Prepare for worldwide war, Iran told

Iraqi planes hit more ships near Persian Gulf

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—Iraq said its warplanes today attacked two ships south of Iran's main Persian Gulf oil terminal in the latest of a series of raids — blamed on both Iran and Iraq — that has alarmed governments and oil shippers in the region.

An Iranian leader appealed to his nation to "prepare itself for war throughout the world" in the event other nations intervene in the gulf.

"There is a possibility that an extremely momentous development, the consequences of which cannot be predicted, will come about in the region," Tehran radio quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian Parliament, as saying today.

"Therefore, our nation should pay a great deal of heed and prepare itself for a prolonged move and jihad." Jihad means holy war in Arabic.

"Should the way be opened in the gulf to the superpowers and every one of the second-rate powers, our nation should prepare itself for war throughout the world against the interests of every country desirous of intervention in the gulf," Rafsanjani said.

spokesman, reading a communique over Baghdad state radio, said the Iraqi jetfighters attacked two "big" naval targets south of Kharg Island, set the ships ablaze with "direct and effective hits" and returned safely to base.

The communique did not identify the type or nationality of the ships, and there was no immediate confirmation of the report from shipping sources.

The communique came a day after the foreign ministers of six Persian Gulf nations — members of the Gulf Cooperation Council — decided to seek help from the Arab League and the U.N. Security Council to protect oil tankers from hazards of the 44-month-old Iran-Iraq war.

Iraqi warplanes fired on two Saudi supertankers on April 25 and May 7. Two Kuwaiti tankers were attacked Sunday and Monday outside Iranian territorial waters, and a Saudi tanker was attacked in its own territorial waters Wednesday. The ministers blamed the three attacks earlier this week on Iran but did not mention the attacks attributed to Iraq.

The Iraqi spokesman said today's attack "underlines our capability to maintain" a four-month sea blockade over Kharg Island and other Iranian ports.

During the blockade, at least 19 Iranian and foreign ships sailing across the gulf region have been attacked.

Iraqi communiques warned that any ship trying to approach the Iranian coast will be attacked, irrespective of its nationality.

THE FOREIGN MINISTERS of the Gulf Cooperation Council countries — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar, and Oman — met Thursday in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, and agreed to act collectively "Iranian aggression."

The ministers said they would take their case to an Arab League meeting Saturday in Tunis in the hope of mustering a united Arab front against Iran, and would refer the problem of the attacks to the Security Council.

Iraq renewed threats Thursday to block all gulf oil exports if the sea lanes become unsafe for shipments of its own oil. Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency accused Iraq of "adventurism which led to an ever-expanding U.S. military presence" in the gulf region.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said in Brussels that he has no plans to raise the alert status of U.S. troops in the gulf region because of the attacks. He told reporters that attacks on unarmed ships carrying vital supplies should be viewed with great concern.

The gulf foreign ministers made no reference in their closing statement to any military action that may be taken to deter Iran, Arab and Western diplomatic sources had speculated that Kuwait and Saudi Arabia might send naval escorts to protect their tankers.

In Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly cautioned that the attacks could precipitate intervention by big powers to protect oil traffic.

A REAGAN ADMINISTRATION official said in Washington that the United States had discussed with Saudi Arabia and other Arab gulf powers the possibility of providing air cover for oil tankers.

District Lions convene here

Some 200 to 300 area Lions Club members, wives and queen candidates are expected for the District 2T-1 Lions Convention in Pampa this weekend.

Activities will include business sessions, officers training, a Las Vegas night, a banquet, a queen's contest, a ball, a golf tournament and special activities for the wives.

Lions International Director John G. Justice of Nashville, Tenn., will be the guest speaker for the District Governor's banquet at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Heritage Room at M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Justice was elected for his two-year term as director of the International Association of Lions Club at the association's 65th convention in Atlanta, Ga., in 1982.

Chairman of the board of Justice Steel, Inc., Justice has been a member of the Nashville Downtown Lions Club since 1964. He has served in a number of positions, including club secretary, club president, zone chairman, deputy district governor and district governor.

For his service in behalf of Lionism, Justice has received numerous awards, including Master Key, 100 Percent Secretary, 100 Percent President, 100 Percent District Governor, a District Governor Extension Award and three International President's Awards.

Active in his community, he has served on the Nashville Contractors Association, the Association of Builders and Contractors, the Nashville Better Business Bureau executive committee, the Boy Scouts of America, the Heart Fund, the March of Dimes, the American Cancer Society and the board of trustees of Belmont College.

Presiding over the district convention will be District Governor Pat Tunnell of Amarillo.

Convention activities got underway today with a golf tournament at 8 a.m., registration in the lobby area of Coronado Inn and a treasure hunt in Pampa stores for the women.

The opening business session was set to begin at 4 p.m. today in the Starlight Room at Coronado Inn, with reports on convention committee appointments and announcements by the convention chairman, the Nominations Committee, the Elections Committee, the Constitution and By-Laws Committee and the District Committee.

A new officers training session was due to begin at 5:30 p.m. today in the Starlight Room.

A dinner and Las Vegas night will begin at 7 p.m. in the Starlight Room.

Registration for district Lions queen candidates will be from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the foyer of Northgate Inn. After dinner at the Coronado Inn, the candidates will have a get-acquainted

Economy's rapid growth surprises experts again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy grew at a robust rate of 8.8 percent in the first three months of the year as the enduring strength of the recovery continued to surprise the experts.

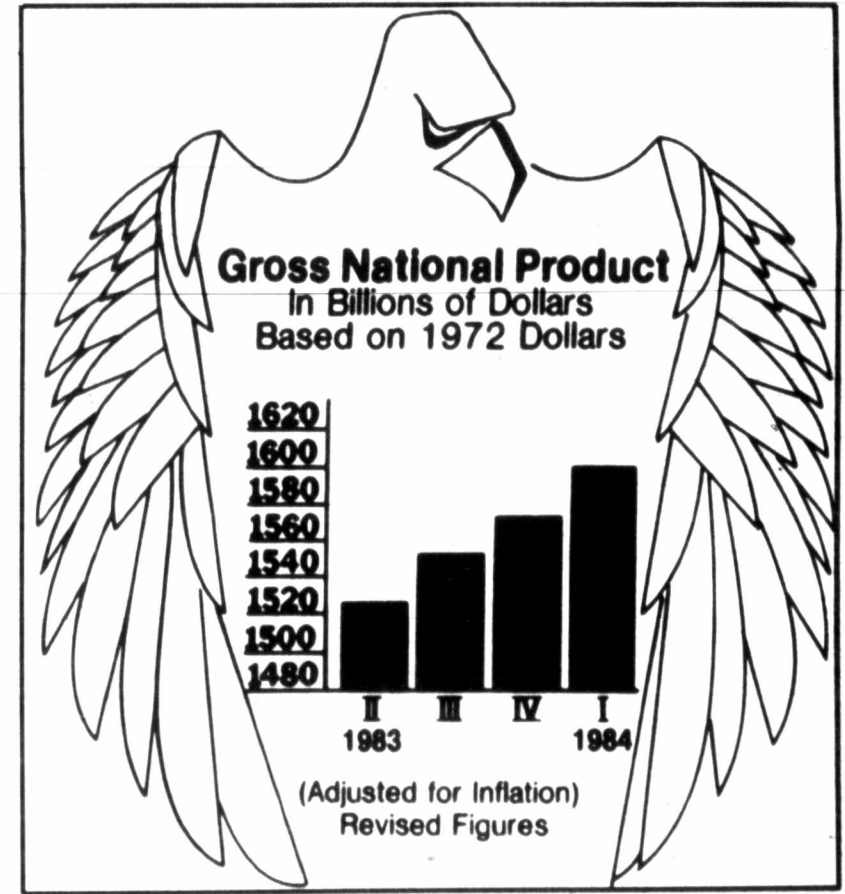

The Commerce Department today once again revised upward its projections of growth from January to March, a period which many economists had once expected to exhibit a marked slowdown.

Instead, the 8.8 percent performance marked the fastest pace for growth since a 9.7 percent spurt turned in from April-June of 1982, as the recovery from the 1981-82 recession was gaining momentum.

That 9.7 percent rate for the gross national product, the total output of goods and services in the economy, was followed in the second half of last year with gains of 7.6 percent and 5 percent.

Many economists had first predicted the first quarter of 1984 would look much like the final three months of 1983 with growth between 4 and 5 percent. Thus, the government's first estimate of growth at 7.2 percent took economists by surprise and they predicted it would be lowered substantially in later revisions.

However, the number was boosted last month to 8.3 percent and, today, to 8.8 percent.

Meeting produces no progress

Soviets won't give on Olympics

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The Soviet Union's top Olympic official, here for an emergency meeting of the International Olympic Committee, said today Moscow would not reverse its decision to boycott the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

Maralt Gramov, president of the Soviet Olympic Committee, told reporters: "The decision is final."

Gramov conferred for more than an hour Thursday with Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, but the meeting apparently made no progress toward any change in the Soviet position.

Ueberroth told reporters: "It would be misleading to suggest that we came even an inch closer to a solution."

With little real hope, the president of the International Olympic Committee, Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain, began a last-ditch effort today to persuade the Soviet Union to reverse its decision.

Samaranch opened a one-day emergency meeting of the IOC's nine-member executive board at the IOC headquarters here to discuss the situation, only two weeks before the deadline for Olympic entries expires. The top American and Soviet Olympic officials were to meet separately and with the board later in the day.

Ueberroth and Gramov met face-to-face Thursday for the first time since the Soviet Union announced its boycott on May 8, later followed by nine other Soviet bloc nations.

William E. Simon, president of the U.S. Olympic committee, indicated that hope was fading that the Russians would change their minds.

"We still expect to get more than 100 countries competing in Los Angeles," Simon told reporters as the emergency meeting began. "The Soviet absence will certainly not wreck the games."

He said today's discussions were a formal effort to put the IOC on record as having requested that the Soviet Union reconsider its boycott, and an opportunity to debate "the future of the Olympic movement as a whole."

The Summer Olympics, held every four years, are experiencing their third straight boycott.

About 30 African nations stayed away from the 1976 Montreal games to protest a New Zealand rugby tour of South Africa, bringing the total participation down to 88 countries.

The United States pulled out of the 1980 Games in Moscow because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. The U.S.-led boycott reduced the number of competing nations to 81.

Asked whether the successive boycotts could spell the end of the Olympic games, Simon replied: "Certainly not."

Throughout the world, 154 countries have sanctioned national Olympic committees.

Is 'generic hamburger' a coming trend?

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — From its modest beginnings as a food item, the hamburger has long since evolved into a marketing concept.

An endless struggle for hamburger hegemony has led McDonald's and its fast-food competitors to spend millions of advertising dollars to persuade a skeptical public that all burgers are not created equal.

This frenzied competition for brand loyalty had led to a kind of fast-food arms race, as each company strives to build a bigger, better burger. But the price increases which followed these gastronomical advances have tempted some new fast-food entrepreneurs to introduce a revolutionary new concept: the generic burger.

"We're going back to basics," said Joe Brimus, manager of the newly opened Hamburger Place. "This is the market everybody else left behind."

Open since the middle of April, the Hamburger Place is already selling more than 2,000 burgers per day, all of them served in plain white wrappers. To help maintain its basic burger price of 39 cents, the company spends no money stamping its name on napkins and cups. It doesn't even advertise.

"All we need is that sign out there," said Brimus. "Everybody in Midland knew we were here even before we opened."

The idea behind The Hamburger Place is that the fast-food industry has strayed from its roots as a purveyor of cheap, convenient food. By keeping volume high and expenses low, the theory goes, The Hamburger Place can sell basically the same food at lower prices than the competition.

"We're just trying to give people value," said Brimus.

The no-frills approach precludes the expanded menus that other fast-food emporiums have adopted. No chicken nuggets or breakfast specials here — the emphasis is on the traditional burgers, fries and sodas.

"I think we're a definite threat" to the competition, said Brimus. "They're going to have to do something."

Another Hamburger Place will be opening soon — not too far from McDonald's.

New motor bank formally opened

Dedication ceremonies for Citizens Bank and Trust Company's new motor bank were held Thursday morning, with Mayor Calvin Whatley cutting the ribbon and a donation for the bank to the United Way 1984 campaign the first official transaction.

Vintage cars owned by V.E. "Skeet" Wagener and Gene Gates passed through the center lanes of the motor bank during the ceremonies to contrast the old with the new, modern facility.

Gold Coats and bank officers watched as the mayor assisted Steve Jones, president of Citizens Bank and Trust, with the ribbon-cutting, following a prayer of dedication by the Rev. Claude Cone, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

The bank's donation to the United Way was presented to Chuck White, United Way board chairman.

Located west of the main bank building, the new facility covers a half-block, bounded by Francis on the north, Somerville on the west and Kingsmill on the south. Completely self-contained, the structure is faced with white brick to match the main bank building.

The motor bank, under the management of Doris Foster, assistant cashier, consists of eight remote drive-up windows for retail customers, two commercial lanes and one lane with an automated teller machine.

The retail and commercial lanes are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. The automated teller machine is open around the clock seven days a week.

The new motor bank combines the best in automation, yet allows individual attention for customers by providing personal contact with bank personnel.

Following the dedication ceremony Thursday, guests were invited inside to tour the new facilities.

Juvenile officer Hall and wife honored during Police Week

Juvenile Officer Kenneth E. Hall is being honored as an officer of the day this week by the Pampa Police Department in observance of National Police Week activities. Chief J. J. Ryzman announced.

A graduate of Wayland Baptist University, Hall has been with the department since November, 1982. A Pampa native, he spent four years with the U.S. Navy.

Hall worked 11 years with the Plainview Police Department prior to moving back to Pampa. He has had numerous specialized schools in law enforcement training.

His wife Carolyn was recently presented an Award for Service to Mankind by Chief Ryzman.

The award is presented to a wife of a public safety officer "who is called upon each day to give her loved ones special consideration and dedication," the special certificate notes.

The honor acknowledges the role of the wife of a law enforcement officer and "the great demand and energy to live with danger of your husband's profession and the sacrifice you must endure."

Chief Ryzman presented Mrs. Hall the award Monday in the offices of the police department.

The Halls have three girls.

Police officers will have displays set up at the Pampa Mall from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday for public viewing. Displays will include weapons, drug paraphernalia, crime prevention materials, Neighborhood Watch program and a patrol car. Ryzman said.

In addition, films will be shown on drug problems and other aspects of police work. Pamphlets and other information will be available for the public. Balloons and suckers will be given to children while supplies last, Ryzman said.

KENNETH E. HALL

CAROLYN HALL

Fingerprinting of children will be available for the department's Identakid program. Parents will be able to keep the fingerprint copies in case they are needed to locate missing children or kidnap victims.

Four area high schools set graduation ceremonies tonight

A procession of hot, stiff-collared robes and wobbly mortarboards is underway at area high schools, but to nearly 400 area seniors eyeing their diplomas, it's worth all the pomp and circumstance.

Seniors at Groom, Mobeetie, Wheeler and Canadian will have commencement tonight.

Groom High School commencement will be at 8 p.m. at the school gym. Sixteen seniors are slated to receive diplomas. Valedictorian for the 1984 Groom class is Tracy Britten. Salutatorian is Rebecca Ruth Bridges. No commencement speaker is scheduled, although the valedictorian and salutatorian will give short speeches.

Claude D. Kezer, professor of language arts at Southwestern Oklahoma State University, will be featured speaker for the Mobeetie commencement at 8:30 p.m. at the Mobeetie gymnasium. Valedictorian Dennis Stuart and Salutatorian Jamee Batton will deliver speeches. Eight seniors are slated to graduate. The seniors will share their commencement ceremonies with the eighth graders.

Otis Sanders, public information officer at SWOSU, will address the Wheeler High school Commencement, 8 p.m. at the Wheeler auditorium. 33 seniors are expected. Valedictorian is Denise Gilbert. Salutatorian is Kristi Pierce.

Canadian High School will graduate 57 seniors at 8 p.m. No commencement speaker is scheduled. Valedictorian is Beth Ramp. Salutatorian is Courtney Krehbiel.

Pampa High School will hold its commencement at 8 p.m. May 24 at the McNeely Field House. No guest speaker is slated. 1984 Pampa High School Valedictorian is Parrish Potts. Salutatorian is Anita Byars. Nearly 200 seniors are expected. Vesper services are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the M.K. Brown Auditorium. Speaker for the service will be Father Joseph Stabile of St. Vincent dePaul Catholic Church.

Commencement at Lefors is also scheduled for 8 p.m. May 24. Valedictorian is Tana Lou Trusty. Salutatorian is Mary Catherine McDowell. Thirteen seniors are slated to graduate. Commencement speaker is Harry Youngblood. Baccalaureate is scheduled for 8 p.m. Sunday. Gene Gee is scheduled speaker.

White Deer commencement is set for 7:30 p.m. May 25. Valedictorian Kay Ford and salutatorian Tina Ford are among 36 seniors scheduled for graduation.

Seniors from two high schools are already out.

Miami High School held commencement for 12 seniors Thursday. Haley Clark is the valedictorian. James Crouch is salutatorian.

McLean High School graduated its 33 seniors May 11. Salutatorian Bryan Smitherman received the first annual $4,000 Madge Page Scholarship. Valedictorian is Alan Patman.

Lions meeting party at 8:30 p.m. at the Northgate Inn.

Activities Saturday will begin at 7:30 a.m. with a Sight-Saver breakfast at the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn for Lions and their wives, sponsored by the Lions Hi-Plains Eye Bank.

Lions Clubs members will have a second business session at 9 a.m. in the Starlight Room, called to order by Lt. Gov. Hal Ochsner, who will be the incoming district governor.

Business items will include reports by committees on rules, credentials, queens and resolutions. Nomination speeches will be heard for candidates for International District representatives, district governor, lieutenant governor and directors of Hi-Plains Eye Bank. Reports will be given by deputy district governors and the zone chairman.

The convention city for 1985 will be announced.

At 12:30 p.m. an award luncheon and parade of Lions Clubs queens will be held at the Starlight Room.

Elections will be conducted from 1:30 to 4 p.m. in the Emerald Room at Coronado Inn. A Necrology Service will be held at 3 p.m. in the Starlight Room.

A reception for Justice will begin at 4 p.m. in the Biarritz Club at Coronado Inn. Also to be honored at the reception are Tunnell, Ochsner, past International Director Ed Flood and district cabinet members.

The district queen's contest will be held at 5 p.m. at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The District Governor's Banquet will be at 7:30 p.m., followed by the Governor's Ball at 10 p.m. Both will be in the Heritage Room at the auditorium.

Saturday activities for the wives include a continental breakfast and style show at 9 a.m. at the Biarritz Club. From 10:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. the women may attend a pen and ink or glass class, a color analysis or a bridge party or view a jewelry display, all at the Coronado Inn. Treasure hunt activities also will continue.

From 2 to 3:30 p.m. the women may attend a class on stencil art on fabric or a twister bead demonstration in addition to the color analysis, jewelry display and the treasure hunt.

Queen candidates will have a buffet breakfast from 8 to 9 a.m. Saturday at the Barbed Wire Restaurant. Personal interviews will be conducted with judges in the Green Room at the auditorium from 9:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. A rehearsal will be held from 2:45 to 4 p.m.

Lions Clubs members are expected to attend from Pampa, Amarillo, Borger, Canyon, Hereford, Phillips, Dumas, Howardwick and other area cities.

The district convention is being sponsored by the Pampa Noon and the Pampa Evening Lions Clubs.

The Convention Committee includes Mike Clark, Jack Gindorf and Richard Morgan, co-chairmen; Bob Lyle and A.C. Malone, queens contest; John Kendall, Garland Nichols and Ben Woodington, golf tournament; Ron and Jo Love, ladies activities; and Dr. Ralph Depee, transportation.

Others are Harold and Cile Taylor, decorations; Bill Ivy, hotel reservations; Bob and Susan Finney, governor's banquet; John Locke, registration; and Ed Wiens, tickets.

TEXAS / REGIONAL

Near-complete solar eclipse expected

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — On May 30, when the sun fades and twilight arrives at midmorning in South Texas, astronomers predict they will witness the most spectacular solar eclipse in decades.

The eclipse will begin about 9:30 a.m. peak about 10:50 a.m. and end shortly after noon.

"This will be the best total eclipse that will occur for decades as far as the United States is concerned," said Dr. Ed Barker in a telephone interview from the McDonald Observatory in West Texas, where he is a research associate.

Scientists say that although the eerie phenomenon

"You don't get many chances to observe something like this," said Dr. Lionel D. Hewett, a Texas A&M physics professor and astronomer who is taking a group of about a dozen students south to the mountains near Ciudad Victoria in Mexico to view the eclipse.

Through special telescopes, the students will see a blazing ring of sunlight surrounding the smaller dark sphere of the intervening moon, a spectacle most people only see in pictures.

Hewett stressed in a telephone interview from his office in Kingsville that the eclipse should not be looked at directly or through binoculars, telescopes or any type of optical glass, since the sun's light can permanently damage the retina of the eye.

Instead, a homemade pinpoint projection system should be used to watch the eclipse. Astronomy clubs or astronomy teachers can provide information on how to make a pinpoint projection card.

While amateur astronomers are watching in wide-eyed wonder, scientists at the McDonald Observatory will be busily gathering data on the outer regions of the sun, the corona.

"You can't normally see the corona because of the surface brightness of the sun," Barker said. The eclipse allows scientists to study the motion, temperature and density of gases at the sun's edge.

Solar eclipses occur about twice a year, but since 80 percent of the earth is covered by water, the eclipse track, or center line, usually falls somewhere at sea.

The path of this eclipse will pass across the Gulf of Mexico into Louisiana and up through Virginia in the southern states, the eclipse will appear as complete as in Mexico.

"This will be the best solar eclipse we've had here in many years," said Gordon McLerran, a member of the Corpus Christi Astronomical Society. "It will be impressive to observe."

"It will become twilight at midmorning." In Corpus Christi, the sun will be 90 to 95 percent obscured by the mid-morning moon, McLerran said.

No school today in Santa Anna - again

SANTA ANNA, Texas (AP) — There was no school today in Santa Anna.

But that's no surprise to the 390 students in the school system. They have not been to class on a Friday this month. Or last month. Or the month before that.

For the second year now, Santa Anna, 22 miles west of Brownwood, has used a four-day school week during the spring.

"Teachers like it, kids like it, and there have been no problems with it," Superintendent R.C. Smith told the Abilene Reporter-News.

The Texas Education Agency has no objections with it, he said, so long as the school gets in the required 175 days of class. Graduation will be May 25, which is no later than usual. To make up for the days of class missed on Fridays, the school did not have a spring break.

"This is one of the ways of solving Mr. Perot's complaint of students missing school," Smith said, referring to H. Ross Perot, the outspoken chairman of the governor's committee studying Texas public schools. Perot has criticized schools for allowing students to miss class.

As a result of the four-day week, attendance has been up, the superintendent told the Reporter-News.

Students are missing fewer classes because of University Interscholastic League events held on Fridays, he said, and there is less temptation to "play hooky," which usually occurs on Fridays.

The four-day week began in response to spring UIL events such as track, golf, tennis and literary meets that were causing students to miss class.

most on Fridays.

"In a school our size, with about 100 in high school, a track meet for boys and girls takes about 50 kids and two teachers away from school," Smith said. "Consequently, we were unable to hold much class."

The four-day week produced some surprises, he said. On their weekday off, teachers schedule doctors' appointments, and students schedule dentist visits. Because school buses are not needed for their daily routes on Fridays, Santa Anna has enough buses to take students on out-of-town UIL trips.

Although the four-day week was implemented to cut down absenteeism in high school, the innovation was applied to all grades.

Drought-stricken cattlemen selling herds

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Many South Texas cattlemen, faced with drought conditions, high interest rates and increasing prices for feed and ranch supplies, are being forced to sell off their herds, one veteran cattle buyer says.

Dr. Ben Hopson says bankers "should understand that cattlemen are in a real emergency situation," while Hopson's son, who raises cattle, warns that the industry may never fully recover from its current woes.

Webb and Zapata County ranchers also still feel the effects of last winter's freeze which destroyed grazing pastures and vegetation.

"There has not been enough rain since to revive the grass and brush," said Alfredo Vidaurri of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Laredo.

Cattle have nowhere to forage for food and 10 to 15 percent of the cattle now being sold at auction are weak and undernourished," said Hopson.

"We are now in the most drastic situation in the cattle business that I can remember," he said. "Range conditions have never been worse."

The light, scattered showers of the last two days have done little to help, he said.

Hopson said ranchers, who at first were selling off mature cattle rather than letting them starve on the parched range, "now are selling their breeding stock."

He estimated that 50 percent of the breeding herds in Webb County have already been liquidated.

Hopson's son, Ben, who grazes about 70 of his own cows on leased land, said the cattle industry may never recover from the current crisis.

"We had a drought about eight years ago and we've never recovered from that," the younger Hopson said, adding that Webb County once grazed more cattle than any other county in the country.

The younger Hopson said South Texas ranchers are experiencing the same difficulty West Texas cattlemen have had since the drought began last year.

Cattlemen who lose their herds may have a hard time getting back in the business, he said.

"Cattle prices next year will be extremely high. It will be almost prohibitive for people to get back in the business," he said.

"It looks like I'm gonna have to sell out," the younger Hopson said. "I've built myself a future and I'm sorry to see it end."

Student upset shoots girlfriend, kills self

HOUSTON (AP) — A high school student suspended for fighting with his girlfriend last week returned to the building with a pistol, wounded the girl, then killed himself with a shot through the head, officials said.

Christopher Ross, 18, was pronounced dead at Booker T. Washington High School of a 25-caliber pistol wound Thursday morning.

Shon Carper, 17, was in stable condition at Hermann Hospital early today with a gunshot wound in her side.

Rose Marie Ross said her son was given permission to return to school Thursday after assistant principal Herman Mabrie told him "he and Shon shouldn't have anything to do with each other."

Students said the two fought in a school hallway May 11 and Ross ripped a necklace from Ms. Carper's neck.

Ross apparently was carrying the pistol as he talked with Mabrie, school spokeswoman Geri Konigsberg said.

"He walked directly to that class," she said. Houston homicide detective Danny Moorman said Ross "walked up the stairs with a friend, and he said, 'You know, I'm going to kill that woman.'"

Moorman said the friend told him Ross "had said that before."

Police discovered a suicide note in Ross' pocket in which he declared his love for Ms. Carper and expressed the hope that she would always remember him.

AUSTIN (AP) — A New Mexico prison official reportedly in line for the director's post at the Texas Department of Corrections has met with Gov. Mark White.

But Ray Procnunier, deputy secretary of the New Mexico Corrections Department, said through a spokesman Thursday he would have no comment on whether he wants the job.

The Dallas Times Herald quoted unnamed sources as saying that Procnunier is the first choice of the Board of Corrections search committee looking for a new director for Texas' 36,000-inmate system.

The newspaper also reported that Lane McCotter of Leavenworth, Kan., might be recommended as deputy director. White said he has talked in person with Procnunier and McCotter, identified by White Only tubes and canoes are being used because the currents are too narrow for the big commercial rafts, Ms. Walls said.

"People are still coming off the river and having a good time," she said. "But if it doesn't rain soon and they have to decrease the output, I don't know what will happen."

The low level of the Guadalupe also affects the Comal River, which flows into the Guadalupe. When the Guadalupe is low, the spring-fed Comal River drains faster, said Rusty Brandt of Camp Warnecke Resorts.

Brandt said the resort might lose some people if the drought continues.

Father of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen allowed to import 'forbidden' tree

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Agriculture Department has allowed the father of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to import a species of palm tree that usually is forbidden in Texas.

Lloyd Bentsen Sr. of McAllen was allowed to bring in a load of Cocosplumosus palm trees because he "asked for it," assistant commissioner Ron White said Thursday.

The ornamental palm tree species Cocosplumosus is listed on a state quarantine list as a "related (secondary) host" of lethal yellowing disease, which attacks palm trees.

At least five other people have asked for permission to bring in the species, but Alvin Ashorn, the department's agriculture director said, "We haven't decided yet whether we are going to grant any additional permits or not."

Ashorn said the trees imported by Bentsen should not pose any risk to Texas palm trees because they have been certified as disease-free by Florida agriculture officials.

"Right now, we are not issuing any additional permits that can change," Ashorn told the capitol bureau of the Harlingen Valley Morning Star.

The agriculture department must grant a special permit before plants listed as "related carriers" on a quarantine list may be imported into the state.

"Primary carriers," which may actually have a disease, may not be brought into the state.

"This one was granted because somebody asked for it," White said of Bentsen's permit. He said the department considers several factors in deciding whether to grant a permit.

"Any time we make an exception like this, we have to weigh several things," he told the Star. "One of the things we have to weigh is how long ago was this thing passed? Is the information it is based on still the best information we have?"

The lethal yellowing quarantine list was drawn up in 1975.

"What you're trying to do is to protect the existing plants," said White, "so we also need to weigh the scientific evidence as to whether there is a real risk."

Ashorn said this is the second time that he can remember a permit being granted to bring into Texas a load of palm trees that are on the quarantine list.

"I think maybe there was one other occasion several years ago when some palms were going to be placed on the inside of a restaurant," said Ashorn. "I'm not sure if it was the same species."

White said the department is "trying to poll the scientific people in the state as to whether the old quarantine is accurate and valid."

"We may grant others (permits)," said White. "We are still telling people when they call to make an application, and we wouldn't do that if we were not considering granting other applications."

Persons who wish to import a plant that is on a quarantine list must follow a certain procedure, said Ashorn.

"One, they have to make a request to us in writing. On that basis, we will decide whether to grant a permit," he said. "We will notify Florida officials that this person is approved by us, and tell them how many plants they can bring in."

White said he has talked in person with Procnunier and McCotter, identified by White

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coving commandment.

Government grabs role of parents

You've heard of Big Brother government. Now there's Big Mother, telling women they don't have to get into motherhood.

The state of Wisconsin is using television commercials to tell women they don't have to have sexual intercourse with men. And you may have thought the government had already appointed itself to tell people just about everything.

Wisconsin's state Division of Health, aided by a $66,143 federal grant, is running 30-second TV messages in which a young woman advises viewers. "If you want to say 'no,' say so."

Is this profound message going to come as a great surprise to that state's young women? Do you really think they previously believed they had no choice in the matter? Are we to assume that young ones go ignorant into the world until the government can catch their attention between TV canary-food commercials?

Perhaps you've got to have a bright, flashy message on TV to carry some weight with young people that's more authoritative than what Mom or Dad could say. Who better to provide such flash and little substance than government.

Government puts on a pretty impressive show of force every day, telling us it knows best about everything. Today it's sex-advice time. Parents who defer to this latest amazing enterprise invite still more Big Motherism.

Have we reached the point where government assumes that the family can't adequately advise young people on self-discipline and that government has an obligation to use taxpayers' money to fill that role?

You might say government is already into the sex business in a big way with extensive funding of contraception and abortion. Perhaps Wisconsin is just a gentle reminder that people are not yet commanded by government indulge in activities that lead to the use of these services. But that's probably not the case. It is just another instance of government thinking it knows best.

The way the state likes to usurp the parental role, it often seems the only thing government needs parents for it to produce babies to group up and be the state's loyal servants. But, Mom and Dad, you've heard about test-tube conceptions and surrogate parents. Maybe before too long the state won't even need you to produce loyal subjects.

Enjoy being parents while you can, before government decided you're too much of a fumbler to fill that role.

El Salvador chews up the best

Alvaro Magana, the recently retired provisional president of El Salvador, is not much more than 5 feet tall.

Thomas R. Pickering, the U.S. ambassador, is well over 6.

On a swing through El Salvador shortly before the first round of presidential voting, I chanced to observe the two in whispered conversation in the courtyard of the presidential palace.

The image of the tall American looming over the diminutive Salvadoran seemed at the time to say everything about the relationship between the two countries.

It still does, and it came immediately to mind when Sen. Jesse Helms threw his ideological body block at the administration in the matter of the Salvadoran election.

Actually, the North Carolina arch-Republican didn't have it completely right when he accused the administration of favoring Jose Napoleon Duarte over Robert d'Aubuisson. The real U.S. presidential favorite had not been either of them but Francisco "Chachi" Guerrero of the National Conciliation Party.

He was the man our men on the spot saw as safest, acceptable to the military - unlike Duarte - and to the U.S. Congress - unlike d'Aubuisson.

Chachi's chances, however, were history well before Helms got the White House and State Department in such a lather.

But as for Helms' assertion that the administration manipulated the Salvadoran political process, what can truthfully be said except guilty as charged? And it predates the tenure of Helms' target, Ambassador Pickering.

Robert White, our man down there after the 1979 coup by reformist officers from which the present troubles can roughly be dated, was continually confronting the military's old guard who were effectively sabotaging efforts toward reform.

White was an experienced foreign service professional who had previously served as ambassador to Paraguay. He leaned persistently and at times publicly on the military to curb the excesses of its own personnel, specifically the "death squads."

His interference was unpopular with the officers and worse with their civilian allies. At one point White was literally besieged in the fortified embassy residence by a rioting mob and eventually broke out in his fortified limousine.

White, whose efforts had been directed toward minimizing armed conflict and building up a strong political center, was out as soon as the Reagan administration came in determined to seek a military solution in Central America.

The new ambassador, Deane R. Hinton, was likewise a professional with experience in Central America and Europe. He knew what he was getting into, both in the Salvadoran snakepit and the implications of Washington's policy shift.

He went along with the latter - which the hardliners in the Salvadoran establishment took as encouragement - until, in November 1982, he urged leading businessmen that the right's "gorilla" tactics had to be curbed or U.S. aid forfeited.

Not many months later, Hinton was out. So was his boss Thomas O. Enders, another through pro, whose hardline in two years as assistant secretary for Inter-American Affairs had softened somewhat to advocacy of a "two-track" approach: Continue the military pressure but also push for negotiations with the rebels.

Pickering, who had previously served as ambassador to Nigeria and to Jordan, has maintained a much lower profile than his predecessors and may, in part for that reason, have been more effective in dealing with the feuding Salvadoran factions.

But, in the end El Salvador, if not Jesse Helms, may still get Pickering.

It seems to have a way of chewing up some of our best men.

Today in History

Today is Friday, May 18, the 139th day of 1984. There are 227 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 18, 1860, a one-term former congressman from Illinois, Abraham Lincoln, was nominated for president on the third ballot at the Republican National Convention in Chicago.

On this date:

Ten years ago: India set off its first atomic blast, becoming the world's sixth nuclear power.

Five years ago: A federal jury in Oklahoma City awarded $10.5 million to the estate of Karen Silkwood, who was contaminated by radiation while working for Kerr-McGee.

One year ago: The House of Representatives voted to cite former EPA official Rita Lavelle for contempt for failing to comply with a subpoena to testify.

Today's birthdays: Former New York Senator Jacob Javits is 80 years old. Singer Perry Como is 72. Pope John Paul II is 64. Actor Bill Macy is 62. Sportscaster Jack Whitaker is 60. Actor Pernell Roberts and New Hampshire Sen. Warren Rudman are 54. Actor Robert Morse is 53. Actor and TV executive Dwayne Hickman - TV's "Dobie Gillis" - is 50. Baseball Hall of Famer Brooks Robinson is 47. Baseball player Reggie Jackson is 38. And actor James Stephens is 33.

"Surely you jest."

Experience breeds isolationism

Americans understand political rhetoric: our adversaries in the world don't always.

The campaign oratory of these next months could exacerbate some of our world problems.

Our nation has rarely been more at peace with itself; socially accommodating, economically vigorous, these are our salad days.

We are again in position to lead the world by example. Almost nowhere in the world does anybody want to be a communist anymore. Not even in the U.S.S.R. The world is looking for something better. We have something better. But it doesn't sound like that when our partisan diatribes get translated abroad.

The Soviet Union is unsettled. The new head red, Chernenko, has not yet won a consensus.

Moscow has been buying the allegiance of Eastern Europe with cheap (subsidized) oil - but Soviet oil reserves are fast depleting.

The communist's outermost outpost, Cuba, is costing Moscow five to six billion dollars a year.

The U.S.S.R. is bogged down in its own Vietnam - in Afghanistan - debilitating, expensive.

Soviet agriculture remains a disappointment.

So to keep the minds of the Soviet people off what they do not have, Moscow must divert public attention to an increased fear of us. There is no way he could make concessions to us while much of his home constituency is hungry and his own authority is un-consolidated.

That is why any campaign clamor for a nuclear freeze, for example, is unrealistic. Chernenko would not dare agree with us on anything right now, even if it were to his country's advantage to do so. He needs a "bogey man" with which to rally homefolks. Understandingly, he can use some of our campaign time name - calling to create that image.

Our nation's former CIA Chief, Admiral Stansfield Turner, thinks we should be learning from Soviet mistakes.

As the French and British before them, the Soviets are weakened, not strengthened, by overextension.

Admiral Turner notes that our reach exceeded our grasp in Korea, Vietnam, Lebanon.

He fears we risk further humiliation in Latin America where - because we finance and solidify dictatorships - we create a disincentive to necessary reforms.

And as our political campaigners make what's covert - overt - exposing our intervention down there - we furnish ammunition to our country's detractors.

Admiral Turner - despite his background in NATO and in Intelligence - sounds almost isolationist.

Enough observation and experience does tend to encourage that.

Saving kids from Donald Duck

If your child is exhibiting anti-social and aggressive, prone to violence behavior, it could be that your child is watching too many cartoons on television.

The National Coalition on Television Violence has issued a report warning that there is too much violence portrayed in television cartoons. The coalition singled out the Walt Disney character Donald Duck, warning that a child who watched too much Donald Duck might get the irresistible urge to go out and knock over a liquor store every time it rains.

Frankly, I wondered how I was able to escape growing up to be an aggressive, violent person, considering all the cartoons I used to watch as a kid.

Take Popeye, for instance. Practically every Popeye cartoon I watched had the same plot. Popeye and Bluto would via Olive Oyl's affections and wind up in a large fight.

Bluto would get the best of Popeye in the beginning, swinging him around by the legs and banging his head against the nearest wall. Popeye, of course, eventually would rally, pop open a can of spinach, pour it down his gullet unchewed, and then commence to thrash Bluto within an inch of his life.

Imagine the message children get from all this - that if somebody messes with your baby, it's OK to take violent steps to prevent further messing.

Think of the domestic quarrels and love triangle melees this eventually caused when these children grew up.

"We're not sure what happened here," the policeman is telling the reporter on the 6 o'clock news, "but we found this big guy with a beard lying on the floor of the apartment about half dead."

"Are there any clues as to who might have perpetrated this violence?" the reporter asks.

"Only thing we have to go on," answers the policeman, "is we found empty spinach cans scattered all over the room."

Blow for blow, however, the Road Runner cartoon series, one of my all-time favorites, likely had more violence than any other of the animated shorts that were popular when I was growing up. Road Runner cartoons always had the same plot, too - Wiley E. Coyote going to any lengths to kill the Road Runner so he could eat him.

The measures Wiley E. Coyote went to in his always unsuccessful attempts to pull off this heinous crime included any number of explosive devices, dropping huge boulders on the Road Runner's head from high above on a cliff, running over the swift bird with a steamroller and catching him in an Official Roadrunner Trap, ordered special delivery from the Acme Trap Co.

My boyhood friend and idol, Weyman C. Wannamaker Jr., a great American, was quite a Road Runner fan, too, and so affected was he by this continuing parade of violence that when his father sent him out to kill a chicken for Sunday dinner, instead of simply wringing the chicken's neck, as was the customary method of chicken killing, Weyman tied a cherry bomb around the chicken's neck and lit the fuse.

All that was left of the chicken was a scattering of feathers, and the Wannamaker family had to eat a can of Spam for Sunday dinner.

Now that the National Coalition on Television Violence has filed its report, perhaps violence will be decreased in future cartoons and such acts as described above will cease. Parents and chickens everywhere, say thanks.

Five killed in clinic shooting

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Police in Matamoros continued the hunt for six gunmen who stormed a health clinic, killing five people and wounding a doctor during an unsuccessful gangland hit of a reputed organized crime kingpin.

Federal, state and municipal investigators, who had joined in the search, had no solid clues but believed the six fatigue-clad assassins who swept through the Clinica Raya at about 7:30 a.m. Thursday had returned to the United States.

The target of the bloody attack, Casimiro Espinosa, 31, escaped unharmed when he threw himself under a bed. Espinosa was in the clinic being treated for a bullet wound suffered in a shootout earlier in the week, authorities said.

Espinosa's sister, Norma Emilia Espinosa-Campos, 35, was killed as she shielded her brother from the gunmen, said Inspector Ernesto Danache, Matamoros police chief. The guard outside Espinosa's door, Nestor Torres Torres, 25, also was killed.

Bullets from automatic weapons pierced the walls beside Espinosa's bed. One of them struck and killed Virginia Sifuentes, 34, who was resting in a bed in the next room.

Two other clinic patients, Victor Raul

Revolcado, 35, and his son, Norberto, 17, being treated in a room down the hall, also died from bullet wounds, Danache said.

Dr. David Arrevelo, who was working in the clinic at the time the gunmen burst in, was listed in grave condition at Matamoros General Hospital, a clinic spokeswoman said.

After the shooting, Espinosa was transferred to his elaborate two-story home across the street from the clinic. Armed guards were posted at the iron gate in front of the home Thursday afternoon. Four police officers and private guards stood at the front door. Six other officers guarded the house from the roof.

Police did not say why they were guarding the house.

Espinosa was featured earlier this year in a series written by the Brownsville Herald on car theft. He was portrayed as the kingpin of an organization that smuggles stolen cars from the United States into Mexico.

Police fanned out throughout the city, searching for the six young gunmen who fled the scene in a pickup truck, a Plymouth valiant and Mercury Marquis.

At the time of the attack, Espinosa was in the clinic recovering from a gunshot wound to the chest that authorities said he received at the home of an acquaintance last week. Police said he fled the scene of that incident in his 1984 Chevrolet, and drove several blocks before losing control of his car and crashing into a tree.

Police said they had recovered six pair of fatigues, two of the getaway vehicles, three rifles, three automatic weapons and six pistols. They did not specify where the weapons had been found.

Markings on the weapons and clothing indicate they originated in Houston and Brownsville and have led police to believe the gunmen might be from those cities, said Salvador del Tor, Matamoros district attorney.

But he said police had no leads on the identity of the gunmen and made an appeal for help.

Del Tor said it's possible the gunmen already had escaped into the United States and said he had alerted Brownsville authorities.

"We don't want to alarm the public, but we are asking everyone to help out and hope to have some results soon," del Tor said.

He said gangland-style killings "were snowballing" in Matamoros, but declined to say how many had died in related incidents since the first of the year.

'If' is complex in consequences

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States could have a healthy and competitive steel and automotive industry with many more jobs than now exist if...

There is always an "if," it seems, and while this one is simple in concept it is complex in consequences. The if is this: If workers are willing to accept lower wages.

The very notion sounds like a turn-of-the-century (the last one) management concept, but as explained by Professor William Dunkelberg it may take on more rational tones.

As things stand, says Dunkelberg, who teaches economics at Purdue University, workers in autos and steel earn an average $26 to $30 an hour in total compensation, more than twice the average compensation in the entire manufacturing sector, and even higher when compared to average compensation in all jobs in the economy.

"Lower wages don't mean poverty," he states. "Wages would still be higher than the average for the economy as a whole."

Hourly compensation in many smokestack companies during the 1970s rose faster than the inflation rate. At the same time, profits in the 1960s to less than 300,000 today.

"The workers who lost their jobs certainly did not find other work at equal pay," Dunkelberg observes.

And it is a fallacy, he contends, that foreigners can build technologically superior facilities.

We could, he continues, try to solve this problem by protecting our industries from competition by means of domestic content bills, import duties, import restrictions, taxes on imports and the like.

But he says one consequence of doing so would be to force the American consumer to pay more for a product than the market would ask under competitive conditions.

All this, he reasons, "to save a few of the highest paid jobs in the economy."

Lower, but still higher than average wages, he says, would mean old industries might be able to invest in more modern technology.

Protectionism, in contrast, still leaves industry without the incentive to invest in modern technology and otherwise become competitive and more capable of enlarging the job market.

We don't need a debate about who is responsible for the current predicament, he says, adding that "management has made its share of mistakes."

What we do need, he argues, is a recognition of the alternatives.

"Do we want more jobs at lower — but still excellent — pay?"

and, at the same time, know we deepened our personal friendship," Reagan said.

De la Madrid said, "We have made progress in coming to a better understanding of each other and also in keeping each other better informed and bringing about certain solutions."

The two leaders held an hour-long breakfast meeting and then spoke to a closed White House gathering of Mexican and American legislators. The White House released a text of their remarks. Reagan and de la Madrid also met Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mexico and the United States are known to have significant differences on Central American policy, with Mexico considering that the problem's roots are in socioeconomic inequality and that it only is worsened by increasing the foreign military presence in the area.

The Reagan administration blames Cuba and the Soviet Union, acting through Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, for spreading unrest in the region.

Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama form the Contadora group that has been meeting since January 1983 in a slow moving effort to find a peaceful solution for the region's tensions.

"The essence of the question is to guarantee a negotiated solution," a top official said here before de la Madrid's departure, speaking

De la Madrid returns to Mexico after first visit to Washington

MEXICO CITY (AP) —

President Miguel de la Madrid returned home Thursday from his first official visit to the United States, saying "the interests of Mexico have been protected."

The president spoke only briefly on arrival at the presidential hangar at Mexico City International Airport at 12:42 p.m. Thursday — 2:42 p.m. EDT — after his four-day trip to Washington.

He said he would make a full report to the nation Friday, including information on his separate visit to Canada from May 6-9 that preceded the trip to Washington.

The president said he was satisfied that a broad range of problems had been discussed in Washington, on international policy as well as U.S.-Mexican issues.

In Washington, de la Madrid met with President Reagan and addressed a joint meeting of the U.S. Congress.

Public interest in his visit was dominated by the differences between the United States and Mexico on Central American policy, although Mexican officials had said they hoped economic issues would be a priority.

At a farewell meeting Thursday, de la Madrid and Reagan agreed their talks had improved mutual understanding on Central America and other issues.

"I believe that we both sharpened our perceptions to reporters on condition that he not be identified further. "There's still a possibility for negotiation."

But he said that once violence in the form of a regional war is unleashed it will be harder to control and the possibility for negotiation must be taken advantage of while there is still time.

Mexico is the United States' third-largest trading partner after Canada and Japan.

But it had to cut imports drastically because of the economic recession that hit in 1982 after the world oil glut and falling petroleum prices ended several years of unprecedented prosperity.

The Mexican economic crisis has affected U.S. merchants all along the other side of the 1,760-mile border between the two countries.

Winning gay contest costs medical student his job

DALLAS (AP) — Hospital officials say a 24-year-old medical technician was fired after his photograph appeared in two homosexual publications which were mailed anonymously to his supervisor.

Danny White, a pulmonary technician, was fired May 7 by Baylor University Medical Center, which is supported by the Southern Baptist Convention. The center is not affiliated with Baylor University in Waco.

Hospital officials said White's work was satisfactory, but he was fired for "behavior detrimental to the medical center."

Joyce Ross, a spokeswoman for the hospital, said it is against hospital policy to hire homosexuals.

White said Thursday that he was never informed of the policy and had worked at the hospital for four years. He said his photograph appeared in the Metro Times after he won $300 and a trophy for being the most attractive entrant in a contest sponsored by the Dallas Tavern Guild.

He said he was called into the administrator's office and shown a copy of the newspaper.

"They asked me if that was me, and I said yes," he said. "They asked if I was a homosexual. I told them no, because I didn't know what to say and I didn't want to lose my job."

Ms. Ross said White's photo appeared in two gay publications, which were mailed anonymously to the supervisor of the pulmonary department.

White said he was told to take a polygraph test or resign. He said he refused to take the polygraph test "on principle" and was fired the next day.

"It was common knowledge that I was gay. Everybody in the department knew. I didn't hide it but I didn't flaunt it either," he said.

Ms. Ross said White's homosexuality was "really secondary" to his photograph appearing in the gay publication, but she did not dispute his account of the firing.

"We maintain that homosexuality isn't an acceptable lifestyle," Ms. Ross said. "We feel this policy is acceptable to Baptist tradition."

"It's their business if they want to discriminate — I don't think they should — but I think they ought to tell people if they're going to carry out this policy," White said.

Ms. Ross said that "although it does not list specifically homosexuality" the policy is covered in a section of the employee handbook under the heading "Immediate Discharge."

"The section says that any employee may be discharged without notice when causing a significant problem for the medical center or when behaving in a manner detrimental to the medical center," she said.

White said he had contacted lawyers, but was told he had no recourse against the hospital because there is no law in Texas banning discrimination against homosexuals, so he asked the Dallas Gay Alliance to publicize the case.

"The alliance felt a public responsibility to do what Baylor hasn't done — tell people that when they apply there, they're doing so under a cloud if they're gay," said Bill Nelson, a spokesman for the alliance.

Leaders of the gay alliance said White's firing spotlights a major threat that homosexuals must face in deciding to "come out of the closet." Only in 10 U.S. cities — none of them in Texas — are there laws prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, they said.

White said he has not started looking for another job and plans to contact other lawyers, but wouldn't go back to work at Baylor even if he could.

"I don't want to work for a hospital that discriminates like that," he said.

Ms. Ross said no "witch hunt" for other gay employees is planned, but the facility will pursue action when homosexual behavior of an employee is made public.

Duarte says Nicaragua an obstacle to peace

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — El Salvador's President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte, en route to a meeting Saturday with President Reagan, accused Nicaragua of impeding peace in Central America by aiding Salvadoran guerrillas.

Duarte, a moderate Christian Democrat who takes office June 1, stopped in Honduras and Guatemala on Thursday. He travels to Costa Rica today and Washington on Saturday.

While in Honduras, Duarte said Nicaragua, by aiding leftist rebels fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government, presents a "serious obstacle" but "one which we are willing to confront with serenity and patience" in a quest for regional peace. He did not elaborate on his comments.

Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista junta accused anti-Sandinista rebels based in Costa Rica of attacking three border points, but a Costa Rican security official denied the allegation.

Earlier this week, Nicaragua and Costa Rica signed an agreement calling for a commission to monitor the border and suggest solutions to problems between the two countries.

The Reagan administration says Nicaragua funnels weapons and ammunition to the Salvadoran rebels.

Duarte began his Central American swing in Honduras, which fought a brief war with El Salvador in 1969 over border disputes. Mistrust has lingered between the two countries since then.

Nicaragua's Sandinista government has criticized Honduras for allowing a U.S. military buildup there and for letting rebels operate there in their fight to topple the Nicaraguan government.

In Guatemala, Duarte said of Nicaragua: "They have been helping the Salvadoran guerrillas... this is a clear declaration of intervention."

Duarte praised U.S. military aid to his country as "valuable and important" but once again ruled out the possibility that U.S. troops would go into combat in El Salvador.

During his stopover here, he met with Chief of State Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores and other officials.

In Honduras, he met with President Roberto Suazo Cordova and Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, chief of the armed forces.

At the end of the visit, Suazo Cordova and Duarte announced their intention "to work for the peace and common well-being of Central America, as a task that will require the maximum effort of governments disposed to favor the interests of their peoples."

Salvador's US-aided air force increasing factor in war

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran air force has developed with U.S. help from a collection of vintage aircraft at the start of the 4½-year-old civil war to an increasingly active support for the military's beleaguered ground troops.

"They are very good and very professional and have improved tremendously over a short period of time," said a U.S. official with direct knowledge of the air force's inner workings.

The air force's increasingly active role in the war mainly involves providing close-air support for ground troops, conducting reconnaissance and intelligence surveys, ferrying troops to the battle zones and evacuating the wounded.

The pilots, reportedly aided by intelligence gathered from U.S. Air Force aircraft flying over El Salvador from Honduras, have been able to pinpoint guerrilla locations in the countryside.

This foreign military analysts say, has gone a long way to keeping the guerrillas scattered and on the run, helping to prevent them from massing in recent weeks for major attacks against government forces.

But there also have been repeated accusations by the private, church-linked Human Rights Commission and by the rebels' clandestine radio that pilots have engaged in indiscriminate bombing of towns and villages. These accusations say the bombs have inflicted casualties on civilians, especially the "masas" — those thought to be giving food and support to the rebels.

Many peasants in the countryside talk about their terror at being caught in a bombardment. To many of them, the government and the war is as much represented by aircraft as anything else.

Leftist guerrillas once showed an Associated Press reporter bomb shelters dug into a hillside in an area they controlled. Asked how many people fit into one crude shelter, they replied jokingly: "10 — 50 when the bombs are falling."

U.S. officials deny the aircraft engage in indiscriminate bombing. They say any air strike near a populated area must first be approved by the Salvadoran air force chief of staff or the Defense Ministry.

But they acknowledge that civilians have been killed by aerial bombardments.

In perhaps the most dramatic recent incident, dozens of civilians were killed at the central town of Tenancingo when planes came to the aid of a ground unit last fall.

"There is no plan to go out and drop bombs, shoot at, otherwise do terrible things to non-combatants. Do non-combatants get hit? Yes, they do and there are a variety of reasons for that," said one knowledgeable Western observer, who spoke on condition he not be further identified.

U.S. officials also said no American personnel have flown on combat missions in Salvadoran aircraft. The United States currently has 88 military personnel in El Salvador, including 50 serving as trainers.

Salvadoran Defense Ministry officials refused repeated requests to talk about the air force.

Most of the aircraft used by the Salvadoran air force has been donated by the United States and most of the pilots have been trained by U.S. military personnel.

The mainstay aircraft is the A-37 "Dragonfly" attack plane, which carries a 7.62mm mini-gun in the nose and up to four bombs under each wing.

Currently there are 55 qualified pilots in the 1,500-man air force, which includes a 500-member paratroop battalion. The rest of the personnel are ground maintenance crews and administrative support, U.S. officials said.

U.S. officials estimate the air force inventory includes six A-37s, six Ourgans jet trainers, 21 Huey QH-1H helicopters, two Hughes 500 helicopters, five O-2 spotter planes, four UH-1H medevac helicopters, one C-123 transport plane and three vintage C-47 cargo planes, which were used as gunships in the Vietnam War.

Additionally, the air force has Arava cargo planes, Fouga jet trainers and a DC-6 cargo plane, Alboult and Lama helicopters, U.S. officials said they did not have specific figures on those aircraft.

Nearly all the pilots were trained in either the United States or at the U.S. Southern Command in Panama. Although in the past pilots flew both aircraft and helicopters, the trend now is to train them and flies several hours in a helicopter," the Western observer said.

Those training to fly aircraft first go to Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, where they learn English and basic aviation and then they go to one of five U.S. Air Force bases for additional training.

Altogether, they receive about 135 hours of flight instruction at an estimated cost of about $130,000 per person with the Salvadoran government paying the costs from U.S. funds it receives.

Reagan loses on nerve gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has persuaded Congress to approve billions of dollars for thousands of weapons as part of his record Pentagon buildup, but he still can't win approval for nerve gas, a weapon he says is "absolutely essential."

The House of Representatives voted 247-179 Thursday to reject a Defense Department request for $95 million in fiscal 1985 to build components for gas bombs and shells.

The vote came as the House worked its way through a huge bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend $285 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, the fourth year of Reagan's five-year blueprint to "rearm America."

Chemical weaponry is the only major new Reagan program Congress has rejected.

Although the Republican-dominated Senate still has yet to consider the nerve gas questions, the margin of defeat in the Democrat-controlled House likely spells defeat for the program.

That is what happened last year, when the House overwhelmingly rejected nerve gas and the Senate approved it by a single vote. The issue went to a House-Senate conference committee for resolution and the House ban prevailed because of the size of the opposition vote compared to the narrow Senate approval.

Reagan, in a letter to House members, said "it is absolutely essential that we act now" to authorize new nerve gas weapons and strengthen the U.S. hand in U.S.-Soviet talks aimed at eliminating chemical weapons.

"I share your revulsion" of chemical weapons, Reagan wrote, but he said new gas weapons are the only way to get Moscow to negotiate.

Rep. Beverly Byron, D-Md., said, "as long as we remain reticent to modernize, there is no clear incentive for the Soviets to negotiate."

The United States has not produced chemical weapons since 1969. The current proposal would construct so-called binary weapons, in which two non-lethal chemicals combine to form a gas shortly before the shell or bomb lands.

Rep. Ed Bethune, R-Ark., led the anti-chemical fight for the third year, urging the House to "keep the moral high ground" by not building chemical weapons at the same time Moscow is accused of using or supplying chemical weapons in Third World conflicts.

The House scheduled to enter the U.S. force in five years.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., led the fight against the Trident 2, arguing that it might be a first-strike weapon.

Many of the arguments heard against the Trident 2 were similar to anti-MX missile comments. On Wednesday, the House approved fewer than half the land-based MX weapons Reagan wants.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., called the Trident 2 a "first strike" weapon and thus a dangerous new entry into the nuclear balance.

But supporters countered the missile should be built because it would be put aboard submarines which are invulnerable to Soviet detection and thus assure that Moscow will never start a nuclear war.

Predicts House will approve rebel aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration official predicts the House will approve emergency military aid to El Salvador and undercover assistance to Nicaraguan rebels following the breakdown of negotiations with the Senate on key Central American spending issues.

"It will be a fight, but I think we can do it," William L. Schneider, undersecretary of state for security assistance, said after two days of talks by a House-Senate conference committee ended in disagreement Thursday.

Senate conferees continued to support the $62 million emergency appropriation for El Salvador and the $21 million in spending for the Nicaraguan guerrillas that were approved by the Republican-controlled Senate last month.

Conferees from the Democratic-controlled House, which has not voted to appropriate funds this year for either purpose, refused to go along with the Senate or to strike a compromise. This set the stacommittee on foreign operations, conceded that "we could lose on the House floor" on the Salvadoran issue, since the House voted 211-208 last week to authorize military aid to the Central American country.

But Democrats said they believe the House, which voted last year against the undercover operation in Nicaragua, remains opposed to assisting the guerrilla insurgency against the leftist Sandinista government.

The conferees met against a backdrop of new revelations concerning CIA activity in Central America, where the Reagan administration says U.S. aid is needed to prevent the leftist government of Nicaragua and Marxist-led rebels in El Salvador from spreading their influence.

Administration and congressional officials said the Reagan administration proposed using the CIA to secretly ship 14 helicopters to El Salvador's army, but the plan was abandoned after Democratic leaders of the House Intelligence Committee protested.

Two sources said six of the helicopters were to be armed, combat copters and the other eight were for transportation and medical evacuation. El Salvador now has about 20 helicopters. The sources, who declined to be identified, said the Intelligence Committee leaders objected to bypassing congressional appropriation procedures.

In another development in the debate over Central America, Senate leaders sent a letter to all senators counseling them to check with the Senate Intelligence Committee before divulging any intelligence information, regardless of where they obtain it.

The letter stemmed from Intelligence Committee complaints about a speech by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., saying the CIA had backed Jose Napoleon Duarte in his successful campaign for the Salvadoran presidency.

Long waiting list for Monterrey's American School

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — The clock ticks toward lunchtime but seventh graders Karsten Mendoza and David Santos appear oblivious to life around them.

The boys — one fair skinned, the other dark — are huddled over a laboratory table, their heads nearly touching as they explore the remains of a dissected frog.

Until last year, the New York-born Mendoza lived with his parents in Miami, Fla. Santos is from Monterrey.

Today, they share a frog, two languages, two cultures and a school.

This is Monterrey's American School, where students — Mexicans and Americans — learn reading, writing, arithmetic, a respect for one another and, most importantly for the majority, the English language.

They listen to two national anthems, pledge allegiance before two flags and learn "the best that both cultures have to offer," said School Board member Eric Gustafson.

"We really do live in two worlds," school Superintendent William Stockebrand said, referring to the obvious American influence on this northeastern Mexican city just a 2½-hour drive from Laredo and Reynosa in Texas.

As such, this school may be the closest to the U.S. border of any American school outside the United States. Most, at least at the start, were founded to provide American-style education to the children of U.S. nationals living abroad.

The private, non-profit system here was established in 1928 by two U.S. companies, American Metals and American Smelting and Refining, to provide education to their American employees' children.

The children of the companies' Mexican employees began attending the school in the early 1930s. Ten years later it was opened to the community and now is run by a foundation.

With the exception of a few high school courses and the required Spanish classes for Americans, all classes are taught in English.

Of the school's 1,400 students from nursery levels through senior high, 80 percent are Mexican and 17 percent are American. The remaining 3 percent come from other countries.

The school — which is accredited in the United States and Mexico — has a prestigious reputation for attracting the children of politicians and wealthy businessmen who later go to universities, many of them to the United States.

Its challenge, said Stockebrand, "is to educate the children of the current leadership of Monterrey and even of Mexico because someday they'll have to assume that leadership themselves."

Stockebrand is an American who holds a doctorate in educational administration from Temple University in Philadelphia, Pa.

Half-day English classes for 3- through 5-year-olds prepare Mexicans to enter first grade at the same level as Americans.

"The system seems to be working."

Based on annual achievement tests, American School students are one to two grade levels above the U.S. average and 99 percent go on to colleges and universities.

"I'm not saying we're exceptional in terms of private schools (in the United States), but this is a second language for a lot of these kids and they're performing as if they were native English speakers," Stockebrand said.

"The students here are not necessarily brighter than those in the States, but they take advantage of a good school and they succeed," said Sara Driver, 16, the first full-year exchange student from the school's sister system in Topeka, Kan.

Despite what one board member called the "broadening" exposure of learning in an intercultural atmosphere, students interviewed said they associate outside of school mostly with others of their own nationality.

"It's not that we are saying 'down with Americans' or they are saying 'down with Mexicans,'" said 17-year-old Enrique Zuniga.

MAYOR and his go-cart

Boy serves as mayor for unincorporated Texas hamlet

By ADRIENNE SOBOLAK

Rosenberg Herald-Coaster CRABB, Texas (AP) — Once upon a time — Sept. 10, 1983, if you want to get picky about it — the nine or so families comprising the population of Crabb rallied together to hold an election.

It wasn't a typical political race, marked by fiery speeches, lavish donations or truckloads of campaign literature. Technically, the seven or so days transpiring between the perception of the election and the actual event left little — if any — time for absentee balloting.

Nevertheless, the residents of the unincorporated hamlet took their constitutional duty seriously. Approximately 30 eligible voters stopped by Gonyo's Grocery that day to drop their handwritten ballots into the designated paper box.

And when the votes were officially tallied, Crabb, for the first time in history, had his very own mayor.

The new leader of Crabb is 11-year-old Brian Zimmerman, a sixth-grader at Lamar Junior High School. Brian explained, "Crabb wanted to have someone lead, but we never had a way to decide who. We tried to have elections before, but no one voted."

"When we had the election, there were only a few in town at the time, but people around the street thought it was a good idea. They helped organize it. There was a sign in the store, and we also used word-of-mouth."

"On the day of the election, we all gave speeches. There were James Sparks, me and Bill Peterson — they're both adults. I won because I gave a speech talking about how we need to incorporate to provide better services."

County services are OK. But it would be nice to have a city — I mean a village," he said, grinning apologetically, "if anything happened."

In analyzing his success, Brian attributed his political victory to dedication. "I try to get people to take it as seriously as I am. Some of the people who voted against me weren't happy to have a kid for mayor. I had to gain their respect."

He has been going by the philosophy, "If you respect other people, they'll respect you."

Fire extinguished on nuclear-powered sub

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A fire broke out on the nuclear submarine USS Guitarro while the vessel was submerged during a training exercise, but the blaze was quickly extinguished and there were no injuries, the Navy said today.

"Fires are always a serious matter (but) the Guitarro was never in danger of sinking," said Lt. Cmdr. Mel Sundin, a spokesman for the submarine force at Ballast Point in San Diego.

He said the fire was confined to the battery compartment, which supplies energy to the vessel while it is under water.

"The nuclear propulsion system was not affected," Sundin said, adding that the sub reached its home port under its own power at about 10 p.m. Thursday. The submarine carried a crew of 120, he said.

The fire broke out Thursday afternoon during maintenance. "The commanding officer chose to surface in this instance to combat the fire. The fire was put out by the crew and limited to the battery compartment, which is not all that large an area."

Two warships, the USS Gridley and the USS Callahan, were participating in the exercise and accompanied the sub back to port, said Sundin.

Technicians were assessing the damage, and the fire's cause was investigation, he said.

Nation's eighth largest bank gets aid package

CHICAGO (AP) — Stung by bad loans and a run on deposits by foreign investors, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. is seeking a buyer while using $7.5 billion in emergency aid from the federal government and commercial banks, officials said.

The $7.5 billion — $5.5 billion from an enlarged, existing line of credit and $2 billion from the government and banks — is the second rescue package this week for the nation's eighth-largest bank and the largest bailout ever orchestrated by the federal government.

At a news conference Thursday, Continental Chairman David G. Taylor said the package will help the bank ride out its "temporary liquidity squeeze" and assured customers their money is safe.

"This bank is not insolvent, it's not about to fail... it just needs a little more time," Taylor said.

The bank, hamstrung by $1 billion worth of sour loans stemming from the collapse of the Penn Square Bank of Oklahoma City two years ago, has hired the investment banking firm Goldman, Sachs & Co. to find a buyer. The New York Times reported in its editions today.

The Times said that because Continental lacks an attractive retail base, catering mostly to major depositors instead of small customers, it's unlikely to be taken over by a domestic bank. This has fueled speculation that the suitor would be a foreign bank.

Continental last week was the subject of rumors ranging from an impending takeover to a collapse. The reports led large foreign investors, whose deposits exceeded the $100,000 limit for Federal Deposit Insured fully insured Continental deposits, waiving the $100,000 limit. The Federal Reserve Board, meanwhile, agreed to meet any "extraordinary liquidity requirements" of Continental while the package is in place.

The bank, owned by Continental Illinois Corp., borrowed $3 billion from the Federal Reserve of Chicago on May 11. Then on Monday, Continental announced that 16 of the nation's biggest banks had approved a 30-day, $4.5 billion line of credit.

That line of credit, of which half had been used, was expanded Thursday by $1 billion. It is said to encompass 28 banks.

The latest package was assembled by the FDIC, the Federal Reserve Board and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. It was unveiled by Continental in Chicago and the FDIC in Washington.

When Penn Square collapsed, Continental was left holding $1 billion in energy-related loans it had purchased from the ill-fated Oklahoma lender. Continental already had $1.3 billion in non-performing loans on its books.

Harold Levine, a banking analyst for MKI Securities Inc. of New York, said Continental got into trouble with "over-aggressive" loan policies in the energy field. Levine said if it were possible to remove energy loans from the bank's portfolio, Continental would "be no different than any other bank."

Drying of roads near Basra will bring more bad news

By BARRY SCHWEID

AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

While attacks on tankers in the Persian Gulf are today's worry, the Reagan administration is bracing for even more bad news when the roads near Basra dry: an all-out assault by Iran to topple Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

The flare-up of fighting in the gulf is risky business in itself. Insurance rates are bound to go up. Oil deliveries to Japan and Western Europe will slip if shippers choose not to gamble on safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz.

President Reagan declared last February that he could not "stand by" if the strait was closed. Analysts William Quandt and Thomas McNaugher speculated in a private report this week that persistent Iranian attempts to disrupt traffic might lead to U.S. attacks on Iranian vessels and aircraft.

"It's very worrisome," the State Department spokesman, John Hughes, said Wednesday. He said Iran's assault on tankers from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait represent "a dangerous escalation of the Iran-Iraq war and a growing danger to shipping in the Persian Gulf."

There is enough oil in storage around the world to make up for any short-term cutback and the United States hardly would feel the pinch since it imports only about 4 percent of its oil from the gulf.

But Japan and Western Europe would be hurt. The Japanese get about 60 percent of their oil from the gulf, the Europeans, about 40 percent. And then there is the grave possibility of U.S. military involvement in an area former President Carter first designated as vital to American security interests.

Iran's show of force in the gulf does not mean the Khomeini regime is about to launch a final drive against Iraq. It may simply be retaliation for Iraqi assaults on Iranian tankers in the past.

But the State Department would hardly be surprised if the hundreds of thousands of Iranians poised on the southern stretches of Iraq's border cross over. Many carrying only rifles, their sheer number might be enough to overwhelm the better-trained and equipped Iraqi troops.

"We're still not sure why the offensive hasn't taken place already," said one official Wednesday. The probable reason, he said, was severe flooding east of Basra, caused by an unusual runoff from nearby mountains. The Iraqis gave nature a hand by blowing up dikes to keep the Iraqis at a distance.

But the roads are now drying. Unless Tehran has had a change of heart — or army commanders were able to persuade the ruling fundamentalists that losses would be heavy — the battle for Iraq may be about to begin.

Analysts Quandt and McNaugher have concluded Iraq has a better-than-even chance of holding Iran off.

New type surgery restores damaged jawbones

By MARK LINSALATA
San Antonio Light

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Pieces of dead bone were breaking off parts of William C. Ashmore's jaw, which had been devastated by cancer and the after-effects of radiation treatments.

"I suffered agonies," the trim, aristocratic-looking 72-year-old said. "I felt I might as well die and be done with it."

But earlier this year surgeons at Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center chopped out the dead bone and rebuilt his jawbone with new techniques that have improved the difficult jaw rebuilding procedure.

The trick to the whole procedure involved cradling growing bone cells from Ashmore's hip in a crib of specially processed bone removed from cadavers.

The cadaverous bone is used to make a mold following the contours of the jaw. The bone cells eventually form a new jaw and absorb the cadaverous bone.

More than 100 of the procedures have been performed at Wilford Hall in the past nine years, and the giant Air Force hospital has opened a "bone bank" to make sure enough of the material is available for the surgery.

The vigor has returned to Ashmore's life, and in early April he had a little ridge put on his "new" jawbone so he could be fitted with ordinary dentures.

Ashmore had become something of a globe-trotter following his retirement from an editorial position with a McGraw-Hill publishing company in North Carolina, and those wandering urges are returning.

"I'm going to China just as soon as I can eat," he said. "One of the advantages of our having our own bone bank is that because of the way we remove it, the bone will be ready-made for our kind of surgery," said Lt. Col. Robert E. Marx, assistant chairman for jaw-related surgery.

Obtaining bone from the nation's other five tissue banks usually means a waste of 50 percent or more of the material. "The demand is much greater than the supply," Marx emphasized in noting the importance of eliminating waste of the bone obtained from the cadavers.

Bone donated through Wilford Hall is sent to the University of Miami, which had previously supplied bone for surgery to the Air Force hospital. In Miami the bone undergoes a special chemical process which basically results in its being "freeze-dried" and free of all germs.

The processing is done for Wilford Hall for what Marx called a "token" fee of $20,000 a year. He considered the price a true bargain because $10,000 worth of bone can be harvested from a single cadaver.

Currently, the bone is being used for retired or active Air Force servicemen or their families, although other people may be considered on a case-by-case basis, Marx said.

As many as 30 jaw reconstructions are performed each year, usually in people who suffered devastating bouts of jaw or throat cancer. Sometimes the procedure is used to correct less serious situations, such as a recurring but benign tumor.

Four years ago, physicians found such a growth on retired Technical Sgt. Terry Carr's jaw. "One of the interesting things in Mr. Carr's case is that Mr. Carr's tumor had been taken out twice before, and each time it came back."

Marx told Carr that preventing the recurrence would require the removal not only of the benign tumor but the three-inch section of jaw on which it consistently grew back.

"That concerned me very much," Carr said, despite assurances Marx would be able to reconstruct that part of the jaw.

Now the 49-year-old Fairchild Aircraft technical writer has a full strong jaw again — but without the recurrent tumor.

Civilian and military doctors here and throughout the country refer patients to Marx and his colleagues at Wilford Hall.

When 67-year-old retired Master Sgt. Joe Crowell began finding bits and pieces of dead bone in his mouth, his Oklahoma City physician showed him a 1983 article by Marx in the Journal of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery.

Crowell's physician had already explained to him that his jaw problems were caused by radiation given to him in 1980 for throat cancer.

The radiation had destroyed the ability of his jawbone to replenish itself, and the bone was dying.

that I didn't have any jaw left," Crowell said. But the article lead him to Wilford Hall where Marx and his colleagues cut out the dead bone and rebuilt his jaw in February.

In mid-April, Marx removed an external brace used to support the jaw while the new bone is forming. X-rays currently show that Crowell has a good solid jaw again.

In previous attempts of jaw reconstruction, which date back to the late 17th century, steel and ceramic molds had been used.

Dear Abby April fooler hits sore spot on boyfriend's funny bone

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: "Chuck" and I have been going together for five months. We're both 36 and divorced. Chuck told me he'd been in the service for 12 years but was out now because he developed colitis. He said colitis could be controlled with medication now, and he hoped to get back in again.

About a month ago I called Chuck and said, "I just came from the doctor's, and I'm pregnant." He said, "Don't 'B.S.' me—if you are pregnant, it's not mine," then he hung up before I could say, "April Fool!"

I called him back and said it was only an April Fool's joke. Then he got really mad, called me an idiot and hung up on me.

The next day I called to apologize, and he said, "Your joke was a terrible shock to my system. Now I'm bleeding real bad and don't want to talk to you." Then he hung up.

Two days later he called to tell me he had just taken his physical to get back in the service. He didn't pass, and it was all my fault! By this time I was feeling really rotten. I called and tried to explain that I didn't mean to hurt him, but he said, "You really screwed things up for me but good, and I never want to see you again." Then he hung up.

Abby, how can I make amends? I feel just terrible.

NOT FUNNY

DEAR NOT-FUNNY: Consider it a good learning experience and don't try to make amends. I think you were lucky to learn that Chuck had (a) no sense of humor, and (b) no sense of honor.

It's just as well that Chuck chucked you, because I'd have advised you to chuck Chuck.

DEAR ABBY: You be the judge. I have a sister-in-law who is the nosiest person I've ever known. She's the kind who will pick up a person's personal letter and read it if she gets the chance. I caught her going through my checkbook once. Anyway, here's what happened, and I am fuming.

After being gone all afternoon, I came home and my phone was ringing. It was her. She told me she had been shopping and came across a good bargain on strawberries, so she bought a box for me and put them in my fridge. I asked her how she got in and she said she took the screen off the back bedroom window and climbed in.

Abby, she broke into my house. The nerve of that woman! I'm sure while she was there she snooped around because she wouldn't miss an opportunity like that.

Couldn't I have her arrested for breaking and entering? My husband tells me I am overreacting. (She's his sister.) But I need to know what I should do about this.

STILL FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Simmer down. Don't have her arrested, but do ask her not to go through any more windows when you're not home.

DEAR ABBY: I've just finished the latest in a never-ending string of arguments with my father about my choice of careers. He has always maintained that he didn't care what I did as long as it was good, honest work.

I'm 24, male, and I've been a paramedic for the last five years. I'm well-trained, love my work and, like a doctor or nurse, I'm proud to be in the lifesaving profession. I wish third-rate TV shows would portray us as the caring professionals we are instead of lead-footed, careless-driving boobies.

I wish I had a dime for every time I've been asked, "What's the grossest thing you've ever seen?" To that question, I simply reply, "I don't know. I've stopped remembering."

Is there a better answer?

A PROUD PARAMEDIC

DEAR PROUD: Yes: "That's the grossest question I've ever been asked."

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, (Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS
Many of the people moving west in the late 1800s settled in the Oregon Territory. IDAHO was carved from this vast area. When it became a territory in 1863 the area included what is now Montana and nearly all of Wyoming. The first permanent settlers were Mormon emigrants followed by miners and then farmers as the irrigation systems were constructed.

When requesting information from any of the state agencies, it is better not to indicate genealogy as the purpose for the request. Also, local county officials are often more cooperative than the state employees. Most of the records are filed alphabetically by the year so the date of an event must be given in order to locate the record.

IDAHO records are held strictly confidential and are released only to the individual or to an authorized person. My recommendation in researching this state is to try the local level government, the town chamber of commerce, library and historical societies for your information.

The Bureau of Vital Statistics, State Department of Health, Boise, Idaho, 83701, has birth and death records since 1911 and marriage records since 1947. A fee is charged and is not refundable.

The Ricks College Library,

Rexburg, Idaho, 83440 has a good collection of genealogical material. Probably the best source for this area is the Mormon Church as more than half of the residents belong to that church with Catholic and Protestant churches having a much smaller population.

Thank you to all my readers who have written to say this series has helped their research. I enjoy hearing from you. Please continue to write: Gena Walls, Rt. 2, Box 505, Lot 26, Gonzales, La., 70737.

Hosts sought for French students

Nacel Cultural Exchanges, a non-profit organization, is seeking host families for 125 French students ages 13 - 19 in its annual exchange program July 1 - July 28. Interested families should contact Sue Kimbro, 2105 Wood St., Texarkana, Texas 75501, (214) 794-8273.

"Families are especially needed for boys," said Mrs. Kimbro, who explained that most of the applications she has received are requests for girls and that 60 percent of the French students are boys. Students are matched to families according to preferences expressed by families and mutual interests.

For the past 27 years the purpose of Nacel has been to foster international understanding by arranging four-week summer homestays in France and the United States. This July 5,300 French students will experience our culture by living with American families at the same time that 1,400 American students will be living with French families. Students from this summer's host families will be offered the opportunity to take part in the 1984 reciprocal French Homestay Program.

Already, 65 families in northern Texas and Arkansas have applied to host these French teens coming to our area, but 60 additional families are still needed to host. "Being part of a family is the best way to experience a country's culture and language," said Mrs. Kimbro, a high school French teacher who has coordinated the Nacel Exchange for the past four years. "Hosting gives us a chance to show people the best of our country... our families."

The French students, who have studied English for three to eight years, provide their own airfare, insurance, and spending money; and the American families provide the welcome and include them in their daily lives for the month of July.

Panhellenic Council to host tea

High school senior girls and their mothers are to be honored with a Coke Float party hosted by the Pampa Panhellenic Council Sunday, May 20, at 2 p.m., in the home of Gay Kuempel, 2601 Chestnut Drive. High school senior girls from the area who plan to attend college are invited to attend this annual event.

A panel discussion is planned to inform the seniors and their mothers about sororities, benefits of sorority membership, the costs involved and the purpose of rush. Those interested in participating in rush should be prepared to complete a file card requiring such information as SAT and ACT scores, grade point average, rank in the class, honors and activities. Also, two billfold size pictures are needed for the Panhellenic files.

For additional information, call Panhellenic President Joy Rice at 665-8685.

BEAUTIFUL BUT EASY. This attractive beach coverup made of terry cloth and machine-quilted appliques turns into a beach towel when unsnapped at the sides.

Makin' Things

Sew a beach coverup-towel

By STEVIE BALDWIN
I suppose those new, revealing bathing suits are an improvement over the teeny-weeny bikinis of yesteryear. But I wish to speak out for those of us who are beyond that sort of exhibitionism altogether.

If, like me, you find a daily exercise routine set to thinly disguised disco music boring and useless, not to mention physically dangerous, take heart! There is a way to enjoy the beach or pool, even with terminal cottage cheese of the thighs.

Just take an afternoon and whip up this gorgeous beach coverup! I designed it to cover the subject, if you will, and made a convenient tote bag to match. Then all you need is a reasonable suit to wear underneath, just in case you're forced to swim.

Both the cover and tote are made of lightweight nylon terry cloth, which is wonderfully soft next to the skin. The coverup's white, blue and aqua layers are cut and machine quilted to create a sea wave design. The sides are snapped shut so it can be opened and laid out flat as a beach towel.

Our illustrate plans for the coverup and tote include full-size patterns for the wave design plus a materials list and complete step-by-step instructions. If you would like to order the plans, please specify Project No. 1554-2 and send $3.95.

To make the coverup you'll need nylon terry in white and two shades of blue, or other colors to suit yourself. The front and back sections are made separately, then sewn together.

For the front, cut a 36 inch square of white terry, a 24 x 36 inch piece of aqua, a 22 x 36 inch piece of dark blue, a 14 x 36 inch piece of white and a 9 x 10 inch piece of white. Place the aqua piece right side up on a flat surface. Cut a wave-shaped contour along one long edge of the 14 x 36 inch white piece, and pin this over the lower edge of the aqua piece. Cut a matching wave contour near the top of the dark blue piece, and pin it over the lower edge of the white wave.

Cut a scalloped diagonal on the small white piece, and pin it over the upper left corner of the aqua piece. Use a closely-spaced machine zigzag setting to stitch the layers together along the contoured edges, and then trim the excess fabric on the wrong side.

Place this assembly on top of the large white piece, wrong sides together. Run straight lines of basting stitches to secure the layers temporarily, and then quilt by hand or machine, following the wave contours. Remove the basting. Encase all outer edges using strips of white terry.

Make an identical assembly for the back, and whipstitch the two together along the shoulders on both the outer and lining sides, leaving a 12 inch neck opening. Use snap tape, nylon fastener strips or buttons to close the sides below the arm openings.

LOOSE MARBLES

LISA PATMAN

I found a little book the other day which promised to teach me how to read the body language of my friends, lovers and bosses. Since I have neither lovers nor bosses, and since my friends usually duck into dark alleys when they see me approaching, I decided to apply the book's advice to my family.

I looked up to see Old Dad sitting with legs and arms crossed, staring at me with little, squinty eyes. Quickly I thumbed to the crossed limbs, squinty eyes section. "Watch out," the book cautioned, "you are in big trouble."

"Something on your mind?" I asked Squinty.

"I was just thinking," he said in a steely voice, "that if you don't cook supper this year I may chop you into little pieces and feed you to the cats."

I decided to try my luck with Wacko. I found him sitting quietly in his room, staring into space, chewing on the earpiece of a pair of glasses. I turned to the earpiece-chewing, quietly staring section of the book. "This person is pondering a difficult decision," was the comment.

"Anything wrong?" I asked Wacko.

"Yes," he replied. "I can't figure out where these blasted glasses came from. I don't think I wear glasses, but if I do, should I put them on? And if I don't, should I return them to their owner? And who is it? Also, I'd like to know the meaning of life." He continued with his chewing.

Mumbles the Obstinant was my final try. He was pacing the living room, rubbing his hands together. The pacing-rubbing section of the book advised, "These are gestures of expectation."

"How's it going?" I questioned.

Mumbles was his usual blunt self. "If I take out the trash, can I have a new car?"

I was amazed at the wealth of wisdom contained in the pages of that body language book, and I studied it for weeks. By the time I was through I could tell at a glance exactly when one of the boys was not going to mow the yard, when Old Dad was going to yell at me about the bills, and when one of the cats was going to throw up on the new bedspread. I was so thrilled with my new-found knowledge that I bought a copy for each of the family members and forced them to study it.

It's wonderful what they can figure out now. They know, for instance, that when they find me cowering in a dark closet they can be pretty sure I want to be alone, that when I am clinging to the ceiling with my fingernails I'm a bit nervous, and that when I have a pen in my hand I'm about to write something. Of course, they're all pretty quick to pick up on stuff like that anyway.

Now if I could just find the chapter that explains why my friends keep ducking into dark alleys, I'd be happy. They're bound to be lonely in there.

Missionary service at Lamar Full Gospel

Rev. Glenn Stafford, a missionary to Singapore, will be featured speaker at a special missionary service Sunday at 7 a.m. at the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly Church, Bond and S. Sumner.

Rev. Stafford will be sharing his concern for the people of Singapore and discussing his goals for reaching that area of the world with the message of Christ, Pastor Gene Allen said.

Pastor Allen said the public is invited to attend the special service. A nursery will be provided.

Church youth will wash cars to raise funds for missions

Youth of the First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, will be washing cars at the Coronado Center parking lot from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday to raise funds for overseas missions projects.

The church's young people are participating in a nationwide endeavor of the youth of the Assemblies of God called "Speed the Light," which is attempting to raise funds for equipment and vehicles for missionaries.

Last year over $3 million was donated through the nationwide efforts, with teenagers of the local church contributing $2,000. The group's goal this year is $3,000 and the young people hope to raise much of this goal through the Saturday car wash, according to Doug Davenport, youth pastor at First Assembly.

"The young people are really excited about reaching their goal and will be working hard to do it," Davenport said.

A donation of $2 is requested for each vehicle washed.

Conference-going pastor bestows doughnuts, flowers

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — This time, he carried a cane, something he hadn't needed before. But it didn't slacken his energies in rounding up the customary doughnuts and also on this particular occasion, the forgotten but fitting flowers.

Those special, individual gestures were carried out at this organizational tuning up of church operations.

But the 69-year-old retired clergyman of Sunnyvale, Calif., had a lot to do with perking up reporters who covered the 11-day affair, and with precipitating for its main hero some appropriately due respect.

Schmitt, a friendly, easygoing and observant minister, has made it on his own to all of the denomination's top legislative conferences for 30 years — eight of them, one every four years, beginning in 1956.

He's not on hand for any assigned duty as one of the 1,000 voting delegates or in some staff role, but strictly at his own initiative and expense to say, as he puts it, "thank you" to his denomination by providing doughnuts in the news room.

"The doughnut man," he's called by reporters, many of whom have come to know him well through the years and who have made up many a missed breakfast with those doughnuts he heaps beside the news room coffee urn.

"I get a kick out of it," he says as he and his wife, Ruth, bring in the morning batch.

But this time, with the 200th anniversary of the start here of organized Methodism being celebrated at the conference, Schmitt discovered that something else was sorely needed.

With all the festivals, speeches and allusions to that founding meeting in 1784 of circuit-riding preachers and their first bishop, Francis Asbury, Schmitt one afternoon made a lone, thoughtful visit to Asbury's grave.

"I was horrified," he says. The grave, situated in Mount Olivet Cemetery, was barren of any kind of en — no flowers, no wreath, no church banner or any display of remembrance.

"This had been completely overlooked, despite all the fanfare of the bicentennial of Methodism that the pioneer bishop had begun 200 years ago," Schmitt says.

Lik many other out-of-town clergy, Schmitt served as a guest preacher on Sunday at a local congregation. Dressed in the frock coat and knee breeches of Asbury's times, he preached at Wesley Memorial United Methodist Church.

To the Baltimore congregation, he talked about distinctive qualities the denomination had inherited from Britain's John Wesley and America's Asbury, noting that the American's grave was sadly bereft of symbols of gratitude.

That quickly spurred amends. Accompanied by Schmitt, the Wesley Memorial congregation's pastor, the Rev. Richard Simpson, and retired Bishop Maynard Sparks of Sacramento, Calif., headed for the cemetery, laden with flowers.

Play church music softly

By George R. Plagenz

Some people express a hope of going to heaven only when they consider the alternative. They don't really look forward to what they fear will be an eternity of hymn singing in heaven.

I'm different. I love to sing. But I have my own set of fears. I worry that in heaven the organist will play too loud and drown out the celestial congregation.

My fears are based on the fact that this so often happens on earth. If it is possible to harp on an organist, that is what I have been doing for 30 years or more to no avail.

I went to church on Easter morning, eager to raise my "gladsome voice" in the triumphant strains of "Christ the Lord is risen today" and "Welcome, happy morning." I got in a little practice while driving to church. I was in good form. That, however, turned out to be the only chance I would get to hear myself — or anybody else — sing that morning.

The music in church made the rafters ring, but it was the organist, not the congregation, that supplied the volume.

What do you do when the organist at your church plays too loud? One of the things you don't do is tell him (or her).

The organist who played for morning chapel at Harvard pulled out all the stops. I complained to the dean. I have an idea he agreed with me, but he said, "If you think Mr. Woodworth plays too loud, you tell him."

Organists often have the temperament of artists, which they sometimes are, of course. It is difficult to give them suggestions.

I once wrote that the organist at an Episcopal cathedral played too loud. A reporter from the Detroit Free Press asked his reaction to my criticism. He replied, "Johann Sebastian Bach received the same criticism. Anyway, Plagenz is not a competent music critic." I plead guilty. But I know loud.

The problem is not confined to the organist. The choir director also is inclined too often to let his superior musical taste dictate what the less musically educated congregation will hear.

At the heart of the music crisis in our churches may be a basic disagreement between pew and choir loft over the purpose of hymns and anthems in the worship service.

Is church music "an offering to God of the best music we can find," as contended by Dr. Archibald Division, once professor of music at Harvard University?

Or is church music intended to heighten the religious mood of the worshipper and make his religious experience more vivid?

A church organist and choir director once asked me, "Is it not better to raise the sights of worshippers who may have little appreciation of an anthem's artistic beauty than to bring the choir down to their level?"

In answer to her, I quoted the words of the late Dean Willard Sperry of Harvard University:

"One has the suspicion that the choice of much church music is prompted in part by a pedagogic attempt to improve our musical taste. When this attempt supersedes the endeavor to find fitting vehicles to express what we already think and feel, the nature of worship is subtly altered. We do not go to church in the first instance to have our musical taste developed."

A former music critic of The New York Times once echoed Sperry's point of view when he said, "Churches are not primarily purveyors of culture."

LEARNING GOOD HABITS EARLY

"Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

This statement (made by Solomon, thousands of years ago) is just as true and vital today as it was then.

Teach your children the good practice of saving for the future. Teach them to attend worship services in God's house by taking them

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Leona Helmsley says she's no 'tough cookie'

By JUDIE GLAVE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Inside the landmark mansion that serves as the base of the towering Helmsley Palace hotel, an American queen reigns supreme.

Leona Helmsley was not born of royal blood, but the 1,050 employees at the hotel and more than 5,000 others at 30 other Helmsley properties from Florida to Texas — certainly treat her with royal deference.

Whether out of respect for her position as president of the Helmsley Hotel chain — given to her in 1980 by her husband, real estate magnate Harry B. Helmsley — or fear of her often intimidating demeanor, one thing is certain: Whatever Leona wants, Leona gets.

"There's an ashtray missing from here," she says, pointing a bejeweled finger at a flower-laden table in the lobby of the 55-story hotel, adjoining the restored, 19th Century Villard Houses. "I want it replaced."

"Yes, Mrs. Helmsley," is the immediate reply.

"Very rarely will you see dirt around my hotels, very rarely," she says before embarking on one of her daily sweeps through the gilded and silk brocade-covered palace behind St. Patrick's Cathedral in midtown Manhattan.

You'll also never see long-haired employees with unshined shoes or hear discourteous clerks or the clatter of dishes as busboys remove them from tables.

These are a few of Mrs. Helmsley's pet peeves not highlighted in an award-winning advertising campaign for the Helmsley's Harley hotel chain.

The highly visible print and magazine ads let guests know that, among other things, they can expect brightly lit bathrooms, shrimp instead of peanuts at the bar, and hangers that are not attached to closet bars.

Separate ads for The Helmsley Palace boast: "It's the only palace in the world where the Queen stands guard."

It is, in fact, her exacting eye that has led to her hard-as-nails reputation among her employees, who know first-hand how the palace queen likes to crack the whip.

"So you've got an interview with her highness," says a bellboy assigned to escort a reporter to Mrs. Helmsley's fifth-floor office. "Better you than me."

When everyone is seated the queen enters. She is wearing a beige angora dress adorned with pearls and a diamond-encrusted topaz ring. She appears warmer and more attractive than her ads depict.

During the interview, she says stories about her toughness are concocted. The bellboy's remarks are cited as evidence to the contrary.

"Who is he?" Leona mugs, twisting her face into a mock, murderous look.

She laughs, but the mention of her "tough cookie" reputation is enough to crumble the temper of this perfectly poised businesswoman.

"I'm not a tough cookie," she insists, her husky, alto voice climbing several octaves in exasperation. "If I were a man, they'd say I was a great executive. I'm a woman, so I'm a tough cookie."

"I run a tight ship; there's no doubt about it, I do. I see nothing wrong with that, I think it's good business."

The ads are "funny," not pretentious, she insists. She says they are designed to show that she wants only the best for guests who shell out a minimum $175 a night for a single room at the palace.

"I know I'm not a queen," she says, her voice dropping to a near whisper, and then in a sing-song adds: "I'm Harry's queen and Harry's a prince, so maybe I'm a princess."

This princess was born Leona Mindy Rosenthal to a milliner father and housewife mother in the unlikely kingdom of Flatbush, Brooklyn.

"I modeled for a while ... I got married and then I got divorced and I went back to work," is how she sums up "life before Harry."

She refuses to reveal her age, although reports say she's near 60.

She also says little about the years she appeared on hundreds of cigarette ads and billboards as the "Chesterfield girl."

Neither does she discuss the deaths from heart disease of her father at age 52, or her only child, a son from her first marriage, in 1982.

But those losses may explain her diligence about exercise and health.

The Helmsleys spend an hour each morning swimming in their penthouse pool and adhere to a strict, low-cholesterol, low-salt diet, which she plans to share in a cookbook of her favorite recipes. Profits from the book will be given to the American Heart Fund.

Yet it is neither her past nor her future she wishes to discuss, because Harry and her job are all that really count.

"Hiya, gorgeous," she purrs as the spruce, 75-year-old Helmsley enters the room.

She gives him a hug, kiss and then an affectionate pat on the backside as the real estate magnate — who industry sources say owns or operates $5 billion worth of real estate — sits next to her.

Her entrance into the hotel business came when she challenged her husband to choose between three rooms she decorated for the unopened Palace and those done by a professional decorator. Helmsley said her room was lovely "and that's how I got into the hotel business."

In 1980, she was named president of the 27 Harley (a contraction of Harry and Leona) business hotels and four luxury hotels here — the Carlton House, St. Moritz, Helmsley Palace and the Park Lane, where the couple live.

This year, the Helmsley Palace was awarded the American Automobile Association's "Five Diamond Award" for excellence. It is one of only 47 hotels, motels and motor inns in the United States, Canada and Mexico to receive the award and the only hotel ever so honored in New York State.

Family Land Heritage Program registration is underway in state

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, announcing that registration is under way for the Family Land Heritage Program, recalls one family who plowed its fields in pairs — facing each other — so they could always be on the lookout for outlaws.

Another farm family tells the story of 40 jackloads of silver, lost by a Spanish wagon train when it was attacked, that is still buried on their land.

"Another story I heard last year," Hightower said, "was of the farm wife and children who operated a soap factory in Monterrey, Mexico, for 19 years until the mortgage on their ranch was finally paid off."

The Family Land Heritage Program was created by the Legislature in 1974 to honor families who have kept their land in continuous agricultural production for 100 years or more.

Registration for the program will continue through Aug. 17.

Since the program began, 1,729 properties have been placed in the state heritage registry. The oldest is the Norieccitas Ranch near Hebronville, founded in 1740 under a Spanish land grant.

Celtics bomb Bucks

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics own the tools, but there's no way they'll talk about burying the Milwaukee Bucks — not yet, anyway.

Milwaukee's big Bob Lanier mentioned quicksand, but the Celtics outwardly ignored the remark.

With a 2-0 lead over the Bucks after a 125-110 rout Thursday night, the Celtics are not about to repeat a near-fatal mistake.

A couple of weeks ago Kevin McHale, the National Basketball Association's Sixth Man Award winner, remarked that the Celtics had the New York Knicks in the grave after two easy victories in Boston Garden.

The remark came back to haunt the mighty Celtics. The upstart Knicks extended Boston to the limit before bowing out in seven games.

Now, eyeing an unprecedented 15th NBA championship, the Celtics are wary with a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven series for the Eastern Conference title. Games 3 and 4 are in Milwaukee Saturday afternoon and Monday night.

"I think everybody realizes that we can't go into Milwaukee and let Kevin or anybody say a few words," veteran guard Dennis Johnson said after his finest playoff game of the spring. "We're not in a situation where we want to give anybody any extra incentive. Let's just go out there and play."

Asked what he thought about the series, Johnson said:

"I think it's going to be a dogfight. I hope we can get the first one in Milwaukee."

"The Bucks are a good team. They'll come back. We just have to keep the pressure on them."

"We know we still have a longing."

"I'm sure they'll be fired up," said veteran center Robert Parish. "They were kind of flat out there tonight, but when they get on their home court, they'll be relaxed, fired up, and we should see a better club."

Still smarting from the humiliation of a four-game sweep by the Bucks in the conference semifinal last year, the Celtics probably would like nothing better than return that "favor" in Milwaukee.

However, even though they had a 62-20 regular season record, best in the NBA, and were 5-1 against Milwaukee, the Celtics have their work cut out. In the playoffs, they're 8-0 at home, 1-4 on the road.

Since winning their first two games against the Washington Bullets in a battle of tight defenses, the Celtics have won their last six home games by 18, 14, 22, 17, 23 and 15 points.

Boston's Larry Bird tries to get past Milwaukee's Paul Pressey. The Celtics won, 125-110, to take a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference finals. (AP Laserphoto)

Jacobsen leads Colonial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fit and sassy Peter Jacobsen has staked an early but impressive claim on the $500,000 Colonial National Invitation golf title.

"There's nothing better to boost your morale than starting birdie-birdie," said the personable sharpshooter, the leader entering today's second round of the prestigious NIT.

Jacobsen birdied the three opening holes Thursday, slashed six strokes from par and rode a sparkling 64 to a two-shot lead over a quintet of touring veterans that included Tom Watson.

"There's no reason why I can't do it again (today)," dead-panned Jacobsen, whose first, last and only tour victory was at the 1980 Buick-Goodwrench Open. Pausing only a moment, he added with a grin:

"There's no reason why I can't shoot a 63."

Stumbling but once, a bogey at the treacherous fifth hole that embraces the Trinity River, Jacobsen dropped birdie putts of 8, 1, 20, 20, 40, 2 and 20 feet and barely missed a 12-footer at the 18th that would have tied the course record.

"I felt great out there," he said, recalling that back problems forced him to withdraw at Houston three weeks ago and sent him home to confer with his doctor.

"He told me I wasn't 22 anymore," he said. "The older you get, the more attention you have to pay to your body."

Jacobsen said he started exercising, changed his eating habits and began losing weight.

"I feel better now," he said. "And the better you feel, the better your attitude's going to be out there."

Watson, the leading money winner this year with two victories and $318,468, said he "got by" with a number of mistakes and used a hot putter to fashion a fine 4-under-par 66.

"Anytime you shoot 66 at Colonial you've got to be satisfied," he said, at the same time pointing out that the tricky, swirling Texas wind was unusually mild Thursday.

"It started out calm but got a little windier and a little windier," added Gil Morgan, one of the late finishers who captured a share of second place.

"The scores are really going to be low if the weather plays like this," said Mark Lye, also tied for second with Watson, Morgan, Mike Reid and D.A. Weibring.

"The wind isn't blowing," said Lye, a tinge of disbelief in his voice.

Many in the field of 102 took unprecedented liberties with Colonial's par 70 standard. Thirty-five broke par and another 14 matched it, with many of the game's top players within easy striking distance of the lead.

A group of 11 at 68 included two-time Masters champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain, former Colonial winner Bruce Lietzke and David Edwards, the runner-up last Sunday at the Byron Nelson in Dallas.

Fourteen players were at 69, including 1984 Masters king Ben Crenshaw and 1981 Colonial winner Fuzzy Zoeller.

Defending champion Jim Colbert, Nelson winner Craig Stadler and Doral winner Tom Kite headed another group of 14 at par 70.

Summer tennis camp to be held at youth center

Pampa Youth Center has a tennis camp scheduled this summer with classes to be taught by Mark Elliott, a Pampa native who played at South Plains College.

Elliott has taught at tennis camps and clinics the past four years and plans to join the German and Yugoslavian Professional Circuit in 1985.

Students will learn the basic strokes—forehand, backhand, volley and serve.

The camp will also stress eye-hand coordination, drills, physical fitness and stretching exercises.

Registration will be on a first-come, first-serve basis on Friday, June 1 and Saturday, June 2 between 9-11 a.m. Cost is $50 per student.

Classes will consist of two age groups—ages 8-10 and ages 11-14.

For more details, call the youth center at 665-0748.

Underdog Play On eyes Preakness upset

BALTIMORE (AP) — Trainer Billy Turner has a perfect record in Triple Crown races. Of course, he had the perfect horse in 1977 with Seattle Slew.

In Saturday's 109th Preakness at Pimlico, Turner sends lightly-raced Play On against nine 3-year-old rivals, including Swale, the Kentucky Derby winner who was sired by Seattle Slew.

Being the underdog is a whole lot different," said the 37-year-old Turner Thursday. "The last time the only way we could lose if we did something wrong. Now, we've got to do everything right to pull it off."

The track oddsmaker has established Swale as the early 6-5 favorite from the No. 5 post position for the 1 3-16-mile test, 110 yards shorter than the Derby.

"Slews have a basic look and you can see the old man in him," said Turner. "Swale isn't as muscular as Slew but he's the same color. Swale is Triple Crown material. He was the iron horse last year."

Gate Dancer, disqualified from fourth to fifth in the Derby for interference, was listed at 4-1 and Play On next at 6-1.

"We've got one serious contender to contend with," Turner said. "We're on a par with the rest of them."

Play On, who drew the outside No. 10 post, is coming off a victory in the May 9 Withers over one mile at Belmont Park. He had two seconds in his previous starts this year and won his only start as a 2-year-old.

The son of Stop The Music, owned by the Welcome Farm, was being pointed for the May 5 Derby but it wasn't until that Turner felt the colt was ready for top competition.

"Ideally he should have had a couple of more races, two more races," said Turner. "It would have made training a lot easier."

Jean-Luc Samyn will ride Play On.

"Why is it that I always have a Frenchman in the classics?" Turner asked rhetorically. Jean Cruguet was Seattle Slew's Triple Crown rider.

Swale, meanwhile, had his final workout for the Preakness, going a half-mile in 46 seconds and galloping out fifth-eighths of a mile in 59.35.

"It was faster than I wanted," said 70-year-old trainer Woody Stephens. "But the way he did it doesn't bother me. It's not how fast, it's the way you do it. He did it easy."

Swale was once the second-string colt in Stephens' barn behind Devil's Bag whose unimpressive 3-year-old campaign and a bone chip in a knee led to his retirement May 7.

The Claiborne Farm colt has won three of five starts this year and eight of 12 in his career.

At stake in this second leg of the Triple Crown was first prize of $243,000 from the gross purse of $338,600.

The field in post position order: Pac Soldier, Fight Over, Gate Dancer, Taylor's Special, Swale, Pine Circle, Wind Flyer, Raja's Shark, S.S. Hot Sauce and Play On.

ABC's Preakness program will be shown from 5-6 p.m. EDT, with posttime set for 5:40.

A & M cleared of wrongdoing?

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas newspaper said today that Texas A&M has been cleared by the NCAA of any wrongdoing in the recruiting of freshman basketball player Todd Holloway, who accepted a scholarship from the Aggies after disappearing in the middle of the night from a small New York college that had previously signed him.

Coaches at Wagner College in Staten Island, N.Y., had complained to the NCAA about the peculiar circumstances of Holloway's departure and about the possibility that A&M coaches had recruited the Albany, N.Y. native during the month of August, in violation of NCAA regulations.

Although never notified that it was the subject of a preliminary inquiry, A&M officials were asked in February to respond officially to several questions from the NCAA, the Dallas Times Herald said.

The newspaper said that NCAA enforcement representative Charles Smrt, in a March 2 letter to A&M athletic director Jackie Sherrill wrote:

"I have reviewed your response to my Feb. 1 letter concerning the recruitment of prospective student-athlete Todd Holloway by assistant coach John Widdicombe. At this time, no further action is contemplated by this office. I appreciate your assistance in making this requested information available."

Associate athletic director John David Crow said he now considers the case closed, the newspaper said.

"They checked into it and said, 'Well, the kid just decided to go to Texas A&M,'" Crow said.

A&M basketball coach Shelby Metcalf said the letter bore no surprises for him.

"As advertised, he just had a chance to go to a Division I school," Metcalf said.

Holloway, a guard, was a surprise star in the Empire State Games, an event for New York amateur athletes held in August, Wagner College, a member of the East Coast Athletic Conference, had signed him the previous spring, but the letter-of-intent he signed was binding only within the ECAC.

In the wee hours of Sept. 1, only hours before fall classes were to start at Wagner and without telling coaches there where he was going, Holloway returned to his home at Albany, N.Y., and then flew to Texas, where he accepted a scholarship from Texas A&M, the Times Herald said.

Wagner coaches pointed out to the NCAA that it was a violation of NCAA rules if A&M coaches recruited Holloway during August or provided him transportation. Scouting and recruiting can resume again in the month of September.

Holloway said his father picked him up at Wagner and drove him to Albany, a distance of about 200 miles.

"It was not a situation where we went in at midnight and got him out of the dorm and drove him down here," Crow told the Times Herald.

Entries due May 29 for Pizza Hut Half Century bicycle race

Entries are due May 25 for the Pizza Hut Half Century Bicycle Road Race and Tour, starting June 9 in Pampa.

The combination race-tour begins and ends at the Pampa Pizza Hut, starting at 9 a.m. The route covers 52.4 miles along highway 152 to the Borger Pizza Hut and back again.

Ride Director Bobby Schiffman said helmets are not required, but urged all riders to carry a water bottle.

"Sag wagons will travel the course to pick up bikers who are exhausted or mechanically disabled," Schiffman said. "Water stops, providing water only, will be at 13-mile intervals.

Prizes include $50 for first, $35 for second, $25 for third and $15 for fourth. Four other prizes will be award after the race ends. Each rider will receive a t-shirt.

Entry fee is $5. Interested persons may write the Ride Director at 1904 North Christy, 79065, for more information, or call 806-669-6765.

Entry forms may be obtained at the Pampa or Borger Pizza Huts or Polaris Bicycles in Pampa.

Ford receives honor

White Deer senior Kay Ford was honored by The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce for April accomplishments Wednesday at a luncheon at the Quality Inn.

Miss Ford ran a 2:20.8 to win the Class 2A 800-meter dash title at the state meet. She also placed fifth in the high jump. Miss Ford was fourth in the state half-mile event last year.

Miss Ford was among 22 athletes and three coaches honored by the Amarillo Chamber.

Miss Ford's twin sister, Tina, was third in the high jump at this year's state meet.
