the city softball program.

Heating woes told

trying to carry them as far as we can...There's a time and point that people have to bring their arrears account into balance," said Jerry Norris, Energas' Pampa manager.
"Mrs. Worker" is a cleaning lady. She has worked at her job with a Pampa company for the past 13 years. Her net income is about $500 per month. Worker, who tries to support three children, was faced with a two-month gas bill of nearly $200.
"I told them I couldn't pay all my gas bill at once. I told them I'd pay every two weeks, and that's what I did," Worker said.
She has receipts showing partial payments of $40, $50 and $50 that she made each payday.
"I come home from work, and they'd cut the gas off. I called and said, 'Why did you cut my gas off?' They said, 'It's overdue.'
"They just up and cut it off without notice," she said.
Kerr and Gidden said it is company policy that the entire amount of a bill must be paid before they will restore service.
Kerr said the company will wave the pay-up policy and restore service "only in the most extenuating circumstances, such as severe illness, and it must be substantiated."
The gas company required Mrs. Worker to pay off the entire amount of her back bill, plus a $50 deposit, before restoring service.
The local charities have had dozens of similar cases this year. Many asking for help have incomes ranging from zero to $200 or $300 per month. During the winter cold waves, the utility bills often equaled or exceeded their incomes.
Because the heating bills have been so high, the organizations have often chipped in to help pay some of the delinquent bills. One reason for the four charities' pooling of resources is a limitation on the amount of money that each can spend on behalf of a single client. Good Samaritan Christian Services, for example, is limited to an expenditure of $100 per client.
Good Sam alone helped 56 families in January and 51 in February in paying utility bills. The charity itself paid out nearly $6,000 to the utility companies in the two-month period.

The requests for help with utilities have slackened off a little, Ragsdale said.
"We're getting about ten a day now," he said.
"There are still many local families without heat or lights or both. Some owe several hundred dollars that must be paid before the utilities are turned back on," Ragsdale said.
He said the companies' public statements in January about cooperation disgust him when he sees the stated policy in practice.
"The people make a partial payment, and two days later, the utilities cut them off...We've heard it dozens of times," Ragsdale said.
"Most want to pay their bills. There are just a small percentage that you would call bums or deadbeats," said Reed Echols, another Good Sam volunteer.
"They've treated these people so cruelly," she said.
"The individuals tell me the utilities won't work with them," said Maggie Ivey, a Salvation Army caseworker.
Representatives with Community Action and SHARE repeated the same frustration.
Norris said in the present warmer weather, the company has tried to step up its collection efforts in the cases of delinquent payers whose service was left on in the severe cold weather.
Gidden and Kerr said their companies won't terminate service in the extremely cold weather, but now it's time to pay the piper.
"Most try to wait until the hour it's going to be cut off, and then it's too late...They've laid behind the log too long," Gidden said.
"We'll help anybody in trouble, if they'll come and work with us," Gidden said.
"It balances down to a judgment call. I try to give everybody and even break. I believe in human dignity," he added.
The company representatives said pay-out arrangements are determined by the local management and based on each individual's circumstances.
Gidden said he often pulls money out of his own pocket, as much as $240, to help people make payments and keep their service on. He said on all but two occasions, the customers have repaid the SPS manager's personal loans.

The manager said his company constantly deals with people who run up big electric bills, move away, and "thumb their noses at us." Also, Gidden said, many with large bills allow the service to be disconnected, and then have the electricity restored in someone else's name.
Gidden said he has no patience with people who say they can't pay an electric bill but manage to buy "a carton of cigarettes or a fifth of whiskey," and make a boat payment.
The SPS manager said the impoverished boat owners and whiskey drinkers who refuse to pay their electric bills should know that, "I'm coming to get your lights."
"I rode them for sixty days, and now they're too hard-hearted to let me ride them for sixty more," Gidden said some of the irresponsible lament.
The utilities' representatives said the companies send numerous notices and try every possible way to collect a bill before service is terminated.
"Come in here and make some arrangements, and we'll work with you," Gidden said.
"The company tries to work out arrangements with customers based on individual circumstances...As long as the arrangement is maintained, service will be continued," Kerr said.
The utilities' spokesmen said the companies must work hard to collect bills for the benefit of all of the customers. Any money not collected eventually gets figured into the rate base, for which all customers pay, they said.
"The Texas Railroad Commission and municipalities expect the company to run the utility in a businesslike manner," Kerr said.
"It's just not right to our customers who pay their bills on time," Gidden said about those who refuse to pay.
The officials said people who can't pay their total bill on time should come into the office as soon as they realize they can't pay. If a customer sticks by his word in an agreement to make partial payments, he won't lose his service, the company officials said.
Echols had a word of advice for people making arrangements to pay out a utility bill: "Get it in writing."

Bombing doesn't deter queen

LONDON (AP) - Queen Elizabeth II, undeterred by a bombing in Jordan and growing fears for her safety, will carry out her official visit to the Middle East nation, the British government announced Saturday.
At about the time that announcement was made, Syrian-backed Palestinian rebels in Damascus claimed the bombing and said "Britain will pay dearly" if it continues to support the Jordanian government.
A statement from the office of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the decision not to cancel the queen's trip followed a three-hour meeting of ministers and security advisers at Chequers, the prime minister's official country residence.
The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, leave Sunday on what may be the most dangerous trip of her 32-year reign. They will stay overnight at a British air base in Cyprus before flying to Amman Monday morning. They will spend four days in Jordan, visiting the Red Sea port of Aqaba and the ancient city of Petra besides the capital.
The Jordanian government said two people were slightly hurt in the blast at the Intercontinental Hotel, and witnesses said a third woman was slightly hurt as she drove her car into the hotel parking lot.
A short time after the explosion, a bomb made of at least 20 sticks of dynamite was found hidden in another part of the parking lot and was defused. The hotel will serve as press base during the visit.
In its statement asserting responsibility for the bombing, the "Revolutionary Council of Fatah" said, "We warn the British government against continuing its hostile policy." The statement was issued in Damascus, Syria's capital.

The Revolutionary Council was formed by rebels opposed to Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization and leader of Fatah, the largest guerrilla organization in the PLO. It said the blast was "in retaliation to the terrorist and repressive acts practiced by the Jordanian regime against Palestinian strugglers."

Fraternity disciplined

UNIVERSITY PARK, Texas (AP) - A Southern Methodist University fraternity has been disciplined because of a Feb. 29 party that resulted in three freshman initiates requiring hospital treatment.
The SMU Judicial Council, which held three hours of testimony and two hours of deliberations on the hazing allegations, ruled Friday that the Lambda Beta fraternity was guilty of misconduct.

The sanctions were not made public but officials say they involve the fraternity's social functions and chapter conduct.
University judicial officer Valerie Petriak said the panel's specific findings and sanctions will not be disclosed until all appeals are concluded.

Adventure book written by Pampan is published

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

When he isn't fishing, Max White lets his mind wander to such places as the brisk woods of western Canada and back to more robust times when man depended on instinct.

Then he returns to his Pampa home and writes about what he sees. Although he's put many of his stories on paper, it wasn't until earlier this year that White was able to share his work with the public.

White's first published novel, "Dead Man's Cache" was released in paperback by Avon Books earlier this year.

Set in the Canadian province of British Columbia in the 19th Century, the book tells of an Englishman who stops at an Indian village in search of gold. He falls for a half-breed squaw and becomes part of their tribe.

"French blood is quite common in the Indian tribes in that location," he said.

Though it may seem a bit out of place for a native Texan and Panhandle resident to write so colorfully about a far-away land, the wooded mountains are as familiar to White as his favorite fishing spot.

"I just like the out-of-doors, and I like the country out there," White said. "When I was a boy, we went trapping in the mountains, mostly in northern Colorado."

White said he's taken two trips to Glacier Park in British Columbia, the location which inspired his work. There, he talked with some of the Indians and other residents of the area.

"I just picked up from what I saw and what few Indians I talked to," he said. "It's a pretty place out there."

White combines his observations with his interest in the out-of-doors and history.

Asked if he'd set one of his stories in West Texas, White said "I thought about it. But I didn't think there was much subject matter here that hasn't been done. And it would be kind of hard for a fellow to get much interesting material on the Plains Indian."

White commented that the Indians of Canada are different than their southern counterparts.

"For one thing, they're larger, and they're more interesting in their surroundings," he said. The Weatherford native came to Pampa when he was a youth. The family still has a homestead in the area.

"We travelled a lot through Canada," he said. "And we used to do the wheat harvest several times through Nebraska."

White, or Curly to his friends, is retired from Cabot Corp.

"I took an early retirement," he said. "I started with Cabot back when they were located at Breckenridge and I moved with them over here."

Since his retirement, he divides his time between writing and fishing with his wife Bernice.

"I just wrote when I felt like it and whenever she let me," he said, adding that he plans to continue writing.

Although White has had some short stories and poems published, "Dead Man's Cache" is his first major piece to be published.

The Pampa author explained that he submitted his manuscript to a literary agent in Florida. The agent sent the books to several different publishers before the book was accepted at Avon.

"And, they didn't do any changes to it that I can find," he observed. "I don't not a word."

Avoiding details of the contract or disclosing how much money he received, White said that he received an advance royalty and will get royalties from books that are sold.

With his first novel hitting the stands, White said he's already got at least two other novels in the works.

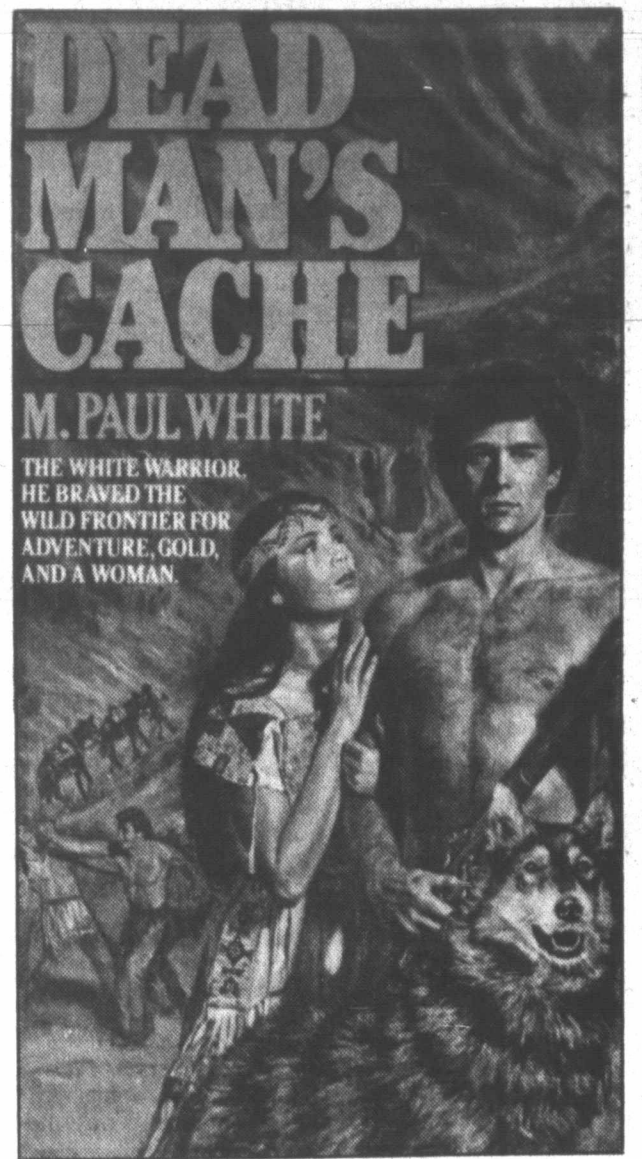

"I have some already finished, and I'm putting final touches on them," he said. "One is called 'Grandpa Nugget' and the other is 'The Land of Nod'."

Of the latter work, White explained "See, when God threw Cain out of the Garden, Cain complained that people would kill him. That proves to me that there were people here back then."

"So he sent Cain into the Land of Nod," he paused. "I figure I know as much about the people of Nod as anybody else."

Whether he sells another work or not, White said he plans to continue writing. "He told me if he never sold a book he'd still enjoy it," said his wife.

"I felt that at least the published book gave me some encouragement," White concluded. "But if I don't sell, it won't be a great discouragement."

Con man claims LBJ ordered man's death to protect slush fund

FRANKLIN, Texas (AP) — Convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes told a grand jury that illegal business deals he arranged generated $21 million a year, part of which went to a slush fund controlled by Lyndon B. Johnson. The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

Estes, protected from prosecution by a grant of immunity, testified for 4½ hours Tuesday before the Robertson County grand jury about the 1961 slaying of U.S. Agriculture Department official Henry H. Marshall. District Attorney John Paschall has confirmed.

The grand jury said that Marshall's death, which had been ruled a suicide in 1961, was a homicide. However, Paschall said no further action was planned by the panel since Estes' testimony was unsubstantiated and all other parties in the case were dead.

However, several Robertson County officials who originally investigated Marshall's death said Friday that they stand behind the suicide ruling, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday.

Marshall's widow told the Houston Post she doubted Johnson was behind her husband's death.

"What others believe, that's their belief," Sybil Marshall said. "As far as I know, Mr. Johnson was not involved."

Mrs. Marshall, 65, who lives in Bryan, said she did not have any theories about why her husband was killed or who did the shooting.

She said she was sure her husband knew something about the cotton allotment scandal "but he never discussed it with me."

The News quoted sources as saying Estes testified that in January 1961, he and two other men met with Johnson at LBJ's Washington home to discuss Marshall, who was questioning the legality of Estes' cotton allotments.

Estes said Marshall had refused attempts to have him transferred away from the cotton allotment program, the newspaper reported.

Estes quoted LBJ as saying, "Get rid of him," referring to Marshall, the sources said.

Lady Bird Johnson, LBJ's widow, declined to comment on Estes' reported testimony. Liz Carpenter, a spokeswoman for Mrs. Johnson, said that she does not respond to "scurrilous" reports about her late husband.

Estes, contacted Friday in Dallas, refused to discuss his grand jury testimony. The News quoted its sources as saying Estes did not elaborate on the slush fund.

Robert Hardesty, a speechwriter for LBJ after Johnson became president, said Friday that he had "some rather strong reactions" to reports of Estes' testimony.

"You have to consider the source," Hardesty said. "Mr. Estes' whole career has been tangible evidence that he doesn't know the difference between the truth and a bald-faced lie. For a person of his character to besmirch the character of a dead president is absolutely tragic."

Estes has been convicted twice in federal courts on fraud-related charges — in 1963 and 1979. He was in federal prison from 1965 to 1971 and again from 1979 until 1983.

Marshall, an Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service official who oversaw the cotton allotment program in Central Texas, was found dead on his Robertson County ranch on June 3, 1961. He had been shot five times in the abdomen and a bolt-action 22-caliber rifle was found nearby, but the death was ruled a suicide.

Marshall's body was exhumed for an autopsy after Estes' financial empire fell in 1962. The pathologist in the case, Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk of Houston, reported that Marshall had suffered not only gunshot wounds but also an "incapacitating" head wound and carbon monoxide poisoning.

The suicide ruling, however, was upheld by a Robertson County grand jury that year.

The News quoted its sources as saying Estes alleged four men were involved in planning Marshall's murder — Estes, Johnson, Johnson troubleshooter and close aide Clifton C. Carter and triggerman Malcolm Everett (Mac) Wallace.

Convicted killer requests polygraph test in Halloween death

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas lawyer says a polygraph would clear convicted killer Ronald Clark O'Bryan — dubbed the "Candy Man" by his fellow Death Row inmates — of the 1974 Halloween poisoning death of his son.

Members of Gov. Mark White's staff and the Board of Pardons and Paroles have planned separate meetings this week to consider appeals from O'Bryan's attorneys to commute or stay his death sentence. O'Bryan is scheduled to die by injection early Saturday.

Richard Harrison, O'Bryan's attorney at his Houston trial in 1975, contended in a letter to White that the evidence against O'Bryan is "purely circumstantial" and said O'Bryan was never allowed to take a polygraph test to establish his innocence.

O'Bryan, a 39-year-old former Deer Park optician, has been sentenced to die for killing his 8-year-old son, Timothy, by contaminating his Halloween candy with cyanide.

Harrison told the Dallas Times Herald he wrote the letter to White because he is firmly convinced O'Bryan is innocent and was convicted only because of the public outrage over the crime.

"I don't think he did it," Harrison said. "It was just a sad, sad case where you've got a dead kid and you've got to do something about it."

In his letter to White, Harrison wrote, "I have tried five death penalty cases in my 20 years of practice and this is the only one in which I feel the defendant is not guilty of the crime of which he is charged."

Harrison said that at the time of the trial he asked then-Harris County prosecutor Mike Hinton to allow O'Bryan to take a Jury awards Kerr $3.5 million in libel case

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Former Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr was awarded $3.5 million in damages Saturday after a state district court jury ruled he was libeled by a column published in The El Paso Times.

The column, published on a commentary page in the Aug. 6, 1978 edition of the daily newspaper, stated "Kerr lied" in closing arguments to a federal jury and implied that he cheated in his duties as federal prosecutor.

The jury, which deliberated for 8½ hours over a two-day period, ruled in a 10-2 decision that the implication Kerr cheated at his job was published with "actual malice" and was defamatory to Kerr.

But the panel of seven men and five women said the statement "Kerr lied" was not published with "actual malice."

The jury award included $500,000 in actual damages and $3 million in exemplary damages.

After hearing the verdict, Kerr smiled and shook hands with his attorney, Jerry Gibson of San Antonio, and then told reporters, "I feel that I've been vindicated. This confirms my utmost faith in the jury system."

Times Editor Barbara Funkhouser said no decision had been made on whether to appeal the decision.

"I'm just deeply disappointed," she said. Kerr sued the Times in 1979, alleging the column written by Times reporter Ronald Dusek was "false, libelous and libelous per se."

Dusek, who currently is the Times capital reporter in Austin, wrote in the article that "Kerr lied" when he told a jury hearing a drug conspiracy case that one of the defendants in the trial had admitted to being the financier for a drug smuggling operation.

According to court records and testimony, the defendant's alleged confession was made to a paid informant and a government undercover agent. The defendant never admitted during his trial to being the money man, though both the informant and government agent testified of the alleged confession, trial transcripts show.

The Times contended during the five-day trial the column, which appeared in a Sunday edition, was an opinion piece based on facts.

Dusek testified that he believed when he wrote the column and still believes that Kerr intentionally was trying to mislead the jury in the drug conspiracy trial.

But during closing arguments, Gibson told the jury Dusek "made up" the information on which he based his article "for his own purposes."

Jurors refused to comment on the verdict Saturday. A spokesman for the jurors said the panel had agreed not to talk with reporters about the case.

Testimony showed O'Bryan has purchased $20,000 in life insurance for his son only two months before his death.

Although no witnesses could testify that O'Bryan purchased cyanide, a chemical company employee and a co-worker told jurors in the trial that O'Bryan had quizzed them about the deadly poison.

O'Bryan was convicted after testimony showed his son died from eating Pixy-Stix, a powdered candy in a paper tube. O'Bryan said the candy was collected from a house while his son was out trick-or-treating with a group of children.

Estes did not elaborate on the slush fund.

Estes alleged four men were involved in planning Marshall's murder — Estes, Johnson, Johnson troubleshooter and close aide Clifton C. Carter and triggerman Malcolm Everett (Mac) Wallace.

Marshall's body was exhumed for an autopsy after Estes' financial empire fell in 1962. The pathologist in the case, Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk of Houston, reported that Marshall had suffered not only gunshot wounds but also an "incapacitating" head wound and carbon monoxide poisoning.

THE OBEDIENCE OF FAITH

...through whom we received grace and apostleship, unto obedience of faith unto all the nations, for his name's sake, among whom are ye also, called to be Jesus Christ's." (Romans 1:5,6)

The very doctrine of salvation by grace through faith alone. While there is no question about salvation being by grace through faith (Ephesians 2:8-9), the Bible nowhere teaches salvation by faith only.

The works of Ephesians 2, which cannot justify, would be meritorious works, or works worthy, in and of themselves, of salvation. This would exclude grace. But the works we are to do are works of obedience, ordained of God, for man to do. The works of obedience are only deserving of salvation because God says they are (Hebrews 5:9) Salvation is so great that no works we are capable of would or could be deserving of such a reward.

Our obedience must be by faith. With complete trust in God, based on a deep-seated conviction in Him, we submit to His will. We must have this kind of faith in order to please Him (Hebrews 11:1-6.) As Abraham obeyed the Lord, even to the offering of his son Isaac, so we must believe in God completely. Hence it becomes "obedience of faith."

The very fact that Paul states that the purpose of preaching the gospel was in order to the obedience of faith indicated that obedience is necessary to salvation. We do not exclude faith, indeed, without faith there would be no motivation for obedience. In every instance of conversion recorded in the book of Acts, the people were told to do something. Jesus said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." (Matthew 7:21.)

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Early projections: harmful or not?

In terms of sheer speed, television remains unchallenged in reporting breaking national news events. ABC, NBC and CBS find competition only among themselves in being first to let the nation know the latest.

The quest to be first intensifies during election years to the point that the networks race to report who wins, but to predict who will win. In the 1980 election, a furor developed when the television networks announced Ronald Reagan as the "projected" winner before the polls closes on the West Coast.

By using exit polls—asking a sampling of voters leaving voting stations whom they chose—the networks get a head start on the official counters. They plug these figures into computers and, a few whirs and beeps later, the next president's name pops out on an index card.

Four years ago, Democratic leaders claimed the early prediction of a Reagan victory dissuaded many supporters of then-President Carter from casting a ballot. The attitude of "why bother if it's already over" on the part of many voters hampered Carter's re-election bid, the Demos said.

Earlier this year, television set a record of sorts when CBS and NBC projected Walter Mondale as the winner of the Iowa caucuses before they opened.

An ethical question must be raised. At what point in analyzing data do the media cease reporting news and begin making it? Many lawmakers—opposed to and should result in a stampede of media legal officers brandishing challenges based on freedom of press provisions.

Lawmakers can make it more difficult to conduct exit polls, but it is unlikely that a law halting the practice would stand a court test. Two options, therefore, remain for the voters—accept media reports and stay home or ignore them and declare your choice.

TV projections before elections are not always on the mark. The wide discrepancy between what some networks predicted in the New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont caucuses and primaries and what actually happened is a case in point. Gary Hart's wins in all three surprised everyone.

That's one strong argument for voters to pay no attention to the early projections.

Avoiding modern Ponzi scheme

After a sentence of ten years in jail on swindling charges, Charles Ponzi was deported to Italy. In 1919, Ponzi devised a get-rich-quick scheme whereby "investors" would give him $250 to get back $375 in forty-five days, making just over 500 percent per annum. Of course, Ponzi made millions. His only responsibility was to make sure he had more people paying into his system than he had being paid by his system.

Ponzi's game is great, if you get an early start. But if you enter the game at its tail end, towards its collapse, you wind up on the short end of the deal.

Ponzi was deported in 1934, but he left us a legacy. By 1935, we had a Ponzi game for the entire nation; and this is the subject of Irwin Schiff's new book, "The Social Security Swindle: How Anyone Can Drop Out (Hamden, Conn.: Freedom Books, 1984, $12.95).

According to Schiff and the S.S. Administration, for every Social Security recipient in 1950 there were sixteen people working and paying taxes. In 1984 there are three workers paying taxes for each recipient. When workers decrease and recipients increase the Social Security tax must rise. Or there can be a mixed solution: get more people in the game.

Congress recently forced NEW government employees and all employees of non-profit organizations and religious groups into the federal Ponzi game. Such a move will only slightly postpone (until current congressmen are out of office) the system's collapse, while increasing the number of victims. There is a virtual guarantee that any worker who is now 35 or under will pay higher and higher Social Security taxes and NEVER see a Social Security check.

Some of the problems of Social Security were seen in 1937 when a U.S. Court of Appeals held the act to be unconstitutional. However, on May 24, 1937, the Supreme Court reversed the lower court's decision.

Two Supreme Court justices, McReynolds and Butler, stated the Social Security Act was repugnant to the U.S. Constitution.

There you have it. The court is not going to help. Congress won't help. The White House won't help. That's where Irwin Schiff's book comes in: you help yourself. He says you should simply drop out of S.S. - and he offers a formula for doing so.

Schiff says, "Social Security taxes withheld from employee wages are 'income' taxes and not taxes on wages." He continues, "Since the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) does not define 'income' no one can have 'income' that can be subject to section 3101 'income' taxes." Therefore, Schiff says you should give your employer a sworn affidavit stating you have no 'income' that is taxable under IRC section 3101, and he MUST stop deducting S.S. taxes from your wages or you can sue him.

The government anticipated such an action so IRC section 3102 was written promising to indemnify employers against lawsuits you make to stop them from deducting S.S. Therefore, Schiff urges your employer to send a letter to Treasury Secretary Donald Regan asking that government pay all costs of litigation, if you sue your employer, and indemnify against all losses and claims. Schiff provides sample letters for both of you.

This columnist doesn't have a legal background and doesn't know all the consequences and other strategies. But we must end this national Ponzi scheme, steeped in fraud and misrepresentation, which has an UNFUNDED liability in the trillions of dollars. S.S. won't only wreak havoc on the nation economically, it'll also cause class conflict whereby young taxpayers are pitted against older people.

Irwin Schiff's "Social Security Swindle" may not have all the answers, but it is an excellent start for developing the critical mass necessary to successfully rebel against the S.S. system. The government cannot put a million workers in jail.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, March 25, the 85th day of 1984. There are 281 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 25, 1965, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. led 25,000 marchers to the steps of the state Capitol in Montgomery, Ala., to protest the denial of voting rights to blacks.

On this date:

In 1634, Maryland was founded by colonists led by Lord Baltimore. And in 1977, President Jimmy Carter lifted a ban and again allowed Americans to spend U.S. dollars in Cuba.

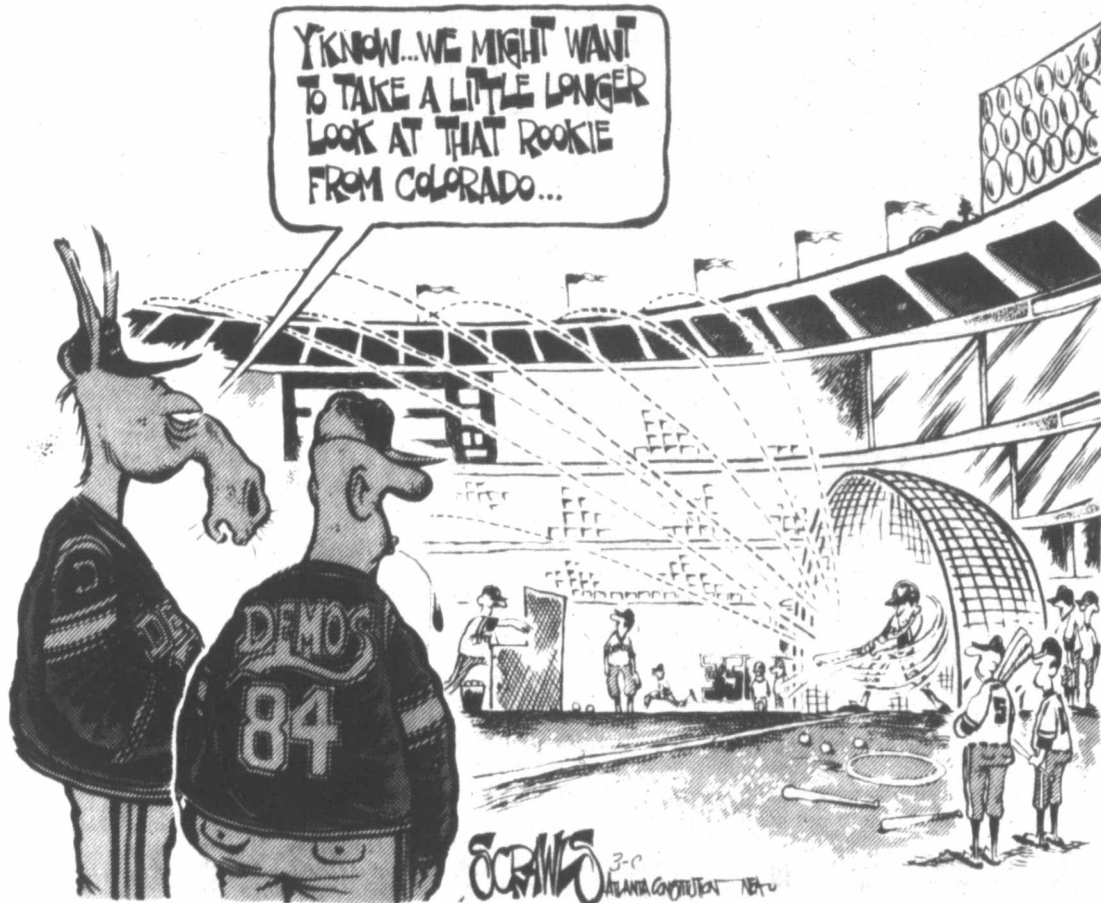

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger began talks in Moscow with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev on the prospects for an agreement limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Five years ago: The anti-Castro terror group Omega 7 claimed responsibility for bombings at New York's Kennedy Airport and at two buildings in New Jersey in which four people were injured.

One year ago: Pope John Paul II struck the bronze Holy Door of St. Peter's Basilica three times with a hammer, ushering in a Holy Year commemorating the 1,950th anniversary of Christ's crucifixion.

Today's Birthdays: Feminist leader Gloria Steinem is 50 years old. TV personality Anita Bryant is 44. Singer Aretha Franklin and actor Paul Michael Glaser are 42. Singer Elton John is 37. And actor Haywood Nelson is 24.

A bad day for exit pollsters

A person's vote used to be the most sacred thing in his life, and the one thing he was permitted to do in privacy. Not any more.

When Joe Procter walked out of the voting booth the other day he was surrounded by six people with clipboards.

"What's your religion?" one person shouted.

"How old are you?" another demanded. "How much money do you make?" someone else wanted to know.

"Hey, what's going on?" Procter said. "We're conducting an exit poll," one of the clipboard people replied. "We want to know who you voted for."

"I don't think that's any of your business," Procter said.

"What do you mean it isn't any of our business? We have to know so we can report it on television."

"I don't want my vote shown on television," Procter said.

"We'll report you for interfering with the electoral process," someone said. "It's your duty as an American to tell us how you voted."

"And also to reveal if you're married or single, and whether you're a conservative or a liberal."

"And why you voted for one candidate as opposed to the other."

"Says who?" Procter demanded. "The public has a right to know. How can we tell who won the primary if you won't answer our questions?"

"Why don't you wait until the ballots are counted?" Procter asked.

"We can't do that or the other networks will scoop us. Americans don't have time to sit around until the ballots are tabulated."

"Well, they're going to have to wait if they want to know how I voted," Procter said.

"Okay," said a clipboard holder. "If you won't tell us who you voted for, will you tell us who you voted against?"

"Not on your life."

"Does that mean you voted against Mondale?"

"I've got to go home to lunch."

"Don't be hardheaded. We're not going to use your name. If you didn't vote for Hart just tell us why."

"I'm going to call a cop."

"Does that mean you voted for Glenn because you think he's stronger for law and order?"

"Hold it. There are two things in my life that I can do in privacy - and one of them is vote secretly for the candidate of my choice."

"What's the other?"

"Go to the bathroom, which is what I've got to do right now."

One of the pollsters shouted, "If you don't answer our questions you're threatening the sanctity of exit poll."

"Well, you'll have to poll somebody else."

"If you're not talking, that means you voted for Jackson."

"Why don't you all buzz off?"

"You can hang tough if you want to, but Tom Brokaw is going to hear about this."

"If you won't play the game don't ever ask Dan Rather for a favor."

"You could cost Jennings and Brinkley their jobs."

"Is that all you have to say?" Procter asked.

"No, there is one thing. Don't ever meet Sam Donaldson in a dark alley."

Economists confused as laymen

SEWANEE, Tenn. - Deepening concern about industrial policy and international trade is evident among economists in Western countries. The global recession of recent years and dramatic changes in manufacturing and trade pose major problems for countries in the Atlantic alliance.

This concern was manifested here in recent days during the fifth annual economics symposium held at the University of the South. Economists and government officials from the U.S.,

Britain, Switzerland, West Germany and Canada wrestled with the industrial policy and trade questions.

The economists on the program represented a variety of schools, traditions and viewpoints, but there was no discernible support for the mix of subsidies and nationalization of industries that often constitutes industrial policy in Europe. One American, however, proposed what seemed to be a phased dismantlement of older industries - "the orderly shutdown of entire plants" - employing a tariff as a means of providing welfare payments for displaced workers and dying companies. This amounted to a kind of burial insurance scheme, but his plan came in for much criticism.

In the main, the economists seemed as confused as laymen. They recognized that a blizzard of economic change was sweeping over the world but they weren't sure how to deal with its effects.

One economist who wasn't confused was Dr. Andrea Boltho of Oxford University, who described "Japan's Industrial Policy" in superb, detailed fashion. He reported on the Japanese practice of administrative guidance, consisting of ministerial "notifications, instructions, directives, wishes, opinions, which have usually been heeded by Japanese industry."

There were debates over the extent to which Japan is fundamentally different from other countries in its monolithic character, but the instruments of guidance and direction were clearly delineated.

There also was very little enthusiasm for an industrial policy designed to pick winners and losers. On the other hand, there was a good measure of recognition of the fact that America has a grab bag of anti-trust laws, Federal Trade Commission rules, etc., which amount to an industrial policy, albeit a wholly uncoordinated one. And there seemed to be recognition that the market mechanism, unaided in any way, isn't the complete answer to an economic challenge from a country with a militant industrial policy designed to capture market share in unprotected foreign markets.

Left unanswered by the economists was the question of what to do about imports from underdeveloped countries with very low wage scales, totalitarian governments and modern technology. Economists, like other people, have intellectual biases. Deeply embedded ideas get in the way of full recognition of reality, including economic realities.

The West is involved in a major process of analysis of industrial policy and trade, trying to reach a new understanding and basis for action. The Sewanee economic symposium reflected the difficulties the West faces as it confronts the trade crisis.

Allyn Moore left the private sector of civil engineering after 17 years of experience to become director of the Public Works Department of Pampa, looking for a challenge.

"I kind of ran out of challenges," Moore said. "I realized I had been doing the same things for years. I wanted something different."

Moore took over as Public Works director on March 1, replacing Jiggs Cooke, who retired in November. Moore moved here from Tulsa, Okla., where he had been working for two years as vice president and chief engineer for an engineering company with 35 employees.

Prior to that he had worked for two engineering companies at Junction City, Kan., after graduation from Kansas State University at Manhattan, Kan., in 1967 with a bachelor's degree in civil engineering.

Though this is his first municipal position, Moore said he has had "a great deal of municipal engineering" experience on "hundreds of projects."

He has worked as an engineering consultant for cities a number of times while employed with the three engineering firms for which he has worked. Moore has designed water and sewer plants, developed water and sewer systems and helped plan city subdivisions.

"I've done all the same things" involved with his new job, "just in a different line of employment" in the private sector, he said.

Moore said the city will be making use of his engineering experiences.

"My efforts are going to be in two main areas: one, in public works administration; the other, in engineering," he said.

On the job for only about three weeks, Moore said the work "has been increasingly busy" as he gets acquainted with the aspects of being Public Works director. He supervises the Public Works Department staff and oversees other departments.

His areas of responsibility include custodial services for city buildings (except Lovett Memorial Library), building inspections, streets, sanitation, parks and recreation, city shops, city health department and engineering "to some extent," he noted.

He plans to keep busy, he said. "I'm very impressed - and I say that sincerely - with the quality of the staff here," he said.

"I really do not see any problems in Pampa that are terribly unique," Moore said, adding he has seen other cities with similar problems. He feels the problems "can be solved as we go along."

Currently he is involved in the early stages of budgetary planning and consideration of projects to be undertaken. He also hopes to be able "to do a little more" in the areas of building and engineering inspections.

Moore is currently a registered licensed professional engineer in Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma. He has applied for his Texas license, a process which will take two to seven months, he said he was told. He is also a registered land surveyor in Kansas.

He belongs to a variety of professional associations, including the Society of American Military Engineers, the Water Pollution Control Federation and the National Society of Professional Engineers.

Moore grew up near Wichita, Kan., and lived in Denver "for a short period of time." He served in the U. S. Army, receiving intelligence training at Fort Holabird in Dundalk, Md., before being stationed with the Counterintelligence Corps at Chicago.

He welcomed the opportunity to move to Pampa from Tulsa. "Tulsa had grown too big," he said; he likes a smaller city. He noted Pampa is about the same size as Junction City - "almost like being back home," he said.

In the past he had worked with some civic groups, but he had to give that up. As a consulting engineer, he often had late - night meetings with clients, cutting back on time he could spend with civic organizations.

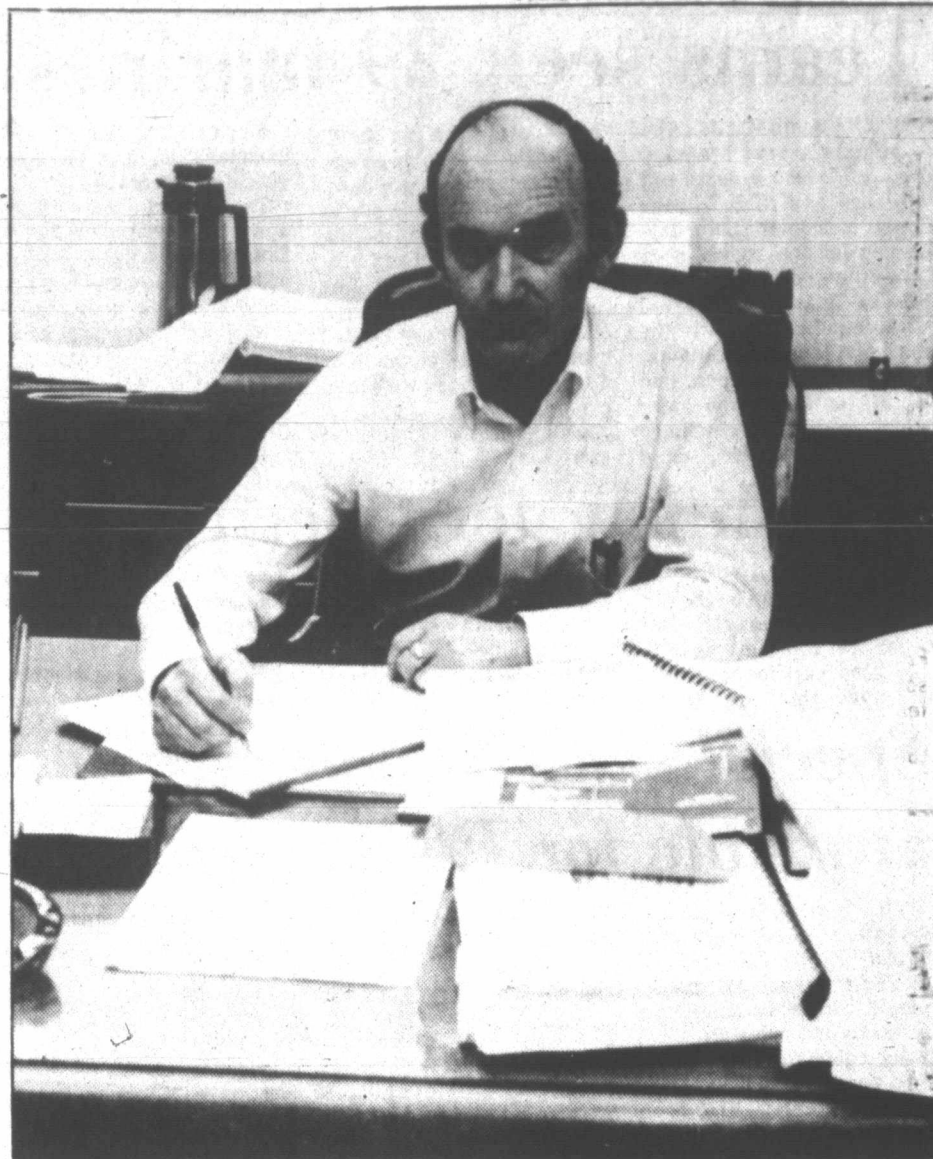

But he hopes to have more time here and perhaps get more involved with some civic groups. He is interested in working with the Chamber of Commerce, he said.

"I'm looking forward to (Clean Pampa, Inc.) doing a lot of work," he said. He added the city is moving to work on cleaning up areas in the town.

He also has a couple of interests he would like to pursue, including radio-controlled model airplanes and "a lot of running," even entering a few races, he said.

His wife Kate is currently a teacher of English and gifted education classes at Bixby, Okla. She will be moving here in June.

They have two daughters, Anne and Kay, in their late teens. They will probably be staying in Oklahoma, he said.

Production Credit observes golden anniversary

The year is 1933. Blustery winds blow walls of topsail across the high plains - blinding farmers, suffocating livestock and uprooting crops. Once - productive farms become hot and barren.

It's the middle of the depression. Farmers, getting by on a pittance, face multiplying debts and defaulting mortgages. Banks and lending institutions deny farmers further loans.

The following year brings hope to the area as the newly chartered Canadian Production Credit Association sets up short - term loans for the struggling Panhandle farmers.

Canadian PCA honors its 50th year this week at its annual Stockholder's Meeting and dinner 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Canadian City Hall. Featured speaker at the meeting will be cartoonist Ace Reid, who is famous for his Cowpoke cartoons.

Production Credit was established through the 1933 Farm Credit Act to provide short and intermediate term agricultural loans. There are 422 PCAs nationwide serving more than 380,000 farmers and ranchers.

Starting on Jan. 3, 1934, with 19 signatures on its articles of incorporation, Canadian PCA has grown to more than 399 member - borrowers in Gray, Roberts, Ochiltree, Hemphill, Lipscomb and Wheeler Counties. In 1983, the association loaned more than $86 million to area borrowers.

Canadian PCA President Larry C. Albin observed that PCA has helped pull farmers through tough times and has made the good times more profitable.

"Probably two things enter into PCA success: Production Credit stays longer than most lending institutions and we get our money through the open money market, not through local supply."

The PCA is governed by a board of directors and has field offices in Pampa, Wheeler and Perryton, as well as its home office in Canadian.

Canadian man charged with rape

CANADIAN - A 26 - year - old man has been charged with aggravated rape in connection with the alleged rape of a Hemphill County woman Tuesday night at his trailer home.

Douglas Lee Gaston, 26, of Canadian was released from custody late last this week after posting a $10,000 bond.

According to District Attorney Guy Hardin, the charges stem from an incident late Tuesday night in which the 26 - year - old woman was allegedly raped at the suspect's home in Canadian.

"They reportedly met at a private club Tuesday night," he said. "Then they went by some trailer home and he took her by his trailer home in Canadian."

Gaston was apprehended early Wednesday morning by Canadian Police and Hemphill County Sheriff's officers. He later appeared before Hemphill County Justice of the Peace Frankie Hill, who set the $10,000 bond. "We'll have a grand jury right away and it will be submitted to the grand jury," Hardin said, adding that the matter is still under investigation.

Junior Livestock Show sales up nearly $27,000 over 1983

Sales results for the recent Top o' Texas Junior Livestock Show increased by nearly $27,000 over totals from last year's show, according to figures released by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Total sales for calves, pigs and lambs reached $159,023.88, an increase of $26,793.05 over sales total for the 1983 show. Fifteen more animals were sold at this year's show sale, held March 14 at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion at Recreation Park.

Increases were registered in most categories for the 1984 show over last year's figures, the Chamber report indicated.

Forty-eight calves were sold from 55 entries for a total of $68,418.37. Average price was $1,425.38, with a floor price of $73 per hundredweight (cwt.). Average price per pound was $1.31, with an average calf weight of 1,004.96 pounds for the 1984 show.

In last year's show 39 calves of 52 entries were sold for $48,209.10, an average price per calf of $1,236.13. Floor price was $65 per cwt., with an average price of $1.16 per pound for an average calf weight of 1060.94 pounds.

In the pigs divisions, 145 of 214 entries were sold for a total of $52,338.74 this year, an average price per pig of $360.96. Floor price was $44.58 per cwt. Average price per pound was $1.60, with an average weight per pig of 225.46 pounds.

Last year the same number of pigs - 145 - were sold from 209 entries for $48,808.68. Average price per pig was $336.61, with a floor price of $47.50 per cwt. Average price per pound was $1.48, with an average weight per pig of 227.81 pounds.

Total sales for lambs this year was $38,266.77 for 139 lambs sold out of 197 entries. Average price per lamb was $275.30, with a floor price of $54 per cwt. Average price per pound was $2.53, with an average weight of 108.88 pounds.

In 1983, 133 lambs of 195 entries were sold for $35,213.05, with an average price per lamb of $264.76. Floor price was $61 per cwt. Average price was $2.53 per pound, with an average weight per lamb of 104.55 pounds.

Teams seek 29 marines on crashed helicopter

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Military teams searched through the widespread wreckage of a U.S. Marine Corps helicopter Saturday, hunting for the bodies of 18 American and 11 South Korean marines believed killed in a fiery crash in the rainswept coastal mountains.

A U.S. military report said all 29 marines, who were taking part in a combined training exercise, were believed to have perished when the aircraft plowed into a mountainside in pre-dawn darkness Friday. The site is about 25 miles north of the southeast port of Pohang.

The military said the copter, one of six in the maneuvers, had been headed back to base at Pohang after deteriorating weather conditions forced cancellation of the night exercises.

A fire, spotted on the mountainside, was the first indication of a crash.

The report said "some bodies" were recovered Saturday. The rugged terrain about 200 miles southeast of Seoul made the grim hunt a slow, difficult process.

"It was a violent crash that spread the helicopter all over," one source said. "It covered a great area of steep, rugged mountain."

All the Americans aboard the helicopter were members of the 3rd Marine Amphibious Force based on Okinawa and in South Korea for the joint maneuvers, called Team Spirit '84.

The helicopter was a CH-53D type, a "Sea Stallion" that can carry as many as 38 marines and a crew of three. It was taking part in a night exercise involving the movement and landing of combat troops.

Col. Rallin J. Aars, public affairs officer and spokesman for U.S. Forces in South Korea, gave this account:

"The helicopter which crashed was one of six helicopters which took off from Pohang Airfield."

"The weather when the helicopters took off was above minimum standards. However, as the flight continued the weather deteriorated. The mission was terminated and all aircraft were returning to Pohang when the helicopter crashed."

Aars said a Marine observation aircraft sighted a fire on a rugged mountainside and search and rescue operations got under way immediately.

British fear for Queen's safety in Amman

LONDON (AP) — A bombing in Jordan on the eve of Queen Elizabeth II's departure for Amman has increased fears for her safety so much that the British government is considering asking her not to go.

After a bomb went off at an Amman hotel on Saturday, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met with members of her Cabinet to discuss the trip, according to the foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe.

Officials at Buckingham Palace said they were awaiting government advice.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, were to set out Sunday on what may be the most dangerous trip of her 32-year-reign.

The royal couple was to stay overnight at a British air base in Cyprus and fly to Amman on Monday morning. They were to spend four days in Jordan, visiting the Red Sea port of Aqaba and the ancient city of Petra in addition to the capital.

On Saturday morning, a small bomb exploded outside the capital's Intercontinental Hotel, which is to serve as press headquarters for the Amman leg of the visit. The hotel is across the street from the U.S. Embassy.

Jordan's government said two people suffered minor injuries and witnesses said a third woman was slightly hurt as she drove her car into the hotel parking lot.

A short time after the explosion, a bomb made up of at least 20 sticks of dynamite was discovered hidden in another part of the parking lot. It was defused.

The explosion occurred a day after Western embassies and airline offices received letters saying that Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, was planning to disrupt the queen's visit.

Even before Saturday's events, British politicians and the press had expressed concern for the monarch's safety in Jordan.

Special vehicle plates are now available for POWs, firemen

The contributions of volunteer firefighters and former prisoners of war may be overlooked by many people, but not by county tax assessors and collectors.

According to Gray County Tax Assessor and Collector Margie Gray, former prisoners of war are eligible for free auto license plates through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

"The POWs are eligible for one free set of plates annually for their cars or light commercial vehicles," she said. "It's only good for one vehicle. So if the person has four vehicles, he'll pay for the other plates."

She explained that those eligible for the plates may come by her office on the first floor of the Gray County Courthouse to pick up applications.

"They need a copy of an official government document or certification from the Veteran's Administration which identifies them as former POWs," she added.

The applicant then fills out the form and mails it to the State Dept. of Highways and Public Transportation in Austin.

The plates must be renewed annually through the department without charge.

"It's for any prisoner of any war, there's no age limit," she said.

The highway department also honors volunteer tire fighters by offering plates for a $4 fee.

To obtain the volunteer firefighter plate, the applicant must get an application at Gray's office and have it signed by a member of the Texas Volunteer Firefighters and Fire Marshall's Certification Board or have a separate certificate attached. The application is to be sent to the highway department.

Rotary contributes $4,100

Attack of killer weed threatens South Texas vegetables

KARNES CITY, Texas (AP) — Agricultural experts say there's a time bomb sprouting among the wildflowers and weeds lining the highways near here that could threaten the state's agriculture industry.

The menace isn't an insect or a plant disease, but a small white flower called a branched broomrape.

The broomrape, or Orobancha ramosa, is a parasitic weed that feeds off anything from other wild plants to tomatoes and clover to carrots and potatoes, says Dr. James Chandler, a weed biologist and ecologist with the soil and crop sciences department at Texas A&M University.

Broomrapes began blooming in late February in Karnes County, located about 50 miles southeast of San Antonio, said Richard Gaspari of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's animal and plant health inspection service. He said it's the fourth year scientists know the plant has blossomed in Karnes County.

Officials working on a federally funded eradication program are so concerned that the plant could spread to food-producing areas of the state — especially the already faltering Rio Grande Valley — that they are reluctant to discuss it.

They fear amateur plant enthusiasts might try to collect broomrapes and other areas would be infested.

A broomrape is a yellow plant with white flowers. Dr. Rupert Palmer of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service said it feeds on broad-leaved plants.

The broomrape sprouts next to the host plant and by means of an underground growth that attaches itself to its victim's root system, literally draining the plant of its nutrients, said Dr. Lytton Musselman, a biologist at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va., and an expert on the orobanche group.

Until 1981, the only broomrapes in the United States were on a handful of large tomato farms in southern California, Gaspari said.

But in that year, a University of Texas botanist and a graduate student on a field trip in Karnes County discovered a batch of the plants near the banks of the San Antonio River, Palmer said.

The botanist alerted plant pathologists, who in turn alerted the federal plant inspection service, Musselman said. What federal survey teams discovered later was a large-scale infestation along 200 miles of state highway right-of-way near Karnes City, Pana Maria and Runge.

Experts are stumped as to why the seed is moving only along highway rights-of-way and how it got to the county.

Chandler suspects the seed was carried by highway department contract mowers hired to cut the grass and weeds along the highways.

"In some places, you can see the plants growing in the shape of a mower, where the vehicle was obviously parked overnight," he said.

No one is sure how the broomrape, which is native to central and southern Europe, got to America. The plant cannot be legally imported because federal law designates it a noxious weed.

Musselman theorizes the plant, which also feeds on hemp plants, was inadvertently brought in by the smugglers with a marijuana shipment.

The plant usually blooms in February, Gaspari said.

Chandler and Musselman say the broomrape's life cycle begins when winter temperatures begin to rise.

A broomrape seed can lie dormant as long as 20 years but can only become active when it is within a millimeter of a host plant's root system.

The seed is first stimulated by warmer temperatures and then by some form of naturally occurring compound released by the host plant, Musselman says. Scientists aren't sure what this release, called an exudate, is or why it occurs.

With the right temperature, the necessary stimulation from a host plant and the right positioning, the seed sends out a tubular arm called a haustorium that latches onto the roots of the host plant.

The haustorium immediately begins draining nutrients from the plant and the broomrape seed swells into a tuber, similar to a potato.

After 30 to 90 days of feeding off the host, the broomrape has gained enough stored nutrition to sprout above the ground. Flowers blossom within three days.

Each self-pollinating blossom contains thousands of seeds, which are spilled at the end of a plant's life cycle or in 14 days.

Musselman says a plant can produce hundreds of blossoms if it latches onto a healthy host.

"It is a fine-tuned plant, geared for survival," Chandler said.

State says insurance firm misleading elderly

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Illinois has ordered a major Texas-based insurance company to stop canceling a health plan for elderly people and offering a replacement version with reduced benefits.

The state's Department of Insurance said Thursday that Reserve Life Insurance Co. of Dallas, illegally canceled hundreds of health policies in the state and misled elderly policyholders in advertising the substitute version.

Reserve Life could be fined $50,000, officials said.

The company began canceling contracts for "Good Life 65" Medicare supplement coverage in February, after selling the policies to as many as 4,000 Illinois residents over the past three years, said John Washburn, director of the Insurance Department.

The state says the company has a right to cancel the policies, but is doing so in a way that's "unjust, inequitable, unfair and based upon ambiguous, misleading, inconsistent, deceptive and unlawful policy provisions."

A lawyer for Reserve Life, Alan Prager, said from his office in Dallas that the company has done nothing wrong, and has "fully complied" with Illinois law.

"We're perfectly willing to cite chapter and verse back to them," Prager said.

He said the company would present its side of the story at a hearing on the cease-and-desist order scheduled for today in Springfield.

Washburn said policyholders were given 31 days either to accept the cancellation or buy the replacement version. The new policy has a clause requiring people to wait at least six months before filing any claims for pre-existing illnesses.

Reserve Life has canceled policies in other states, some of whose officials are considering similar action, Carlson said.

Former investigator accused in model's shooting

HOUSTON (AP) — A former private investigator has been accused of trying to arrange the murder of a California model and former mistress of a health spa tycoon, prosecutors say.

Dudley Bell, 47, was charged with solicitation of capital murder last week in a sealed indictment, said Assistant District Attorney Terry Wilson Bell was arrested Thursday morning shortly after leaving his attorney's office and was being held in lieu of $500,000 bond.

Bell was accused of trying to hire a 22-year-old Houston man to kill Barbara Piotrowski shortly after she broke up with Richard Minns, a flamboyant millionaire and founder of a health spa chain.

If convicted, Bell could be sentenced to life in prison and fined $10,000.

Asked if he had any comment, Bell replied, "Not guilty."

Adrian Franks, the man allegedly asked to kill Ms. Piotrowski, never carried out the plan and is not a suspect, said Homicide Detective Kenny Williamson.

Ms. Piotrowski, 30, has been living in another state under an assumed name, said her attorney, Dick DeGuerin. "I am still in fear for my life," she said in a telephone interview arranged by DeGuerin.

Ms. Piotrowski was shot four times in the back as she left a southwest Houston doughnut shop in 1980.

Hardly anyone noticed when young blonde Texan made history

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
STANTON, Texas (AP) — At 14, honey blonde Kody Newman is a typical small town eighth-grader, an honor student and cheerleader who also rodeos, runs track and plays basketball.

That's in her spare time. The youngest member of a prosperous West Texas ranching family, Kody also raises show steers for fun and profit and in 1984 there's been an abundance of both.

In what appears to be an historic first, Kody's animals won the Triple-Crown-of-Texas steer show this winter and also picked up a world class championship trophy in Colorado.

Along the way, she earned a record $236,000.

"I'm saving that money," she smiled one recent evening after school. "When I get old enough, maybe I'll buy me a car."

A Rolls Royce perhaps? Regardless, she's more concerned now with a deaf cat named Taffy, a bulldog named Daisy, a cattle dog named Cowboy, a border collie named Tootie and a bird dog named Speck.

There's also an Australian hound named Bo, 15 unnamed goats and a tomcat called Pearl: "Pearl was supposed to be a girl," Kody explained.

When not showing steers or riding herd on that menagerie, she ropes and rides barrels in the American Junior Rodeo Association.

She was a runner-up for the symbolic silver belt buckle as a 12-year-old and, in 1983, the national champion in optional roping for girls 13 through 15.

"She's remarkable," whispered her mother, Marilyn, in the only breach of parental restraint the entire evening. "You'd never know she won a thing."

Aside from all else, the showing of grand champion steers at Fort Worth, San Antonio and Houston in the same year compares favorably to horse racing's Triple Crown and the Grand Slams of golf and tennis popularized by the likes of Jack Nicklaus and John McEnroe.

By necessity, Kody won her triple with three different steers. Grand champions are sold at auction and ordinarily their last hurrah is as beefsteak in carcass competition.

And that's a bummer, contends Kody, who says it's heartbreaking to surrender her prize animals for slaughter.

"It's really hard," she said, "like taking your pet dog and just giving it away."

Yeah, but a quarter-million dollars is fairly nice consolation," quipped a reporter, a little too cleverly.

"I guess so..." she said coolly, her brownish-green eyes flashing him a look that would shatter glass and probably steel and seemed to suggest he was as callous as he was insensitive and by all means an old fool.

Whatever, Kody bought her three prize winners as calves at her father's annual sale a year ago in March, and spent months grooming and training them for the 1984 stock show competition.

"We thought the calves were good," she said, "but you never can tell if you're going to win or not."

In mid-January, her favorite steer, E.F., a 1,250-pound Chianina, won a so-called jackpot futurity and $5,000 at Denver in what is billed as the National Western Stock Show.

Later that month, E.T. was judged the grand champion of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show in Fort Worth and sold at auction for $45,000.

In February, a 1,235-pound Maine-Anjou named Roller won the grand championship of the San Antonio Livestock Exposition and brought Kody $36,000.

Now on an incredible roll, Kody headed south to the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, the richest and most prestigious of all.

"Everybody's goal is to win at Houston," she said. "I thought I had a shot, but I didn't know."

Her parents learned it had been more than 20 years since anyone had even had a chance at a Triple Crown, and that time the bubble burst in a loss at Houston.

Houston was nerve-wracking," said Marilyn, whose family had shown steers for half a century.

Kody's entry was a 1,245-pound Limousin named Ringer and, as Tommy Newman, her father, recalled later, "We just happened to be at the right place at the right time with the right man."

The right man was the judge who gave Ringer the traditional slap on the rump signifying a grand champion. Suddenly Kody had made steer show history.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "Nobody had ever done that before."

Ringer brought a world record $150,000 at auction and Kody, for all practical purposes, was a steer show has-been at 14. Grand champion winners can not compete again in the the tv biggies, Fort Worth and Houston.

"How does it feel to be washed up at 14," the reporter wondered.

"It's a good way to retire," Kody laughed.

GROWING ROSES

While the rose is an amazingly versatile plant that thrives on a wide variety of conditions, gardeners can take certain steps to keep plants healthy and blooming.

For a bountiful rose garden this spring, the following suggestions are offered:

Rose plants are sturdier and produce more flowers in full sun — at least five to six hours of direct sun is best. Early morning sun is especially good since it quickly dries moisture on plants, thus reducing diseases.

Good drainage and air circulation are essential for preventing diseases and rotting plants.

Roses prefer heavy clay soils, although they can thrive in a wide variety of soil types. They also prefer slightly acid soils. Soil can be improved by incorporating compost or other organic material into the top foot. Agricultural gypsum can improve the texture of heavy clay. If possible, prepare flower beds several months before planting to allow organic materials and nutrients to be more available for plants.

When preparing soil for planting, mix in a half cup of bone meal or superphosphate. However, do not apply fertilizer until the first set of flowers begins to fade on everblooming types, or until eight to ten weeks after planting for once-blooming roses. Give each plant a heaping tablespoonful of a complete fertilizer such as 6-10-4 or 8-8-8 every four to six weeks until Sept. 1. Later applications of fertilizer could promote soft fall growth and subject the plant to possible freeze damage.

Some old roses are drought resistant and can exist on rainfall in much of Texas, but most modern roses need watering to develop more attractive plants and blooms. Avoid watering foliage to prevent diseases. Deep watering at weekly intervals is far superior to frequent light sprinkling.

Mulches can help conserve water while moderating soil temperatures during hot weather. Mixing mulches with well-rotted cow manure during the winter can add both organic materials and nutrients to the soil.

Disease and pest resistance can vary with varieties, but roses planted in sunny areas with good air circulation have the least problems. Insecticides can control most pests, and fungicides are effective against blackspot and powdery mildew, the two main diseases attacking roses.

Traditional heavy pruning may be appropriate for Hybrid Teas roses, but most old roses require less severe methods. Remove weak or dead canes anytime during the year, and do general thinning in late March. Shaping plants and cutting back strong canes one-fourth to one-third their length will produce more attractive plants. Prune climbers and one-time bloomers only after they flower in the spring.

Improper cutting of blooms can injure roses. It is best to cut few, if any, flowers during the first blooming season. Use sharp tools and leave at least two leaves between the cut and the main stem. Late afternoon is the best time to cut roses.

After blooms have been cut, immediately plunge the stems into warm water (about 100 degrees F.) then recut them an inch or so from the base. Flower preservatives can double the useful life of roses and many other cut flowers (7-Up mixed equally with water is an effective flower preservative). A pure water source is equally important for preserving blooms. Use rain water or distilled water, since sodium and other materials in tap water can shorten the life of cut flowers.

ADD ORGANIC MATTER TO GARDEN

Adding plenty of organic matter to your soil is one of the keys to a successful garden.

Organic matter improves the drainage and aeration of clay soils and helps sandy soils hold water and nutrients.

Spread a two to four inch layer of peat moss, hay, compost, leaves or even shredded newspapers over the garden surface and work it into a depth of six to eight inches. Before working in the compost, add the recommended rate of fertilizer so that it will become part of the soil mix.

Many gardeners prefer using a shovel or spading fork when working up the ground, but others like using rototillers. Follow these tips to make the tilling job easier.

—Till when soil is fairly dry and friable. Tilling wet soil leaves behind large clods and causes mud to cling to tiller blades, thus upsetting the tiller's balance.

—Leave an untilled row between passes since wide turns are easier to make than "about faces." This also keeps the machine from pulling itself and you toward the next row.

—Reduce engine speed when breaking new ground or when tilling heavy clay soils so the tiller will dig better and bounce less.

—Set the brake stake half the desired depth when tilling ground the first time around. Then set it to full depth and go over the ground a second time.

Parents teaching children at home growing in numbers

By SUSANA HAYWARD
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — When twins Michael and David Schwalm were 7 years old, they asked their mother if they could stay home from school — forever.

It was a question Mary Schwalm had never given any thought. But after lengthy discussions with her husband, she agreed.

"They (the twins) were complaining that it was too noisy at school to do the things they wanted to do. They'd already done everything in the classroom and they wanted to stay home and work," Mrs. Schwalm said. "And so we decided to let them do it. It wasn't really my idea to start with."

Her twins, now 21, never went back to school, and Mrs. Schwalm has been their main educator. A former teacher, she said educating her children was a learning experience for her as well.

"Our values, our outlook and philosophy are pretty different from what you meet in public schools," she said. "It's not hard to be superior to the Dallas public schools."

At the time Michael and David asked to skip school, their main interest was history. They wanted to do research on the American Revolution, the Civil War and U.S. presidents, she said.

They claimed formal schooling in a crowded classroom wasn't quenching their thirst for knowledge or answering all their questions. And besides, their school's library was no match for the stacks of books lining the shelves in the family living room — or for Mrs. Schwalm's patient and genuine love of teaching.

"They'd rather be at home because they felt like they were wasting their time by having to spend five or six hours a day over there when they'd already done everything (at home)," she said.

Mrs. Schwalm, 44, said her twins were "unusual." By the time they were 3, they had taught themselves to read, she said.

Her younger children, Theodore, 15, and Hans, 13, also opted at an early age to follow in their brother's footsteps.

This was also not Mrs. Schwalm's idea.

From 1970 until 1975, Mrs. Schwalm, a math major at Southern Methodist University, and her husband Carl, an engineer for the LTV Corp., were administrators and teachers at the Montessori's Children House school in Dallas.

"I used to take Hans and Theodore over there (to the school) with me," she said. "I thought maybe it would be good for them, that they would like going to school and I could just be a normal mother and take them to school and leave them there."

But it didn't work out that way, and in that respect, she never became a "normal mother."

With the exception of history, taught by an undergraduate student at the University of Dallas, Mrs. Schwalm has taught her children everything they know.

Her sons have never entered a classroom, except to study such extra-curricular subjects as fencing, judo, horse-back riding and swimming.

"The twins didn't have organized lessons until they were 12. We decided to have two hours every morning learning geometry, math, Latin, history and English grammar," she said.

She believes "teaching is easy," and that parents should have the right to educate their children at home.

"I don't think it's easy to be an interesting, exciting, stimulating teacher, but I think it's easy to teach people to learn skills and it's not much harder to help people understand concepts," she said.

Skills and concepts are Mrs. Schwalm's key words in her approach to educating.

"Subjects that require skills should be organized so that skills are made automatic before new ones are introduced," Mrs. Schwalm wrote, explaining her teaching methods in a letter to H. Ross Perot, the chairman of the Texas Committee on Education.

"The other academic problem in schools today is that of teaching concepts ... For example having ridden in a car helps to understand the concept of inertia," she continued. "The farther a concept is from everyday experience, the more necessary it becomes for the teacher to provide or suggest appropriate background experience for understanding it."

Dr. William Richards, a psychiatrist and psychologist who is an education expert in Australia and lectures at U.S. universities, has no qualms with parents teaching their children at home, but believes that after a certain age, children should be exposed to other people.

"The best education is out in the world," Richards said. "If you don't break the maternal bond, it produces symbiotic psychosis. The only thing I'd argue with is the need to break the maternal bondage."

But Mrs. Schwalm doesn't believe her children have been socially deprived and she thinks her children have received a better education at home than they would have at a public school.

She is not alone. Ruth Canon, a certified teacher who has become a spokeswoman of sorts for home schools, estimates that about 1,000 other parents in Texas running classrooms at home.

School officials cannot confirm this. Figures are hard to come by because it is illegal for a child between the ages of 7 and 17 not to attend school unless there are medical reasons or they are enrolled in a parochial or private school.

Children educated at home are considered truant, but it is up to local school districts to take the parents to court.

Patrick Whelan, the Assistant General Counsel with the State Board of Education, said it is difficult to enforce the compulsory attendance law because it vaguely defines what constitutes a public school.

"There are peculiarities in the law," he said. "Private and parochial schools are not defined."

Advocates of home-schooling believe children not only get a better education at home, but they also develop closer ties with their family.

"I don't know of a child who is not doing phenomenally well in a home school," said Mrs. Canon, who has a teaching degree from Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene but became disillusioned with traditional education and strayed, becoming a staunch advocate of home schooling.

She says home was the "original school" and that now, "children get lost in the shuffle."

Mrs. Canon also teaches her four children at home and has recruited neighborhood children and parents to participate. Her home during the day is a modern-day rendition of the "little red school house," a community school where students of all ages learn together.

The stipulations include that parents would have to pass the ninth grade test of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills, register their children with their school district and have them take, and pass, the same standardized tests as other students in the district.

Layworker recalls years in El Salvador

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — She is substantial, giving, the quiet daughter of a labor organizer from Cleveland who has dedicated her life to the people of El Salvador.

And this week, the anniversary of the death of El Salvador's Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, layworker Rosemary Smith remembers the faces, work and events that filled her 17 years in the country she left in 1960, "a year of death."

"It seemed for a while that all we did was go to funerals of people who had been killed — priests, catechists, villagers and, of course, the archbishop," Miss Smith said.

Oscar Arnulfo Romero was sent to San Salvador by the Vatican in early 1977. Socially committed priests who daily ministered to people terrorized by right-wing death squads saw the new archbishop as a lightweight, a follower, a person not likely to challenge established order, Miss Smith said.

But in March 1977, she said a gentle, apolitical priest in a small village 20 miles north of San Salvador was assassinated for his work with the poor and the mild-mannered new archbishop began speaking out against the violence.

His words stirred hundreds of thousands of people throughout Central America who walked miles to hear him and believed they heard a savior, Miss Smith said.

Late in the day of March 24, 1980, while celebrating mass, Romero, 62, was assassinated. He died in the ambulance. No one was formally charged with his slaying but the U.S. ambassador accused the extreme right.

Miss Smith attended Romero's funeral with her "team," a group of 12 priests, nuns

Low soil temperatures slow planting operations

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)—Texas farmers are staking their claim on another crop season, with planting operations gaining momentum to usher in the spring season, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

About 95 percent of the corn and grain sorghum acreage has been planted in South Texas, where cotton planting ranges from 50 to 75 percent complete, Carpenter said. Corn also is about 95 percent planted in the Coastal Bend while about 75 percent of grain sorghum and about 65 percent of cotton are planted.

Most irrigated corn and grain sorghum has been planted in Southwest Texas, but dryland farmers there are waiting for rain to plant.

Some early rice planting has started along the Upper Coast, and corn and grain sorghum planting is under way in that region where fields are not too wet, Carpenter said. Wet fields also have hindered corn and grain sorghum planting in parts of North-Central and Northeast Texas.

Low soil temperatures also are slowing some planting operations. For good seed germination, soil temperatures at the 4-inch depth should average (for a week) 50 degrees F. for corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton, Carpenter said.

The past week's soil temperature averages as compiled by the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University were as follows: Austin, 62 degrees F.; Beaumont, 68; Beeville, 72; College Station, 74; Dilley, 80; Eagle Lake, 69; Haskell, 61; Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 58; Longview, 62; Lubbock, 58; Lufkin, 63; Pecos, 61; San Angelo, 66; Stephenville, 64; Uvalde, 71; Waco, 64; and Weslaco, 73.

Land preparation remains active in western areas and the plains, with potatoes and onions being planted in the Panhandle and South Plains and sugar beet planting starting.

Livestock conditions are improving slowly over the state, Carpenter noted, with some green grazing becoming available. However, supplemental feeding remains active in most parts, particularly in western areas where dry conditions are hampering the recovery of ranges and pastures from a severe winter.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Irrigated wheat is making good progress but the dryland crop needs rain. Most cattle have been moved off wheat to allow a grain crop. Farmers are continuing to get land in shape for spring planting. Some onions and potatoes are being planted in Deaf Smith County and sugar beet planting is about to start. Cattle feeding continues and marketings are heavy.

SOUTH PLAINS: Land preparation is in full swing as farmers get ready for another crop season. Planting of onions and potatoes continues, and sugar beet planting is about to start. Irrigated wheat is doing well but the dryland crop is suffering from lack of moisture. Some feeding of range cattle continues.

ROLLING PLAINS: Scattered rains have given a boost to wheat in some locations, but most of the crop could use additional moisture. Most cattle have been moved off wheat to allow a grain crop. Farmers are getting cotton land ready to plant. Livestock and range conditions are improving and lambing is under way. Stock ponds are still low in some counties.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat is making good growth with recent rains. Most corn has been planted, with early fields up. Farmers are starting to plant grain sorghum. Most livestock are in good shape, with supplemental feeding decreasing as grazing conditions improve.

NORTHEAST: Recent rains have boosted wheat growth but have delayed planting of corn, grain sorghum and vegetables. Cattle conditions are improving, with clovers and ryegrass providing good grazing. Stock ponds are full. Early peach trees are blooming.

FAR WEST: Farmers are continuing with land preparation for spring planting. Home gardening activities are increasing with the spring season. Range conditions remain poor due to lack of moisture and the severe winter, so livestock feeding continues. Some lambs are moving to market.

WEST CENTRAL: Dry conditions are hampering the wheat crop as well as the recovery of ranges. Stock water is low in most counties.

Livestock are in fair to good shape, with supplemental feeding continuing. However, marketings likely will increase if rain doesn't come soon. Spring lambing is active. Farmers are continuing to prepare land for spring planting of row crops and hay.

CENTRAL: Wheat is making excellent growth due to improved moisture conditions. However, grazing conditions are still limited so cattle are in poor shape. Corn planting is in full swing and some grain sorghum planting has started.

EAST: Oats, clovers and ryegrass are making good growth and providing grazing for livestock. Cattle conditions are improving as more grazing becomes available, but some hay feeding continues. Wet soil is hampering corn and vegetable planting in some locations.

UPPER COAST: Some

early rice planting is under way, and corn and grain sorghum planting is in full swing where fields are not too wet. Wheat pastures continue to make good growth and are providing good grazing for livestock. Cattle conditions are improving, with supplemental feeding winding down.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Most of the corn crop has been planted, with some early planted fields up to a stand. Farmers are busy planting grain sorghum and getting ready to plant cotton. Grazing conditions are improving for livestock. Wheat is making good growth in most counties where moisture is available.

SOUTHWEST: Heavy rains and some hail dotted the area last week, but dry conditions still prevail. Planting of irrigated corn and grain sorghum is about complete, but dryland farmers need moisture to plant. Carrot and spinach harvesting continues, and vegetable processing plants have resumed limited operations. Livestock feeding continues due to lack of forage.

COASTAL BEND: About 95 percent of the corn crop has been planted and most fields are up to a good stand. Grain sorghum is about 75 percent planted while cotton planting is about 65 percent complete. Pastures and ranges are recovering slowly from the severe winter and livestock are in fair shape.

SOUTH: About 5 percent of the corn and grain sorghum acreage remains to be planted while cotton planting ranges from 50 to 75 percent complete. Most grain sorghum stands look good but some corn stands appear weak. Sugarcane harvesting is complete while carrots and cabbage remain in fair volume. Spring vegetables are making good progress. Pruning of freeze-damaged citrus trees continues while dead trees are being removed.

DATES
March 27 — 7 p.m., Horse Short Course, Courthouse Annex.

March 28 — 7 p.m., Horse Short Course, Bar D-K Appolosa Ranch, Kingsmill.

BIDDERS BREAKFAST
We would like to express our appreciation to everyone who helped with the Bidders Breakfast, very early in the morning, on March 14. We served approximately 325 people. A very special thanks to local businesses, merchants and friends who donated food to make the event a success.

HORSE SHORT COURSE
Information on feeding, breeding and health care of horses will be featured in a short course Tuesday and Wednesday, March 27 and 28, at 7 each evening.

The Tuesday evening program will be in the Courthouse Annex meeting room with Dr. Doug Household, extension horse specialist, discussing general horse nutrition and feeding.

The Wednesday evening program will be held at the Bar D-K Appolosa Ranch, one mile west, one-half mile north and one-half mile west of Kingsmill Dr. Householder will discuss improving mare reproduction and local veterinarians will discuss horse health care. There will also be a session on condition scoring of mares.

All horse owners, both youth and adults, are encouraged to attend this course.

NATIONAL 4-H CITIZENSHIP SHORT COURSE AND HERITAGE TOUR Texas 4-Hers and adult leaders will have an opportunity to participate in the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course and Heritage Tour again this summer.

A total of 80 youth and adult leaders can participate in the program.

The tour group will depart from Dallas on June 19. Delegates will tour historical points of interest enroute to Washington D.C. The heritage tour takes four days and will be highlighted with the Citizenship Short Course at the National 4-H Center. There will be four more days of return travel studying American heritage, with the tour ending in Dallas July 3. Points of interest to be visited include the Kennedy Center, Arlington National Cemetery, the Capitol and Library of Congress, memorials to great Americans, Mount Vernon, Williamsburg, Monticello and the Museum of Atomic Energy.

The National 4-H Citizenship Short Course and Heritage Tour is designed to supplement the citizenship education and leadership development training young people receive through the home, school, church and other organizations.

Citizenship short courses for 4-H members of senior high school age are conducted at the National 4-H Center to supplement the ongoing citizenship training currently provided by local clubs.

Listening, sharing, receiving, caring and touring are all a part of the two-week personal learning experiences the 4-Hers and leaders will have. Citizenship topics relating to the individual's concept and responsibilities of citizenship are covered in assemblies and mini-courses at the National 4-H Center. Foundation personnel, summer staff and guest speakers provide a broad spectrum of resources in the program. The nation's Capitol, the many branches of government and memorials to great Americans enhance the daily citizenship learning experiences.

DRYLAND FARMING CONFERENCE
A Dryland Crop Symposium will be held at the Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd., West in Amarillo Wednesday.

The program starts at 9:30 a.m. with a history of dryland research by Dr. B.A. Stewart, director of the USDA Research Laboratory at Bushland. The keynote speaker is Arnold King from the Soil and Conservation Service Technical Center in Fort Worth, who will discuss "Controlling Erosion on Dryland."

Dr. Paul Unger, USDA soil scientist, will discuss research showing the value of stored water for crop yields and Reggie Jones, another USDA researcher, will describe his recent research on keeping water on the land with economical systems of furrow dikes and mini-benches. The morning program will be rounded out with a discussion of herbicides and machinery used for minimum tillage by Ron Allen, USDA agricultural engineer.

In the afternoon, fertilization will be discussed by Dr. Harold Eck, USDA soil scientist. Dr. Kenneth Porter, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station wheat breeder, will describe wheat varieties for dryland. Producing sorghum on dryland will be discussed by Dr. J.R. Quinby, the Texas A&M scientist who developed hybrid sorghum.

Research with alternative crops will be discussed by Dr. Frank Petr, area agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Petr has been cooperating with other scientists to examine the feasibility of growing barley, peanuts and sunflowers, potential new crops for the area. Insect and perennial weed control will be discussed by Drs. Carl Patrick and Allen Wiese. The program will be rounded out by Dr. John McNeill, Texas Agricultural Extension Service livestock specialist, who will discuss cattle management on dryland farms and Dr. Wyatt Harman, research agricultural economist, will discuss the economics of dryland farming.

Meyer's Finale

Wake Forest slips by DePaul, 73-71

FINAL GAME—A worried Ray Meyer strides past the DePaul bench during Midwest Regional semifinal action Friday night against Wake Forest. DePaul was

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

When it was over, when 42 years of recruiting, game plans and coaching were behind him, Ray Meyer wasn't thinking of himself. He was thinking about his players, his replacement and his sport.

"Basketball is a part of me and will always be a part of me," Meyer said after his fourth-ranked DePaul Blue Demons were tied at the buzzer to end regulation time, then lost 73-71 to No. 19 Wake Forest on Danny Young's driving basket at the end of overtime in the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinals. "I'm sorry we didn't win. I'm sorry for myself. I'm sorry for the players."

Meyer, 70, now hands over the Blue Demons' coaching duties to son Joey. "I hope they don't expect too much of him," said the man they call simply "Coach," who compiled a 724-354 career record. "This ballclub has to improve and get better. I'll be in the stands pulling for them, just as I've been pulling for them on the bench."

Meyer will be in the stands without an NCAA title partly because his latest team could not protect a lead. Ahead by six points in the final two minutes, despite having four starters shackled with four fouls through the last seven minutes of regulation, the Blue Demons got sloppy.

They had the ball with less than 20 seconds to go, but freshman Dallas Comegys hurled a cross-court pass in the direction of Tyrone Corbin, who saved the ball from going out of bounds but knocked it to Wake Forest's Kenny Green. As the final seconds ticked off, Green passed to Delaney Rudd, whose 20-footer at the buzzer tied it 67-67.

With the game tied 71-71 and 19 seconds to go in overtime, Rudd fouled DePaul's Kenny Patterson, who missed the front end of the one-and-one. Wake Forest got the rebound, delayed and then Young drove in for the decisive basket.

"We panicked at the end. That's the story of the game," Meyer said. "We win with class and we lose with class. We'll walk out of here with our heads high. Maybe we didn't play our best, but we tried."

Wake Forest was at its best in the frantic final moments of regulation and overtime before a St. Louis Arena record crowd of 20,143.

"They've done this so many times," Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy said of his 23-8 Demon Deacons, who have won six times in seven overtime contests.

This time they advance to Sunday's Midwest finals against No. 5 Houston, which dumped Memphis State 78-71.

"It's starting to sink in right now," Meyer said. "It wasn't the way I planned to end my career."

In the West Regional at Los Angeles, No. 2 Georgetown beat No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas and will face unheralded Dayton, a 64-58 victor over No. 15 Washington, on Sunday.

Today, it was Virginia, 20-11, against 22-8 Indiana for the East title at Atlanta, and No. 3 Kentucky hosting No. 6 Illinois for the Midwest crown.

The Final Four will be staged next weekend in Seattle.

Houston, 30-5, moved a step closer to making the national finals for the third straight year as Akeem Olatunji scored 25 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked four shots. The champions of the Southwest Conference also held All-American forward Keith Lee to four points in the second half.

Alvin Franklin added 24 points for Houston, while Memphis State was paced by freshman 7-footer William Bedford, who had 21 points before fouling out.

"It seemed like we'd get a lead and it would vanish," Houston Coach Guy Lewis said. "It was that way throughout until the end."

For Georgetown, center Patrick Ewing scored 16 points and grabbed 15 rebounds and Michael Jackson hit all 12 of his free throws. Georgetown, 31-3, broke the game open at the outset of the second half with a 10-2 run.

Notre Dame advances to NIT semifinals

By The Associated Press

"We're going to New York," said Tom Sluby, who led Notre Dame with 18 points in a 72-64 victory over Pittsburgh in the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

"We're going to New York," echoed Charlie Moir, who coached Virginia Tech to a 72-68 triumph over Tennessee in Friday night's other quarterfinal, a game marked by eight ties and 13 lead changes.

Virginia Tech-Michigan and Notre Dame-Southwestern Louisiana will all be in the Big Apple on Monday night for the semifinals of the 47th NIT, the nation's oldest postseason basketball tournament. On Thursday night, Michigan edged Xavier of Ohio 63-62, while Southwestern Louisiana trounced Santa Clara 97-76.

Point guard Joe Howard, a two-sport star who has been Notre Dame's leader in reception yardage in each of the last three football seasons, hit a driving layup and added four key free throws as the Irish broke open a tight game on Pitt's court in the final three minutes.

Tim Kempton scored on a short-range shot before Howard broke free for his layup with 2:41 remaining to give the Irish to a 60-56 lead. After Pitt's Clyde Vaughan made two free throws, Notre Dame's Scott Hicks worked free for a back-door layup, starting an eight-point run that built the lead to 68-58.

Sluby fell two points short of 20, losing a pair of free throws on teammates' lane violations. Howard added 14 points and 6-foot-10 center Tim Kempton had 13. Vaughan, the leading scorer in Pitt history, topped the Panthers with 20 and closed his career with 2,011.

"We're going to New York. We're looking forward to that because they love us there," said Sluby.

Coach Digger Phelps echoed Sluby.

"They said we didn't have a chance to get to the NIT's final four, they said we didn't have a chance to win 20 games, they said we'd lose our first (NIT) game," Phelps said. "Well, we're going to New York."

At Blacksburg, Va., Dell Curry scored 27 points to lead Virginia Tech over Tennessee.

Cavaliers surprise Indiana

ATLANTA (AP) — Kenton Edelin scored five straight points after making a steal with 1:27 remaining to spark unheralded Virginia to a 50-48 victory over Indiana Saturday for the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball championship and a berth in the Final Four.

Virginia, in its first season since the departure of three-time Player of the Year Ralph Sampson, was trailing 44-43 when Edelin swiped the ball from Dan Dakich on the blind side, dribbled three-fourths the length of the floor and hit a layup to put the Cavaliers ahead to stay.

He then hit one of two free throws with 1:03 to play and drilled a pair with 47 seconds left to give Virginia a 48-44 advantage.

The teams swapped baskets by Dakich and a pair of free throws by Rick Carlisle before Indiana freshmen Steve Alford cut the margin to 50-48 with 26 seconds remaining.

Carlisle then missed the first shot on a one-and-one opportunity with 19 seconds to play, but the Hoosiers failed to force overtime.

NCAA Mideast

Kentucky holds off Illinois

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie scored 11 points in the second half as No. 3 Kentucky held off tenacious, sixth-ranked Illinois 54-51 in the Mideast Regional championship game Saturday to earn a berth in the NCAA basketball Final Four.

The Wildcats, 29-4, goes to Seattle on Saturday to meet the winner of Sunday's West Regional final between No. 2 Georgetown and Dayton.

Kentucky led 49-44 when Bowie hit a pair of free throws with 4:28 to play, but Illinois forward Doug Altenberger hit a long jumper from the right sideline and guard Quinn Richardson added another basket from the top of the key to cut the deficit to 50-48 with 2:20 to play.

Kentucky point guard Dicky Beal ran his way out of the Illini's pressing, trapping defense to hit a layup with 43 seconds left.

Richardson hit another basket with 27 seconds left to make it 52-50, but Beal got another pair of free throws with 14 seconds left to put the Wildcats up by four again. Just before the free throws, Bowie left the game with an injury to the left leg, which sidelined him with a stress fracture for two seasons.

Illinois, 26-5, had one last chance. Altenberger hit one of two free throws with seven seconds left, and the Big Ten co-champion Illini got the rebound after he missed the second shot but could not score before the buzzer.

It was the only time in the second half Illinois went to the free throw line. Kentucky hit 10 of 15 free throws in the second half.

Center Melvin Turpin led Kentucky with 13 points, but Beal, who didn't even start until February after recovering from knee surgery, was named the regional's Most Valuable Player. Richardson led Illinois with 16 points, 10 of them in the second half, all on long-range shooting against the Kentucky zone defense.

Kentucky goes to the Final Four for the first time since winning the national championship in 1978. The Wildcats will be looking for their sixth national title. Illinois, a two-point loser to the Wildcats in December, was the third straight regular-season opponent that Kentucky had to beat in the NCAA tournament. The Wildcats also beat Louisville and Brigham Young in earlier rounds.

The Wildcats, who struggled to a 24-22 halftime lead on a Beal jumper with two seconds left, had trouble all day with the Big Ten's best defense. They turned the ball over once in the second half when Beal was trapped near midcourt and again when Beal was unable to get the ball across the 10-second line.

Bowie hit two straight tip-ins for a 32-26 Kentucky lead at 16:04 of the second half, and a free throw by Turpin 23 seconds later gave the Wildcats their biggest lead at 33-26.

From there, Illinois outscored Kentucky 10-3 to draw even at 36-36 when Efram Winters, despite a sprained ankle that had made him questionable to play at all, hit a jumper from the right corner with 10:35 to play. The Illini were helped during the streak by five Kentucky turnovers.

Kenny Walker and Turpin scored to put Kentucky up by four and a free throw by Bowie at 8:32 made it 41-36, but Richardson brought the Illini back to within three with long jumpers at 7:54 and 6:38, sandwiched around a tip-in by Bowie.

The Illini press, which held opponents under 50 points 17 times this season, nullified Kentucky's height advantage by keeping the 7-foot-1 Bowie and the 6-11 Turpin out from under the basket. Bowie even brought the ball up at times to help out the hard-pressed guards.

No reasons given for Hasse's firing at WT

Warren Hasse, who was fired by long distance last Monday as radio sports announcer for WTSU football after 30 years, had little to say about his dismissal.

Hasse first heard about the WT Quarterback Club's decision from the news media while he was vacationing in Mesa, Arizona. Hasse, who returned to Pampa Thursday, said he received a letter from Club President Bob Jossarand, informing the Panhandle Hall of Fame announcer that he would not be re-hired for the 1984 football season.

Hasse said he hasn't talked to anyone from the Quarterback Club. He said he hasn't made any plans to approach Club officials to find out the reasons behind his firing.

Jossarand would not give a reason for Hasse's dismissal.

"I would rather not discuss that. I think it's best for Warren and everyone concerned," he said.

Jossarand said the radio committee of the Quarterback Club has already started a search for Hasse's successor.

John Heetland of Berneta Communications and a member of the executive committee of the Quarterback Club will be in charge of interviewing candidates. Jossarand said. Berneta Communications was hired by the Quarterback Club to organize the 10-station WT football network. KHBQ-FM of Canyon was the main station for the network last year.

"John will put together some suggestions and present them at our next meeting on April 19," Jossarand said. "Names of candidates will also be submitted at that time."

Jossarand said WT has the final say as to who will broadcast the games.

"They've got veto power over anybody we select," he added. "We make the selections and pay the broadcasting team."

Heetland said he would not comment on Hasse's dismissal.

Hasse has also announced Buff basketball games for the past 11 years. The Cager Club has broadcast rights to WT basketball.

Hasse said he hasn't made any decisions about returning as basketball announcer since the season just ended.

"I just don't know what my plans will be right now," Hasse said.

Hasse started broadcasting WT football games in 1953 from KPND in Pampa, a radio station he owned. He sold KPND two years ago.

Pampa places fifth in Borger Bulldog Relays

BORGER—Although Pampa finished fifth in the Borger Bulldog Relays Saturday, six Harvesters turned in their best performances of the year.

Eugene Smith won the shot put with 51-11 throw, his best of the season. Benny Bell's 6-2 leap in the high jump netted him fifth place and his best mark so far. The 400-meter relay team of Gary Jernigan, Lance Ripple, Tony Santacruz and Tim Wood placed fourth with a 44.0 clocking, their best time of the year.

Palo Duro rolled up 151 points to win the 8-team meet. "Palo Duro has a lot of good sprinters," said Pampa Coach Gary Cornelsen. "It was hard to get any points in the sprints because of them." Others placings for Pampa were Hector Gonzales, fourth, 44.7 mile; Robert Hornback, third, 12-0; Lyle Vanbuskirk, fourth, discus, 126-4; Dean Birkes, sixth, discus, 123-10; Tony Santacruz, second, 300 IM hurdles, 40.8, and Early Jackson, fourth, 400, 52.8.

"We had some kids have their best performances, but we still need to keep working and keep improving," Cornelsen said. "This was probably our toughest meet so far. It was good competition with a lot of 5A schools."

Amarillo High placed second with 77 points, followed by Dumas, 71; Plainview, 69; Pampa, 46; Caprock, 45½; 7 Borger 45½ and Hereford, 22.

Pampa's varsity and junior varsity teams will compete in a meet at Perryton on Saturday.

Clemson lady cagers place third in NWIT tournament

AMARILLO, Texas (AP)—Peggy Caple scored seven of her 13 points in overtime, including three free throws in the final 19 seconds, to lead Clemson to a 110-106 victory over Western Kentucky Saturday for third place in the National Women's Invitational Tournament.

Top-seeded Tennessee-Chattanooga was paired against second-seeded Vanderbilt in the championship game Saturday night. In other consolation games Saturday, California rallied for an 81-78 victory over Oklahoma for fifth place and Illinois State defeated Utah 82-61 for seventh place.

Cindy Young's jumper from near the free throw line gave Western Kentucky a 91-91 tie with five seconds remaining in regulation and forced the overtime.

Western Kentucky's Toppers took a 96-93 lead a minute into the 5-minute extra period, but the Tigers' front-line duo of Caple and Sandy Bishop took control.

Bishop scored 26 points and Janet Knight 25 to lead Clemson's scoring attack. Freshman guard Clemette Haskins and Kari Thomas had 22 points apiece and Gina Brown 20 for the Toppers, who ended their season at 21-11.

Western Kentucky opened a 10-2 lead over Clemson in the first 4½ minutes, but the Tigers scored 21 of the game's next 23 points to gain control.

But Bishop and Caple were forced to the bench with foul trouble, and by halftime the Toppers had cut the deficit to 45-44. Haskins scored eight points in a 19-6 WKU scoring surge.

Eastwood leads at New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Bob Eastwood has labored for 13 long years on the PGA Tour and has yet to win his first title.

"My time is coming," he insisted after beating gusty winds for a 4-under-par 68 and a two-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $400,000 USF&G Classic.

"I know I can win," said Eastwood, 38, who scored his career-high finish as a runner-up last year in the Tournament Players Championship.

"I have the game to win. I have the knowledge to win. I have the confidence to win."

"I know I have the capability. And when it's my time, I will win."

Eastwood has a 36-hole total of 134, 10 under par for two trips over the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course.

"I'm feeling great," he said. "I'm playing well. I have a lot of confidence. And I feel I can do it for the next two rounds, too."

His closest challenger was West Germany Bernhard Langer, who had a 69 that, he said, should have been a couple of shots better. Langer completed 36 holes in 136.

Larry Mize birdied his last three holes to salvage a 71 and a tie for third at 137 with Larry Rinker, who had a 66.

South African Nick Price had the best round of the tournament, a 65, and moved up to 138. He was tied with John Mahaffey, 70, Mike Reid, 71, and Gary Hallberg, 72.

Gary Koch, who scored his second victory of the season last week, had a 70 and was in a group at 139.

Tom Watson, winner of the first tournament of the season but plagued by a slump for the past two months, continued to struggle. The five-time British Open champion could do no better than par and was at 142.

Pampa spikers involved in off-season program

With Phil Hall developing a quality off-season volleyball program, the likelihood of Pampa winning its third district title in a row is very good indeed.

"It may be spring, but there's a lot of volleyballs bouncing around in Harvester Fieldhouse," said Hall, who begins his second year as Lady Harvesters' coach next fall. "This is a time for decision making. It's tough for a coach."

During Friday's practice session, Hall split the players into teams for several fast-paced matches.

"I'm mainly looking at how hard they're working out there," Hall said. "I want to see each player improving every day and playing up to her potential."

Hall will have eight letter winners, all juniors, plus 14 sophomores from the junior varsity squad and 20 freshmen all looking for a starting spot.

Attitudes mean a lot to Hall, who believes a player's state of mind is just as important as her ability.

"One of the first things I'm looking at are the volleyball players running track this spring," said Hall. "I'm looking at their attitudes and how hard they're working to see if there's a spot for them on the varsity or junior varsity. Some are a disappointing me."

The second thing I'm looking at are the girls in my off-season program. I'm looking at their attitudes, both positive and negative, about what we're doing."

Hall said a player's classroom work could also determine her position on the team.

"If I've got two girls of equal ability, I'm going to go with the girl who has the best grades," Hall said. "That's the most important thing."

Pampa logged a 9-3 record to win the District 1-4A title last season. Overall, the Lady Harvesters were 20-14.

Hall loses standouts Diana Simmons, Lisa Crayton and Stacey Brown to graduation. Simmons and Crayton have signed letters of intent at West Texas State next season. Brown has had several college offers, but remains undecided, Hall said.

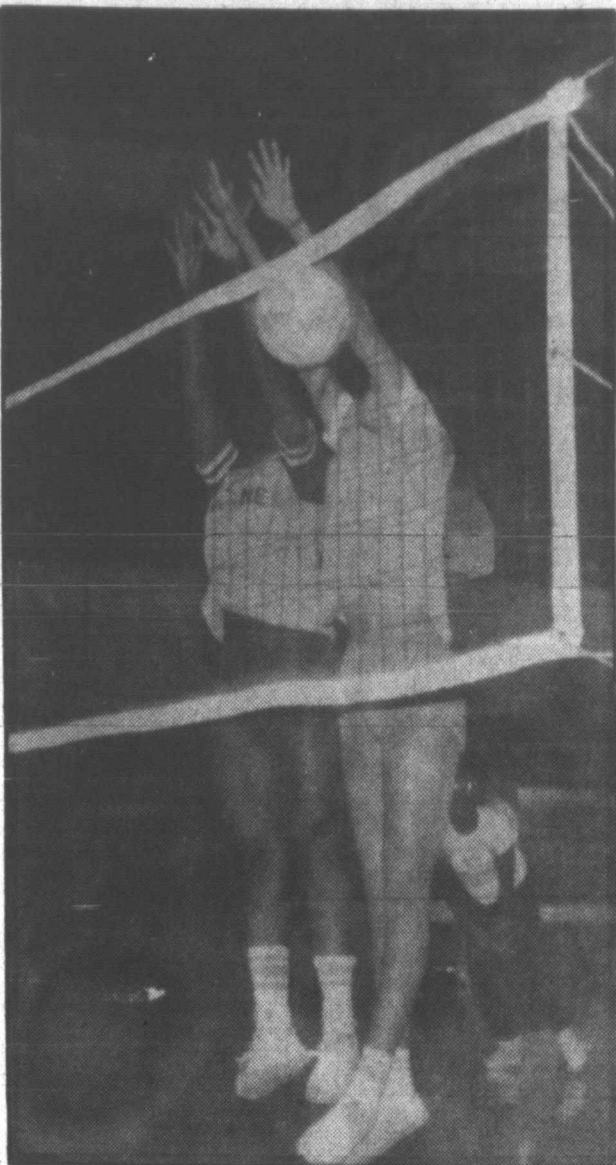

Pampa returns eight proven performers, all seniors-to-be, for the 1984 campaign. They include Leslie Cash, Carrie Carter, Michelle Eakin, Monica Kelly, Laura Horne, Teresa Perkins, Shaun Simmons and Kristi Hughes. All were starters or parttime staters last season.

Hall has been impressed with the spring workouts of sophomores Irene Perez, Shannon Churchman and Amie Green.

"These girls are working hard and showing good leadership and attitudes," Hall said. "I've also got some freshmen who are looking tough."

Among the freshmen Hall is taking a close look at are Kelly Cross, Robin Gallagher, Susan Gross, Summer Hudson, Stephanie Jeffrey, Veronica Kelly, Mary Perez, Jackie Reed and Carla Stout.

"With all the hard work the girls are showing, we should have another winning season of volleyball," Hall said.

Two Pampa High volleyball players double-team the ball during a recent workout at Harvester Fieldhouse. Although the volleyball season doesn't start until the fall, Coach Phil Hall has the players involved in an off-season program to sharpen their skills and help them develop a winning attitude.

Cobb found innocent of sports bribery

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Boston College guard Ernie Cobb, whose basketball career was under the cloud of a gambling scandal for more than three years, says he still has dreams of making it in the National Basketball Association.

Whether Cobb's prospects are anything more than dreams remain to be seen, but for now the hope is still there, thanks to a Brooklyn federal court jury's decision to acquit him of conspiring to commit sports bribery.

Cobb apparently came through when it counted most. He took the witness stand in his own defense, and the jury appeared to accept his explanation that the $1,000 he accepted from a now-convicted member of the plot was not for any illicit purpose.

Five prosecution witnesses, including Cobb's former teammate Rick Kuhn, had testified that Cobb joined the scheme in December 1978 and helped fix three games before the enterprise fizzled in February 1979. They said he was paid a total of $2,000.

Kuhn and three of the other witnesses were convicted in 1981 and drew sentences of four to 10 years. All are seeking reductions in the sentences, and the defense attacked their credibility by saying they were accusing Cobb to benefit themselves.

The jury also acquitted Cobb's co-defendant, 47-year-old Peter Vario

Artists revive crafts from bygone era

SELF-TAUGHT. Wilford Haymes, left, who is 82 - years - old and almost blind, demonstrates the art of chair caning as his wife, Velma, watches during the recent crafts festival held in Silver Dollar City near Branson, Mo. Says the Conway, Mo., farmer. "I learned it myself." Throughout the nation, artists are reviving crafts from a bygone era that are sought by today's consumers living in an age of mass production.

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — The woodsman swings his axe with the precision of a diamond cutter, whack after whack, to shape his handmade spoons from plum and cherry logs.

The grandmother who raised 10 children in a dirt - floor house whittles her fiddles, pausing now and then to lay a tune on a finished violin that isn't yet spoken for.

A bellows maker and copper pounder and corn - shucks weaver and horse carver display their one - of - a - kind creations with parental pride, offering for sale the byproducts of forest, field and forge.

Throughout the nation, but especially in the heartland, artists are reviving crafts from a bygone era that are eagerly sought by consumers living in an age of mass production and sameness.

Twice a year, dropouts of the big city, offspring of small towns, and second - career individualists gather in the hills and hollows of the Ozarks to display their wares at the Ozark Mountain Crafts Festival and the National Crafts Festival.

Silver Dollar City (SDC), a 2,000 - acre tourist attraction featuring an 1880s village setting as its core, sponsors the spring and fall rendezvous and invites at least 50 crafts folk each season to join its resident blacksmiths, potters, candlemakers and furriers for the five - week shows.

Authenticity, originality and quality are the criteria for entry.

"If you aren't the best at whatever you do, you aren't eligible," says Don Richardson, SDC's public relations director.

The amusement park also requires its guest artisans to immerse themselves in its frontier period and dress accordingly.

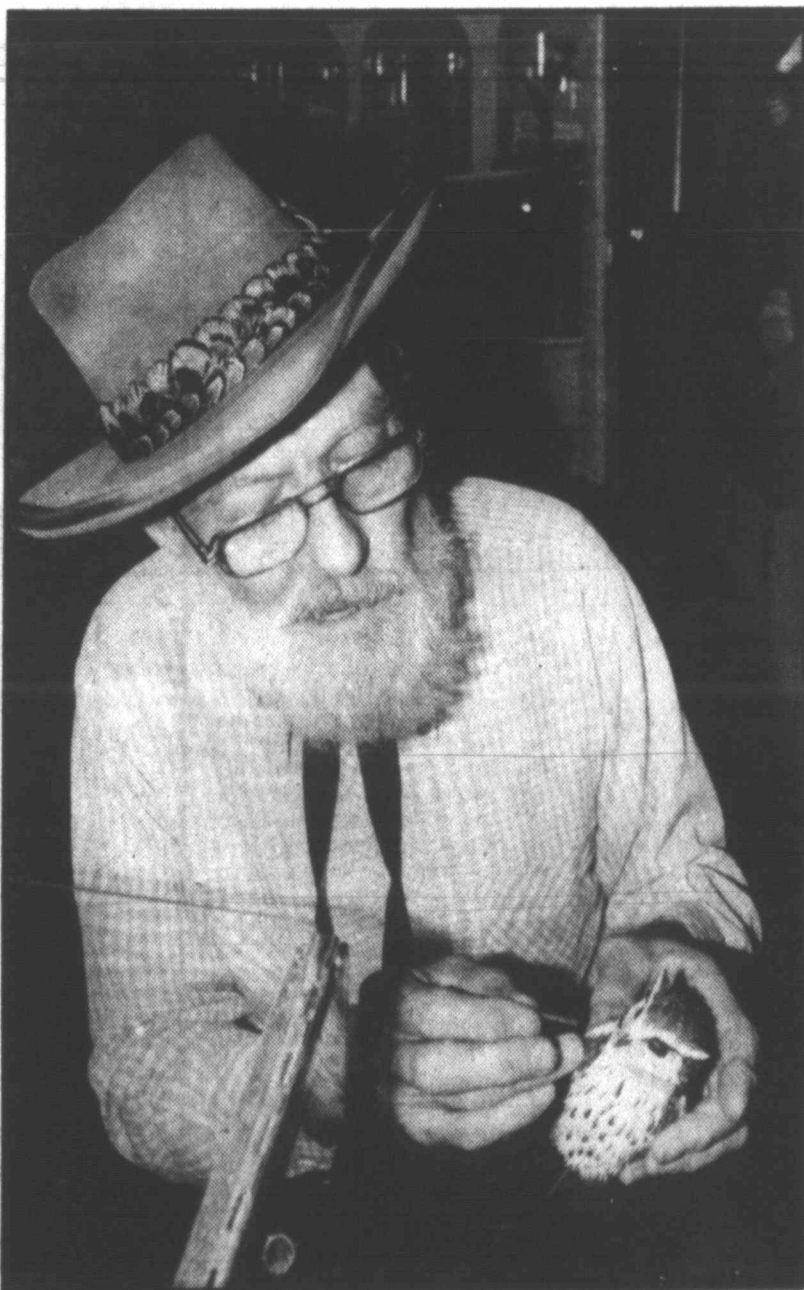

Each exhibitor sets up in a booth amidst acres of dogwood and redbud trees, and hundreds of flowering plants border the paved paths that crisscross the display area. All day, ice wagons, horsedrawn buggies, and calico - clad service employees mingle with the thousands of paying tourists.

This April marks the 23rd year that SDC has sponsored the festivals, which have grown from six craftsmen at the beginning.

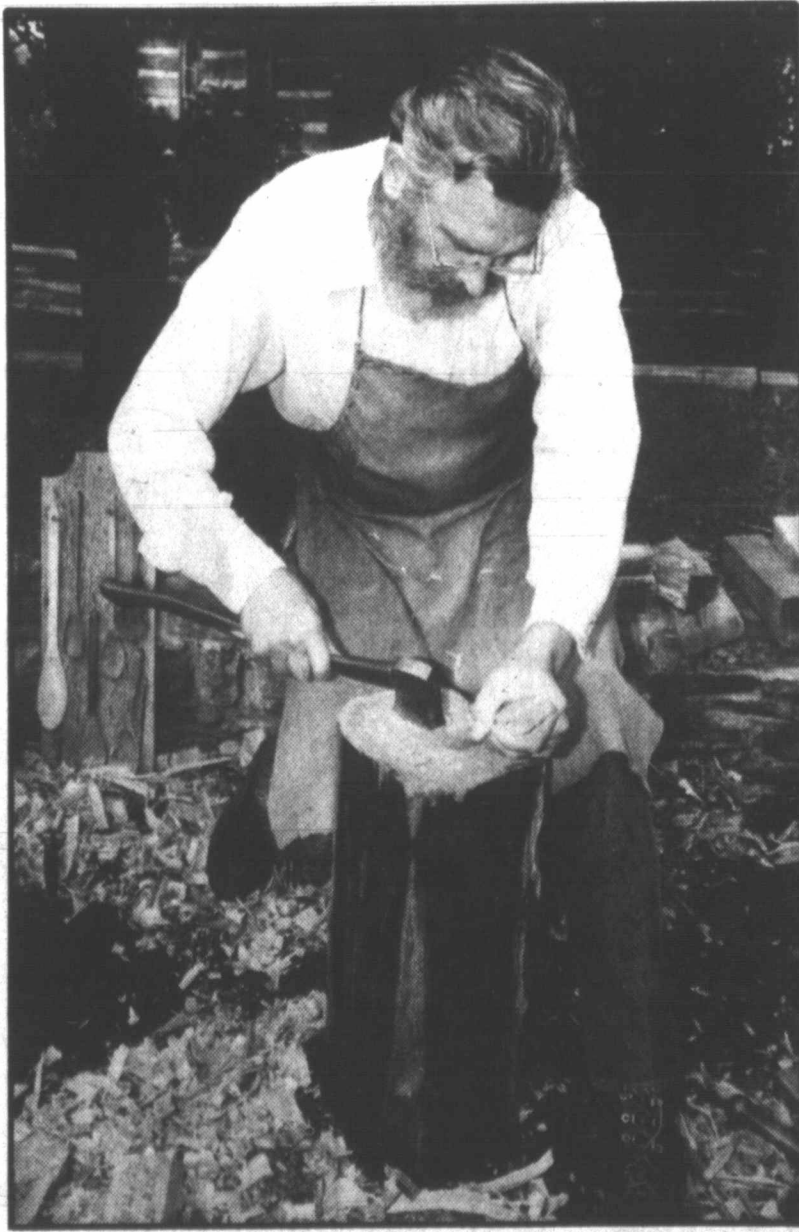

The only common thread running through the - string of exhibitors is their commitment to handmade products. Roger Sandstrom uprooted his family from Connecticut to Missouri when he discovered a farm for sale with a wide variety of native woods growing on the property. Descended from a great - uncle who was a New England cabinetmaker, he is a dean of treenware makers who specializes in kitchen spoons chiseled with an axe. His is the art of cooperage, and his raw material is culled from his own forest of lilac, mulberry, osage orange, peach — and even poison ivy, although those spoons are never to be used. Two of his sons have become skilled apprentices and plan to carry on the treenware tradition.

"If you work with your hands, you're a laborer," says Peter Engler, who helped organize the festivals and was SDC's first full - time craft exhibitor. "If you work with your head and hands, you're a craftsman. But if you use your head, hands and heart, you're an artist."

ANOTHER USE for bird seeds. Dwight Nesmith shows how he makes bird models out of seed at a recent crafts festival. "It took eight years for me to give away my first bird," says the artist, who uses 100 varieties of seed for his tiny subjects.

TREENWARE, the art of chiseling spoons with an axe, is demonstrated by Roger Sandstrom. Sandstrom continues a craft started by a great - uncle who was a cabinetmaker in New England.

HORSE CRAFT. Craftsman Maurice (Mark) St. Gaudens of San Anselmo, Calif., shows some of his nearly life - sized horses which he carves out of Honduran mahogany at the Ozark Mountain Crafts Festival in Branson, Mo.

Peeking at Pampa

Take heart! Robins arrived days ahead of the calendar to herald the arrival of spring. Winter made another appearance ... and so it goes!

When snow, rain and sun play peek-a-boo and the sun's turn falls on Saturday, Pampanos do get out and about.

Heard from the bird that a spring style show of comfortable and wearable duds emceed by a handsome young man drew a large crowd at the mall last Saturday. Participating kiddoes, all scene stealers, were Katina Thomas of White Deer and a natural model, Jessica Hollister, Kimberly Dawn Martin, Amanda and Brad Baldrige and Selina Hood. Selina's mom, Tanga, was a model, too. Mary (Mrs. Larry) McWilliams in a snappy black straw and Billie Bruner in an equally snappy natural straw made hats look like a staple in the spring fashion world.

Pampa has its own sewing circle, a custom that originated on the Mayflower. Members meet once a month for a covered dish patlock lunch plus visitation while doing handwork. Liz (Mrs. Ken) Edwards, formerly of Louisiana, mused the Mardi Gras theme in food and decorations when she hosted the last luncheon in her home.

At least 50 participated in the Pampa Singles Club activities. Hostesses for the St. Patrick's Day green salad supper were Faye Weese, May Frances McGaughey and Glenda Walker. Members all wore green.

Another evening, Jerry Rogers and Linda Scott put together a potluck dinner, followed with an evening of games at the Flame Room. They called it "Flamin' Food and Fun."

The Rev. Norman Rushing of Central Baptist Church and James Hart are the newest Rotarians in town. Louise and Harold Miller and E. C. Hart are happy to have Patsy and James back home again. They've been in Oklahoma for several years! Welcome back!

Dr. Sam Waters, back in town for his father's funeral, renewed old acquaintances last week. A PHS graduate and a Pampan for several years, Dr. Waters is a cardiologist in Wichita Falls.

A popular evangelist Angel Martinez returned for the "nth" time in 20 years to conduct a revival at First Baptist Church. That church's Super Spiral growth program, aiming for a 5,000 membership by 1985 is on target to date. Linda (Dr. Jay) Johnson, Karen (Mrs. Bill) Bridges and Marian (Mrs. D. B.) Jameson are selecting new furniture for the building that is nearing completion.

Congratulations to Kent Derr, son of Frankie and Bill, for all the honors and recognition earned as the outstanding accounting student at West Texas State University.

Another Pampan returning from Dallas and a new face at First National Bank is Chuck Quarles, son of Lawanna and Johnny Quarles. He is remembered as a Harvester football star. He's handsome — and — eligible! Welcome back, Chuck! "Good luck!" "Best Wishes!" and "We'll miss you!" go to several people this week. Bob Peake, popular and personable, assistant manager of the Pampa Country Club for the past five months is returning to Colorado Springs, from whence he came.

Friends are both happy and sad all at the same time that Barbara and Luther Robinson will be moving to Amarillo soon. Luther will be president and chairman of the board of a new bank. Barbara will transfer with Energas.

Little Janelle Powers, born last week to Janice and Tim, was named for her mother and maternal grandmother, Nell Warren. George is a proud grandpa. Congratulations!

More congrats to Denise and Bill Cox on the birth of their second son, Daniel Ray. Oops! Apologies to little Kelly Stowers, whose name was given as Shelly!

Birthday wishes, some belated, to H. H. Thrasher, Linda Thrasher, Cordie Shumate, Faustine Curry, Lorene (Mrs. William) Stafford, Winnie Sweatt, Johnnie Ellis, Linda Haynes, Linda Crabtree, Keith Vanderpool, Lige Tarvin, G. L. (Nat) Lunsford and Bill Clatterbaugh.

Friends dropped by to wish Claire Roane a happy 99th birthday — a milestone for sure! Claire makes her home with a daughter, Mabel Torvie, next door to another daughter, Louise (Mrs. Harold) Miller. Congratulations, Claire!

Nina Spoonmore was honored recently with a luncheon hosted by Glenda Mercado, Del Manzanillo, Fely Tapon, Margi Osalvo, Dianne Dalenden, Judith Anib and Hubertie Thiam, all nurses transplanted here from the Philippines.

Happy belated birthday wishes to an on-the-go, busy-every-minute Bonnie Hogan, who celebrated her 81st birthday on March 16. Bonnie, who claims she is much too busy for any type of pain or illness, is the mother of eight. Glen and Martha, La Wayne and Marcella, Calvin and Wilma, Ed and Charlotte and their children live in Pampa. The 70 family members of her complete family — scattered around Texas, Alabama, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and across the ocean to Germany — are proud of their mother and grandmother. One granddaughter Alisa Hogan (daughter of Martha and Glen) is March Junior Rotarian. How does Bonnie stay so busy? She quilts and dresses dolls for the public, she attends the Mary Ellen Church of Christ regularly except when she's traveling around the country and she works hard in the Pam Home Extension Club.

Eugene Hamilton, Charles and Greg Lange, Paul Turner, Frank Snow and Frank Epperly are deep in plans for a big fishing trip in Canada in June. Brian Hanson is skiing this weekend in Santa Fe. He may well be the ski-ingest man in Pampa!

Majunta and Forrest Hills trekked to Carlsbad, Calif. in the San Diego area for a few wonderful, luxurious days at La Costa, a fabulous health spa. Stefanie Powers was there at the same time.

Willie McConnell tell us that she was doubly surprised and honored during her recent Caribbean cruise on "The Southward" when she was chosen as "Queen of the Ship." As queen she was heaped with honors and showered with beautiful gifts. But that's not all, while attending a special party for grandparents, she discovered to be the eldest grandparent present, and for this distinction she received even more honors and gifts. Congratulations!

Bryan South, a student at the Baptist seminary in Fort Worth, visited his parents, Barbara and Jerry South. Helen and Charles Dimmler are thrilled over pending musical engagements of their daughter Carolyn, her husband and band members. Important appearances on their calendar include the New Orleans World Fair and Texas A&M. They performed to the delight of the audience at the Houston Musical Festival earlier. Remember the TV commercials with the thousands of cottonballs, each sprayed separately with hair spray? Their son designed the setting! And that's not all! They are eagerly awaiting the return to Pampa of Helen's brother and his wife, Fred and Jennie Brooks. Fred retires in days from Cabot in St. Louis. And that's good news to their many friends here. Stay busy and meet me here again next week! KATIE

Protect yourself from hospital overcharges

"According to a recent survey by Equifax of Atlanta, Ga., 93 percent of America's hospital bills are inaccurate — and 85 percent of those errors are in the hospital's favor," says Shelah Leader of the National Consumers League, in the current Family Circle magazine's "Cashing In" column. She gives tips on how consumers can protect themselves from hospital overcharges, including the following suggestions. Insist on an itemized hospital bill, not just a bottle total. If you don't understand any of the charges, or if the bill is in code, ask for an explanation. If you have been billed for medical services you did not receive, inform the hospital — first by phone, then in writing (keeping a copy for your files).

JON BIRDSONG

Artist to teach workshop

Artist Jon Birdsong captures the feeling of the Texas Panhandle in his paintings of houses and barns on area farms and ranches. He is to teach a watercolor workshop Saturday and Sunday, March 31 and April 1, at the Country Sunshine Studio, Price Road.

The workshop begins at 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. both days. For registration applications

Preserving Grandma's treasures

"Preserving Grandma's Treasures" is the title of a leader training to be presented by Donna Brauchi, Gray County extension agent, Thursday, March 29, at 9:30 a.m. in the courthouse annex meeting room.

The leader training will focus on care and preservation of textile items including clothing, quilts and furs. Storage of other items such as photos, books, paintings, china and glass will be discussed.

The second part of the training is to prepare participants to collect bits of family history and share what they know and discover about their family history with future generations.

The leader training is planned primarily for program leaders of extension homemaker clubs, but is open to anyone interested.

and information, contact Cile Taylor, 665 - 5963 before 5 p.m. and 669 - 2034 in the evenings. The deadline is March 26.

Birdsong is a graduate of West Texas State University with a masters degree. He holds teaching certification and experience in both social studies and art. He has taught art in the public school system as well as at WTSU. He recently opened the Birdsong Studio in Canyon. The artist's works are sold in several major galleries in Texas and New Mexico. He has won several awards and received national prominence when President Gerald Ford hung one of his paintings in the White House during his administration.

Birdsong uses a limited palette which he feels sets the mood of his subject matter. He works primarily with watercolor, and his technique is basically the wet into wet with dry brush in the final stages.

Club News

Upsilon
Upsilon met recently in the home of Sharon Carter. Debbie Jennings was co-hostess.

Executive board members met and discussed socials. Melinda Haskit announced that the traditional Easter egg hunt would be a social for the entire family.

Friendship chairman, Rebecca Lewis, told members that a ham had been taken to the Earl family during the illness of their baby. Debbie Jennings, ways and means chairman, showed members the prizes available to those selling the most beef raffle tickets. Committee member, Gayle Tarrant, suggested selling bean packets for making French Market soup.

Amy Lawrence and Debbie Jennings presented a program on music, and Amy passed candy to announce an expected baby.

20th Century Study
A program of classical music was presented at the March 13 meeting and annual guest day of the 20th Century Study Club. Myrna Orr, Jerry Whitten and Father Ronald McCrary provided the special music.

Salad bar becomes American institution

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

The salad bar is becoming an American institution. They can be found in every type of restaurant from fast food stores to the finest steak houses. Of course, restaurants have salad bars because their customers want them. When the magazine "Restaurants and Institutions" recently asked customers what menu items they are ordering often, salad was the number one answer.

People like salad bars for a variety of reasons, most of them having to do with nutrition. Often they will say they eat at the salad bar because it's not fattening, it's nutritious, you can make it any way you want, you can make a whole meal out of it, and it's good for you even if you are on a special diet. Salad bars can live up to these nutritional expectations, but it is not automatic. Whether your salad is high in nutrients, low in calories, right for your special diet, or adequate for a one-dish meal, depends entirely upon the choices you make.

For some people, a salad is a bowl of iceberg lettuce with dressing. That type of salad is high in fiber and low in calories if you don't over do it on the dressing. You can do better nutritionally by adding vegetables high in vitamins A and C. Pale green leaves, such as iceberg lettuce, don't provide much vitamin A and C. But dark green leaves like Romaine lettuce and spinach do. The typical salad bar also has many other good vitamin A and C sources such as hot red peppers, broccoli, carrots, cauliflower and cole slaw.

Vegetables can't do everything for you, however. So if your salad is supposed to be an entire meal, you should also include some non-vegetable ingredients like bacon bits, shredded cheese, chopped egg or cottage cheese. These are good sources of protein, calcium and riboflavin. Some nutrients, like thiamin, iron and niacin are primarily supplied by foods you don't often see at salad bars, such as meats and grain products.

If you are looking for a low-calorie meal, the salad bar may not necessarily be the best place to find it. By choosing helpings of potato salad, cottage cheese, gelatin and coleslaw along with your vegetables, then topping it with bacon bits, croutons and using a non-diet dressing, you can wind up with more calories than a "regular" meal.

To keep your calorie count down when you go to the salad bar, follow these suggestions from the American Council on Science and Health:

Select the plain raw vegetables because they have the lowest calorie counts.

Don't take too many pickled foods. They are somewhat higher in calories because sugar is added in the pickling process. Pickled beets, for example, have twice as many calories as plain beets.

Avoid the non-vegetable items such as cottage cheese and various high-calorie dressings. Cottage cheese and cheese are good sources of calcium, however, so you might want to include them if you are not normally a milk-drinker.

Stay away from prepared salads like cole slaw, potato salad and marinated salads. Prepared salads are higher in calories than plain vegetables because they use high-calorie dressings. For example, cole slaw contains more than six times the calories of plain cabbage.

Use only a small amount of diet dressing. Some diet dressings have as much as 30 calories a tablespoon, and the calories will add up fast if you use a large amount.

Remember, during March — National Nutrition Month — salad bars can help fill the "nutritional gap" in fast food.

KATIE TAYLOR & CASH. Epsilon Sigma Alpha President Katie Taylor fans out one month's of donations for Meals on Wheels from her sorority sisters. The organization is challenging other Pampa clubs and sororities to meet their challenge of $1 per member per month donation to Meals on Wheels. (Staff photo by Ed Copeland)

Local sorority challenges others for Meals on Wheels

Members of the Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority, Kappa Alpha No. 3001, are extending a challenge to all Pampa service, civic, social, religious and volunteer groups to meet their pledge of $1 per member per month for 1984 to help support the local Meals on Wheels program.

"Each person would donate $12 a year so that the ones who don't have money to pay for (Meals on Wheels) can still have the meals," said Lorie Miller, publicity and education chairman for ESA.

Epsilon Sigma Alpha is an international service sorority chartered in 1930 with headquarters in Fort Collins, Colo. Each chapter has the power to decide its own service programs. The local chapter, through the suggestion of Ann Turner, an active Meals on Wheels volunteer, decided to keep their money in the community by donating to the local Meals on Wheels program. They are extending a challenge to other organizations here to do the same.

For more information about the challenge, call Ann Turner, chairman of the service committee, at 665-4828 or Dorothy Miller, treasurer, at 665-2153. Or mail pledges to ESA for Meals on Wheels, Dorothy Miller - Treasurer, P.O. Box 1600, Pampa, 79065.

Business & Professional Women sponsor 'young career' program

Pampa's Business and Professional Women's Club is sponsoring a young career program, March 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the First United Methodist Church Education Building on East Foster Street.

Barbara Akins, regional manager for personnel for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company is to be guest speaker.

Akins was the Young Careerist for District 9 Business and Professional Women's clubs. She won the State Federation Young Careerist from 15 district contestants and represented Texas at the National Convention in Columbus, Ohio.

The Young Career Woman program was inaugurated by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club in 1963. This program highlights the achievements of young career women and is one of the many programs sponsored by B&PW clubs to elevate the status of women.

The public is invited to attend the young career program.

Dear Abby

Credit-crazy wife pushes couple close to the edge

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am on the verge of bankruptcy because my wife loves to shop. She writes checks, doesn't record them, and when the bank statements come, she hides them, thinking I won't find out.

She keeps buying clothes until there is no more room in the closets. She has charge accounts all over town. Also credit cards. She says we're in trouble financially because I am a "failure." Abby, I make $37,000 a year, which is well above the poverty level, and she calls me a failure.

There are just the two of us—no children. She doesn't work outside the home and doesn't want to. Have you ever heard of anything like this? It's like a disease. Please help me.

GOING UNDER IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR GOING UNDER: Yes, it's called "compulsive spending."

Write to the National Foundation for Consumer Credit Inc., 8701 Georgia Ave., Silver Spring, Md. 20910, for the address of its local office. (Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.) Counselors can help hold off the creditors, show you how to budget your money and get out of the hole you're in. (Be prepared to surrender your credit cards.)

But there is another problem here that needs addressing: To get to the cause of her problem, your wife needs counseling. (Here we go again!) She needs to know why she is a compulsive spender. There is a strong possibility that she's trying to substitute "things" for some unmet need in her life.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, after treating a few friends to lunch, I left a tip that amounted to exactly 15 percent of the bill. The tip included seven pennies.

One of the parties with me told me that it was in bad taste to leave pennies in a tip.

Was it really in bad taste or not?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: While pennies aren't the most desirable form of legal tender, they're better than nothing.

And speaking of "taste," I think your guest showed worse taste in pointing out your "bad taste" than you did in leaving seven pennies.

DEAR ABBY: I realize that there are more profound questions in the universe, but mine is, "Why isn't there a man on earth who knows what to do when a woman he cares about cries?"

I am 45, started dating at 14, have been married once and divorced once, and I have yet to find a man who knew what to do when a woman cried.

When my father died, my then-husband lay motionless with his hands behind his head while I lay beside him, crying at night. The man I am presently dating is a psychologist, and he's no better than the rest.

If you've covered this, I must have missed it. What's the answer, Abby?

CONSTANT OHIO READER

DEAR READER: Don't assume that because you've never met a man who knew what to do when a woman he cared for cried, none exist. I assure you they do.

However, for the benefit of those who don't know and would like to, my advice would be to kiss her tears away.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Dial-a-grandparent helps with odd jobs

By PAUL WIRTH
Allentown Call-Chronicle

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — The next time area residents need help with odd jobs or yard work, or need a reliable house sitter during a vacation, Charlie Coffey hopes they'll call on grandma or grandpa.

No, not their own grandparents. He hopes they'll turn to Dial-a-Grandma Hire-a-Grandpa Inc., one of the newest temporary help agencies to hit Pennsylvania.

By matching up job-seeking "grandparents" with people willing to hire them — and taking a percentage off the top — Coffey hopes to make his business profitable.

Coffey, a 59-year-old retired salesman, remortgaged his Bethlehem house to start the business. He says he will spend at least $50,000 to get the agency off the ground.

Coffey believes that many retired and elderly people would enjoy temporary, occasional work. He says "grandma" and "grandpa" have a wealth of knowledge and experience that could be put to use in a variety of jobs, and the extra money they earn will help make ends meet on a fixed income.

Coffey is convinced that many people would be willing to hire a bonded and insured elderly or retired person to help with such things as baby-sitting, house-sitting, tutoring, house cleaning, yard work, companionship or odd jobs.

The employment service is patterned after a highly successful program in Florida. Dolores Fry, the founder of the Florida program, got the idea after overhearing a vacationing couple on the beach lamenting that they could not find a baby sitter.

Coffey, a jovial man with snowy hair and a neatly trimmed mustache, signed a contract with Ms. Fry and became her first out-of-state branch office. He has embossed hats, aprons, and tote bags with the Florida company's logo and is using her marketing techniques and fee schedules.

It's not a franchise arrangement, Coffey says, but Ms. Fry eventually will be paid a percentage of the profits at the Bethlehem location. Also, Ms. Fry sits on the board of directors of Coffey's corporation.

A typical fee for house-sitting services, Coffey says, might be $15 per night, with slightly higher fees if pet care is involved. For an entire week, the services might cost about $100, he says.

Of that money, 55 percent is paid to the worker and 45 percent is kept by Coffey as a fee to cover expenses and profit. The fee split is the same as the Florida operation, and is governed by Coffey's contract, he says.

"When you get to an age, there sometimes is nothing out there for you," said Coffey, a former minor league baseball player and Army paratrooper.

"Maybe you can come to us and use the skills you grew up with. A housewife has more skills than the president of any corporation. Why not use them to get back into society, be needed again and earn some extra money?"

ALEXANDRA EAMES

Decorator turns eggs into art

SAG HARBOR, N.Y. (AP) — Eggs may not have artistic potential for most people, but to Alexandra Eames they are a blank canvas for her creative efforts.

She colors them in vivid hues and transforms them into such objects as birds, flowers, spaceships and vases, or makes them "grow" on trees by hanging decorated eggshells from small branches.

Before she starts work on an egg, she has a preconceived notion about how she wants it to look.

"I get my inspiration from almost anything around me," says Ms. Eames, who creates the eggs for display purposes for PAAS, a major manufacturer of Easter egg color kits. "One year, for instance, a seed catalog came with a lot of pictures of flowers. So, I said, I've really got to use them somehow, and I ended up doing decoupage eggs."

These, she explained, are cut-out flowers, animals or geometric designs from scraps of fabric or magazine illustrations, which are attached to colored eggs with glue or double-faced sticky tape.

Ms. Eames, who studied art at Parsons School of Design, spends an average of a half hour decorating an egg. Does she mind that her art work may be destroyed so quickly after Easter is over?

"If the egg turns out to be really nice, it's worth saving," she says. "I have seen eggs, even those that were hard-cooked, that people carefully set aside for years. Slowly the insides dry up and harden and the egg begins to rattle. If you have an egg you really like, you should save it."

One of her favorite decorations involves the use of real leaves. This is the type of design she calls "resist-leaf decorated eggs."

"This means coating the egg with something that will resist the coloring bath," she explains. "Dip tiny leaves in vegetable oil and lay on the egg surface. To keep leaves from slipping, wrap the egg in a square of discarded nylon stocking and tie tightly with thread. Dip the egg into the coloring. When the color is dark enough, remove the piece of nylon and leaves and blot the egg dry." The imprint of the leaves will remain.

MR. AND MRS. GLENN A. DARLING

Darlings honored on 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn A. Darling celebrated their golden wedding anniversary March 24.

The couple's children hosted the celebration for the couple in the St. Vincent de Paul cafeteria. Hosts included Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Darling, Don Darling, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Sikes, Mr. and Mrs. Danny Darling, Pat Darling, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Carr and their families.

Glenn A. Darling married Vera Johnson in Cleveland, Okla., on March 25, 1934. They have lived in Pampa since 1942. Mr. Darling is a retired head roustabout for Texaco. They have six children and 14 grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Darling repeated their wedding vows at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, and the reception followed.

Edwards celebrate 25 years together

Murel and Claire Ann Edwards of Pampa are to be honored today, March 25, with a surprise party celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary.

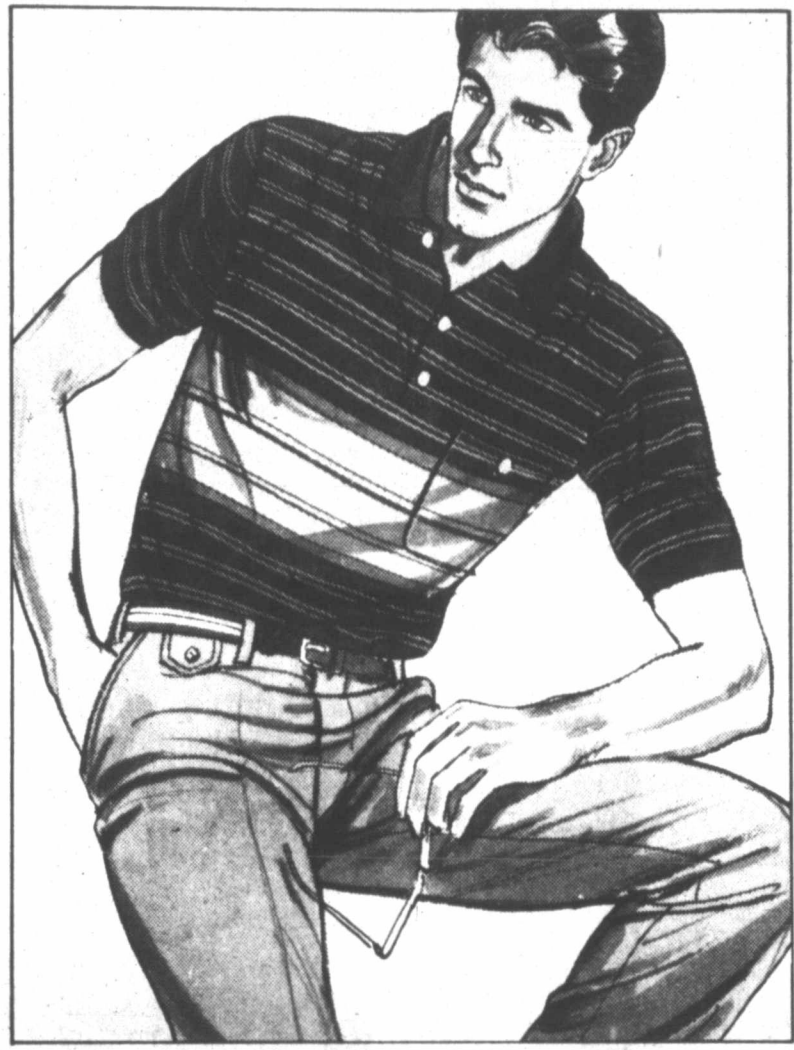

The surprise, come-and-go party, hosted by their family and friends, is to begin at 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. at the Barret Baptist Church, 903 E. Beryl.

Italian Puffs always right

COFFETIME FARE
Italian Puff & Espresso
ITALIAN PUFFS
When this recipe was demonstrated at a cooking school in a Brooklyn department store it was most successful. Bake cream puffs according to a standard recipe based on 1 cup all-purpose flour. Cool completely. Just before serving, cut off tops and fill with the following: Beat together until very smooth a 15- or 16-ounce container of ricotta, 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Stir in 1/4 teaspoon lemon rind. Beat 1 cup heavy cream until stiff and fold in. Fill bottoms of puffs with mixture and replace tops; sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

Note: The ricotta mixture also makes a delightful filling for layer cakes.

At Wits End

The Stepfamilies are coming!
The Stepfamilies are coming!
Not only are their numbers on the rise, but because 75 percent of divorced women and 83 percent of divorced men remarry, by 1990 there will be more stepfamilies than traditional ones.

I was a stepchild back in the days when they were rare and had a lot of bugs to be worked out. My grandmother, sparked by a low threshold of boredom, was married five times. At family reunions, there was no such thing as a family resemblance. We never knew what it was, so we never knew if we had it.

I had a whole brother and a half sister. She in turn had a half brother, a half sister, a stepmother and a full sister. We always prefaced every meeting with, "Who's your father?" and went from there. We had half-aunts, uncles by divorce, and a few dozen cousins by association. We racked up stepchildren three years younger than their stepmothers, brothers who couldn't begin to spell their sister's last name, and grandfathers who were never too sure who you were. I went to a funner once and wept like a baby over an aunt who was never related to me.

Just last week I said in a column that I saw no need whatsoever for a home computer. I take that back: If there is one area that needs a storage unit for names and relationships, that can be printed out in a matter of seconds, it's the stepfamily.

Take the child whose divorced mother had four children and married a widower with five, all under 18. He was the only kid in town with two brothers named Jimmy, a brother and a sister a month apart and two sisters 12 days apart. A rabbit on a good day couldn't top that.

The record-keeping alone of these families is enough to boggle the mind. Traditional families have enough problems keeping track of immunizations and school records without having to figure out who had their tonsils out and who didn't.

The computer would not only keep pace with how many tickets are needed for graduation and seats for the wedding, but whether or not the separation would allow for three mothers and three fathers to sit in peace and love or be scattered throughout the crowd.

I had a terrible time once explaining to a teacher about the twins in our family who were six and eight who had the same last name. They were not twins to each other in her class because the six-year old twin got held back when they moved with their father, and the eight-year-old twin lived with his mother in another town.

I don't know why they looked alike.

Someone should have kept better records.

Dr. Lamb

Raising your potassium

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've been having trouble with body itch, fatigue and weakness. When the doctor tested my blood he found my potassium was dangerously low.

I take Synthroid, Lasix and Zylorim, and now six K-Tabs daily. The last three weeks I've been eating three bananas daily and drinking orange juice to try to raise my potassium level.

Do you have any Health Letters listing foods that furnish high potassium? I know bananas are high, but I don't really like them.

I'm 77. I've always had to watch my weight, but my blood pressure stays low and healthy.

DEAR READER — There's something missing in your story. Why are you taking Lasix? It's a powerful diuretic. Your doctor may have prescribed it to keep your blood pressure at your good level. Or he may have prescribed it to eliminate excess sodium and water from your body associated with swelling.

In any case, Lasix can cause your kidneys to eliminate potassium, which may be why you've developed a low potassium level. A low potassium level can lead to weakness and the most common cause for low levels is the use of diuretics. Some diuretics such as Dyazide don't have the same tendency to eliminate potassium. Don't stop your Lasix on your own. You should discuss it with your doctor. He may want to use a different diuretic that doesn't cause the kidneys to eliminate potassium.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a problem with brittle fingernails. They have ridges and break easily. I've been taking calcium tablets and I also take vitamin E. I've also tried gelatin tablets.

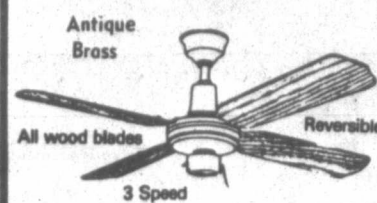

I'm 69 years old and in good health otherwise. This problem started two years ago. Is there anything else I might do? Will the bones in my body be brittle, too? Will the calcium tablets harm me in any way?

DEAR READER — It's important to have a balanced, nutritional diet with adequate amounts of protein, calcium and iron. Your general health will affect your fingernails. Gelatin won't help much because it's an incomplete protein. It's not nearly as good as the complete protein you find in the meat and dairy groups. That includes red meat, fish, chicken and milk.

The calcium tablets are probably good for you. Many women after menopause are on calcium-deficient diets.

Wally's business is regulated ... so is ours.

Wally makes and sells 25¢ milk shakes. If his friends ask why his price is 25¢, Wally explains he has to buy milk, ice cream, syrup, cups and straws ... and needs to make some money, too. If the costs of making milk shakes should go up too much, Wally figures he should raise his price. Otherwise, he may as well get out of the business. But before Wally increases his price, he checks with his mother to see if she agrees with his decision. Wally believes he makes good milk shakes and sells them at a fair price. He hopes his mother and his customers will understand that some costs are beyond his control. Many costs are reflected in the prices of products and services — at Wally's milk shake stand or any other business, including Southwestern Public Service Company's business of making and delivering electricity. Because SPS is a public utility, our business and our prices are government regulated. Wally works hard to satisfy his customers. Like Wally, we at Southwestern Public Service Company are working to justify your trust.

DAY NEUTRAL STRAWBERRY — The new Brighton Day Neutral strawberry bears fruit all year.

New strawberries bear all year

How would you like to grow big, juicy, red strawberries fresh off your own vines all four seasons of the year — spring, summer, fall and winter, starting in just 60 days from setting out plants?

It's now possible because plant scientists at the University of California and at the USDA fruit research station in Maryland have developed an entirely new race of perpetual-bearing strawberries called "day neutral" strawberries that will bear crops from June to October — and even during winter months if taken indoors.

Traditionally, strawberries have been classified as "June bearers" and "Everbearers." June bearers are the oldest, bearing only during the cool, short days of June. Everbearers are a more recent development, capable of bearing fruit not only in June but also again in fall when cool, short days return again. With both these older varieties, their cropping ability is affected by day length. In other words, they have a built-in time clock that automatically stops them bearing when hours of daylight are extended, as in summer.

The new "day neutral" strawberries are not affected by day length at all and have the ability to crop continuously all through summer and into fall — providing the temperature remains below 100 degrees F. They will even produce fruit in winter if taken indoors or protected from freezing weather.

One of the most highly rated of these new strawberries for home gardeners is Brighton. Developed from a single strawberry plant found growing in the mountains of Utah, near Salt Lake City, Brighton is widely adapted and its fruits are exceptionally large.

In home gardens, Brighton strawberries can be planted in beds, borders and containers. The runners produce a number of vigorous daughter plants that bear fruit whether rooted or not. This makes them especially decorative grown in hanging baskets, the white, star-shaped flowers and cascades of ripening fruit hanging down the sides of the pot.

These new strawberries require no more care than regular varieties. Just ensure lots of sun and a loose, fertile soil with plenty of organic material mixed in compost or peat moss. A method which actually ensures largest fruit and highest yields is to remove all flowers that form until July, then let them flower to bear a late summer and fall crop. Let plants overwinter in the garden by covering with leaves or straw and harvest again the following spring, summer, fall and even into winter months if plants are moved indoors.

For free information about obtaining day neutral strawberries write Spring River Nurseries, Dept. N., Spring River Road, Hartford, MI, 49057. Or send $1 for two sample plants to start growing straight away.

Deep-dish chicken pie is delightful

Our Deep-Dish Chicken Pie was particularly good because we steamed our chicken so it was unusually tender and juicy and, in addition, we had a rich broth to use in the cream sauce. Here are our directions should you want to follow suit.

Place a 3½- to 4-pound roasting chicken in the gold-bottom upper part of a steamer (or improvise such a steamer). Add a medium onion (peeled and quartered), 2 inner ribs of celery (preferably white), a medium carrot (peeled and halved) and a sprig of thyme. Add water to the bottom of the steamer; insert the upper part and cover tightly; bring the water to a boil; keep the water boiling (replacing it if necessary) until the chicken is tender — about 45 minutes; cool. Through a fine-mesh strainer, strain the broth that has accumulated and chill. Remove hardened fat at top; with a paper towel, wipe off all traces of fat. Heat broth, adding salt and white pepper to taste. There should be 1½ to 1¾ cups. — C.B.

DEEP-DISH CHICKEN PIE
Pastry, recipe follows
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons unbleached all-purpose flour
1 cup clear fat-free chicken broth
1 cup milk

4 cups (about) diced (about 1 inch) cooked chicken
Salt and pepper to taste

Make up pastry. Chill as directed.

In a medium saucepan over low heat melt butter; stir in flour. Off heat gradually stir in chicken broth and milk, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbling; stir in chicken, salt and pepper; keep hot, covered, over very low heat.

On a pastry cloth with a covered rolling pin, roll out pastry to an 11- by 7-inch rectangle.

Turn the hot chicken mixture into a 1½-quart oblong baking dish (10 by 6 by 1½ inches); place rolled out pastry rectangle over hot mixture, sealing edges to side of dish.

Cut 3 rows of 1-inch vents, 4 vents in each row, in pastry; slightly open each vent.

Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until chicken mixture is bubbling hot and pastry golden brown — 25 to 30 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

PASTRY: With a pastry blender cut a ¼-pound stick of butter into 1 cup unbleached all-purpose flour until butter is the size of small peas. Gradually sprinkle with 2 tablespoons (about) water, mixing with a fork until dough can be pressed into a ball. Wrap tightly in saran and chill for at least 30 minutes or overnight.

GLAMOROUS DESSERT — And it's from the pantryshelf. Canned pears filled with cocoa and given a splash of liqueur.

Pair chocolate with pears

CHOCOLATE AND LIQUEUR PEARS
29-ounce can Bartlett pear halves

1 tablespoon cocoa
1 teaspoon sugar
Orange, coffee, chocolate or chocolate-mint liqueur
Whipped cream or soft vanilla ice cream, if desired

Drain pears; refrigerate pear liquid for some other use.

Stir together cocoa and sugar. Fill the cavities of 3 of the pear halves with the cocoa mixture. Place a pear half on each filled half.

Secure with toothpicks. Cover and refrigerate 6 to 8 hours or overnight.

At serving time, trim the base of each filled pear so that it will stand upright in an individual serving dish. Sprinkle each pear with one of the liqueurs.

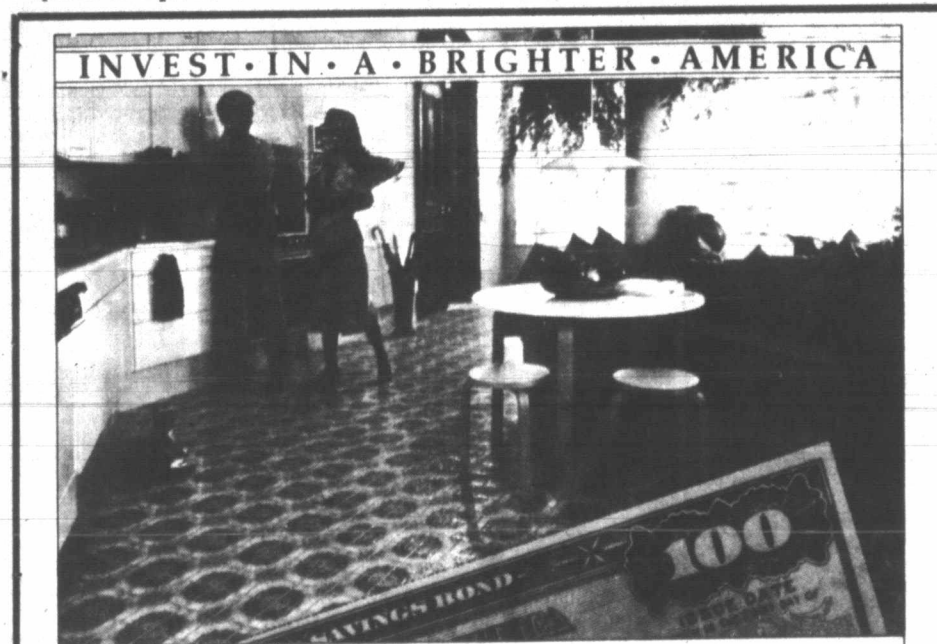

If you like, pass whipped cream or soft vanilla ice cream as a topping.

Makes 3 servings. Recipe may be doubled. Some of our tasters preferred having the pear cavities filled with plain cocoa rather than with the mixture of cocoa and sugar given in the recipe. You may want to try both methods.

Cher had delayed reaction to nomination

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Nominated for best performance by an actress in a supporting role: Cher, 'Silkwood'..."
Cher and boyfriend Val Kilmer were watching the television screen in the bedroom of her opulent Benedict Canyon home as Mickey Rooney announced the nominees for the 1983 Academy awards. Her reaction?
"I just sort of accepted the news automatically and then went back to doing my morning exercises. It wasn't until two days later, after reading about the reactions of the other nominees, that the import of it hit me. Then I was really shook."

Her reaction was in character. During her 15 years as a show biz luminary, Cher has projected an image of total cool, bordering on ultimate boredom. Yet underneath all that is a woman of defiant independence and relentless ambition. She takes great pleasure in her nomination as one of the five best supporting actresses of the year. It marks a milestone in the career of a star who has been the object of derision.

Cher seems perplexed that people will not take her seriously.

"I'm not really rebellious, but I refuse to live my life the way I'm supposed to. As a result, I've made my mistakes in public."

That's where it all started: Sonny and Cher. In 1965 she and Sonny Bono borrowed $168 and made a hit single, "Baby, Don't Go." With "I Got You, Babe," they became record stars.

OSCAR NOMINEE—Cher, nominated for a best supporting actress Academy Award for her role in the film "Silkwood," admits that when the nominations were first announced, she simply accepted it. Two days later the impact "really hit me," she said. (AP Laserphoto)

Donna Mills of "Knots Landing."

Recap: 3/19 - 3/23
Preview: 3/26 - 3/30
"The Lady of the 80's". It is the perfect description of Donna Mills.

As 'Abby Cunningham Ewing', the ruthless troublemaker in CBS-TV's hit drama "Knots Landing", Donna Mills is devilishly perfect, however, the character she brilliantly brings to life each week on her series couldn't be more unlike the lady herself.

"The only thing I share with the character of 'Abby' is her fierce determination to succeed, but our methods are very, very different, says Donna of her character. "Strong ladies are dominating prime-time television now and it is wonderful. We're no longer simply set decoration, but we contribute to the plot and make things happen. More often than not, we're outsmarting the men!"

TEXAS — The agent tells Billy Joe he needs to hear a demo tape. Max refuses to have anything to do with the Wheelers. Iris suggests Reena have a surprise party for Max. Ginny admits she loves Ryan but will still marry Barrett. During the ceremony, Ginny faints.

Astro-Graph
 by bernice bede osol

This coming year you may enter into an important alliance with an older, highly reputable business person. The association will produce many advantages.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Dealing with influential persons should turn out favorably for you today, but don't broadcast the results. A jealous associate may try to undercut you. Want to find out for whom you're best suited romantically? Send for your Matchmaker set by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, NY 10019. It reveals compatibilities for all signs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be tactful in career matters today so that it doesn't appear you're overly solicitous of one whose help you now need, while ignoring an old standby.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tasks which appear difficult today could be more in your own mind than in actuality. Once you get going, they may prove to be surprisingly easy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Step in and take command today in a venture which affects you as well as others, if you see they're bogged down. You can do what they can't.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The lure of bigger and better things may beckon today. However, it's best to first follow through on promises you made to your mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you've been quietly working on can be brought to a successful conclusion today, but it will require an extra surge of effort.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Selfishly motivated matters are apt to fall flat today. Success comes in dealings stimulated by the kindness of your heart.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Persons in your charge may require more supervision than usual today. Be firm, but try to do so without being harsh or overbearing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your initial appraisal of others today you may misread their intentions. Be careful not to block someone who has only your welfare at heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Overall financial conditions look rather hopeful for you today. Even those which appear unprofitable can be turned into something gainful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Members of the opposite sex are likely to be helpful to you today. This may not be true of persons of your own gender, especially in the commercial world.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It looks like your worrying has been in vain pertaining to a matter which affects your material security. A change for the better is in the offing.
