Valuation of buildings issued permits by the city Department of Building Inspection continued to show increases for both the fiscal year and calendar year, according to Assistant Building Inspector Shirley Muns.

Fiscal year totals for the first seven months registered $7,864,041, nearly a million dollars higher than the $6,847,002.50 recorded at this time last year. Ms Muns reported.

For the first four months of the calendar year, building valuation reached $4,759,552, more than a million dollars above the $3,605,399.50 for the same period in 1983.

Monthly totals for April fell about $226,000 below the totals for March, however. The city department issued 29 building permits last month with a total valuation of $1,145,653. Valuation for building in March was $1,372,017, Ms Muns said.

Building valuation for this April was more than $400,000 above the valuation for April, 1983, however. Total valuation for the same month last year was $742,142.

The city collected $2,796 in building permit fees in April, compared with $3,163.50 in March for 28 permits. In April of last year the department collected $518.68 in fees for 25 building permits.

Total building permit fees collected for the year to date are $11,277.50 for 103 permits. Ms Muns reported. Fiscal year totals for 117 building permit fees are $16,042.50, nearly $1,600 less than the $17,649.75 in fees from 184 permits for the previous fiscal year period.

The issued building permits were for eight single family dwellings, valuation of $662,953; three commercial buildings (two storage buildings and a dental office), valuation of $257,000; two relocations, valuation of $4,000; six mobile homes, valuation of $141,500; one sign, valuation of $200; and nine alterations or additions, valuation of $80,000. Ms Muns reported.

The department issued 21 electrical permits last month, collecting $636.12 in fees. In March the city issued 21 permits and collected $438.02 in fees. In April, 1983, the department had 29 electrical permits and fees of $518.68.

Calendar year total fees for 80 electrical permits were $3,805.06. For the fiscal year period to date, the city has collected $4,528.93 in fees for 117 permits, slightly more than $2,000 above the $2,502.30 in fees from 155 permits for the previous fiscal year period.

Forty-four plumbing permits were issued, with $952.09 collected in fees for April. In March the department issued 40 plumbing permits, receiving fees of $892.17. In April, 1983, the city collected $831.93 in fees for 44 plumbing permits.

For the first four months of the calendar year, the department has collected $3,761.03 in fees for 152 plumbing permits. For the fiscal year period to date, the city has collected $6,396 in fees for 254 permits, an increase of nearly $2,400 above the $4,019.62 in fees for 301 permits for the previous fiscal year period.

Total for all fees, including miscellaneous items, was $4,404.21 in April, a slight decrease from the $4,593.69 collected in March. In April, 1983, the city had total fees of $3,616.61, Ms Muns said.

Total fees collected in the fiscal year to date are $29,242.98, about $3,100 more than the $26,132 received in the previous 1982-1983 fiscal year period. Total fees for the calendar year to date are $19,863.59.

Department personnel conducted 88 building inspections last month, compared with 49 in March and 76 in April, 1983. Total building inspections for the calendar year to date are 229. For the fiscal year period, personnel conducted 376 inspections, 55 more than the 321 conducted in the same period for the previous fiscal year.

Fifty-four electrical inspections were made in April, compared with 37 in March and 46 in April, 1983. Personnel have conducted 15 electrical inspections for the first four months of this year. For the fiscal year period, they conducted 270 inspections, only one less than the 271 for the first seven months in the 1982-1983 fiscal year period.

Personnel made 96 plumbing inspections in April, 88 in March and 112 in April, 1983. Ms Muns said. The city had 301 plumbing inspections for the calendar year to date. For the fiscal year, department personnel conducted 533 inspections, compared with 561 in the previous fiscal year period.

Miscellaneous inspections were 40 for April, 23 for March and 28 for April, 1983. Personnel conducted 117 miscellaneous inspections for the first four months of this year, with 245 inspections for the current fiscal year period and 147 for the previous fiscal year period.

Total inspections for the calendar year are 792, with 1424 inspections for the current fiscal year period and 1300 for the previous fiscal year period.

Cap to cut $413 billion in defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger today reluctantly handed Congress $13.9 billion in military budget cut suggestions but warned they would damage the administration's plans to rebuild U.S. arms strength.

"You can't make these reductions without some damage," Weinberger told a news conference in advance of his appearance before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The package, resulting from weeks of debate within the Pentagon, calls for reductions in numbers of M-1 tanks, infantry fighting vehicles, attack helicopters, anti-tank and air combat missiles, torpedoes and an Army defense gun, called "Divad," which critics say doesn't work.

The revisions would lower defense budget authority for fiscal 1985 to $291.1 billion, representing "real growth" of 7.8 percent instead of the 13 percent contemplated in the original budget.

Weinberger stressed the Pentagon is offering suggested cuts only on condition that Congress carry out two other elements of a deficit-reduction package agreed to by President Reagan and Senate Republican leaders on March 15.

Congress holds off on aid until after elections

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress have their eyes on Sunday's runoff presidential election in El Salvador as they prepare to decide on the future of military aid to the beleaguered Central American country.

"We shouldn't be making any wild promises of money to the military until we find out what kind of stability there is down there," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. told reporters Wednesday.

"We ought to wait and see whether the military will honor an election," said Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations.

At Long's suggestion, the Appropriations Committee deleted emergency aid for the Salvadorans from an appropriations bill providing funds for various government programs. He said the issue should go on hold until Sunday's runoff and possibly until the new president takes office June 1.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., called that "anti-democratic and a very elitist view of U.S. assistance."

Salvadorans will choose between centrist candidate Jose Napoleon Duarte and his rightist opponent, Roberto d'Aubuisson, the two leaders in the first round of voting in March.

D'Aubuisson is a former army officer with strong military support. Some lawmakers suggest the military might try to seize power if Duarte is elected.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., on Wednesday asked President Reagan to fire Thomas Pickering as U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, accusing the envoy of trying to engineer a Duarte victory.

In El Salvador, d'Aubuisson's running mate, Hugo Barrera, quoted a letter from Helms as saying Pickering had acted to help Duarte.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Greg Lagana denied that the embassy had been partial to Duarte. Pickering, 52, is a 25-year foreign service veteran who was sent to El Salvador in 1982.

Langhorne A. Motley, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, however, told the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the Western Hemisphere Wednesday there are "no indications of any coup activity at all post election."

Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., asked Motley if administration has "any intention of engaging U.S. forces in combat in El Salvador?"

"The answer to the question is no," Motley replied.

But Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., the chief deputy majority whip of the House, just back from a six-day trip to Honduras, Panama and Colombia, said "the United States has amassed a military force in Central America that is poised for war and we have allowed no equal force for peace."

Alexander said his visits to U.S. military installations in Honduras led him to "the inescapable conclusion that there is more here than meets the eye."

"I am not convinced that the millions of dollars we have poured into these construction sites are purely in support of military exercises," he said.

Jackson finally gets attention

Mondale, Hart say Jesse should repudiate supporter's threat

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who once complained of being ignored by Democratic rivals Walter Mondale and Gary Hart, has found himself on the defensive for refusing to repudiate black religious leader Louis Farrakhan, a supporter who apparently threatened the life of a journalist.

During an hour-long appearance together Wednesday night which moderator Sander Vanocur termed more a conversation than a debate, the three candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination agreed as much as they disagreed.

The League of Women Voters debate marked the only joint appearance by the candidates in Texas before Saturday's party caucuses in which Hart is attempting to inject new life into his flagging effort to challenge Mondale for the presidential nomination.

Unlike some of the previous debates, there were no sharp exchanges between Mondale and Hart. Instead, much of the attention focused on Jackson and his association with Farrakhan.

At issue is Farrakhan's declaration in a March radio broadcast that Washington Post reporter Milton Coleman was a "Judas" for reporting Jackson's ethnic remarks against Jews. "One day soon we will punish you with death," Farrakhan said.

Farrakhan, who heads the Nation of Islam, a Black Muslim offshoot, is a longtime Jackson supporter who has campaigned with the civil rights leader and once provided him with bodyguards.

During the debate, Jackson was asked what the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. would have said about Farrakhan's remarks.

"Redemption as opposed to punishment," said Jackson, recalling King's Christian philosophy and forgiveness.

"Those without sin should throw the first stone," said Jackson, invoking a biblical reference.

"You have not repudiated that message of Louis Farrakhan," said Vanocur.

"I disassociated myself from the message but not the messenger," Jackson said.

Jackson said that because Farrakhan's words were taken out of context, "There has been a lot of exaggerated reaction to that statement."

Mondale said Farrakhan's words were "poison."

"You are coming on as sort of self-righteous," Jackson reported.

"I don't think it is self-righteous to repudiate a statement which threatens the life of a reporter," said Mondale.

Hart then said threatening the life of another person, whether or not he is a reporter, is illegal. "I don't understand why the authorities haven't moved on that," he said.

Jackson, appearing to grow uncomfortable under his rivals' criticism, said he hoped the debate would go on to other issues. In a previous debate, Jackson complained that the two other candidates were paying no attention to him as a serious contender for the nomination.

Jackson opened the debate by calling on the Democratic Party to reform its delegation selection process under which he said he will receive fewer delegates than he earned in the popular vote.

"I have won 18 percent of the popular vote, but only 7 percent of delegates," Jackson said. Mondale, meanwhile, will get 50 percent of the pledge delegates earned with 39 percent of the vote.

"He (Mondale) has 11 percent more delegates than his popular vote warrants. I have 11 percent less," said Jackson.

Later, after the debate, Jackson said the three candidates should meet before the Democratic National Convention in July to discuss the various disputes over delegate selection.

"Our mission is to expand the party and heal the party," Jackson said in the opening moments of the debate.

He repeated his call for an end to the "dual primaries" used in many southern states in which a candidate is required to win 50 percent of the primary vote to avoid a runoff election.

The effect of that, according to Jackson, is that black candidates frequently lose in the runoff elections because whites vote only for white candidates.

Healing 'miracle' a mistake

LONDON (AP) — A Roman Catholic doctor visiting the Vatican caused a few gasps when he climbed out of a wheelchair after being blessed by Pope John Paul II, but he says it was all a misunderstanding.

"I heard someone say, 'It must be a miracle,' but it wasn't — only an embarrassment," said Dr. Jan Lavric, an able-bodied general practitioner from Yorkshire in northern England.

Lavric said Wednesday he went to Rome with a group of disabled people last month. After he sat down in the wheelchair, the only seat left in the Vatican's audience chamber, a Swiss guard unexpectedly began wheeling him forward.

"I tried to stop him, but he told me, 'Don't exert yourself. What would you do? I couldn't jump up and run away that would have made things worse,'" he said.

After he kissed the pope's hand and was wheeled away by the guard, he stood up and folded the chair and carried it off. Lavric said, "I must say they were all very surprised."

There was no report on the Pope's reaction to the incident.

Two area counties have races for tax assessor

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

In their own quiet way, tax assessor-collectors are an integral part of county government.

They're the ones who handle county money and keep up with current land values. Unless someone breaks the law, they are the county's most visible link with the taxpayers through auto tag purchases or voter registration.

Wheeler and Hemphill counties will go to the polls Saturday to decide on the proper people to handle the multi-faceted position.

In Wheeler County, three candidates are seeking the position left by Jean DeArment, who chose not to seek re-election. They are David Britt, Kethleen Cross and Jerry R. Hefley.

Britt, a bookkeeper with the First National Bank of Wheeler, sees his experience and education as assets in the campaign.

A former employee of Beef Cattle

Co., Britt attended Texas Tech and Texas A & M. He also formed a small company in the Brazos valley, which is still in operation.

"That's when I became acquainted with taxing entities such as the Internal Revenue Service," he said.

As bookkeeper, Britt operates the bank's proofing machine and is responsible for keeping the bank's figures totalled at the end of each day.

Britt feels that one of the assessor's major responsibilities is "getting all the taxes collected and making sure the receipts are in the right column."

Britt says he is honest and experienced enough to handle the job.

"My friends encouraged me to run," said Britt, a member of St. Mary's Church in Wheeler. "I think other people have faith in me, since I'm treasurer for my church."

As an employee with Wheeler County Abstract office, candidate Cross said she has experience in dealing with the

CAMPAIGN '84

Cross doesn't see any of the assessor's chores as being more important than the others.

However, she said accountability is a key to being an effective assessor since "there are so many state agencies that you have to answer to."

Cross added that she has yet to learn about voter registration and taxes.

"I just feel like I'm capable of doing the job and that I would be a capable county employee," she said.

Hefley, an employee of the Wheeler Gas Co. feels the most important task of an assessor is to "balance the money and keep the books straight."

But another asset is a good relationship with the public, he added.

"I feel I could get a good working relationship between the office and the public," he said. "I think the assessor's office already has a good relationship. I just think I can continue it."

The Wheeler County native was water superintendent and purchasing agent for the city of Wheeler before operating a barbecue restaurant in Wheeler.

"That's when I really got acquainted with taxes," said Hefley, who's worked with the Wheeler Gas Co. for four years.

Hefley has also taken bookkeeping and other business courses. He has a degree in animal science.

He noted that he's going to "take the opportunity to get accounting classes."

Hefley concluded that he has been eyeing the position for some time. He wants to broaden his field.

"There comes a time when you feel like you should do what's best for you," he said.

In Hemphill County, incumbent tax assessor-collector Joe Ann Halliburton is challenged by former Canadian city secretary Pearl Teague and Gladene Woodside, head of the note department at the First National Bank of Canadian. Halliburton is Hemphill County's "first official" tax-collector. She was became tax assessor-collector when the tax office was separated from the sheriff's office in 1978. She was re-elected in 1980.

Halliburton says she enjoys the daily "hassle" the tax job involves.

"I enjoy the contact with the people," she said, adding that the assessor-collector "answers to every voter, the commissioners' court and to the state."

"I know the laws and the changes. I've completed a great deal of my schooling and I feel like I have a very good working relationship with other tax assessors, our commissioners' court and other agencies," she said.

"It's hard to keep everyone satisfied," she admits. "You do things one way, and you get a phone call saying that the governor says that as of yesterday, you do it another way."

SHAMROCK — A West Virginia man was arrested by Shamrock police and Wheeler County sheriff deputies early this morning on a Randall County complaint of aggravated sexual assault.

Wheeler County Deputy Joe Stewart said that the suspect, Floyd Lee DeGraw, 21, was arrested in Shamrock at approximately 1:20 a.m. after he reportedly left a service station west of Shamrock on 1-40 without paying for the gas.

Stewart said that shortly after the arrest, the department received a teletype from Canyon concerning a sexual assault that occurred earlier that night.

"We called Canyon and verified that he was the suspect," Stewart said.

DeGraw appeared before Wheeler County Justice of the Peace Herbert Stacey, who set a $50,000 bond. Stewart said DeGraw did not make bond and may be returned to Randall County today.

Laxton was transported by ambulance to Coronado Community Hospital where he was treated for scrapes and bruises and released.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The three Israelis held prisoner by Syria exchanged gunfire with Syrian troops before they sprinted to a Lebanese army checkpoint where they were taken into custody, sources here and in Damascus said today.

The exchange of gunfire was heavy as the Israelis resisted arrest, but there were no casualties, said a Syrian official in Damascus where the Israelis were being held today. The official asked not to be identified.

The Middle East Reporter, an English-language daily digest of Middle East affairs, also quoted unidentified Western diplomatic sources in Beirut as saying the Israelis fired with automatic weapons when Syrian troops shot at their car.

The Israelis were taken into custody Tuesday while driving near Syrian lines north of Beirut. Lebanese newspapers described the capture as the gravest incident between Israel and Syria since the 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

The captured men were diplomats who served in Israel's office in Dbaye, a Christian suburb north of Beirut, according to Israeli officials. The three were on a sight-seeing tour on May Day, a Lebanese holiday, the officials said.

The Dbaye office is located in an area controlled by the rightist Christian Lebanese Forces militia, which advocates a peace treaty with Israel and maintains a liaison office of its own in Jerusalem.

The incident occurred on a stretch of road about 25 miles north of Beirut on Syrian-controlled territory, the Middle East Reporter said.

"Coming suddenly upon a Syrian military checkpoint, the driver of the car (carrying the Israelis) swerved and tried to speed away. Syrian soldiers, suspicious of the car's sudden opening fire and apparently shot out one of the tires," the newsletter added.

It quoted Western diplomatic sources as saying the Israelis shot back with automatic weapons, abandoned the car and sprinted back to the Lebanese army checkpoint.

"There, they were seized by Lebanese soldiers. Soon, Syrian soldiers arrived and surrounded the checkpoint, and it was only then that they were told that the three men involved were Israelis," the newsletter said.

"Syrian troops forced Lebanese soldiers to hand over the Israelis, who were then flown into Damascus by a Syrian army helicopter," the newsletter said.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir warned Syria not to "lay false blame" on the trio. And he vowed to "do what we find necessary" to secure their release.

"I hope the Syrians will listen to this warning and do what we are asking," he said.

The capture of the three men brings to nine the number of Israelis believed held by Syria or Syrian-backed Palestinian guerrillas.

Three Israeli soldiers were captured by the Syrians during the 1982 Lebanon war.

She noted that she doesn't expect the tax collector - assessor's position to be much different than her experience with the city.

Although there's a tendency for many new elected officials to put in their own staffs, Teague said she would not do that.

Woodside believes that the assessor-collector represents the county and must develop a "friendly attitude to the people."

Triple slaying baffles authorities

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Family members and police investigators are struggling to comprehend the point-blank slaying of a young couple and their 21-month-old son, whose bullet-riddled bodies were discovered lying side by side on the floor of the infant's bedroom.

On Tuesday, relatives discovered Jerry Morgan, a 30-year-old plumber; his 26-year-old wife, Brenda; and their son, Devin Glenn Morgan, shot to death in their mobile home near Longview.

"Undoubtedly he surprised a burglar. That's all it could be," said Morgan's brother, Rayford.

So far, investigators have no leads or suspects. Tyler police found the family's abandoned 1978 blue Pontiac Catalina parked outside the Mother Frances Hospital just after 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Police said they would dust the automobile for fingerprints and search the inside today for any possible clues or items that might give investigators a lead in the case.

Longview police spokesman Gene Noble said authorities believe the three were killed sometime Monday afternoon, but he said he doesn't believe it was a burglary.

"It doesn't make sense," Noble said Wednesday. "There wasn't that much of value taken to justify taking three lives to cover it up."

Noble said all three died of gunshot wounds and said bullets taken from the bodies were sent to Dallas for ballistics tests. He said no weapons were found at the scene.

The bodies were found in the baby's bedroom on the floor, Noble said. The couple were side by side, her feet at his head. The baby was on Morgan's chest, Noble said.

"The sorry low-life had taken the baby after it was shot and laid him across his father's shoulder," Noble said.

"I have never seen anything like this. I've seen some gruesome sights, but I've never experienced anything like this wanton disrespect — especially in taking the baby's life. It's incomprehensible."

Mrs. Morgan was shot once in the back of the head, Morgan twice in the chest and once in the front of the neck, and the baby was shot once in the face, Noble said.

He said no motive had been determined and ruled out murder-suicide. He said there were no signs of a struggle.

A relative reported several items were missing and said the trailer had been ransacked, but Noble said there were no signs of ransacking.

"In the bedroom, there was one drawer slightly open in a chest, but that's all," Noble said. "We are, at this time, investigating this as a triple murder."

Rayford Morgan said a desperate burglar is the likely explanation of the killings.

"That's all it could be. He didn't have any enemies. He didn't deal in drugs," Noble also said there is no evidence to indicate the killings were drug-related.

Democratic candidates debate, Senate candidates see runoffs

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — While the Democratic presidential candidates debated before a television audience, the Republican and Democratic Senate hopefuls geared up for Saturday's primaries.

Walter F. Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson exchanged words in a debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters. The debate, conducted at a hotel at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, was televised by the Public Broadcasting System.

The early part of the debate concentrated on Democratic rules, immigration law reform, bilingual education and international issues. But later, Jackson found himself on the defensive for refusing to repudiate black religious leader Louis Farrakhan, a Jackson supporter who threatened the life of a journalist.

Earlier in the day in Dallas, Hart urged Texas to turn out for the precinct caucuses and Mondale criticized President Reagan's record on the environment and said he was confident of winning Texas.

obviously be very significant," Mondale said.

In Austin, Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle, a Mondale supporter, retreated from earlier statements that Hart might upset Mondale in the caucuses.

He said the danger for Mondale in Texas is whether people go to the precinct conventions, the first process in nominating delegates to the national convention.

Slagle also said Wednesday that supporters of Hart and Jackson are guilty of "faishood and a slander" in saying the delegate-selection process was designed to benefit Mondale.

The Hart and Jackson campaigns have complained that the complicated delegate system, which begins at the neighborhood precinct level and runs through the state convention, favored Mondale.

Jackson travels to Tyler, McAllen and San Antonio today, while Mondale will be in Austin and Waco and Hart will travel to San Antonio before departing for Louisiana.

"I think it's just a question of who is going to be in it with me," said Hance, who has mounted a blitz focusing on his opposition to amnesty for illegal aliens and Krueger's and Doggett's support of amnesty.

On Wednesday, Krueger campaigned in Hance's home territory of Lubbock, Amarillo, Midland and Odessa and tried to solidify his support among Hispanics with appearances in El Paso and San Antonio.

"I'm going to be running on May 6 I just don't know whether it will be against a Democrat or a Republican."

In the Republican senate race, Rep. Phil Gramm is the frontrunner, but each of his three opponents — Rob Moshbacher, Ron Paul and Henry Grover — believes he will be in the runoff with the former Texas A&M University professor.

Campaigning in San Antonio and Houston Wednesday, Moshbacher, 32, emphasized his commitment to Reagan's "private sector initiatives" program, set up to encourage community efforts to help solve social problems. Moshbacher served on the president's commission to promote that program.

Grover, 56, a former state senator and unsuccessful GOP nominee for governor in 1972, has blasted Gramm for not being a "true conservative."

"I've got to win this. The Democrats of Texas don't go to the caucus until Sunday. As I've said before, I hope to do well, but I'm not taking anything for granted. The Tennessee victory was important, the Texas victory, if I receive it — coming from the third-largest state in the union — would

The bill aims to reduce high prices negotiated during severe gas shortages several years ago.

Hodel cautioned that the United States must bear in mind the plight of energy-poor allies like Japan in the event traffic is closed in the Persian Gulf.

He said the United States may get only 3 to 5 percent of its oil from foreign sources, but countries such as Japan import as much as half their oil.

"If somebody tries to cut off the Gulf, we have to take into account" the needs of such allies, Hodel said. The Persian Gulf, particularly the Strait of Hormuz, has been a point of contention in the war between Iran and Iraq.

Hodel surveyed a project in which Shell is revamping a catalytic cracking unit, in which crude oil is improved into lighter oils and gasoline. He also shook hands and chatted with workers in a machine shop at the refinery.

Hodel said the trip was "political but also educational for me" and was his first visit to a refinery. He had been in New Orleans. He was to fly to Dallas and Midland later in the trip.

Plant manager Bill Thompson said Hodel was to have toured a Shell offshore rig, but the trip was altered.

Thompson said Hodel was taken to the catalytic cracking unit renovation project because "it is a major modern project" designed to make the device more energy efficient by recycling heat.

Hodel criticizes Sharp gas bill

HOUSTON (AP) — A bill which would require producers to renegotiate high-priced natural gas contracts with pipeline companies would hurt consumers, Energy Secretary Don Hodel says.

Hodel, in Houston Wednesday to tour a Shell Oil Co. refinery during a campaign trip, said he opposes the bill pending in the House of Representatives.

"I think it's going to be a tough fight" on the House floor, Hodel said. The bill, sponsored by Indiana Democrat Phillip Sharp, was approved in committee April 12.

"But I think eventually we'll have a better bill than the Sharp bill," Hodel said. He said the bill amounts to a new set of controls which would result in many students have agreed to pay for using the long-distance service.

Investigators on Tuesday discovered two more personal authorization codes that students have used to tap into the long-distance network, Kavanaugh said.

The authorization codes apparently were posted on a bulletin board near a public telephone in the dormitory, Kavanaugh said.

since ALPA went on strike Oct. 1.

Esperion Martinez, an ALPA spokesman in Washington, D.C., denied the allegations.

The petition "demonstrates the extent to which Continental is willing to inject volatile issues into the ongoing dispute to impede any settlement," Martinez said.

Two striking pilots who were found with pipe bombs near the home of a non-striking pilot in San Antonio in November were named as defendants in the complaint.

Calvin Earley, 43, of Houston, and Charles W. Hall, 47, of Humble, were found guilty last month of conspiracy and illegal possession of a firearm. Authorities said the men had photographs of the non-striking pilot's home, along with pictures of other working pilots.

Both men will face up to 15 years in prison when they are sentenced May 11 in San Antonio.

Also named as defendants were striking pilots Rolfe Munson of Willis, Texas; Thomas E. Martin of New Braunfels, Texas; N. Wayne Adair of Magnolia, Texas; Harold M. Bauer of El Segundo, Calif.; Michael Ripley of El Paso, Texas; and W.R. Jackson of Richardson, Texas.

In the complaint, Continental claimed that Earley and Hall attempted to bomb the homes of three working pilots on Nov. 22, a day before the deadline set by ALPA for members to support the strike or face expulsion from the union.

The complaint alleged that ALPA formed a Security and Intelligence Committee when the strike began to carry out the union's "campaign of

Officials seek state and federal help after tornado hits Matador

MATADOR, Texas (AP) — An officer of the state's Emergency Management Division has been sent to this West Texas community after the town requested state and federal assistance to clean up damage from a tornado that destroyed a school and at least 27 homes.

Lauren Chernow, a spokeswoman in Gov. Mark White's office, said an agency representative would survey damage that encompassed a 20-block area.

No damage estimate was available immediately as power and telephone crews worked to restore interrupted utility service.

At least 27 homes were destroyed when the twister hit the town of 1,052 about 8:55 p.m. Tuesday, said Department of Public Safety trooper Dudley Steed.

Thirteen other homes received major structural damage and 42 others sustained minor damage. Five apartments also were damaged, authorities said.

The twister cut a path of damage about 1.14 miles wide and a mile long, Steed said.

The only person reported injured was Addie Murphy, who suffered cuts and bruises when the tornado ripped through her house. The 80-year-old woman, who was found under a table in the wreckage of her home, was listed in stable condition today.

Meanwhile, school Superintendent Charlie Johnson said he would ask the Texas Education Agency for permission to close the school early for the summer.

The 10-year-old Motley County School building, which houses elementary, junior high and high school students, was hit twice by the tornado. The twister first hit the front, caving in the entrance, then demolished the building when it struck the back and caused a change in barometric pressure, he said.

If the TEA grants the request, 250 students would get an early vacation. However, Johnson said that with 13 days left this term, students may have problems getting the necessary credits to satisfy state requirements.

Johnson and 10 others were in the building's storm shelter in the library when the tornado hit. No injuries were reported at the school.

"It sounded like a freight train with a high whistle. I heard everything banging, and then it just stopped," Johnson said.

Two school buses also were damaged and a bus barn destroyed.

Jesse Turner, local manager for West Texas Utilities, said the company was working to restore electric service.

General Telephone Co. officials said all phone service was expected to be back to normal by Friday.

Motley County Sheriff Alton Marshall said softball-sized hail and heavy rain accompanied the tornado.

Marshall said tornado sightings are rare in Matador and local folklore has it that the town is protected by its location below the Caprock, from where tornadoes tend to just skip over the town.

Firm contacting students and parents

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas-based long-distance telephone company says the parents of some University of Texas students who are suspected of making more than $11,000 worth of unauthorized phone calls have offered to make restitution.

"We've had some calls from some of the parents of the students. Some were quite defensive and others tend to be rather cooperative. Some have offered to make restitution," said Winston Kavanaugh, vice president of United Network Service Inc.

At least 11 or 12 UT students are suspected of making long-distance calls by using the authorization codes of United Network Service customers without permission, the company says.

The calls were traced to Jester Center, a large dormitory, on the university's Austin campus, Kavanaugh said.

Kavanaugh said he doesn't know how many students have agreed to pay for using the long-distance service.

Investigators on Tuesday discovered two more personal authorization codes that students have used to tap into the long-distance network, Kavanaugh said.

Mother rejoices return of missing children

HOUSTON (AP) — A brother and sister, reunited with their mother as a result of pictures shown at the end of the television movie "Adam," visited the doctor and played happily in their rooms for the first time since they were abducted by their father 10 months ago.

"I welcome all the noise — it's like heaven," said Carol Hajjizadeh.

Her children, Robert, 2, and Jessica, 4, were taken from their home in Houston last July by their father, even though a divorce decree gave custody to Mrs. Hajjizadeh.

"I knew he was going to take them," she said. "I just didn't know when."

Mrs. Hajjizadeh and her children reunited Tuesday after a man recognized their pictures, shown at the end of the movie which told the story of Adam Walsh, a 6-year-old boy abducted at a Florida shopping mall and murdered three years ago.

Mrs. Hajjizadeh recited the Rosary before the movie was aired Monday night and then cried during the show. "I was just blessed" that their pictures were chosen.

Police found the children living with their father in Burleson, 12 miles south of Fort Worth Juvenile officer Doug Allen said a man who did not want to be identified called Monday night.

He told authorities he recognized Robert and Jessica from a group of 49 pictures of missing children shown at the end of the movie, which was first broadcast last October.

Mrs. Hajjizadeh said police told her that her former husband apparently saw the movie also and was preparing to move again when officers arrived Tuesday morning.

Brenda Keen, Mrs. Hajjizadeh's attorney, said attempts to bring kidnapping charges against the father had been unsuccessful because Harris County officials would not accept such charges against a parent.

"She has been trying all along to get the justice system to assist her," Ms. Keen said. "If an arrest warrant had been issued, we could have found him much sooner."

Early Tuesday, Allen said, he went to the house where Issa Hajjizadeh, a 37-year-old draftsman and Iranian national, had been living for about six months, and took custody of the two children.

The children were taken to the Johnson County Courthouse in nearby Cleburne, where they were reunited with their mother for the trip back to Houston.

Meanwhile, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement said Wednesday that telephone tips about missing children were still pouring in following Monday's rerun of the movie.

The department reported 2,086 calls had been received over a nationwide toll-free hotline. Of those, 1,025 callers said they had seen one of the 49 missing children.

In Tallahassee, Fla., the House Appropriations Committee approved a bill Wednesday to strengthen Florida's child abuse laws.

A major feature of the bill would require all hospitals to tell authorities when they treat a child abuse victim. Hospitals could be fined up to $1,000 each day they failed to report abuse cases.

John Walsh, Adam's father, testified in favor of the bill.

"My son was the victim of the ultimate form of child abuse — kidnapping and murder," Walsh said.

Judge unseals Continental complaint

HOUSTON (AP) — Striking pilots made death threats, burned property, jammed aircraft radio transmissions and even hurled the petrified head of a slain elk into a working pilot's home, Continental Airlines has claimed.

The allegations were made in a complaint filed in December and partially unsealed Wednesday by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge T. Glover Roberts, a visiting judge from Biloxi, Miss.

The complaint accused the Air Line Pilots Association and eight striking pilots — seven in Texas and one in California — of conspiring to harm Continental and its employees in an attempt to shut down the airline's flight operations.

Continental, which filed for reorganization in September under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law, has sought $330 million in damages and accused striking pilots of engaging in vandalism against the carrier and its working employees physical violence and intimidation" against working employees.

The carrier also charged that a "Molotov cocktail" was tossed into the home of a working pilot in Boulder, Colo., in December; that gunshots were fired into another pilot's home and that death threats were made against two working pilots.

An ALPA memorandum in December encouraged members to give "Seasons Greetings to the SCAB outfit" on Continental aircraft frequencies, the carrier claimed.

The complaint alleged that ALPA formed a Security and Intelligence Committee when the strike began to carry out the union's "campaign of

FBI's activities cause concern

When one arm of the federal government criticizes another, especially for alleged violations of human rights, that's news. More often than not, when individual rights are violated by government, those in government will tell you it is "for the public good."

It was, therefore, encouraging this week to read that the House subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights issued a report warning that the FBI's increasing use of "sting" operations threatens constitutional rights and injures people and institutions "on the merest of suspicions."

The subcommittee study was triggered by the Abscam investigation of several years ago in which FBI men posed as agents for non-existent Arab sheiks and offered bribes of members of Congress. One senator and six U.S. representatives were ultimately convicted.

But the subcommittee concluded that "The infiltration by government agents, or criminals who are financed by the government, into the private lives of citizens; the spectacle of the U.S. government spending huge sums of money to tempt people into committing crimes; and the atmosphere of fear, suspicion and paranoia which develops as the use of the technique expands, are all anathema to the values protected and cherished in our Constitution."

The subcommittee also found that similar probes produced, among other things, a rigged election, stolen cars being sold to the public and innocent businessmen being left with substantial debts as a result of the FBI actions.

These concerns are nothing new. Testimony in at least one of the Abscam cases indicated FBI agents had to plead, threaten and return to one of the legislators time and time again in order to get him into the compromising position that ultimately led to his conviction. Indeed, columnist Jack Anderson reported that federal agents deliberately conspired to have his case transferred from one jurisdiction to another to avoid having to present the charges to a judge who had previously demonstrated some concern for the individual rights of the public.

It has never seemed to us quite proper for law enforcement officials to attempt to create criminals out of individuals who, minus the bogus temptation posed by the law itself, might have lived the rest of their lives as law-abiding citizens. It is even more alarming that law enforcement officials would, themselves, walk the borderline of criminal activity in an effort to convict others and, at the same time, cause damage to innocent persons who were drawn into their activities.

This subcommittee report is especially timely as the Reagan Administration pushes for tough, new laws in a variety of areas that, in our opinion, run the risk of violating the rights of the innocent in an effort to establish the guilt of the criminal.

We are gratified that at least one arm of Congress is concerned with making certain that those charged with enforcing the law also be required to obey the law. If citizens are victimized by those who are expected to protect their rights, where, then, is the citizen to turn for protection?

We must never get to the point where innocent citizens have more reason to fear the police than they do the criminal. We are possibly too close to that point already. Congress speaking out when federal officials get out of line should be helpful in keeping us from getting any closer.

Textbook critics get a challenge

WASHINGTON (NEA) - "Allowing a student to come to his own conclusions about concepts creates frustration. A concept will never do anyone as much good as a fact."

That's an example of the parochial - if not perverse - educational philosophy of Mel and Norma Gabler, a Longview, Texas, couple who have imposed their views on public school students throughout the country.

Another example of the Gabler's reluctance to encourage young people to fully develop their intellectual abilities: "Leaving students to make up with their own minds about things just isn't fair to our children."

For almost a quarter of a century, the Gablers have influenced what is taught in this country's schools through the operation of "the nation's largest textbook review clearing house" - an organization dedicated to purging all textbook references that do not comport with their political and religious views.

For the first time, however, the Gablers and their New Right allies have been successfully challenged - by People for the American Way, a Washington - based organization "whose purpose is to preserve the constitutional rights to believe, worship, think and speak freely."

The Gablers' inordinate influence over textbook content can be attributed, in great measure, to the highly centralized selection procedures in their home state.

In the majority of states, textbook standard setting and selection are under the control of local educators and school boards. Texas, however, is the largest of the states that rely upon the "adoption" method. This requires every one of the state's 1,152 local school districts to select textbooks only from a list of volumes "adopted" by the Texas State Board of Education.

With textbook purchases valued at more than $60 million annually, the Lone Star State is by far the country's biggest single purchaser of those materials. Publishers are naturally responsive to its demands and they are reluctant to print different editions for smaller buyers. The result: What Texas wants, the rest of the nation gets.

For many years, the Gablers were abetted by Texas adoption procedures which allowed anyone who objected to textbook to offer unlimited criticism but prohibited anybody from speaking out in defense of a book.

People for the American Way, which launched its campaign to reform the selection process almost two years ago, won a procedural victory in 1982, when the Texas State Board of Education agreed to receive written statements in support of books under attack.

The first substantive success, however, came in mid - April of this year, when the board repealed a decade - old rule whose apparent intent was to promote biblical creationism in science textbooks.

The rule said that if the evolutionary theory of human development was included in textbooks, it could be presented as "only one of the several explanations of the origins of humankind... in a manner which is not detrimental to other theories of origin."

One month earlier Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox had issued a legal opinion that concluded that "the board... has injected religious considerations into an area which must be, at least in the public school context, strictly the province of science."

Added Mattox: "The influence is inescapable that a concern for religious sensibilities rather than a dedication to scientific truth was the real motivation for the rules."

The struggle for intellectual freedom has just begun, however.

The Gablers, for example, believe in censoring history textbooks: "Teaching about the Great Depression will only succeed in - raising doubts about our system."

Similarly, the state's rules prohibit textbooks from offering views that might "undermine authority" rather than promoting "respect for recognized authority" - a position that makes it difficult to recount the events of the 1770s which led to this country's independence.

"We want young people to learn how to think instead of what to think," says Anthony Podesta, president of People for the American Way. "The Gablers want to indoctrinate them."

Today in History

Today is Thursday, May 3, the 124th day of 1984. There are 242 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 3, 1802, Washington, D.C., was incorporated as a city, with the mayor to be appointed by the president, and the council elected by property owners.

On this date:

Ten years ago: The United States said Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Syria had made "some progress" toward an Israeli-Syrian troop-separation agreement.

Five years ago: Margaret Thatcher and the Conservative Party defeated Prime Minister James Callaghan's Laborites in Britain's general elections.

One year ago: America's Roman Catholic Bishops ratified a pastoral letter denouncing nuclear war and calling on Catholics to help rid the world of nuclear weapons.

Today's birthdays: Writer Betty Comden and folk singer Pete Seeger are 65 years old. Former middleweight and welterweight boxing champion Sugar Ray Robinson is 64. Singer James Brown is 51. Singer Engelbert Humperdinck is 48. Singer Frankie Valli is 47. And magician Doug Henning is 37.

Thought for today: "The meek probably will be pushed off the earth long before they get a chance to inherit it." - Anonym

Can we 'sit on the world?'

The uproar over CIA shenanigans in Central America brings to mind a personal experience of some years back.

It involved a conversation in a Stockholm restaurant about the big story of that day, The Bay of Pigs.

I observed, rashly as it developed, that whatever the merits of that operation we - Americans - had to keep in mind that, however powerful we might be, we could not expect to sit on the entire world.

One of my dinner companions took immediate exception. Voice raised - whether from force of conviction or excess of acquavi I wasn't sure, but in any case attracting considerable momentary attention - he said that was precisely what we should do.

Sit on the world.

He was an agency man, and the incident stirred some troublesome thoughts about aims and operations and, not least, personnel policies.

I've been out of contact for a long time. All I know now is what I read in the papers. It's not reassuring.

It is difficult, of course, to define the role of an undercover service in an open, democratic society.

At worst, the two may be inherently antithetical. At best, an undercover service is a necessary evil in a dangerous, largely undemocratic world.

In any case, there have to be guidelines. One is that the CIA is to assist in furthering national policy and not make policy.

Another is that the agency's undertakings must be in the public's best interests, not the CIA's own.

The CIA's behavior, however, can at times leave you wondering whether priorities haven't gotten reversed.

I am thinking of major operations, such as the counterproductive violence against Nicaragua, and routine procedures, such placing on the CIA payroll Salvadoran officers whose names keep popping up in connection with the death squads.

A similar incident involved an assassinated aide to Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza. Although the assassination took place six years ago, the CIA, still miffed at having lost its man, has blocked the appointment of the woman who engineered the killing as Nicaragua's ambassador to Washington.

No argument. Her nomination by the Sandinista regime was a deliberate provocation. But there could be no embarrassment if there hadn't been this connection between the CIA and Somoza to start with.

The word out of Washington is the State Department was overruled on whether to accept Nicaragua's choice as its ambassador to Washington. That indicates the extent to which the CIA has taken over policy on Nicaragua.

That is something to be concerned about. Even more so is CIA Director William J. Casey's undisguised drive to expand his policy-making powers.

There are a number of words for Casey's conduct as agency director. "Combative" is certainly one, "overbearing" could be another. The favorite in Congress at the moment is "uncooperative."

Casey's failure to adequately brief congressional intelligence committees on the mining of Nicaraguan harbors has had predictably counterproductive consequences for the country and for the CIA.

Casey would prefer that there be less outside scrutiny of agency affairs. Events demonstrate that precisely the opposite is urgently needed - to save the CIA from its own follies and to protect the public from the often disastrous consequences.

In all that has happened since my dinner in Stockholm, the CIA has yet to learn that in trying to sit on the world, or any especially volatile part of it, there is the distinct possibility of being hoisted on its own petard.

And that in reversing priorities, it becomes not an effective means of dealing with problems but a problem itself.

Women good at getting revenge

It is my firm belief that women are much better than men at gaining revenge. I have arrived at this conclusion after years of research that included some personal experience.

I was once married to a young woman who became angry at me for missing a dinner party she was giving for her parents. I missed the dinner party because I was playing tennis and the match went three sets and then we had to drink the beer.

The next morning I awakened to find my wife had taken one of the Ginsu knives I had bought for her birthday and cut the strings out of my tennis rackets.

That did teach me a lesson. I was never late for another dinner party for my wife's parents and I never bought her any more sharp knives for her birthday.

I also had many male friends who have been the target of vengeful females. One unfortunate fellow's girlfriend discovered he was fooling around with another.

She slipped into his apartment while he was working. First, she went to his icebox and brought forth a jar of honey. She then poured the honey all over his kitchen floor and opened the door, and every ant in three countries showed up for the subsequent banquet.

This wasn't enough for the lady, however. She also broke a dozen eggs in the man's bed, smashed every mirror in his apartment and then flushed all his ties down the commode, not only putting a large dent in the man's wardrobe, but also causing him to have to hire Roto - Rooter to repair his severely clogged plumbing system.

I had another friend who ran a used - car lot. His wife learned of his out - of - wedlock involvements and showed up at his car lot in the family pickup.

She proceeded to play demolition derby, smashing the pickup into her husband's inventory. When the police finally arrived, the only things left recognizable as once having been part of an automobile were the tailfins off a '57 Chevy and the hood ornament from what had been a '55 Buick Special.

What brought all these incidents to mind was a call I had recently from Rigsby, the original hard - luck kid. Rigsby is on his third wife.

"I thought I had seen it all," he was saying to me. "My first wife got mad at me and went through the closet with a pair of scissors while I was gone. She cut up all my clothes into tiny pieces and then dumped them out on the front lawn and locked me out of the house. I had to go to work the next day looking like I had spent the night in a paper shredder."

"My second wife topped that. I had a convertible I kept parked in my garage. My wife at the time got mad at me and called a concrete company and they sent over a cement truck. She put the top down and had them fill my convertible with cement."

"That's nothing," said Rigsby. "I came in late last night and my third wife was so mad she had cleaned out my closet and put all my clothes in the garbage compactor."

I asked Rigsby if he was able to salvage any of his wardrobe. "A garbage compactor," he answered, "gives new meaning to the word 'wrinkle.'"

All this to remind you once more, gentlemen, hell's fury is a piece of cake compared to women bent on revenge. bless their conniving little hearts, they give new meaning to the phrase "getting even."

Chief justice refuses to block Texas courts in custody case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger has refused to block courts in Texas from taking part in a case that focused on the role of interracial marriages in child custody fights.

Burger on Wednesday denied — by ignoring — an emergency request by Linda Sidoti Palmore, of Seffner, Fla., to bar Texas courts from standing in the way of her Florida court battle to regain custody of her 6-year-old daughter, Melanie.

The chief justice, however, returned Mrs. Palmore's case to the Florida courts immediately rather than on May 20, the date when a Supreme Court ruling in Mrs. Palmore's favor normally would take effect.

On April 25, the high court overturned a ruling that had stripped Mrs. Palmore, who is white, of custody of her daughter because she married Clarence Palmore, a black.

Mrs. Palmore's ex-husband, Anthony J. Sidoti of Bryan, Texas, was awarded custody of Melanie in 1982. Sidoti, who is white, is married to a white woman.

The justices unanimously threw out a Florida judge's ruling that Melanie would be stigmatized by living in an interracial household. But the decision did not necessarily resolve the custody battle between Mrs. Palmore and Sidoti.

Mrs. Palmore had been awarded custody of Melanie when she divorced Sidoti in 1980.

Under normal Supreme Court procedure, the April 25 decision was not to take effect until May 20, or 25 days after it was announced. The day after the ruling, however, Sidoti obtained a state court order that temporarily bars Mrs. Palmore from seeking custody of Melanie.

Texas Judge Tom McDonald Jr. issued a temporary restraining order on April 26 forbidding Melanie's removal from Sidoti's custody. He scheduled a hearing for Friday on whether the order should be imposed permanently.

McDonald also issued a gag order that bars a number of people involved in the case from commenting publicly.

In seeking Burger's help, Mrs. Palmore asked that the case be sent immediately to a Florida appeals court as the next step in her battle to regain custody, and that Texas courts be barred from taking part in the fight.

Robert Shapiro of Tampa, Fla., Mrs. Palmore's lawyer, said the Texas judge's gag order will "remove the Texas proceedings from public scrutiny" — allowing Sidoti to circumvent the Supreme Court's April 25 ruling in secret.

Pope calls for unity of Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pope John Paul II began an Asian pilgrimage today and told Koreans he prays that negotiations and trust will reunite the peninsula, divided into communist North and non-communist South for nearly 40 years.

While flying from Alaska to Seoul, the pope said a prayer for the 269 people, many of them South Korean, who were killed Sept. 1 when the Soviets shot down a Korean Air Lines jet after the craft strayed into Soviet airspace.

The papal plane, a chartered Alitalia DC-10 jet, followed the route the KAL plane was supposed to take. The Vatican described the inflight prayer as a gesture of solidarity with the Korean people. The prayer did not mention the Soviet Union.

John Paul had stopped in Alaska to meet President Reagan, who was returning to Washington from his tour of Asia.

The pope, beginning an 11-day trip to Asia and the Pacific, said he came as an "apostle of peace" to all Koreans.

He plans to spend five days in South Korea, which the Vatican says will soon surpass Indonesia as Asia's second largest Roman Catholic country. The Philippines is the first.

The pope set the theme of his visit immediately.

"I pray that your beloved fatherland, now tragically divided into two for over a generation, will be reunited as one family, not through confrontation and hostility, but through dialogue, mutual trust and brotherly love," his arrival statement said.

Such a development would mean "giving the lie to a world more and more given to mistrust, hatred and the violence of arms," the pope said.

After stepping off his plane, John Paul knelt and kissed the tarmac, his gesture of blessing for the lands he visits. He is making his 21st overseas journey as pope. It is his first trip to South Korea, although he has visited Asia before.

Greeting him at Seoul's Kimpo International Airport was a selected group of people headed by President Chun Doo-hwan. The government estimated 1,600 people greeted him there. It also said that more than 1 million South Koreans would line the streets of Seoul to cheer the pope as his motorcade travels through this city of 9 million.

In his statement, the pope praised Koreans as "proud and sturdy people" and said he had wanted to come here since he became pope in 1978.

His South Korean itinerary calls for him to raise to sainthood 93 Korean and 10 French martyrs and to visit a leper colony on an island.

He will then go to Papua New Guinea, the Solomon Islands and Thailand.

As South Korean officials greeted the pope, clashes were reported at two universities between riot police and students demanding democratic reforms. One of the campuses is on the pope's itinerary for Saturday.

At Sungkyunkwan University in Seoul, witnesses said police fired tear gas at students.

Effective arguments are important: Rehnquist

HOUSTON (AP) — Criticizing lawyers who make unclear and unnecessarily long court speeches, Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist said a poorly argued case is likely to be a poorly decided one.

"So long as oral advocacy is practiced, it ought to be practiced in the best traditions of the profession," Rehnquist told lawyers Wednesday at a three-day civil law conference.

"My colleagues and I may disagree among ourselves about many legal questions," Rehnquist said. "But I think we would all agree that a poorly presented case is apt to be a poorly decided case."

About 300 attorneys attended the Federal Civil Practice Institute sponsored by the Houston chapter of the Federal Bar Association and South Texas College of Law.

Rehnquist said a court argument should serve the same purpose as movie preview, which "selects dramatic or interesting scenes that are apt to catch the interest of the viewer and make him want to see the entire movie."

He also advised lawyers to "know your court" and warned them against reading their court arguments from written statements and quoting long strings of court decisions.

"A good oral argument is in the finest tradition of our profession," he said. "It confers a benefit upon your client and upon the court."

Aurora's string of her dreams

By STEVE HARMON
Laredo Morning Times

SAN YGNACIO, Texas (AP) — She has a hammer. She has a rotary saw. They're parked right next to the other tools of the unlikely trade: a rag-tag assortment of nuts, bolts and nails, a half-empty bottle of wood glue, and a treasured carpenter's square given her by her father.

But Aurora Garza will tell you that all the tools in the world can't top the magic of her now-frayed cordon. Together, Aurora and her simple white rope have strung together a series of homes for relatives and friends.

"I didn't know how to read a ruler," she admits, her voice tinged with a tone of life-long regret that her education stopped at the fourth grade. "But I had my cordon and it worked just fine," she said.

Aurora first took her trusty cordon in hand at age 33, beginning a new career as a builder. In the years since, she's designed some five homes from top to bottom.

"When I first started I really didn't know what I was doing. But sometimes necessity drives you. The first thing I built was an outdoor kitchen. Our house didn't have one and we were cold."

Her eyes, attractively framed in designer glasses, blaze brightly as she recalls the first attempt.

"It wasn't much, a little thing made of lona. It wasn't strong enough and it didn't last. I told myself that I'd have to use good wood if I wanted it to be strong enough. My husband got the wood from corralitos. It only took me about three weeks to finish."

"The hard part came when I had to build the chimney. Batalla mucho con esa chimenea," she cackles, tapping her knee with a hearty slap. "In all it took me a month and half to get the stones all matching and straight," she said.

Aurora now has a fully-equipped indoor kitchen but the cocinita still stands, bustling to life every Sunday with Aurora's ritual preparation of guisado and Green Bay Packer-sized portions of frijoles and arroz.

"Every Sunday I swear my sons can smell me cooking and they come right over," she said. "We have eaten many a good meal in this little cocinita," she says, her hands patting the chimney stones with respect.

With the experience of her cocinita behind her, Aurora soon found herself scribbling on available scraps of paper, making designs of houses that roamed within her mind.

"I didn't want to see my brothers suffer. So I started building homes to help them. I like to help others and it seemed like God was telling me this was how I could help. It's a gift and gifts should be shared," she explained.

"I never had a lesson, never learned from a book," she continued, "but these things were just in my head. I guess they had to get out."

Aurora says she thinks she might have inherited some of her building skills from her father who came to San Ygnacio from Ciudad Guerrero.

White hails tax plan defeat

AUSTIN (AP) — A U.S. House subcommittee's vote defeating a proposed national tax to pay for acid rain cleanup is good news for Texas consumers, Gov. Mark White says.

White said the tax would have cost Texas up to $300 million a year "without any significant return to our state."

Acid rain is pollution that some scientists attribute to increased sulfur dioxide in the air due to emissions from coal-burning power plants. It has been blamed for a variety of environmental damage, particularly in the Northeast and in Canada.

The House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and the environment Wednesday voted 10-9 to strike the acid rain proposal from a measure to extend the Clean Air Act.

The acid rain plan would have required reductions in sulfur dioxide emissions of 10 million tons a year, with the cleanup of the most heavily polluting industrial plants financed by the nationwide tax on electricity.

Charge interference in election

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A U.S. senator and a right-wing vice presidential candidate accused the American ambassador here of trying to manipulate the upcoming presidential runoff and asked that he be fired.

Ambassador Thomas Pickering has "taken actions which support only one candidate" in the election and "must be immediately replaced," vice presidential candidate Hugo Barrera said Wednesday, quoting from what he said was a letter from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The dispute flared on the final day of campaigning before Sunday's runoff election, which pits Roberto d'Aubuisson of the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance against moderate Christian Democrat Jose Napoleon Duarte. Barrera is d'Aubuisson's running mate.

Helms, in a letter to President Reagan, said Pickering is trying to engineer Duarte's victory, according to a Washington congressional source familiar with the letter. "The U.S. is supposed to be neutral down there and should cling to that," the source quoted Helms' letter as saying.

Helms accused Pickering of helping the Christian Democrats by encouraging Salvadoran election officials to retain questionable voter registration lists, said the source, who declined to be identified.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Greg Lagana denied the charges, saying the United States has been "completely neutral" during the campaigning.

But American officials have said privately they would be concerned if d'Aubuisson wins. D'Aubuisson has been linked with rightist death squads and his victory would make it even more difficult for the Reagan administration to obtain military aid from Congress.

Pickering, 52, is a 25-year veteran of the foreign service who has served in Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

Helms is the second-ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and an advocate of tough measures against left-wing rebels in El Salvador.

Helms did not release the text of the letter, but Barrera said excerpts were read over the phone to representatives of his party.

Barrera also said John Kelly, the U.S. Agency for International Development official who advises the Salvadorans during the election process, "has made death threats against representatives of our party."

Barrera did not name the officials who allegedly were threatened.

On Wednesday, by law the last day for campaigning, the two opposing parties came out with a barrage of advertisements on radio and in newspapers, calling each other "communist" and "Nazi."

The Christian Democrats claim their polls show Duarte will win 65 percent of the vote. The party's forecast was fairly accurate in the first-round election March 25, when Duarte led eight candidates with 43.4 percent of the vote.

Aliens killed in chase

HEBBRONVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two illegal aliens were killed and a U.S. Border Patrol agent was injured when the agent's car smashed into the car that was carrying 16 Mexican aliens during a chase, authorities said.

U.S. Border Patrol Agent Amaro Munoz said four other aliens injured in the accident Wednesday night were taken to Brooks County Hospital in Falfurrias, while two were transported to Memorial Hospital in Corpus Christi with broken bones and lacerations.

Munoz declined to identify the dead, the injured aliens or the agent.

The chase, which involved two vehicles and 39 illegal aliens, began about 9 p.m. on Texas Highway 285, east of Hebronville, said Larry Teverbaugh, Laredo sector chief for the Border Patrol.

Two agents were at a lookout and observed a pickup truck carrying 23 illegal aliens and another car carrying 16 others, Teverbaugh said.

Teverbaugh said the agents attempted to stop the vehicles, but the truck left the road and crashed through a fence. The driver jumped out and escaped, Teverbaugh said.

One of the agents got out of the car, and the other began pursuing the car, Teverbaugh said.

He said a high-speed chase ensued through back roads when the car transporting the illegal aliens stopped and the agent's car ran into the back of the vehicle, killing two aliens who were hiding in the trunk.

Teverbaugh said all of the illegal aliens are believed to be from Mexico, except for one woman whose nationality was unknown.

Munoz said there were at least three aliens hiding in the trunk of the car.

The deaths occurred four days after four Salvadorans were killed by a freight train near Kingsville. Authorities said a group of about 40 Salvadorans were on the tracks when a train ran into the group Saturday night.

ATHAN THEOHARIS and once secret files

Professor sleuths the sleuths

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Athan Theoharis is sleuthing the nation's top sleuths from a tiny office crowded by cartons containing roughly 30,000 pages of FBI documents.

When he's not playing half-court basketball with his graduate assistants, Theoharis, a slim, balding, 47-year-old history professor at Marquette University, spends much of his time poring over the documents, many of them from the personal files of the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover and the late assistant director Lewis Nichols.

The documents, which were stored apart from the bureau's central files by Hoover and Nichols, reveal a long-standing pattern of gathering derogatory information on prominent Americans, including Eleanor Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy, he said.

Theoharis served in 1975 as a consultant to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and has written widely on the bureau. He is using the files, obtained through the Freedom of Information Act, to write a biography of Hoover.

"No one's taking this comprehensive approach," he said. "I settled on the Hoover biography because a history of the FBI is almost the same as the biography, but a biography has a wider public appeal."

Theoharis said he hopes the files revealing the inner workings of the FBI will help show the bureau's significance in modern American history.

"Clearly we're deficient in our understanding of 20th century America because we don't understand the role of the FBI," he said. "If we want to preserve a democratic society with an atmosphere where individuals can dissent, we have to deal with the history of the FBI."

"The bureau's authority is based on the power of the executive branch and there's a correlation between its rise and the rise of the presidency," he said.

"Acton said power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely," he said. "That's really true in the case of the bureau. The bureau is the closest thing we've seen in the United States to absolute power. I don't think it's a case of (current FBI Director William) Webster is a good man and Hoover was an evil man. I think it was the seductiveness of power."

Theoharis said his "impressionistic sense" is that the bureau's abuses have abated because of several factors.

"One of the factors was the director had immense prestige and attorneys general were dependent on him for briefings of what the bureau was doing. Now that the director's term is limited to 10 years, that kind of abuse that stems from longevity is eliminated. Also, now you have the Freedom of Information Act (which provides the public access to government documents), a skeptical media and more congressional oversight," he said.

Past presidents, such as Franklin D. Roosevelt, who in 1940

Wheat council nominations are sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer and industry groups who want to nominate individuals to the Wheat Industry Council must apply to the Agriculture Department for certification by May 31.

Thomas H. Porter of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said recently that such organizations must apply and be certified before they can submit the nominations.

After certification is completed, the agency will ask for nominations to fill the two-year terms of 10 members and their alternates whose terms will expire early in 1985. Half the membership of the council is replaced each year.

Porter said organizations that are already certified do not need to reapply. Certified organizations will receive information by mail this summer.

The 20-member council administers a national research and nutrition education program for wheat and wheat foods. Membership is composed equally of wheat producers, processors, end-product manufacturers and consumers.

Applications and information are available from: Lowry Mann, AMSK, USDA, Room 2610-S, Washington, D.C. 20250 or phone 202 447-2650.

Workshop is held on Lucas

AUSTIN (AP) — Prosecutors from 28 Texas counties are joining forces today at a workshop focusing on convicted killer Henry Lee Lucas, who claims responsibility for the murders of more than 300 people.

Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh and the state Department of Public Safety invited county prosecutors from where Lucas, 47, has charges pending against him.

Walsh successfully prosecuted Lucas in April in San Angelo for the capital murder of an unidentified hitchhiker, whose body was found dumped in a Georgetown culvert in 1979. Lucas has been sentenced to death by lethal injection for that killing.

He has also been sentenced to 75 years in prison for the murder of an elderly Ringgold woman and received a life sentence for the slaying of his 15-year-old common-law wife.

asked the bureau to investigate his predecessor Herbert Hoover, are also to blame for past improprieties, Theoharis said.

"When presidents asked the bureau to investigate their critics, they were blackmailing themselves. How can they confine the FBI to lawful investigations after that?" he asked.

To prevent the return of an autonomous FBI, Theoharis advocates a legislative charter for the agency, which currently is a creation of the executive branch and technically subordinate to the U.S. attorney general.

A legislative charter, he said, would mandate oversight by attorneys general, who he said in the past have avoided that responsibility; require record keeping and maintenance; and define the scope of the agency's investigative powers.

The completion of the Hoover biography, which Theoharis said he hopes to finish in several years, depends on cooperation from the FBI in providing more documents.

Of 17,700 pages known to be in Hoover's personal file, only 7,000 were provided, and those were heavily censored, he said. The FBI originally estimated the Nichols file at 11,200 pages, but provided only 4,000 to 5,000 pages, he said.

Then too, FBI research and photocopying fees make Theoharis's efforts expensive, even though he fought for and obtained a 60 percent waiver of the fees. He said he has raised about $30,000 from various sources, including the Fund for Investigative Journalism, and expects to spend about $50,000 before he is through.

Local health officials seek to control blood pressure

Many Pampa health officials are taking the opportunity of May as high blood pressure month to increase public awareness of the problems caused by high blood pressure and the ways to control the disorder.

On Tuesday, May 8, a number of health agencies, sponsored by the Gray County Family Living Committee, are to put on a Health Fair from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. in the M. K. Brown Heritage Room. During this fair, free blood pressure readings will be taken.

Texas Department Health nurse Marge Holland said those who would like their blood pressure read free may also come to the Texas Department of Health, Suite 102, in the Hughes Building any week day from 8 a.m. until 12 noon and 1 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Recently published data on high blood pressure awareness and control and continued decreases in the death rates from strokes and heart attacks show encouraging trends. Holland said. High blood pressure, or hypertension, is one of the main risk factors for stroke and heart disease.

The federal government's most recent report of the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) compared 1976-80 data with that collected during a 1971-72 survey. The data showed that during that time the number of individuals whose high blood pressure was adequately controlled had more than doubled from 16.5 percent in 1971-72 to 34.1 percent in the 1976-80 survey.

Most of that increase occurred between 1976 and 1980, when the National High Blood Pressure Education Program intensified its educational messages on the importance of hypertensives adhering to their therapy. In addition, the survey results also report that the percent of hypertensives aware that they have high blood pressure increased from 51 percent to 73 percent.

Further, in the decade since 1972, stroke mortality has declined by more than 40 percent, and heart attack mortality is down nearly 30 percent. It is probable that increased awareness and control of hypertension is at least in part responsible for the declines.

Since 1972, a coordinated program involving the federal government, state and local public health services, community agencies, voluntary organizations, and industry has been directed at increasing the public awareness of high blood pressure and urging those who have high blood pressure to get on treatment and stay on it. This coordinated effort involves more than 30 national organizations, all 50 states and more than 2,000 community groups.

Although the NHANES demonstrates the progress that has been made during the past decade, much remains to be done. Males lag far behind females in controlling hypertension, and control rates for black males are not as good as white males. Blacks have a higher prevalence rate of high blood pressure than do white populations and therefore should be especially aware of the consequences of untreated hypertension.

These and other problems, say officials, will need to be addressed specifically to maintain the favorable trends in the control of high blood pressure.

Dear Abby

Uprooted wife finds job lost "in transit"

By Abigail Van Buren

1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I would like to express my feelings about companies moving families. Our first move meant leaving my immediate family and adjusting to a new location. We were just nicely settled when my husband got another promotion and whom—we were moved again!

I was forced to give up a good job, my kids had to change schools and make new friends and it was really hard on us.

No one cares about what a wife has to go through. I can't find a job here; we now live in a farm community, and unless you work, you slowly rot. Don't suggest volunteer work. I'd done plenty of that until three years ago when I decided I wanted a paycheck for my time. It was a great feeling to have my own extra money.

Abby, shouldn't a company take into consideration that a wife has to give up a job when it transfers her husband? And shouldn't the company also provide a job for the wife? Do other families have this problem?

UNHAPPY IN MINNESOTA

DEAR UNHAPPY: Yes, other families have that problem, and it's becoming more widespread as the number of women in the work force continues to grow.

While relocating is no piece of cake for the family, it usually means a promotion for the breadwinner, so roll with the punches. It comes with the territory.

Should the company provide a job for the spouse? That would be ideal, but it's too much to expect.

***

DEAR ABBY: This is my third marriage. My husband is 70 and I'm 44.

My problem is sex. I'm not getting any. My husband sat me down two weeks ago and said, "We both know that I am no good in the sack anymore, so you had better go out and find yourself a bed partner." He said as long as the man was clean, he didn't care who he was.

Well, I took my husband's suggestion, and now I feel guilty. I want to go out again, but I have this terrible guilt feeling gnawing at me.

What should I do?

ONLY HUMAN

DEAR HUMAN: Don't accept your husband's permission to sleep around. He should see an endocrinologist and a urologist before he declares himself permanently "no good in the sack." Much can be done for impotency these days.

***

DEAR ABBY: A 10-year-old girl who was appointed by her teacher to be a bathroom monitor asked what she should do to keep from losing friends. She said she was supposed to report anything the girls did that was against the rules such as "smoking, starting fights, writing on the walls, wasting supplies and stuff like that."

First of all, a child goes to school not only to learn, but to gain experience in dealing with other children—not to be an informer. "Snitching" on friends for every little nipping thing they do in the privacy of a bathroom is no way for a child to maintain the admiration and respect of her peers.

I think it's unfair for a teacher to impose such a dirty job on a child.

You justified having a monitor in the girls' bathroom by saying, "Smoking can cause fires, damaging property and wasting supplies will cost your parents—as taxpayers—money."

True, but if the school authorities think monitors are essential, they should appoint an adult—not a 10-year-old girl who needs the friendship and trust of her peers. Nobody likes a snitch.

Loose shaping tops floating hems

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — Fashion's concentration on simple, loose shapes meets its natural season in summer. Oversize tops, loose skirts and breezy dresses offer the cool informality needed when the thermometer soars.

While designers all seek their own versions of the loose look, hemlines offer a short and long contradiction in summer collections.

At Fire Island, an easy two-piece dress of silk/cotton/poly blend in stripes of topaz, blue, black and off-white, has a knee-length hem. However, designers like Yeohlee prefer a longer length, mid-calf or below, for such styles as her cotton chemise with a neckline that layers and folds over the shoulders to fall in points down the back.

The trend of using the most ordinary of fabrics continues for summer clothes. Ralph Lauren works with dish towel cottons in blue and white checks or florals for big-skirted dresses with scoop necks and flowered scarves for sashes. Carol Horn uses pre-washed lawn and gauze for her Japanese-inspired oversize chemises, with a hint of shape in a little front shirring or some shoulder tucking.

The dressiest day fabric in summer collections is linen, and even here, wrinkling is a natural part of the fabric. For new designer Peter Mui, linen is the choice for a loose wrap dress with a drawstring to tie at the waist for more shape or to tie at the hip for the easiest silhouette. The dolman-sleeved bodice can be buttoned up to one shoulder or left to fall in a one-lapel effect.

At Blassport, the trench-coat inspires a pastel linen summer dress. White linen is the choice for a "lab coat" dress with the two big front pockets and back belt of the original. Other designers are creating the slim look in linen, such as Adri's blue and white striped version of this coat-dress style.

With all the loose, oversized summer fashions, there are still plenty of those little classics that go to work in hot weather. Catherine Carr for Rod Owens uses a cotton print in geometric shapes of orange, khaki and white. She quilts it lightly for surface interest in an easy box jacket to wear with a white T-top edged in khaki and accented with a single orange and khaki shoulder motif. Either of two skirts, one in solid khaki, the other in the geometric print can be chosen to make up a summer suit.

Summer color choices, ranging from neutrals to vivid jewel tones, also include a lot of black and white. Morton Myles uses black and white for summer evenings in a long halter chemise of cool crepe, while for Albert Capraro it's all white organza dance dresses, strapless, bouffant and romantic.

Makeup creates slim illusion for full face

ART OF ILLUSION — Makeup, properly applied, can make a round face appear slimmer. Jerry Hamilton - Catty, international makeup artist, suggests contouring and the use of darker colors. A hairstyle which is full at the top and softly overlaps the face on the sides also works to counter the round contours of the face.

The round face can appear longer and thinner, says Jerry Hamilton - Catty, makeup artist.

The illusion is not created with magic but with a few controlled, sculptured tips in makeup artistry, he notes. A palette of light colors tends to create light and fullness, whereas dark colors tend to provide depth plus a slimming effect.

Hamilton - Catty suggests contouring and the use of darker rather than lighter colors. Use light color to highlight or emphasize the middle portion of the face, while emphasizing or receding the very round contours.

A slightly darker shade of foundation or a brown contouring shade of powder blush is suggested for the outer sections of the face. A subtle highlighter should be used on the chin.

Cheek color is applied in a slightly triangular shape starting parallel to the end of the nose and on a line with the inside corner of the eye. The concentration of color in the middle of the face is blended upward, rather than out to create a longer look.

A brown - toned powder blush or a brown powdered eye shadow, should be blended well along the sides of the nose. A lighter color stroked on the tip of the nose will also provide the illusion of a longer, thinner nose.

Subtly extend and lift a smoky shade of eyeshadow on the outside corner of the eyes, up to and on the puffy section, to suggest a more open effect and larger eye. The darker shade on the outside lid and a lighter tone on the inside lid also follows the same premise as the foundation application.

To create better proportion on the mouth, a thin upper lip can be extended slightly to balance a full bottom lip. A touch of lip gloss to the center and darker lipstick on the sides of the lips also aids on the total illusion.

To frame the face, a hairstyle that has fullness at the top and softly overlaps the face at the sides utilizes the same beauty and design principles. Also, hairstyles that are parted off - center or topknots to the side are suggested.

If one wears glasses, consider frames that are slightly squared or angular. No single feature of the face or beauty tip can create the magic of slimming, but rather all the features of the face are emphasized with each makeup product applied.

Light and dark colors, blended with a soft touch, as if by magic, sculpt a cheek bone, contour an eye and give the illusion of a slimmer face.

Loose Marbles: A tirade on pay toilets

By LISA PATMAN

I've always objected to pay toilets. It just doesn't seem right somehow to have to pay for a call of nature. Besides, sometimes I don't have time to pay for a call of nature, if you know what I mean.

Anyway, for years I've cursed the bathroom with those blasted little coin boxes on the stall doors. I've even gone so far as to seek out the managers of these establishments and give them a good tongue - lashing for having such indignities. There have been times when I've boycotted chain stores, changed airports and shunned shopping malls for having pay toilets.

(I know this probably isn't a topic for polite company, and that I'll get letters calling me toilet brain or some such derogatory name, but someone has to speak out. Besides, I'm about to make a fool of myself, which will make everyone feel much better.)

Years have gone by while I've occasionally lambasted pay toilets. It wasn't until a few days ago that I got my final coup de grace.

"I tell you that we have to do something about these stupid pay latrines," I screamed at my family as I emerged from yet another dime - gobbling "public" restroom.

"I hope she's not going to give us the old call - of - nature lecture," Wacko muttered to his brother.

"And why not," I shouted. "You know it's true! It's an outrage! It's an abomination! It's a veritable slap in the face of freedom!"

"Yeah," said Mumbles, "but you've paid more for bathroom facilities than King Tut paid for his tomb."

"I beg your pardon," I hollered indignantly. "You know that I refuse to part with a dime for those silly things, even if I am hopping up and down, and tears are running out of my eyes, and there's a three - mile line in front of the free stall. How dare you accuse me of paying for them?"

"Uh, Mom," someone I don't speak to anymore said, "aren't you the one who will go into Hamburger Heaven and spend $4.50 on stuff you will never eat, just so you won't feel guilty about using their facilities?"

"Well, yes, but..."

"And aren't you the one," someone really tacky continued, "who will put $5 worth of gas in your already full car just so you can use the women's room without having to sneak around and steal the key?"

"Okay, maybe, but..."

"And isn't it true," said a loathsome voice that I don't care to identify, "that you have a closet full of ugly dresses which you purchased for the sole purpose of gaining access to what is so laughingly called a lounge?"

"Er, uh, but..."

"I rest my case," the obnoxious voice finished. I guess he has a point. Maybe I have gone a tiny bit overboard, but it's probably because of some suppressed guilt feelings from an unfortunate potty - training episode.

However, since my fault has been pointed out to me, I've been much better. I now buy only a junior burger and a small lemonade at Hamburger Heaven. I've cut my gas purchase down to a dollar, and a pair of pantyhose is enough for a visit to the ladies' lounge. But best of all, I've stopped sending flowers to friends who have opened their bathrooms to me. I think a thank you note is enough, don't you?

Dry skincare

If you have dry, sensitive skin, you know it every time you use a product that's too harsh, or go outside in the very hot or very cold weather. To protect this type of skin you first need a mild, unabrasive mask. A buttermilk mask is the perfect choice. It's high in natural fats that have a soothing effect on the skin. First, leave a cup of buttermilk out overnight. The next morning, take the thick, creamy part that rose to the top and gently pat it on your face. Leave on for 15 minutes, then rinse.

Facts for redheads

Natural redheads are blessed, but to keep your locks shiny you must be careful. Use gentle shampoos designated for color-treated hair. If you find your youthful radiance has faded, use shampoo-in-color

"Er, uh, but..."

"I rest my case," the obnoxious voice finished. I guess he has a point. Maybe I have gone a tiny bit overboard, but it's probably because of some suppressed guilt feelings from an unfortunate potty - training episode.

However, since my fault has been pointed out to me, I've been much better. I now buy only a junior burger and a small lemonade at Hamburger Heaven. I've cut my gas purchase down to a dollar, and a pair of pantyhose is enough for a visit to the ladies' lounge. But best of all, I've stopped sending flowers to friends who have opened their bathrooms to me. I think a thank you note is enough, don't you?

Gloomy comic book proves to be bright idea for young artist

WINNIE, Texas (AP) — Richard Thurber, 23, has created a doom-and-gloom magazine in the comic book field that is gaining worldwide mail order readership. His magazine is called "Aftermath," and its cast of characters lives a grim life along the Texas Gulf Coast after a nuclear holocaust on earth. "It's depressing," Thurber says. Why would anybody want to read a depressing comic? Thurber is not sure, but he says gloomy books and movies have been around for a long time. Mail order sales have come in from 30 states, including Hawaii and Alaska. And he is getting requests from Canada, West Germany and Australia. Thurber is not sure setting the story on the Texas Gulf Coast has any special worldwide appeal, but it is a location he knows. In the third issue of "Aftermath," the Russians send an expeditionary force from Louisiana into Texas. "They want what is left of the Gulf Coast's oil fields," he says. The Russians occupy Houston and convert the Astrodome into a heliport. This is a two-part story, completed in the fourth issue in which the main character reactivates the Battleship Texas and makes some of the ship's weapons operational. "Then the Battle of San Jacinto is fought again," Thurber says, a wide grin spreading across his face. (He explains to non-Texan comic book readers that this is the battle that won the state its original independence.) He received a letter from a 16-year-old Canadian who said the first issue of "Aftermath" was "extremely depressing" but the magazine brought his attention to things he had never thought of before — and he wanted to read the next issue about Charles Hunter, the main character in "Aftermath."

Hunter sort of created himself, says the Lamar University graduate. A graying middle-aged hero is uncommon, but Hunter is in his "early to mid-50s," Thurber says. "I wanted an unusual hero — someone with a foreknowledge of what the world was like before the nuclear war. He is the kind of character, if you met him, you probably wouldn't like him. He's gruff. And the problems that happen make him even less social. He's modeled after my father." Thurber explains that his father, Charles Richard Thurber Sr., has a gruff exterior, "but people who know him perceive the disguise." (Hunter displays a softer side occasionally.) "Hunter always has aces up his sleeve," Thurber says. In the typical doom-and-gloom story, when a hero like Hunter confronts a story, he solves it, "but with sacrifices dear to him." Thurber has patterned his comic magazine after popular films in which the story is overshadowed with disaster. The illustrated science fiction magazine's market is 15- to 25-year-olds. The battle and escapades of Hunter and his Texas crew 25 years after a series of 20th-century mistakes have destroyed Earth has a special appeal to this group. In the premiere issue, Thurber introduced his characters, setting and established that Hunter is in love with Diane Stone. "It's Charles and Di," he says, obviously enjoying the association with fairy-tale romance. "But there is nothing, fairy-tale about nuclear war." The third part of the romantic triangle introduced in the first issue is Debra Jo Sampson, another main character. "She has a more important role in future issues. Sampson has an emotional strength and she is a tomboy-type woman," Thurber says. Toughness is necessary in Thurber's brutal post-holocaust world. "It takes brutality to survive. Even harmless things like pets can become a threat." The major threat in the second issue is a homicidal maniac. He is patterned after a character in literature who imposed his will on others. "Hunter has to become a detective to find him," Thurber says. But the writer gives his readers a clue by showing the killer looking in a mirror, symbolic of the idea that there are two sides to the man's nature. In each adventure Thurber plans the plot and sub-plots first. After the outline is down with an approximate page count, he lays out thumbnail sketches of the art work. He tries to pace the action of the story. The panels of art illustrating the story are not the usual comic book format with boxed storyboard panels, each contained in its own border. Thurber uses a push-pull panel effect. "I try to make the whole page work as a single piece of art," he says. What the artist draws on each page has a montage effect, giving the page — and sometimes two adjoining pages — a three-dimensional effect.

"It's more like a movie," Thurber says. "Scenes dissolve into others and there are closeups. You can pick out the single pieces of art from the whole." He set his mind to be an artist before he was graduated from East Chambers High School. His first comic magazine issue began as a class project his junior year at Lamar. The story he created was not "Aftermath," but it contained an early Hunter, who endured. Three professors who looked at his assignment encouraged him to try to sell it to a publisher of comic books. He knew the illustrated story had to be longer in order to be published as a comic book. So he planned to revamp the whole thing. "I thought, 'Wow!'" And the post-nuclear wipeout story was born. "I mailed it to seven comic distributors and got a positive response from four." They all wanted to see the magazine in a finished format, so Thurber finished it.

'89 World's Fair in Oklahoma?

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — As the world exposition in New Orleans opens two years after a fair in Knoxville, Tenn., and eight years before a planned celebration in Chicago, Oklahoma City is scrambling for permission to hold a World's Fair in 1989. Its chances for success are unknown, and already the proposals are attracting some criticism. The fair would mark the 100th anniversary of the Run of 1889, which opened central Oklahoma Indian lands to pioneers. Robert Thompson, wearing a silver 'Run of '89' tie tack reflecting the riding cowboy insignia of the proposed exhibition, has spent the past two years selling the idea that Oklahoma City can stage a World's Fair. The local Chamber of Commerce has already spent up to $1 million in studies alone. An 800-page proposal will soon begin the political steps needed to gain approval from the Paris-based Bureau of International Exhibitions, including required approval from the Commerce Department and President Reagan.

The chief opponent of the plan has been City Councilman Robert M. Frank, who says he is convinced that a World's Fair would bankrupt the city. Frank says he's received calls and letters supporting his position, and is circulating a petition to block the fair plans. In a position paper, the fair's proponents say that the city's services could adequately accommodate a fair. Frank objects to an agreement between the city and the Oklahoma City Fairgrounds Trust for control of the fairgrounds property. The board, made up of a majority of private citizens, "isn't accountable to the city," Frank says. Within the trust agreement is a provision that no distribution of income or other withdrawal of funds "will be made to the beneficiary of the trust — the citizens of Oklahoma City," Frank says. "We've had a legal opinion that surplus funds should go to the city, but now they go to the trust, who decides where it goes." Plans call for the fair to be located on the 435-acre state fairgrounds, with $8.8 million in improvements to the area — money that is "part of the budget of the construction of the fair site and not an expense to the city," the position paper says. The fair's backers claim that the site would be the largest ever to hold a world's fair, compared with Knoxville's 76 acres and New Orleans' 82 acres. They also say construction and operation of the world's fair would create 18,854 jobs before and during the fair, and money would flow into the community to produce another 32,600 jobs. Supporters say that the exposition would be financed through revenue bonds and borrowed money guaranteed by corporations and private individuals and paid for by revenue derived from the fair. Frank also says "it's obvious to me that this fair is maybe just part of what's intended. Not exactly a smokescreen, but I think the board intends other monumental projects."

The position paper answers, "Regardless of horror stories about bulldozers and property condemnation, ... no such thing has ever been considered. Long-range plans show the possibility of development. ... However, those are long-range plans and do not involve the World's Fair." Among the proposals include a domed stadium — with an eye toward attracting a major league franchise — and a pari-mutuel horse racetrack. Backers say estimated revenue from the fair would be more than $201 million, with direct tax revenues of $30 million. Estimated construction costs are $73 million and estimated cost of operation $53.5 million. Fair opponents cite the financial failure of the Knoxville exposition and the subsequent failure of a $3 million banking network. Oklahoma City area favor the city hosting the world's fair. Sixteen percent of those surveyed were against the plan and 13 percent were undecided. "Of course, we're very happy about the survey," Thompson said. "History indicates there's going to be some opposition to any plan of this kind. But we feel that those for us have the same concerns as those who are against the plan."

According to a public opinion survey conducted for The Oklahoman newspaper, 71 percent of the people in the immediate Oklahoma City area favor the city hosting the world's fair. Sixteen percent of those surveyed were against the plan and 13 percent were undecided. "Of course, we're very happy about the survey," Thompson said. "History indicates there's going to be some opposition to any plan of this kind. But we feel that those for us have the same concerns as those who are against the plan."

GRAZING TIME—Trainer Wayne Lukas grazes Kentucky Derby entry Althea at Churchill Downs. Both Lukas entries for this Saturday's run for the roses. Althea and Life's Magic are both fillies. (AP Laserphoto)

California trainer enters two fillies in Derby race

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — When Landaluce, the 1982 2-year-old filly champion, died of a rare disease, trainer Wayne Lukas thought he'd never have another one like her.

"I was thinking Derby all the way with her," Lukas recalled Wednesday. "It was devastating."

Landaluce had been unbeaten in five starts and died in November 1982.

The California-based Lukas will be bucking tradition Saturday when he sends the filly entry of Althea and Life's Magic as part of an expected field of 20 — the rest males — in the $250,000-added Derby at Churchill Downs.

Only 32 fillies have run in the 109 previous Derbies and only two have won — Regret as the favorite in 1915 and Genuine Risk in 1980. The last filly to go in the Derby was Cupecoy's Joy, the 10th-place finisher in 1982.

Althea and Life's Magic are the first filly entry in the history of the Derby.

Other 3-year-olds expected to be entered today for the 1 1/4-mile race were Fali Time, Swale, Taylor's Special, At The Threshold, Bear Hunt, Secret Prince, Gate Dancer, Silent King, Coax Me Chad, Pine Circle, Rexson's Hope, Bedouin, Biloxi Indian, Raja's Shark, So Vague, Vanlandingham, Fight Over and Majestic Shore.

Lukas feels his entry could go off as the sentimental favorite because "every housewife in America who's betting will put $2 on her."

Swale, the six-time stakes winner, including the Florida Derby, and Taylor's Special, the Louisiana Derby and Blue Grass winner, figure to be the other leading contenders in the 1 1/4-mile classic.

Althea is the strongest half of Lukas' entry, having beaten colts three out of four times. The daughter of Alydar is the biggest money-winner in the field with earnings of $1.2 million.

Owned by David Aykroyd, Helen Alexander and Helen Groves, Althea has won eight of 13 career starts — the last a seven-length triumph in the April 21 Arkansas Derby.

"Don't consider her as a filly," said Lukas. "Just consider her as a race horse. Whether she has the stamina, I don't know until she gets to the eighth pole."

The fillies carry 121 pounds in the Derby, five less than the colts.

Soccer meeting

The Pampa Youth Soccer Association will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in the Austin School gym to have board elections and nominations.

Robertson sued

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman left paralyzed from the waist down in a car crash with New York Yankees shortstop Andre Robertson last year has filed a $25 million suit against the ballplayer and the city.

Shenikwa Dawn Nowlin, 25, charged in the Manhattan Supreme Court suit that Robertson was driving too fast and was not "reasonably alert" while driving at 5:15 a.m. last Aug. 18, when their car struck a barrier while heading southbound on the West Side Highway.

Celtics win, 116-102

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird played basketball like a football player. Cedric Maxwell played it like a hockey player. And if New York doesn't play it any better it will have plenty of time to watch baseball.

Summer vacation could start Monday for the Knicks, whose most potent weapons — Bernard King and a pressing defense — have blown up in their faces.

The latest explosion came Wednesday night when the Boston Celtics crushed the Knicks for the second straight game, 116-102, and grabbed a 2-0 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

If Boston wins the next two games in New York Friday night and Sunday, the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal will be over.

"I'm not crazy," said Dennis Johnson, the sparkplug of a decisive Boston surge. "I enjoy being up 2-0. You won't hear me talk against it."

In Wednesday night's only other game, Phoenix beat Utah 102-97 to take their series 1-1.

Tonight, Los Angeles is at Dallas and Milwaukee at Jersey. The Lakers lead the Mavericks 2-0 and the Nets and Bucks are tied 1-1.

Little League Baseball Roundup

The National Little League launched an exciting start this week as two games were decided in the final inning.

Tuesday, Duncan Insurance was one run behind with the bases loaded, two outs and a count of three balls and two strikes on one of the team's better hitters, Mark Adderholt. Glo-Valve Service pitcher Ryan Teague fooled everybody, including Adderholt, with a change of pace which was right down the middle for a called strike three as Glo-Valve hung on to win, 7-6.

Jason Stamp drove in two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning as Dunlap Industrial edged OCAW Union, 11-10, Monday. Shannon Cook was the winning pitcher in relief of Stamp while John Wadsworth, who went the distance for OCAW, picked up the loss.

Teague was the winner for Glo-Valve in relief of Barry Coffee. Teague gave up two runs on only one hit while striking out seven in three innings of relief. Teague aided his own cause with two hits and two runs batted in. Mark Wood pitched the entire game for Duncan and took the loss.

Dixie Parts defeated Cabot Corporation, 11-2, Monday at Matt Brock picked up the win in relief of Jason Becker. Tory Peet was charged with the loss. Moose Lodge outscored Celanese Corporation, 11-5, Tuesday with Eric Cochran hammering three hits, including a double and triple, and Chris Howard contributing two hits for the winners. Howard was the winning pitcher in relief of Cochran while Scott Beyer was the losing pitcher.

Play continues Thursday with Cabot and OCAW in the 6 p.m. game and Dunlap against Dixie at 8 p.m. Friday. Duncan will play Celanese at 6 p.m. while Glo-Valve takes on Moose Lodge at 8 p.m.

In Babe Ruth League action this week, Grant Supply routed the Lions Club, 10-3, as James Ward and John Thomas combined to pitch a no-hitter. Ward got the win and Thomas the save.

Kelly Loter was the top hitter for Grant.

Cree Company defeated First National Bank, 10-5. Bubba Gowin was the winning pitcher and Chris Hogan led Cree's hitting attack with two hits in three times at bat.

Dustin Miller was two for three for the Bankers.

Defending champion Pampa Hardware edged J.T. Richardson, 4-3, with Cliff Medley picking up the win. Troy Owens got a save.

Clint Allen had two hits in four trips for Hardware while Jon Rowe had one for Richardson.

Tonight's schedule has Holmes going against Cree at 6 p.m., followed by Hardware vs. Grant at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Richardson takes on First National at 6 p.m., followed by the Lions vs. Holmes.

Pampa, leading by 11 strokes after Tuesday's opening round, won the second round by 12 strokes over second-place Austin Westlake. Pampa finished at 616 while Austin Westlake shot a 639.

Defending champion Borger finished eighth in the 10-man field at 655.

Streaking Reds hold off Astros

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds pitcher Mario Soto smiled too early and it almost cost him the game.

Soto's glee over a probable game-ending double-play grounder back to the mound turned into horror when he threw the ball away, letting the Houston Astros cut the lead to 3-2.

Soto had to bear down, getting his 13th strikeout and a final ground out before enjoying his third victory of the season and the Reds' sixth straight, 3-2, Wednesday night.

"I just wanted to get people excited," Soto, 3-1, joked about the ragged ninth inning, which started with the Reds ahead 3-1.

Kevin Bass struck out on a nasty sinking change-up that eluded catcher Dann Bilardello, letting Bass sprint to second base on the wild pitch. Soto fanned Craig Reynolds, and then ran into a wild streak and walked Jose Cruz and Jerry Mumphy.

Ray Knight, who hit a solo homer in the fifth for the Astros' only run to that point, then slapped a one-hopper back to Soto on the mound for what appeared to be an easy double-play.

"As soon as he hit it, we both figured it was a double-play," Bilardello said. "Mario seemed to get a little wide-eyed and smile — we both knew."

Soto fired the ball toward Bilardello to start the double-play, but the toss veered wildly away from the diving catcher, letting Bass score with the bases still loaded and just one out.

"In that situation, you don't want the ball hit back to you. I don't think any pitcher does," Soto said of the double-play gone awry. "You get too excited."

After his error, Soto got determined.

Soto fanned Phil Garner for his 13th strikeout — two shy of his career high — and got Bill Doran to end the game on an easy grounder to first.

The six-game winning streak is the longest by a Cincinnati club since it put together eight straight victories in May 1981. The Astros' second-straight one-run loss dropped them to 3-8 in one-run games this season.

"We play them all close, it seems like," Astros Manager Bob Lillis said. "We go down to the wire and then come up short. We've had our opportunities, like tonight."

The Astros were leading the game 1-0 going into the bottom of the seventh on the strength of Knight's first homer of the season and a three-hitter by knuckleball specialist Joe Niekro, 2-5.

Duane Walker tripled to start the Reds' seventh and scored on Dave Parker's single. A passed ball by Tom Wiegand advanced Parker to second, and he scored on Dave Concepcion's single to chase Niekro.

YOUNGEST PLAYER— Jose Rijo, 18-year-old pitcher for the New York Yankees, was given his first major league start Wednesday against the Chicago White Sox.

However, the White Sox won, 3-0, on a one-hitter by LaMarr Hoyt. Rijo is the youngest player in the majors. (AP Laserphoto)

Perez returns

ATLANTA (AP) — Pascual Perez is back, confident he can pitch the Atlanta Braves into contention in the National League West race.

"I think I make good luck for this club," Perez said Wednesday night after his first appearance of the 1984 season — three perfect innings against the San Diego Padres before an hour-long driving rain forced postponement of the game.

He pitched 1 1/3 innings, allowing no runs, hits or errors, and striking out three batters.

"I'm feeling good," Perez said. "I think I can help the team."

Perez was called up from the minors after a strong performance in the minors. He has a 1-0 record with a 0.90 ERA in 10 appearances.

AL roundup

Yankees shut out White Sox, 3-0 on one-hitter by Hoyt

By HERSHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

It was a perfect pitch... but it cost LaMarr Hoyt a perfect game.

It came with one out in the seventh inning Wednesday night after Hoyt had mowed down the first 19 New York Yankee batters.

"He jammed me, that's all," Don Mattingly said. "All his pitches were working good. I think I hit a slider."

Mattingly popped it up to short left field where a 14-mile-an-hour wind carried it just out of the reach of diving shortstop Jerry Dybzinski for a fluke single, the Yankees' only hit and only baserunner. Steve Kemp followed with a double-play grounder and Hoyt faced the minimum number of 27 batters in hurling Chicago to a 3-0 victory over the Yankees, the team that traded him to the White Sox in 1977.

"If the wind isn't blowing, it's a running catch," Dybzinski said. "But I knew I was going to have to dive to make the play. I wasn't thinking about anything else, but I kept running and running and couldn't catch up with it."

Nor could the Yankees, who have lost seven of their last eight games and were shut out for the sixth time, catch up with Hoyt.

"This game is played by humans, not machines," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, "so I'm always surprised that a man can go from the first inning to the ninth without a mistake — and he did."

In other American League games, the Boston Red Sox edged the Detroit Tigers 5-4, the Cleveland Indians outlasted the Baltimore Orioles 9-7 in 16 innings, the Oakland Athletics nipped the California Angels 7-6, the Toronto Blue Jays shaded the Texas Rangers 7-6 and the Minnesota Twins downed the Seattle Mariners 8-6. The Kansas City-Milwaukee game was rained out.

Hoyt, who struck out eight, seemed to be the only member of the White Sox who wasn't upset that he lost his bid for baseball immortality. "I don't think when you throw a one-hit shutout you should be disappointed," said the burly 29-year-old right-hander. "The chances of throwing a perfect game aren't very good anyway. You've got to be lucky. One guy got a hit. So what? It's no big deal. I got 27 outs. That sounds like a pretty good game to me."

Hoyt was in such command that he threw a strike on the first pitch to 19 of the 27 batters and never went to a three-ball count.

The White Sox scored all their runs in the second inning off 18-year-old Jose Rijo, making his first major-league start. A walk to Ron Kittle, Harold Baines' single, a sacrifice and Scott Fletcher's single produced the first run and the others scored on a balk and Rudy Law's single.

Names in news

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Country music fans got their cake and ate it, too, at a sold-out concert by singer Willie Nelson on his 51st birthday.

About 17,500 fans sang "Happy Birthday" to the pigtailed Nelson as five giant cakes were rolled into Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum during his performance Monday night.

Each cake, shaped like the state of Arizona, was 6 feet long, 4 feet wide and weighed more than 300 pounds. They cost a combined $2,500 and were donated by a local radio station.

Everyone received a slice as they left the Coliseum following the 2½-hour show which also featured Wayne Jennings and Jessi Colter.

NEW YORK (AP) — Coca-Cola Co. and Pepsi Inc. appear headed for a battle of the superstars, pitting singers Julio Iglesias and Michael Jackson.

Coca-Cola announced Wednesday that it had signed the Spanish-born Iglesias, 40, to appear in commercials in English, Spanish and other languages and said the company would sponsor a seven-month world concert tour by Iglesias.

The deal with Iglesias, an international star who has sold more than 100 million records, comes only three months after rival soft drink maker Pepsi unveiled a series of television commercials made by Jackson, the recent winner of eight Grammy awards.

Jackman was reportedly paid $5.5 million for the commercials. Terms of the deal with Iglesias have not been revealed.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — American conductor Lorin Maazel was raked over the coals by opera fans and critics whose reaction to his production of "Aida" made it clear that they are glad his tenure as director of the Vienna State Opera is coming to an end.

The opera by Verdi opened Monday with tenor Luciano Pavarotti and soprano Maria Chirilus receiving wild cheers. But Maazel's appearance for a curtain call was greeted by a chorus of boos from the audience.

Maazel announced last month he would quit in June, two years before his contract expires. He blamed unwarranted criticism and lack of cooperation from the government and cultural officials.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Ruth Graham, wife of evangelist Billy Graham, was hospitalized in good condition after several days of tests for a chronic cough.

Mrs. Graham was referred to me from another physician regarding a chronic, persistent cough that has been present for many years," Dr. Tom DeMeester, chief of surgery for St. Josephs Hospital and Creighton University, said Wednesday.

She was admitted "simply for evaluation," he said.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Pianist Rudolph Serkin was ready to begin his day after flying in the night before. But he was still waiting for his piano, which travels by truck.

"My piano should be here by now," the 81-year-old Serkin said Wednesday. "I played the same Steinway at Lincoln Center (in New York City) on Sunday."

Serkin and the piano have been inseparable for at least 10 years.

"Isn't that hard on the piano? Serkin, a gentle smile lighting up his face, said no. "It's always tuned upon arrival. And besides, my piano can stand more than I can. It's much younger!"

Serkin performed in Omaha on Wednesday night.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent sea tests show technicians have corrected problems that drew congressional criticism of the complex Aegis system, designed to defend the U.S. fleet against missile attack, the Navy's top admiral says.

Adm. James Watkins, chief of naval operations, told a Pentagon briefing Wednesday that in eight days of tests off Puerto Rico ending April 29 the system, using its own SM-2 missiles, downed 10 of moving 11 targets flying toward the Aegis-armed cruiser Ticonderoga and simulated Navy vessels.

Watkins said the Aegis still has a problem defending against sea-skimming missiles that attack at supersonic speeds. But he said an advanced version of the SM-2 that becomes operational next year will solve the problem.
