Mondale 'thumbs-up' in Beaumont visit

Candidates making late push in Texas

By The Associated Press

Walter Mondale picked up a key endorsement in his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination and the Rev. Jesse Jackson courted the Hispanic vote while Gary Hart's Texas campaign manager predicted victory in Saturday's Democratic precinct caucuses.

In Austin, Mondale nabbed the endorsement Thursday of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, one of the politicians mentioned most often as a possible vice presidential candidate on a Mondale ticket.

Bentsen flew to the Texas capital from Washington to appear at a Mondale fundraiser and described the former vice president as "a good friend of mine, the next president of the United States."

Referring to Mondale's earlier defeats at the hands of Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, Bentsen said, "We like a leader who can take a hit and not quit."

Bentsen's endorsement came just two days before Texas Democrats hold caucuses to begin the process of choosing 169 national convention delegates.

Convention in July

Mondale used a campaign stop in Houston Thursday night to job at Hart for leaving the state to campaign elsewhere.

"This morning, Gary Hart pulled out of Texas," Mondale told supporters Thursday night. "He pulled out of the state... I believe that's the wrong way to treat this good state."

Hart left Texas on Thursday to campaign in Louisiana and Ohio.

But Hart's top Texas operative predicted Thursday that Hart will upset Mondale in the Texas precinct caucuses.

"The Hart campaign in Texas is better organized than in any other caucus state. We have placed virtually our entire emphasis on organization from the very beginning. We have done things right," U.S. Rep. Martin Frost said.

Frost, Hart's Texas co-chairman, said the campaign will have contacted by telephone or mail more than 500,000 Texas Democrats before the 6,634 caucuses begin at 7:15 p.m. Saturday.

The precinct caucuses begin the process that will choose 169 of the 200 Texas delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

"We expect to win," Frost said. He noted that Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle, a Mondale supporter, this week has been saying an upset of Mondale is possible.

Earlier Thursday, Mondale told a gathering of farmers at a ranch near Waco that if Reagan administration policies continue "we're close to a point when what we've known as family farms will be gone."

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower introduced Mondale and said of local farmers "there's a world of hurt out there."

Mondale said farmers were faced with "perhaps the most severe threat since Herbert Hoover."

He said that as president he would improve administration of farm programs and offer a loan level "geared to the price of production."

Jackson delivered a sermon in San Antonio after marching with farm workers through a barren citrus grove in the Rio Grande Valley on Thursday.

He said amnesty should be granted to all illegal aliens now living in the United States.

Area counties expect big turnout

Lack of contests may slow Gray County vote

Absentee voting was heavy in the four Pampa-area counties with contested races for sheriff, county clerks reported on the eve of the primary elections.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday in the Democratic and Republican primary contests, and the earlier absentee voting in the area races forecasts a large voter turnout there.

Absentee balloting in Gray County, however, was "very light," County Clerk Wanda Carter reported. She said 136 absentee ballots were cast in the Democratic primary, and 68 were cast for Republicans. About 20 more absentee ballots may be in the mail, Carter said. Registered voters in the county total 12,925.

Gray County voters will decide just two contested races, none county-wide, in Saturday's election.

In Carson, Roberts, Hemphill, and Wheeler Counties, contested races for sheriff and others may bring out large numbers of voters, according to clerks who have totaled the absentee ballots.

The runoff election for multi-candidate races in which no candidate receives a majority of the total vote will be June 2.

GRAY COUNTY

The majority of Gray County candidates will pass through the primaries unopposed. The two contested races feature battles for county commissioner, Precinct 3 (Grandview-Pampa), and constable, and Precinct 1 (Lefors-Pampa).

Democrats James O. McCracken, the incumbent, and challengers Onis H. Price and Ott Shewmaker await the results of their battle for the county commissioner's post. The winner of the contest will meet the unopposed Republican candidate Gerald Wright in the November election.

Democrats Jerry Dean Williams, the incumbent, and Darrell L. Kecker, have campaigned in the contested race for constable. The Republicans didn't field a candidate for constable.

Precinct 1 County Commissioner O.L. Presley, a Democrat, won't have an opponent on the ballot in Saturday's primary, but fellow Democrat Earl Davis has announced he will run as a write-in candidate in the November election.

Democratic incumbents without opposition in either election include County Attorney Robert McPherson, Sheriff Rufe Jordan, Tax Assessor Collector Margie Gray, Precinct 2 Constable Herman H. Kieth, Precinct 3 Constable Robert Dale Payne, Precinct 4 Constable Jimmy Joe McDonald, 84th District State Representative Foster Whaley and 31st-223rd District Attorney Guy Hardin.

They have no opponents in Saturday's primary elections, but Democrat Roger Scott and Republican David Porter will meet in November in a battle for the unexpired term of Justice of the Peace.

CARSON COUNTY

In Carson County, 154 Democrats and 15 Republicans have voted absentee in a "fairly good turnout." Several absentee ballots are in the mail.

Bob Skidmore and Clint Dodd want to take away Sheriff Connie Reed's job. The winner between the three Democrats won't have an opponent in the general election.

Democrats Ed Hinshaw, the incumbent, and Harry E.

Bryan will battle for the county attorney's position. No Republicans are in that race.

A crowded field of Democrats all want to be county commissioner for Precinct 1 (Groom). In the race are Raphael J. Britten, Tom Wagner, Wallace Bichsel and Johnny W. Brooks. The Republicans have no candidate.

Marlin Eagle, Carson County Commissioner, Precinct 3 (Panhandle), will face Republican Jerry Strawn in the November election.

Also waiting to meet in November for the title of tax assessor-collector are Democrat C.L. Sterling, the incumbent, and Republican Bob W. Curtis.

HEMPHILL COUNTY

Absentee voting in Hemphill County has indicated a "real good turnout." 153 Democrats cast absentee ballots, 19 Republicans did the same. Additional absentee votes are in the mail.

A crowd of candidates has campaigned against Democratic Sheriff C.H. Wright. Democrats Harold "Mickey" Simpson and Billy Bowen will challenge Wright on Saturday. Waiting to meet the winner is Republican Jack Reynolds.

Three Democrats, Joe Ann Halliburton, Pearl Teague and Gladene Woodside, will square off for the position of tax assessor-collector. The winner won't have an opponent in the general election.

Both parties have a candidate in the race for Hemphill County Commissioner, Precinct 1. Democrat Donald Burch will meet Republican Kenneth Osborne in November.

Two Republicans, Ed Godden and Ed Culver, will battle Saturday for the Precinct 1 constable's job. No Democrat is in that race.

Rooster's big mouth lands owner in coop

By Jeff Langley
Senior Staff Writer

A Pampa bird lover must rely on an alarm clock for morning wake-up calls now that Pampa authorities have busted his crowing rooster.

Police cooped up the owner of the big-mouth banty for a short time this week and charged the fowlaphilic with harboring a noisy bird inside the city limits.

"He'd crow every morning at six o'clock and wake me up. I love to hear him crow," said Wade Washington Reeves, 68, after his arrest Wednesday night.

"He's a grown rooster. I have him and two hens. I want to raise some little ones and see if I can sell them," he said.

Reeves reckons his city neighbors on Miami street don't share his appreciation for a rooster's early-morning song because after receiving a complaint a couple of weeks ago, an inspector with the city health department told him to get rid of the bird.

"They never did talk to me. They went by and talked to my grandson," he said.

The Pampa man said he has complied with the order but never once considered destroying the evidence in a pan of hot grease. Reeves said he's determined to raise chickens, so a few days after the complaint, he said his fowl friends were moved to a coop outside town.

"Then two cops came by and talked to my wife. She told me, 'Oh, my Lord, they have a warrant out for your arrest.'"

An officer arrested Reeves at his home about 9 p.m. Wednesday and escorted the bird breeder downtown.

The suspect was charged with violating Chapter 3, Art. 3, Sec. 3-31 (3) of the Pampa City Code. "It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to keep any fowl capable of crowing within the city limits."

"He took me over there and took my fingerprints and picture. I said, 'Since I'm the worst criminal in Pampa, can you get a (booking - identification) number and put it up there.' So he did," Reeves said.

The Pampa man said he's guilty as charged, so he won't crow about his arrest.

"I just laughed about it. There's no use getting mad," he said.

Reeves said the whole ordeal at the police station lasted about 30 minutes. He said he was released after promising to appear in municipal court Thursday morning.

"I pleaded guilty and paid a thirty-dollar fine," he said about the chicken charge's final disposition.

Reeves plans to make the rooster work off the fine at its new home outside town.

"I'm still gonna raise some chickens," he said.

Argument ends with Pampan ran over by pickup, police say

By Jeff Langley
Senior Staff Writer

A reported argument between two Pampa men late Thursday ended when one used his pickup to run over the other in the victim's front yard, police said.

Leroy Wayne Ferguson, 32, of 1122 Cherry, was run down in his yard about 11:20 p.m. Thursday, police reported this morning. Police said Ferguson's spine may have been crushed when the pickup rolled over him. He was treated at Coronado Community Hospital and transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where he was listed in serious condition this morning.

The driver of the pickup, Michael Helton, 25, 412 Pitts, was arrested after a chase at speeds of more than 100 mph, police said.

Police gave the following account of the incident.

As neighbors watched, Ferguson and Helton had a yelling match at the victim's Cherry street residence. Helton was inside his pickup in the street in front of the home. Ferguson stood in the front yard.

The suspect started to drive off but suddenly stopped his 1982 Chevrolet pickup with dual rear wheels. Helton threw the pickup into reverse and stomped the accelerator. He drove the truck over the curb and into the yard and ran over Ferguson, police said.

The suspect then drove off, leaving the injured victim on the ground, police said.

While enroute to the scene, officer Kenneth Hopson watched the suspect's vehicle run a stop sign at Crest and Hobart. Hopson tried to stop the truck, but it sped away, northbound on Perryton Parkway. The chase continued east onto Loop 171 at speeds in excess of 100 mph. The officer and suspect wound around the loop and back into town.

The chase continued through residential areas, until the officer temporarily lost sight of the suspect. Police said Hopson spotted the truck again. This time it was parked in front of Helton's home at 412 N. Pitts, where the suspect was arrested.

Helton was charged with running a stop sign, speeding, and fleeing and evading. He remained in custody in the city jail this morning.

Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said the suspect is under investigation in connection with a possible charge of aggravated assault with a motor vehicle. He said the case will be presented to the district attorney for the possible filing of formal charges.

MURDER SUSPECT—Richard Lee Schreckhise, 20, of 916 S. Nelson, sits in the sheriff's office after his arraignment this morning on a charge of murder. Schreckhise was returned from Arkansas by Gray County Sheriff's deputies and charged with the April shooting death of Aaron Wade Lewis, 22, of 124 N. Nelson. The suspect, a co-worker of the murder victim at a Pampa oilfield business, was arrested at his father's home north of Clarksville, Ark., on Monday. Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge set Schreckhise's bond at $100,000. (Staff Photo by Ed Copeland)

Perot says U.S. falling behind industrial countries in education

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

AMARILLO - Academic education in the United States has fallen behind other industrialized nations, and Texas should move to the forefront to allow students to be ready to compete with the technological advances ahead, H. Ross Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education, told Panhandle area school board members Thursday night.

"Our children are going to have to compete with young people from all over the world, like it or not," Perot said while addressing the Panhandle Area Association of School Boards in Amarillo.

"We've got to fully prepare the intellects of our children" so they can better face the rapid changes to come in the near future with increasing technological advances, he said.

Perot said technological progress is coming more from other industrialized nations such as Germany, Japan and even Korea than from the United States any more.

"Our children rank at the bottom of the industrialized world in the academic achievements of students," he claimed. "Yet we invented public education." Perot said other nations have improved on the public education system to produce students more prepared to participate in a technological society.

Other industrialized nations require more hours of classes and higher academic standards, he claimed. Russia, for example, has five million students taking calculus. "We have only 500,000," he claimed, suggesting America should emulate Russia in some of its educational systems.

"We're going to have to teach our children to compete and to win" against students in other industrialized nations, he said. "You either get the business or you lose it. . . . We've got to be competitive."

Explaining the purposes and goals of SCOPE, Perot said, "Our challenge is to build the finest education system in the nation, and in the world." Education reforms to stress academics are "the very best possible legacy we can leave our children," he said.

Education should be treated more like a business, he said, noting Texas is spending about $8.3 billion on education, more than any corporation in Texas and more than only a few in the nation.

If the education system in Texas were a business, it would be going under, he said, with not enough return for the investment of money. "The generosity of the taxpayers" has kept it going by continuing to feed money into the system, he said.

No one really knows what education costs are, he said. There is generally no cost accounting system and no management information system.

A losing football coach risks losing his job, "no matter how nice a guy he is," Perot said. But a poor English teacher "could stay in the system for 30 years and go on to glory."

Change is needed to bring the system into balance and to make it more effective in producing better educated students. "Change is traumatic," he stated. People tend to resist change, wanting to preserve the status quo. But "we can't keep things the way they are" if we expect to remain competitive with other nations, he said.

Perot claimed many of the current problems in the state education system have come from the State Board of Education.

The state board "is the best kept secret in the state," he said. Very few people have any idea who runs education in the state, he said, noting the board is "a low visibility operation." Most people are not even aware they vote for members of the board.

Perot said he had visited members of the board and asked them why education had gotten so far off in the state. "They said, 'Don't blame us,'" he said. Instead of taking any responsibility, they put the blame on the people and on the legislators.

"The state board, for one reason or another, has failed to manage" education properly in the state, Perot stated, not using their powers and authority to make needed changes. "They have failed to do the job."

These needed changes include more emphasis on academics, lower priority for extracurricular activities during school hours and more homework assignments.

Stressing he did not want to eliminate extracurricular activities, Perot said the priority, however, should be on academics. "On a typical school night, students should be at home doing homework."

"In too many places, if a student can play ball, he doesn't have to do anything else," he said. He also said there were too many scholarships being awarded on athletic abilities without attention to academic skills.

"If the state of Texas would grant me one wish, it would be to do away with multiple choice tests and to force our students to learn how to write," he said. If he had two wishes, the second would be to do away with the intercom systems in school which interrupt class time too often, he said.

More emphasis also needs to be placed in improving education at the elementary level, he said. "If you don't teach a child how to learn to learn in elementary school, you've lost him by high school," he stated.

The state also should get into early childhood development to aid severely disadvantaged children in families where they have no real interest in seeing their children educated. Such programs could help these children be more competitive when they enter the regular school systems, he said.

"A successful experience in the education system is probably the best means we have" of developing more successful, productive adults, Perot said.

Perot said another needed goal is equalization of school districts in financial resources. Some districts are so rich they cannot spend all their money, he said, while others are so poor they cannot afford to leave their lights on.

It will be better for the state to use the legislative process to come up with its own system of equalization "before the courts come up with a solution for us." He said plans are tentatively underway now to provide an equalization system.

Perot defended the SCOPE recommendations to develop a smaller nine-member State Board of Education, instead of the current 27 members, and to appoint the members instead of electing them.

The larger body "is too cumbersome" and too distant from education needs in the state. He said appointed membership would obtain more qualified people. Too many good people would not run for the office but would accept an appointment, he said.

Appointment of members would also allow state officials to search for talented people who will "go out and listen to you - and listen to you," he said, spending more time out in the field to gain needed information instead of sitting in their offices in Austin.

He said a system should be legislated to insure geographic representation on the board.

Perot said the changes will not solve all problems at once, but the system "could be fine tuned" over the years through flexibility to reach the desired goals.

"The first two or three years are going to be really thrilling," he said.

Senate race gets top attention from Texans

Texas unemployment rises

DALLAS (AP) - Texas unemployment rose slightly in April, climbing from 6.5 percent in March to 6.8 percent last month, but a Labor Department official today called the change insignificant.

The increase was too small to indicate any kind of downturn in the state's economy, said Nick Santangelo, a Bureau of Labor Statistics analyst. "It's not a meaningful increase and it doesn't mean much," he said.

Nationwide, unemployment held steady at 7.8 percent.

Of the 7.85 million people in the Texas civilian labor force, 7.32 million were employed and 532,000 were out of work in April, according to the Labor Department statistics released today.

The state's labor force grew by 37,000 from March to April; about 15,000 of those found jobs.

ROBERTS COUNTY
In Roberts County, 42 Democrats voted absentee, but only one Republican absentee ballot was cast. Democrats Eddie Brines, the incumbent, and Larry Gill have campaigned for the sheriff's office. The winner won't have an opponent.

The former Republican County Chairman, Don Morrison, resigned his post to run for election as Roberts County Commissioner. Precinct 3 Morrison will face Democrat John Brogdon in the general election. Republican incumbent Tim Flowers previously announced he wouldn't seek re-election.

WHEELER COUNTY
In a heavy turnout in Wheeler County, 175 Democrats and five Republicans voted absentee. The heavy turnout about doubled the absentee ballots cast in the last general election.

Wheeler County Sheriff Doyle Ramsey, a Democrat, will meet his former chief deputy, Lonnie Miller, and John H. Rushing in the primary. The winner will face Republican Jimmy Adams.

Democratic incumbent M. Kent Sims will face Republican challenger James Fling in the county attorney's race in November.

Democrats Jerry Dan Hefley, Kathleen Cross and David M. Britt Jr. will battle in the primary for the office of tax assessor-collector. Democrat Jean DeArment previously announced she wouldn't seek re-election. No Republican filed for the job.

Five Democrats, Melvin H. Clancy, Lee Bond, Tamara Tucker, M.D. Nobles and Viola McLemore await the primary results in the race for Justice of the Peace, Precinct 3, Place 1. The winner won't have an opponent.

Incumbent Clois Hanner, county commissioner, Precinct 3, will meet a challenge from fellow Democrat Jerry Latham. The winner won't have an opponent in November.

Three Democrats, Steve Walker, Travis Howell and Mark Frankenberg, the incumbent, will battle for the job of Wheeler County Constable, Precinct 1. No Republicans are in that contest.

Unemployment frozen at 7.8 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Civilian unemployment in April remained frozen at 7.8 percent - its third month at that level - as the number of new jobs virtually accommodated a heavy springtime demand for work, the government said today.

Not since September-November 1980 has unemployment held steady for three months running.

Economists in and out of government have said for months that the steadily declining unemployment rates of the last year or so could level off as the pace of the expanding economy slows.

Still, many analysts expect the civilian rate to fall below 7.4 percent, the rate President Reagan inherited from Jimmy Carter in 1981, by year's end.

In April, the Labor Department said today, total civilian employment rose by 260,000 to 104.4 million, a record. But roughly 333,000 jobless Americans re-entered the labor force in search of work, offsetting the gains.

The total number of unemployed people rose by 71,000 last month, to 8.4 million, but that increase was not enough to drive up the overall unemployment rate when the calculation was adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

Radio announcer hurt in wreck

Pampa radio personality Michael Keeter is in critical but stable condition at Northwest Texas Hospital after being injured in a one-car accident early this morning east of Pampa.

A spokesperson for the hospital said that Keeter, 21, has multiple injuries and is under observation in the hospital's Intensive Care Unit.

According to Texas Highway Patrol trooper Luis Flores, the accident occurred at approximately 2:15 a.m. on Dansinger crossover, a dirt road between Tyng and Browning Streets, nearly one mile east of Pampa.

Flores said that Keeter was going around a curve and apparently lost control of the vehicle, overcorrected, went into a bar ditch and flipped over once.

Keeter has worked for KGRO radio for almost two years and was on the air from 7 p.m. to midnight.

Judge won't dismiss Mattox indictment

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Mace B. Thurman has refused to dismiss commercial bribery charges against Attorney General Jim Mattox but says he will consider the matter again May 11.

Six defense motions to quash the indictment were denied by Thurman on Thursday, leaving nine similar motions still under consideration.

Defense attorneys said they want to offer additional legal arguments in written form before Thurman rules.

"We hope by the time more legal briefs are submitted the judge will grant some of the other motions," Mattox said afterwards.

"If we don't win this in the trial courts we will appeal to appellate courts and win there," Mattox said.

Roy Minton, Mattox's main attorney, said that if all 15 motions to quash the indictment are denied by Thurman, he will try to have an appellate court rule on the indictment.

Mattox was accused last September by a Travis County grand jury with committing commercial bribery, a felony, by threatening to block state-required approval of public bonds submitted by the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski.

The indictment alleges the threat was made to a member of the firm, Wiley Caldwell, in an attempt to keep the firm from trying to question Mattox's sister, Janice, a Dallas attorney, in a lawsuit involving the state and Mobil Oil Corp.

He was re-indicted twice because state's attorneys said they found inadequacies in the earlier charges.

No trial date has been set.

Thurman denied motions Thursday to void the latest indictment on grounds the state failed to allege any benefit Mattox would gain by such a threat, failed to say exactly when Mattox made the threat by telephone, failed to show that Mattox's actions were illegal, and was an "unconstitutional application" of state law.

"This indictment is a tortured construction of facts," Minton argued. "This section usually is used in kickback schemes involving sales or services. It has never been used as it is used here."

Phil Nelson of the Travis County district attorney's office said much of the indictment was based on law used in the successful bribery prosecution against Houston state district judge Garth Bates.

"There is a difference between offering a bribe and a little gentle persuasion by the attorney general," Minton said.

Defense motions still to be ruled on, after both sides submit briefs, include claims the state law is "so broad, and so vague as to be unconstitutional" and the indictment is vague and ambiguous.

Federal employees: caucus system discriminates

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas' caucus system discriminates against Democratic federal employees because a law prohibits them from becoming involved in partisan politics, say two veteran El Paso Democrats who want the process changed.

"There's no point in trying to justify and defend it (the caucus system)," said El Paso County Democratic Party Chairman Tom Diamond. "We need to change it."

Diamond estimated that 30,000 federal employees in El Paso, where Ft. Bliss and Biggs Army Air Field are stationed, will be denied full participation in the caucus system because of the Hatch Act, a law passed more than 40 years ago, which forbids federal employees from taking an active role in politics.

Marvin Nicchio, a custodial worker at Beaumont Army Medical Center and a long-time El Paso Democrat, said he is contemplating a class action lawsuit because the caucus "denies me the right to vote for the president of the United States."

While he may vote or sign a petition in behalf of a presidential candidate, Nicchio said his inability to be a delegate at the county convention deprives him of his voting rights "because that's the way you keep going" in the presidential selection process.

Nicchio said he has requested a clarification of the Hatch Act's political limitations on federal employees from Washington, D.C. But he said a preliminary ruling from the Army's Civilian Personnel Office at Fort Bliss stated federal employees "may not address a caucus or convention in support or opposition to a candidate."

"You may not serve as a delegate to a political party convention," the ruling said.

The party chairman added that he plans to urge El Paso Democrats at their county convention May 19 to "take a strong stand, with some very strong language against the caucus system because it's unfair and discriminatory and should be changed to a direct primary."

White still lacks consensus for special session schedule

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he's not encountering resistance from lawmakers about raising taxes to fund education reforms, but he says he's still not ready to set a date for a special session of the Legislature to deal with the issue.

White told a news conference Thursday he still intends to call the special session but wants a consensus among legislators before he does so.

Saying he believes lawmakers will support higher gasoline and sales taxes, White predicted the special session would convene in June.

"I fully intend to call a special session I think there is a commitment on the part of the leadership of the House and Senate to see this matter resolved," White said.

"Obviously, if I could do it myself it would be done. But I have to work with them (the legislature)."

The governor also told the news conference that he won't call the special session to consider anything other than education and transportation, although some other emergency matters might be brought up if the legislative leaders agree action is needed.

"I'm trying to focus the attention of the legislature on the really critical needs we have in legislation both the dramatic changes that are needed and the dramatic increase in funding that's required," he said.

Estimates indicate that a 5-cent hike in the gas tax, a 1 percent sales tax increase and some luxury tax increases could generate about $1.2 billion to $1.5 billion in new revenue to pay for reforms.

But some lawmakers have said privately they aren't convinced of the need to raise taxes now when the regular legislative session will begin in January. And White said he won't bother calling the session unless he has prior agreement from enough lawmakers to approve the tax increases and education reforms he wants.

He contended that increasing teacher salaries, boosting state equalization aid to local school districts, competency testing for students and teachers, and smaller classes "are concepts that are pretty well accepted."

He noted that legislative candidates in Saturday's primary elections "are standing up and supporting a financial package for improving educational quality and transportation needs."

But despite his statements that lawmakers are reaching agreement, the governor still refused to set a date for the session and said he only will call one if a majority of legislators agree.

"The needs are so obvious, I think sometimes, everyone doesn't see the obvious needs as I do," he said.

"I think there is a growing consensus that this is something that needs to be done. I think the problem now is to show them the urgency of it."

On other issues, the governor said:

— He has talked with Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale's staff, "but not about" the possibility of him being a vice presidential candidate with Mondale, as some national news reports have hinted.

— He will remain uncommitted in the presidential race through the Saturday precinct caucuses, and probably through the Democratic National Convention in July. "I doubt it, but I might," he replied when asked whether he would make a presidential endorsement before the convention.

Toy train collection at issue in couple's divorce settlement

DALLAS (AP) — The divorce case took almost six months to work out, but it finally was settled when a judge granted both the husband and wife visitation rights to the item in question: $5,000 worth of toy trains.

Most of the custody rights, however, went to the husband. For Sondra Kay Buckner, it came down to the trains or the house.

"I wanted some of the trains but I needed the house," Mrs. Buckner said Thursday.

The settlement between her and ex-husband Noel Harlan Buckner last week ended a battle between the north Dallas couple wrangled over custody of the toy trains.

State District Judge Josh Taylor awarded Mrs. Buckner the house plus about $500 in trains and railroad paraphernalia including the tin plate 1935 Comet aqua and silver engine, a three-piece green bridge, three passenger cars, two street lights, baggage men and baggage. Buckner got the rest. "I also got one of the standard gauge tunnels," Mrs. Buckner said, sounding a note of relief.

"She wanted the little corpulent people, too, but he got those," said Joseph V. Semon, the husband's attorney.

Buckner, 48, also got the American Flyer set with the orange water tower, coal loader, log car, red caboose, Lionel billboards, animated newsstand, tunnel, plus 25 train catalogs, workbooks and planning books, as well as 25 sections of Mighty Casey track.

When 12 containers of scenery material for trackside, one train place mat, the dispatcher's phone and the engine oil can are figured in, it comes to nearly $4,000.

Taylor said that in all his years of hearing divorce cases, the Buckner case was the first in which he granted visitation rights on a train.

"It sometimes happens with dogs or something like that," he told the Dallas Times Herald. "But I've never heard about a toy train. But, then, they're both pretty involved with them," he said.

The Buckners, who were married 23 years, began "playing" with toy trains about 11 years ago. Mrs. Buckner said they later graduated to collecting more sophisticated gauge and antique varieties.

"We've owned a Z gauge. It's so small you can do a whole layout in a briefcase," she said excitedly. "A lot of executives have these trains in their briefcases."

Under terms of the settlement, Mrs. Buckner, 43, will get twice-a-year visitation rights to the trains as long as she gives 24 hours advance notice by telephone and the time is convenient for Buckner.

What will a visit to the trains entail?

"Well, I'll run them, look at them, enjoy them," Mrs. Buckner said.

Arraignment set in ranch death

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three members of a Hill Country ranch family and three of the hitchhikers the ranchers allegedly lured to the ranch will be arraigned today on charges that they tortured a drifter to death.

Prosecutors say charred remains found on the Ellebracht family's 13,000-acre ranch near Mountain Home were the bones of Anthony Bates, 21, of Huntsville, Ala.

Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton says Bates died March 13 after being tortured with a cattle prod at the ranch. Charged in Bates' death are Walter Ellebracht Sr., 51, his son Walter Ellebracht Jr., 31, and his daughter-in-law Joyce Ellebracht, 29.

The Ellebrachts were arrested last month and charged with aggravated kidnapping. Prosecutors say they picked up hitchhikers on the highway and lured them to the ranch with promises of work and hot meals. Instead, the drifters were chained to trees and compelled to stay with guns and electric cattle prods, prosecutors say.

The three hitchhikers charged in Bates' death are Mark Hamilton of Los Angeles, 22, Darryl Hunsaker of Wichita Falls, 21, and Carlton Caldwell of Taos, N.M., 21.

All six people have been held in the Kerr County Jail.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Medicare policy not beneficial

A few years back it might have seemed pretty far-fetched to suggest that the federal government might someday dictate the type of health care millions of American receive. But it doesn't seem that far-fetched now.

With the implementation of new rules for reimbursement of hospitals for Medicare patients, the government has taken a giant step in that direction. The new policy means, that government, using fiscal coercion, will play a much larger role in determining the type of treatment Medicare patients receive than most people ever dreamed possible.

Under the new policy, hospitals will be reimbursed for the actual cost of treating a Medicare patient. They will be paid a pre-determined, fixed amount for each illness that results in hospitalization. The theory is that it should cost the same amount to treat the same illness at one hospital-as it does another. The goal of the new policy is to hold down Medicare costs by making sure one hospital doesn't charge more than the other.

In cases where the patient is discharged before the cost of his treatment reaches the amount Medicare pays, the hospital will make a profit. But if his bill is higher than the amount approved by Medicare, the hospital will have to absorb the loss. If the treatment costs more than the approved amount, the hospital is prohibited from billing the patient for the additional amount.

Norman Knox, administrator of Pampa's Coronado Community Hospital, which came under the new regulations this week, predicted that hospitals unable to hold costs down will eventually go out of business. He also said he believes hospitals will begin to place new emphasis on outpatient care and shorter lengths of stay in the hospital in an effort to control costs. Already, he said, the local hospital has completed plans for offering more one-day surgeries.

When hospitals change their policies and begin emphasizing shorter hospital stays, it will be done only because of the new Medicare regulations. If there were any other beneficial reasons for such changes, they would have already been made.

What this means is a Medicare patient's needs will not be the only factor considered in determining the treatment he receives. Government's fiscal policy also has to play a role in that determination. Nobody can say that is a good development, but nobody should be surprised. Whatever government touches, government controls. This is just one more in a long list of examples of that truth. And the puzzling thing is that, knowing this, so many citizens still insist on additional government involvement in such important services as medical care.

Liberals, Nixon unlikely allies

NEW YORK (NEA) - If your liberal friends have a slightly glazed look in their eyes, or have taken to hiding in the closet when neighbors come to call, I urge you to be patient with them and, if possible, reassuring. They privately suspect they are losing their minds, and people in that condition deserve our sympathy.

The trouble, you see, is that liberals are beginning to realize they agree on certain important points with, or all people, Richard Nixon. You may not think that's so surprising: After all, the man has been active in American politics for nearly 40 years; it would take a pretty diligent adversary not to agree with him on something in all that time. What's more, during his years in the White House, Nixon managed to outrage a great many of his previous supporters by some remarkably liberal stances. It is widely forgotten today that The New York Times in February 1972 was moved to exult that "Seldom in Western politics...has a national leader so completely turned his back on a lifetime of beliefs to adopt those of his political opponents."

But that was before Watergate - and, more to the point, before Nixon's ferocious 49 - states - to 1 trouncing of George McGovern, which seems to have persuaded the liberals that things were getting out of hand. Anyway, in 1973, they shifted into their impeachment mode, with the well-known result. Since then, the official liberal position has been that Nixon is, and always was, the local representative of the Prince of Darkness, that forcing his resignation was the equivalent of burying him at the crossroads with a stake through his heart, and that under no circumstances must he ever be allowed to roam abroad again.

With that background, one can begin to understand the unease of a liberal who now finds himself agreeing on key points with this poisonous afeet. Are we witnessing some implausible and unauthorized process of redemption? Or - horror of horrors - is the liberal himself losing his grips on rectitude and sliding into the very pit where Nixon has hitherto raged alone?

Perhaps I can be of assistance here. The truth is that Nixon and the liberals have never been all that far apart on certain fundamentals, particularly in the field of foreign policy. Liberals, after all, have never been terribly fond of moralism in that area. (Jimmy Carter's crush on "human rights" derived largely from the born-again side of his personality, which never appealed to them all that much anyway.) They have consistently argued, for example, in the name of "realism," that the U.S. ought to maintain diplomatic and economic relations - the closer the better - with all communist nations, however offensive their behavior.

Nixon comes from a quite different direction, but he has arrived at much of the same conclusion, which he has lately characterized as "hardheaded detente." Nixon, like his foreign minister, Henry Kissinger, is essentially a Machiavellian, in the sense that he believes (to quote my dictionary) "that politics is amoral." Thus, his long opposition to U.S. recognition of Red China turned out to be a maneuver designed to win him conservative support. Within months of his election as president he had opened secret negotiations with Peking looking toward diplomatic recognition. And detente with Red China, in turn, was merely a step in an elaborate political arabesque intended to extricate the U.S. from Vietnam and, not all incidentally, inconvenience the Soviet Union.

Small wonder, then, that Nixon, looking back over his career and elaborating its higher justifications, is busy these days explaining that the U.S. (while remaining "hardheaded" of course) must reach out to such adversaries as the Soviet Union, be forever ready to negotiate with them, and not forget to keep a supply of economic bonbons on hand to reward desired behavior. And still smaller wonder that this sort of stuff is music to the ears of liberals, who are bone-tired of Mr. Reagan's determined resistance to both direct and indirect Soviet aggression and of his readiness to proclaim it.

Oddly enough, it is Kissinger - not Nixon - who is drawing closer to Mr. Reagan's analysis of the world, and who is accordingly beginning to suffer, by comparison with Nixon, in liberal eyes. But that shouldn't worry the liberals. Perhaps they deserved Richard Nixon all along.

Legacy

In this feature, we excerpt material that has appeared on Freedom Newspapers' editorial pages in previous years, whether from the editorials or the column written for many years by Freedom founder R.C. Hoiles.

Since so many of my articles are critical of various acts of people and government, one might get the impression that I am against everything.

For this reason, it might be well for me to set down briefly the things that I am for.

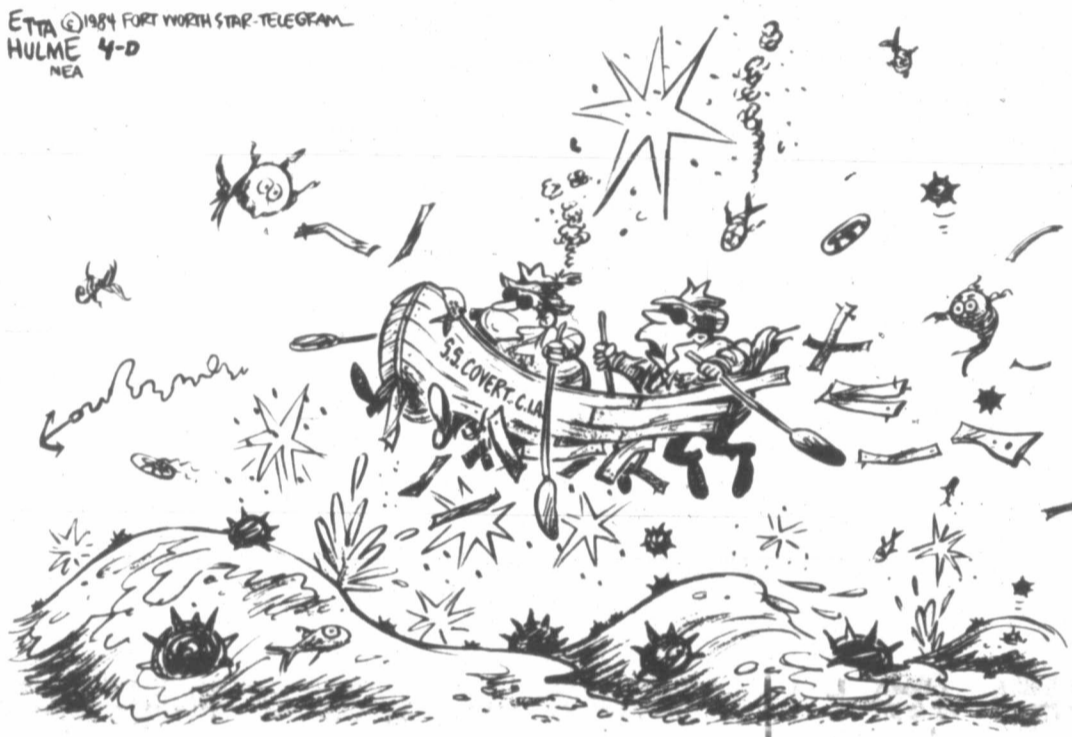

In the first place, I am for all people being equally free. I am for all people being the same before government as they are before God. I am for each man reaping the fruits of his folly and idleness or his wisdom and industry.

This means that each man, in order to be equally free, must get all he produces. To the degree a man does not get all he produces, or does not have the right to give it away, to that degree he is a slave.

And in order to measure what each man produces or is able to produce, he must be free to produce and freely exchange anything that anybody else is free to produce and exchange.

Sexual revolutions not for all

The Sexual Revolution, according to "Time" magazine, is over. It started in the Sixties and apparently was fought to a standstill. Finally, according to the magazine, both sides got tired and have now given up.

I remember the beginning of the Sexual Revolution as if it were yesterday. Three friends came over to my house and told me quietly, "The revolution began at midnight. Are you with us or against us?"

"I'm with you. But for heaven's sakes, what took you so long?"

"We had to wait for the post-World War II babies to grow up. Now we're ready to overthrow the bourgeois mores of the Forties and Fifties."

I went upstairs to the bedroom and put on my old Marine uniform, which had been hanging in my closet since Japan surrendered to the U.S.

"What are you doing?" my wife wanted to know.

"If you don't let it out of this room I'll tell you," I said. "The sexual revolution is going to start tonight and I'm signing up."

"But you're too old," she said. "Sexual revolutions are for young people."

"You're never too old for a sexual revolution," I said gently. "I could never face myself every morning if I knew there were so many kids out there fighting for it and I was sitting safely at home. Besides, they need a cadre of experienced G.I.'s from the big war to show them how to do it right."

"What about our children?"

"I'm doing it for them," I told her. "I want them to grow up in a world where they can be free of the dogmas and restraints that our generation was saddled with. I want them to have opportunities that were beyond our wildest dreams. I want them to have opportunities that were beyond our wildest dreams. Someday when the battle is won, I hope they'll be proud of the role I played in shaking off the sexual taboos and restrictions of the past."

"But suppose you don't come back?"

"Then hang this gold framed picture of Hugh Hefner in the window."

My friends took me down to the recruiting station. "What do you want, Pop?" a bearded fellow in a sweatshirt and blue jeans asked me.

"I want to join the sexual revolution."

He laughed. "You couldn't even pass the physical."

"That's how much you know. I'm in better condition now than I was in 1945. Test me."

"We don't have time for that. We have too many recruits already."

"Look, drop me behind the front lines - Vassar, Radcliff, Sweet Briar. Experience counts a lot more than age."

"We're sorry, Pop. The sexual revolution doesn't trust anyone over 30."

"All right, so don't send me to the front lines. But let me serve in some capacity. Maybe I could be a forward observer?"

"The only position we have for guys your age is in a 'MASH' unit in the rear, to take care of the sick and the wounded."

"You mean I won't see any action?"

"No, but the wounded and sick need love too."

So I was assigned to the 450th "MASH" unit at Berkeley, where some of the heaviest fighting of the sexual revolution took place in the late '60s. The kids were brought in on stretchers, most of them in shock, and wasted with fatigue. A sexual revolution sounds very glamorous when it begins, but when you see what it does to the bodies and minds of young people you quickly get disillusioned. After a few years I decided I couldn't take it anymore and asked for a psychiatric discharge. They gave it to me with a Good Conduct Medal.

I'm glad "Time" magazine had declared the Revolution over. We should have pulled out the troops long ago, because it was one war that no one could ever have won.

The problems of part-time wives

I have some gutsy women friends. One has coped with a stalled car on the freeway by fixing what she calls the "butterfly hickamajigger" on the carburetor.

Another hailed a cop for a police escort while speeding to the hospital with a child who had just put an arm through a glass door.

A third has negotiated offers and counteroffers on the sale of two family homes.

These women are not single-parent heads of households - of whom there are a growing number in this country.

They are part-time heads of households - wives of men who travel a lot. And the above events - all true - are typical of what can happen when husbands are out of town.

My friends occasionally beef about their expenses - particularly the wife whose husband invites his mother to visit, then goes off on a two-week business trip. But all agree they've learned to be self-reliant and competent in emergencies.

They manage kids, houses and growing grass with a cool hand. They accept the change in lifestyle when their husbands are gone and some even take delight in the time for a few personal indulgences.

"Of course," said a mother of four, summing up the feelings of a half-dozen wives I talked with, "whenever a husband's out of town, you can assume something's going to go wrong. That's always the time the furnace goes out or when you have to drive to school to pick up the kids in the midst of the worst blizzard of the year. No one else dares drive, and there you are slipping and sliding along the highway scared to death."

The women who heard that comment added: "Yeah. And just about the time you make it back, all white knuckles, your husband calls from the resort where the sales meeting is being held. He's sipping a margarita and says sweetly, 'Hope you're having a good day.'"

Making decisions in a family crisis seems easier if both parents are available. One friend found this out when a child became seriously ill and doctors recommended exploratory surgery.

"Sam was on the road somewhere and couldn't be reached," she said. "I had to give the OK on my own. Luckily, it was the right decision. Other things have happened when he was out of town became funny in time. But never that night."

Some of the women emphasized the difficulty of being chief disciplinarian and decision-maker for the children when their husbands are gone. "If a man really travels a lot like Bob does," said one, "it's hard for children to realize they have two parents with authority. Mine always ask me for permission even when their father's around. I worry about that."

Most wives, however, mentioned certain benefits during their periods of singleness:

"Dinners are simpler. The kids are happy with fish sticks and pudding. That gives me a break."

"I can read 'til 3 a.m. if I want, or play Mozart at top volume with no TV on."

"I like to meet women friends for dinner and invite them back to the house for a late-night gab session."

"I like to tackle a big project like painting a room or sewing new outfits. The room can be torn up and the ping-pong table covered with patterns and material for days. I can work into the evening if I want."

Even with the pluses, all said they were glad when their peripatetic husbands returned. "There's a physical and psychological void when my husband's away," said one. "Lie just seems better without an empty chair at the dinner table."

Bits of history

In 1519, the Florentine painter, sculptor, architect, engineer and scientist Leonardo da Vinci died in Cloux, France.

In 1789, President-elect George Washington moved into the first executive mansion, the Franklin House, at No. 1 Cherry Street in New York.

In 1791, the 15th president of the United States, James Buchanan, was born in Cove Gap, Pa.

In 1876, Ross Barnes of the Chicago White Stockings and Baby Jones of the Cincinnati Reds hit the National League's first home runs, in a game won by Chicago, 15-9.

In 1904, Bing Crosby was born in Tacoma, Wash.

In 1917, Fred Toney of the Cincinnati Reds pitched a 10-inning no-hitter against Hippo Vaughn of the Chicago Cubs. Vaughn himself had gone 9 1-3 innings before giving up a hit.

Reporter to testify against church worker

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — An all-Hispanic jury today is scheduled to hear a newspaper reporter testify for the government in the trial of a church worker accused of conspiring to transport two Salvadoran illegal aliens.

Stacey Lynn Merkt, 29, of Colorado Spring, Colo., is the only one of three Americans arrested by border patrol agents before dawn Feb. 17 in rural South Texas who will stand trial on conspiracy charges.

The others — Dallas Times Herald reporter Jack Fischer and Sister Dianne Muhlentkamp of Fort Wayne, Ind. — are expected to be called by the prosecution.

said Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Guerra.

Fischer, who was writing an article about the national sanctuary movement at the time of his arrest, has been subpoenaed to testify Friday, Guerra said.

Fischer's case was never presented to the grand jury.

Last week, attorneys for the Muhlentkamp arranged a pre-trial diversion which will grant the nun one year's probation in exchange for cooperating with the government, according to the Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe.

The two adult Salvadorans Ms. Merkt is accused of transporting — Mauricio Valle and Brenda Sanchez-Galan — were granted immunity from prosecution last week and may also be called to testify against Ms. Merkt, attorneys for the Salvadorans said.

An all-Hispanic jury of four women and eight men will hear the case against the church worker who says she is involved in providing sanctuary to Central American immigrants on moral grounds.

Defense attorneys hope to show that Salvadorans are political refugees fleeing violence and persecution in their homeland and are, therefore, protected by the same refugee law that grants asylum to refugees from communist nations.

"We are not going to deny that Stacey was in that car as a criminal might do," Sheehan said. "We are going to show that she was in that car helping Salvadorans as is her legal right."

Sheehan hopes to present evidence on conditions in El Salvador to illustrate to jurors the horror Valle and Mrs. Sanchez-Galan were fleeing.

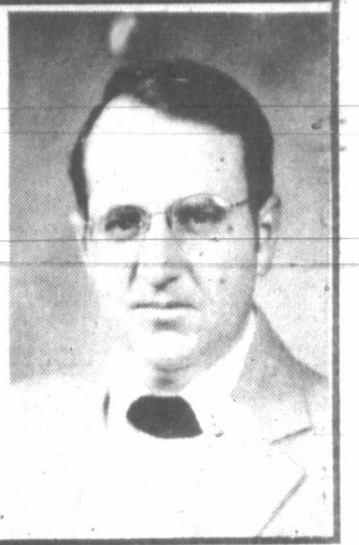

Sheehan has subpoenaed federal immigration records he said will show Salvadorans are forced to leave South Texas to avoid arrest while applying for political asylum. He said immigration policy in the Rio Grande Valley results in the routine arrest of Salvadorans who are in the process of seeking legal asylum.

Workers in the nation's sanctuary movement said this case is the beginning of an attack on those opposing U.S. involvement in Central America.

New employees won't be fired

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A top executive of General Dynamics Corp. said 400 employees who were hired to replace striking workers will stay on the payroll even though firing them would end a year-long strike at the company's Trident nuclear submarine manufacturing plant at Groton, Conn.

"They said we could settle the issue right now if we throw all these people who came here from all over the country to do those jobs out in the streets. And we won't do it. We don't call those 400 new-hires scabs. We call them Americans," David F. Lewis, chairman of the company, said Thursday.

"Fundamentally, these employees will not leave. We believe that would fundamentally be un-American. They will not leave. Period," Lewis said.

Lawrence Steppe, a United Auto Workers vice president and director of the union's negotiations with GD, offered Thursday to settle the Groton strike immediately if General Dynamics, the nation's largest defense contractor, would rehire about 500 union members to their Groton jobs.

Steppe, director of the union's negotiations with the company, offered the settlement during General Dynamics' annual shareholders meeting held here Thursday.

While offering to settle the Groton strike immediately, Steppe also threatened a possible strike in 1985 by UAW workers at the company's Detroit and Lima, Ohio facilities, where GD builds military tanks. GD bought the facilities that make the Army's new M-1 tank from Chrysler in 1982.

"In 1985, the tank division contract comes up for renewal. Are we to assume the same attitude and treatment that is currently happening in Groton will prevail in the GD tank plants that used to be Chrysler," Steppe asked.

Steppe brought up the possibility of a strike and said, "We don't want to do that. It's a waste of your (company's) resources and of our resources. But off that must be done, we are prepared to do that."

General Dynamics shifted its annual meeting to Fort Worth after the UAW staged demonstrations two weeks ago outside the company's headquarters in Clayton, Mo., a St. Louis suburb. About 300 people attended the meeting in Fort Worth.

Lewis said General Dynamics "will not be intimidated" by the "bully boy tactics" of the UAW or other unions.

TORNADO DAMAGE—The roof of a convenience store lays scattered after a tornado blew through Montgomery, Ala., Thursday killing at least five people. Gov. George C. Wallace said he will ask President Reagan to declare the state a disaster area. (AP Laserphoto)

Southland remains locked in heart of severe weather season

By The Associated Press
Violent spring storms that lashed the South with 79 tornadoes, leaving six people dead and hundreds of houses wrecked, spread northward today while keeping Dixie locked in the "heart of the most severe weather season."

Heavy rain was falling today from Louisiana to Pennsylvania, raising the fear of flooding in areas already waterlogged by wave after wave of storms. The rains were expected to pour down all day.

In Georgia and Alabama, people picked up the pieces after the two states were battered by 37 of the 43 tornadoes reported Thursday by the National Weather Service.

Twisters also touched down Thursday in Mississippi.

Louisiana, North and South Carolina, the National Weather Service said. Five people were killed Thursday in Alabama, and one died Wednesday night in Arkansas.

In all, 79 tornadoes cut a path of destruction from Texas to the Carolinas on Wednesday and Thursday, said Hugh Crowther at the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Meanwhile, Texas baked Thursday under record temperatures that sent the mercury soaring to as high as 107 degrees.

Three waves of tornadoes surged through Alabama on Thursday, hitting at the morning rush hour, in mid-afternoon and again in early evening.

The most deadly roared across a busy highway in Montgomery early Thursday, tossing cars and trucks like toys and leaving four people dead in roadway wreckage.

"My car left the road twice that I know of," said T.A. Reynolds, driving to work when the black whirling cloud clutched his car.

A fifth person was killed when a twister flipped her mobile home near Montgomery.

Tornadoes hit later in the day in Talladega County and near Prattville. In all, Alabama authorities reported 60 homes destroyed.

The tornadoes were not as deadly in Georgia, but they left behind a trail of twisted wreckage that included more than 200 houses damaged and destroyed, authorities said.

A twister at Uvalde in Montgomery County "ripped off store fronts and took the top off the police station and we haven't found it yet," said county Sheriff Jim Higgs.

Students at a high school in Telfair County watched at midday as a tornado roared within 300 yards of the building, officials said. There were no injuries.

In Atlanta, several school systems refused to let students board buses to go home until a storm that hit right as classes were ending passed.

"Traditionally this is the most active month for tornadoes," said Crowther. "We will be in the heart of the most severe weather season for the next month and a half," he added.

Crowther said this has been a particularly brutal tornado season because the cold air jet stream from Canada is farther south than it usually is at this time of the year.

Demonstrations preced Jaruzelski's Moscow meeting

MOSCOW (AP) — Polish Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski arrived today for a visit that is expected to include receipt of a Soviet medal and talks with Kremlin leaders on the political unrest which surfaced again in Poland this week.

Thousands of supporters of the outlawed Solidarity labor union demonstrated in Polish cities Tuesday and Thursday in defiance of Jaruzelski's Communist regime.

The general flew from Warsaw this morning. Neither the length of his stay in Moscow nor his agenda have been announced, but Eastern European sources said they expected Jaruzelski to confer with President Konstantin U. Chernenko, the new Soviet leader, on political and economic problems persisting in Poland.

Greeting Jaruzelski at Moscow's airport were Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

The East European sources, who said Jaruzelski would meet with Chernenko, and Western diplomats said there was no sign that Kremlin's support for the general was slipping.

Police used water cannon in Gdansk and lead-lined truncheons in Warsaw to disperse several thousand Solidarity backers who demonstrated peacefully Thursday evening after attending Roman Catholic Masses to mark the anniversary of Poland's defunct, democratic constitution of 1791.

Until the Nazi and Soviet invasions of Poland in 1939, May 3 was celebrated as a national holiday. Supporters of Solidarity, which was the only independent union in the Soviet bloc, have since begun attending Mass on May 3 as a way to express unity toward their cause.

On Tuesday, anti-government demonstrations were more widespread as Solidarity supporters rallied to counter official May Day marches. Police and protesters clashed in seven cities.

It was a short annual meeting

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Fuqua Industries, which earned more than $40 million last year, held its annual meeting last Saturday morning, April 28, in Atlanta. It was over in less than five minutes.

That's the way J.B. Fuqua works: Quickly and efficiently, and with a no-nonsense impatience with anything he believes does not enhance the fortunes of his company and its shareholders.

Why waste time on a ritual of little significance? "It's a facade. It doesn't serve any purpose. It isn't democratic," said J.B., who built the company into a diversified giant in less than 20 years.

A decade ago J.B. tried to do without an annual meeting, arguing that if it were to be a true representation of shareholders there wouldn't be enough trains, planes and Atlanta hotel rooms for them.

The New York Stock Exchange disagreed, so J.B. has held them ever since, though he says "the serious investor seldom shows up." And with good reason, he adds. "Management is forbidden to put out information unavailable to the general public, so they know that nothing (new) will be heard."

J.B. Fuqua, 65, remains an entrepreneur, his instincts honed to important matters by his experiences in a long string of private companies he developed after leaving the family's Virginia farm.

By the time he developed Fuqua Industries as a public corporation in 1965 his financial and mental independence were well established. He proved his innovative ideas time after time. He continues to do so.

By 1979 it had sales of $2 billion, a year when, said J.B., "I began to think about the '80s and I decided that if I believed in stockholder equity I had better get at it." He sold off much of it.

Monuments to himself meant nothing, he said. Stockholder equity meant everything.

Last year Fuqua Industries, four groups — photofinishing, lawn and garden equipment, sporting goods, seat manufacturing — was down to sales of $732.4 million. Net income, however, had risen 113 percent over the previous year, per share earnings 83 percent.

Dear Abby

Does nature or nurture make men, women gay?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am terribly confused about this subject. Are homosexuals and lesbians born that way? If so, is it possible to detect it before birth or in the early stages and be averted?

Nobody wants to be a homosexual today; it's a living death. If they are born that way, perhaps society would be more willing to accept them and treat them more humanely.

Please go into detail on this in your column because I am sure there are others who are just as confused as I am.

HUMAN BEING

DEAR HUMAN: My consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, a psychoanalyst who is one of the most respected authorities on the subject, says:

"There is no single cause for homosexuality. People come to it in a variety of ways. A number of recent research studies strongly suggest that many homosexuals are born with a predisposition toward such behavior, which then becomes shaped and reinforced by environmental factors. In other homosexuals, environmental factors seem to be more important than inborn ones."

According to my mail, most homosexuals and lesbians are born that way and environment has little or nothing to do with it. (Why in a family of two, three, four or more children raised in the same environment is one gay while the others are straight?)

However, one thing is clear: The vast majority of gay people do not "choose" to become homosexual; their homosexual inclinations feel just as natural to them as heterosexual inclinations feel to straights.

The statement "Nobody wants to be a homosexual today—it's a living death" is no longer true. In recent years, more and more homosexuals are "coming out," demanding their civil rights and in many quarters are living happy, productive lives without apologies or feelings of inferiority or guilt.

Although there are biblical injunctions against homosexuality (Leviticus 18:22), in recent years God-fearing, churchgoing Catholics, Protestants and Jews who are admitted homosexuals and lesbians have been made welcome in the churches of worship.

So, "detecting" and "preventing" homosexuality are not the issue. The issue is accepting homosexuals as human beings with the same needs for love, personal dignity and human support as the rest of us.

Homosexuals and lesbians are neither sick nor defective. And nobody "went wrong." They are simply a minority (approximately 10 percent of our population) that for years has been misunderstood and discriminated against by an unenlightened society.

DEAR ABBY: Next month, our son is getting married to a girl I'll call Helen.

I just heard that Helen has an uncle who always does a striptease dance at family weddings. I feel that this is in poor taste at a wedding and I'm afraid it might offend some of the guests. I spoke to my son about this, and he said he wanted everyone to have a good time.

He and Helen are paying for the entire wedding, so naturally they have the final say.

I would like your opinion.

UPSET IN VERMONT

DEAR UPSET: You've voiced your objections, which is all you can do. Find out how far this striptease goes. And if he strips to the point where everybody yells "Uncle," he should save it for the stag.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Growing Up

Television makes a bad babysitter

There once was a family who had a very strange babysitter. Every time the babysitter came, she filled the children's minds with wild stories of aggression, violence and killings.

The parents always knew that, after two hours or more with this babysitter, their children would act in strange ways. At times, they would appear withdrawn, their eyes staring into empty space. Other times they would do strange things like take a flying leap off the couch onto whoever was passing by.

Why did the parents keep using this same babysitter over and over? The answer is simple: the babysitter in question was the television set.

Many parents use television as a babysitter for their children when they want some peace and quiet for themselves.

With many children spending more hours watching television than they spend in school, parents need to be aware of the effects of television. It can be harmful, but it can be a positive force, too. There are some ways parents can help children get the most positive effects from television, suggests Growing Up, the child development newsletter about school-age children.

—Be responsible. By checking the TV section of the newspaper, parents can monitor the programs their child watches. Children need to learn that parents have principles which they put into practice.

—Establish rules for watching. It is important that parents establish rules regarding what times the television may be turned on and what programs may be watched. These rules should be enforced in a consistent manner.

—Watch some programs with your child. It is sometimes only by viewing a program that a parent can decide if a program is really suitable.

—Talk about the program. Talking about a program provides an excellent opportunity for a parent to explain values and benefits.

—Utilize good programs to reinforce what you want your child to learn. Television is perhaps the most powerful means of communication yet devised. It is wiser to use it for your benefit than to allow it to destroy your chosen way of life.

—Be aware of what your child is missing when he is watching television. As long as the television is "turned on," many other good experiences are "turned off."

For example, a family that watches television all evening most evenings may not be left with adequate time to talk and relate with each other. Or the child may not be spending enough time outdoors — especially in the summer — to have the healthy exercise needed for good physical development. You can also tell if your child is watching too much television if he seldom reads a book or rarely spends time developing his own special talents.

A Very Strange Babysitter

Woman uses psychic power in crime cases

By JERRY L. GLEASON
Patriot-News

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Psychic ability is like built-in radar that can warn you of problems and dangers that lie ahead, says a York woman who claims to have the ability.

It can also provide the answer to many questions, says Joan Richards, who has used her mental impressions to help solve crimes, find lost jewelry or money, or to suggest solutions to everyday problems.

"Some people think we have all the answers, but we don't," Ms. Richards said. "All you can do is use this guideline."

She and a friend, Laurel Billman, have recently opened a new business, the Joan Richards Center and New Age Bookstore, in East York.

Ms. Richards said she had first learned that she had psychic ability when she was 28, and since has found that she can use her ability to help others.

"When it started, the mental images were flashing in and out, and I had no idea what the impressions meant," she said. "I've learned to turn it on and off, and I'm not always tuned in. Psychic ability is like another part of you. It's like having a built-in radar after you learn to control and use it."

"When someone asks me a question, I concentrate on it and picture it in my mind. I try to widen the picture to get a wider scope on the subject, and pictures start forming in my mind. I don't always know what the pictures mean."

"I also have good days and bad days when my vibes are low," Ms. Richards said. "If my vibes are low, I may not pick up any impressions at all."

While Ms. Richards' impressions aren't always correct, there is a high degree of accuracy in many of them, she said. After she helped with one murder investigation, the detective in charge of the case told her that the information she provided was 87 percent correct.

In Atlanta's highly publicized murdered - and - missing - children case, Ms. Richards drew maps indicating the location of the bodies of two murdered children. The sites where the bodies were found included most of the details found in her drawings.

"I took photographs of two of the children from a newspaper and concentrated on them until I began picking up mental impressions," Ms. Richards said.

For a murder case, Ms. Richards prefers to go to the scene of the crime if possible. "At the scene, I can often pick up impressions of how the crime happened, including a description of the criminal, how they left the scene and which way they went."

"I can't give the police any solid evidence," she said. "All I can do is give them what is in my mind, and it is often difficult for them to apply it to the case. What they have to do is keep it in mind, like any other clue, until they have something to relate it to."

"While I have worked with criminal cases, most of my work is with average people who want advice on everyday problems," said Ms. Richards, who added that she can't predict when something will happen.

GROUND BREAKING—Members of Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan, held groundbreaking services Sunday afternoon for construction of a new annex in their church building program. Church honors pastor Central Baptist Church honored pastor Rev. Norman Rushing and his family at a reception Sunday evening following the evening service. Rev. Rushing has just completed his first year as pastor of the church.

In honor of the occasion, the church staff "roasted" the pastor during the program.

Members of the staff said the church "was proud" to have Rev. Rushing as their pastor and look forward to serving with him in future years.

Church halts book circulation

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Roman Catholicism doesn't ban books generally as it did under the "Index of Forbidden Books" discarded 20 years ago. But the church still offers its OK on doctrinally acceptable books — and sometimes its ban from institutional use.

That has happened in the case of a popular and widely used adult catechism or teaching book, "Christ Among Us." It previously bore an official imprimatur, declaring it free of doctrinal error, but the book's circulation has been halted at the direction of the Vatican's doctrinal congregation.

"U.S. Religious Educators Are Baffled by Vatican Book Ban," read the headline in last week's Catholic Messenger of Davenport, Iowa. Some educators say the move indicates stiffening Vatican demands for more exact orthodoxy.

Many Catholic writers, including priests, turn out books on doctrinal matters without seeking imprimaturs. In the more open church atmosphere since the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65, Catholics no longer widely determine their reading fare.

But in the recent case, one of the most extensively used books in teaching Catholic beliefs to new members and other adults got the ax.

Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, head of the Vatican's doctrinal office, called for the action in letters to the publisher and to Archbishop Peter Gerety of Newark, N.J., who had given his imprimatur asserting the book was doctrinally satisfactory.

He promptly withdrew that imprimatur and informed the publisher, Paulist Press of Ramsey, N.J. It announced April 16 a halt to the book's circulation because it was found "not suitable as a catechetical text" by the Vatican doctrinal office.

About 1.6 million copies of the book had been sold since its first publication in 1967, with three revisions issued since, the latest selling 166,000 in 1983.

Paulist Press, publishing arm of the Paulist order of priests formed to evangelize in America, said Ratzinger's letter ruled the book would not be suitable even with "substantial corrections" and asked that no future reprints be considered.

The ban was written about in the Catholic press and in accounts by the National Catholic News Service, quoting numerous pastors and teachers who considered the book a helpful stimulating teaching aid.

Specific reasons for the ban were not stated by the Vatican, and the Rev. Kevin Lynch, Paulist Press editor in chief, was seeking clarifications. "I am very disappointed," he said, adding that the book had been considered an important and useful text.

However, several conservative groups have persistently complained to the Vatican about the book and carried on campaigns against it, notably Catholics United for the Faith of New Rochelle, N.Y.

It maintained the book did not adhere to Catholic teachings regarding such matters as the Virgin Mary, the Eucharist, original sin, contraception, conscience and angels.

Religious Roundup

ATLANTA (AP) — Need for American church sponsors for refugees is at a critical high, says Delbert Fann of the Southern Baptist resettlement office. Similar pleas have come from other denominational leaders.

Meanwhile, in Washington, D.C., 19 Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders urged Congress to halt deportation of undocumented Salvadoran refugees from the United States, as proposed in pending legislation.

It would suspend such deportations for up to three years while the Reagan administration studies dangers the refugees face when they are returned home.

At a meeting of the United Methodist Committee on Relief in New York, officials said the need for sponsors of refugees is greater than ever.

Fann said the Southern Baptist office has had to turn down many refugee cases for lack of sponsors, calling it a "lost opportunity."

He said his office currently is seeking sponsors for 23 East European refugees and eight from the Middle East, and that in each case, the individual or family has "a well-founded fear of persecution and cannot return to their country of origin."

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

Pointing... the way

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Early churches used steeples to make the building higher than all others in the city. People could see God's House from any direction, and could easily find their way to a place of worship.

Today, with many office buildings towering into the sky, churches are not always the tallest buildings. However, churches still point the way to God, and provide a place of worship.

CENTER CITY FIRE—A nine-alarm fire sends flames and smoke over a downtown section of Philadelphia Thursday afternoon. Shoppers were evacuated from the mall type stores in the foreground as firmemen took three hours to bring the fire under control. (AP Laserphoto)

Officials say deaths and arrests of illegal aliens up

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Illegal aliens are increasingly depending on smugglers to reach their Texas destination, and officials say that as a result, more are arrested and more are killed on the rugged border terrain.

Authorities say at least 11 aliens, who each paid smugglers or "coyotes" a down payment on about $500 or $600 to be brought into the United States, have been killed in South Texas in the last three months.

Two Mexicans were killed Wednesday night when a Border Patrol agent chasing a car hit the vehicle from the rear. The two who died were in a group of 16 in an automobile, one of two vehicles involved in the fatal chase. The incident occurred on a dirt road 15 miles east of Hebbronville.

The two killed were riding in the trunk of a Chevrolet sedan. Three others were injured, including Border Patrol agent Robert Handy, who was in satisfactory condition at Hebbronville's Brooks County Hospital.

The two injured aliens remained hospitalized in critical condition at Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi.

On Thursday, 7-year-old

Douglas Guerrero, a Salvadoran, died at Corpus Christi Memorial Medical Center from injuries sustained Saturday night when a Missouri Pacific train plowed into a group of Mexican and Salvadorans crossing or sleeping on a railroad trestle near Kingsville.

Four other Salvadorans died at the scene of that accident. Six others remain hospitalized. Border patrol agents say about 40 aliens were in this group.

Border Patrol agents say they have little hope of finding the smugglers involved in the Wednesday incident in Hebbronville, or those who were leading the group near Kingsville on Saturday.

Survivors of the train accident gave Border Patrol officers only a vague description of the man leading them through the rugged brush.

Two months ago, four Salvadorans were found dead at an old dairy barn near Raymondville. The cause of their death remains unknown.

Arrests also are up, federal authorities said.

In the Laredo and McAllen sectors alone, more than 56,000 illegal aliens were apprehended through January and April this year, officials said. In March, Laredo authorities reported 10,888 aliens were arrested.

David Almaraz, an assistant U.S. attorney in Laredo, said the number of smugglers arrested also has jumped recently.

Statistics from the U.S. Border Patrol in Laredo and McAllen show that more than 600 smugglers have been arrested in the last four months.

"The prosecution of smugglers is 85 to 90 percent of my caseload," Almaraz said in an interview with the Corpus Christi Caller Times. "A great majority usually pleads guilty and, depending on age and their previous record, the judge usually hands down a probated sentence to first offenders."

The maximum sentence a smuggler usually receives is a five-year sentence and $2,000 fine for each illegal alien he is transporting.

In his 3½ years as assistant

U.S. attorney in Laredo, Almaraz said, the stiffest sentence he remembers for a smuggler was two 3-year prison terms.

"Most get probation because they say that they were offered free transportation if they drove. We can't go against their story. The major smugglers are in Mexico," he said.

The smuggler in Mexico, he said, usually hires someone to gather a group of people who want to go into the United States. Then, Almaraz said, someone else is hired to pick up the people and take them to the river.

At the river, Almaraz said, they meet someone else who carries them across in a ferry or a boat.

Reagan faces protests on Irish visit

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
GALWAY, Ireland (AP) — President Ronald Reagan, his trip to China behind him, faces a barrage of protests over his nuclear and Central American policies when he visits Ireland in June.

The protest campaign, led by an alliance of Roman Catholic church groups and left-wing organizations, threatens to cast a shadow over his pilgrimage to the Tipperary village where his ancestors lived and died.

The protesters have already included such prominent Irishmen as Sean McBride, 80-year-old winner of the 1974 Nobel Peace Prize, and Conor Cruise O'Brien, former U.N. envoy in the 1960s during the 1961 crisis.

Legislators, senators, academics and churchmen have also joined the anti-Reagan chorus. Deputy Premier Dick Spring, leader of the Labor Party, says he will petition Reagan to halt aid to right-wing regimes in Central America.

McBride, a former assistant secretary-general of the United Nations, urged the Irish to oppose Reagan's June 1-4 visit because, he said, the administration's foreign policy is based on the use or threat of force.

As the protests build, it appears that Reagan's election-year trip to the Emerald Isle won't be a rerun of John F. Kennedy's triumphant, trouble-free visit in 1963.

Many of the groups opposed to the president's visit to the non-aligned republic have joined to form a Ronald Reagan Reception Committee, which will coordinate the protests.

Spokeswoman Marnie Holborow told The Associated Press: "We plan to harass him wherever he sets foot in Ireland. There's a groundswell of opposition to Reagan and we hope we can tap it."

The small Marxist Workers' Party called for "massive peaceful and orderly demonstrations" against the visit despite a warning from the government's chief whip, Sean Barrett, that protests could deter vital U.S. investments.

Irish newspapers daily carry letters protesting the visit. One man, Patrick Digan of Athlone commented: "The killings in Central America are being done with Reagan's bullets and guns; the assassins are paid in American dollars."

"Reagan is coming here looking for the Irish vote. Why should we welcome him. I'm 83 years old and too feeble to appear in public events any more. Otherwise I'd be among the first to march in protest against this visit."

U.S. House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill said during a visit to Ireland last week he would be "embarrassed and ashamed" if Reagan wasn't warmly welcomed.

He said he understood the strong feelings here about U.S. policies. "But nothing must be done to endanger the president, the leader of the greatest democracy the world has ever known."

Reagan is scheduled to land at Shannon airport June 1, stay at the Ashford Castle hotel owned by Irish millionaire John Mulcahy, and visit Galway June 3.

Later that day he will spend nearly two hours in Ballyporeen, the farming village from where his great-grandfather, Michael O'Regan, emigrated to flee Ireland's great potato famine in 1858.

Reagan will visit Dublin, where he will address both houses of the Oireachtas, or Parliament, June 4 before flying to London for an economic summit June 7.

The protests by the normally easygoing Irish are likely to prove an embarrassment to Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald. He seeks Reagan's support for his initiative to end 15 years of sectarian violence in British-ruled Northern Ireland and unite it with the Irish republic.

When FitzGerald visited Washington in March, he received a warm welcome and Reagan lavishly praised his peace efforts.

"Reagan's welcome in Ireland will probably fall somewhere between the ecstatic reception Kennedy was given in 1963 and the demonstrations that greeted Richard Nixon in 1970," said a government official who declined to be identified. Nixon came to Ireland during the Vietnam War.

Reagan's Central America policy and support for President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines have come under increasing attack from the Roman Catholic Church here.

"We are against American intervention in these areas and the bolstering of regimes which do not acknowledge human rights," said Bishop Eamon Casey of Galway.

Much of the church's opposition to U.S. policy is based on reports from hundreds of Irish missionaries who work among Central America's poor and are critical of the Washington-backed regimes.

Conor Cruise O'Brien, former senator and Post and Telegraphs minister, wrote in his weekly column in The Irish Times that by welcoming Reagan, "we shall be helping to ensure that Central America gets more of the same."

Much of the protest centers on Galway on Ireland's rugged Atlantic coast. Kennedy was mobbed by cheering supporters when he visited Galway and was made a Freeman — a Medieval honor — when he visited the 500-year-old city June 29, 1963.

Irish Times political columnist Dick Walsh observed: "Ronald Reagan's visit to the home of his ancestors raises as many questions about how we see ourselves as it does about our view of his foreign policy ...

"If we are to claim the rights of a modern independent state, dedicated to peace and civil liberties, we must also have the courage to ensure that friendly as well as hostile governments know where we stand. They might not like it; they cannot dismiss our authority to pursue our own policies."

More travel than usual could be in store for you this coming year. If you take a trip of special interest, record your experiences on film and in writing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be the first to call attention to any mistakes for which you're responsible today. Others will help you make corrections if you don't try to shift the blame. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best-suited romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Continue to guard your interests where joint ventures are concerned. Don't be jockeyed into a position where you do a lot, yet get little.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are the spokesman for a group activity today, keep a tight reign. Plans could go awry if you fail to stay on top of things.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Let others serve as your press agent today in talking about your achievements. It sounds better coming from these sources rather than from you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're trying to promote something today don't lay everything on your prospects all at once. Feed them information bit by bit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is the day to try to get more out of your head than you do out of your wallet. Don't buy what you can't get on your own terms.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If negotiating an agreement today, look it over in detail and you might discover you won't have to make as many concessions as you first thought.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Double-check all the bills or invoices if you're having work or a service performed for you today. This will protect you from being gouged.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though it may conflict with your intentions today, go along with the will of the majority rather than insist upon having your own way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Put duties and responsibilities before play today. You might not be able to do all you hope to, but you'll still be proud of what you accomplish.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The merit of an idea with which you may be toying today might be somewhat inflated, but his doesn't mean it should be completely discarded.

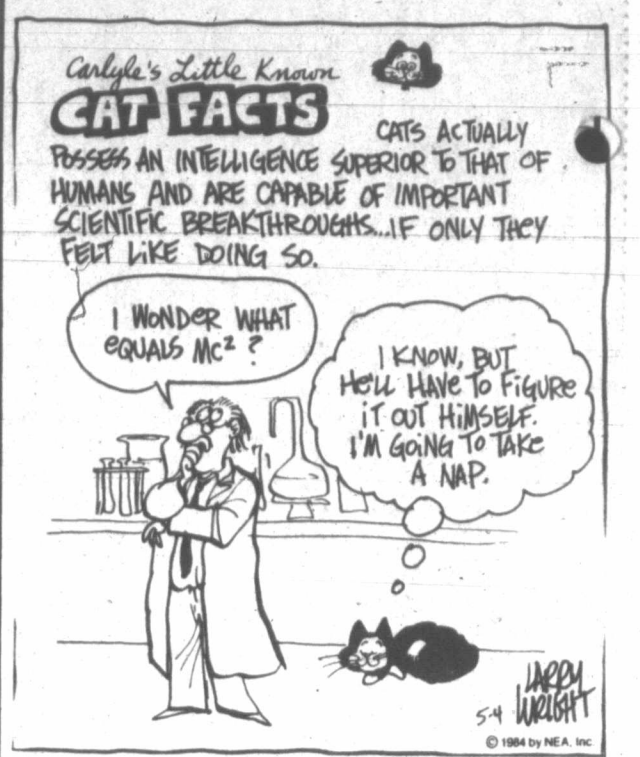

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not make hasty judgments today in situations which could affect your career or earning capacity. You'll fare better by proceeding slowly.

Cowboy's true love is horses

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — It's likely that Ace Hooper's five acres of land north of Plainview are loaded with more livestock than any other property of similar size in Hale County.

Not only does Hooper raise horses, wild and domestic turkeys, guineas, various breeds of chickens, ducks and geese, he also is in the Holstein heifer business (he raises them as replacement cows for dairies). Then, there are the milk goats he keeps for his grandson and the barn (full of pigs) he rents out to a friend.

Of course, with all that stock he needs a few Australian Shepherds to keep them in line, and some Rat Terriers and cats to ward off rodent freeloaders who are inevitably drawn to a place with that much feed ground.

But the stars of the place are the horses. Although he raises Paints now, Hooper started breeding Appaloosas in 1958. He boasts No. 596 in the lifetime membership of the Appaloosa Horse Club, which now numbers in the tens of thousands.

While his memory is hazy when it comes to his age ("All I'll say is I'm over 60 — I have a couple of sisters who would kill me if I told my age") he easily recites names and lineage of his favorite stallions and mares through the years.

Hooper said he started his Appaloosa business with a registered quarter horse stallion named Jackie Joe and a friend's 18 Comanche mares. The mares were original Indian Appaloosas, with no other breed in their blood lines.

Hooper and a friend, Jack Mansfield, turned the horses lose together with the understanding that Hooper would take all the resulting fillies and that Mansfield would get all the male colts.

"The next fall, at weaning time," Hooper remembers, "there were 16 colts. Eight were filly colts and eight were male colts, so there was no problem."

From the beginning Hooper was to breed the best horse he ever had, a leopard (white horse with spots over the entire body) stallion named High Stake. For two years, in 1962-63, High Stake was the World Champion Appaloosa stallion. Another horse Hooper bred and sold, Top Hat, came in second both years.

"When I sold Top Hat, for $10,500, people asked me if I hadn't made a mistake and kept the wrong horse. Then in Fort Worth at the national show, I beat him out by one notch, out of 600 studs. I never had a dread of any horse. I knew he (High Stake) was the best," Hooper said.

Hooper does admit to a couple of errors in judgement, though. He sold two Appaloosas, Gold Strike and Silver Strike, for $2,500 a piece. Gold Strike went on to win many races, including the World Wide Appaloosa Futurity in New Mexico in 1965. Silver Strike sold to the same satisfied customer and also was a big winner.

Just before High Stake was to make his debut as a 4-year-old in cutting horse competition, he died of a twisted intestine. Hooper's daughter, Gay Lynn, wrote a poem which Hooper still keeps, titled "The King is Dead."

One of Hooper's trademarks in those days was the fact that he always wore his pants tucked inside his boots.

About five years ago, Hooper sold the last of his Appaloosas. After winning hundreds of competitions and a room full of trophies, he felt his breeding program had not been able to produce horses of as high a quality as his earlier years. He knew he would never be able to buy horses the likes of High Stake and High Voltage, who won the Junior World Championship.

Sanctuary workers claim crackdown

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Workers in a national sanctuary movement to aid and protect Central American immigrants say they are under attack by federal authorities and are being prosecuted as the government once pursued opponents of the Vietnam War.

"I think the U.S. government is getting prepared to involve itself in a land war in Central America and the existence of organized groups such as the sanctuary movement is a problem for authorities because these people are voices speaking out against such actions," said Tony Gomez, a McAllen-based attorney representing two Salvadorans arrested with a nun and churchworker last February.

In the last three months, eight people associated with the sanctuary movement have been arrested along the U.S.-Mexican border in Texas and Arizona. Two churchworkers in Arizona and a Salvadoran infant have not been charged, but five others face trial in May and June.

In the first of these trials, which begins Thursday, churchworker Stacy Lynn Merkt is charged with conspiracy to transport illegal aliens.

"We're beginning to see these arrests as a pattern," said Lee Holstein of the Chicago Religious Task Force on Central America, a clearinghouse for the sanctuary movement.

"The government is not happy about having a growing number of people opposing its foreign policy and it may feel it's better to get rid of some of them now."

to stomp this movement out," she said.

Ms. Holstein said the sanctuary movement has grown to 47,000 active participants and 100 churches since it was officially organized in 1981, the year a Tucson, Ariz., church publicly declared itself a haven for Salvadoran aliens.

The looseknit network of churches, individuals and organizations sheltering Central Americans in the 1980s has been compared to the underground railroad that helped slaves escape Southern plantations before the Civil War.

Sanctuary workers say the Salvadorans are fleeing random and grisly death at the hands of right-wing death squads and, less often, guerrillas.

But government officials say those involved in sheltering illegal aliens on so-called moral grounds are violating the law, just like the individuals involved in transporting aliens for profit.

Sanctuary supporters and workers claim to be acting in accordance with the federal Refugee Act, passed by Congress in 1980, and the United Nations protocol governing refugees to which the United States is a signatory.

The government says the Salvadorans are economic refugees, like Mexicans, not political refugees as sanctuary workers contend.

Nonetheless, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials, already short-handed and lacking funds, have tended in the past to shy away from raiding churches and schools.

An INS official in Dallas who asked not to be identified said authorities could "get more illegal aliens by raiding any single construction site in Houston than by raiding a dozen churches and with a lot less negative publicity."

Duke Austin, spokesman for the INS in Washington, said the enforcement policy of the service has not changed.

But in the last six weeks, the Mother Cabrini Catholic Church in Laredo has been raided by Border Patrol agents twice, according to the church's priest, Father Tom Davis.

And on April 13, federal authorities entered church property to arrest Jack Elder, 40, director of the church-sponsored refugee halfway house Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito. He has been charged with transporting illegal Salvadoran aliens.

"I don't know what they're trying to prove," said Elder's wife, Diane, 34, who added that she fears she also might be indicted.

"The government sees Jack emerging as one of the national voices in support of alien's rights," she said. "He was arrested for this reason, not because he drove three men to a bus station five miles away."

Elder faces trial June 1 and, if convicted, could be sentenced to a maximum of 15 years in prison.

The reporter has not been indicted, but the two adult Salvadorans face April trial dates on federal misdemeanor charges of illegal entry.

The Texas branch of the American Civil Liberties Union is representing the Salvadorans.

Graham ties record Bucks down Nets, 100-93 in T of C tourney

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — The rough isn't nearly so severe as it often is. The greens are good. The winds were relatively gentle. As a result, said Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, the La Costa Country Club course is playing easier than usual.

Then he took a look at the scoreboard, and the 64 posted by David Graham, matching the tournament record.

"But the golf course just doesn't play that easy," said Crenshaw.

"That's a great round, a great, great round."

Graham did not make a bogey on the 6,911-yard layout, one-putted 11 times, tied the record set in 1970 by Frank Beard with a 5-iron shot to one foot on the last hole, sped his effort with a 25-foot putt for eagle-3 on the second and played the front in 30. It gave him a 3-stroke lead going into today's second round of the elite, winners-only Tournament of Champions.

"I think you're going to see some very low scores this year," said Graham, an Australian now living in Dallas and a former winner of the U.S. Open and PGA titles.

"And that is because of the absence of the rough we've had in years past."

"It used to be so deep it was a lost ball if you hit it in there. Now, it's not all that difficult."

"It may be because of the presence of the seniors," he said.

For the first time, the T

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Sidney Moncrief balanced ice packs on each of his knees. It had been a long, physical, painful night. He sat on the floor as he reviewed the 42 rugged minutes he had put in while helping Milwaukee put away the New Jersey Nets.

Moncrief scored 27 points, including all 13 of his foul shots, as the Bucks defeated the Nets 100-93 Thursday night to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Moncrief heaped credit for the victory on the Bucks' defense and the club's ability to capitalize on a slew of free throw opportunities.

"Our defense did it," he said. "We pretty much did what we wanted to do. We forced them into a half-court game and hit foul shots."

Indeed, The Bucks forced the Nets to play a slow-paced game and managed to build a 17-point lead four times in the third quarter. Along the way, the Bucks converted 42 of 55 foul shots, including 19 of 25 in the fourth quarter.

"The key is stopping their fast break," Moncrief said. "This was the kind of tempo we'd like to have for the rest of the series. We know we can't run with the Nets."

Three other series resume tonight, with Los Angeles at Dallas, Boston at New York and Utah at Phoenix. The Lakers and Celtics have 2-0 leads, while the Jazz and Suns are tied 1-1.

Guard Micheal Ray Richardson, the triggerman in the Nets' fast break, was limited to three points as he and two other starters — Buck Williams and Mike O'Koren — were held under 10 points. Williams had eight points and O'Koren four.

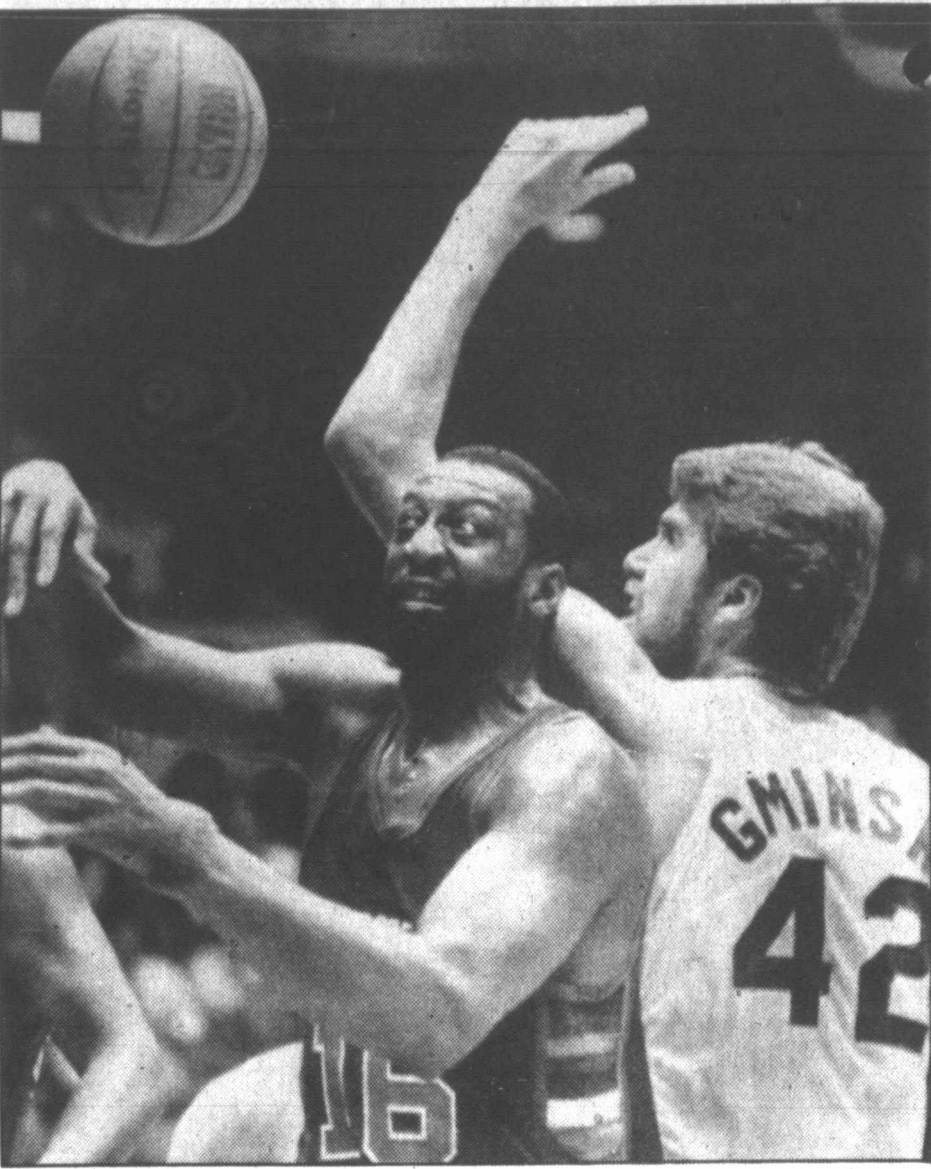

Darryl Dawkins was the Nets' top gun with 31 points, but he and Williams and O'Koren each fouled out.

"We controlled the tempo and only looked to run when we had a clear-cut advantage. Otherwise, we just walked it up court," said Bucks forward Marques Johnson, who had 19 points and eight rebounds. "The best way to slow them down is not to run ourselves."

After Junior Bridgeman's two free throws gave Milwaukee its final 17-point lead at 71-54, New Jersey outscored the Bucks 10-1 over the final 2:01 of the third quarter and Otis Birdsong, who finished with 20 points, opened the fourth quarter with a baseline jumper as the Nets cut the deficit to 72-66.

The fourth game will be played Saturday at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

PAIN IN THE NECK — Bob Lanier of the Milwaukee Bucks reacts as he's fouled by Mike Gminski (42) of the New Jersey Nets during NBA playoff action Thursday night. Referees called 72 fouls in the game, which was won by the Bucks, 100-93.

AL roundup

Red Sox slip by Tigers, 1-0

The Detroit Tigers are in their first "slump" of the season — if you call a two-game losing streak a slump — and Jack Morris knows why.

"It's guys like (Bobby) Ojeda who can mess us up," said Morris, who hurled a five-hitter but served up a home run to Dwight Evans in the eighth inning that enabled the Boston Red Sox to nip the Tigers 1-0 Thursday behind Ojeda's six-hit, 10-strikeout pitching for his first major-league shutout.

"I've seen it over the years, guys like him — and (Chicago's) LaMarr Hoyt — who have good off-speed stuff and can get it over the black like he did today. Guys that bring it (throw fastballs) constantly are going to get hit by this team."

It was only Detroit's fourth setback in 23 games and the first time the Tigers have dropped two games in a row.

In the only other American League games, the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Kansas City Royals 6-5 in 10 innings and the Seattle Mariners trimmed the Minnesota Twins 6-2.

Evans, who belted a two-run homer in Boston's 5-4 triumph Wednesday night, led off the eighth inning by lining Morris' first pitch into the lower left-field seats for his third homer. That was enough to make Morris a loser after winning his first five decisions.

"Everybody was pumped up when we came into Detroit and we all wanted to win," Ojeda said. "This is fun. We needed this kind of series. This is probably my greatest game. At the very least it was one of my top two because I finished it. It was nice to beat a hot team, and Jack's an outstanding pitcher. Guys were coming in and saying that's a great forkball he's got."

On the home run, Evans said he was "looking for a slider, because that's what he warmed up with. But he threw me a fastball, a little bit up. It's funny, because in Fenway (Park) that would have been a single." Brewers 6, Royals 5.

Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry stymies most teams, but not Milwaukee. He has a career 3-5 record and an earned run average of over 6.00 against the Brewers after Mark Brouhard's two-run single capped a three-run rally in the bottom of the 10th inning.

The Royals had taken a 5-3 lead in the top of the 10th when Pete Ladd walked Frank White and Steve Balboni with the bases loaded. But Rick Manning led off the bottom of the inning with a double and Quisenberry walked Dion James. One out later, pinch hitter Roy Howell singled to score Manning and send Gantner to third and Howell took second when right fielder Lynn Jones' throw got past third baseman Greg Pryor. Jim Sundberg grounded out and Quisenberry walked Robin Yount intentionally to get to Brouhard.

"It's nice to be in a situation like that at the plate when you feel good," said Brouhard. "It's a different situation when you're 0-for-4. You can't go to the plate thinking there's one out to go. You have to think about hitting the ball. And I felt pretty good at the plate. I had hit the ball pretty good all day. I just wanted to make good contact and hit the ball hard."

"It was the first time I have faced him, but we've beat him quite a few times. It seems like he can't do anything against Milwaukee. He's going to get us one of these days, though."

Darryl Motley hit two solo homers and Pat Sheridan one for Kansas City. Brouhard and Randy Ready connected for Milwaukee. Mariners 6, Twins 2.

Rookie Alvin Davis cracked his ninth homer, a three-run blast in the fifth inning, and Bob Kearney added a solo shot and a two-run double. Davis, who has hit all his homers in the last 20 games, connected on a 3-1 pitch from Mike Smithson after Jack Perconte singled with two out in the fifth and Smithson hit Phil Bradley with a pitch. Kearney socked his first home run of the season with two out in the sixth and doubled two runs home in the eighth. Mickey Hatcher homered for one of five Minnesota hits off winner Mark Langston and three relievers.

"I have the philosophy that every player at one time or another can influence the outcome of a game," Davis said. "You just have to wait for that time. It came through for me. I'm amazed I've stayed so hot for so long. You don't know what you're capable of until you hit a streak like this."

Cowboys' Martin to retire

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys defensive end Harvey Martin, a four-time all-pro performer, is calling it quits after 11 years in the National Football League.

Martin, 33, who had been working out at the team's practice facilities during the off-season as if he planned to play again, informed club officials Thursday of his decision to retire.

Cowboys officials scheduled a 9:30 a.m. CDT news conference today at the Twin Sixties Hotel, near the Cowboys headquarters, to allow Martin to make the official announcement.

Martin threatened last season to retire when Coach Tom Landry took him out of the starting lineup. But Martin won his job back later, occasionally showing glimpses of the style that made him one of Dallas' all-time leading defensive players.

"He said he's going into private business," said Doug Todd, the Cowboys' director of public relations. "He said he had an offer to go to a local electronic company, in sales."

The 6-5, 260-pound Martin is the Cowboys' all-time sack leader and led the team in that category for his first 10 years with the club, but had struggled the past two seasons.

Martin was mentioned in connection with cocaine investigations a year ago, during the off-season, but was never charged. Cowboys officials said he was out of shape when he reported to camp last year and that he never caught up.

Cowboys quarterback Danny White said Thursday night the news caught him by surprise.

"I know Harvey's been working real hard during the off-season to get back in shape. He's been working harder than I've ever seen him work out, so it does surprise me a little bit," White said.

"If this is what he's decided to do, then obviously he was just testing himself to see how he would respond," White added.

The Cowboys made Martin their third-round draft pick in the 1973 National Football League draft after he earned All-America honors in high school while leading East Texas State to the NAIA Division I championship.

Mavs looking for help against Los Angeles

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks will be counting on their "sixth man" for help Friday night in the third game of the National Basketball Association playoffs against the Los Angeles Lakers.

There was never a team needing aid any more.

The Mavs have suffered losses of 43 and 16 points, respectively, to the Lakers in back-to-back embarrassments.

A boisterous, sellout crowd of 17,007 is assured for Reunion Arena where the Mavs defeated the Lakers twice during the regular season.

"We usually shoot well in Reunion and the crowd really gets us going," said Dallas guard Rolando Blackman.

The Mavs have shot a miserable 34 and 44 per cent against the Lakers, who have hit baskets from the field at a 60 and 55 per cent clip.

The Lakers don't seem to be too worried about going on the road.

"We're a better road team," said Laker forward Bob McAdoo. "There are a lot of distractions at home with the family and things like that."

He added the Reunion Arena crowd "makes us play harder because it gets so hostile."

Los Angeles has won seven of 10 games played in Reunion Arena.

The Lakers have done a tremendous defensive job on Mark Aguirre, the Mavs' leading scorer.

Aguirre, who averaged 29 points per game during the regular season, has scored only 16 and 14 points in the two losses.

In the last game, he went 17-48 minutes without scoring a point.

"My shot is just not falling," Aguirre said.

It's the first time Aguirre has had back-to-back games under 20 points this season.

"I'm going to come back," Aguirre said. "I'm not going to let this bother me. I'll be the same old Mark Aguirre."

The Lakers have been contributing to Aguirre's problems by switching defenders.

"We're trying to double-team him," said Laker Coach Pat Riley. "We're throwing James Worthy and Kurt Rambis at him."

Also, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has made it difficult for Aguirre to shoot.

"Sometimes Kareem will take a step or two toward me," Aguirre said. "He is not easy to shoot over."

"They just keep coming at me. They are like sharks."

Game Four is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Reunion Arena which also is soldout for that contest, the second game of a nationally televised doubleheader over CBS.
