Pampa teachers urged to write education panel

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Local teachers were urged to write members of the Select Committee on Public Education (SCOPE) concerning proposed changes on salaries, a longer school year and teacher career evaluations at a meeting of the Pampa Association of Educators Thursday afternoon at Pampa High School.

Daniel R. Barker, PAE president, discussed a report on SCOPE's proposals prepared by the executive committee of the Texas State Teachers Association.

While generally supporting the changes proposed by SCOPE, the executive committee had objections in five areas: salary for experienced teachers, career ladder and funding, extended school day and year, teacher testing and evaluation, and academic programs.

SCOPE has recommended a base salary for teachers of $15,200. But the TSTA report says the recommendation contains no plans for raises for experienced teachers and has no mention of a developed salary schedule. The executive committee said this could mean current teachers receiving above $15,200 would receive no raise, Barker noted.

"We have grave concern about no specific mention of increases for experienced educators," the TSTA report states.

SCOPE is recommending a career ladder advancement plan "that is almost totally based on merit," the report says. The amount of raise a teacher receives within a career level will be based on the teacher's evaluation for any given year, the executive committee said.

The state education reform committee also is recommending that funding for instructional salaries be based solely on average daily attendance without any conversion to personnel units as currently provided in state law, the TSTA report indicates.

"Under the proposed plan, it is possible a school district which employs lower paid teachers (inexperienced) will receive the same funding from the state as a district that employs higher paid teachers (experienced advanced degrees)," the report says.

The executive committee said TSTA does not support this plan since "it would reduce the financial incentives for school districts to hire experienced degreed teachers or to raise the salaries of already employed experienced higher degreed teachers," Barker reported.

SCOPE also has recommended adding 10 days to the instructional school year and establishing longer school days with a seven-hour instructional day and two hours of other activities.

TSTA objects to the longer school year unless additional funds are made available to pay for the increased work year without reducing funds for pay raises. The state educators association also opposes the recommendation unless classrooms have climate control (air conditioning) for "optimum learning conditions" to alleviate the problems of warm classrooms in hot weather.

The executive committee objected to longer school days which lengthen the teachers' workday. If interruptions are eliminated from the current school day, a sufficient amount of instructional time may be available without requiring extra hours, the report claims.

SCOPE is recommending all current teachers and administrators be tested on basic skills and competency in a subject TSTA "supports the removal of incompetent teachers from the classroom but believes this should be done by a fair evaluation," the report states.

"Better instructional leadership and evaluation should be demanded by the public and its representatives," the report says. But testing for skills and

Kenny Smith of 205 E. Kentucky undertakes a spring chore

Winter hanging around

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Depending on a point of view, a nasty Old Man Winter or a cold Mother Nature just won't leave us alone. Maybe no one told them that it's spring.

Pampans this morning slipped and sloshed to school and work over a one-inch cover of slippery snow and ice and faced a freezing, 29-degree temperature and the compounded misery of a north wind blowing up to 30 mph.

A Pacific cold front moved through the Panhandle Thursday afternoon. The low pressure in the system was located just south of the Panhandle. Temperatures Thursday were warm enough to keep the system's associated precipitation in the form of rain.

But an upper-level disturbance centered near Tucumcari, N.M. this morning, blew in behind the front, dropping temperatures and changing the moisture into snow, according to a National Weather Service forecaster at Amarillo.

The disturbance spread the snow from the Texas and Oklahoma

Panhandles into southwest Kansas and southeastern Colorado.

Travelers' advisories were issued for the northern Panhandle today and tonight.

Guymon, Okla., had picked up four inches of snow by this morning enough to pack roads, the weather service reported.

The sudden chill and snow were nothing but typical early spring weather in the Texas Panhandle and no surprise for long-time residents and frustrated, backyard fruit growers.

Almost as inevitable as the howling winds are the early-warming Panhandle springs that lure the fruit trees' blossoms into existence, only to render them lifeless later with a sneaky blast of bitter-cold air.

Where else could one experience the variety of an evening burst of rain, lightning and thunder, followed by a numbing drop in temperature that turns spring rains into ice and snow that freeze into a thick crust, covering everything that isn't moving?

Cursing never seems to help, and neither do the weathermen who just wad up their maps of forecasts issued just hours earlier and try it again.

Growing thunder and the flash of lightning struck the area and accompanied rain that started about 9 p.m. Thursday. Then the temperature dropped nearly 30 degrees from Thursday's high of 58, and the ice and snow took over.

Precipitation in Pampa during the 24-hour ending at 6 a.m. today totaled 7.1 of an inch. The snow on top of the rain left a thick, cold crust of ice and powder over windshields and sidewalks this morning.

Knowing the sudden cold snaps will go away at least by June, local residents have learned to grin and bear it, which they must at least through Saturday.

The forecast calls for continued rain mixed with snow and windy and cold weather to start the weekend. The precipitation is expected to end with clearing skies Saturday afternoon. The low tonight will be near 30. The high on Saturday is forecast to reach the lower 50s.

North winds 10 to 20 mph will continue through tonight.

Procedural plans hamper deficit cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans for slashing federal budget deficits are blooming like spring flowers in Capitol Hill, but a weedy tangle of procedural problems in the Senate and House threatens to cut short any effort to bring the government's revenues and spending closer to balance.

So far, legislators can choose among — A three-year, $150 billion package worked out by President Reagan and senior Republican senators that would limit the rise in military spending to 7.8 percent next year, saving about $4 billion, cut domestic spending by about $43 billion and raise taxes by about $48 billion. Savings on interest on the national debt would reduce deficits by another $18 billion.

— A three-year, $184 billion "pay-as-you-go" plan from House Democratic leaders to limit military spending to a 3.5 percent increase for savings of nearly $96 billion, cut domestic spending by nearly $18 billion and raise taxes by about $49 billion.

accompanying the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Medical care costs jumped 0.8 percent, up from the 0.7 percent gain of January and above the average monthly increase of 0.5 percent last year. Physicians' fees soared 1.2 percent while hospital room charges rose 0.7 percent.

Last month's increases had been expected by analysts who are carefully watching the Labor Department's index for any signs that inflation may be heating up again.

Savings on interest on the national debt would reduce deficits by another $21 billion.

— A three-year, $200 billion plan Senate Democrats unveiled Thursday to limit military spending to a 4 percent increase for savings of about $54 billion, cut domestic spending by about $48 billion and raise taxes by $75 billion, including a two-year delay in indexing personal income-tax rates to inflation, which is set to begin next year. Savings on interest on the national debt would reduce deficits by another $24 billion.

— A five-year, $800 billion plan by three members of the Senate Budget Committee calling for a one-year budget freeze, followed by only a 3 percent annual increase in spending during the next four years. This is intended to reduce planned government spending by $450 billion and increase taxes by $350 billion through 1989.

— A plan by three other Budget Committee senators for a simple one-year, across-the-board freeze on government spending to save $39 billion next year while the president and Congress work out a long-term deficit-reduction strategy.

Optimists observe anniversary

It took 30 years for Pampa Optimists to go from cutting waist-high weeds to maintaining five little league ball parks.

Current and former members will honor 30 years of progress at a special banquet 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the Optimist Club multi-purpose building, Chartered March 24, 1954 in Pampa, the local chapter has sponsored little league baseball teams, speech contests and the annual bike safety week.

According to Optimist Club President John Warner, the banquet will feature an address by a special speaker. While he declined to identify the speaker, he hinted that the speaker would be the "best one for the occasion."

He added that, among those who will be recognized would be former officers, community leaders who have supported the Optimist program through the years and people who have participated in Optimist programs as boys.

And, members proudly claim that many of the boys who once played ball on Optimist teams have gone on to lead successful lives.

One former Optimist player is John Jenkins, assistant coach of the Houston Gamblers USFL football team. Others include Amarillo bank executive Gary Molburg, Chuck Quarles of the First National Bank in Pampa, Pampa dentist Jay Johnson and Pampa attorneys David Martindale, Rick Harris and Lee Waters.

Winter freeze damage causes food price climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices rose 0.6 percent last month, the government reported today, as the damage from several months of severe weather began to ease. In all, consumer prices rose a modest 0.4 percent in February.

Energy prices were also up. Fuel oil prices rose 6.9 percent, their biggest jump in three years, while gasoline costs, off for the fifth straight month, fell 1.5 percent.

But the overall gain in the Consumer Price Index was less than January's 0.6 percent and gave economists fresh support for their predictions that inflation this year will be in the range of 5 percent.

Reflecting the fresh moderation in food prices — which had risen 1.6 percent in January — cost increases slowed for such staples as meat, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

Beef and veal prices rose 1.7 percent after a 3.5 percent jump in January. Pork prices edged up 0.4 percent after soaring 5.2 percent. Egg prices advanced 2.2 percent, down dramatically from the 21.3 percent gain in the previous month. Fresh fruit prices rose just 0.3 percent following a sharp 7.8 percent gain in January. Vegetable prices, which shot up 7 percent in the previous month, rose 3.3 percent.

Local telephone service, which posted its sharpest-ever gain in January, 8.5 percent, still rose substantially last month with a gain of 3.0 percent. But the cost of all phone service moderated, rising 1.9 percent, down from the previous month's record 5.2 percent gain.

The increases generally are attributable to regulatory changes

LBJ ordered official killed, Estes quoted as telling grand jury

DALLAS (AP) — Convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes told a grand jury that Lyndon B. Johnson ordered the 1961 murder of a federal official who could have tied the late president to Estes' illegal activities, according to anonymous sources quoted by two newspapers today.

Two former Johnson associates denied the charges, and one of them branded Estes a publicity-seeking "pathological liar." A former aide to Johnson's widow said the charges were "scurrilous" and the sources stressed that Estes' secret testimony Tuesday had not been verified by other evidence.

The reports were published in today's editions of the Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald. The Bryan-College Station Eagle also published a copyright report on Estes' grand jury testimony in today's editions.

The three newspapers all quoted anonymous sources close to the grand jury investigation. Reporting of such testimony is unusual and the newspapers did not explain how they obtained the information.

Estes, testifying under a grant of immunity, said that when Johnson was vice president he met with Estes and other officials before the killing of U.S. Department of Agriculture official Henry M. Marshall, the three newspapers said.

Marshall was shot to death with a .22-caliber rifle on his farm in Franklin, 120 miles south of Dallas, on June 3, 1961. Estes claims Malcolm Wallace, who died in 1971, was responsible, the newspapers said.

Marshall's death stood on official records as a suicide for 23 years until the Robertson County grand jury ruled it a homicide Tuesday after hearing testimony from Estes. The grand jury also said there was no one left alive to indict.

Lady Bird Johnson, the president's widow, could not be reached for comment on the testimony Thursday, the Morning News said in its copyright story.

"All we will say is that Mrs. Johnson does not answer scurrilous attacks and comments such as that," said Liz Carpenter, who served as Mrs. Johnson's press secretary when Johnson was president.

The Times Herald said former aides to Johnson who were contacted Thursday night denied the allegations. Walter Jenkins, once Johnson's top assistant, told the newspaper Johnson met Estes only twice and not in the instances Estes reportedly described in his testimony.

"I just think that Billie Sol Estes is a con man and a pathological liar. He's just looking for publicity," said Robert Hardesty, another Johnson adviser and now president of Southwest Texas State University.

"It's just the word of an admitted con man," one grand juror told The Dallas Times Herald.

The three newspapers quoted sources as saying Estes testified that Johnson met with Estes, Wallace and an aide shortly before Marshall's death to discuss fears that Marshall could link Johnson to illegal dealings involving Estes and the USDA.

Estes was eventually convicted of a multi-million dollar fertilizer tank swindle that involved federal agricultural loans.

Estes told the grand jury that he and Marshall conducted more than 130 illegal cotton allotment transfers with Johnson's knowledge between January 1961 and the time Marshall was killed, the Times Herald and the Eagle quoted their sources as saying.

Estes alleged the illegal transfers were a method Johnson used to pay Estes off in exchange for the financial contributions he made to Johnson's political campaigns, the sources were quoted as saying.

The case, long a subject of intense gossip and rumor in Texas political circles, was reopened after Estes agreed to break his silence at the urging of U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples, 73, who has pursued the case for more than two decades, the Times Herald said.

On Thursday, Estes told the Times Herald his trust of Peoples persuaded him to testify and that he was surprised that there was so much interest in his statement.

"I've gotten over 200 phone calls on this," Estes said. "The only reason that I spoke about all that is my longstanding friendship with Peoples. I don't want to be involved in it."

Phone calls by The Associated Press to the number listed for Estes in Abilene were answered by his son, Billie Sol Estes Jr., who said his father was not available for comment.

Estes swore that Johnson approved the killing out of fear that Marshall would give Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy evidence that would incriminate Johnson, the newspapers said.

The sources said Estes testified that Wallace killed Marshall to protect Clifton Carter, whom Estes identified as one of Johnson's closest aides. Carter, who died in 1971, was for a time executive director and treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

The issuance and transfer of cotton allotments, as the federal cotton-growing licenses are called, required the approval of Marshall, a key official of the agency that oversaw the program in Texas.

Sources said Estes testified that although Marshall was personally honest, he took his orders from Carter, and at Carter's direction approved a number of cotton allotment transfers that would benefit Estes.

Meese nomination could be tied up for months

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's nominee for attorney general could be under a cloud for months as a special prosecutor untangles his finances and Democrats raise a cry over what Walter F. Mondale is calling "the sleaze factor" in the administration.

New disclosures arose even as Edwin Meese III was said to be ready to take the offense with a public point-by-point reply to every allegation against him.

Benefactor Edwin Thomas, whose $15,000 loan to Mrs. Meese caused an uproar at confirmation hearings, sent a letter to the Senate Judiciary Committee detailing two other loans to the Meese family.

Thomas said they were repaid — but said nothing about whether the $15,000 loan remains outstanding. Thomas, his wife, Gretchen, and his son, Tad, 22, all got federal posts after the Meeses moved to Washington.

Pampa teachers

subject competency "may or may not identify persons who should be removed from the classroom," the executive committee claimed.

TSTA supports improvements in the teacher evaluation system, but the system "should be based either on peer evaluation or on administrative evaluation," the executive committee report says. A partial peer evaluation process establishes a system "to pit peer against peer," a sharing of responsibility but not of authority necessary for an effective system.

TSTA recommended administrators should be trained "to complete a fair, objective evaluation."

Barker said evaluations of teachers would become "very critical." He said the proposed system could hurt experienced teachers since experienced teachers cost more than inexperienced or less experienced teachers. School districts would find it more financially beneficial to hire and keep the less experienced teachers.

SCOPE recommends the definition of basics should include not only reading, writing and arithmetic, but also higher order thinking skills and scientific and technological literacy.

The executive committee said TSTA supports current state law as it defines the curriculum for Texas public schools, including English language, arts, other languages to the extent possible, mathematics, science, health, physical education, fine arts, social studies, economics, business education, vocational education, and Texas and United States history.

Military alert in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Commanders throughout El Salvador ordered government troops on full alert after leftist rebels blew up an air force plane loaded with hundreds of ballot boxes for Sunday's presidential election, authorities said.

The C-123K troop transport blew up as it landed Thursday at an airstrip near San Miguel, 82 miles east of the capital, which the guerrillas had mined, wounding the pilot and co-pilot.

Col. Domingo Monterrosa, military commander for the eastern region, said destruction of the plane would make it difficult for him to deploy troops to guard polling places. But he said the ballot boxes aboard the aircraft were not damaged and will be distributed on schedule.

The plane, which can carry up to 58 soldiers with combat gear, was given to the Salvadoran air force by the United States in 1982 as part of a military assistance program.

Authorities canceled all leaves for the nation's 41,000-member military and police forces and said they took other top-priority alert measures which could not be disclosed for security reasons.

National Police chief Col. Carlos Lopez Nuila said in an interview, "The armed forces will be on the streets during and after the voting to allow the people to exercise the right to vote."

The country's police forces have been under military command since a January 1980 state of emergency imposed because of the civil war.

The formal end of campaigning came at midnight Wednesday, and coincided with a violent clash between supporters of the Christian Democratic Party, the Republican Nationalist Alliance and the National Conciliation Party in San Vicente.

Mitterrand cautions against ignoring poverty

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand of France says the quest for peace will be thwarted if the industrialized democracies "allow the underlying causes of war to prosper" by ignoring poverty and economic exploitation in developing nations.

In an address before a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives on Thursday, Mitterrand called for a new commitment by the West "to reduce the level of misery in the world."

"It is my conviction that many of the revolutions and wars in the Third World are rooted first of all in the soil of poverty and economic exploitation," said the French president, who began a two-day visit to Washington by discussing East-West relations with President Reagan.

Mitterrand's visit was continuing today with a round of meetings with high U.S. officials, including a return visit to the White House.

Michel Vauzelle, Mitterrand's spokesman, said the French president still hoped to meet the two leading Democratic presidential contenders, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Sen. Gary Hart.

Demonstrators arrested at Kissinger Austin talk

AUSTIN (AP) — Demonstrators who screamed at Henry Kissinger and were arrested as the former secretary of state attempted to speak at a campus auditorium violated the rules set for the protest, University of Texas officials said.

About 50 people were arrested Thursday, some inside the auditorium and some nearby, as Kissinger participated in a panel discussion on nuclear arms.

Kissinger, who sat with his arms folded as a woman screamed at him, said protesters who question the morals of the nations' leaders are "bound to ruin us."

"I have a question for you, Dr. Kissinger," the woman yelled as Kissinger was introduced. "What about Vietnam? What about Cambodia? What about Chile?"

She continued screaming until campus police pulled her out of the auditorium at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at UT.

Other protesters in the auditorium were arrested for unrolling a huge banner that said, in part, "Kissinger kills." Some of the sign-holders were dragged out.

Much of the audience cheered as the arrests were made and when Kissinger began speaking.

"This has been going on now since the 1960s," he said of the tactic. "These measures, which were refined in the 1960s, attack the motives and purposes of leaders of whatever administration and are bound to ruin us."

Geter advocates judicial system scrutiny

DALLAS (AP) — A black engineer who prosecutors admitted spent 16 months in prison for a crime he didn't commit says he hopes his case leads to improvements in the criminal judicial system.

"I hope they learn the lesson," Lenell Geter said Thursday, his first day of complete freedom in more than 1½ years. "There was no reason for me to be a suspect, for me to be convicted and for me to be sentenced to life."

"Nobody believed I was innocent. There was no presumption of innocence," he said.

District Attorney Henry Wade announced Wednesday that another suspect had been arrested in the $615 holdup of a fast-food restaurant and said his office was dismissing armed robbery charges against Geter.

He had been sentenced to life in prison, but was released in December when news accounts raised doubts about his guilt. Wade agreed at the time to a new trial, which was scheduled to begin April 9.

Wade claimed Geter's time behind prison bars were the result of mistaken identity.

But Geter and his attorneys say the case resulted from racism in the small, predominantly white Texas town of Greenville, shoddy police work and overzealous prosecutors.

"I was railroaded," Geter said Thursday. "I hope that as a result of my case, the judicial system will become well-oiled."

The 26-year-old black engineer said he can forgive those who sent him to prison.

"I hope that the system will be more careful to presume innocence instead of guilt," he said.

Geter spent Thursday morning in a limousine, driving back and forth between appearances on national news shows and accepting the congratulations of well-wishers. At one TV studio, two employees stopped in a hallway and asked to shake his hand.

He said a "shell game" using three similar cars was arranged late Wednesday night on Interstate 30 so that he could slip reporters "tailing me." He said he wanted to get some rest at a downtown Dallas hotel, but managed only 3½ hours.

"I just want to get back to work and get on with my life," he said.

Meanwhile, prosecutors defended their actions in the controversial case while other attorneys raised a key question: "Did the system work?"

Kerry Fitzgerald, a defense attorney and former prosecutor under Wade, said the case raised some fundamental questions about the effectiveness of prosecution techniques.

"I'm beginning to wonder if there is really a presumption of innocence in the courts," Fitzgerald said. "The system scares me. I am beginning to think that we really better start testing this business of, 'I'm sure it's so-and-so. I'd never forget that face.' Apparently jurors put a lot of stock in that and it's highly questionable in many cases."

Peter Lesser, another Dallas defense attorney, said he believed "there's enough blame here to go around for everyone."

The case, he said, raises a question of "how reliable is eyewitness testimony?"

Geter became the target of a police investigation in 1982 after an elderly white woman in Greenville reported that a black man sitting in a park frightened her.

Greenville Police Lt. James Fortenberry kept surveillance on Geter's apartment after the report and distributed his picture, labeled as a robbery suspect, to Dallas-area police departments.

Five eyewitnesses to an August 1982 robbery of a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant in suburban Balch Springs identified Geter, and he was convicted despite a lack of physical evidence and claims by co-workers that he was in the office on the day of the robbery.

Wade, in announcing Wednesday that prosecutors now believe Geter is innocent, said the new suspect, Curtis Eugene Mason, has been charged in Houston with four robberies and is being questioned about other holdups at Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants.

Panelists want more federal education funding

AUSTIN (AP) — The leaders of two national teacher organizations claim the Reagan administration has done little so far to achieve excellence in the classroom. A federal education official disagrees.

Teachers and non-teachers on a national education panel said Thursday the federal government must put out more money to improve the nation's schools.

Citizen panelists Anita Fonte of Tuscon, Ariz., and Carmen Gonzales of Austin, Tex., said residents of their communities were willing to pay higher taxes if they could be assured the extra money would go to education.

"They both want to pay more taxes. This is a unique gathering we're having," said panel moderator Douglas Cater, president of Washington College in Chestertown, Md.

The panel on priorities for the nation's schools was part of the program at the Second Presidential Library Conference on the Public and Public Policy. The Lyndon B. Johnson Library at the University of Texas co-sponsored the conference, which dealt with education, the federal budget and nuclear arms and national security.

"The three issues deeply concern us all," Lady Bird Johnson said in welcoming remarks. "The environment in which we explore them is the tense climate of a campaign year, when we are all eager to hear people make sense out of the problems which worry and sometimes even frighten us."

This (Reagan) administration was a catalyst in the whole question of education excellence," said Gary Jones, undersecretary of education in the U.S. Department of Education.

"That's not true," said Mary Futrell of Alexandria, Va., president of the National Education Association.

The laughter and applause that greeted Ms. Futrell's comment was so loud that Cater smiled and shouted, "Order in the house."

Jones said federal reports had "galvanized public opinion in this nation ... and we are part of that. And to presume, or to say, that we must now get on board because you people at the local level recognize that's it time to do something, I think that's not being fair to what this administration has been able to contribute to improving quality in our schools for the last year."

applauded, and Ms. Futrell responded. "The reform effort was underway long before the reports came out. It's erroneous to say that we did not start looking at how we can improve the schools until 1983. That's not true. We started way back in the '70s."

Frederick Haley of Tacoma, Wash., a citizen panelist, said, "It's not enough for the president of the United States to think he's leading in the field of education to urge putting prayer back in the classrooms and the paddle back in the principal's office."

Cater asked Haley if he thought the federal government should spend a greater percentage of the nation's financial resources on education, and Haley replied, "A much greater increase percentage of the gross national product."

Haley said the government provides 7 percent to 10 percent of most school budgets, "which sounds good but is a very limited percentage compared with the need. And if we're all agreed that there is a crisis, the federal government needs to do more about it."

Jones said there has been a 9 percent increase in federal funding for education since 1980, a 225 percent increase since 1970 and a 2,400 percent increase since 1960.

Cater asked if the federal government's percentage of total funding of education had declined, and Jones said it had fallen from 8 percent to 6.8 percent since "we've been in office."

He said, however, "The federal government has not been a complacent advocate for quality education."

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Regulator-proof caps real need

Once in a great while one is tempted to feel a degree of sympathy for the government regulatory addicts who are convinced that the path to safety is to treat everyone as potentially terminally irresponsible.

Most of the regulators are earnest, good-hearted souls. Do they ever wonder, amongst themselves, if they'll ever get anything right?

Remember the child-proof caps on aspirin and other medications that were required by federal regulations beginning in 1972. They were the butt of a lot of "only a child can open them" jokes and mild grumbling.

But they were more than an annoyance to many older people and people with arthritis, but slowly, haltingly, provisions were made to allow people who could certify that they didn't have children to purchase medicine with standard caps.

While many considered them an annoyance or an irritating reminder of misguided government paternalism, few suspected that they might actually be harmful to children.

It turns out that they may very well have been. Dr. W. Kup Viscusi, director for the Center for the Study of Business Regulations at Duke University, claims that the safety-cap regulation "on balance has failed because it may be leading to 3,500 additional poisonings of children under the age of 5 each year from analgesics (pain-killers)."

Aspirin poisonings of children under 5 dropped from 5 per 1,000 to 1.7 per 1,000 in 1980. This period, however, corresponded with declining aspirin sales and increased sales of non-aspirin pain relievers. There was a corresponding increase in non-aspirin poisonings during the same period, and an increase in non-analgesic poisonings from 1.1 per 1,000 to 1.5 per 1,000.

How could this be? "People assume these caps are child-proof, and they aren't," says Dr. Viscusi. Parents "have been lulled into a less safety-conscious mode of behavior by the existence of safety caps. The presumed effectiveness of the technological solution may have induced increased parental irresponsibility."

That's the best explanation he has for the fact that 47 percent of the increase in child poisonings was due to an otherwise "unexplained upward shift in the analgesic poisoning rate beginning in 1972," which happens to be the year the safety-cap rule went into effect.

Is it possible that the key to increased safety is informing people of potential dangers and urging them to take responsibility for themselves rather than writing regulations designed to eliminate all real and imagined dangers from the environment? Does the existence of a government devoted to caring for our safety each waking and sleeping hour make us less safe rather than more safe?

It wouldn't do for a devoted regulator to have such disturbing thoughts. Those people out there need constant protection. They key must be to write even more stringent regulations. The notion that people can and ought to take care of themselves is arrant heresy. Don't you feel safer now?

Campaign speech in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (NEA) - The night is warm and cloudless.

It's difficult to estimate the crowd. There could be hundreds milling in the small park and lining the top of a steep bluff in Excalon, San Salvador's very-high-rent district, or there could be several times as many.

This is "d'Aubuisson territory," and the figure in the uniform-like open-necked shirt on the speaker's platform under the floodlights is Roberto d'Aubuisson. He is the candidate of the National Republican Alliance (ARENA) for president of El Salvador in the March 25 election.

Taut, dark-haired, in his 40s, handsome in a hyper-intense fashion, d'Aubuisson has been compared to Adolf Hitler in charismatic appeal.

There's none of the Feuhrer's rolling thunder in d'Aubuisson's staccato delivery. He comes across more like a revved up Dan Rather.

But it works. Chatter stills instantly as his voice pours from the loudspeakers.

"The Christian Democrats say they are going to nationalize the banks. They say they are going to take over foreign commerce. They are a bunch of thieves."

There is no question where d'Aubuisson stands in this campaign. He speaks for the country's haves, who, he says, are engaged in a "war of attrition" to hold what they have.

It won't, he promises, be an easy struggle but, "shoulder to shoulder with our armed forces, we have the capacity to protect what is ours."

There is some question, however, whether the military wants to march all that closely. D'Aubuisson left the army four years ago under murky circumstances and has been linked to the death squads. If he won, it could have a chilling effect on American aid, upon which the colonels are hooked.

That concern is shared at the American Embassy, where d'Aubuisson, although not familiar, is known familiarly as "Major Bob."

D'Aubuisson ridicules his "wacky" opponent, Christian Democrat Jose

Napoleon Duarte.

"Today he came out and said he was a man of free enterprise. He said, 'Businessmen, I like you.' But he didn't finish what he was really saying. Yeah, he likes them - he likes to screw them."

He promises to counter the "left jab" of Duarte and the Christian Democrats with a "strong punch from the right" on the 25th.

But winning the presidency, he warns, will be only the start. A lasting triumph requires staying power, and it is up to youth to provide it. Those in the universities must "persuade and direct your classmates."

And the persuasion shouldn't stop there.

"We also must start in the high schools to organize committees of ARENA kids," d'Aubuisson exhorts.

In a later conversation, a concerned father reports that children in his 12-year-old daughter's school are made intensely aware of being different if it is known their parents are not ARENA sympathizers.

D'Aubuisson is winding up with a joke. One that is, he says, too true to be really funny. It is about a man caught in a flood who repeatedly refuses rescue because he trusts God to save him. He drowns, and in heaven asks why he had not been saved.

"Come on," is the reply. "Didn't I send you two boats and a helicopter?"

Salvadorans, d'Aubuisson shouts, already have their means of rescue at hand. The crowd applauds and breaks into a chant ("ARENA! ARENA!") as d'Aubuisson delivers his punch line:

"Let it never happen that when God finally calls us that we should complain and God should say to us, 'But I sent you that army, and I sent you that party.'"

And finally: "Long live ARENA! Long live Salvadoran youth! And long live the armed forces!"

More applause and chanting ("Patria Si! Comunismo No!"), a party song ("Tremble, tremble Communists") and the crowd begins to break up.

The hundreds - or thousands - drift off into the warm night.

Big Mo for Sen. Dimblebutton

The group from Argyle, Argyle and Sox Advertising Agency was ushered into Senator Dimblebutton's office. They were there to get the account for Senator Dimblebutton's political race.

"Senator," said the vice president of AAS&S, "we've worked on a campaign that is going to knock your eyes out."

The AAS&S creative VP said, "We're going to give you something that your opponent doesn't have."

Two flunkies set up an easel and put a large white sign covered by a cloth on it.

"Get ready for this, Senator," a VP said.

The cloth was pulled off. There was one large word, "MOMENTUM."

The advertising men all looked at the senator for his reaction.

"That's it?" the senator asked.

"What do you mean, that's it? This is going to get you reelected for the next six years. Our research people have been working on this campaign for six months, and passed a car with a driver who looked exactly like Dimblebutton's opponent, and as the TV commercial ended, Dimblebutton was 50 yards ahead of his opponent."

"It says it all in 30 seconds," the VP said.

"Don't you want me to do any TV commercials stating where I stand on unemployment, the Soviet threat, and how the big interests are taking over the country?"

"You'd be wasting your money. The only thing the voter is interested in is a candidate's momentum. If he has it they want to be on his side because America likes winners."

"I see your point," the senator said. "But aren't we putting all our eggs in one basket with a momentum campaign? Couldn't we have some backup commercials emphasizing my charisma?"

"Charisma is old hat. Look what it did to John Glenn. This is new, this is fresh, and if you don't mind my saying so, sir, with your voting record, momentum is the only thing you've got going for you."

"It's not just the advertising campaign that will put you over," a VP said. "The media is crazy about a candidate who has momentum. Look at Gary Hart. Before he ran in Iowa and New Hampshire no one knew he was in the race. But after those victories, the press could talk about nothing but Hart's 'M spot.' How did the political pundits explain it? Very simply. They said Hart had momentum and Mondale lost it."

"Okay, you persuaded me," the senator said. "How much will it cost me?"

"Ten million dollars, including the jogging suit."

"That's a lot of money."

"Senator, that's the beauty of momentum. Once the lobbyists think you have it, the campaign money starts dropping from the sky like acid rain."

Revolution behind the cameras

Christine Craft - who has appeared more in the court - room than on TV lately - is pioneering new attitudes for women in broadcasting. Thank goodness.

The 39-year-old Ms. Craft, as we all know, recently won her case for the second time against the Kansas City station that dumped her for being "too old and unattractive." Her testimony about how stations had required her to change her hair color, dye her eyebrows and follow a clothing calendar is already having an impact on young women just moving into prime time.

It is giving them the courage to insist on being valued for their professional skills rather than their looks.

For example, Mary Ann Hatchitt, 26, recently named to co-anchor the nightly news at an Albuquerque television station, says, "I'm not going to be just a Barbie doll reading words."

Her comment reminded me of the late Jessica Savitch who decided to write an autobiographical account of her gussy struggle to the top after hearing a third-grader define an anchorwoman as, "I think it's when they pay you a lot of money to look pretty and read words on television."

Like Jessica Savitch, Mary Ann Hatchitt worked hard to be a good reporter. For nearly three years, she has been weened anchor, spending her Saturdays and Sundays out on the streets, covering local stories - including the occasional body found floating in the Rio Grande River. She is used to writing and editing her own script and producing her own TV show.

Now her face is going up on billboards and smiling out from milk cartons and friends are calling her "star." People at the station are also making suggestions about her clothes and makeup.

"For the time being, I'm listening," she says, "because they are trying to be helpful and constructive. I haven't paid much attention to clothes and for 10 years my mom has been complaining, 'Why don't you put some lipstick on?'"

Her Irish eyes light up her gamin face as she says, "Maybe this new job is divine retribution."

But, she adds, there's no way she's going to change her hair color and she hopes the suggestions "don't go on much longer."

The women in the industry who went before her, however, had to put up with a lot of window dressing. Veteran network TV reporter Judy Woodruff said that when she became a TV news anchor in Atlanta in 1972, her bosses ordered her to cut her shoulder-length hair. A New York broadcaster told how she was urged to change the color of her eyes with tinted contact lenses.

Christine Craft said she once balked at what a boss wanted. It was almost a decade ago when she was doing weather at a California station. During a heat wave, she was asked to do the forecast in a bikini. Instead she showed up in an 1890s swim suit.

It's encouraging that these women are now speaking candidly of what's been going on behind the cameras. Their voices are getting stronger as their numbers increase. In 1972, according to one industry survey, only 11 percent of the nation's news anchors were women. Now, 36 percent are.

Knowing these women detest being treated like products instead of persons is just the first step, however. We, the viewers, have to become more sensible about what we want, too.

What good will it do these women to spend years learning to be knowledgeable and neutral - if all the public wants is a young and pretty face.

With inflation, border residents look north again

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer
REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — Mexicans along the 1,760-mile border with the United States shopped in American stores for decades, until a severe recession two years ago forced them to shop at home. But now, they're slowly going back, both out of habit and because inflation in the border zone higher than the national average has made American goods competitive again.

The trend is most visible in the relatively more prosperous stretch along the California border, in cities like Tijuana. Here, in northeastern Mexico south of Texas, the return to shopping across the border still is incipient as poorer residents struggle to survive.

"We don't have the buying power on either side of the border," said Miguel Valdes Revilla, mayor of this city across the border from Texas' Rio Grande Valley.

The door to the United States slammed for many border residents in 1982 following three major peso devaluations. The shock waves were felt by American merchants who had grown increasingly dependent on Mexican customers.

A $10 lunch for two at a U.S. diner cost a Mexican couple about 270 pesos in February 1982. Now it costs 1,700 pesos for a $10 meal — two and a half days pay for the worker earning the minimum wage of 680 pesos a day.

Under the gradual devaluation ordered last fall by President Miguel de la Madrid, the value of the peso is slipping another 13 centavos each day. So Mexicans need an extra peso every eight days to buy a dollar.

"Despite the exchange rate, it appears Mexico will once again give up its border residents to the U.S. economy," says Jorge Bustamante, director of the Tijuana-based Border Studies Center of Northern Mexico and one of Mexico's foremost experts on the border.

"The tendency is toward going back to business as usual. That is, Mexican consumers buying American products," he said in a telephone interview.

Barring unforeseen circumstances such as another major peso devaluation, Bustamante predicted that Mexican shoppers should be back in full force in U.S. border cities within three years, two years in California.

Mexico's national inflation rate hit 100 percent in 1982 and 80 percent last year, but Tijuana's 1983 inflation rate was 150 percent.

The rate in Matamoros, on the Gulf of Mexico south of Brownsville, Texas, was 95 percent and the rate in all other border cities fell somewhere in between, according to figures gathered by the Border Studies Center. The soaring prices of Mexican goods have made American products competitive again, and the tradition of shopping in the United States for prestige and, often, availability of goods adds to the attraction.

"The higher the inflation the closer the gap between the prices of Mexican-made products and American-made products," Bustamante said. The situation in Reynosa, Matamoros, Nuevo Laredo and the other towns across the border from southeast Texas, one of the most underdeveloped areas of the United States, is harsher than in northwestern Mexico across the border from prosperous southern California. Bustamante said Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, Texas, "is truly the middle point" in terms of economic health.

"The closer you get to California the better off you are," he said. "Tijuana is going back to normal faster than Ciudad Juarez and Ciudad Juarez is going faster than Matamoros." Although many products now are cheaper, of better quality and more readily available on the U.S. side of the border, many border residents here still must do without or with a lot less than two years ago. "Those who ate meat four times a week now eat it once a week," said Mario Cesar Trevino, a Reynosa bakery owner. "We'd be lying if we said we didn't have less."

He said he's compared prices and found that many items — meat, for example — now cost less in the United States. The cost of running his business has skyrocketed because of inflation. "Two years ago, 50 pounds of lard cost 1,500 pesos, now it's 3,300 pesos," Trevino said. "Fifteen tons of flour cost 15,000 to 18,000 pesos, now it's 46,000."

Valdes says one of the keys to the economic recovery of the border is to keep consumers in Mexico. "The Mexican people made shopping in the United States a way of life," he said. "That's our problem and now it's difficult to change the psychology of the people."

Church's curate to be ordained Monday night

James H. Tolbert, a native of El Paso, will be ordained to the Sacred Order of Priests at 7 p.m. Monday at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.

The Rt. Rev. Sam B. Hulsey, former rector of St. Matthew's and now bishop of the Diocese of Northwest Texas, will ordain Tolbert.

Tolbert is a 1970 graduate of Austin High School at El Paso, a 1975 graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor of science degree in education, and a 1983 graduate of the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest at Austin.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Tolbert of El Paso, Tolbert is married to the former Debra Dixon of El Paso.

Before entering seminary, he was a high school English and history teacher at Lubbock. He also worked for a stock brokerage firm at San Francisco, Calif.

Tolbert will be presented to the bishop for ordination by Rev. Richard E. Simpson, vicar of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Durant, Iowa; Rev. Aristide J. Joyce, vicar, St. Phillip's Episcopal Church, Amarillo; Rev. William C. Houghton, rector, St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Borger; and Rev. Ronald L. McCrary, rector, St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Pampa.

Also presenting Tolbert will be Mrs. Debra Tolbert, Paul Hinton, senior warden; O. C. Penn, junior warden; and Mrs. Holly Burger, ECW president, all of St. Matthew's.

Other participants in the service will be Rev. Mary H. Schrom, Canyon, litanist; Mrs. Jan Ragsdale, Ernest Wilkinson and Clark Grundler, Pampa, lectors; Rev. J. Edwin Heathcock, Amarillo, gospelist, and Rev. T. James Bethell, Austin, preacher.

Jim and Debra are residing in Pampa, where he is serving as curate of St. Matthew's.

REV. AND MRS. CALVIN OYLER

Special services at First Nazarene Church

Rev. Calvin Oyler is conducting services as evangelist and singer for the rest of the week through Sunday night at the First Church of the Nazarene, 500 N. Cuyler.

Rev. Oyler has been a pastor, evangelist and chairman of the Department of Music at Vennard College. He has taken graduate work in music.

Services will be nightly at 7 p.m. today and Saturday and at 10:45 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sunday.

The public is invited to attend the special services.

The Isbell Singers to be at Assembly of God Sunday

The Isbell Singers will be in singing ministry at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler.

The Isbell Singers, a family group, have been singing together for more than 10 years. They have been in fulltime ministry since 1982. They attended the Blackwood Brothers National School of Christian Music, studying piano and voice under some of the top instructors in Christian music from across the country.

The Isbells were honored by being asked to host the music for the 55th birthday of their hometown, Stinnett, in 1981. They also sang at the Texas State Fair in Dallas in 1981. They have also sung with the Blackwood Brothers on various occasions.

Pastor John Farina invites the public to attend "this praise service, an uplifting evening for all."

A nursery will be provided.

Last services in old parish hall

Special services are planned Sunday morning at the Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan, in observance of the last service to be held in the old parish hall.

The parish hall building, which was the first schoolhouse in Gray County and has been used by the church since 1942, has been sold and will be moved off the site Monday.

Zion Lutheran has constructed a new parish hall on adjacent property and will have services there after this week.

Most churches have changed positions on school prayer

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

While many of the arguments about prayer in the schools have remained the same since the Supreme Court banned it in 1962, most of America's churches have changed their positions 180 degrees.

Most major Protestant denominations, once favoring school prayer, now oppose it, based on actions of their conventions since the 1962 banning of school-sponsored prayers by the U.S. Supreme Court.

But an overwhelming proportion of Americans, as measured by Gallup and other surveys, favor such prayers, 75 to 80 percent of them.

The biggest Protestant body, the Southern Baptists, traditionally among the strongest advocates of church-state separation and formerly against school-sponsored prayers, now at times swings the other way.

Its 1982 convention came out in support of such prayers, but its 1983 convention said it supports the Constitution's First Amendment, without saying whether or not it is seen as allowing such prayers.

The denomination's president, the Rev. James Draper, has backed President Reagan's proposed amendment, saying it provides for "fully voluntary prayer" without it being state-prescribed.

Bishops of the nation's biggest church, Roman Catholicism, which once opposed school prayers because they were predominantly Protestant, now say they favor allowing public school prayers.

The proposed amendment also should include the "right voluntarily to receive religious instruction" in keeping with students' faith traditions, says the bishops' secretary, the Rev. Daniel F. Hoye.

Eastern Orthodox denominations also favor public school prayers, as does the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, a large, conservative Protestant body, along with many relatively small, conservative denominations of the National Association of Evangelicals.

Jewish organizations oppose such group prayers in public schools.

RETREAD

Years of service, covering many miles, and carrying heavy loads have taken their toll on this tire, however, if you put it in the hands of an expert, this tire may be rebuilt, and renewed for years of service.

How like the tire we are, working at home or on the job, meeting the challenges that come up each day. How good it is then to enter the house of the Lord, and let our Master remold, rebuild, and strengthen us for the days ahead.

Attend church regularly and receive the benefits of a bountiful love.

C Coleman Adv.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Church group unhappy with court decision

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Discipline within a church should be settled by the congregation, not the courts, according to a spot survey of Church of Christ members attending the ninth annual International Soul-Winning Workshop in Tulsa.

"Too much government intervention in religious affairs" is how Darlene M. Reed of Chula Vista, Calif., characterized a Tulsa jury's $390,000 award to Marina Guinn, who claimed Collinsville Church of Christ elders told the congregation of her "sin of fornication" and asked church members not to associate with her.

"I think it's a sad situation in the heart of America when the state starts telling the church how to run its affairs, whether it's the Church of Christ, Methodist, Lutheran or whatever," added Bennie Whitehead.

"When the government and the court of law tell you how to run your church, you have no more religious freedom," Whitehead said.

Vietnam syndrome still lingers across the land

By BARRY SCHWEID AP Diplomatic Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is entering the election campaign with a foreign policy that aims at containing the Soviet Union and deterring terrorism — sometimes with the force of U.S. arms.

The will is clearly there — to promote an Arab-Israeli settlement, for instance. The Vietnam syndrome of the 1970s, discouraging U.S. actions abroad, has not taken hold at the White House.

But it still lingers across the land, generating pressure for the withdrawal of the Marines from Beirut after more than 250 of them fell victim to terrorist bombings and sniper attacks and making any sustained U.S. effort anywhere around the globe questionable.

The administration has been willing to extend American power in Central America, the Middle East, or in the Persian Gulf, if oil supplies are threatened by the war between Iran and Iraq.

New U.S. missiles were deployed in Western Europe, targeted on the Soviets. Marines and Rangers took Grenada to uproot a leftist regime. The fleet patrols the Caribbean and Mediterranean to demonstrate U.S. resolve. Americans are training Salvadorans and Hondurans, and anti-Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua are getting U.S. aid.

The administration has also made a special point of condemning state-supported terrorism. It linked Syria and Iran to the attack last October on U.S. Marine headquarters near Beirut. Libya also provokes occasional wrath. A few days ago, U.S. reconnaissance planes were sent to Egypt to deter Libya from attacking the Sudan.

Clearly, the Reagan administration is projecting American might with a vigor unseen since the end of the Vietnam War a decade ago.

But restraint is mixed in with the rhetoric. Despite repeated threats to retaliate for the bombing of Marine headquarters, the United States held its fire. Reagan imposed minor sanctions when the Soviets shot down a South Korean commercial airliner with 61 Americans among the 269 victims.

The realities of a nuclear age probably have a lot to do with limiting the use of force.

So does a historical instinct for isolationism, which was reinforced by more than 55,000 American deaths.

Consequently, the administration has banked largely on traditional diplomacy to extend U.S. influence.

Genealogical queries always welcome

By GENA WALLS

When the county or area you are searching borders another state remember to check both states. An example would be the Territory of Colorado in 1860. The census was taken when this territory was still a part of Kansas and showed a population of about 34,000 residents.

The State Department of Health, Records and Statistics Section, 4210 East 11th Avenue, Denver, Colo., 80220, has some delayed birth and death records dating to the early 1860s. Officials will make a general search when only an approximate date is given and will refund the fee if the search only takes a few minutes using indexed records.

A quarterly magazine, "The Colorado Genealogist," has published some early marriages for the period 1849-1878. This is a publication of the Colorado Genealogical Society and the address is P.O. Box 9654, Denver, Colo., 80209.

Mrs. Rosa Bearden, 1017 S. Hobart, Pampa is researching the RICHARDSON and WOMACK families in Cannon County, Tennessee in 1880 and would like to correspond with others searching these lines. The RICHARDSON family was living in Smith County, Texas in 1900 and her grandmother was MARY ANN WORLEY RICHARDSON.

Mrs. Jossie McPherson, P.O. Box 1203, Pampa would like your help in proving the parentage of her grandfather THOMAS JEFFERSON BELL. He married MARY PARILEE CARTER and both were from Tennessee. Brothers of THOMAS JEFFERSON BELL were William, John, Henry Zedic and Vern and family history has the family born in middle Tennessee.

Dear Abby

France ages as wedding nears

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm confused. I am a 22-year-old woman engaged to be married, but here is the problem: When we met, he said he was 37. A few months later he confessed that he was 42. A month ago, when he asked me to marry him, I hesitated because of the 20-year difference in our ages, but I decided to marry him anyway because I really cared for him.

Yesterday I found out his real age: He's 49—soon to be 50!

What should I do?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: The important issue here is not so much his "real" age, as his real character. He's not honest. If he gets to 55, sell.

DEAR ABBY: I am 30 years old. My husband is 34. We've been married for six years. My husband's job requires him to travel occasionally.

A few days after his last trip he asked me if I had written on the bottoms of his shoes! I said no. After carefully studying the fading writing, I deciphered it to read, "Ed was here and enjoyed every minute of it." I couldn't read the rest of it very well, but made this out: "I'll never forget the fun we had slam dancing at The Mission. Thanks for the memories. Love always, Maurice."

My husband swears up and down he doesn't know how the writing got there. I maintain that shoes are either on one's feet or in the closet. I also called long-distance to the city where my husband had been, and there is a lounge named The Mission. Also, the writing was on the instep where it would not be apt to wear off like it would if it were written on the ball of the shoe.

What do you think? Should I be suspicious?

SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: You say your husband asked you if you had written on the bottoms of his shoes. Had he been guilty of any wrongdoing, he would not have called your attention to it. Write it off as the work of a practical joker.

DEAR ABBY: After about 1,000 attempts, my wife and I finally quit smoking 20 years ago. Much to my sorrow, I recently discovered that she has been smoking behind my back.

Our four grown children are hopelessly hooked on cigarettes, and when they visit us, the house is blue with smoke. I have asked them repeatedly not to smoke in the house, but my requests have been ignored.

I'm on heart medication, but I've never used that fact as an objection to their smoking around me.

As a "solution," my wife bought a small air filter gadget, which is about as effective as an eyedropper in a forest fire.

What options can you offer the man of the house?

SMOKED OUT

DEAR SMOKED OUT: Tell your children that you are on heart medication and cannot tolerate smoke in your home. If they ignore your request, show them the door and tell them if they want to see their father, you'll be glad to meet them in a park sometime.

While looking through my files for column ideas, I came across a list of things which made absolutely no sense. This may not come as a surprise to those of you who are habitual readers of this column, but it frustrated the hound out of me. I thought maybe some of you could make some sense out of them, so here they are:

Why is it that we hear of some old codger who has lived to be 103, has never seen a doctor or been in a hospital, who drinks whiskey like a fish, smokes 30 cigars a day, has a million billion dollars—and he always attributes his longevity to clean living and black strap molasses.

I'm absolutely certain that

If my body were frozen for the future I would end up with freezer burn.

I have the terrible feeling that I'll spend the rest of my life pushing when I should be pulling, spindling when I should be folding, and trying to figure out which direction north is.

How is it that a man can complain loudly about uncivilized nations, but can track mud all over the floor and not think a thing about it.

Refrigerators are a puzzle—they produce more leftovers than ever were put into them, cultivate more different kinds of mold than a medical lab, and still manage to hide the butter, the mustard, and the last egg.

If ever I am accused of murder, I'll go to the gas chamber for sure. I never would come up with an alibi, since I can't remember where I've been from one day to the next.

And finally—I'm lucky. I get paid to be crazy.

FOR THE BIRDS—An unidentified man finds himself the center of attention as he proves a worthy perch for pigeons at Los Angeles' MacArthur Park. (AP Laserphoto)

Cold brings rare birds to Japan

TOKYO (AP) — This year's unusually harsh winter has filled Japan's skies and gardens with hundreds of rarely seen northern birds, bringing joy to the nation's birdwatchers and problems for resident species facing increased competition for reduced food supplies.

The winter migratory birds from Siberia and the Arctic region, such as geese and swans, have come this year in twice their usual force, while some birds are being spotted this year for the first time in decades, according to members of the 13,000-member Wild Bird Society of Japan.

The birds apparently have been driven further south than normally this winter by a cold front, with upper air temperatures of around -49 F hovering over eastern Siberia. Japan, influenced by the front, has also shivered through one of its coldest and snowiest winters in years, with about half a dozen snowfalls in the usually mild Tokyo region.

Mamoru Takahashi, a staff member of the Wild Bird Society's branch in Saitama Prefecture, just north of Tokyo, said that on one day in mid-January, birdwatchers counted 21,500 geese and swans — double the usual number — at the Izunuma marshland area of northern Japan.

In Izumi City, noted as a winter home for migratory cranes in southwestern Japan, as many as 8,500 of the Siberian birds have been seen this winter, exceeding last year's record of 7,550, city official Masaaki Mori said.

Hooded cranes and white-necked cranes come in great numbers every year, but this year, two Canadian cranes and four black cranes, rarely seen in Japan, were spotted in the city's paddy fields and lakes, Mori said.

Some of the rarest birds have been sighted around Shari-cho, a town facing the Sea of Okhotsk on the farthest reaches of Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido.

Noboru Ose, chief of natural environmental protection in the town office, said 60 glaucous gulls had been spotted — the first time they've been seen in 10 years — and other uncommon visitors were the white falcon, snowy owl and white-tailed sea eagle.

Every day, he said, dozens of amateur photographers line up with telephoto lenses.

Greek farmers put tourists to work harvesting oranges

Hundreds of unemployed back-packers from the United States, Europe and South America flock here every fall to provide cheap labor for farmers in this fertile region who grow over half of Greece's orange crop. The orange-pickers squat in empty houses in Nauplion and nearby villages, sleep in mountain caves or camp out in the open.

Nauplion residents are wary of the penniless foreigners who move in for winter and work without residence or labor permits.

But the fruit farmers say the 600-odd foreigners are vital to the local economy. A police officer in Nauplion admitted authorities turn a blind eye to infringements of the permit rules.

"We can't judge what sort of people they are but if it wasn't for them our oranges would still be on the trees. Greeks demand twice as much money," Panayotis Mantavelis, who employs five orange-pickers a day for his 800 trees, told The Associated Press.

The orange-pickers, who gather in Nauplion's main square every morning waiting for the farmers to come and take as many workers as they need for the day, get paid up to 1,500 drachmas ($15) for eight hours' work.

"It's hard work picking the oranges. You get nasty scratches from thorns on the trees and backache from bending over to collect the oranges on the ground," said Mark Evans, 34, from Berkeley, Calif.

Orange grove owners say it's easier and cheaper to send their fruit to Eastern bloc countries.

"Every orange that goes to the EEC (European Economic Community) has to be specially stamped, and carefully wrapped and packaged," said Dimitrios Tsiros, president of the Assine Orange Growers. But Tsiros said despite using cheap imported labor, the farmers still can't make ends meet.

Cold brings rare birds to Japan

TOKYO (AP)—This year's unusually harsh winter has filled Japan's skies and gardens with hundreds of rarely seen northern birds, bringing joy to the nation's birdwatchers and problems for resident species facing increased competition for reduced food supplies.

The winter migratory birds from Siberia and the Arctic region, such as geese and swans, have come this year in twice their usual force, while some birds are being spotted this year for the first time in decades, according to members of the 13,000-member Wild Bird Society of Japan.

The birds apparently have been driven further south than normally this winter by a cold front, with upper air temperatures of around -49 F hovering over eastern Siberia, Japan, influenced by the front, has also shivered through one of its coldest and snowiest winters in years, with about half a dozen snowfalls in the usually mild Tokyo region.

Mamoru Takahashi, a staff member of the Wild Bird Society's branch in Saitama Prefecture, just north of Tokyo, said that on one day in mid-January, birdwatchers counted 21,500 geese and swans — double the usual number — at the Izunuma marshland area of northern Japan.

In Izumi City, noted as a winter home for migratory cranes in southwestern Japan, as many as 8,500 of the Siberian birds have been seen this winter, exceeding last year's record of 7,550, city official Masaaki Mori said.

Hooded cranes and white-necked cranes come in great numbers every year, but this year, two Canadian cranes and four black cranes, rarely seen in Japan, were spotted in the city's paddy fields and lakes, Mori said.

Some of the rarest birds have been sighted around Shari-cho, a town facing the Sea of Okhotsk on the farthest reaches of Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido.

Noboru Ose, chief of natural environmental protection in the town office, said 60 glaucous gulls had been spotted — the first time they've been seen in 10 years — and other uncommon visitors were the white falcon, snowy owl and white-tailed sea eagle.

Every day, he said, dozens of amateur photographers line up with telephoto lenses

Greek farmers put tourists to work harvesting oranges

Hundreds of unemployed back-packers from the United States, Europe and South America flock here every fall to provide cheap labor for farmers in this fertile region who grow over half of Greece's orange crop. The orange-pickers squat in empty houses in Nauplion and nearby villages, sleep in mountain caves or camp out in the open.

Nauplion residents are wary of the penniless foreigners who move in for winter and work without residence or labor permits.

But the fruit farmers say the 600-odd foreigners are vital to the local economy. A police officer in Nauplion admitted authorities turn a blind eye to infringements of the permit rules.

"We can't judge what sort of people they are but if it wasn't for them our oranges would still be on the trees. Greeks demand twice as much money," Panayotis Mantavelis, who employs five orange-pickers a day for his 800 trees, told The Associated Press.

The orange-pickers, who gather in Nauplion's main square every morning waiting for the farmers to come and take as many workers as they need for the day, get paid up to 1,500 drachmas ($15) for eight hours' work.

"It's hard work picking the oranges. You get nasty scratches from thorns on the trees and backache from bending over to collect the oranges on the ground," said Mark Evans, 34, from Berkeley, Calif.

Orange grove owners say it's easier and cheaper to send their fruit to Eastern bloc countries.

"Every orange that goes to the EEC (European Economic Community) has to be specially stamped, and carefully wrapped and packaged," said Dimitrios Tsiros, president of the Assine Orange Growers'. But Tsiros said despite using cheap imported labor, the farmers still can't make ends meet.

BOARD BATTLE— North Carolina's teammate Brad Daugherty (42) during the Sam Perkins (41) pulls in the ball from Indiana's Marty Simmons (50) and Thursday night. Indiana won, 72-68.

Indiana stuns Tar Heels

By The Associated Press
The Indiana Hoosiers, unranked and an underdog, once again found a Knight in shining armor. And that was enough to pierce the title dreams of No. 1 North Carolina.

Freshman Steve Alford scored 27 points as Indiana, playing the tough man-to-man defense synonymous with Coach Bobby Knight, eliminated the Tar Heels 72-68 Thursday night in an NCAA East Regional semifinal game in Atlanta.

Indiana led 59-47 with 5:36 remaining before missing four straight front ends of one-and-one free-throw opportunities. North Carolina took advantage and pulled within two before Alford took over and sunk six foul shots and Mike Gjomri added two more with five seconds left to preserve the victory.

"Our free throw shooting is usually a key to our winning," Alford said. "I think tomorrow we'll be working on it."

"We just had trouble getting things going on offense and they made their shots," said

All-American Sam Perkins, who led North Carolina with 26 points.

Said the Tar Heels' other All-American, Michael Jordan, who scored just 13 before fouling out with 1:11 left: "Things just didn't seem to go our way."

The triumph sends Indiana, 22-8, into the East final Saturday against unranked Virginia, which surprised No. 18 Syracuse 63-55 in the opening semifinal game. The winner advances to the Final Four in Seattle.

In the Midwest Regional semifinals Thursday night in Lexington, Ky., sixth-ranked Illinois stopped No. 11 Maryland 72-70 and then No. 3 Kentucky downed Louisville 72-67. Illinois and Kentucky play Saturday for the Midwest crown.

The Midwest and West Regionals are tonight. In the Midwest matchups in St. Louis, fifth-ranked Houston, 29-4, takes on No. 16 Memphis State, 26-6, and then No. 4 DePaul, 27-2, plays No. 19 Wake Forest, 22-8.

In the West games in Los Angeles, Dayton, 20-10, goes against No. 15

Washington, 24-6, while second-ranked Georgetown, 30-3, tangles with No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas, 29-5.

The results in the Midwest produced a rematch of an early-season game that saw Kentucky edge Illinois 56-54 on a last-second shot.

Kentucky, playing on its home court, avenged an overtime loss to Louisville in last year's NCAA tournament by pulling away from the Cardinals in the second half.

Guards Jim Master and Dicky Beal scored 15 points apiece for the winning Wildcats, 28-3, while 6-foot-11 forward Melvin Turpin had 14.

Louisville, 24-11, used a scrappy full-court press and took advantage of 12 Kentucky turnovers in taking a 36-32 lead at halftime.

But Kentucky roared back to go ahead 61-53 with 4:36 left to play before Milt Wagner, who had 22, scored four points to key an 8-2 spurt that pulled Louisville within 63-61 with three minutes left.

Pampa hosts Estacado in District 1-4A contest

Pampa, riding an 8-game winning streak will meet defending District 1-4A co-champion Lubbock Estacado at 1 p.m. Saturday at the PHS field.

"This will probably be the toughest team we face," said Butler, whose Harvesters are 9-3 overall and winners of two tournaments at Hereford and Pampa.

Butler said senior righthander Devin Cross would probably start on the mound for the Harvesters, who defeated Canyon, 5-2, Tuesday in the district opener. Canyon shared the district title with Estacado last season.

Estacado lost fireballing pitcher Wayne Dotson to the Major League draft, but the Matadors still have a strong senior ballclub loaded with speed and power.

Pampa coaches picked senior outfielder Charles Wuest as Player of the Week after hitting .400 with two RBI and two runs scored in the Pampa Tournament last week.

"Charles also made some good defensive plays," Butler said.

Wuest is a three-year starter for the Harvesters.

Ragin' Cajuns rout Santa Clara

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Southwestern Louisiana's basketball team played taller than expected against Santa Clara in the National Invitation Tournament.

"We knew that getting on the boards was going to be very important for us against such a big team and we hit the boards hard," said Graylin Warner after leading the Ragin' Cajuns to a 97-76 rout of Santa Clara in a quarterfinal game Thursday night.

Overall, the Cajuns outbounded the bigger Broncos 46-26, and it paid off in a lot of second and third shots. Warner was their leading scorer with 22 points.

The victory sent the Cajuns into the NIT semifinals Monday night at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Michigan also gained a semifinal berth with a 63-62 victory Thursday over Xavier.

The other two semifinalists will be determined tonight when Notre Dame plays at Pittsburgh and Tennessee visits Virginia Tech.

Led by Warner, all five Southwestern Louisiana starters scored in double figures. Warner scored 14 of his points in the first half and USL, 23-8, went ahead for good with 15:12 left before halftime.

USL's Dion Brown set the tone of the Ragin' Cajun victory. His first rebound of the night made him the school's all-time record rebounder, with 905.

Santa Clara, 22-10, was led by Harold Keeling's 26 points.

Freshman Antoine Joubert scored 18 points and hit two free throws with 21 seconds remaining to boost Michigan over Xavier.

The Wolverines, 21-10, had an 11-point lead, 54-43 with 8:30 left, but the Musketeers, 22-11, scrapped to pull to within one, 59-58, when Dexter Bailey hit a layup with 1:12 remaining.

Michigan forward Roy Tarpley followed with two free throws, before Xavier center Jeff Jenkins notched the last of his game-high 21 points to pull his team back to within 61-60.

Joubert, the Wolverines' high scorer, then hit both ends of a 1-and-1 to ice the game.

In tonight's action, the Irish will have to cool off Clyde Vaughn, who has scored 55 points in Pitt's previous NIT victories over La Salle and Florida State after a slump in the latter part of the season.

The Irish, 19-11, made it to the quarterfinal round with wins over Old Dominion and Boston College. Notre Dame's NIT success has been fueled by the play of 6-10 sophomore center Tim Kempton.

Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir feels that Tennessee will be the Hokies' "toughest game of the season."

The Hokies, 20-12, have won four of their last five games following a slump near the end of the regular season.

Eleven of Virginia Tech's last 16 games have been decided by three points or less.

Tennessee has played 12 of its last 13 games with no more than a six-point difference.

Cobb fate in hands of grand jury

NEW YORK (AP) — The fate of former Boston College basketball star Ernie Cobb is in the hands of a Brooklyn federal court jury as it considers whether Cobb was part of a gambling scheme in the 1978-79 season.

Cobb, 27, of Stamford, Conn., and Peter Vario, 47, of Brooklyn, are charged with conspiring to commit sports bribery, which carries a maximum of five years in prison. Vario, the son of a reputed Brooklyn organized crime captain, also faced five years on a charge of interstate travel to commit a crime.

U.S. District Judge Leonard Wexler completed his instructions to the jury at 11:05 a.m. Thursday, the eighth day of the trial.

Cobb, a 5-foot-11-inch guard, is BC's third-highest career scorer, and his 21.3 point-per-game average led the team during his senior year in 1978-79.

Cowboys' receiver in serious condition

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide-receiver Drew Pearson remained in stable but serious condition at Presbyterian Hospital today following surgery for injuries he sustained when his speeding automobile slammed into the rear of a parked tractor-trailer, killing his brother.

Police said Pearson was not legally intoxicated but had been drinking before the crash early Thursday, when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his sports car.

Carey Mark Pearson, 27, was pronounced dead at the accident scene of multiple injuries.

Cowboys coach Tom Landry and other colleagues were optimistic about Pearson's recovery. Teammates don't consider his injuries a threat to his career.

"I don't think Drew suffered any injuries that will be lasting," said Landry, who visited him in Presbyterian Hospital after flying in from the National Football League meetings in Hawaii. "His face is bruised and he is still undergoing tests. He should be OK unless they discover something. Of course, he was very hurt about the death of his brother."

Police spokesman Ed Spencer said that the case was being referred to a Dallas County grand jury.

"That's standard procedure in any traffic case involving a fatality," he said.

Presbyterian Hospital spokesman Bill Mays said Drew Pearson, 33, underwent surgery to repair a hemorrhaging liver.

"Doctors are very optimistic because the surgery was successful," said Cowboys spokesman Greg Aiello. "The bleeding was stopped. He will be kept in intensive care at least overnight."

Police spokesman Donald Keith said that Drew Pearson was driving a vehicle that veered onto the shoulder of LBJ freeway in far north Dallas near Plano Road at about 1:30 a.m. Thursday. His car smashed into the left rear tires of a parked Transtar Tractor Trailer rig loaded with steel "at an excessive speed," said Keith.

Pearson's car skidded back into the roadway, blocking two traffic lanes, Keith said.

The truck was off the roadway and warning flashers were blinking at the time of the crash, said Keith.

Truck driver Larry Jameson, 30, of Ingleside, Texas, was not injured in the crash, police said.

The right front half of the car was crushed by the impact, pinning Carey Pearson inside. Officers freed him in half an hour, they said.

Sources in Cowboys management said Pearson had two beers before the accident and fell asleep at the wheel.

Pearson and his brother had just returned from Coalgate, Okla., where Drew Pearson had played a benefit basketball game with several other Cowboys teammates, said team member Dexter Clinkscale.

Landry said, "He fell asleep while he was taking his brother home from a basketball trip."

Landry and the 33-year-old Pearson had talked recently about Pearson's possible retirement.

"We talked about his age and what he might do but we didn't come to any conclusion," Landry said.

Pearson had a blood-alcohol level of .053, said investigator Hollis

Edwards. State law says a person with a level of .10 is legally intoxicated.

Pearson was well within the legal limits of sobriety.

Pearson is the founder of the "Dallas Hoopsters", a team that barnstorms the Southwest region during the offseason, said Aiello.

"Drew books the games and makes all the arrangements," said Aiello. "However, the club does not sponsor the team. It is not a club function."

Carey Pearson acted as the Hoopsters' "equipment man," keeping the team's money and valuables while they played, Clinkscale said.

Pearson is an accomplished basketball player and is married to the daughter of former Globetrotters star Marques Haynes.

Pearson was driving his brother to the home of a third brother, Andre, when the accident occurred.

Pearson, a former all-pro out of Tulsa University and the Cowboy's all-time leading receiver, is probably best-known for the 50-yard "Hail Mary" touchdown reception that beat Minnesota in the last 20 seconds of a 1975 playoff game.

The Pro Football Hall of Fame named Pearson to its All-Decade Team of the 1970s.

Will Astros' Knepper earn his $500,000?

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Pitcher Bob Knepper is ready to play shortstop for the Houston Astros this season if that's what management decides, but Manager Bob Lillis thinks it would be much better if Knepper regained his position in the Astros starting rotation.

After a bright start in 1981, his first season with the Astros, Knepper has faded to 5-15 and 6-13 records the past two years. Knepper has been lifted from the starting rotation in each of those seasons but he expects the drought to end now.

"I just have to concentrate better and not let people bother it," Knepper said.

"Whatever they want me to do, I'll do, even play shortstop. That's all I can do."

Knepper has two years remaining on a four-year contract that pays him $500,000 annually and Lillis and General Manager Al Rosen think he's about ready to earn it.

"He's really improved his unloading time with runners on base," Lillis said. "It's one of the things we're really concentrating on this year in getting pitchers to give the catchers a chance to throw runners out at second base."

Acquiring Knepper from San Francisco in December, 1980, was among Rosen's first acts as general manager and he hasn't given up on the lefthander.

"Bob Knepper is going to put it together and I want him on my side when that happens," Rosen said.

A major problem for Knepper last season was his inability to hold runners on base. He said he let that criticism bother him on the mound.

"I would be pitching bad and people started looking at my stretch," Knepper said.
