

The race officially under way

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale are kicking off their campaigns on opposite coasts today with traditional Labor Day rallies. The Democratic challenger saying their race for the White House carries "the highest stakes in a lifetime."

Reagan was in his home territory, Orange County, Calif., while Mondale and running-mate Geraldine Ferraro were starting in New York City with the Labor Day parade up Fifth Avenue.

"It's good to be in Orange County, where the good Republicans go before they die," Reagan told a crowd Sunday as he arrived in California. "But also, I think, a lot of good Democrats, too."

The Democratic team was flying to rural Wisconsin for another parade before venturing onto Reagan's turf for an afternoon rally at Long Beach, Calif.

After an outing to Fountain Valley, Calif., outside Los Angeles, Reagan was traveling up the coast on the first day of a three-day campaign trip, while Vice President George Bush was beginning a foray into Midwestern and Southern battleground states.

Although Labor Day is the customary beginning of the general election presidential campaign, Mondale opened an offensive against the Republican incumbent Sunday in a paid network radio address.

Referring to Reagan's comments during the Republican convention week in Dallas, Mondale said the president's linking of religion and politics is "not the American way."

President works crowd in Irvine, Calif.

"In America, our faith has always been intensely personal. It is between the individual and God, between families and their churches and synagogues, with no room for politicians in between. That freedom has made America the most religious nation on earth," Mondale said, adding that "government must not be permitted to dictate the religious life of our people."

In response Reagan said Sunday: "What I was commenting on was the great movement that has been going on more and more to attack religion by some who pretend that they're acting within the Constitution — those people who would deny such things as chaplains in the military and 'in God we trust' on our coins and so forth."

"I'm not seeking to install a state religion in any way," he added.

The running mates were also campaigning on Labor Day. Ms. Ferraro was traveling on to San Diego this evening and planned to campaign in the Northwest on Tuesday.

Bush was flying today to Illinois for a parade in the Chicago suburbs with Gov. Jim Thompson, then heading to New Orleans. They were the first stops in a three-day swing that will also take Bush to Texas and Kentucky.

Toxic threat hits Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Chemists and firefighters worked through the night to cap an acid leak at a computer factory that sent a cloud of eye- and skin-irritating gas over southwestern Omaha. Hundreds of people were evacuated, but there were no reports of injuries.

Police asked people to evacuate 10 square miles near the Control Data Corp. plant, where nitric acid leaked slowly from an outdoor storage tank. Residents in another 2½-square-mile area to the east were advised to stay inside, close their windows and shut off their air conditioners lest the gas enter their homes.

"At least 10,000" people were potentially in the path of the cloud of gas, said Capt. Joe Welge of the Millard Volunteer Fire Department, spokesman for the police, firefighters and Douglas County deputy sheriffs who set up a command post at the plant.

Officials early today said they had no precise estimate on how many people left their homes.

Chemists said the concentration of the acid was only about 5 percent, which Welge said would irritate the eyes and skin. The acid is potentially lethal, but only at much higher concentrations.

Control Data spokesman Mike Boyd was reluctant to give any details on what might have caused the leak. "It's just too early to hazard a guess as to what happened," he told reporters early this morning.

The leak started about 8 p.m. and evacuations began within an hour. Officers went door to door and drove through neighborhoods, broadcasting instructions through loudspeakers. A section of Interstate 80 near the plant was closed for several hours.

The Red Cross set up centers for evacuees at three high schools.

Red Cross Manager Arthur Miller had no estimate on how many people went to the evacuation centers. He said many people would go instead to homes of friends or relatives.

The slow leak was discovered by a Control Data employee who noticed an orange glow around the tank caused by the nitric acid mixing with air to form nitrous oxide, Welge said. Control Data alerted police and the sheriff's office at 8:02 p.m., he said.

Firefighters used hoses to dilute the gas as it rose from the tank, which was surrounded by a concrete dike.

"We're throwing a water fog into the cloud to bring it down to the surface," Welge said. "The problem is that this stuff eats everything."

Control Data chemists put soda ash on the acid to neutralize it.

Firefighters used a backhoe to dig trenches into which some of the acid flowed. The Lincoln Fire Department's hazardous materials squad began pumping the remaining acid into a stainless steel tank on a truck about 1 a.m. today.

Arms control statement

Soviets break no new ground

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko's statement that his country is seeking a dialogue with the United States breaks no new ground and is based on a false assessment of U.S. policy.

State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said Sunday the administration welcomed the Soviet leader's "statement that he is ready for dialogue," but added that it is the Soviet Union which has been balking at resuming stalled talks.

"We will, of course, study Mr. Chernenko's statement carefully, but at first reading, he doesn't appear to go beyond previous Soviet policy statements," Ms. McCarty said, reading an official response.

"His assessment of U.S. policy is, unfortunately, both wholly familiar and wholly false," she added.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes also said Sunday that U.S. officials are eager to meet the Soviets in Vienna to talk about limiting weapons in outer space.

"We don't know why the Soviets won't accept yes for an answer," said Speakes, who talked with reporters aboard Air Force One as President Reagan traveled from Washington to California.

In an interview with the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, Chernenko said he still seeks a dialogue with the United States on nuclear arms and space weapons, but he offered no new proposals for beginning talks.

His comments were distributed Saturday by the official news agency Tass in advance of their publication Sunday in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

They were the first published remarks from the 72-year-old Chernenko since last Saturday, when Tass reported he had sent a letter on nuclear-free zones in Europe to the mayor of Manchester, England. Chernenko has not been seen in public since mid-July.

In the interview, Chernenko repeated Soviet claims that there has been no satisfactory response from Washington to the Kremlin's proposal to open talks next month on banning weapons in space. He said the United States blocked the possibility of holding space weapons talks by wanting to add other issues on nuclear weapons to the agenda.

Chernenko also claimed the United States stalled disarmament talks with the Soviet Union and then scuttled the talks by deploying new medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

But the Soviet leader added, "I want to reaffirm with all certainty our readiness for dialogue, for honest and serious talks aimed at finding accords that take into account the security interests of all countries and peoples. Such is our understanding of dialogue."

Ms. McCarty said Chernenko's words conflicted with Soviet refusal to accept the U.S. offer for arms talks.

"We welcome Mr. Chernenko's statement that the Soviet Union is also in favor of serious and specific negotiations," Ms. McCarty said. "We are ready to return to the Geneva negotiations on START (Strategic Arms Reduction Talks) and INF (Intermediate-range Nuclear Force) talks the moment the Soviet Union declares its willingness to join us."

Labor Day summer's last fling

By MARY MacVEAN
Associated Press Writer

Thirty women built a house at a New York street fair, 1,000 striking copper workers rallied in Arizona and more than 1 million people flocked to California beaches for summer's last fling as Americans mixed the frivolous and the serious on the Labor Day holiday.

The three-day weekend, the traditional kickoff to the fall campaign season, found politicians pressing the flesh.

President Reagan was to appear today at a public rally in Orange County, Calif., a bedrock conservative area, while his opponent, Walter Mondale, launched a cross-country jaunt in New York City.

Labor groups planned parades in many major cities, while fireworks and picnics were on order elsewhere.

Fun-seekers mixed spaghetti and the symphony in Nashville, where the Symphony Guild's 30th annual Italian Street Fair enticed thousands with pasta, sausage and music. In Seattle, more than 100,000 people listened to jazz, rock, country and folk music at the annual Bumbershoot — British for umbrella — Festival.

Fireworks drew thousands to Boston's waterfront, and picnickers feasted Sunday on the Common to mark the park's 350th anniversary.

In his Labor Day message, Reagan said that more Americans are working than ever before, but

Harlow trial a nightmare for woman juror

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Deborah Bass isn't too tickled with jury duty, and she says no one else would be either if they had to live through what she did.

During the five weeks she recently served as a juror, she had a skin rash, a flat tire, a bashed-in car fender, past-due bills, a disconnected telephone and a lost job.

Miss Bass, 22, was serving in an oil rights suit involving Amarillo oilman Bill Harlow and Dorchester Gas Producing Co.

Harlow stands to lose as much as $1 million because of the verdict against him in the Pampa gas rights trial. Dorchester, which claimed it had rights to gas Harlow produced from oil wells, asked for $500,000 in damages and a halt to Harlow's gas production.

The jury decided Thursday that his Harlow Corp.

of Amarillo produced 187 million cubic feet of natural gas that belonged to Dorchester.

But Harlow wasn't the only loser, Miss Bass says.

First there's the rent: She said she was to be paid $258 Friday in juror's wages. Her rent, now due, is $250.

"I think my landlord will work with me on it," she said.

Next there's the job: her employer canned her. "She (the employer) told me two weeks ago that she wanted me back full-time when the trial was over," claimed Miss Bass, who had been a housekeeper for an elderly woman and her husband the last three months.

But last week, she went to the employer's house and found she'd been replaced.

"I told her I got stuck on the jury," Miss Bass recalled. "She said I didn't have to, that I chose to, and that she wasn't going to play second place to a trial. She said I could've gotten off."

State law says a private employer can't terminate an employee because of jury service. Resumption of employment is required unless a change in circumstances makes it impossible or unreasonable.

A spokeswoman for Miss Bass' former employer declined comment.

As if the job wasn't enough, there was that rash. "After experiencing severe itching on her legs, Miss Bass had a biopsy performed on the first day of jury selection. She brought a doctor's statement the next day that she thought would remove her from jury consideration."

"When (visiting District Judge) Robert Montgomery read it, he laughed," Miss Bass said, adding that she didn't learn she would need treatment until two days after she was selected.

Dr. Manuel Iriopdo, who signed the statement, said it didn't ask for her to be excused, although Miss Bass indicated she wanted off because of the discomfort.

Several days ago, when Miss Bass gave notice that she would be late paying her phone bill, she said Southwestern Bell gave her a two-day extension. She was then told her service was being cut off.

A spokesman said that would have happened later, but that the process was accelerated by her volunteering the information. She said she was going to pay the bill and try to obtain new service.

Miss Bass has not obtained an estimate for the damage to her car's fender. She claimed it was struck while in the jurors' parking lot.

Labor Day death toll pushed by single-vehicle accidents

By The Associated Press
Single-vehicle accidents claimed 13 of the 24 lives lost in Labor Day weekend traffic accidents, the Texas Department of Public Safety says.

The death toll was 24 by late Sunday with a full day and night remaining in the holiday period.
The DPS has predicted 54 deaths by the end of the holiday period tonight. The DPS count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight tonight.

Ronald Lee McAfee, 20, of Gainesville, and a passenger in his car, Carol Thomason, 20, of Gainesville were killed about 3:15 p.m. Sunday in a head-on collision. Authorities said the accident occurred on FM 372 in Cook County as the car went off the highway, went out of control before striking another vehicle.

Stephanie Juarez, 21 months, died at 3:58 p.m. Sunday at a Temple hospital following an accident earlier in the day in a residential driveway.

Anselmo Ceballos Blanco, 35, of Fort Hancock, was killed about 9:26 a.m. Sunday in a two-vehicle collision at the intersection of Texas Highway 20 and Farm-to-Market Road 1083 east of Fort Hancock in Hudspeth County.

John Bryan Cook, 18, of Hico died after his car ran off U.S. Highway 281 five miles south of Stephenville and rolled over. Cook, who was not wearing a seat belt, died at 9:31 a.m. Sunday in Fort Worth's Harris Hospital.

Wade Raymond Read, 38, of Marquez was killed after he was thrown from his vehicle at 7:20 a.m. Sunday on farm-to-market road 1469 west of Jewett in Leon County. His car had crossed the center stripe, sideswiped a second vehicle and rolled over.

Cecilia Guajardo, 50, of Magnolia died after she swerved into an oncoming car's path on farm-to-market road 1774 in Magnolia. Troopers say she was traveling at a high rate of speed before the 11:30 p.m. Saturday collision.

The other car's driver, 38-year-old Nancy W. Whitty of Magnolia, also died in that accident, police say.

Amos Crooks Jr., 29, of Garland was killed at 12:10 a.m. Saturday while working on a disabled vehicle on Interstate 35 near Temple. Another vehicle struck his car in rear, pushing his car into him, police said.

Matthew David Rossies, 18, of San Felipe was killed at 4 a.m. Sunday when vehicle he was driving crossed the center stripe on farm-to-market road 1458 in San Felipe in Austin County and struck a bridge on left side of roadway.
Steven Scott Delwar, 22, of Leander, died when his motorcycle missed a curve and ran into some trees in Travis County at 11:45 p.m. Saturday.

Charles Judson Richbourg, 20, of Lake Jackson was killed when his motorcycle ran off a city street in Lake Jackson at 5 p.m. Saturday.

Other deaths included Mary Rodriguez, 28, of Odessa, who died in a one-vehicle accident Saturday at 12:35 a.m. when the vehicle in which she was riding struck a deer and rolled over. The accident occurred about 14 miles northwest of Ozona on state Highway 137 in Crockett County.

Cecil Clifford Wells, 36, of Dublin, Texas, was killed at 1:01 a.m. Saturday when the pickup truck he was driving struck a tractor-trailer rig head-on about two miles southwest of Stephenville on U.S. 67.

Ronald Earl Pockrus, 41, of Port Isabel was killed when the pickup he was driving struck a guard rail and overturned.

Between 7:30 and 7:45 p.m. on Friday, July 20, 1984, an unknown person or persons removed a portable generator from the bed of a pickup parked at The Cave Arcade at the intersection of Cuyler and Francis. The generator was described as an older, Army surplus-type with a manual pull-starter. It was olive-green in color and estimated value of the generator is $500.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $400 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this theft. If you have information about this crime or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

Million-dollar space potty fails

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space shuttle's million-dollar potty was working fine, for a change, on Discovery, but the astronauts were ordered not to use it Sunday night because of an unrelated plumbing problem.

Engineers simplified the frequently troublesome space toilet after astronaut crews reported that it quit working on 10 of the previous 11 missions. The new design of the indoor facility seemed to work fine during the first half of Discovery's maiden voyage.

But a build-up of ice on a vent where the waste is dumped overboard forced Mission Control to order four of the six-member crew to start collecting their urine in plastic bags.

Officials said that since it was uncertain if a liquid waste holding tank could be emptied, the use of the toilet would be limited to keep from overflowing the tank.

Instead, some plastic bags, like those used in the Apollo spacecraft to collect body waste, were unstowed.

Mission Control said only two crew members could use the toilet for the rest of the 6-day flight that ends on Wednesday. Four of the crew would have to use the Apollo bags. Officials said it was expected that one of the two crew members to continue using the toilet would be Judy Resnik, the only woman in the crew.

The shuttle toilet was developed at the cost of about $10 million, and each individual model costs about $1 million. Despite its cost, it has failed so badly on some missions that astronauts said it was foul smelling and contributed to what was called "a brown haze" in the cabin air, according to NASA spokesman Charles Redmond.

Flight director John T. Cox said Sunday that the new, simple design seems troublefree. He noted: "It's more like a camp stool now and it works real well."

Years of research were devoted to developing a toilet that could work in the weightlessness of space. On Earth, gravity is used to collect and dispose of body wastes. Since there is no gravity in orbit, the engineers had to find another way to control and dispose of urine and feces.

The shuttle toilet uses two blowers to create air pressure that forces the wastes into a liquid holding tank. In the earlier missions, the solid wastes were broken up and liquified in the toilet by whirling tines in a system similar to a kitchen disposal.

The solids would be flung by the tines against the inside wall of the toilet. A flow of air from the blowers would dehydrate the material, turning it into a powder. The powder would then be washed away in later uses of the toilet and collected in a holding tank.

In actual use in space, however, astronauts found that the tines tended to jam. Additionally, the powdered material often formed a thick residue that clogged the drain. Astronauts were forced to clean the blocked drain, a task that was not pleasant.

To correct the problem, Redmond said that the tines have been removed and the inside walls of the toilet lined with a plastic bag.

When the toilet is used now, solid material is dehydrated by the flow of air and collects on the plastic.

too many are "out of work or down on their luck." We must not and will not rest until everyone who wants a job has found one.

Mondale and Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro meanwhile were to lead 250,000 working people and their families up Fifth Avenue for New York City's annual Labor Day parade.

"We're marching to protect our future and defend our past," said Harry Avrutin, secretary of the AFL-CIO Central Labor Council, which sponsored the parade, with the theme "Justice and Jobs."

On Sunday, thousands of New Yorkers strolled through a street fair sponsored by a hospital workers union which last week ended a 46-day strike.

Thirty women studying carpentry, plumbing and electrical wiring showed off their skills by building a wood frame house.

About 1,000 members of 13 unions striking Phelps Dodge copper works staged a two-hour march and rally at Clifton, Ariz. Although 200 Department of Public Safety officials were in the area, there was no repetition of violence that has marred previous rallies during the more than 14-month dispute.

"Violence is not the answer. Violence does not settle labor disputes," the Rev. Steve Stencil said during Mass at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Clifton.

In California, lifeguards said the surf was low, but that didn't deter 10,000 people who watched the finals of the $64,000 Ocean Pacific Pro-Surfing Championship from Huntington Beach pier.

Further north, about 2,000 people linked hands and beach towels to protest oil drilling in the Pacific Palisades.

An estimated 1.1 million people soaked up sun on Southern California's beaches Sunday.

On the Atlantic Coast, New Jersey officials said crowds were disappointing. Summer business along the 110-mile shoreline was reported off by as much as 20 percent from last year, partly because of cool water and rainy weekends.

School considers tax hike

Trustees of the Pampa Independent School District will meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday to consider a tax revenue increase.

The school board adopted an $11.8 million operating budget Aug. 16. Supt. James Trusty said the 12.7 percent increase over last year's budget resulted from inclusion of state mandated hikes in teachers salaries and career ladder supplements resulting from passage of House Bill 72.

Also included in the budget are construction and renovation project funds and a building maintenance contingency fund.

The budget committee had prepared a more conservative budget of $10.8 million, representing a 3 percent increase, before passage of HB 72 necessitated the additional increases, Trusty explained.

In other business, the board will hear a report on Special Education transportation, consider a request for purchase of two new 71-passenger buses and discuss personnel matters.

MISS TEXAS-USA—Laura Martinez-Herring, hasn't always been glamorous. For a year, she the newly crowned Miss Texas-USA from El Paso, recently talked about her life, which worked as a social worker in India. (AP Laserphoto)

New Miss Texas-USA goes from social work to glamor

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Miss Texas-USA hasn't always looked this glamorous. After high school, Laura Martinez-Herring got a job as a social worker in India — a job, she thought, would give her a chance to help children, hike and enjoy nature. Instead, the newly crowned Miss Texas-USA found herself swinging a pick and ax, digging toilets, planting vegetable gardens, fixing pipelines and building roads. But it was a year, she said recently, she would not trade for anything. "It's no exaggeration that I traveled with everything I owned in a backpack," the 20-year-old brown-eyed brunette said. "It was certainly one of the best experiences of my life. If I was asked to do it again, I'd do it." Miss Martinez-Herring said that during the months in India, she learned to live without luxuries. "When I returned to the United States, I felt like I was in the year 2000," she said. Now, however, Miss Martinez-Herring is becoming accustomed once again to the nicer things in life. She received the crown, banner and prizes of Miss Texas-USA on July 23 in San Antonio. The pageant was the second she had entered — the first big pageant, she noted, and she beat out 103 other women to gain the title. But her victory came only after months of exercising, dieting and sacrificing to mold herself into the exact woman the judges were seeking to represent Texas in the Miss USA contest. Miss Martinez-Herring even made trips to chiropractor to gain one-quarter inch in height and make her an even 5 feet 7 inches. Yet, she admitted with a broad smile, it was worth it. "You have to have a lot of confidence to be in beauty pageants," she said. "I never met a beauty contest winner who thought she couldn't win." But, Miss Martinez-Herring said, she initially lacked the self-confidence she needed. "At first I was embarrassed about the bathing suit part, but now I realize that was just a lack of confidence," she said. Miss Martinez-Herring said beauty pageants were the farthest thing from her mind when she returned to El Paso from Europe last September. She had graduated from a Swiss boarding school, completed her stint in India as a social worker and traveled in India, Egypt, Poland and the Philippines before returning to the United States. Arriving too late to enroll in college, she took a job at a local clothing store, then as a photographic model. "After the third photographer encouraged me to enter a beauty pageant, I decided to," she said. She won the first contest she entered, becoming Miss El Paso. The next step was winning the Miss Texas-USA pageant. "I was absolutely bewildered when I made the top five (finalists)," she said. "Then the first runner-up was announced and I realized I had won. I couldn't control my emotions." Her reign as Miss Texas-USA began immediately after the conclusion of the pageant and she already has represented the Lone Star State at the World's Fair in New Orleans. As she the first Hispanic to win the title of Miss Texas-USA, Miss Martinez-Herring said she is "honored." "Out of 14 million people in Texas, 3 million are Hispanics," she said. "It's nice to have a girl who can represent the Latin and Anglo elements of Texas."

Woman to be charged in newborn's death

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Officials at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport say they will file charges later this week against a 21-year-old woman suspected of delivering a baby in an airport restroom, then strangling it and dumping the body in a trash can. Airport Police Chief Tom Shehan — who said the woman was out on a writ of habeas corpus — said the baby boy's body was discovered Friday night by a janitor who was emptying a trash can. The woman, believed to be the mother, was detained Saturday after she returned to the airport and was preparing to board an airplane. R.O. Medford, a medical investigator at the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office, said the boy died by "asphyxiation due to manual strangulation." He ruled the death a homicide. Shehan said investigators learned the woman's name from airport personnel who said they had assisted a woman found hemorrhaging at the airport Friday night.

The woman told the airport workers she did not need medical assistance and left. The woman was scheduled to be transferred to the Tarrant County Jail in Fort Worth, but Shehan said she was out on a writ of habeas corpus Sunday afternoon.

Seven Texas cities vying for a new military facility

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Seven Texas cities are among 20 communities in five states competing for a military base that could boost the economy of the chosen city by $300 million annually. Navy Capt. James J. Ridge, in an Aug. 21 letter, invited the cities on or near the Gulf Coast to submit a proposal by next January that provides information about the community so that the Navy can select a base site by April. In addition to Corpus Christi, the Texas cities of Houston, Brazosport, Galveston, Port Arthur, Orange and Brownsville have been invited to compete for the base that would be home to four U.S. Navy ships and some 9,000 personnel and families. "They want to know about land prices and the local cost of constructing the facility they have in mind," said Jimmy Lyles, executive vice president of the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce. "They want information on channel depths and whether a Navy facility already is located in town. They want us to prove we have sufficient city services, spare room in our school system and adequate housing to handle additional families in our community," he said. The base would bring about 7,000 individuals and 1,640 families to the home port, officials estimate. "These people will buy homes and cars, clothes, gas and food, and that means other people will have jobs," Lyles said. Payroll at the base would be about $60 million annually, but the "real impact could be about $300 million a year into the local economy," Lyles said. "Anytime you talk about this much money coming into your community people get pretty excited," said Lyles. He said he had received about 100 telephone calls in the last month from people offering help in a variety of ways to attract the Navy. The base would be built for the battleship USS Wisconsin, currently inactive and based at the Philadelphia Navy yard. The Gulf port would also be home for a guided missile cruiser.

Boy declared dead three time is alive

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A boy who was declared dead three times during treatment for a painful fusing of the skull bones is back at home, frolicking "like any other 5-year-old," his father says. Adam Sherrod has suffered since he was 3 months old from Crouzon's disease, a hereditary condition that causes the natural seams of the skull to fuse and dangerously squeeze the growing brain. His mother, Donna Sherrod, also had suffered from Crouzon's and had been warned by doctors that there was a 50-50 chance her son would be born with the disease. As Adam's brain began pressing against his skull, the pressure deformed his cheekbones, nose and eyes. By June, it caused his eyes to bulge so far that doctors feared a blow to his head could jar them from their sockets.

doctors worked to move it, they nicked an artery just above the roof of his mouth — an accident that would haunt them for weeks and nearly cost Adam his life. On July 16, just a week before Adam was to be released from the hospital, blood began pouring from above his palate. The bleeding was stopped, but resumed again July 22. Corrective measures were taken, but at 5:30 a.m. his heart stopped, and doctors told Mrs. Sherrod that Adam was dead. One minute later, without help from nurses or doctors, the bleeding stopped and Adam's heart stabilized. "At 5:25 I hit my knees and prayed like never before," Mrs. Sherrod said. "I told God Adam was his and to do with him what he thought was right. I gave him my son and he gave him back."

Twice more that day, once on the operating table when his kidneys and heart shut down and once in intensive care, doctors thought the little boy was dead but managed to revive him. For the next month, Adam, who emerged from the operation with the seams in his skull properly opened and his bleeding artery removed, frolicked in the hospital's playroom with his mother, nurses and other children. Then he went home. "Adam's doing fine," his father, James Sherrod, said Sunday. "He's like any other little 5-year-old boy now. He's always in a mess." "We're together and hopeful," Mrs. Sherrod said. "Things are getting better because we're stronger than ever."

During the surgery, Wong and three other surgeons and 10 attendants successfully cracked Adam's skull, manually shifted his brain and grafted bone from inside his face to expand the space inside his head. But with the operation more than 80 percent complete, an air tube slipped down Adam's throat. As

Refugee trying to get funds for Vietnamese community

HOUSTON (AP) — A Vietnam refugee who swept floors for a living after fleeing to the United States nine years ago says he hopes to begin construction early next year on a community that will include homes for many fellow countrymen now living in a condemned housing project. Tong Ich Pham and two partners bought 217 acres of land about 15 miles northeast of Houston in March 1982. They plan to buy an adjacent 120 acres and build a community that will be called St. Martin Village. The first of four phases of the project will take about two years to complete and will cost about $12 million, he said.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Another African nation to fade

With each passing year since the formerly white-ruled African state of Rhodesia became the black-ruled state of Zimbabwe in 1980, there has been less and less reason for optimism over the new nation's prospects. Now there appears to be no reason at all. Earlier this month, Zimbabwe's dominant political party officials declared its intention to transform the country into a one-party state "along Marxist-Leninist lines."

So much for democracy, political pluralism and any chance for a prosperous, free economy in yet another African country.

Zimbabwe's official charted fate is all the sadder because the new nation, despite its problems, was blessed with some impressive political and economic assets. The agreement that paved the way for black rule gave the nation a parliamentary democracy and a constitution that included guarantees for minority rights. The economy was strong and most of the 260,000 whites seemed determined to stay and work to build the country.

All this gave Zimbabwe a chance to become that as-yet-unrealized African ideal—a genuinely democratic prosperous, multi-racial state. Alas, the dream is not to be, or at least not in Zimbabwe.

The country's Marxist prime minister, Robert Mugabe, and his pro-Marxist Zimbabwe African National Union may not tear up the constitution and impose their dictatorship until the end of this decade, but the country is already heading for the rocks. The economy is sagging as whites leave the country and foreign investment declines in tandem with international confidence in Zimbabwe's future. A tribal insurgency, and the government's brutal countermeasures, only add to the aura of violence and deterioration.

One nation watching with particular interest is South Africa. Without condoning their system of apartheid, it is easy to understand why some of the minority South Africans are cautious about institution a majority-rule government embracing all races. If Zimbabwe is a model for transition to black rule, a change in the South African system could be the mere substitution of one form of tyranny for another.

In Zimbabwe, the imposition of a full-blown Marxist dictatorship would ruin that country and further impoverish its people, just as Marxist dictatorship and sheer ineptitude wrecked neighboring Angola and Mozambique during the 1970s. It would also cripple efforts for peaceful reform in South Africa. These lessons appear lost on Mugabe.

There goes 'sleaze issue'

NEW YORK (NEA) — The leaders of the Democratic Party have cynically destroyed too many opponents by the very tactics now being employed against Geraldine Ferraro to be under any illusion as to where the grim process now underway will end. Least of all are they, or she (for she is one of them), in any position to plead for mercy. They have lived by the sword, and now one of their own is going to perish by it.

For, despite the smattering of journalistic applause that followed Ms. Ferraro off stage after her brave press conference following the release of her and her husband's financial statements, nobody can seriously suppose that this controversy has been laid to rest. Like the Hydra, it simply grows two new heads every time one is lopped off.

Let's review the damage that cannot be undone, and some of the questions that remain:

1. Gone forever is the cozy image of the gutsy little Queens housewife from Archie Bunker territory. In its stead we see a multimillionaire family with four homes, owning and/or operating extensive real estate properties in some of the seediest areas of downtown Manhattan. Ms. Ferraro and her husband insist they had no idea that they were playing landlord to one of the Mafia's biggest pornography operations — but they were doing it, and profiting by doing it, nonetheless.

2. Ms. Ferraro's brazen assertion that "We paid more than our fair share of taxes" is an out and out falsehood and she knows it. She has owed the government nearly $30,000 ever since 1978, when her tax accountant allegedly made a mistake in her favor, and the interest and penalties totaled almost $23,000 more, or $53,000 all told, by the time she finally "discovered the error" and corrected it — only now.

3. Her long-standing effort to hide the truth about her husband's finances behind the contention that she knew nothing about them and didn't profit by them, and therefore didn't have to report them to Congress, has collapsed. She was and is an officer in his enterprises, and prudently reported to the IRS (though not the Congress) the profits she earned from participating in them.

4. She violated the law in her very first race for Congress by accepting from her husband and children more than 25 times as much in campaign contributions as they were legally entitled to give her. When forced by the FEC to return this money, she sold a piece of real estate to raise the funds. Unfortunately, one of the ultimate buyers was her husband — who thus contrived to put up part of the money she used to pay him back.

5. Easily worst of all, her husband has been systematically loaning money to his own businesses out of the million-dollar estate of an elderly woman, now incompetent, of whose finances a Queens County judge had named him conservator. The first $100,000 was borrowed (unsecured) last October; another $75,000 went the same route in February. Both were repaid in March.

These loans may well explain why Ms. Ferraro's husband has been so notably reluctant to make public his own financial records. For the information of people unfamiliar with how such things work, appointment as conservator of an estate of this size is one of the juiciest pieces of patronage dispensed by New York's judges, and usually goes (as in this case) to a politically well-connected lawyer or businessman. He earns a hefty fee — approved by the court — for routinely managing the assets. But borrowing from them for his own business is a clear and serious violation of his fiduciary duty, and I personally know one young and promising lawyer who went to prison for doing it.

And there, Tip, goes your "sleaze issue."

Today in History

Today is Monday, Sept. 3, the 247th day of 1984. There are 119 days left in the year. Today is Labor Day.

Today's highlight in history: On Sept. 3, 1939, Britain and France declared war on Germany, marking the start of World War II.

On this date:

Five years ago: Hurricane David struck the Florida coast after tearing a path of destruction through the Caribbean.

One year ago: The Soviet Union stepped up its verbal attacks on the United States in the wake of the downing of the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747, but stopped short of acknowledging that it had shot the plane down.

Today's birthdays: Actress Kitty Carlisle Hart is 70. Actress Irene Papas and cartoonist Mort Walker are 61. Actress Anne Jackson is 58. Actress Eileen Brennan is 49. Actress Valerie Perrine is 41.

Thought for today: "Man is a history-making creature who can neither repeat his past, nor leave it behind." — W.H. Auden, poet (1907-1973).

Another Eden down drain

As our planet gets carpeted with asphalt, don't let it be forgot that once upon a time men got a second chance at Eden.

On the world's uttermost island—farthest from any mainland—the garden islands of Hawaii.

I was there. The first nights of my marriage were shrouded with Polynesian moonlight though a venetian blind—in a honeymoon house just off Waikiki in Hawaii.

It isn't there anymore. Hawaii in 25 years of statehood has prospered. But was it worth it?

Hawaii, before statehood, was sugar cane and pineapple. It was a polyglot population of Japanese, Filipinos, Chinese, Koreans, Portuguese, Caucasians—and a few Hawaiians.

On white sand beaches and in the surging surf generations of Hawaiians played as hard as mainland America worked.

There was enough Navy presence to help finance the fund; never enough intrude.

Until Pearl Harbor—and statehood.

In the 25 years since, the Japanese who could not conquer the islands—have bought them.

Instead of five days on a Matson liner, today's tourist on a cheap-seat jet can be there in five hours.

In all the islands of Hawaii there are but a million permanent residents—most of those in Honolulu on Oahu—but every year they are outnumbered four-to-one by tourists.

So Sheraton alone has a dozen hotels in Hawaii, another under construction and will be building five more within five years.

Hawaii is trying not to become Miami Beach. Kauai and Maui and the big island of Hawaii have decreed growth limits—but the multiplication of population appears malignant, uncontrollable.

Four more areas have been designated for resort development on Maui. The once-charming fishing village of Lahaina—for all its seascape—is mostly a main street of tourist thingamabob shops against a horizon of high-rise hotels.

Gov. George Ariyoshi is trying. He vows, "We will keep certain parts of our islands relatively undeveloped."

But he says there is no turning back to "the nice old days" now that the islands' people have learned to lean on tourist dollars.

So the average house in Hawaii costs half again what a mainland house costs. Taxes are 62 percent more. Food in Hawaii is the highest anywhere.

In the original Eden there was a forbidden fruit. Nowhere in the Bible does it say it was an "apple." I wonder—was it "money"?

About that bombing joke

One Watergate revelation came as no surprise to me.

Wait! Don't go away. This isn't another essay on the decline and fall of a former president. Today's subject is an indiscretion of the current president.

But first, a few words about Watergate, although I have to begin in the early '60s, when I was with Radio Free Europe in Vienna.

Richard Nixon, having lost races for the presidency and the governorship of California, was then in the political wilderness. But his name still made news, and I had been assigned to contact him when he emerged from a tour of Eastern Europe and record for RFE's audiences in the satellite nations his impressions of their homelands.

Which I did, to the intense interest of my wife.

"Well, what was he like?" she asked as I walked in the door that evening.

"He has a dirty mouth," was the immediate response.

A decade later, all those expletives, deleted and otherwise, were no news to me although they were to the American public. I wondered a bit at the time why that should be, since I was certainly not the first in the newsgathering business to have been exposed to the natural Nixon.

Yet to my knowledge, the public had never been told that a public figure who had been under intense media scrutiny as a representative, senator, vice president and presidential candidate had an exceedingly pungent way of expressing himself.

Brought to our real subject, which is what strikes me as possibly most disturbing in Ronald Reagan's little joke about bombing the Russians.

The remark, you'll recall, was made during a microphone test. The broadcasting people have an agreement with the White House that such warm-up comments will remain off the record.

The print media are not a party to the agreement, however, and it was through their reports, obtained from sources in the studio, that the incident came to public attention.

Should it have? The president, members of his staff have since reminded us, has a habit of using self-mocking humor.

So he does. There is plenty of public evidence of that. And had his mockery been directed only at himself, there would have been no point in suppressing it or very likely even reporting it.

But it wasn't. It touched an exceedingly sensitive nerve in a vast public. It could not be ignored, as the attention it has since received demonstrates.

One last historical note, this one concerning Joseph McCarthy. Rather, the circumstances of one of his more celebrated capers, as related by Richard Rovere, the late, great Washington correspondent for the New Yorker.

Encountering two newsmen in the Senate Office Building, according to Rovere's account, McCarthy asked if they were looking for a story. The answer being affirmative, he said he would give them one: They could report that he was subpoenaing Harry Truman.

"He reached in his pocket, where he always kept a wad of blank subpoenas, and began then and there making one out for the former president," Rovere wrote in his 59 biography, "Senator Joe McCarthy."

The reporters had their story, he went on, but were angered at journalistic custom that required them to publish it as "news," since it had come from a public figure, but prohibited them from reporting the context in which it had been conceived.

The system is different today. It could not happen that way again—at least, I don't think so.

Which brings us to the moral in this. And that is that it is not the function of those professionals in public communication to protect public figures from themselves. The latter must bear responsibility for their own words and actions.

The responsibility of the communicators is first, last and always to report it like it is.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ARCH.)

Bits of history

In 1637, religious dissident Anne Hutchinson was sentenced to banishment from Massachusetts.

In 1862, Union forces were defeated by the Confederates at the Second Battle of Bull Run.

In 1941, the siege of Leningrad by Nazi troops began during World War II.

In 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur arrived in Japan at the end of World War II, and set up Allied occupation headquarters.

In 1963, the Hot Line communications link between Washington and Moscow went into operation.

In 1967, the U.S. Senate confirmed the appointment of Thurgood Marshall as the first black justice on the Supreme Court.

In 1980, Poland's government approved preliminary accords with striking workers in a bid to end that country's labor crisis.

Ice blobs plague Discovery

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A rapid burst of firings from Discovery's jets today failed to dislodge two chunks of ice blocking waste water outlets on the side of the orbiting ship.

"It didn't do a thing; we've still got the ice blobs," pilot Michael Coats said after the jets were triggered 184 miles above Australia.

A television picture, taken by a camera mounted on the end of Discovery's 50-foot robot arm, showed a lump of ice 2-to-3-feet long extending from the waste water outlet and another about a foot long protruding from the toilet drain.

The ice has prevented the crew from using the toilet and held up additional tests of a 10-story-tall solar wing.

Earlier, commander Henry Hartsfield had used the camera to examine the area and reported only slight melting overnight.

Mission control in Houston then instructed him to fire the jets to vibrate Discovery's frame.

"That gave us a pretty good shake," Coats said as the jets ignited. But it wasn't enough.

Controllers also were considering using the arm to tap on the ice to loosen it.

When the trouble was discovered Sunday, Discovery shifted position so the ice faced the warmth of the sun, in an unsuccessful attempt to melt the lumps.

Other than the discomfort of having no toilet, the five men and one woman aboard the ship were not threatened in any way by the ice. The concern was that it might break off during the stress of re-entry into Earth's atmosphere on Wednesday and damage thermal protection tiles. This would not endanger the astronauts, but would mean costly and time-consuming repairs.

The ice at first blocked only the waste water nozzle. Mission control instructed the astronauts to see if water still could be forced through, but that caused the toilet outlet to become clogged.

After studying the problem, the ground directed the crew not to use the toilet and told them: "We would like you to use the onboard Apollo bags."

On the Apollo moon flights, astronauts used plastic bags with chemicals inside for human waste, and 48 of the bags were stored aboard Discovery for just such an emergency.

Discovery Commander Henry

Hartsfield later reported: "We tried out those Apollo bags. We decided those Apollo astronauts must have been real men."

Astronaut Judy Resnik joked: "We just want to know, does this mean we don't have to clean the (toilet) filters anymore?"

Flight director John Cox said in Houston that he did not know why the ice formed.

"For all we know, this may have been occurring on previous flights," he said. He reported damage to tail tiles on shuttle Challenger last April may have been caused by a chunk of ice falling off during re-entry.

Cox said tests of the solar panel planned today had been put off until the ice problem was resolved. He said the device could not be extended with the ship in the port-side-to-sun position that was being considered.

Miss Resnik spent most of Saturday and Sunday raising and lowering the solar panel in a test of a device that will be used to capture the sun's energy for space stations of the future.

The exercise went so well that she was able to complete all the tests planned over a three-day period in two. As a result, only repeat tests were scheduled today and if they couldn't be done, nothing would be lost, Cox said.

Reagan goes to the bedrock of his conservative support

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, returning to his home state to launch his last political campaign, came to the bedrock of his conservative support to ask for four more years in the White House.

"It's good to be in Orange County, where the good Republicans go before they die," Reagan told a crowd Sunday at El Toro Marine Corps Air Station as he arrived in southern California for the formal kickoff of his re-election campaign today.

Then he added, "But also, I think, a lot of good Democrats, too."

Speaking through a public address system in his new armored parade car, Reagan said everyone aboard Air Force One was smiling as the plane headed west.

"We don't do it often enough," said the president, who has tried to spend some time at his California ranch every couple of months since his election four years ago. "Give us four more years, and we will."

Orange County, south of Los Angeles, has gone overwhelmingly for Reagan in both his gubernatorial campaigns and in the 1980 general election. Four years ago it gave him a larger majority than any other county in the country.

"It's Ronald Reagan's last campaign," campaign press secretary James Lake observed. "He wants to start it in his home state before audiences he knows are friendly and for whom he has a lot of affection and have always given him a lot of support."

Republican organizers predicted up to 30,000 people would turn out today for a GOP rally at Mile Square Regional Park to give Reagan a big sendoff for the traditional Labor Day campaign opener.

The Democratic nominees, Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro, were due in nearby Long Beach a few hours later on the cross-country Labor Day launch of their campaign.

Reagan planned to fly from Orange County to Cupertino in northern California for another rally, then on to Salt Lake City to address the American Legion on Tuesday. On Wednesday, before returning to the White House, Reagan is scheduled to stop in Chicago — his third visit to hotly contested Illinois in as many weeks — to address a conference.

Mondale, Ferraro seek to shake President's popularity

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine A. Ferraro are beginning the fall presidential campaign with a joint coast-to-coast Labor Day swing full of themes they think will shake President Reagan's popularity with the voters.

In one day, the Democratic presidential nominee and his running mate were to march in parades in New York and Merrill, Wis., and then fly into Reagan's home state of California even as the president finishes his own fall campaign kickoff there.

Campaign aides said Mondale and Ferraro are beginning in New York to emphasize their strength in the Northeast, then moving on to a small town setting in the Midwest, where the Democratic ticket also has a core of voter support.

In Merrill, Mondale was to spell out specifics of his new plan for reducing the federal budget deficit and then challenge Reagan to do the same.

Just as Mondale successfully put Reagan on the defensive on the issue of raising taxes, Mondale is hoping to do the same by challenging the president to explain his own proposals for reducing federal spending, according to campaign aides.

In California, Mondale planned to challenge the widely held premise that California's 47 electoral college votes in November belong to Reagan.

"We are taking the debate to Ronald Reagan," Mondale's press secretary Maxine Isaacs said.

Mondale and Ferraro planned to appear later today at a rally in Long Beach, the hometown of California's Republican Gov. George Deukmejian.

The joint Mondale-Ferraro campaign appearances this week in New York, California and Oregon were to publicly emphasize Mondale's confidence in her after the controversies over her family finances.

To emphasize unity among Democrats, Mondale's former rival for the party nomination, Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, was to appear with Mondale and Ferraro at Long Beach.

Hart beat Mondale soundly in the Democratic primary election in California but is now campaigning actively for the ticket, hoping to attract the votes of young urban professionals who supported Hart's candidacy.

No sooner than the president finishes speaking to the American Legion Convention in Salt Lake City, Mondale will address the same group on Tuesday. The same is true for the B'nai B'rith meeting in Washington on Thursday, where Mondale planned to attack Reagan's support for a constitutional amendment permitting prayer in public schools.

'Call' lands chaplain in jail

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Bill Whitehead is probably the only minister whose congregation is always changing. He's a jail chaplain.

"A lot of people get the idea we're up there patting them on the back," he said. "That's not so. I'm in there for the purpose of spiritual strength."

Whitehead, 54, got interested in being a jail chaplain nine years ago on a visit to the Durant, Okla., jail, and now spends his time at the Grayson County Jail.

"It was my first experience in a jail. It was very cold, very shocking," he recalled in a recent interview with the Sherman Democrat newspaper.

He said he got his "call" to his jail ministry three days after that visit: "I got up one morning and was praying when God gave me the vision to work in this type of ministry. That's how mine (the calling) came."

As a licensed chaplain at the county jail, Whitehead serves as spiritual adviser to prisoners, a ministry that he describes as "a never-ending challenge."

"I'm probably the only one in town that has an ever-changing congregation," Whitehead said.

The chaplain post is not a full-time job. In his off hours, Whitehead is a maintenance department employee at the Libbey-Owens Ford plant here and a member of the Fairview Baptist Church.

He headed the Christian Inmate Ministry Program at Fairview

Baptist and began Sunday services behind bars.

Whitehead never knows from one Sunday to the next how many inmates will attend the religious services held in the jail's multi-purpose room.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There could be some pleasant surprises in store for you today regarding the outcome of a financial matter about which you've been concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The results should work out remarkably well if you make realistic evaluations today pertaining to situations that directly affect your self-interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Good deeds have ways of coming home to roost. Someone for whom you did a favor in the past is now secretly working on your behalf.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to discuss a matter of importance that involves you and an old friend. Frankness will resolve the issue to each one's satisfaction.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Be doubly persistent today where an important goal is concerned. All obstacles can be overcome if you are determined to get what you want.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Instead of limiting your concerns to present events, look beyond today's happenings and devise plans that could lead to a future success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be more specific than usual about your goals today if you hope to be successful. Proper focus helps bring all of your positive forces into play.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others may feel you are a shade slow today in making an important decision, but thoughtful deliberation works to your advantage. Take time to think.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Among your peers today, you might be the slowest starter. However, your resolve will continue to increase when they lose interest and let down.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your companions' social interests may be in conflict with yours today, but go along with their suggestions. You'll end up having a better time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) When properly motivated today, you have the capacity to fulfill your ambitions, especially if you are desirous of adding to your holdings or resources.

Making your choice

By Luella Klein, M.D.
In the past 20 years women have been able to make a number of choices about how they can plan their lives and their families. With the development of effective and safe contraception and more easily performed sterilization, women can be relieved of the fear of having unplanned pregnancies. When choosing a method of contraception, you will want to consider how safe and effective the method is as well as how that method meets your own special needs. Most women can become pregnant from their teens until they are in their 40s. Each month an egg is released from your ovary and passes into your fallopian tube. If a man's sperm meets the egg in the tube, the egg can be fertilized and will attach itself to the wall of the womb (uterus) where it grows and develops.

Different contraceptives prevent this in a number of different ways. The barrier methods (diaphragm, the condom, vaginal sponge, and creams, jellies or foams) prevent the sperm from reaching the woman's reproductive organs. Oral contraceptives (the pill) stop your body from releasing an egg each month. The intrauterine device (IUD) creates a reaction that prevents an egg from being fertilized and attaching itself to the wall of the uterus.

Natural family planning depends on the couple avoiding intercourse around the time of ovulation, determined either by a calendar, body temperature, vaginal mucus, body signs, or a combination of these methods.

If you have already reached the family size that is best for you, you may want to consider sterilization either for you or your husband. This is a step that should be taken only if you are certain that you will never want more children, and you should consider it as a step that cannot be reversed.

The most effective method for birth control is sterilization followed closely by the pill and the IUD. The barrier methods and natural family planning are less effective.

For the most part, any form of contraception is far safer, in terms of risk to life than childbirth itself. Each year, there are fewer deaths as a result of contraception than there are from complications of pregnancy and childbirth with the exception of women over 35 who smoke heavily and take the pill.

Whichever method you decide to use, be sure you understand exactly how it works and how it is to be used. You should be aware of what side effects to look for and be alert for signs of problems. This will help you make sure that you use the best, most effective and safest contraceptive for you.

Single, free copies of "Contraception: Which Method for You?" (p-005) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business side envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave. SW, Washington, D.C. 20024.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

Letters have meaning when pal is in the pen

DEAR ABBY: I just read in the newspaper that a Canadian rancher struck up a correspondence with a woman whose name he had found in one of those lonely hearts publications.

The man said he was not aware that the address to which he had been sending letters and money was a prison until the authorities notified him!

It seems that his pen pal, who claimed to be a "lonely widow," had been convicted of poisoning two of her four husbands, at least one of whom she had met through a lonely hearts ad.

Abby, I am appalled that all prisons are not identified as such—especially when an inmate places or answers an ad seeking a pen pal.

When I realize how close I came to answering one of those ads, I shudder.

Please comment in your column.
SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: I agree, all prisons should be identified as prisons, and I am as shocked as you to learn that they are not.

I know that prisoners are a lonely lot who need contact with the outside world, but "caveat emptor" (let the buyer beware) should not apply in these circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: "Don" and I have been living together for three years. His sister was married recently and Don received an invitation addressed to him and "guest."

I took this as an insult. Everyone in Don's family knows my name and also that we are living together. Don and I have attended all their family gatherings as a couple.

He told his mother I felt hurt, and her excuse was they didn't know how to address the envelope. If that was true, I think I should have received a separate invitation.

Then on top of everything, on my placard at the wedding dinner was written "Don's guest." They knew who Don was bringing, so why wasn't my name used? Do you think his family was trying to tell me something? And if so, what?
NAMELESS GUEST

DEAR GUEST: I think they have already told you something—that they have little or no regard for you as a person.

In addressing an invitation to an unmarried couple who are living together, the names should be written on separate lines in alphabetical order. Example: Henry A. Brown Mary Louise Turner

DEAR ABBY: Every once in a while you publish a valuable tip in your column on child safety. May I offer this one?

Recently, Margaret McCarthy, a sweet 5-year-old neighbor girl, was blowing up a small balloon when it was accidentally sucked into her throat and lodged in her windpipe, blocking the air passage.

When all efforts to dislodge the balloon failed, the child was flown in a helicopter ambulance to the nearest hospital, but within 15 minutes the child was dead.

It's too late to help Margaret, bless her soul, but if you print this, maybe other children will be spared.
A NEIGHBOR IN FORT MADISON, IOWA

DEAR NEIGHBOR: My heart goes out to the McCarthy family. And my profound thanks to you, good neighbor, for helping me to alert millions of readers to the insidious danger of a balloon in the hands of a small child.

DEAR ABBY: I have a slight problem. Last summer when I went to summer camp I got a terrific crush on one of the counselors. I was 14 and he was a college student. I am not one to show my feelings, so he probably didn't even notice me.

Last Christmas I did a dumb thing. I sent him a mushy card and enclosed a letter telling how neat I thought he was. I said I hoped he'd be back at camp next summer because I was planning to go back, then I said I hoped he would see me as a mature, grown-up young woman instead of a shy, immature kid—or words to that effect. Like a dummy, I enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope and asked him to write back. He never did.

Now I could kick myself for writing that stupid letter. I hear that he's coming back to camp this year and I don't know how to act toward him.

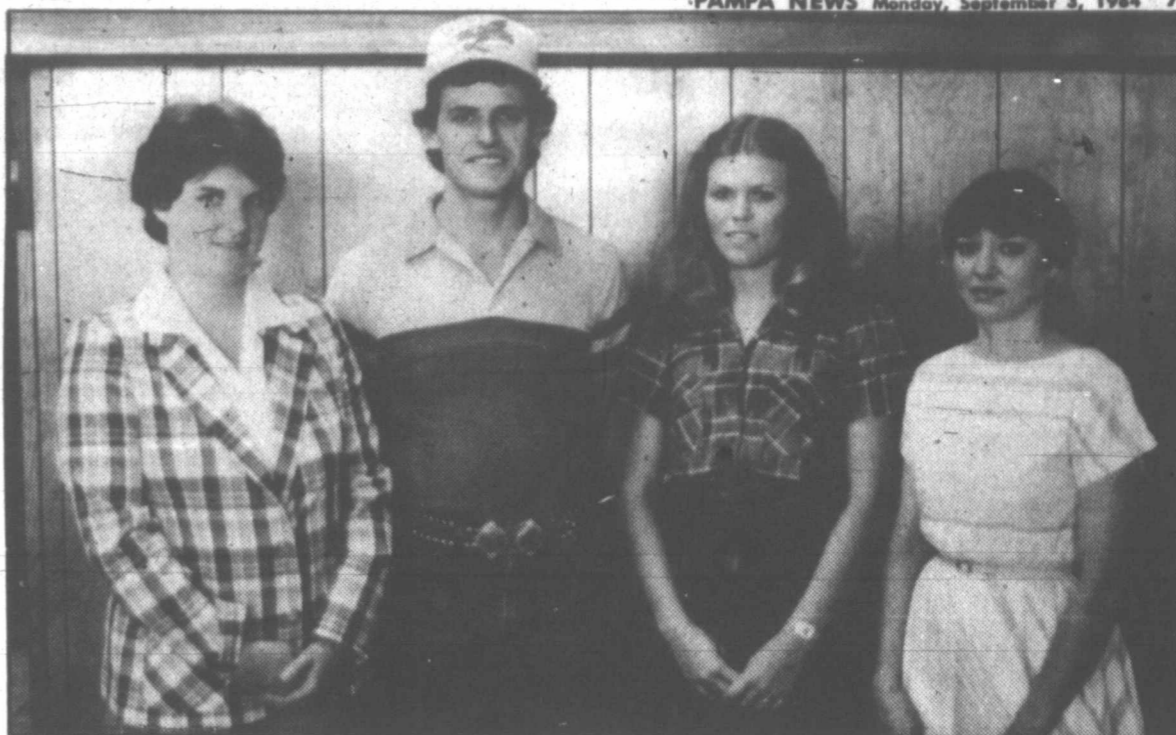

Should I apologize for that childish letter I wrote last Christmas? I think I'm over that crush now and I want him to see me as a mature, grown-up person. Tell me how to act, Abby.

ALL GROWN UP

DEAR GROWN UP: Forget that you ever wrote that letter and hope that he has. If you're a mature, grown-up woman, he is sure to notice.

"Please...DON'T DRIVE DRUNK"

Special gum helps smokers quit

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Smoking is not just a hard-to-break habit. It's a peculiarly stubborn form of drug addiction that involves a dependency on nicotine.

Consumer Reports' medical consultants say that one aid for quitting smoking is Nicorette, a prescription drug containing nicotine in chewing gum form. The nicotine is absorbed through the lining of the mouth directly into the bloodstream.

Nicorette gum is chewed slowly for 20 or 30 minutes, releasing nicotine gradually. This serves to relieve the withdrawal symptoms — such as irritability, restlessness, and difficulty in concentration — that most smokers experience on quitting.

While all forms of tobacco use can be addictive, cigarette smoking is especially so because most cigarette smokers inhale the smoke into their lungs. As a result, a high concentration of nicotine passes into the pulmonary veins and travels to the brain within seven seconds.

The concentrated dose of nicotine provides a "rush" that may be stimulating, relaxing, or satisfying in some way. When you stop smoking, you may experience withdrawal symptoms that can last for days or months.

Smokers also face the risk of cancer from the "tar" in cigarette smoke. To help smokers avoid "tar," researchers sought ways to provide nicotine without smoke.

Ingesting nicotine in pills or capsules doesn't work because the drug is broken down by the liver before it reaches the brain. Nicotine injections will reduce cigarette consumption and the craving to smoke. But too many injections are needed for that approach to be practical.

If you're not eager to give up smoking, Nicorette is not likely to be of much help. But if you do really want to stop, Consumer Reports' medical consultants say that Nicorette is the first product to come along that just might increase your chances of succeeding. Using the gum works best when it's combined with professional support and counseling.

first two years in office during recent interviews. (AP Laserphoto)

Freshmen sometimes 'lost' in Congressional shuffle

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — They want to reduce the deficit and balance the budget, preserve the union, create economic opportunity for all, protect the environment.

But most of Texas' six newest congressmen have found that for their first two years in office, they are largely "lost in the shuffle" among the 435 members of the U.S. House of Representatives.

"As a freshman class, our accomplishments are measured in inches — in first downs instead of touchdowns," said Mike Andrews, D-Houston.

Former Arlington Mayor Tom Vandergriff has found "we're to speak when we're spoken to, to some extent."

Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, was on his own as sheriff of Nueces County.

"All of a sudden I'm thrown into an arena with 434 others, and I'm just lost in the shuffle here with a lot of congressmen," he said.

Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, didn't buy the lay-low theory. "If all I were to do is come up here and vote be one-435th of the House of Representatives, that wouldn't be enough," he said.

Three of the newcomers to Texas' 27-member delegation won new districts added after the 1980 census. The others got their chance when the incumbents retired or went after higher office.

John Bryant, 37, had to make a decision in "a couple of days" when his predecessor, Jim Mattox, decided to relinquish his East Dallas congressional seat to run for attorney general.

An attorney, Bryant had spent eight years as a state representative in Austin, competing with a lot of other representatives from diverse areas of the state.

"I guess it was as good a preparation as you can have for coming to the Congress of the United States," he said. "I thought it would be much the same. The dynamics are the same."

"The one thing I didn't expect is the tremendous amount of time that we lost in this job traveling, going back and forth to vote. It's extremely difficult to concentrate on anything, to work on any given problems."

Bryant said he came to Washington "because I was very interested in government and have a philosophical orientation that causes me to want to make the country strong and open in its opportunities to everybody."

— Ron Coleman, 42, won his El Paso seat when his predecessor, Richard White, retired after 18 years in Congress. Like Bryant, Coleman is an attorney and a veteran of the Texas Legislature, where he served for nine years.

Also like Bryant, Coleman finds the state version. The difference, he said, is size. The U.S. House of Representatives is three times bigger than its Texas counterpart.

"I think you don't really recognize how much more difficult it makes it in terms of learning all the ins and outs and the politics of a place like this," said Coleman. "I think it can be accomplished, but I don't think it can be accomplished in one term, so I hope the voters will send me back for another term so I can get a better handle on the place."

Republicans have targeted Coleman's district as one they think they can win this year.

"One of my major jobs in Congress is to make sure that the other members know we're out there," said Coleman, who has formed a bi-partisan caucus of members from U.S.-Mexico border states.

— Mike Andrews, 40, narrowly lost to incumbent Lake Jackson Republican Ron Paul in 1980 and thinks he could have won in 1982. But luckily for him, a new, more Democratic district was created and Andrews ran for it instead.

The outgoing Houston attorney was elected chairman of his freshman class.

"I'd like to reduce the deficit and balance the budget," he said.

While the freshmen, have had some impact as far as generating discussion of the issue, "in terms of reducing the deficit, we've really been able to do very, very little," he said.

"I really believe that you don't have to be up here and be a senior citizen before you can have some impact on public policy," Andrews said. "I think that in about your third term, if you're good, you really ought to be able to have an effect."

— Tom Vandergriff, at 57, is the senior of the Texas freshmen. He was mayor of Arlington from 1951 until 1977, and presided over the

Scientists finding pieces to big puzzle of remembering

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Of all the skills of the human animal, perhaps nothing is so mysterious and complicated, so dazzling and wonderful, as the simple act of remembering.

Somewhere in the three pounds of wrinkled flesh inside the head are zip codes, airline angles, the feel of cat's fur, the taste of yesterday's lunch, the smell of attics explored in childhood, the images and facts and experiences and flotsam of a lifetime.

It's all stored up there, somehow. And marvel of marvels, when things are working just right, it's recallable within a split second.

Scientists have been thinking about thinking for a long time. It's slow going. But on several fronts, from psychology to neurobiology, they are finding pieces of the awesome puzzle of the remembrance of things past.

Some researchers look at the quirks and peculiarities of behavior to understand how the mind functions and how it fails when asked to dredge up memories under various experimental conditions.

Still others dissect the nerve cells of sea snails in hopes of capturing an honest-to-goodness, flesh-and-blood memory.

Two of the most fundamental divisions of memory — long-term and short-term — are easy enough to understand. Short-term memory is the fleeting consciousness of the parade of activity that passes in front of your nose. It's forgotten almost as fast as it's remembered, usually within 15 or 20 seconds. It's the power that lets you look up a telephone number, dial it and then never think of it again.

Long-term memories may also be forgotten — experts disagree on this point — but they can last, tattooed on the brain, for a long, long time. Short-term memory cannot hold much, but its long-term counterpart seems limitless.

The study of people with head injuries is helping researchers figure out the regions of the brain essential for memory. One of these unfortunate people is a man known in scientific papers only as H.M.

At age 27, surgeons removed part of his brain as a last-ditch cure for his severe epilepsy. His short-term memory is normal, and he can recall his life before the operation. But he has no long-term memories of the three decades since. He can do the same jigsaw puzzle, day after day, and it is ever fresh.

In that operation, the doctors removed most of his hippocampus and the nearby amygdala, two structures deep in the brain. Scientists now believe that the hippocampus is the master switchboard of conscious memories, moving facts from short-term memory into long-term storage.

At Brandeis University, psychologists are testing people with brain damage to measure two different faculties necessary to recall stories. After reading the same brief tale, some of them can remember all the details but not the plot. Others can repeat the main outline of the story but bring back none of the fine points.

With such studies of brain injury, says Dr. Arthur Wingfield, "you can infer backwards that if they have lost some part of their brain, it must be terribly important to that function. The biggest challenge is to define the functions that they've lost."

This research has revealed a lot about the complexity of memory. It is not, as some imagine, a brimming library where experiences are neatly filed away with some masterful catalogue. Instead, experts like to talk now of a whole system of different storage devices.

"I think memory should, more properly be conceived of as an umbrella term that describes the various ways in which experience exerts its effect on performance," says Dr. Neil Cohen of Johns Hopkins.

Studies of H.M. have been important in the recent distinction between two of these memory systems, known as declarative and procedural memory.

Declarative is sometimes called "fact" memory. It is the ability to learn specific information, such as names, faces, words and such.

Procedural is "skill" memory. It involves the kinds of things people learn to do over and over without thinking about them, such as riding a bicycle, swinging a golf club or playing the clarinet.

H.M., it turns out, cannot store new fact memories, but he can master new and demanding skills. With practice, for instance, he can solve a devilish puzzle in the fewest possible number of moves, even though he cannot consciously recall ever having seen it before.

H.M.'s damaged parts give scientists more clues about the role of these structures in storing memories.

"We know better which regions of the brain are essential for the two types of memory," says Cohen, "or, at least, which regions of the brain you can't do without."

The hippocampus and its neighbors in the brain are essential for storing — but not necessarily recalling — fact or declarative memories. But since skill memories work just fine without this section of the brain, obviously they function independently.

This, along with work on individual nerve cells, has given researchers some theories about where in the head various kinds of memories are tucked away. Some now believe that a skill memory actually changes the same nerve cells that control the reflexes involved in that skill.

"If you change your ability to analyze patterns, then you change the pattern analyzers in your brain in a direct way," Cohen says.

A leading idea about fact memories is that they, too, are scattered about. There is no separate memory box. Instead, different kinds of memories are stored near the regions of the brain that need them.

Whether, in fact, memory works this way will be difficult to prove, for human memory is difficult to study. There's no good substitute for a human brain. Rats and mice just aren't the same.

The business is also being approached by very different scientific disciplines that sometimes ignore each other's work. So almost any question in memory has several competing — and unproven — answers.

Consider one oddity of memory known as childhood amnesia. Almost nobody can remember when he was 1 or 2 or much of anything before age 5. Yet a 90-year-old man may have vivid recollections of first grade.

Why? Are the memories still up there but irretrievable? Or were they never stored?

Sigmund Freud believed that the memories were repressed. Digging out these supposedly incestuous and violent thoughts became a central goal of psychoanalysis.

Another idea is that children truly don't remember. They have not learned the classifications of things that grownups use to make sense of the variety in the world.

"The most common reason why we can't remember before the age of 3 or 4 is that we didn't code our experiences in the categories and with the language that we ultimately come to use as adults," says Dr. Elizabeth Loftus of the University of Washington.

A child won't remember the big unabridged dictionary in the living room until he knows what a book is and that it's called a book.

Another idea is that memories change as they get updated. Learning something new irrevocably alters the original version.

"It's like working on a computer," says Ms. Loftus. "You call up a file, edit it and then put the revised file back. The original is lost. I think that memory is a blend of the past and the present. New constructions are being continually made and stored in our minds."

The theory about fact and skill memories suggests a completely different explanation: Babies don't have the mental hardware necessary to store facts. The hippocampus and amygdala do not develop until age 1½ or 2. Until that happens, conscious memories cannot be filed away.

Some believe this is the kind of learning that happens in a sea slug called Hermisenda and a marine snail called Aplysia californica. These invertebrates, crudely simple when compared with a chipmunk, are used to test out ideas of what memories are made of.

During the 1960s, some scientists thought that memory might be stored in DNA, the material of heredity. There were reports of feeding trained worms to uneducated ones and passing on their talents. The work spawned jokes about grinding up professors and feeding them to students. But the notion of transferring knowledge this way has since been discounted.

Throughout the animal kingdom, nerve cells work in similar ways. Signals are passed from cell to cell across gaps known as synapses. One cell sends out a chemical called a neurotransmitter, and this activates receptors on a neighboring cell.

The snail work suggests that memories are strengthened connections between nerve cells.

Fertilize for wheat PROFIT!

You may be looking for ways to cut costs. Who isn't? But one thing all agronomists tell us is: "Don't cut back in areas that cause yields to decrease!"

They are talking about fertilizer. They encourage the wheat farmer to select varieties and apply fertilizer for optimum yields — that's your most profitable yield.

Yes, your cost per acre will increase as you move up toward your optimum yield. But your cost per bushel will be reduced.

You not only get more bushels per acre, you get more profit from every bushel you raise!

Base your fertilizer applications on soil test results and your yield goals. Let our Fertilizer Specialist help you.

We're ready when you are, with both anhydrous ammonia and dry blends.

Three tied for lead in TOT tourney

Paul McIntire found himself on the hook in the early going, but wriggled free to end up in a three-way tie for first place after Sunday's second round in the Top O' Texas Golf Tournament at the Pampa Country Club.

McIntire trailed defending champion Richard Ellis by four strokes and Steve Russell by three after the first nine holes were completed, but the 1984 Class 4A high school state medalist rallied down the stretch to tie for the overall lead at 139.

McIntire cut the gap with birdies on No. 14, 15, 17 and 18. Powerful drives by McIntire plus some clutch iron shots made the difference. He had putting problems, but so did Ellis and Russell.

"I was driving good all day, but I was hitting a lot of lips with my putts, but so was Steve (Russell)," McIntire said. "Those two-putt greens were hurting me."

McIntire, who along with Russell, trailed Ellis by one stroke for the lead after Saturday's first round.

McIntire bogied No. 2 and then missed a three-foot putt for par on No. 7, but it could have been worse on the front nine. Ellis missed a four-foot putt for a birdie on No. 9 that would have put him 5-up and Russell's seven-foot birdie try on No. 8 rimmed the cup.

Ellis and Russell were tied for the lead and McIntire trailed by one stroke going to the No. 17, 348-yard par-4 hole. McIntire made it a three-way tie after his second shot from 80 yards out dropped within one-foot from the cup and he holed out for a birdie.

"I just hope I can come out tomorrow and get some of those putts down," McIntire added.

Russell, an Amarillo native and a member of the University of Houston's 1984 NCAA champions, fell two strokes behind Ellis after the first five holes of yesterday's round, but he bounced back with birdies on No. 6 and 7, while Ellis bogied No. 7.

"I was hitting the ball pretty well, but I felt like I was misreading my putts," said Russell, who went immediately to the putting green after turning in his scorecard. "I just couldn't get the ball to drop and it made me lose a lot of confidence. I've got to be ready tomorrow or it's going to be all over for me."

Three strokes behind the leaders at 142 are Jackie Coffey and Glen Goldfinch.

Today's championship flight tees off at 1:15 a.m.

NFL roundup

Dolphins rout Redskins as NFL opens season

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

If National Football League players need four weeks of exhibition games to prepare for the season, you can't prove it by Dan Marino.

Marino, who missed all but the final week of the preseason with a broken finger on his throwing hand, rifled five touchdown passes to lead the Miami Dolphins to a 35-17 rout of the Washington Redskins Sunday in the opening day of the NFL season.

"He was a little rusty last week, but he was really sharp today," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "Just about everything he tried seemed to work out."

This included Marino's passing, which showed 21 completions in his first 24 attempts and 21 of 28 overall for 311 yards.

"They give you the chance to make the big play," said Marino, who particularly exploited Redskins' cornerback Anthony Washington and strong safety Tony Peters.

Marino's performance highlighted a 12-game schedule that included the first NFL regular-season game ever played in Indianapolis, a 23-14 victory by the New York Jets over the transplanted Colts, and good performances by several fill-in players.

In the other action, it was Atlanta 36, New Orleans 28; Denver 20, Cincinnati 17; Kansas City 37, Pittsburgh 27; San Diego 42, Minnesota 13; Chicago 34, Tampa Bay 14; New England 21, Buffalo 17; New York Giants 28, Philadelphia 27; Green Bay 24, St. Louis 23; San Francisco 30, Detroit 27, and the Los Angeles Raiders 24, Houston Oilers 14.

In an afternoon game today, Cleveland played Seattle. Dallas was at the Los Angeles Rams in the season's first Monday night game.

Jets 23, Colts 14
Pat Ryan, a seven-year veteran making his first start in the NFL, passed for 163 yards and two touchdowns to Mickey Shuler, leading the Jets over the error-prone Colts.

Ryan, thrust into the starting spot left vacant by the trade of Richard Todd to New Orleans and the court-trial problems of Ken O'Brien, hit Shuler on a 13-yard scoring pass with seven seconds left in the first half and on an eight-yarder late in the third quarter.

The Colts, playing their first regular-season game in the new Hoosier Dome since their move from Baltimore last spring, led 7-0 after Curtis Dickey's three-yard run in the second quarter but managed no consistent offense after that, losing four fumbles.

Falcons 36, Saints 28
Gerald Riggs, subbing for injured star William Andrews, ran for a club-record 202 yards and two touchdowns to lead Atlanta over New Orleans.

Atlanta's Tom Pridemore averted an almost certain winning touchdown by New Orleans with just under three minutes to play with a fumble recovery at his own four-yard line.

Broncos 20, Bengals 17
Gary Kubiak came off the bench to replace the injured John Elway and engineered a 75-yard, fourth quarter scoring drive that lifted Denver over Cincinnati.

Elway, who had fired one touchdown pass to help stake Denver to a 13-3 lead, left the game early in the third quarter after suffering a bruised left shoulder while scrambling out of bounds.

Chiefs 37, Steelers 27
Todd Blackledge, making his first pro start, passed for one touchdown and ran for another as

Kansas City turned four Pittsburgh turnovers into scores.

Blackledge, subbing for the injured Bill Kenney, fired a 22-yard scoring pass to Stephone Paige midway through the third quarter to cap an 80-yard scoring drive and boost the Chiefs' lead to 31-20. Blackledge completed seven of nine passes for 87 yards during the drive, which provided the Chiefs with their winning points.

Chargers 42, Vikings 13
San Diego's Dan Fouts and Wes Chandler hooked up on two early TD passes and newcomer Pete Johnson scored two more TDs as the Chargers routed Minnesota.

Fouts, who missed six games last year with a bad shoulder, completed 21 of 28 passes for 292 yards to ruin Minnesota Coach Les Steckel's first regular-season game in the NFL.

Bears 34, Buccaneers 14
Chicago turned interceptions by linebackers Mike Singletary and Al Harris into third-quarter touchdowns and rolled past Tampa Bay. It was the Bears' first opening day triumph since 1979, when the team last made the NFL playoffs.

In all, the Bears intercepted six Tampa Bay passes, including two by Gary Fencik, but the Singletary and Harris interceptions blossomed into quick touchdowns to seal the decision.

Patriots 21, Bills 17
Two Steve Grogan touchdown passes in the game's first eight minutes helped New England turn back Buffalo. Grogan hit wide receiver Stephen Starring for a 65-yard touchdown pass on the game's second play and threw a three-yard touchdown strike to Derrick Ramsey six minutes later.

Grogan completed 10 of 22 passes for 227 yards and Buffalo quarterback Joe Ferguson 27 of 40 passes for 263 yards.

Giants 28, Eagles 27
Phil Simms became only the second Giants quarterback in the club's 60-year history to pass for 400 yards in a game as he tossed four touchdown passes to lead New York over Philadelphia.

Simms completed 23 of 30 passes for 400 yards in picking apart the Eagles secondary. The 409-yard aerial show by Simms was second only to the Giants team record of 505 yards set by Y.A. Tittle in 1962.

Packers 24, Cardinals 23
Lynn Dickey passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lead Green Bay over St. Louis in the coaching debut of Forrest Gregg with the Packers.

The Packers bolted to a 21-7 lead early in the third period and had to hold off a late rally by the Cardinals. A 39-yard field goal by Eddie Garcia gave the Packers a 24-13 lead with 5:02 left in the third period and their eventual winning points.

Raiders 24, Oilers 14
Marcus Allen, Frank Hawkins and Jim Plunkett each scored on short touchdown runs as the Raiders beat Houston and spoiled the NFL debut of Houston Oiler quarterback Warren Moon.

Moon, who led Edmonton in the Canadian Football League to five championships, spurred the Oilers to a 7-0 halftime lead with a 10-yard pass to Mike Holston. But the Raiders, who were not shut out in the first half last season, struck back in the third quarter with touchdowns runs by Allen and Hawkins for a 13-7 lead.

Jockey wins 5,000th

BOSSIER CITY, La. (AP) — Jockey Larry Snyder moved into the elite circle of riders Sunday, posting his 5,000th career victory on the 24th anniversary of his first win.

"No, I don't think I'll ever hit 6,000," Snyder said in ceremonies after the victory. "I don't think I could stand the pressure."

Only five other riders have reached the 5,000 mark: Bill Shoemaker, John Longden, Laffitt Pincay Jr., Angel Cordero Jr., and Jorge Velasquez. Shoemaker is the only other American-born rider to accomplish the feat.

Snyder, 42, rode 8-5 favorite Tennessee Rite for a nine-length, wire-to-wire victory in the $50,000 Prelude feature race at Louisiana Downs.

Mexico president says many problems remain

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid said in his annual state-of-the-union message that his austerity program is pulling the nation out of its economic crisis, but he recognized living standards are deteriorating for many Mexicans.

"My administration is well aware that the improvements in the most general aspects of the economy are not yet reflected to any appreciable degree in the daily life of individuals and families, and that the severe measures taken have imposed painful sacrifices on society," he said.

"We have chosen to follow the hard path of economic realism because it affords the proper means for achieving an effective and lasting solution to our problems and is, consequently, a fundamental duty of political honesty."

De la Madrid took office in December 1982, inheriting the worst recession in 50 years from his predecessor, Jose Lopez Portillo. He immediately put an austerity program into effect and as a result won bailout loans from the International Monetary Fund to help meet payments on Mexico's massive foreign debt.

"We are emerging from the gravest aspects of the crisis and, at the same time, we are beginning to make qualitative changes in our development strategy with a view to making an in-depth attack on the problems," de la Madrid said in his second state-of-the-union report.

The nationally broadcast report is delivered traditionally on Sept. 1 with great ceremony in the Chamber of Deputies. The speech — lasting about 2½ hours — is preceded by a procession from the Palace of Government in the capital's main Zocalo square to the legislature, with de la Madrid wearing the red, white and green presidential sash.

"Even in crisis, the country has not been paralyzed," de la Madrid said. "The fields have been sowed, the mines are still being worked, factories are producing more."

"But we are still afflicted by a variety of economic and social ills. The most serious and pressing of these is the deterioration in living standards and the reduction in consumption that have resulted from inflation and the high cost of living."

Inflation that reached an unprecedented 100 percent in 1982 was reduced to 80 percent last year, but the government has conceded it will not reach its target of lowering the official rate to 40 percent this year. It is expected to fall between 55 and 60 percent.

"An abatement of inflation and of the generalized rise in prices will continue to be a priority objective. We cannot live with inflation, because it causes grave disruptions of the economy and unfairly affects those who have the least," de la Madrid said.

Economic activity declined by 4.7 percent last year, but the government predicts a rebound to about 1 percent growth for 1984.

"The crisis has not defeated us. It is we Mexicans who are defeating the crisis," the president said.

De la Madrid also referred to the immigration control legislation currently before the U.S. Congress which is intended to clamp down on the number of undocumented workers in the United States.

"As regards the eventual enforcement of new immigration laws in the United States, the Mexican government reiterated its solidarity with Mexicans in that country," he said. "On their behalf, we demand respect for their human and labor rights, and we are strengthening our consular services to support them."

The president said Mexico "will be prepared, if the case arises" to receive Mexicans forced to leave the United States by tightened immigration controls. An estimated 3 million to 6 million Mexicans are in the United States illegally.

He said Mexico is "vitaly concerned" by the violence in Central America.

"We cannot view with indifference what is happening to our brothers and near neighbors. The violence that has overtaken the region is a threat to our own security," de la Madrid said.

"Mexico is a member of the Contadora group formed with Colombia, Venezuela and Panama in January 1983 in an effort to find a peaceful solution to the regional conflict."

"So far, we have succeeded in preventing the war from becoming a generalized conflict in the region, and also in initiating a dialogue that did not previously exist among the governments of the area," de la Madrid said. "Mexico has employed its diplomatic resources to bring about the peaceful negotiations of differences, even though we are well aware that a solution depends on the political will of the parties concerned."

Portrait mystery solved

DALLAS (AP) — Ellery Queen probably would have dubbed it "The Case of the Missing Portrait," but for former President Gerald Ford, it simply was another case of politics making estranged bedfellows.

This week's mystery actually began before the Republican National Convention, when Trammell Crow, owner of the Loews Anatole Hotel, asked Ford for permission to name a hotel suite in his honor.

Ford was so impressed by that request that he donated a 2-foot-by-3-foot portrait of himself to Crow.

The painting immediately was hung on the library wall of what formerly had been called the Sovereign Suite on the 14th floor.

"The first official occupant of the Gerald Ford Suite was, appropriately enough, Vice President George Bush, who spent the convention week in Dallas. President Reagan stayed in another suite of the hotel.

The mystery began Monday. That's when occupant No. 2 — Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale — showed up and was directed to the Gerald Ford Suite.

"We put him there because it's the most convenient suite for him from a security standpoint," said hotel manager Randy Gantenben. "He had a fund-raiser that night with the reception in the atrium downstairs and the dinner in the Khmer Pavilion nearby.

On Tuesday, after Mondale departed, maids noticed that the Ford portrait was missing.

But alas, it seems Mondale never saw it, says his press secretary, Maxine Isaacs.

"It turns out that one of our well-meaning advance people did that (removed it from the wall) thinking it was the right thing to do. Neither Vice President Mondale nor his traveling party knew anything about it," Ms Isaacs said.

"Mondale wouldn't condone that kind of thing," she added.

The portrait, by the way, was recovered later. Maids found it in a closet.

Vatican attacks liberation theology

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican, struggling to stem priests' involvement in Marxist politics in developing countries, today spelled out its vehement opposition to such activity in a report by its heresy-fighting arm.

The report by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith is the Vatican's first comprehensive statement on the issue, and comes after Pope John Paul II stepped up a campaign against Marxist elements in what is called "liberation theology."

Liberal theology uses the words of the Gospel to justify social activism to aid the poor and oppressed. It has become a loosely used term, describing theoretical studies, clerics' left-wing politics and even the exploits of gun-toting priests.

In some cases, the theology has been used to support violence, including the overthrow of governments.

The movement started in Latin America in the mid-1960s and has spread to the Philippines, Africa, India and parts of the United States.

The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith prepared the report. Heading the congregation is Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger of West Germany, the Vatican's chief heresy-fighter.

In a rare leak of a Roman Catholic Church document of such importance, a newspaper in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, last week published excerpts of the Vatican report. The newspaper, O Globo, quoted the Vatican report as saying the Marxist ideas of liberation theology "directly threaten the truths of faith."

The newspaper further reported that the document said the objectionable Marxist concepts of liberation theology "corrupt the authenticity of generous efforts on behalf of the poor."

A copy of the report, released along with a statement from the United States Catholic Conference in Washington, said that the Sacred Congregation sought to "draw the attention of pastors, theologians and all the faithful to the deviations, and risks of deviation ... that are brought about by certain forms of liberation theology which use, in an insufficiently critical manner, concepts borrowed from various currents of Marxist thought."

The pope has involved himself in the fight against Marxist elements in liberation theology. On Aug. 22, he told an African bishops conference that Marxist "class struggle" has no place in church support for the poor and oppressed.

Vatican officials have repeatedly asked four priests in Nicaragua's leftist government to give up their posts, but they have defied the requests.

In a written statement today, the U.S. Catholic Conference quoted Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, as calling the Vatican statement a "lucid and helpful analysis of one of the most discussed movements in recent years."

Korean children arrive in U.S. for surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sixteen Korean children who traveled 5800 miles to the United States for free heart and eye surgery that they can't get at home looked tired but happy when they arrived to smiles, gifts and greetings in their native language.

Two other Korean children flew to Chicago on Sunday, and another pair went to Spokane, Wash.

Eighteen of the 20 children need life-saving heart surgery and "would surely die prematurely" without it, said Mort Sunshine, executive vice president of Variety Clubs International, the show business charity which along with nine hospitals is providing the care.

At Los Angeles International Airport, the children, accompanied by parents or guardians, were met Sunday by Korean-Americans who will act as foster families.

Variety Clubs representatives showered the children with gifts, including candy and T-shirts.

"It was just magnificent," Sunshine said. "They're the most beautiful children you've ever seen."

Two other children flew to Chicago, where they beamed at a crowd of well-wishers at O'Hare

International Airport before being whisked away to a hospital.

Another two children arrived in Seattle and went on to Spokane, Wash., Sunshine said.

The youngsters who arrived in Los Angeles appeared tired but happy as they walked off the plane, but one child collapsed in the airport.

"One of the children had a bad spell and turned blue," said Sunshine. "She was to have gone to San Diego, but she's being kept here overnight. The child is fine now."

Some of the 20 children, ages 2½ to 16, will take trips to Los Angeles-area attractions such as Disneyland before they return home, said Annie Cho, a volunteer with the Los Angeles Heart Institute who arranged housing for the youngsters, none of whom speak English.

Over six weeks, these and 80 more children will receive operations they cannot get at home under the Variety International Children's Lifeline, a program Variety Clubs established in 1980 to help sick children around the world.

Twenty-seven children from the Caribbean island nation of Dominica and 15 from Mexico arrived last week, Sunshine said. Others will be coming from Colombia and Barbados, and about 10 will receive operations outside the United States.

Variety Clubs will present the Variety Lifeline Award to first lady Nancy Reagan at a hotel dinner on Tuesday.

Because doctors and hospitals donate services, the operations cost "a pittance," Sunshine said. "We've been able to save a child's life for slightly under $2,000 average. We give them the equivalent of $35,000-$40,000 in services."
