Inflammatory letter on Panhandle Field fight reaches examiner

BY JEFF LANGLEY Senior Staff Writer

An Amarillo petroleum engineer sent Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace a letter that calls Panhandle independent oil producers a gang of crooks, an opinion as ridiculous as the day is long, the offended parties respond

But in what could spell bad news for the offended independents, "a person involved in the decision - making process" — a commission official who will rule in the drilling war between major oil and gas companies and independents in the Panhandle Field - read the inflammatory letter.

The letter labeling Panhandle independents as being involved in "theivery" (sic) was written by Robert D. Grace and mailed to Wallace. Grace, president of Grace, Shursen, Moore & Associates, told Wallace that his letter was written "in the interest of justice and fair play.

Grace's firm reportedly often works for the Pioneer Corporation and Amarillo Oil, two of the so - called major companies battling independents over drilling rules in the local oil and gas reservoir

Grace was reported to be unavailable and did not return calls from the The Pampa News

The Amarillo engineer's letter is only one of about "four boxes full" of letters sent to the commission about its pending ruling in the Panhandle Field, according to a commission spokesman

WHAT MAKES GRACE'S letter stand out, besides its highly - charged contents, is that a commission examiner scheduled to rule on the case actually read it, "by error." according to Brian Schaible, commission spokesman in Railroad Commission examiners and commissioners aren't supposed to consider unsolicited and unsworn information about pending cases, unless all parties to the case have an opportunity to respond, according to the Administrative Procedures Act.

Section 17 of the Act orders: "Members or employees of an agency assigned to render a decision...in a contested case may not communicate directly or indirectly in connection with any issue of fact or law with any agency, person, party or their representatives, except on notice and opportunity for all parties to participate.

Though Grace's letter, dated Oct. 20, 1983, was addressed and mailed to Wallace, Schaible said Wallace didn't read it

"The chairman did not read it," Schaible said Friday. One of the three examiners considering the Panhandle Field case, though, did read the letter, and that's one reason it was copied and mailed to all of the parties involved in the drilling dispute, he said

"One item of correspondence was received and came by error to be read by a person involved in the decision - making process for this case," examiner Patrick F. Thompson wrote to the parties, in explaining why the commission circulated copies of Grace's letter.

Except for this mailing to the parties, this letter will be treated no differently by the examiners than other unsolicited correspondence by nonparties." Thompson wrote last April

IN HIS LETTER to Wallace, Grace said he worked for a Panhandle independent producer in the early 1960s. The petroleum engineer said his previous employer "had several leases in the Panhandle which were classified as oil and casinghead gas leases which, in fact, and in reality, were only gas wells.

This is a common practice among those independents currently before the Commission and has been for at least the past 15 years. There are wells currently producing today in the Panhandle as oil and casinghead gas wells which have never produced one drop of oil," Grace said

"Oil, which can only be stolen oil, is routinely purchased, hauled to the tank batteries, and sold as produced oil," he

"When I worked among independents, there was no question in their mind that the wells were gas wells and that the operation was in violation of the rules and regulations of the Railroad Commission. The gas reserves were being stolen from the major oil companies and those holding the gas rights. The independents would argue that this activity is essential to the economy of the Panhandle. I can assure you that this is not the case. No economy should be based on theivery," Grace wrote Wallace.

"these independents are stealing gas under a very thinly disguised cover. We will be dishonored and deeply disappointed if the Commission fails in its duty to put and

Reagan moving toward firming China relations

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) -President Reagan is carrying one overriding message with him on his trip this week to Peking: The evolving U.S. footing, despite tremors caused by trade problems and difficulties reaching a nuclear power agreement.

That is the view that has emerged from a series of interviews with and briefings by administration officials as Reagan and his entourage move slowly

"Texas will be crucial in choosing the Democratic presidential nominee. Based on the delegate count for Mondale, Hart and Jackson at this point, our 200 delegates to the national convention could be a key factor," says Bob Slagle, chairman of the Texas Democratic Party Frequently in the past, because the Texas contests have come relatively late in the primary election season when the nomination was nearly locked up, the 6,600 meetings haven't been quite the attraction they are this year.

Voters have a chance to exercise an influence in the electoral process beyond casting ballot votes by attending their party precinct conventions following the closing of polls in the upcoming May 5 primary Precinct conventions are the first step in selecting delegates to the national conventions and in proposing resolutions which could influence party policy at the national level.

But few people generally avail themselves of the opportunity to have a greater voice in party politics.
"Typically, the public generally does not participate in precinct conventions, said Susan Tripplehorn, Gray County chairman of the Republican Party.

Her Democrat counterpart, Suzie Wilkinson, agreed, saying attendance at most precinct conventions is generally low.

Much of the lack of attendance possibly arises because most voters have little idea of what occurs at precinct conventions. Also, many perhaps feel that they have little say in what goes on, believing they can have little influence.

Precinct conventions for both major political parties have two main purposes: to select delegates to the county conventions and to adopt resolutions for submission to the county meetings.

While both parties have the same basic purposes, there are some differences in procedure.

Both groups hold the precinct conventions at the individual polling the nomination. Jackson won his first

Letter a problem

The examiner hasn't violated the Administrative Procedures Act by reading the letter, as long as he doesn't consider the unsworn text in deciding the drilling controversy, Schaible said.

"They can't consider it, unless they let everybody know they are doing it," he said.

The commission spokesman said that before it's passed along to them, the mail sent to commissioners and examiners is normally screened by secretaries and other assistants to make sure it doesn't address a pending case.

At first, Grace's letter was opened and kept away from the examiners considering the Panhandle case, Schaible said. He said the Amarillo engineer was informed that "we can't read letters about a pending case.

But the letter was left lying on a desk and wound up being read by mistake, the spokesman said.

"We wanted to avoid the appearance of making anything confidential," Schaible said, explaining another reason for informing the parties of the letter.

A lawyer for the independents, Jerry Courtney of Clarendon, said it takes a person of strong mind to disregard information like Grace's letter, even when legally required to do so. He said the idea that the examiner shouldn't consider Grace's letter in ruling on the field fight is a lot like a judge's instructions to a jury to forget about an inadmissible remark made in a courtroom.

"It's like the old tale of throwing a skunk in the jury box removing the skunk - and then telling the jury to disregard the smell," Courtney said.

The lawyer challenged Grace to come up with one scrap of evidence to back his claim that independents haul oil out to well sites in order to claim "produced oil" and get an "oil well" classification. "I personally know of no instance where that has happened. I've heard rumors of that happening in the days before LTX (refrigeration) units. Whether that has happened, I don't know. (The independents) are under such close scrutiny by Dorchester and some of the others, that if they had evidence, they would make it public," Courtney said about the charge.

He said the independents that he represents are engaged in nothing "illegal or immoral."

"It's all strictly legal within the Railroad Commission standards," Courtney said about his clients' drilling

The dispute being considered by the Railroad Commission involves the classification of wells as "oil wells" or "gas

The major oil companies who have asked the commission to amend the local field's drilling rules often hold the "gas rights," in the reservoir and operate "gas wells." The independents often hold the "oil rights," and call their adjacent wells "oil wells." Present commission rules allow only one gas well, but 64 oil wells, on the same section of ground in the field. Some independents use cold - temperature separators to change gases into liquids at the wells sites and then classify the liquids as "crude oil" in order to get oil well classifications.

Commission rules in the local field call a well an oil well if it produces at least one barrel of oil per 100,000 cubic feet of

Phillips Petroleum Co., Dorchester Gas and several other major companies have asked the commission to ban refrigerated separators used to make liquids for classification as crude oil.

Commission examiners studying the case will recommend a ruling to the three elected Railroad Commissioners and turn the case over to them for a final ruling.

Schaible said he expects that the commission won't rule on the major companies' request for a least a few more months. He pointed out that the commission has up to 500 to 600 cases pending for rulings. The commission spokesman also pointed out that the Panhandle Field case is long and

The transcript from the case is taller than I am," Schaible said about the stacks of testimony.

The commission official also revealed that the Railroad Commission won't participate as a party to a hearing called by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC). The FERC hearing, in which the federal agency will decide whether local reserves were previously dedicated to interstate pipeline customers in the northeast, is scheduled for July 10 or July 17. The FERC ruling may decide who is allowed to drill for the field's reserves.

Schaible said in making its ruling, the Texas Railroad Commission won't consider what the federal government may decide about the local field.

He said the state and federal government could come up with different rulings about the Panhandle Field and that it will be interesting to see "which is the controlling interest."

City trucks available for hauling trash during clean-up campaign Vickery said grass and weed

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Pampa's annual Clean-Up Campaign begins tomorrow, with citizens being urged to take advantage of the opportunity to have city crews haul off trash, junk, old furniture, tree trimmings and other items as residents clean up their properties or clean out their garages.

The city Sanitation Department will be concentrating on clean-up operations in each of the four city wards for a week each, using crews and trucks to collect trash and other items left in alleys by city residents. Dates for the 1984 Clean-Up Campaign are: Ward 1, April 23-27; Ward 2, April 30-May 4; Ward 3, May 7-11, and Ward 4, May 14-18. Allan Vickery, Sanitation Department head, warned residents that not just anything will be picked up: there are some limitations and rules that residents should note. Concrete and cement blocks, whole trees, large metal pipes and items that o people cannot lift will not be hauled off by city crews. The crews also will not haul off junked cars, Vickery said. No chemicals or oil wastes will be picked up. Such materials also will not be accepted at the city landfill. Persons having such items needing disposal should contact private concerns to take care of them, he noted.

Large and heavy items also should not be placed in dumpsters, since they could damage the dumpsters when they are lifted for emptying, Vickery advised

The department also will not clean up vacant lots or carry off items from private property unless the city has easements on the lots, he said. To assist in the clean-up operations, residents are asked to place items in the dumpsters or to place them in the alley near their fences or back property line, Vickery said. He said residents should not place items around the dumpsters, since that would hinder the trucks emptying the dumpsters. Also, residents need to be aware that they should not place their materials across the alley from their property or on either side of their own property. Residents should place their items for pick up on their own side of Items should not be placed in the middle of the alley, since that obviously hinders trucks coming down the alleys, Vickery noted.

If there are no alleys for pick-up routes, then residents should place their materials on the curh in front of their houses, he said.

The Sanitation Department crews will haul off used furniture, junked household appliances, bush and tree trimmings, trees cut into easily handled sections and similar items, as long as they can be picked up by two people and are deposited by the alley or curbs, Vickery said. Crews will not go into homes or garages to carry off such items, however clippings, leaves and small limbs should be placed in boxes, bags or other containers for easier pick-up. Also, any items that can be placed in such containers will insure easier clean-up operations.

Residents should be careful not to put out any items that could blow around. since it might be several days before crews can get to the areas on their pick-up sweeps.

Vickery said if materials are not put out during the specified weeks for the wards, it might be several weeks before the special clean-up crews get back to an area. Crews will be covering the wards in a specific pattern and cann guarantee random pick-ups during th campaign.

If someone thinks they have been missed during the clean-up for their ward, they can contact the Sanitation Department, however, he said.

Anyone having any questions on what can or cannot be picked up during the campaign can contact Vickery or Public Works Director Allyn Moore

Clean-up operations will be only for property within the city limits. Residents whose property is outside the city limits but with adjoining allevs in the city limits can take advantage of the clean-up drive, however, Vickery

Last year the city hauled off more than 300 truckloads of materials during the Clean-Up Campaign.

Ex-Carver students plan reunion

Former students of Carver School are planning their "Second Time Around" all-school reunion for those who attended the school from its opening in the late 1940s to its closing as a school in Activities scheduled for the events July 5-8 include a Little Miss - Big Miss Black Pampa Pageant, a parade, a softball game, a picnic and a grand Young women ages 9 through 17 wishing to participate in the pageant are asked to meet at 1132 Huff Road at 6:30 p.m. Monday, said Joyce Holt, chairperson for the reunion activities.

Age categories will be determined on the number of entrants. Entry fee will be $5.50

The pageant will be held July 5 at the M. K. Brown Auditorium

Ms. Holt said 300 invitations have been sent out to former students. She said local people not yet receiving invitations should contact her to get information and to get their names added to the mailing list

The July 7 parade, featuring decorated automobiles, will go through downtown Pampa and end up at the former Carver School, now the Carver Educational Service Center for the Pampa Independent School District. Persons wishing to participate in the parade should begin planning decorating schemes for their automobiles, Ms. Holt suggested. Registration will be held July 6 at the Southside Senior Citizens Center, with ex-Carver highlights, plays and skits held that night, tentatively scheduled for Lamar Elementary School. A cocktail hour will be held the same day at the Brown Auditorium.

Events scheduled for July 7 include the ex-Carver student parade, the softball game and an all-family picnic. The game and picnic are tentatively scheduled for Hobart Street Park. An ex-students grand ball will be held that night at Brown Auditorium

Activities will conclude July 8 with a Carver reunion farewell church service at Marcus Sanders Park

Ms. Holt said the first Carver reunion, held in 1982, was "tremendously successful." More than 300 persons attended from as far away as California and New York.

The reunion was enjoyed by so many that they voted to have the "Second Time Around" one this year, she said. After this year, the next reunion probably will be held eight or 10 years

The ICC, in a strongly worded decision Friday, denied the Railroad Commission's application to be certified to regulate railroad rates. classifications, rules and practices. The federal panel also revoked the temporary certificate it had given the Railroad Commission.

ICC Chairman Reese H. Taylor Jr. said federal standards and procedures were "grossly ignored or violated" by the Texas commission and that the state "clearly will not use continued provisional certification to bring its standarrds and procedures into compliance with federal law."

But Jim Nugent, a member of the three-man Railroad Commission, said the ICC action was sparked by "the fact that we disagree with their form and method of doing business and the fact that we have appealed to the courts and presently have pending in court a number of questions about their intemperate, industry lap-dog activities.

"This action by the ICC is typical of this irresponsible Star Chamber-type bureaucracy. As I understand it, this action was taken without any notice to the Railroad Commission, without any attempt to allow the commission to be heard," Nugent said.

Star Chambers were royal English courts, abolished in the 17th century. that met in secret and used torture to force confessions.

The ICC action means that transportation provided by rail carriers within Texas will become subject to ICC jurisdiction and rail carriers in the state will have to file intrastate tariffs with the ICC

The ICC said the commission should complete "all pending matters capable of final resolution and not to commence any regulatory proceedings."

The decision will become effective 30 days after it is published in the Federal

In its decision, the ICC said the state commission "staunchly refused to comply with federal law as expressed in numerous ICC ... decisions.

The decision said the federal officials acted "only after a protracted attempt to obtain Texas' compliance" with the regulatory administration created by the Staggers Rail Act of 1980. The law was an effort to curtail burdensome government regulation of the rail

"All forms of persuasion have failed and we are convinced that there is no prospect of (the Railroad Commission's) voluntary compliance with the Staggers Act," the ICC said.

Four bodies, car found in bayou

FREEPORT (AP) - Brazoria County authorities searched a bayou Saturday where a day earlier divers found the bodies of two men and two women believed to have driven off a dangerous highway curve over a four-year period.

Divers pulled the bodies from their four cars in the murky East Union Bayou late Friday after a crab fisherman saw a man's body surface in the bayou, near the Farm-to-Market Road 523 bridge just inside the Freeport city limits.

Authorities identified the victims as Sam G. Hall, 33, and Cathy Jaye Stewart, 36, both of Brazoria; Roma Alexia Gibson, 25, of Freeport; and James Clay, 30, of Lake Jackson.

Divers stopped searching the bayou after finding the bodies, but resumed their search Saturday, said Deputy Marcia Thacker of Brazoria County Sheriff's office. Ms. Thacker said she did not know how long the search would continue.

"We think they were intoxicated, missed the curve and drove into the water," said sheriff's department Sgt. Harry Stiles "We suspect that they were all traffic accidents.

The cars, stacked up on top of each other, were still in gear, he said.

He said three fire department divers began looking for a vehicle missing from Freeport and a woman after Hall's body was sighted. But they also found three other automobiles, two of which also contained bodies.

The victims were pronounced dead by Peace Justice Roy Knopp of Klute, who ordered autopsies on the victims.

All the vehicles apparently missed a slight curve on the northbound approach to the bayou bridge and went over a three-foot embankment into 12 to 16 feet of water, said Freeport Police Capt. Charles Wagner.

Lake Jackson Police Lt. Robert Turner said divers first found the car containing the body of Clay, who authorities said had been reported missing on Oct. 30, 1980. Police said Clay was last seen at a Freeport tavern and was headed toward Surfside on FM Stiles said divers recovered an empty Cadillac that had been in the water for about three years, and then found a sedan containing Ms. Gibson's body. She had been missing since Nov. 27, Stiles said, when she was last seen in a Freeport bar.

The sheriff's officer said the last car found by divers at 8:47 p.m. was that of Hall, and contained Ms. Stewart's body.

Hall was last seen in a Freeport bar March 27 and was heading toward it, the El Paso Times reported in a Oyster Creek, Stiles said.

The Democrats operate on an affirmative action policy, Mrs. Wilkinson noted. Thus, attempts are made to elect delegates on such quota standards as sex, ethnic background and age, in addition to presidential candidate preferences (if those attending the precinct conventions candidate or an uncommitted status, Mrs. Wilkinson said. However, there are no rules specifying county delegates have to be selected on any percentage basis for preferences.

Each precinct may do so, however, if they wish. To do so, voters in attendance may caucus in preference groups to elect the same proportion of delegates indicated by expressed preferences on the rolls of those at the precinct convention. They are not required to do so, however, Mrs. Wilkinson said

No presidential candidates will be listed on the Democratic primary ballots

Republican voters will be able to vote for President Ronald Reagan or "uncommitted" on their primary election ballots. However, there are no specific procedures to require alloting of delegates according to voting results between Reagan or uncommitted status, Mrs. Tripplehorn said.

This is the first year presidential candidate preferences have been listed for voting in Republican primary elections, Mrs. Tripplehorn said. In the past, delegates for specific candidates were listed on the ballots.

Delegates to Democrat conventions must attend the precinct conventions to be elected, Mrs. Wilkinson said. If 10 delegates are alloted and only four people attend the precinct conventions, only a maximum of four county delegates could be elected.

In the Republican precinct precinct conventions will be asked to conventions, however, county delegates list their preferences, either for a may be selected from voting lists for the precinct if there are not enough in attendance from which to select the alloted number of county delegates,

Mrs. Tripplehorn said. In both parties, delegates basically will be nominated from the floor at the precinct conventions.

In addition to selection of delegates to the county meetings, precinct conventions may also consider the adoption or rejection of resolutions submitted by those in attendance. here are "usually a wide assortment of resolutions in the Democrat meetings, Mrs. Wilkinson said. Resolutions adopted at the precinct level will be submitted to the county conventions for consideration. Those adopted there will be taken to the state conventions for consideration.

Both parties will have their county conventions on May 19.

Two state conventions will be held by both parties. Presidential conventions will be held in June to select delegates to the respective national conventions and determine what resolutions will be submitted for consideration at the national meetings. State conventions will be held in September to elect state party officials and consider other business

Precinct conventions are designed to allow individual voters to have more input into the electoral and policy-making processes of the political

But voters who chose not to attend the local conventions limit their influence to only a mark on the election ballots.

THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST

While the resurrection of Jesus forever establishes His authority by virtue of His Sonship (Romans 1:4), there is more significance attached to it. Paul says, "But now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of them that are asleep. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ shall all be made alive. But each in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; then they that are Christ's, at his coming." (I Corinthians 15:20-23.) Therefore we see that as Christ was raised from the dead so also those who belong to Him shall be raised when He comes again. The raising of people from the dead goes back to Old Testament times when Elijah raised the widow's son (I Kings 17:17-24) and Elisha raised the Shunamite woman's son (2 Kings 4:32-37.) Jesus raised people from the dead (Matthew 9:18-26; John 11:43-44) while He was on the earth and His apostles raised people from the dead (Acts 9:36-43; 20:9-10.) But Jesus was the first one to be raised from the dead to die no more.

Jesus taught much concerning the resurrection of the dead: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour cometh, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself, even so gave he to the Son also to have life in himself: and he gave him authority to execute judgment, because he is a son of man. Marvel not at this: for the hour cometh, in which all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of judgment" (John 5:25-29.) The first part of the passage has reference to those who hear and obey the gospel upon this earth (vs. 25-27.) The last part has reference to the day of the resurrection spoken of by Paul in I

The important thing is that we be prepared for the day of the resurrection when it comes. We do this by hearing, believing and obeying the gospel of Christ.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that the can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent, with the coveting commandment.

Oil merger ban is not dead yet

Even though the U.S. Senate has voted down a proposal to ban mergers of major oil companies, you can bet that the idea will resurface. A Congressional committee has been asked to study the effect of mergers, guaranteeing that the ban proposal will receive continued consideration among the national legislators. And, a state attorney general has vowed to go to court to block one proposed merger, an action that would move the idea into the courtrooms of the nation.

It should be distressing to all Americans that such a repressive idea should even be considered by either the Congress or the courts. It is in direct contradiction to the concept of free enterprise that most of us associate with the United States

For example, suppose you were the owner of a retail store and made your living by selling, let's say, reticulated widgets. And suppose you found out that you could buy the widgets for resale cheaper than you could produce them yourself.

Then suppose the government passed a law forbidding you to buy widgets for resale. If you continued to sell them, you'd have to manufacture them yourself, even though this would increase your costs and force you to charge your customers more for the widgets they

You would not consider this a just or reasonable action by the government. You would consider it an illigitimate assault on your rights as a citizen of this country

Yet, that is exactly the same thing the legislators who continue to push for a ban on oil company mergers are proposing

As we understand it, some oil companies consider buying out other companies because market conditions are such that the cost of oil reserves they acquire is lower than the cost of exploring and drilling for new reserves. That being the case, the buyout efforts are, beyond any doubt, the most sensible course to follow

What worries the merger opponents in Congress is the effect this will have on oil companies' exploration efforts. The legislators are afraid the mergers will cause a decrease in exploration and this country will find itself with a shortage of petroleum.

What worries that state attorney general who has vowed to go to court to block a merger is that it might cause the closing of some facilities in his state and put a number of residents out of work.

As for the legislators, the things they say that concern them are ridiculous. When the price and demand for oil becomes sufficient to create a reasonable possibility of making a profit from finding new reserves, the oil companies will be punching holes wherever they think they can find oil. If a shortage starts to develop, prices will rise and exploration will accelerate. That's the way a free market works and it is strange that a number of United States senators have forgotten that

But even if their concerns were valid, we would still oppose the merger bans proposed by the legislators and the attorney general for the simple reason that it is none of their business. Do the legislators have the right to force a privately-owned company to go out and look for oil just because there is a shortage? Does the attorney general have the right to prevent a company from closing a facility in his state simply because it would put some people out of work. Of course not-not in a society that is supposed to be free.

The question we must ask when the effort to prevent oil companies from merging resurfaces is this: If government could find a way to prevent shortages of certain products, but had to destroy the freedom of private citizens to operate their business as they wish in order to do it, would we be better or worse off?

If you believe in the importance of freedom, we know vour answer

New set of double standards

Free at last! That's a bit of an overstatement but last week's Washington Post editorialized suggesting blacks are headed in that direction

Black history is a history of double standards. Whites and blacks had different standards of constitutional protections. Whites had one standard of voter eligibility; blacks had another, which in some places required recitation of the Constitution or knowledge of the number of bubbles in a bar of soap. Double standards included black experiences in schools, the military, courts, public accommodations and jobs.

The civil rights struggle ended all that. Today we have a new set of double standards for blacks. When whites fail a test they are judged under - prepared. When blacks do the same, the test is declared racist. When white colleges have black under - representation, it is different from white under - representation at black colleges. When black students insist on an exclusively black dormitory or floor within a white college it's not called racist while it would be if whites did the same.

There are many other examples of these modern - day, "enlightened" double standards. But the fallout from the Jesse Jackson Hymie - Hymietown affair suggests a crack in the new double standards. Milton Coleman, the Washington Post reporter who first publicized Jackson's racial slurs against Jews, has been threatened by Louis Farrakhan, head of the Nation of Islam. According to columnist Carl Rowan, Farrakhan not only threatened Coleman but called him a "no - good, filthy traitor, a Judas, Uncle Tom, a dog, a stool pigeon." Carl Rowan publicly urged Jesse Jackson to repudiate Farrakhan's demagoguery. Rowan rejects Farrakhan's attempt to hold black journalists "to a standard of stupid, self - destructive racism.

Now that's real progress, particularly when you consider the fact that Carl Rowan referred to Dr. Thomas Sowell as worse than: Vidkum Quisling, Nazi collaborator, Stepin Fetchit, Aunt Jemima and Uncle Tom (Washington Post, 9 - 29 - 81). Rowan made this demagogic attack because HE did not agree with Sowell's research. Maybe Rowan has changed.

Ronald White, another Washington Post reporter, commented on the double standard with a hypothetical, suppose a white presidential candidate referred to blacks as coons and Washington as Coontown. Blacks would applaud the reporter having the guts to report it. White says it's a double standard to expect a black reporter covering a black candidate to look the other way. White states, "As a black reporter it is my duty to expose such things when whites do it... It is also my duty to expose it when a black does it.'

On the Jesse Jackson - Hymietown -Farrakhan matter, we should applaud the journalistic guts demonstrated by Milton Coleman and Ronald White. And Carl Rowan is to be commended as well. To be racially impartial seems easy, but black journalists are under enourmous pressure to toe the ideological line

But the presidential race itself points up other double standards by the candidates and news media. Why don't reporters ask Jesse why he talks one way to white people and another to blacks. You never see Jesse flailing his arms whipping up white people to chant fifty times, "We're moving up," or "We're going from the uttermost to the uppermost," or "I am SOMEBODY," and other such mindless statements. Imagine what the media would say if Reagan addressed black people using the same antics. And I dare say Reagan, the Communicator, could do it better than

You also have to wonder why Mondale and Hart don't attack Jackson the way they attack each other. They may perceive that if a white is attacked by a black, whites are not alienated; but if a black is attacked by a white, blacks are alienated. We should ask

These farmers are already rich

If cave men invented the art of "make do," it was refined by farmers.

And to this day, nobody more than a farmer knows how to "make - do" with whatever he has. He'll improvise a fence puller from a hank of wire and a hickory limb, a horseshoe from a hunk of car tire, an ax handle from a persimmon sprout - and he'll make harnesses out of hay wire, feed sacks and shoe parts Leastwise, he used to.

Farmers, like the rest of us, have lost their genius for improvisation in direct proportion to the availability of store bought implements and hired mechanics.

But east of Hickman in Lancaster County, Nebraska, is a father - and - son farm of 2,000 acres where Dale and Todd Harlan still know how to make - do

When they need a farm implement, they Todd Harlan thought pig feeding with a wheelbarrow and bucket was a tedious waste of time, so he automated it. He invented what he calls a "Choreboy." On wheels it moves among the farrowing pens, dispensing balanced ration automatically.

Nobody likes to stir manure - yet it has to be stirred to ripen and digest itself. So the Harlans invented a lagoon manure stirrer.

They designed and built their own field cultivator. During the Nebraska drought of the last two years, just being an efficient farmer was not good enough. Profitable farming required efficiency - plus.

So the Harlans adapted to their 1480 International Combine a 12 - row air planter. When in the world do you find time both to manufacture and to farm?" I asked. Todd said. "This is what we do on rainy days." And this year's long winter gave them time to invent and build "The Amazing Bean

From scrap iron, propane tanks and an old grain dryer - and 1,300 hours - Dale and Todd built a machine which, right out in the field, cooks soybeans, vaporizes the oil, converts raw beans into more palatable high protein stock feed

What's next: A double - crop planter with which the Harlans can combine wheat and plant beans at the same time! I've not heard of more ingenious improvisors since LeTourneau than the Harlans of Hickman. Nebraska. I hope they get rich. But then, in the ways that count, they already are.

Robert LeFevre

Is prosperity possible in U.S.?

If any people or nation would prosper, economic freedom is essential.

What do I mean by economic freedom? I mean that persons engaged in economic tasks must be at liberty to select the task they wish to perform. Further, that in performing it they are neither compelled nor prevented from performing to the best of their ability. Finally, that others must be free to patronize or not according to their own evaluation of the merit of the task and performance

This means everyone entering the marketplace as a producer or supplier does so unprotected from possible competitors. It also means that persons wishing to purchase the good or service are unprotected.

Examine these requirements of prosperity and where do you find this nation? A moment's attention should reveal that we no longer have a society where prosperity is possible. The very factors that built our nation and brought the highest standard of living known to man are no longer in evidence. The nation has changed from one striving for prosperity into one striving for safety and protection.

What about the freedom of the individual to enter into a business of his own choosing? Isn't it still true that everyone in this country can do that?

Most assuredly not. Disregard the difficulties that exist anyway - raising the necessary funds, finding the best location, and hiring an adequate staff. Consider that a number of goods and services for which there is strong demand are on the proscribed list. If anyone attempts to produce them, the government will put them

That is not the end of it. The government licenses virtually every business, which makes it possible for government to limit the number of persons getting into any endeavor. Even if you were the very finest producer of a given product, you could be prevented from producing it because the government has already licensed someone

Further, you are barred from hiring the best, with excellence as the criterion. You must do what you can to hire adequate help by maintaining a race, color and sex balance. Then you must pay a minimum wage the government demands and in some cases enter an arrangement with a labor union that will, with a governmental assist, remove some or all of your managerial

Having regulated producers, the government then refuses to let the consumer have a direct impact upon them. If a consumer is disgruntled or believes he is the victim of a raw deal, he no longer goes to the producer who could - and usually did straighten things out. Instead, he goes to the government; brings a lawsuit - possibly a "class action" suit - wins in court and compels the producer to treat all his customers as if they all had had a raw deal! In a free market (where prosperity is possible) customers will discipline businessmen and businessmen will discipline customers. In such a market, customers can (and do) withhold patronage. When they do, the business fails. A business that loses customers has no income, its credit evaporates, its assets are drained and it goes under.

If a customer is unreasonable (and they sometimes are) the businessman tells the customer to go elsewhere. The direct impact suppliers and demanders have on each other protects both. In such a market, prosperity is possible because a producer can conduct his affairs so that he attracts more customers than his competitors, treats them as they wish, and makes a fortune because he deserves the patronage. Customers profit because they buy better goods, and obtain better services - while prices go down!

With government protecting both sides, neither can prosper. No one can predict what the government will demand next. Businessmen begin playing their political cards, cozying up to politicians, trying to keep lawsuits at a minimum, and generally putting the customer in a position of secondary importance.

Isn't all of this done for the protection of customers? Suppose a lawsuit is brought against a firm and the firm loses in court. Judgment is brought to the tune of $5 million, which the firm must refund to its customers, most of whom didn't know there was a problem. A loss of such magnitude is catastrophic. But wait! This is a licensed firm the government approves. Further, it employs several thousand workers and has been around many years.

When the manager tells the government of the serious loss, and how the firm may go bankrupt (and all the jobs lost - voters will think badly of the government for killing their jobs) the government will doubtless have some revised thoughts.

The government may reassure the businessman that he can raise his price to make up the loss. The government may let him borrow money for a bail - out and also let him raise his prices. All business costs are paid by the firm's customers.

What does that mean to the customers who have won a great victory in court? From that time forward, those who "won" will be made to pay for all the costs assessed, plus the cost of government intervention and regulation, plus any new costs that arise in process.

The prices of goods and services will rise. Fewer people will be able to buy goods or services. The population in general will be deprived of things it wants, the businessman dare not take much money out as dividends since he can be sued again any time and must have cash on hand. The customers pay for it all. This is called: "protecting the customer." This is the principal modus operandi in the American market today. Do you see why we are not prosperous and why it is unlikely that we ever will be again?

Easter services family affair at St. Vincent

Easter has been a family affair at St. Vincent DePaul Catholic Church this year as a father and son "team" conducted Holy Week services.

Father Joseph Stabile, pastor of the St. Vincent parish, was assisted by his father, deacon Ben Stabile of Dallas, during Holy Thursday and Good Friday services, as well as the Great Easter Vigil Saturday night

This is the first time the father and the Father have served together since Joseph came to Pampa two years ago

The senior Stabile has been a deacon for 10 years. as long as his son has been a priest.

"In fact, I was ordained a priest just before my father was ordained a deacon," Joseph said 'That's what made the situation unique, to have been ordained at nearly the same time by the same bishop in the same state."

However, the coincidental timing of their ordinations do not mean as much to the Stabiles as parish their shared commitment to the church.

"I feel it was a calling; God called me into the deaconate," said Ben. "It was a very strange thing. I had been in the parrish for quite a few years, then the pastor from the pulpit asked for deacons. And I made the decision without much forethought. However, with the support of his wife, he continued the rigorous training for the deaconate at Week services carries another meaning for the

the University of Dallas near Irving. "I feel my wife was very influential in my decision because all her life, she was active in the church." he added The Stabile son said he followed the same calling into the priesthood.

"I think it came from the inspiration of my family and the example of the priests that I knew," Joseph Stabile said. "It was their example and their experience that inspired me. And my family was supportive of my decision. The vounger Stabile's 13-year training started when he was a freshman in high school and continued through five years of college and four years of theological seminary. He also earned a 'post-post graduate' degree in Spanish from a college in Mexico City

Joseph Stabile spent the first few years of his priesthood in Dallas, near where his father was deacon. However they did not serve the same

"I was situated in Dallas, and it was very handy to have my dad nearby," he said. "A priest has not arrived at the priesthood on his own, but though the help and encouragement of his parents, priests, classmates. So much of my priesthood was influenced by my parents.

Serving with his father during the three Holy

"I want the people in the parish to experience another dimension," he observed "One reason 1 asked my dad to assist was that we have made significant growth in the St. Vincent Parish. To involve the lay people and the deaconate is one way a lay person can serve.

The deacon added that it's "hard not to be awed

"It is a priviledge to serve with my son," he said "I assume my role as a deacon, not as a father." Ben Stabile describes his role as a "ministry of

He noted that deacons - a part of the early church that had been phased out , but was restored by the Vatican II in 1967 - serve many of the same functions as priests. Deacons are the third level of Roman Catholic clergy, behind priests and bishops.

Like priests, deacons may preach, baptize. witness at weddings and preside at funerals However, they cannot celebrate mass, hold confirmation, annoint the sick or hear confession. Deacons may also be married.

"Throughout the United States, deacons have served in youth work, prisons, reaching the unchurched, religious education and services for the aged." Stabile said

Further planned projects included construction of four playgrounds with canopies and volleyball-basketball courts in the northwest section of the church property. A large bronze Bible or bronze lamp (symbol

The new building projects will involve about 55,000 square feet when completed. Construction costs will be about $2.85 million; total costs with all new furnishings will be an estimated $3.2 million.

Architect for the project is Whitaker, McQueen, Jones and Associates of Lubbock. General contractor is Reid and Gary Strickland of Amarillo

The expansion project continues remodeling and renovation undertaken during the past decade since the former chapel area was destroyed by fire in December, 1973, leaving only the North and West Annexes. The current auditorium building was formally opened Labor Day weekend in 1976.

Current resident membership for the church is about 2,200, with others on record bringing total membership to about 3,200, Warren said Sunday School enrollment is about 3,200.

PITTSBURGH (AP) -Determined to end thousands of years of speculation as to whether life exists on other planets, astronomers have switched from camera-like techniques to computers in their search for solar systems

'We're getting as much information now in a single hour as we used to get photographically in an entire year,'' says George Gatewood, director of Pittsburgh's Allegheny Observatory, which has introduced an electronic detector for measuring stellar distances.

"It's a whole new era." says David C. Black of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center in Moffett, Since earliest times, man has debated whether the stars, like the Earth's sun, are surrounded by planets.

Gatewood and other astronomers around the country who are developing new measuring instruments. including a telescope for use in space, say they hope to provide some answers within next decade

It will be feasible in 10 ears to detect planets the size of Jupiter or Saturn," says Gatewood, whose Multichannel Astrometric Photometer - MAP - is considered the first successful detector of its

Gatewood, 43, began searching for a better method of measuring the position and brightness of stars after he announced in 1978 he could detect no wobbling in the orbits of the closest stars 24 trillion miles away, indicating a lack of gravitational pull from revolving planets. Like other astronomers since the 1860s, Gatewood had used a refracting telescope and the traditional which uses more modern photographic process for compiling his data.

The problem, according to Gatewood, was that when the emulsion subsided, the images didn't necessarily return to their original spot. As a result, the stars' positions were off by more than one-millionth of a degree, a large discrepancy by standards of astronomy

Gatewood and John Stein, 39, a senior observer at Allegheny Observatory, replaced the telescope's photographic plate with more sensitive photoelectric detectors behind 12-inch glass plates etched with intersecting lines.

As light from the stars hit the photoelectric detectors, millions of electrons were emitted, sending signals into a computer. The etched plate, meanwhile, moved across the telescope's field to plot the path and brightness of up to nine stars at a time.

The first successful MAP observation was in 1980, when Gatewood and Stein studied the nearby star, Proycon, and its smaller companion star for two months. A perfected detector was mounted on the base of the observatory's main telescope March 20.

"Up until this time, it's taken a lot of coaxing, 'Come on baby, go. It's now an operational system that astronomers can use on a regular basis," says Gatewood Gatewood has found the

MAP results to be faster and up to 10 times more accurate than the photographic method. One star position is computed every second.

Others, however, are more

"I would think an instrument like that should really demonstrate a couple years of intensive observation to grind out the errors," says John Hershey of the U.S. Naval Observatory in Washington,

When completed, the scaffolding will enable workers and artisans to finish the outside portions of a vast restoration project on the statue, which stands 151 feet tall from the massive base to the tip of the torch held high in her right

The job is scheduled for completion in time for statue's centennial celebration in 1986, and is expected to cost $25

THE SENATE RACE IN TEXAS

GOP candidates didn't expect to run in 1984

By SCOTT McCARTNEY Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - It's a race that few people, especially the candidates, thought would be run in 1984.

Most in the Republican Party expected U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to seek a fifth term and easily win his party's nomination on May 5.

But Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, announced last August that 24 years in the Senate was enough - he was retiring at the height of his power.

"I had already contributed to Tower's campaign and thought I would be raising money for him," said Rob Mosbacher, a young Houston oilman and now one of four seeking the GOP nomination for U.S. Senate in Texas'

"I would never have run if he was in

Mosbacher, U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, former state Sen. Henry Grover, who narrowly lost the race for governor in 1972, and U.S. Rep. Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson, are all vying for the nomination

Gramm, the former Democrat who resigned after losing his seat on the House Budget Committee to run and win re-election as a Republican, is acknowledged by most candidates and observers to be the front-runner. More and more, he is the target of the other candidates in an intraparty assault uncharacteristic of traditional Republicans.

The race is attracting the attention of the White House and national Democratic leaders because Democrats see an opportunity to capture Tower's seat — the last statewide Texas office held by a Republican - and chip away at the slim Republican majority in the Senate.

Gramm says he fears that with four people in the race, no one will be able to grab 51 percent of the vote and escape a

'My concern at this point is that a lot of people that support me are, by traditional voting patterns, independents or conservative Democrats and not likely to vote in the Republican primary," Gramm said. "The challenge we face is trying to avoid a runoff.

And that's the strategy Grover, Mosbacher and Paul are using - attack Gramm and hope to get into a runoff

"I'd like to say I can win without a runoff, but I don't think that is going to happen," said Mosbacher, 32. "The thing I'm going to hit at hard down the stretch is I feel like I have a better chance of winning in November because I run into a Democrat a day that wants to run against Phil because he left their party

Gramm, 41, disputes the others' contention that voters have not been kind to party-switchers.

"My polls show I have a very strong rating among Texas Republican, Gramm said.

Paul, 48, plans a two-week television blitz saying Gramm is not as conservative as he says he is, according to a spokesman

And all along the 56-year-old Grover, a veteran of both the Texas House and Senate who filed to be on the ballot less than two hours before the deadline, will continue his attack that Gramm is the "hand-picked" candidate of a White House staff that has been giving bad advise to President Reagan.

"I think the idea of somebody's being annointed by the Republican National Committee and (White House chief of Staff) Jim Baker ... is creating a lot of resentment among Republican voters," Grover says. "Texans don't need to be told whom to support."

Few barbs directed at Gramm have been spared in the race.

In one exchange, Mosbacher pointed out in ads that he is a lifelong Texan and Republican.

Gramm, a native of Georgia, responded by saying, "The only people who are lifelong Republicans are people who are dead. The only way to be a lifelong Republican is to be dead."

Gramm throughout the campaign has emphasized his support of Reagan. The former Texas A&M University economics professor co-sponsored the president's budget in 1981 and has been an outspoken proponent of 'Reaganomics.

"I'm basically saying, 'Look at all the digging I've done in the House with a small shovel," Gramm said. "I'm asking the people to give me a bigger shovel.

conservativism has gone off-course. He has called for massive across-the-board cuts in the federal budget. Mosbacher has run on the idea that private sector involvement can solve many federal government problems. He cites as examples some privately funded projects, such as special day care centers, in Houston he has helped organize.

And Paul, an ultra-conservative who favors returning to a gold standard for currency, has vowed to fight for a balanced budget. After being elected to the U.S. House four times, he, too, wants a bigger shovel.

All but Paul say they support

Reagan's mining of Nicaraguan harbors. All four oppose a nuclear freeze and generally oppose amnesty for illegal aliens and the need to correct military spending abuses. Mosbacher is the only candidate who says he would consider a tax increase to reduce the federal debt, and is the only candidate who favors the Equal Rights Amendment and opposes a right-to-life anti-abortion amendment. Gramm, Grover and Mosbacher all support development of the B-1 bomber and the MX missle. Paul is opposed.

Gramm says the key to reducing the deficit is renewed control of government spending. Grover favors eliminating the departments of Energy and Education and making "massive cuts across the board." Mosbacher would limit aggregate growth of federal spending in all areas to 3 percent. And Paul would end "military welfare" to foreign countries while eliminating welfare for the poor and what he calls "corporate welfare" - tax breaks for wealthy individuals and corporations.

Paul says he's in a sort of "political no-man's land

"If you take on every single special interest, you feel lonely. The only thing that sustains you is the belief that most middle class Americans feel the same way," Paul said.

DALLAS (AP) — When a Nixon administration official called a young Texas A&M economist in 1974 and asked him to help with a $20 billion energy independence program, the educator's answer was concise and abrupt.

The professor explained that he believed government had no business in the energy business and should let the free market run things.

"I told him," Phil Gramm recalled, "that if he wanted a written reference, he might look at Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," written in 1776. "Then I hung up." Gramm said.

Throughout his academic and political careers, Gramm has placed ideology before pragmatism. He made his mark in the U.S. House by co-sponsoring, while still a Democrat, President Reagan's 1981 budget The move so angered the party leadership that it voted to strip him of his seat on the powerful Budget Committee.

So "Boll Weevil" Gramm, 41, hung up on the Democrats. He switched parties and then, in a move of political theater, resigned his seat and went back to his district, asking voters to send him back to Washington. He won the February special election last year with 55 percent of the

And now Gramm is running again — running to replace retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

'My philosophy haw always been, you can win at anything if you're willing to pay the price." Gramm says. The grandson of a tenant farmer and circuit-riding Baptist preacher, Gramm grew up in Fort Benning, Ga. He failed the third, seventh and ninth grades, but made up the last two in summer school, and went on to receive a doctorate in economics at the University of Georgia. He joined the A&M faculty in 1967

His political career began inauspiciously with 150 letters be wrote to chambers of commerce offering to speak. He received one reply, from the Lions Club in Wortham, and delivered his first political speech to 13 people there.

Still a virtual unknown, he challenged Lloyd Bentsen for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination in 1976 and won 28 percent of the vote in the primary. Two years later, he was elected to Congress, and was reelected in 1980 and 1982. Seven months after winning the highly publicized special election last year, Gramm was again entering a race. "If I could have chosen a time for this race, I would not have chosen now." said Gramm. "I was confident Tower was going to run again. My wife and children were not pleased when I decided to run, but fate doesn't take your

Ron Paul

DALLAS (AP) - Nobody's ever accused Ron Paul of wavering on an issue.

On some issues the congressman from Lake Jackson is an arch-conservative. On others, he's an arch-liberal. Rarely is he in the middle.

"My whole program is to fight compromise, so I've never had to compromise," said Paul, who is now running against three other Republicans for the right to try and retain retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower's seat for the GOP. "I'm always waving a flag and saying, 'If you don't like me, you're unprincipled. Paul, 48, wants to end welfare assistance to the poor, as well as eliminate what he calls "welfare for the rich" tax advantages for big corporations and wealthy citizens.

These are immoral use of government power to help special interests," says Paul. He's voted against every budget that is not balanced, has opposed all foreign aid and the United Nations, and has supported making Social Security optional. He says he'd favor cutting off trade with the Soviet Union. The soft-spoken, slender, scholarly obstetrician rails against what he calls "the system that has driven us to the brink of bankruptcy. His ideas, he says, have put him in "political no-man's

"My own medical association gave $5,000 to (U.S. Rep. Phil) Gramm," said Paul.

Political action committees shun him, he says, because they "want special privilege. ... I vote for no special privilege and therefore they don't give me very much money

Paul does have a loyal following concentrated in his Houston-area district. He has been touted at times as a possible Libertarian presidential candidate, and was named by "Conservative Digest" as one of a dozen conservatives "most likely to lead after Reagan."

Paul, born in Pittsburgh, Pa., began studying economics while an Air Force flight surgeon in San Antonio. He first ran for Congress in 1974 and lost, was elected in a 1976 special election, but lost his seat in the November election later that year. He won again in 1978 and was re-elected in 1980 and 1982.

Paul says he tells voters a story about the introduction he received his first week on Capitol Hill. An appropriation of $37.5 million was under consideration, and one member suggested rounding it off to $40 million.

"I said why don't you round it off at $35 million, and they said, 'Oh, we never thought of that.'

Rob Mosbacher

DALLAS (AP) - Near the end of its 30 seconds, the political radio commercial breaks into a country-western refrain with a hoarse-throated good ol' boy singing 'Mos-bacher is the man!"

Hardly the kind of image expected from a "Young Urban Professional" with a Northeastern prep school education, a product of a wealthy Houston oil family and a long family tradition in Republican politics.

But Rob Mosbacher, 32, wants people to remember his name as he scurries to gain support in the race for the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate from Texas.

"We needed a campaign theme song and I asked my media man to find one that was original and catchy," said the fast-talking lawyer-oilman with boyish good looks.

"You've got to have a catchy tune because radio ads are so commonly turned off." Mosbacher said. "We had to have something people would remember."

Mosbacher entered his first political race virtually unknown outside of Houston. He delights in pointing out that he started the campaign to replace retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, with about the same name recognition as some previously victorious Texas candidates

"You have to remember that Lloyd Bentsen had 2 percent name recognition when he ran his first race (unseating U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough in 1970) and (former Gov.) Bill Clements was in about the same position when he first ran," Mosbacher said. Mosbacher says he hopes to make up in political know-how, fund raising and party connections what he lacks in age and experience. At 19, while a University of Texas political science major, he was youth coordinator for George Bush's 1970

U.S. Senate campaign. He was bitten by the political bug. Bush helped arrange a job for Mosbacher in the Washington office of Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and he completed the last two years of his degree at Georgetown University. He spent six years as an aide to Baker Mosbacher acknowledges that despite his party connections - his father served as finance chairman for Gerald Ford's 1976 presidential bid and George Bush's 1980 campaign and is on Ronald Reagan's re-election finance committee - he probably doesn't have the clout to defeat front-runner U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, without a runoff election.

'Mosbacher at least is injecting some new ideas into the campaign," wrote political analyst Phil Seib of Dallas."

Henry Grover

DALLAS (AP) - In his combative, quotable style, Henry Grover disagreed sharply when the moderator of a televised candidates' debate suggested that one Republican candidate absent - U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm was the front-runner in the U S. Senate race.

"I must disagree with you, Mr. Moderator," Grover said, his voice rising with each word. "I don't believe Phil Gramm is the front-runner. I believe you can get a poll to tell you anything you want to pay for. It was vintage Grover, bridesmaid in the 1972 race for governor and the 1980 race for the Texas Railroad Commission and now, blunt as ever, a late entry into the race to replace U.S. Sen. John Tower.

"I looked at the candidates and saw there was no solid conservative who could win," said Grover, 56, who filed just two hours before the deadline.

"I tried to get (former U.S. Rep.) Jim Collins to run. And I went right down to the wire hoping that Roger Staubach or Ross Perot would run," he said.

Grover, now in the public relations business, grew up in an eight-child Depression-era family. He began working at age 10 in San Antonio and, after his family moved to Houston, worked his way through St. Thomas University in Houston and became a public school history teacher.

He was elected to the Texas House in 1960 as a conservative Democrat amd served there until 1966, when he switched parties and was elected to the Texas Senate. In 1972, came within 100,000 votes of becoming the first Republican governor in Texas since Reconstruction, finishing second to rancher-banker Dolph Briscoe, whom he attacked with slashing rhetoric and called "Flip-Flop

As in 1972, money is Grover's biggest problem now. He hopes to get some of his own funds out of a mining project in Africa for the campaign.

His campaign pitch is that President Reagan has been led off his conservative course by his staff, and he will need strong conservative support in the Senate to get back on course if reelected He accuses Gramm of being the hand-picked candidate of Reagan's chief of staff, Texan James Baker, and says "People in Texas don't like to be told what to do. Gramm, Grover says, "should have filed in the Democratic primary. "This race is a real struggle for the soul of the Reagan administration," Grover said. "We need to let Reagan be Reagan, and I believe I can do an awful lot to help him carry this state and help him in Washington."

convenience into account.

DALLAS (AP) — In 1961, a political upstart from Wichita Falls captured the U.S. Senate seat first held by Sam Houston in a special election to replace Lyndon B. Johnson. He became the first statewide-elected Republican in 100 years.

Twenty-four years later, John Tower is abdicating his Senate seat at the pinnacle of his power, and Texas Democrats smell blood. "It's obvious with John Tower out, it ought to be somewhat easier" to win, said former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, who is most polls is the front-runner for the Democratic nomination. Krueger lost a bitter 1978 race to Tower by less than half of one Krueger's support among Democrats is being attacked on the conservative side by U.S. Rep. Kent

Hance, D-Lubbock, and on the liberal side by State Sen: Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin. All three have run vigorou:, well-financed campaigns and both analysts and the candidates say Hance's entry into the race - he was the last of the major candidates to announce - virtually ssures the need for a runoff. Democratic voters may on May 5 only narrow the field of three top candidates to two. To win the party nomination, a candidate must have more than 50 percent of the vote. "I don't foresee any way to avoid a runoff," said Hance, 41.

Doggett says both he and Hance have been inipping at the heels of the opposition.

Because of his close finish in 1978. Krueger "thinks this is more a position in the House of Lords that you inherit," Doggett said.

"Every round of press releases Bob puts out boils down to a statement that, 'I have already won this election. Please cast your vote accordingly," he Krueger, a 48-year-old native of New Braunfels who quit an academic career as a Shakespearean scholar and dean at Duke University to run for Congress, claims he's "concentrating on the issues, and the other candidates are concentrating on me.'

Doggett, a 37-year-old state legislator who has championed consumer, labor and social welfare issues, and Hance, a "Boll Weevil" who in 1981 co-authored what he calls "the largest tax cut in history" and has frequently supported the Reagan administration, claim Krueger has "flip-flopped" on several issues.

Doggett thinks Krueger is more conservative than he claims. Hance thinks Krueger is more liberal than he claims. Krueger says he's "fiscally conservative and socially liberal.

So it has gone in the Democratic Senate primary

Three little-known candidates are also in the race, each with a specific cause.

Harley Schlanger, 33, of Houston is pushing for laser-beam weapons, which he says are the only secure defense against nuclear war.

Robert Sullivan, 52, of Lufkin, wants to use his expertise as a tax accountant to show that the federal tax system is in such a mess that a complete revision is needed.

And David Young, 39, a Richardson appliance salesman, is campaigning on a spiritual platform offering "a clear commitment to moral excellence. Schlanger, Sullivan and Young stand little chance of winning or getting into a runoff, but do have an opportunity to air some of their views in the high-profile race.

Democrats have a chance to take the GOP's last statewide-elected office in Texas as well as chip away at the slim Republican majority in the Senate. As a result, more than the eyes of Texas are watching the race to replace Tower.

The three major candidates disagree sharply on four issues: a tax increase, amnesty for illegal aliens, aid to Central America and a nuclear freeze.

Hance opposes a tax increase and says he would seek to reduce the federal deficit with a flexible monetary policy encouraging lower interest rates and more investment opportunity.

Doggett favors a hike if the burden is shifted to more wealthy taxpayers and corporations.

Krueger says he believes the deficit could be reduced by limiting annual budget increases to between 5 and 7 percent. He says he opposes a tax hike now, but adds that an increase might be needed eventually.

Doggett and Krueger favor amnesty for illegal allens who have been in the United States for a engthy period. Hance opposes it. Doggett and Krueger support economic aid to Central America over military aid. Hance favors both. All three oppose the mining of Nicaraguan harbors. Doggett supports a mutually verifiable nuclear arms freeze. Hance supports a mutually verifiable freeze with assurances of parity between the superpowers. Krueger opposes a freeze, but supports nuclear "build-down" proposals to decrease the size of arsenals.

Lloyd Doggett

DALLAS (AP) - When state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, was nominated as assistant Senate president last year, the praise flowed freely from his fellow senators.

"I, too, would like to second the nomination of St. Lloyd of Austin," joked Carl Parker, the Senate prankster. Doggett's followers say the label may not be far off base.

Doggett gained a reputation in the Legislature as a tireless, effective worker with 120 bills to his credit. It's a reputation Doggett hopes will carry him to the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate.

"I need to get people to look beyond me to my record," said Doggett, 37. "I've got a lot of work to do these last three weeks" before the May 5 primary.

Like many Texas politicians, Doggett earned his stripes in student government at the University of Texas, where he served as student body president in 1967-68. He joined a law practice in Austin, where he grew up and attended high school as well as college, and ran for the state Senate in 1973. He's been a member of the state Senate since.

Doggett has strong support from labor and liberals. He is remembered to have often donned running shoes on the floor of the Senate while conducting filibusters against legislation he opposed.

His detractors say he is an unabashed liberal with a tendency toward grandstanding

"I'm the one who stands and fights for people without a PAC (political action committee) or special interest representing them," Doggett said.

'While campaigning I've been most touched by laid-off steelworkers at an Armco plant and a nurse in Amarillo I met who was trying to care for an elderly man who lived in a house with a dirt floor," he said. "I think I can make a difference in the lives of those people.

Doggett, thin and a fast-talker, has repeatedly accused former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, the front-runner, of having a spotty attendance record in the U.S. House and missing votes on $1.5 trillion worth of bills.

Krueger says he missed votes while campaigning for the U.S. Senate in 1978. Doggett claims a 99.6 percent attendance record on the Texas Senate floor.

Aides say Doggett has a "squeaky clean" reputation even dull by Texas Senate standards. "I saw him once with a beer in his hand, but I don't know if he ever finished it," campaign aide Rich Paul told the Dallas Morning News. But Doggett likes the image.

"I think integrity is always a plus," he said.

Kent Hance

DALLAS (AP) - U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, underdog "Boll Weevil" Democrat from West Texas, has faced many obstacles in his campaign to replace retiring U.S. Sen. John Tower

"One time I was driving down the Katy Freeway (in Houston) and all of a sudden this big ol' green sofa, which must have fallen off the back of a truck, was in my lane of traffic. I swerved and missed it," Hance said.

"We've had a lot of ups and downs in the campaign. Hance, a mailman's son from Lubbock known for his sense of humor and his conservative stances, is trailing in most polls of the Democratic primary for U.S. Senate.

But he says he's been an underdog before "I was 68 points behind when I ran for the state Senate." Hance said at a Washington fund-raiser. "The only ones who thought I could win were me, my wife and one of my Hance, 41, was born in Dimmitt and lived on a West Texas farm. He studied business administration at Texas Tech, went to law school at the University of Texas and returned to Lubbock to teach business law from 1968 to

He ran for the state Senate in 1974 and served in the Legislature for five years, until he ran for Congress, defeating George W. Bush, son of the vice president.

He was part of the new breed of young, conservative Democrats when he went to Capitol Hill in 1979. In his second term, the countryboy congressman landed a seat on the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, where he promptly angered the party leadership by co-sponsoring President Reagan's tax cut bill

Hance had so angered Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski that Hance's chair was exchanged for one with no wheels, he was excluded from a committee trip to China and was once forced to sit in the back of the bus during a committee trip to Baltimore.

Rostenkowski and Hance since have made peace. At a fund-raiser for Hance last summer, the Chicago Democrat presented Hance with a certificate pronouncing him the most improved student in the "Dan Rostenkowski Old School of Hardball Chicago Politics.

After acknowledging he trails in the race and hopes for spot in a runoff, Hance tells crowds he expects ultimately to win the Democratic nomination.

"I'm right on the issues," he says in his slow West Texas drawl. "I talk like a Texan, I think like a Texan and more importantly, I vote like a Texan.

Bob Krueger

DALLAS (AP) - When Bob Krueger, dean of arts and sciences at Duke University, submitted his resignation to return to Texas and run for political office. Duke President Terry Sanford was incredulous

"He told me just to take a leave of absence," Krueger recalled of the 1973 conversation with Sanford, a former governor and veteran of two presidential bids.

When I told him I was going to run for Congr didn't even know what district I lived in, he rebelieve me," Krueger said. "But I told him I run until I win, and I didn't want anything to fall back on. Krueger, a Shakespearean scholar from New Braunfels, won that contest for the U.S. House in 1974 and served four years. Now he's running for the Senate seat being vacated by arch-rival John Tower. Tower defeated the Valley businessman, rancher and former ambassador to Mexico by only 12,000 of the 2.3 million votes cast in the 1978 race. It was a bitterly fought contest: Tower at one point refused to shake Krueger's hand "I don't approach this race with any sense of vengence," said Krueger, 48, acknowledged by most to be the Democratic front-runner "Lyndon Johnson didn't win the first time. John Tower didn't win the first time. Texas is a big state ... and it's very hard to get known the first time.' Still', he concedes, "there hasn't been a day in the last six years I haven't thought about it. Krueger oversees the family businesses that have made him "prosperous but not rich." He attended Southern Methodist University and received a Ph.D. from Oxford University in England. The rangy, 6-foot-3, 190-pounder with a fondness for literary quotations and a soft-spoken demeanor says he doesn't miss academics.

"I gave up the thing I most wanted - dean - for the second thing I most want - senator," Krueger said. Krueger said his campaign pitch calls for a 'partnership" among interest groups.

His critics accuse him of being vague on the issues. "I get support from business, from minorities, from labor and from women and my opponents think because I get support from all of them, something must be wrong,

Missing out on a rematch with Tower wasn't a disappointment, he said.

Texas Supreme Court candidates who are slugging it out in a nasty campaign say they are not pleased with how the race has developed.

"I really wish it had not come to what it has," said incumbent C.L. Ray.

"That kind of politics is totally inappropriate for a judicial race," said Shelby Sharpe of Fort Worth, a challenger in the May 5 Democratic primary.

Nevertheless, they punch and jab. The Ray-Sharpe race is the loudest in a off-year statewide ballot that has produced little other political Texans this year pick a railroad commissioner, three Supreme Court justices, including a chief justice, and three Court of Criminal Appeals justices.

The most famous name on the ballot probably is John Hill, former secretary of state, attorney general and surprise loser in the 1978 gubernatorial election. Hill wants to be chief justice of the Supreme Court. Sears McGee, his opponent in the Democratic primary, says he can't "imagine" Hill on the high court.

"I really think he is running for governor," said McGee. But if Hill wins the seat, McGee won't have to imagine Hill on the Supreme Court. He'll see him every Wednesday when the nine justices are seated to hand down decisions. McGee now holds one of the nine seats. and doesn't have to give it up to make the chief justice

"Let me say this about any future governor's race. If nominated, I will not run. If elected, I will not serve." he said when he announced. The Hill-McGee winner moves to a November campaign against John Bates of Waco, unopposed in the GOP primary. The November winner will replace Chief Justice Jack Pope, who is not seeking another term.

In the Sharpe-Ray race, both camps have invoked the name of Don Yarbrough, a former Supreme Court justice now in prison for perjury. Yarbrough, a political unknown, was elected in 1976, before his legal troubles were known.

Ray brings up Yarbrough when mentioning that Sharpe has no judicial experience. "The people of Texas have got to know that my opponent from Fort Worth is not the kind of guy we ought to have on the Supreme Court," said Ray. "This man has no experience. If they aren't careful they could wind up with another Don Yarbrough.

Campaign spokesman Richard Jenson said the Ray campaign does not mean to imply that Sharpe is likely to wind up in prison as did

ampa boys accomplish track goals

LEVELLAND-Pampa Harvesters have two-shot High boys' track team accomplished all they set out to do this spring, setting goals of winning a meet, finishing among the top four in the district meet and having some regional qualifiers.

"I'm just pretty pleased with the way things have gone," said Pampa Coach Gary Cornelsen. "We set goals when we started and we reached those goals.

The Pampa High Boys' golf squad totally dominated the District 1-4A Tournament this spring, winning all six district meets.

Pampa Coach Mike Brent knew he had a talented, experienced squad when the 1984 season opened, but to end up winning the district by 80 strokes seemed stranger than fiction

"I didn't think we would dominate everybody like we did," Brent said. "Borger had three players with varsity experience back and I figured Canyon would be a lot

Pampa had an overall score of 1,891 while Borger finished in second place at 1,971. Canyon was third at 2,032.

"I think what happened is that we intimidated them early in the season when we shot a good score in bad weather," Brent said. "We played good all season considering the weather we had. We were playing in tournaments with an average wind speed of 25 miles per hour and the temperature right at 40 degrees.'

The Harvesters, led by district medalist Paul McIntire, had an average stroke round of 315 in six district meets with a 289 as their best round. 'We beat Borger by eight strokes in the final round at Dumas and I figured they would be within eight strokes of us all season long," Brent said. "Borger though has started playing some good golf and I feel like they're going to be one of the teams to beat in the regional

'The kids set a goal to win district. They've accomplished that goal." Brent said. "The kids set another goal to finish among the top two in regionals and get to state."

Brent didn't mention a third goal, but that one is obvious. A state championship trophy would look mighty nice alongside the district trophy.

Game No. 4 will be played in Seattle's Kingdome Tuesday night with a fifth game, if necessary, set for Dallas Thursday.

The Sonics, who gained a split of the first two games of the series in Dallas, trailed 57-52 at halftime. But Seattle came out fast in the second half, outscoring the Mavericks 11-2 in the first 2:50 of the third quarter for a 63-59 advantage.

A key in Seattle's victory was its defensive job on Mark Aguirre, Dallas' high-scoring pooints in the second half before fouling out with 2:28 left in the game. Aguirre had 15 of his points in the first

(AP) - Two-time defending champion Hollis Stacy and Japan's Avako Okamoto both birdied the 18th hole Saturday to pull into a tie with Betsy King after three rounds of the $150,000 LPGA S&H Classic.

Stacy, hoping to become the second woman to win three straight in the longest continuous running event on the tour, sank a 10-foot putt on the par 5, 443-yard 18th, while Okamoto completed her day-long climb with a one-footer.

Both golfers started the day three shots behind second-round leader Vicki Fergon and carded 66s for 54-hole totals of 12-under-par 204.

King, winner of the Women's Kemper Open last month, shot a 68 and settled for the tie after leading over most of the back nine on the 6,023-yard Pasadena Yacht &

Angelo bridge over the Tiber. His imagination built a similar bridge for the double march of condemned souls panderers and seducers - in the Eighth Circle of his Inferno in "The Divine Comedy.

For the million and more pilgrims who flocked to Rome during the Holy Year of Redemption ending Easter Sunday, the most haunting and symbolic memory must have been of the pope in a bare, whitewashed cell at Rebibbia prison, on the outskirts of the city, gently taking the hand that tried to kill him and whispering forgiveness to the Turkish Moslem condemned to a life sentence for the May 1981 assassination attempt.

Pope John Paul II preached and practiced reconciliation during the Holy Year he proclaimed for the 1,950th anniversary of Christ's death.

The contrasting visions of lost souls and a sinner forgiven mark the changing path of the pilgrim's progress since Pope Boniface VIII inaugurated the first Holy Year on Christmas Eve, 1299, and 200,000 visitors converged on Rome to make the then-required 15 visits to St. Peter's (30 for local residents). By the year 1450, when Pope Paul II established by papal bull the custom of a Holy Year every 25 years, tourist traffic across the Tiber had become so heavy that Dante's Bridge of the Holy Angel collapsed, sending 200 pilgrims to their

The jubilee originally was intended for the start of each new century, but successive popes have altered their frequency. Clement VI reduced the time span to 50 years. Urban VI called for a Holy Year every 33 years in memory of Christ's time on earth. Pius XI decreed 1933 a Year of Redemption to observe the 1,900th anniversary of the Crucifixion, which the current pope apparently would like to see continued every half-century.

The year begins with the pope striking a hammer at the "porta santa," the holy door leading into St. Peter's that is open only during the jubilee, and intoning three times: "Aperite mihi portas justitiae" - open unto me the gates of righteousness. At the closing services, the door is bricked up and plastered over, not to be opened again until the millenium Holy Year, which begins on Christmas Eve, 1999.

Rome's Ministry of Tourism counted nearly 5 million visitors to the city in 1983, but hotel registrations were down nearly 9 percent from a year ago. "The worst thing is that this pope is never home in Rome," complained a desk clerk at the Columbus Hotel just off St. Peter's Square, a favorite with pilgrims. "He proclaims a Holy Year and then takes off for Central America or Poland or some place when pilgrims by the hundreds of thousand are in the square waiting for his blessing from the window."

Archbishop Mario Schierano, head of the central denies that the statistics indicate "a failure of the Jubilee Year." He and other Vatican officials point out that large groups of pilgrims had not yet arrived when the figures were compiled at the end of the year, and that the church over the centuries has become rather expert at caring for the Holy Year hordes in convents, retreat houses, hospices and youth

In many religions and cultures, back to the dawn of history, certain rivers, mountains, wells, cities have been designated as holy places of pilgrimage: Moslems making the hajj to Mecca, Chaucer's happy band on the way to Canterbury, Hindus to the sacred river at Benares, the ayatollah's followers to Qom. Jerusalem has been a holy city since King David brought the Ark of the Covenant there The Roman catacombs became the goal of pilgrims when Pope Damasus restored them in the fourth century. The graffiti on the walls spell out their popularity ever

The pilgrim path always has been beset with dangers: shipwreck, thieves, disease, poor sanitation, inflated inn prices, capture and perhaps murder at the hands of infidels. St. Jerome, who came to Jerusalem as a pilgrim and remained 30 years, preached against pilgrimages, reminding the faithful that they could "reach the Gates of Heaven just as well from Britain.

Almost from the start of the Christian era, all roads led to Rome, where St. Peter and Paul were martyred and buried.

In the beginning, a specified number of visits

Rome, which attracted hundreds of pilgrims in jogging shoes.

During the Age of Enlightenment in the 18th century, the poet Johann Goethe and other anti-establishment intellectuals led pilgrimages to the pagan ruins in Rome as an alternate to the Holy Year activities. In this Holy Year, Rome's Communist-controlled city hall similarly called attention to the Eternal City's other diversions with jazz concerts, a free circus and rock festivals.

The seven-centuries-old lure and mystical force of Holy Year celebrations were summed up by the French

Engineer has burning desire to fight fires

By JOE B. McKNIGHT Associated Press Writer COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) -Edwin Smith's burning desire is to see that you can eat, sleep and work safe from the hazards of fire.

To that end, he will try to burn a part of anything you use - chairs, tables, drapes. carpet, bedding - to help those who might find themselves in real blazes

The work has made Smith an authority in fire research He has written standards used nationwide for materials that go into buildings, furnishings, equipment and supplies.

Smith, who holds a Ph.D. in chemical engineering. developed a small-scale fire test method adopted by the American Society for Testing and Materials as the standard system to test materials and products.

In a laboratory littered with rolls of wallpaper and vinyls, sheets of wallboard, bats of insulation, blocks of plastics and other materials, he has burned or charred segments of just about any material used in building and furnishing hotels, offices or dwellings

To test them all, he built a device that measures all critical elements of fire. The apparatus is now used worldwide to test ignition points and burn rates of everything from common wallpaper to the newest man-made fibers and plastics.

Smith, 60, teaches introductory chemistry at Ohio State University while continuing his research.

He became interested in fire research after he was asked how to quantitatively describe the way a substance burns. It became a burning question, so to speak, and answering it raised more questions that have involved much of his time since the late 1960s

"I came up with this release rate apparatus," he says, describing an electric furnace where burn, char or melt characteristics of a substance can be closely measured and recorded.

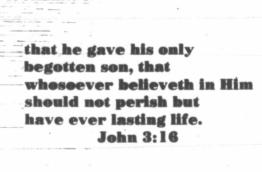

Using up to 60 amps of electricity to heat four metal rods in front of a vertical metal reflector of about 2 square feet, the furnace heats to closely controlled temperatures — up to 1,600 degrees Fahrenheit.

The box-like gadget measures "four of the principal parameters involved in describing a fire. Ease of ignition, size of flame or rate of heat release, combustion products released, and flame travel

Center, since its inception in 1976, has been dedicated to oviding quality day care to children from all economic

- To do this, the day care's administrators have had to rely on federal and state grants, United Way funds and local donations. Because of this funding, Community Day Care Center is able to give as many as 86 children, ages 0 to 5, a clean, attractive place to stay while their parents are working, loving teachers, nutritious food and an educational and fun curriculum.

In March 1982, the center moved from the old Catholic school building on Browning to their new home on Gwendolyn. A $150,000 donation by the M. K. Brown Foundation plus more than $50,000 raised from the Pampa community itself paid for the new facility.

Today, Administrator Barbara Kirkham and Kim Lunceford, assistant director.

Title 20 of the Federal Social Security Act provides a block grant to the state of Texas which matches the funds and then distributes the money where it is needed, Kirkham explained. The remainder of the center's funding comes from local donations.

"We have a state and federal contract that is decreasing every year," Kirkham said. "We are now about 50 percent locally funded. This support helps us help children from low income families. It helps us keep our sliding pay scale."

Community Day Care takes referrals from the Texas Department of Human Resources for neglected or abused children, as well as providing day care for children whose parents pay on a sliding scale according to their income - the less they make, the less they have to oversee 12 employees in months to 2½ years, 2½ years to 31/2 or 4 years, and four to five years.

Children are cared for in groups of 0-18 months, 18

When they enter the center their skills are tested to see what areas may need special attention. Each group follows a planned, though not strictly structured, curriculum. "At this age, you don't want to structure them too much," Lunceford said.

Through learning centers, puppets and games, the children learn motor and language skills and coordination. Kirkham keeps a number of children to staff ratio that is as much as, or more than, Texas law requires. "That is an essential difference that sets day care apart," Kirkham

A kitchen dietician prepares a hot breakfast and lunch for the children each day, as well as an afternoon snack. On the day the center was visited, breakfast was eggs, toast, jelly, juice and milk. At lunch, the children ate stew, cornbread, fruit salad, milk and juice and the afternoon snack was crispy rice treats. "A favorite," said Lunceford

All Community Day Care staff members are required to have 12 clock hours a year of outside training in child care. They attend seminars and classes at local colleges. Each staff member also holds a health card from the Texas Department of Health.

We work closely with the department of health,' Kirkham said. "We have our own shot clinics and physical before school starts each

"We're not going into the community right now for fields trips and all, though we would like to," she said. "We just don't have the transportation right now. But we do have volunteers bring in films and things like that."

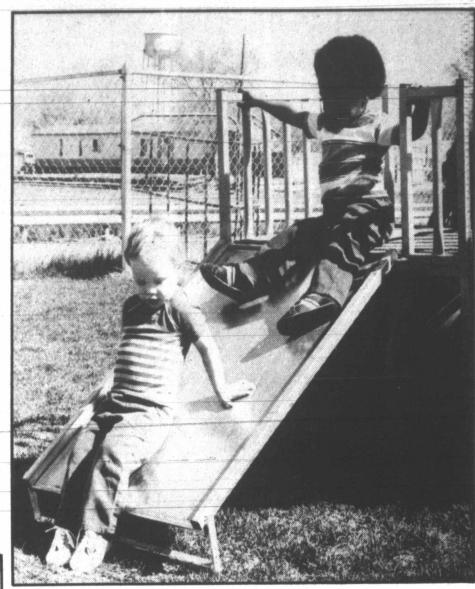

"Right now we're planning an Easter party and an Easter egg hunt," Lunceford added. "The parents will bring the snacks and stuff."

Although Community Day Care has a waiting list of children, Kirkham said she has never had to turn down a protective custody child referred to them by the DHR.

"Someday we might not have a place, but so far there's always been room," she said."We do have some turnover each month. Mom quits working, or the family

Toys and equipment are furnished by organizations and churches in Pampa, Kirkham said. Some also donate funds to the center on a regular basis. "It doesn't matter if it's $10 a month, it's just good knowing it's going to be there," she added.

This past week, the new Parents Action Committee met to work towards building a storm shelter for the center, Kirkham said. "We sure need one. To have this many children in one building, it's a real safety factor. They're (the committee) working with the board of directors, but they're really a separate group. I hope they'll become an ongoing organization.'

A first step in ensuring food safety is using common sense when grocery shopping. For example, if you have purchased perishable foods, don't plan to make other stops on your way home. Refrigerated and frozen foods will retain their high quality and remain safe to eat longer if kept sufficiently cold. It is a good idea to check refrigerator and freezer temperatures occasionally. Hardware stores carry thermometers just for this purpose. The refrigerator should maintain a Of that number, 28 were temperature of 34 degrees to 40 degrees F., and the Canned, packaged and other shelf - staple products should be stored in a dry, cool place and arranged so that the oldest package or can is used first. Canned goods which show signs of leaking or bulging should be discarded. Food from such cans should not be prepared or tasted.

Proper food handling is as important as food storage and is essential for preventing food - related illness. Points to remember include:

-Keep work surfaces, utensils, clothing, hands, even kitchen towels, scrupulously clean.

-Avoid coughing or sneezing around food. Wear plastic gloves if you have a cut or open sore on your

-Wash hands thoroughly after handling raw meat and poultry.

Serving temperature is also important. Hot foods should always be served hot (140 degrees F. or above), and cold foods cold (40 degrees F. or below). Bacteria multiply fastest at temperatures between 60 degrees F. and 126 degrees F. Two hours is the maximum time any food should be held at room temperature; less is better.

Eggs, milk, poultry and seafood are particularly susceptible to bacterial growth. Use extra precautions when preparing, serving and storing these foods or any foods prepared with them.

Leftovers should be refrigerated promptly, but placing hot food directly in the refrigerator is not a good idea. When a large quantity of warm food needs to be refrigerated, place in small, shallow pans to speed up cooling. It's a good practice to use leftovers within four days and to reheat them.

Happy Easter! Just listen to the events of the past week events as varied as the colors of Easter eggs.

Did you know that Sue and Buster Higdon are in the process of moving from Pampa to Weatherford, Okla., to be near other family members? Buster retired last year from Celanese after 29 years of service - all but two of those years were spent in Pampa. Sue's popularity as a provider of luncheon and dinner music and as leader of a popular dance combo kept her busy after retirement from a 27 - year career as a teacher in the Pampa school system. Perhaps her final Pampa performance was last Sunday when she played dinner music for the Sunday buffet at the Pampa Club. Several of the couple's neighbors met at a local restaurant recently to bid them farewell. Enjoying dinner with the Higdons were Dean and Kermit Butler, LaVerne and Johnny Hutchison, Anna Laura and Lloyd Batson, Jane and Ed Langford and Bena, Ted and Tiffany Quillen. To Sue and Buster, we say a reluctant "Goodbye!" and a hearty, "We'll miss you! Good luck to you Heard that guests at the Pampa Country Club Easter luncheon were all dressed up in colorful spring fashions. Ruth (Mrs. Jake) Osborne was there in blue ultra suede, Karen (Mrs. Jim) Gardner in springy blue and white, Colleen (Mrs. Fred) Urbanczyk in black quiana and daughter Jaquitta in mauve suede, Agnes Rose in lavender from head to foot, Audrey (Mrs. W. L. ) Campbell and Dorothy (Mrs. Ralph) Gardiner in buttercup yellow suits, Joyce (Mrs. C. A.) Scott in apricot, Loraine (Mrs. Elmer) Fite in green and white linen.

Many were the compliments on those club decorations made by Norma Jean (Mrs. Frank) Healy, whose heathered aqua dress complemented her beautiful stylish hairdo. One of the surprises of the day was when her husband - manager Frank brought the Easter bunny in on a decorated golf cart! Another first! Sounded like a fun day for all.

It's "Welcome aboard!" to Kurt Burlington, staff pharmacist at Coronado Community Hospital. Before moving to Pampa from Pocatello, Idaho, he and his wife Judy and little daughter Katie lived in Indiana and Illinois. Kirt is pursuing his private pilot's license and rebuilding an antique motorcycle. Sailing is another favorite pastime. Judy is a super cook, and a pianist. They belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter - day Saints.

The week has been filled with activities for residents of both nursing homes. There was a party at the Coronado Nursing Center on Good Friday with Mary (Mrs. Frank) Conner and Elva (Mrs. James) Ring of the Central Baptist Church in charge. The Pampa Mall Easter bunny was there, too. Sunday School, communion and church services are planned for this morning. This afternoon, a group from the Mary Ellen & Harvester Church of Christ will be singing.

Don't get me wrong. I think taking care of your eyesight is just as important as the next guy. In fact, that's why I went to Dr.'s Simmons & Simmons in the first place...to see about extended wear contacts.

I know a lot of stores have them. But I figure for something as important as my eyes, I needed an eyecare specialist to make sure I get the best fit possible And besides, for one fee, I got a thorough examination, the right type of lens for me, a good fit and check-ups to make sure I'm getting the best wear possible.

Now that I've got my extended wear contacts from Drs. Simmons & Simmons, I've got more interesting things to do with my time than worrying about my eyes...see what I mean?

How battered wives can find assistance

NEW YORK (NEA) People get used to anything. That's one reason women stay with men who beat them, says Dr. Jean Giles-Sims, assistant professor of sociology at Texas Christian Iniversity in Fort Worth. and author of "Wife Battering: A Systems Theory Approach" ('83, Guilford Press).

"Therefore, a crisis must occur for the women to look at the violence differently For instance, a child runs to a neighbor for help. Abused families are known for their isolation and suddenly the wife is incredibly embarrassed that someone sees what's happening, and she wakes up for the first time in years to the idea that it shouldn't be.

Then, too, she may begin fearing for her children's safety or that her next beating might be one she won't

Still, even that may not be enough to get her out of the house and into a shelter. says Dr. Giles-Sims. What can, however, is covered in her book. It is based on her 1979 study of 31 women at a New England shelter, and her ongoing association with the Family Violence Research Center at the University of New Hampshire.

The women, between 18 and 47 years old, were mostly working class — one was married to a university psy-chologist — and most "fit the model we've read about of the wife abused over a long period of time," she

Dr. Giles-Sims interviewed the women while they were at the shelter, and six months later - "No other study that I know of has done this," she says and basically learned two things. One, that even after the women decided to seek outside protection, "it took weeks or months before

Yet it's understandable why abused wives do go home again. "Most want the family situation to work," she says. Also, those accustomed to being financially dependent on the man are "extremely vulnerable" outside the shelter and often opt for physical pain rather than loneliness and econom-

"Eight women who went home again worked with their spouses on dealing with anger and how patterns of male-female rela tionships lead to this kind of violence," she says. those, four later left, but four really made fundamental changes in their marriages.

Still, there isn't always a counseling program handy and the husband isn't always open to it, which means an overwhelming number of battered wives are still out there on their own.

"An estimated 1.8 million women live with men who have beaten them, but only a few seek shelter or professional help," she says. And that's why support from a friend, a relative, a co-work-er is so crucial. "Although the battered woman has to take responsibility for herself, the more opportunities offered to her, the less likely she is to remain in that situation. And the more aware society is of these problems, the more she'll know it's inappropriate to be beaten up.' How anyone goes about offering help, however, is tricky. "You don't tell her she has to do such and such and saying I know this is happening to you' is very apt to get a denial. People try to hide these things. The want you to know you can call on me any time if you ever need any help.' Repeat it several times. It might have an impact at one point and not another.

If and when the woman does seek shelter, be there for her with a sympathetic ear. And while she's going through the turmoil of trying to get her life together, ferret out any connections you have to get her an apartment, perhaps, a job, a sense of security.

"If the woman is dependent on the man, without that kind of outside support, she's going to go back to him after the shelter," says Dr. Giles-Sims, "and she might not be in a position to leave

In his winning essay, Burnett said Golding's story of English schoolboys stranded on a tropical island illustrated that only in an orderly system where freedom was joined to responsibility could society survive.

It is when the boys throw off all responsibility, says Burnett, that they are reduced to savages and their society is doomed.

Dear Abby

Mom looks for right way to explain sexual abuse

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a boy 5 and a girl 2 1/2. Can you recommend any books that will help me explain sexual abuse to my children? I want them to be aware that they have the right to say no to anybody who does something they feel uncomfortable with. But I want to tell them in a way that won't frighten them.

The older they get, the more I realize that I won't be able to watch over them 24 hours a day. I want them to be prepared to deal with that situation if, God forbid, they should ever have to.

HOUSTON MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Ask the librarian at your public library if there are such books. (There should be.) Also, your local bookstores will surely have some. In the meantime, tell your children that their bodies are private, and they have the right to say no to anyone who attempts to violate that privacy.

And be sure to tell them that if anybody-and I mean anybody: relatives, close friends, neighbors or sitters-tries to entice them into secret "games" and makes them promise they won't tell, they should immediately tell you. Statistics show that most children are sexually abused by relatives, neighbors or friends of the family.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an intelligent, successful woman with a silly problem I'm embarrassed to ask my friends about. In my last semester of college I married a wonderful man. My career was beginning to bloom, my wedding festivities were tri-state and I was much less sensitive to the feelings of other people than I am now.

In short, I sent written thanks to about half the friends and family who gave me wedding gifts, and I don't know quite what to do about the others. You see, it's been five years. I still have the list of names and addresses, but I don't know what to say-if anything.

My marriage is strong, my son is adorable, but my conscience is anything but clear. What should I do? I know I wouldn't excuse this kind of negligence in anyone else, and I don't know whether I should excuse it in what was a younger, flightier me.

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: Ignoring your problem will not make it disappear. Don't look for a "clever" way to say, "Better late than never." Admit your embarrassment, apologize for your tardiness and simply say, "Better late than never."

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a very fine young woman. She has been married before. (So have I.) I would like to ask her to marry me, but she has made it plain that she does not want a ring of any kind. She is very low-key and doesn't care for diamonds or anything flashy. Any suggestions?

DEAR MAN: Give her a pearl necklace-with no strings attached

DEAR ABBY: What is the official position of the Roman Catholic Church regarding human artificial inemination? Some say the church condemns it, and others say it depends upon which diocese you live in

DEAR NEEDS: Artificial insemination was rejected as not morally acceptable by Pope Pius XII as early as Oct. 22, 1951, in an address to Italian midwives. He stated that parents should be completely dedicated to their children, and that this involvement carries over into the marriage act itself, so much so that artificial insemination cannot be approved because it is such a depersonalized procedure, and that which is sacred is reduced to

DEAR POLLY - Can I use regular salad cucumbers rather than special pickling varieties to make pickles? I'm planning my garden now and I'd like to plant only one variety, but I do want to try some pickle recipes this year. All the recipes I've seen specify pickling-type cucumbers. — MRS.

PVC patio furniture

DEAR MRS. H.B. - No problem. I've made delicious pickles out of salad cucumbers, both the standard variety and the European-type seedless variety. The main advantage of pickling varieties is that they stay smaller and are sometimes crisper when pickled, but you can have small pickles by using small, immature salad cucumbers. You also can use the bigger cukes, slicing them or cutting them into sticks, spears or chunks for pickles.

When you're planning your pickling later this summer, don't forget to take advantage of the bounty of other vegetables in your garden. You can pickle zucchini or other summer squash using standard cucumber pickle recipes, green immature tomatoes, snap beans, onions, and many other vegetables. — POLLY

Nuclear waste program slated

The status of nuclear waste repositories will be the subject of a presentation by Department of Energy representative Linda McClain to the Pampa Desk and Derrick Club's April meeting 7 p.m. Tuesday at the CLub Biarritz.

McClain is the project manager for Permian Basin studies at the DOE Salt Repository Project office in Columbus, Ohio. She will discuss the status of nuclear waste repositories and the Texas program and will present films on possible waste sites in Texas.

A verified list of land-owners, sub-surface mineral right owners and land operators in Deaf Smith and Swisher counties where possible high-level nuclear waste dumps are to be located was released in March. The site in Deaf Smith County is approximately 19 miles northwest of Hereford and the Swisher County site is about four miles northeast of

A report on studies in both potential repository areas has been forwarded to the state government. If either area is selected, the state of Texas can veto the selection.

Bondurant defended the airplanes, including the company's Lear Jet.

Washington later told reporters that GSU might be trying to force improper expenses on ratepayers. 'We think the expenses

Crops, pastures thirsting In Agriculture By JOE VanZANI

Texas (AP) — An unusually dry springtime has Texas crops, pastures and ranges thirsting for moisture.

Dry conditions are prevailing over all of the state except north central and eastern sections, with prolonged drought conditions continuing in western areas.

Rain is needed throughout the state to boost young corn, southern, central and coastal areas and to enable planting in other locations, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Lack of moisture in western areas is causing ranchers to continue with supplemental feeding and to step up livestock sales

Cotton is still being planted in central counties while grain sorghum planting is active in West Central Texas (San Angelo area), Carpenter noted. Corn planting is under way in the Panhandle and South Plains, where some sugar beet planting continues. Some corn and grain sorghum also are being planted in northeastern counties following recent rain

Soil temperatures continue to moderate and should allow good seed germination, Carpenter said Temperatures at the 4-inch depth the past week in western areas, as reported by the Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University, averaged as follows: Big Spring, 69 degrees F.; Bushland, 55; Dell City, 67; Haskell, 69; Lubbock, 63; San Angelo, 71; and Pecos, 68.

Wheat is heading over much of the state and needs rain badly, said Carpenter. Because of light yield prospects, some farmers are cutting wheat for hay or allowing cattle to graze it out.

Irrigation pumps are running full blast over much of the South Plains and in the Trans-Pecos area as farmers get ready to plant cotton. Young crops are being irrigated heavily in the Winter Garden of Southwest Texas and in the Rio Grande Valley due to the dry spring weather, Carpenter noted.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Farmers have started planting corn and are continuing to plant sugar beets and onions. Irrigated wheat continues to look good and is starting to joint. Dryland wheat is in poor shape. Ranges are providing limited grazing and need a good rain.

SOUTH PLAINS: Preplant irrigations continue in full swing as farmers get ready to plant cotton. Corn planting is under way while sugar beet planting is nearing completion. Some late onions and potatoes are still being planted. Irrigated wheat is starting to boot. Dryland wheat and ranges are in poor shape due to lack of moisture.

ROLLING PLAINS: Small grains are suffering from lack of moisture and ranges need rain. Cattle on graze-out wheat are making good gains. Farmers continue to get cropland ready for planting. First cuttings of alfalfa hay are under way in Wilbarger CONTROL HORN FLIES WITH INSECTICIDE EAR TAGS Ear tags containing synthetic pyrethroid insecticides do a good job in controlling horn and ear ticks in cattle, and more and more cattlemen are using them.

These specially treated ear tags generally give good fly control throughout the spring and summer sessions. They can be used safely on cattle and calves, including lactating dairy

Considering their convenience and long - lasting control of flies, ear tags are relatively inexpensive when compare to penning cattle and spraying them with an insecticide two or three times during the fly season.

Despite the effectiveness of these ear tags, some cases of horn fly resistance to pyrethroid insecticides had been suspected. To avoid this possibility of increased resistant development for the upcoming fly season, several steps can be

Use ear tags on all animals according to label directions. Don't put ear tags on until shortly before fly season starts. This is usually about April or May for most of Texas. Tagging time will correspond with the working of cattle in the spring. Always remove old ear tags when retagging cattle in the Use alternate fly control methods from year to year, such as ear tags treated with insecticides which have a different mode of action, forced - used dust bags or traditional sprays with alternate type insecticides.

Several different types of insecticide - treated ear tags are available to cattlemen and all do a good job in controlling flies. If you haven't used them in the past, this might be a good year

Whichever method you use, fly and ear tick control is important on cattle because it improves the animal's thrift,

TIPS ON FERTILIZING SHADE TREES

Shade trees seldom need extra fertilization when a good lawn maintenance program is followed. But when shade trees do need is important Over - fertilization of trees can force excessive top growth, making them vulnerable to storm damage.

fertilizer, proper application

Trees rarely need fertilization more than once every three years except in extremely sandy soils and under special conditions.

The hard December freeze injured some trees, and those should receive additional nitrogen fertilizer to speed up the healing of damaged tissue. Also, trees occasionally may need nutrients when their roots are confined by street and curb installations and other structures

Fertilizer recommendations are generally based on trunk diameter and make no allowance for the fact that the root may be confined to a small area. Thus, fertilizing according to such instructions may result in over - fertilization and tree

The safest method of computing the amount of fertilizer to apply at any one time is to base it on the number of square feet included in the branch spread of the tree. I recommend two pounds of actual nitrogen per 1.000 square feet of branch area per application, which would be six pounds of ammonium nitrate per 1,000 square feet.

When fertilizing, make several applications - one in the fall at the usual first killing frost, another just before new growth starts in the spring, and a third applied in midsummer.

Spread fertilizer evenly beneath the branch spread of the tree and water thoroughly. Without moisture, roots cannot use the nutrients. If the tree's root zone is confined by buildings, curbs, walks or other obstructions. base the fertilizer application on the actual root zone. Under these circumstances it may be necessary to fertilize every year to provide an adequate supply of nutrients.

REPRODUCE PLANTS BY LAYERING

Layering is one of the easiest and most successful methods for homeowners to propagate (reproduce) landscape plants, and spring is a good time for this practice

Most landscape plants can be propagated by cuttings, seed, grafting or layering.

Layering, cuttings and grafting have the advantage of reproducing a plant identical to the parent plant. While layering often is not practiced by commercial nurserymen who want large numbers of plants, it is an easy, successful method for homeowners who want only one or a few more of a favorite plant To begin, make sure parent plants are healthy. To layer, wound a branch with a slanting cut 2 inches long on the upper side of the branch. Dust the cut with a rooting hormone to hasten the rooting

Next, bury the branch, which is still attached to the parent, in the ground with the tip protruding and the wound covered with salt. Pin the branch to the soil with a wooden peg or wire wicket, or weight it with a stone. Be sure the soil over and around the wound is high in organic material. Sandy soil is best. Mound the soil several inches over the cutting and firm it. An organic mulch of pine needles, leaves, bark or litter can help maintain consistent moisture. Three to six months later, or sooner if the roots are formed, the branch can be cut from the parent plant, and the new plant is on its own. Protect the propagated branch from drying and give the new plant extra care until

Natural gas price expected to rise

WASHINGTON (AP) - Pipeline companies, acknowledging possible hardships for consumers, are expecting to pay 14 percent to 17 percent more for natural gas next winter when federal price ceilings expire on about one-third of the nation's supply of the fuel.

The price increases, if passed on to consumers through higher residential rates, could raise yearly utility bills for the 45 million American families who heat their homes with gas by an average $50 to $65 in 1985.

In a survey released Saturday, interstate pipeline companies said their present contracts with gas producers will expose them to price increases averaging 9 percent to 12 percent above inflation when the government controls come off next January under a 1978 law.

The survey was conducted by the Interstate Natural Gas Association of America, a trade group of pipeline companies who buy gas from producers and resell it to local utilities and

The association said potential price escalation in the thousands of contracts varies widely from pipeline to pipeline. with only 20 percent of them conforming to the national average.

For about two-fifths of the natural gas market, the increases will be much larger — in the 18 percent to 20 percent range above inflation - unless the contracts are renegotiated voluntarily or changed by Congress, the study said.

The other 40 percent of the market is served by pipelines with little exposure to contracts with "indefinite price escalator" clauses that become effective Jan. 1, 1985, the study says

The anticipated price increases upon the partial deregulation of natural gas has been a key energy issue before the Reagan administration and Congress for more than a year. The administration agreed last year to tear up the existing tracts if Congress would remove by 1987 all price controls ncluding those now permanently on so-called "old gas" from wells drilled prior to 1978.

Because of a current surplus of gas, administration officials and other decontrol advocates argued that starting over with new contracts would reduce prices by 10 to 15 percent.

However, Congress, not wanting to give the major oil companies that own most of the old gas a billion-dollar windfall, has balked. The Senate last November overwhelmingly rejected both the adminstration's proposal and a competing effort to postpone the 1985 partial lifting of controls until 1987. The House Energy Committee, on a 22-20 vote earlier this month, approved a bill designed to force producers to accept price reductions totaling $16 billion over the next two years while providing little incentive for them to explore for new

The administration, producer-state congressmen and other critics charge that the result would be a return within the next few years to the mid-1970s shortages that forced schools, hospitals and several factories to close.
