By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHEELER — Neither the Wheeler County Water District board nor the Red River Authority could bridge the troubled waters surrounding the contract for the proposed Sweetwater Creek Reservoir.

The district voted Thursday to go ahead and request the RRA to seek a permit for the reservoir, a 2,500 acre lake northeast of Wheeler, and to provide the financing for it.

At the same time, the RRA board of directors, meeting in Wichita Falls, rejected a contract with the district, citing what Executive Director Ron Glenn said were "too many unanswered questions."

Under the contract, the RRA would issue bonds to pay for construction of the dam and operate the lake until the bonds are retired. The district would have been responsible for securing local support and would take over operation when the bonds are paid off.

In August, by a margin of 1,128 to 1,095, voters in Wheeler County approved a resolution authorizing the construction and support of the lake. But they rejected by a margin of 968 to 1,112, the levy of a maintenance tax to fund the local tax office for the lake.

Opponents of the lake are now challenging the outcome of the election. In a petition filed in 31st District Court here, area landowner Tom G. Puryear alleges that it was hard to ascertain the "true results" of the election; that "substantial changes" were made in the contract between the time absentee voting began and the Aug. 11 election; that the District and the RRA violated the Texas Open Meetings Law at a July 25 meeting; that the propositions were vague; that people not registered to vote cast ballots and that in one precinct, the ballot box was opened and election judges gave a "status report" to bystanders.

Puryear was not at the District's meeting Thursday when the board acted on the proposition. But many other opponents, including Georgetown attorney Penny Puryear Burt, were present to challenge the board's action.

Under the proposition approved Thursday, the District requests the RRA to issue revenue bonds, or other type notes on a five-year basis to finance the acquisition of a permit from the State of Texas. The district estimates the permit acquisition will cost about $1,235,000, with $475,000 for engineering services, $600,000 for legal services and $160,000 for administrative services.

According to board member, M. Kent Sims, a Wheeler attorney, voters ratified the contract when they passed the first proposition. As a result, the District may go ahead with the project and the permit acquisition.

The second proposition, he said, was to fund the local tax office.

He pointed out that since there would now be no tax office, another taxing entity such as Wheeler County would collect the taxes. The county collects taxes for the hospital board.

Burt, Puryear's sister, questioned Sims' explanation of the two propositions.

"Based on the information put out locally, it would appear that the maintenance tax would be for engineering fees," she said. "I don't recall until today any mention of the maintenance tax. I feel your attorney has advised you to go around the door and suggested you go through proposition one to do what the voters rejected in proposition two."

"Everybody I talked to felt the maintenance tax was to maintain the lake after it was built," said board member Melvin May of Mobeetie.

Board president Pete Burton of Wheeler agreed that the proposition wasn't that clear.

"139 people didn't vote on the second proposition," he pointed out.

Board members estimate the project would cost about $27 million. The district also is hoping that part of the cost burden will be lifted through $10 million loan from the Texas Water Development Board. Burton says that if the costs are much more than what they anticipate, they will not go ahead with the project.

The district is seeking an engineering study to gauge the need and feasibility of the project and whether the lake can be built within cost. The last engineering study was conducted about 20 years ago. The engineering fees

Rate of inflation only 2.4 percent for year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, falling for the first time in nine months, dropped 0.1 percent in August as gasoline prices staged their steepest decline since March 1983, the government said today.

Food prices, off slightly after a sharp climb in July, fell for the fourth time in five months.

The overall drop left inflation at the wholesale level running at a mere 2.4 percent, calculated annually, for the first eight months of 1984.

Today's surprising good news provides some of the best evidence to date that the unexpected economic resurgence has not, as many analysts feared, led to a renewal of the inflationary spiral.

"Inflation remains exceptionally well under control," said Michael K. Evans, a private economic consultant here, in advance of the report.

Gasoline prices plummeted 4.2 percent, with the decline attributed largely to plentiful world supplies. Normally, gasoline prices rise during the peak-driving summer months. But, this year, those prices have fallen throughout.

Over the last 12 months, gasoline prices at the wholesale level are down 11.2 percent.

But analysts caution drivers not to expect further drops and add that prices may even pick up a little in the coming months.

As for food, the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods recorded a drop of 0.1 percent after a 1.4 percent rise in July.

Leading the way last month were declines of 5.9 percent for pork, 4.9 percent for poultry and 4.7 percent for eggs. Prices for fresh vegetables, however, rose 11.3 percent, their third monthly gain in a row.

Since August 1983, food prices — more volatile than gasoline — have risen 5.2 percent.

As for last month's wholesale price activity, the Labor Department reported these details:

—Beef and veal prices were off 0.1 percent. Dairy product prices fell 0.4 percent. Fish prices rose 0.6 percent. Fresh fruit prices were up 1.7 percent.

—Home heating oil prices fell 4.6 percent. Natural gas prices were up 1.7 percent. Overall, energy prices have fallen 6.6 percent in the last 12 months.

The energy price calculations reported today were actually for July. That component of the wholesale price measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

—New car prices were up 0.1 percent while new truck prices rose 0.9 percent.

—Capital equipment costs rose 0.3 percent.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

School reforms cause Mobeetie tax increase

By CATHY SPAULDING

MOBETIE — To fund new state education requirements, or what school superintendent Bob Mickey called "an ill-conceived hodgepodge of confusion and inequity," school trustees here raised the tax rate by eight cents.

At the regular Mobeetie ISD board meeting Thursday, trustees raised the tax rate from 64 cents per $100 valuation to 72 cents to fund new curriculum requirements, extra paperwork and faculty salary hikes. The tax rate increase was also prompted by what Mickey called a state "tax incentive" program: raise taxes to get more state funding.

The new state funding formula bases state aid on average daily attendance and the value of taxable property. This means that rich small districts like Canadian and really small districts like Mobeetie may get less state funding than in the past.

The superintendent explained that the state also has equalization transition aid for districts which have to substantially raise taxes to make up for lost state funding.

He added that under the funding formula, Mobeetie ISD could lose half of its state funding for 1984-85, plus another half (down 75 percent) in 1986.

If the tax has to be raised, the school gets $62,500 in state aid.

Board member Joe Darnell concluded that the district "has no choice but to raise it eight cents this year."

"I don't know what the values will do next year," Mickey said, adding that the values will be helped by the value of pipelines.

On the day that Gov. Mark White expressed his displeasure at coaches and administrators who do not like the school reforms passed this summer by the Texas legislature, Mickey mailed a letter to State Rep. Buck Buchanan praising the legislator for voting against the "ill-conceived hodgepodge."

Among the reforms Mickey disagreed with are the state funding formula, full-day kindergarten and extending the terms of the new appointed state board to beyond the four-year

ABILENE, Texas (AP) —

Residents of this drought-stricken West Texas city could be slapped with stiff fines beginning Saturday for watering lawns, officials say.

The city council on Thursday voted unanimously to ban lawn-watering in an emergency conservation measure, after reports that the level of a city reservoir has dropped. Fines for violations reach up to $1,000.

Earlier, utility company spokesmen warned that the low level of the reservoir, Lake Fort Phantom Hill, threatens to shut down a power plant. Municipal officials said the lake level has dropped to 19.8 feet below the spillway.

The watering ban goes into effect at 12:01 a.m. Saturday. Water customers will still be able to use hand-held hoses, buckets, and drip irrigation systems on trees, shrubs and gardens.

The maximum fine will increase from $200 beginning Sept. 20, council members said. Councilmen also established minimum fines of $50 for residences and $75 for business,

Suspect in beating death indicted on murder charge

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Gray County grand jurors have indicted 12 local residents, including a suspect in the beating death of a Pampa man and a suspect in the shooting death of her common-law husband.

In a day-long session Tuesday, the 223rd District Grand Jury indicted Gerry Lee Anderson, 24, 910 S. Reid, on a charge of murder.

Anderson is accused of the Aug. 16 beating death of Robert Wayne Fritz, also 24, of 924 S. Wells.

Police have said Anderson beat Fritz to death in a fight at a party at a Pampa residence.

At the time of his arrest, the suspect was charged with aggravated assault. Fritz, though, who suffered severe head injuries, was pronounced dead two days after the beating.

Grand jurors upped the charge to murder, saying Anderson purposely killed the victim.

The suspect "did then and there intentionally and knowingly cause the death of Robert Wayne Fritz, by repeatedly forcing (his) head against the ground, against the peace and dignity of the state," the indictment says.

District Judge Don Cain set a $20,000 bond on the murder charge.

Anderson, however, a twice-convicted felon free on 10 years probation at the time of the fatal party, remains in custody in the county jail after the state filed a motion to revoke his probation. In a motion filed on Aug. 27, Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton charged that Anderson violated one term of the probation by drinking an alcoholic beverage.

31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny issued an arrest warrant in connection with the motion and ordered Anderson held without bond.

The suspect's attorney, Harold Comer of Pampa, was notified that docket call on the revocation hearing has been set for 9 a.m. Sept. 21.

The grand jury also indicted Josephine Payne, 36, in connection with the July 26 shooting death of her common-law husband, Robert Eugene Mitchell. Payne shot Mitchell with a .22-caliber handgun after a lovers' quarrel at the couple's home at 1106 Campanella, police have said.

Payne was indicted on a charge of voluntary manslaughter, which carries a penalty of two to 20 years in prison.

Grand jurors charge that the woman killed Mitchell "by shooting him with a gun, while acting under the influence of a sudden passion arising from an adequate cause, against the peace and dignity of the state."

Also indicted Tuesday was Grover Willoughby. Willoughby was named in a two-count indictment charging burglary with intent to commit aggravated assault and aggravated assault.

The indictment says the suspect unlawfully entered the home of Jean Willoughby with the intent to commit aggravated assault and that he caused "serious bodily injury to (the woman) by striking her with his hands, choking her, and twisting her limbs and fingers."

Others indicted this week and their charges and bonds include: Bobby Joe West, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle on July 28, $5000.

White flags coaches on reform complaints

AUSTIN (AP) — High school coaches who criticize school reforms that prohibit athletes from playing if they are failing any course should spend more time worrying about students' classroom performance, Gov. Mark White says.

"I'm frankly tired of seeing some coaches come out and say, 'Why don't you let our kids flunk one course?' Some of them are more concerned about winning ball games than about teaching kids," White said.

The governor, who pushed a $2.8 billion school reform bill and tax hike through a special legislative session this summer, said any coach who puts games ahead of studies is standing squarely in the road to progress.

"Those that are ought to get their priorities straight. We're going to win some ball games, but I've found that smart ballplayers win more than dumb ones," White said.

The school reform legislation, which is taking effect this year and next, includes several provisions regarding extra-curricular activities.

The new law will prohibit participation by any student who is failing a course. It also boosts the passing mark from 60 to 70.

The legislation included pay raises for teachers, equalization of state financial aid to rich and poor districts, smaller classes in early years and other changes widely hailed by teachers and the public.

But White said some coaches and even school superintendents have complained about the difficulties of implementing the reforms. At his weekly news conference, the governor left no doubt that he lacks patience with such critics.

"Any person who drags his feet on trying to improve the academic achievements of our young people is going to be pushed aside because the people of this state recognize that high school football isn't the end of the world," White said.

"College football's not the end of the world. Professional football's not the end of the world.

What's that young person going to do after football?"

"If we fail to take into account their ability to be productive citizens after they've left the cheers on the field, then we have been very, very short-sighted in our approach to their long-term productivity."

White said he has a question for coaches who want to know why students can't fail a course.

"Why ask those coaches why don't they let their teams lose one game?" White said. "I want them to spend their time not making excuses for the academic achievement of their students."

White also rapped administrators who claim the tax increase to fund the reforms still didn't give them enough money to undertake the changes and raise teachers' pay.

"We've had some naysayers. We've had some people (to whom) any change would come as a shock. The changes of seasons come as a shock to some people."

"I'm not going to put up with game playing by administrators in any of our school districts," he said.

White said administrators who don't see the value of the changes may be blind to more than what he and the Legislature want to accomplish.

"If they can't see that (value), then I suspect they can't see lightning or hear thunder," he said.

The governor also said he is narrowing the list of candidates for the 15 seats on the new, appointed state Board of Education. Abolition of the elected board was part of the reform law.

White, who received three names in each of the 15 districts from a panel of legislators, said he has made choices in about half the districts and hopes to make all selections within a week.

"I will do it just as quickly as possible," he said. "I'm tired of this kind of badmouthing we've gotten from some of the people over at the current (elected) board about the changes. I want a positive note put on this."

are part of the permit acquisition costs, that would be paid through the levy of an ad valorem tax.
"I know you think that $1.2 million is a lot, but it is not as much as the $28 million if we go on with the lake," he said. "It's obvious that if it were $52 million, I would be opposed to it."
Opponents hired their own engineers to make a feasibility study and, according to Burt, the district's engineers underestimated construction costs.
The feasibility of the project would be determined by the state when they consider the permit," said Shamrock board member Woodrow Simms.
One resident attending the meeting asked what would happen if the RRA rejected the proposition.
Kent Sims said it would be in breach of contract.
"I would feel they would have to sign it, wouldn't you," Burton said.
But at the RRA meeting held the same time in Wichita Falls, the contract remained unsigned.
"We turned the contract down," RRA director Glenn said. "There were too many unanswered questions."

"We are not in a position to expend funds on the project as a result of the contest of the election," he added, citing the "financial integrity of the RRA and the county's ability to repay the RRA" as part of the issues.
In a letter he wrote to RRA board members before the meeting, he said that two major points remain unresolved: "The actual feasibility of the project with respect to demonstrated need versus development cost, and the ability of the District and the county to perform its financial obligations."
At a cost of $27 million (plus between $650,000 and $1,235,000 for permit acquisition) and excluding the proposed $10 million loan, Glenn said that the tax rate could be higher than originally expected. Before the election, the required tax rate was estimated at 25 to 30 cents per $100 valuation.
This week, in looking at "all the variables" Glenn said it would not be inconceivable for the district to levy taxes that range from 40 to 80 cents per $100 valuation.
"This is not to say that the district cannot build the reservoir, or that we cannot build the reservoir," Glenn said. "The District has the power to issue its own bonds. And we can assist them if it would just be the District issuing the bonds."

Glenn maintained that the RRA should act as a guide or advisor to the district and not be responsible for financing.
M. Kent Sims said he was surprised by the RRA action and that he doesn't have any idea what to do next.
"We felt we had a valid contract," he said. "At the last meeting we had together, the RRA passed the contract and it became a contract whether they signed it or not."
He said that two options the district has would be to seek to enforce the contract or to have another election to go ahead with the project without the RRA.
Although he says they'll have to make a decision soon, "things are not that desperate timewise." He noted that the RRA agreed not to charge the District costs it has incurred during the project deliberations.

limit.
One month after two board members resigned because of the hiring of a relative as a substitute teacher, trustees approved the appointment of Mobeetie patrons Nadean Morris and Archie Summers to the board. Summers is also a member of the Mobeetie city council, which meets the same night as the school. Trustees questioned whether there would be a conflict between the two jobs.
The Mobeetie city council Thursday voted to change its meeting date from the second Thursday to the second Wednesday in each month to allow Summers to serve on both boards.
A secretary for the City of Mobeetie said they have not found anything in their statutes that would prohibit Summers from serving on the two local boards.
"Mobeetie is such a small town, we don't have much choice," she said.
"One big problem is finding somebody who isn't related to somebody at school," said one board member.
The two new members will be up for re-election in April.

United Auto Workers set to walk out at midnight

DETROIT (AP) — As thousands of "very nervous" workers at United Auto Workers locals in 27 states prepared for a possible walkout at midnight tonight, union negotiators mulled over a revised wage offer from General Motors Corp.
UAW President Owen Bieber has informed the world's largest carmaker that the union does not intend to work past the 11:59 p.m. expiration of its current contract unless a tentative settlement is near.
The contract covers 350,000 workers in this country — half the global workforce of the world's largest private employer.

The parties held intensive meetings Thursday, then recessed the talks before 1 a.m. this morning. UAW spokesman David Mitchell would not comment on what progress was made when the talks broke off.
Talks were to resume this morning.

While talks continued Thursday night, Mitchell said there was "a lot" of work left. "There are discussions right now on a whole range of issues."
The company delivered its revised wage proposal — the second in seven weeks of talks — about 36 hours before the contract expires. GM dropped its insistence that a three-year freeze of the $9.63-an-hour base wage continue, sources said.
The main obstacle to a settlement is job security — keeping work in U.S. plants.
"I've never seen the workers so restless," said a top union official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "They're not hearing anything and they're very nervous."

The 149 UAW locals at plants around the nation have been told to begin preparations for the first national walkout against the company since 1970.
"I've been prepared for all this. It's the young people with small children who are worried," said Joseph Lesiak of Hopedale, Mass., who has worked for 31 years at GM's car assembly plant in Framingham, west of Boston.

Fire, crime prevention activities being planned

A Chamber of Commerce committee is formulating plans for local observances of fire prevention and crime prevention activities for October.
The Fire Prevention and Safety Committee discussed tentative plans Thursday for local activities to note Fire Prevention Week, set for Oct. 7-13, and National Crime Prevention Month.
Pampa will host a zone conference of the Panhandle Association of Texas Fire Fighters on Saturday, Oct. 13. About 100 firemen from throughout the Panhandle are expected to attend the meeting here.
Activities will include pumper races between teams, to be held on the north side of the Pampa Mall, a banquet and either a treasure hunt or a trip to the Pampa Fine Arts Association's Arts and Crafts Festival for the women.
During Fire Prevention Week, the Pampa firemen will be distributing posters and hand-outs to Pampa schools and various service clubs. Other tentative activities under consideration include an open house at the Central Fire Station and the showing of films on fire prevention at the schools and clubs.

The Pampa Police Department is developing activities to note National Crime Prevention Month locally.
The U. S. Postal Service will be issuing a postage stamp honoring McGruff, the Crime Dog. McGruff will be making appearances here.
Final plans for both observances will be made at a committee meeting in early October. The Chamber committee is helping to publicize and coordinate both observances.
Committee members also reviewed the status of the Pampa Emergency Warning Fund, established to purchase emergency power generator systems for use by the city and local radio stations. The system will allow continued broadcasting of emergency information during power outages occurring during disasters.
Fund raising activities for the system are continuing.

SHOTGUN BLAST VICTIM—Bert Moore of Quinlan shows his left arm, which was struck by an accidental shotgun blast during National Guard maneuvers near Paris, Texas, last weekend. His injuries are not severe, although a doctor has told him some minor arm movements may have been lost. (AP Laserphoto)

Shooting of guardsman during maneuvers prompts weapons probe

PARIS, Texas (AP) — A young National Guard recruit said his first impression when a "sniper" fired at him during night infantry training maneuvers last weekend was "Man, these blanks really hurt."

Then his arm went numb. He felt a stinging sensation, put his hand on his arm, and felt the blood. Then he started hollaring.

"I'm shot, I'm really shot," Bert Moore screamed to other guardsmen on the maneuvers Saturday night at Camp Maxey near here.

Doctors said Moore's left arm was permanently disabled when he was hit by a shotgun blast.

Four National Guard offices have begun investigations into the decision to use unauthorized weapons in the exercise, apparently to add realism to the combat effects, the Dallas Times Herald said.

The staff sergeant who supervised the drill may face an unspecified penalty for violating regulations, they said.

Army officials said the shell that hit Moore contained wadding and gunpowder, but no pellets. However, Moore said pellets were removed from his arm during surgery Sunday at McCuiston Medical Center in Paris, where he remained today.

The use of live ammunition during such an exercise is "absolutely not" permitted, the adjutant general's office in Austin said.

In such exercises, only M-16 or M-60 guns loaded with blanks are permitted, said Gen. Willard Hill, assistant director of the Adjutant General's office in Austin.

"I can tell you quite frankly they shouldn't have had shotguns out there unless they were on riot control maneuvers," Hill said.

Capt. Jerry Morris, administrative officer of the National Guard's unit in Terrell where Moore was assigned, said the trainees were not on riot control exercises, but were engaged in infantry platoon training.

Moore and seven other trainees, dressed in camouflage fatigues and their faces darkened with black paint, were pretending to be in a safety zone with possible snipers in the area. They had M-16 rifles loaded only with blanks.

It was the first maneuver for Moore, a pre-med student at East Texas State University who joined the National Guard only three weeks ago. Six more experienced guardsmen were acting as aggressors.

Moore was lying on the ground next to a bush when an "enemy" walked past him.

"He got three or four yards from me. I jumped up and said, 'Ahh, you're dead!' You know, we were just out there having fun. Then I shot a couple of rounds from my M-16."

Moore said he apparently startled the other guardsman, who then fired on him with a riot shotgun.

Morris said the more experienced guardsmen had been on riot control maneuvers earlier in the evening, and it was decided they should carry their shotguns with them on the 11 p.m. infantry maneuvers to provide the sound of gunfire.

Moore said he was told the men had removed the pellets from the shotgun shells but kept in the gunpowder and the wadding for sound effect.

"It was someone's idea of adding realism to the exercise," Hill said.

Morris said he is "99 percent sure" which guardsman shot Moore, but that the individual will face no charges because the shooting was accidental.

Moore, voted "Most Courteous Student" last year at Quinlan High School, said he joined the Guard in late August to be eligible for its educational benefits so he could someday attend Bible college and become a minister.

He said his fear is that he will now be given a medical discharge, Moore said.

In that event, Morris said, Moore would receive some compensation from the Army.

Corps to approve Baker's Port

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Despite objections from two federal agencies charged with protecting wildlife, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers official said he plans to grant a permit for construction of a controversial, multi-million dollar oil rig servicing port near Corpus Christi.

Developers of Baker's Port say the proposed terminal for servicing deep-water oil rigs will employ thousands of people and be a boon to the local economy.

Federal law requires ocean-going rigs to be serviced regularly, but there are no terminal facilities on the Gulf Coast handling the big rigs. Baker's Port is designed to fill this service gap, developers say.

Conservationists and two federal agencies have been fighting the project for more than two years.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service maintain the development on Live Oak Peninsula would destroy wildlife habitat and fisheries.

Col. Alan Laubscher, district engineer for the Corp of Engineers' Galveston office, said Tuesday that both agencies have been notified that he intends to issue a permit unless they object and "elevate" the matter to Robert K. Dawson, acting Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works.

"We haven't made that decision yet," said Ralph Pisapia, deputy assistant regional director for habitat in the Albuquerque, N.M., office of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The agencies have until Oct. 5 to decide whether to fight the Corps' decision to grant the construction permit.

If they do appeal the decision to Washington, D.C., it could delay the project for months, officials said.

Both opposing agencies have asked for "mitigation" of damage they say will occur if the deep-water oil rig service facility is built.

Ken Williams, Baker's Port project manager, said they had not yet been given the permit and did not know when it would be granted.

"I've been told so many things in the past by the Corps that I'll believe it when I see it," Williams said, adding that he had not received notification of Laubscher's decision.

Baker's Port agreed earlier this year to create an 8.3-acre bird sanctuary on Pelican Island.

White opposes re-regulation of the natural gas industry

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is urging the Texas congressional delegation to oppose legislation that would slap new rules on gas pricing.

"We've seen the benefits of a deregulated oil price. Our price for motor fuel is lower today than it has been at any time in the recent past under a regulated market," White said.

In a telegram to the state's 27 congressmen, White asked that they "take all measures appropriate" to defeat the proposal for re-regulation offered by Reps. Philip R. Sharp, D-Ind., and John Dingell, D-Mich.

At a news conference, White said re-regulation would hurt Texas gas producers while consumers wouldn't be hurt if deregulation continues.

"Today in Texas, many natural gas producers are unable to sell their natural gas in the marketplace because of a shortfall in demand," he said.

"We are in a position in the natural gas deregulation effort that if we will continue to move along the lines of current legislation towards deregulation in January, we will not see any flare-up in natural gas prices. We will see the beginning of an orderly, free economy."

White criticized House Speaker Tip O'Neill, D-Mass., for his position favoring regulation.

"He is ignoring the realities of the marketplace," White said.

"Certainly, we'd like for him to see about fixing the price of the lobster they send from Massachusetts down here. I think lobster prices are far too high. They ought to be leveled out at about a dollar a pound," he said.

"Doggone it, see how many lobsters they'll ship to us after that. That's the same problem we have in shipping those people in Massachusetts natural gas."

White said congressmen from Northern and Eastern states are "underestimating the intelligence of their constituents" if they think voters won't understand the issue. "It can be very easily explained exactly how this can occur to the benefit of the consumers along the East Coast," White said.

He said he would expect prices to even out or drop within 90 days to six months after deregulation.

Sen. Parker misses safety conference

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Carl Parker, who vowed that a grand jury indictment for allegedly financing a prostitution ring would not interfere with his official duties, missed a conference at which he was the keynote speaker.

Organizers of the statewide conference on child passenger safety had no explanation Thursday for Parker's absence. A spokesman in the senator's Capitol office said he had sent a representative.

Pat Stansbury in Parker's Port Arthur law office said she did not know why he had missed the speech. "He said he would be meeting as many commitments as he possibly could," said Ms. Stansbury.

Asked if Parker, D-Port Arthur, would say if he planned to attend the conference, she said, "He won't be returning any calls."

About 15 reporters and photographers waited a half hour for Parker at the conference, seeking comment on Tuesday's indictment.

The reason many thought Parker would address the conference as scheduled was because child safety seats in motor vehicles has been one of his major legislative projects in recent years.

A bill he sponsored would require that children under 2 years of age must be secured in an approved car safety seat while riding in a motor vehicle. The bill, which becomes law Oct. 31, also would require children ages 2 to 4 to be secured in a car safety seat or seat belt.

Parker was named on Tuesday in a grand jury indictment charging that he headed and financed a prostitution ring. The indictment accused Parker of aggravated promotion of prostitution.

TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The Pope's wrong on school issue

If you're of the Catholic faith, you may feel that we should ask forgiveness for saying so, but Pope John Paul II was dead wrong Wednesday when he said governments have a responsibility to provide financial support for church schools.

The Pope expressed that view while on a visit to Newfoundland. The Associated Press reported that among his statements on religion and schools were:

"Society should support with public funding those types of schools that correspond to the deepest aspirations of its citizens."

And, "Governments have the responsibility to ensure that religious schools have adequate teacher training, buildings, research funding, adequate financing and so forth."

That such a statement should come from a person considered the symbol of Christian morality for millions of people is nothing less than astonishing. That it might represent the official view of the Catholic church is nothing less than frightening.

When the Pope said "society should support," religious schools, if he meant that he thinks it would be morally correct for society to voluntarily offer such support, then we would have no quarrel with his pronouncement. But we part ways with him quickly when he adds "public funding" and "government responsibility" to his call.

When he talks about public funds and government support, what, in effect, he is saying is that it is moral for any government to forcibly seize tax money from its citizens to support religious schools whether or not those citizens favor those schools. That is not morality; it is theft; it is totalitarianism. Surely the Catholic church, as an institution, does not support such activity.

We will not deny that parents who send their children to church schools are wronged by tax laws that require them to support public schools they don't use, then also have to pay private schools for the education of their children. That is also theft. In fact, we have editorialized on the injustice of that system numerous times in the past.

But forcing all taxpayers to also support religious schools is not the answer. That would only compound the injustice and extend legalized theft to still another front. The old saying that is appropriate here is: "Two wrongs don't make a right."

We hope The Associated Press either misunderstood what the Pope meant or that he will have second thoughts and disavow any call for governments to support religious schools. The only way they can do that is to take money from citizens against their will. And surely, the leader of the Catholic church remembers the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal."

Edwin Feulner

Life in Cuba 25 years later

Jesse Jackson, best actor in a supporting role at the Democratic National Convention, is just the latest figure from the American left to sojourn to Castro's Cuba and return wide-eyed with praise.

It's not surprising. The country probably has no criminals. They've all been sent here.

When dictator Fulgencio Batista fled Cuba on January 1, 1959, for the Dominican Republic, ahead of Fidel Castro's advancing forces, many expected a new enlightened era to begin on the island 90 miles off the South Florida coast.

They were right and wrong. It was the beginning of a new era all right - but hardly one characterized by enlightenment. For someone who looks only at statistics, the nearly 10-million Cuban people may be better off today than they were 25 years ago. The Soviet Union pumps up the Cuban economy - in exchange for young Cuban men, who the Soviets keep busy as cannon fodder in Africa and elsewhere. Cuba's hospitals have improved, and the literacy rate is up. But there's more to the picture than this, says New York author Lorrin Philipson in the current issue of Policy Review.

Philipson examines many of the Cuban institutions that most impress the Jacksons of the world. Health care, for example.

In a Time magazine article earlier this year, Castro boasted of Cuba's ratio of doctors to overall population (1 to 626 in 1980) as being one of the Third World's highest. Yet, Philipson says, Cuba's public health record includes several major failures. "Water pollution is such a problem, particularly in Havana - struck by an outbreak of typhoid fever in 1977 - that the Ministry of Health urges people to boil their water. In 1980, 304 cases of yellow fever were diagnosed - the first outbreak of the disease in Cuba since 1905."

The Cuban literacy rate, at 96 percent by 1976, is one of the highest in Latin America. Yet, Philipson asks "of what use is universal education without the freedom to read, write and speak? Admission to the university in Cuba depends more on revolutionary activity than expertise." In 1980, 411 students who passed the medical school admissions exam with high scores were not allowed to continue their education because of "bad political attitudes."

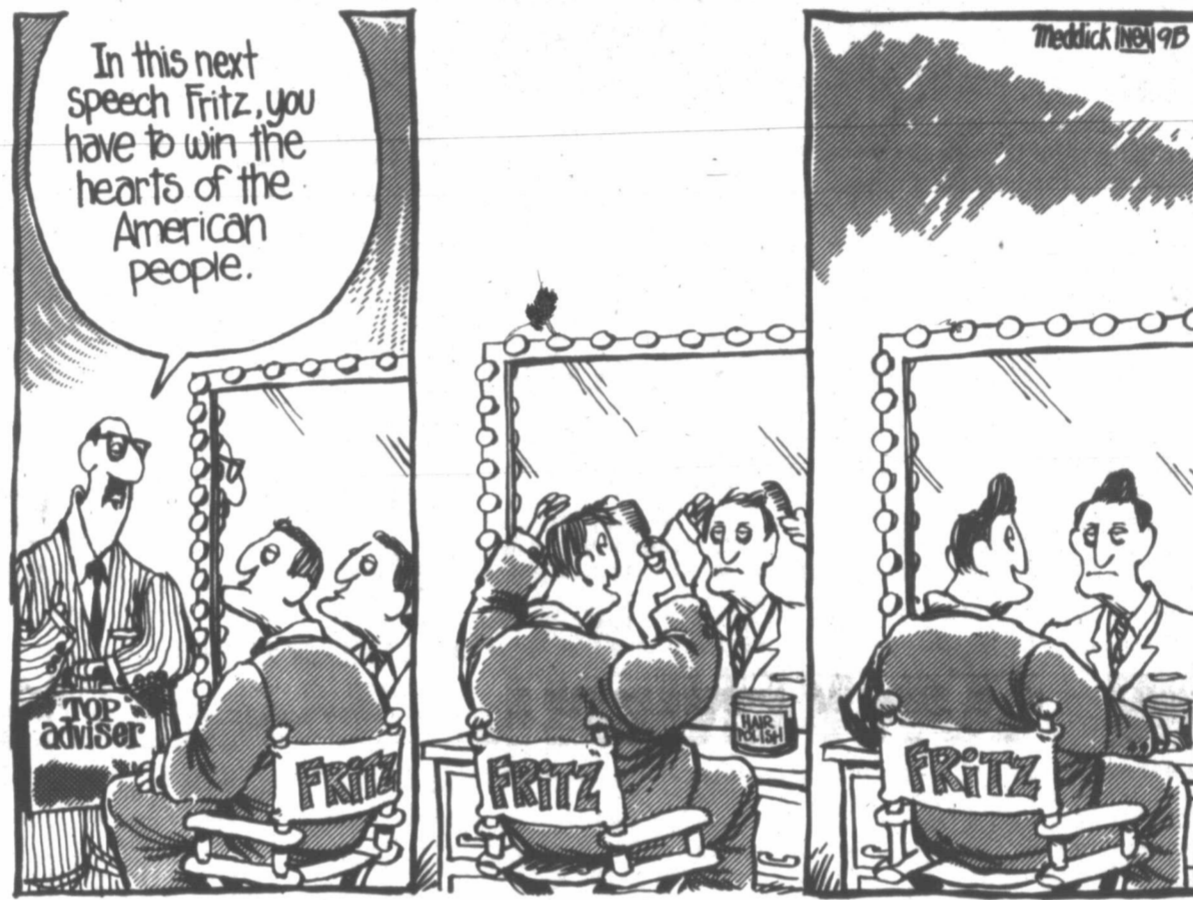

Claiming that Cuba is the second - best - fed country in Latin America, Castro's apologists fail to mention that Cuba has long food lines and strict rationing despite the fertile soil. "Annual per-capita consumption of rice - a basic staple in the Cuban diet - has fallen to 27 kilograms from 50 kilograms before the revolution," Philipson notes. "In 1980 Cubans were allotted two pounds of meat per month, one - and - a - half pounds of chicken per month, two ounces of coffee every 15 days..."

While Castro bad-mouthed other Latin nations for their huge foreign debts, social calamities, unemployment, and inflation, and claimed in a Newsweek interview that "our economy has grown at an approximate rate of 4.7 percent over 25 years," he failed to mention that Cuba had to reschedule nearly half of its $3.5 billion debt to Western banks and governments, Philipson continues. "The Cuban economy has been able to survive only because of massive aid from the Soviet Union, which purchases sugar from Cuba at the above - world - market prices and sells it at below prevailing rates."

Cubans cannot obviously express their like or dislike of Castro's regime, but in 1981, the country had a suicide rate of 27.5 per 100,000 people - one of the world's highest. And Cuba's birth rate shows one of the most rapid declines in the world, from 35.1 in 1963 to 14.1 by 1980. Perhaps this is because many young Cubans are in Africa and elsewhere in Latin America helping "the oppressed" of the world shoot their way to a better life.

"There is no freedom of speech, no freedom to worship, no freedom of enterprise, no freedom to emigrate, no freedom to form trade unions or other voluntary organizations," says Philipson.

Do we wish the Castro regime a happy 25th? We'd be better off wishing Cuban citizens good luck in surviving the next 25 years.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Sept. 14, the 258th day of 1984. There are 108 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Thursday, Sept. 14, 1752, was the first day observed by the American colonies, as well as the rest of the British Empire, under the New Style Gregorian calendar. The previous day was Sept. 2 under the Old Style Julian calendar. Eleven days were "lost" in the transition.

On this date: Ten years ago: A grenade exploded in a Paris drug store, killing two people and wounding 26.

Five years ago: The FBI admitted it had tried to discredit actress Jean Seberg in 1970 because of her support for the Black Panthers. (Miss Seberg had been found dead Sept. 8, an apparent suicide.)

One year ago: Three defendants were convicted of murder charges stemming from the abortive robbery of a Brink's armored car in Rockland County, N.Y.

Today's birthdays: "Lone Ranger" Clayton Moore is 70. ABC News correspondent Hughes Rudd is 63. Actress Zoe Caldwell is 51. Feminist author Kate Millet is 50. Actor Nicol Williamson is 46. Singer-actress Joey Heatherton is 40. Actress Mary Crosby is 25.

Paul Harvey

How the campaign's going

Paul Harvey, you travel almost constantly, what do you hear? How's the campaign going?

I do travel a great deal, purposely during an election year. I have supplied the 300 newspapers which carry my column an "advance" election evaluation for the past 10 national elections.

It is those travels which have made it possible for me to anticipate each election outcome (including the so-called Truman surprise) at least five days in advance.

These words are NOT this year's prediction; your editor will receive that column on Oct. 31.

This, instead, is an interim report based on what I've overheard to date.

Historically, where there is a big voter turnout is a "protest vote." The outs are rallying to vote the ins out.

To mobilize this "vote against," Fritz Mondale is seeking to characterize the incumbent president as being cold and uncaring, indifferent to human needs.

So far that accusation has won some cheers; there is little evidence it has won many converts.

President Reagan's campaign theme makes his audiences feel good—about their country, themselves and about him.

"Patriotism, prosperity and peace through strength."

He asks, "Are you better off than four years ago?" and most audiences believe they are.

Even the disparity in the candidates' ages, the president has managed to dismiss.

"Age is a factor in this election," the president concedes, "because the Democrats' ideas are too old!"

And a fast-maturing electorate is more encouraged than otherwise by his "seniority."

So what I overhear this pre-election time is little different from what George Gallup's pollsters have been hearing: Reagan by a comfortable margin; perhaps by an overwhelming margin.

What considerations could change that? What could happen in the next eight weeks which could favor the Mondale-Ferraro ticket?

Historically, the "upset elections" were those in which voters had talked one way and voted another.

Or, said another way, the ones who responded to the pollsters did not reflect the underground vote of pent-up resentment.

This resentment may have been against an alienated incumbent or a pompous challenger.

President Reagan—face it—for all the campaign rhetoric so far cannot be hit by anything that does not bounce off.

This is to take nothing away from Mondale-Ferraro.

If Reagan is at all beatable, Ted Kennedy would have tried.

Robert Walters

Was 007 path deliberate?

Second of two related columns.

WASHINGTON - Was Korean Air Lines flight 007 on an espionage mission when it was ruthlessly destroyed in mid-flight after it deviated from its assigned course and flew over the Soviet Union slightly more than a year ago?

The answer to that question is almost certainly negative. For a variety of reasons, commercial aircraft are thoroughly unsuitable for use as spy planes.

A more appropriate question: Did KAL flight 007 deliberately intrude into Soviet airspace to provoke the Soviets into activating radar, radar and other defense measures that then could be monitored by U.S. military satellites, aircraft and ground surveillance stations?

That far more plausible alternative involved a high-risk gamble - that the Soviets would not mercilessly blast from the sky an unarmed civilian plane carrying 269 people even though it had penetrated Soviet airspace.

The gamble, as history has recorded, did not pay off in terms of keeping the passengers and crew members alive - but it may have produced valuable information about some of the Soviet Union's most highly classified defense installations.

KAL flight 007 flew over two concentrations of Soviet military bases - on the Kamchatka Peninsula and Sakhalin Island - and was headed for a third - Vladivostok, which serves as headquarters for the Soviet's Pacific Fleet.

Also based in Vladivostok area are 15 Soviet army divisions, medium range ballistic missiles aimed at the People's Republic of China, and intercontinental ballistic missiles targeted on the United States.

Although the KAL plane never reached those facilities, it did pass over the port of Karsakov at the southern tip of Sakhalin Island which is home to two Soviet Army divisions, approximately 200 Soviet jet fighters based at six military airfields, and a major naval base.

Earlier, it overflew Petropavlovsk, on the southern tip of the Kamchatka Peninsula, which serves as the home port for about 30 submarines capable of launching strategic missiles armed with nuclear warheads - approximately half of the Soviet Union's sea-based deterrent.

To protect those facilities, the Soviets operate hundreds of short-range air defense radar stations and dozens of long-range early warning radar installations - but those facilities are not fully activated unless stimulated by the threat of intrusion or invasion.

When the off-course KAL plane initiated an air defense alert, the United States had in place an elaborate network of electronic intelligence facilities capable of intercepting and identifying radar signals, telemetry transmissions and microwave radio communications.

Making continuous passes over the area was a Ferret - D signal intelligence satellite. Military radar installations are located at Kenai, King Salmon and Cape Newenham on the Alaskan mainland.

A sophisticated phased-array radar facility code-named Cobra Dane, a ship (the U.S.S. Observation Island, known as Cobra Judy) specially outfitted to intercept electronic signals, and a fleet of six RC-135 aircraft which perform the same function in the air are based on Alaska's Shemya Island, at the western end of the Aleutian chain.

At Misawa Air Base in northern Japan, the U.S. Air Force's 6920th Electronic Security Group operates the largest signal intelligence station outside the continental United States, staffed by more than 1,800 Air Force, Army, Navy and Marine personnel.

Many of those facilities were fully capable of not only monitoring Soviet military transmissions but also tracking KAL flight 007 as it headed directly for the Soviet Union - but they never took any action to warn the passenger plane to return to its designated flight path.

Cuomo says church leaders should not try to make religious beliefs law

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, saying most Americans find the use of religion for political gain "frightening," staked out a position for Roman Catholic political leaders who are at odds with the church over the abortion issue.

"What we're arguing about here is not what to get done but how to get it done," Cuomo said Thursday night during a question-and-answer session after his address at the University of Notre Dame.

Cuomo said the way to stop abortions in the United States is "not by trying to make laws for others to live by, but by living the laws already written for us by God."

While Catholics in politics might accept church doctrine in their lives, those who don't agree "aren't a ruthless, callous alliance of anti-Christians determined to overthrow our moral standards," said Cuomo, a Catholic who delivered a rousing keynote address at the Democratic National Convention in July.

Cuomo's speech came at a time when he and Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, another Catholic New Yorker, are embroiled in a dispute with New York Archbishop John J. O'Connor over their refusal to work for anti-abortion legislation while personally opposing it.

"Unless we Catholics ... set an example that is clear and compelling, then we will never convince this society to change the civil laws to protect what we preach is precious human life," Cuomo said in his speech on the relationship of politics and religion, which has become a major issue in the presidential campaign.

Cuomo said most Americans find the "invoking of religion to advance a politician or a party frightening."

President Reagan, who has said "religion and politics are necessarily related," has courted

Catholics and Protestant fundamentalists with his backing for tax credits for private school tuition and firm opposition to abortion.

His Democratic challenger, Walter Mondale, in turn, has accused Reagan and his allies of a policy of "moral McCarthyism," which rejects opposing views as unchristian.

Cuomo, however, avoided any specific attack on Reagan's alliance with evangelicals such as the Rev. Jerry Falwell — something the governor has done in the past.

"The American people need no course in philosophy or political science or church history to know that God should not be made into a celestial party chairman. To most of us, the manipulative invoking of religion to advance a politician or a party is frightening and divisive," Cuomo said.

"I think our moral and social mission as Catholics must begin with the wisdom contained in the words 'physician, heal thyself,'" Cuomo said.

"Despite all the effort at defining our opposition to the sin of abortion, collectively we Catholics apparently believe — and perhaps act — little differently from those who don't share our commitment," he said. "Are we asking government to make criminal what we believe to be sinful because we ourselves can't stop committing the sin?"

Rabbi James Rubin, director of interreligious affairs at the New York-based American Jewish Committee, said Cuomo's speech "will be a benchmark on which other future discussions of the subject will be measured. We owe him a debt for lifting it to new heights, and others will have to come up to that level no matter what their view on the subject."

Governor Cuomo's speech was not a radical speech, but was that of a very conservative Catholic," Daniel Maguire, a Catholic theologian at Marquette University, said in Washington.

PUC to rule on power line

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission, which has fielded protests from 1,700 people, planned to rule today on whether three electric companies can build a 400,000-volt power line across six counties.

Central Power & Light, Houston Lighting & Power and Southwestern Electric Power Co. want to put in the line from six miles north of Huntsville to the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City.

PUC Administrative Law Judge Angela Demerle has recommended that the power line not be built because of "unanswered health questions."

Police probing shooting

BENBROOK, Texas (AP) — Tarrant County authorities are considering the case of a 12-year-old girl who turned herself in to police in connection with the shooting death of a girlfriend.

The girl — "a young child who had no knowledge of firearms," Police Chief Bob Richardson said Thursday — said "she was showing her the gun when it accidentally went off."

The body of Kerry Ann Thomas, 11, was found in the suspect's backyard, officials said. She had been missing since Saturday.

Richardson said the girl gave them a statement Wednesday night in which she said the shooting occurred Saturday afternoon. Miss Thomas' body was discovered hidden under some debris in the 12-year-old's backyard about noon Wednesday.

A neighbor found the body about noon Wednesday after detecting a foul odor. Police and neighbors had searched throughout the neighborhood since Sunday.

Kerry was struck in the face and killed instantly by a single blast in the face, at close range, from a long-barrel 12-gauge shotgun as she drank from a glass of milk inside her friend's house, police said.

The girl's 18-year-old cousin, who was detained by police Wednesday, was cleared and released Wednesday night, Richardson said.

Richardson said the teen-ager and Miss Thomas had become close friends during the three weeks the man had been living in the 12-year-old's home.

Police said the girl reported she and Kerry had argued hours before the shooting, but that they had made up afterward.

"The two of them got into an argument about the victim paying too little attention to the girl's 18-year-old cousin. She said that afterward they made up and were just watching television and stuff around the house until everybody had left by about 4:30. Then that's when it happened," Richardson told the Dallas Times Herald.

Richardson said detectives re-examined the 12-year-old's dimly lit house with high-intensity lights Wednesday and found shotgun pellets, human tissue and bloody towels.

The girl told police she and Kerry were alone in the house at the time of the shooting.

"She said she was going to show the gun to Kerry and got it from her father's bedroom. She put a shell in the gun, pointed it and pulled the trigger. She said she thought the safety was on," Richardson told the Times Herald.

Richardson said the 12-year-old described how she had "pulled and dragged the girl's body through the house, across the patio and out into the back yard" and hid it in debris behind her home.

"At first she was going to dig a grave back there, but the ground was too hard so she put the shovel away and covered her with vinyl, wood and a laundry basket," Richardson said. "She went back into the house and cleaned up the blood with towels, rags and tissue paper."

Kerry's parents said their daughter was to have spent Friday and Saturday night at the friend's home. When she hadn't returned home by Sunday morning, they reported her missing after the girlfriend told them she had left Saturday afternoon to walk back to her own house.

Amid widespread unrest, new president inaugurated

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — After two weeks of black riots and a fresh spate of bombings, P.W. Botha was sworn in as state president today under a new constitution that still denies the vote to South Africa's black majority.

Botha, prime minister since 1978, was the architect of the new system creating separate houses of Parliament for the Asian and mixed-race minorities to sit alongside the existing white chamber. The Parliament convenes Tuesday.

In the coastal city of Durban, six non-white opposition leaders sought by security police remained at the British consulate today, where they took refuge on Thursday, British diplomats said.

Chief Justice Pierre Rabie administered the oath of office for state president, which replaces the post of prime minister, to Botha at a morning ceremony in Cape Town at the Great Church, near Parliament.

Botha said in remarks prepared for delivery at the inauguration that change could not come to the divided nation overnight.

"We pledge ourselves to strive toward the protection of the principles of human dignity, liberty and property of all in our midst," he said.

"Our state must maintain a particular character. That character can only be built on orderly government and respect for our different population groups and peoples, their traditions, their hopes and ideals," Botha said. His speech did not specifically mention the nation's 22 million blacks, who will continue to be denied a voice in the government.

The new constitution has been billed as a step toward race reform, but critics say it entrenches white privilege since the white chamber will have the final say over the other two.

A surprise guest at Botha's swearing-in ceremony was black guerrilla chieftain Jonas Savimbi, who heads the main rebel army fighting the Marxist government in Angola.

"I came here freely," said Savimbi, who admits receiving aid from South Africa, Africa's last white-ruled nation.

"It is a fact, whether people like it or not, we are condemned by geography to live together in southern Africa," said the guerrilla chief after flying to Cape Town from his bush command post in southeastern Angola.

Police said riot-weary black townships were calm overnight, except for one incident of youths throwing stones at cars in Soweto, Johannesburg's black ghetto.

Peres wins confidence vote for bipartisan government

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former opposition leader Shimon Peres was sworn in as Israel's eighth prime minister today and his bipartisan government promptly turned its attention to Israel's worsening economy.

In interviews with three leading newspapers, Peres was quoted as saying his first priority will be to revive the economy and seek financial aid from the United States.

Both Peres, leader of the Labor Party, and former Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, leader of the right-wing Likud bloc, are expected to travel to Washington in the next few weeks. Shamir will serve as foreign minister and deputy prime minister in the new unity government, then switch places with Peres halfway through the 50-month term.

Peres formally presented his 25-member Cabinet, the largest in Israel's history, to President Chaim Herzog this afternoon, but no Cabinet meeting was scheduled.

The unprecedented bipartisan government includes one former president, two former prime ministers, three former defense ministers and two former military chiefs of staff.

Peres' Labor Party and Shamir's Likud bloc, neither of which emerged from the July 23 election with enough seats in the 120-member Parliament to form a government independently, spent seven weeks bargaining over setting up a national unity government.

Legislator Mordechai Vershubski, who had opposed his three-man Shinui Party's entry into the coalition, abstained from the vote of confidence and 12 members of the 120-seat Knesset, or Parliament, were absent.

Following the vote, Peres and his Cabinet members rose to the podium one by one to take verbal and written oaths of office.

Peres ended the debate shortly after midnight with an emotional appeal for a national effort to resolve Israel's economic difficulties and to help end the Israeli occupation in Lebanon. He pledged to bring Israeli forces home from Lebanon and to renew efforts to improve Israel's troubled relations with Egypt.

But he said his first priority was domestic: An economy headed toward 400 percent annual inflation, a foreign debt of $23 billion, and rising unemployment.

Presenting his Cabinet to the Parliament, Peres offered to hold peace talks with neighboring Arab states.

Results were small from historical Khrushchev visit

EDITOR'S NOTE — As a spectacle or melodrama, it was one of the epic news stories of our time: capitalism's arch-enemy descending on capitalism's shores, the first visit by a Soviet head of state to the United States. Rich in irony, histrionics and farce, Nikita Khrushchev's American journey 25 years ago is vividly recalled by a reporter who was sent out to cover it on Sept. 15, 1959.

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

It was one of the compelling confrontations of history. It could not have been more unsettling if George III had dropped into Boston on the eve of the Tea Party. At least, he was related.

But this visitor was totally alien. He was, in fact, THE enemy alien. Here, suddenly in our midst, was the man from the Kremlin, from the other side of the Cold War, the leader of the Communist world.

"You wanted to see what kind of a man Nikita Khrushchev is," said Nikita Khrushchev, arms open. "Well, here I am."

And there he was, 25 years ago this month, the ruler of 200 million Soviets the most colorful leader of his time, the least inhibited and, perhaps, the most implausible.

He had sort of invited himself by saying publicly that he'd like to come to try to improve relations and, in that hope, President Dwight Eisenhower invited him. Relations, as always, needed improving. Khrushchev had been issuing ominous ultimatums for the West to get out of Berlin.

He arrived at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington on Sept. 15, 1959, to a 21-gun salute. When he came, Americans on the streets watched in grim, silent curiosity. When he left 12 days later, after a cross-country tour, Americans were cheering him.

As a result of his journey, Khrushchev withdrew his Berlin threats and some detente was achieved. In sum, however, the results were small.

Nikita Sergeevich Khrushchev, 65, an old Bolshevik, former shepherd and now chairman of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, put on one helluva show.

Khrushchev was a conventional guest for only his first few minutes on American soil, in which he politely thanked Eisenhower for the welcome and said the Soviet people wanted to live in friendship with the American people.

Then, with all the subtlety of last week's borscht, he delivered a smiling zinger. The Soviet flag, he said, now rested on the moon, having been delivered there the day before by the first rocket to arrive from Earth. America undoubtedly would send its flag to the moon one day, he said, and "the Soviet pennant, as an old resident, will then welcome your pennant."

He was suave that night at a White House dinner. Khrushchev was introduced to Allen Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, whose chief concern was the intentions of the guest of honor.

Dulles, smiling: "You may have seen some of my intelligence reports from time to time." Khrushchev, smiling: "We should buy our intelligence data together and save money. We'd have to pay the same people only once."

He called for peaceful co-existence solemnly and frequently. He said when weak nations war "they are just scratching each other's faces" but war between the nuclear powers would leave the world "in shambles." He said communism and capitalism should compete peacefully and, in that sense, he predicted communism would ultimately prevail and "bury you."

He conferred with Eisenhower at the White House and Camp David. He saw the sights of the capital and suburbs from a helicopter, having nervously declined the ride until he was assured the president also was going. He had tea with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, dinner with mighty financiers and industrialists in New York, and lunch with movie stars in Hollywood. He saw a supermarket in San Francisco, a farm in Iowa and a steel plant in Pittsburgh, but, by his choice, he talked with many more capitalists than workers.

Everywhere he went he was guarded by unsmiling Soviet and American security men.

There was much to remind him that he was in a hostile land, but Nikita Khrushchev generally appeared relaxed, looser, in fact, than his pained hosts.

At the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, the leader of world communism was warmly greeted at the door by the president of the hotel. That was G. David Schine who, until a few years before, had been one of the top sleuths in Joe McCarthy's relentless hunt for people who had consorted with Communists.

At lunch with Frank and Shirley and Gary and Bob and Liz and Eddie and other twinklers in the Hollywood firmament, Khrushchev was being heckled in his innocuous remarks by Spyros Skouras, chairman of 20th Century-Fox. Actors in the audience tried vainly to shut him up.

Where there had been no debate, Skouras tried to make one. He said that he had come to the U.S. as a poor boy from Greece, worked as a bus boy at 15 and now was head of a large corporation. Khrushchev said he had gone to work when he learned to walk, as a boy tended sheep for a capitalist and now was prime minister of a great nation.

There followed then an oration singular in the annals of human contest and the conflicts of nations. Eyes flaming, voice thundering, fists pounding, the undisputed ruler of all the Russias demanded to know why he couldn't go to Disneyland.

He knew. He knew that both Soviet and American security experts had agreed that Disneyland posed complicated problems of protection.

But he carried on. "What is it? Are there rocket pads there? An epidemic of cholera? ... Gangsters who can destroy me? ... What must I do? Commit suicide? This is the situation I'm in, your guest."

Khrushchev finally calmed down only to go to a civic dinner that night where Mayor Norris Poulson of Los Angeles felt a need to pick up the sword of Patrick Henry to protect the American way.

"You shall not bury us and we shall not bury you," said the mayor. "But if challenged, we shall fight to death to preserve it."

In his turn, Khrushchev wound up his moderate prepared text, then looked at Poulson. "Why did you mention that? I've already clarified that. I trust even mayors read." The crowd laughed and applauded him several times.

"If you want a continuation of the arms race, then, very well, we accept the challenge. It is a question of war or peace between our countries... I didn't come to beg for the end of the Cold War because we're afraid of you."

He didn't. He had come around the turn. Americans were now cheering him. The State Department sent word ahead asking official greeters to stop goading Khrushchev, and he boarded a train north.

"Just think, a little girl waving at a Communist," he exclaimed at Santa Barbara. At San Luis Obispo, a huge crowd of cheering, waving people awaited him and Khrushchev couldn't resist despite his nervous guards. He plunged in like a hungry candidate for mayor.

He was swept through the mob of strangers with Henry Cabot Lodge, who had been assigned by the White House to accompany him on tour and supply occasional rebuttals. In the happy melee, a euphoric Khrushchev was swept back to the train while looking over his shoulder and yelling, "Save Lodge!"

In a supermarket in San Francisco, while Khrushchev squeezed the canteloupe and grapefruit, the press pack erupted like a platoon of Marx brothers. Photographers and reporters and infected small boys climbed on show cases and counters, and carefully balanced pyramids of instant coffee jars came crashing down and soda pop bottles flew across the aisles and shopping carts capsized and a butcher wrestled a photographer off the meat counter and one old lady yelled to another old lady, "There's the Russian, the little fat one!"

Later he conferred at length with Eisenhower at Camp David. When they were done, they told the world that Soviet-American relations were improved. The door to detente had been pried open. Seven months later it was slammed shut by the shooting down of an American spy plane over Russia.

The Cold War was 15 years old then. Now, 25 years later, another, broader detente has come and vanished again. The cost of the arms race which Dwight Eisenhower found "staggering" then staggers more now. American capitalism remains very much alive although its shape has changed. Its chief competition comes from other capitalist countries. Moscow has not lately claimed burial rights.

ANT STALKER—Robert Benson demonstrates the "Yaard-Vark," a fire ant killing device invented by his father, Jim Benson of Seguin. The electrical disturbance caused by the device makes the fire ants kill themselves.

Inventor has weapon against fire ants

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Backyard tinkerer Jim Benson may have invented the ultimate lethal weapon in the war against fire ants.

It's an electrical zapper, a slim, three-foot-long device that rests on top of an ant mound. Emitting a tiny electrical current, the device snaps, crackles and pops as the first ant victims meet their maker.

Then, a few minutes later, all heck really breaks loose in the ant colony. Out of the ground surge forth thousands of angry ants. Inexplicably, the electrical disturbance causes the pests to kill each other. As their frenzied fratricide proceeds, a thick, doughnut-like ring of dead ants forms around the electrode.

"I really enjoy killing them," says 60-year-old Benson, who lives on a farm in Seguin.

"Whenever they form a doughnut and begin to die, I am filled with enjoyment, because I've been fighting those sons of guns for years."

Benson made his discovery after noticing that fire ants were attracted to, then killed by, the sparks emitted by his water-well electrical pump. Following his intuition, he devised his first zapper from plastic plumbing pipe and odds and ends.

Once implanted, the device can annihilate an ant colony in several hours, depending on heat and humidity factors which affect how deeply the ants burrow. So far, the ants haven't recolonized the mounds, either, Benson says.

Benson's son, Robert, who lives in College Station, was called in for a demonstration two months ago. "I was in awe," recalls Robert, 40, a doctoral student in physics at Texas A&M University and also an entrepreneur.

"It has all the qualities for anyone who wants revenge," Robert adds. "It feels like a real weapon."

The weapon has been renamed the Yaard-Vark, a name that now graces a company that Robert has formed to produce, market and sell the devices.

The company, which is gearing up for mass production, will refashion the devices to include a range of safeguards. Next spring, Yaard-Varks will probably be available at $59 to $79.

"The market will be huge," predicts Robert, who is applying for a patent to protect his dad's invention.

"We're going to produce as many as we can," he adds.

Drug trafficking worries bishops

OAXACA, Mexico (AP) — Nine Roman Catholic Church bishops have sent a report to Pope John Paul II on the serious problem of drug trafficking in the southwestern states of Mexico.

According to the newspaper El Universal, the 31-page report expresses the bishops' concern that peasants are being victimized by the planting, harvesting and sale of poppies and marijuana in the region.

El Universal quotes the bishop of Oaxaca, Bartolome Carrasco Briseno, as saying the church is "alarmed and profoundly worried" about the rise in drug traffic and the extent of organized illegal network.

Senior citizens voice Medicare fears

By The Associated Press
Senior citizens are taking to the streets in about 90 cities today to demonstrate their concern for the health of Medicare.

According to the National Council of Senior Citizens, coordinating "Senior Health Action Day" demonstrations, the elderly will hear and make speeches, conduct rallies, stage marches and take other actions to impress upon presidential candidates Ronald Reagan and Walter F. Mondale their insistence that ways be found to save Medicare.

The government's health insurance program faces a financial crisis as grave as the one that confronted Social Security before Congress enacted a bipartisan rescue plan this year.

According to the organizers, senior citizens in Knoxville, Tenn., were to wear price tags on parts of their bodies to represent the cost of recent operations. In Chicago, petitions in the form of a roll of bandages were being presented to Reagan-Bush campaign headquarters.

In Indianapolis, Ind., senior citizens were to register voters in a downtown area at lunchtime; in Seattle, Wash., a giant "get well card" was to be unveiled; in Columbus, Ohio, a lunch of "depression beans and cornbread" was being served at St. Stephen's Community House; and in Fall

Many mentally ill adrift with no home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The policy of opening the doors of America's mental asylums has cast adrift tens of thousands of mentally ill who now live aimlessly on the streets, the American Psychiatric Association says.

The group called Wednesday for a nationwide drive to reach out to these people with programs to provide food, shelter, clothing, treatment and, if need be, a return to an asylum.

Dr. H. Richard Lamb, professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California School of Medicine in Los Angeles, warned that in some cities, emergency shelters "are becoming mini-institutions for the chronically mentally ill, an ironic alternative to the state mental hospitals."

The association said governments at all levels must spend more to help mentally ill street people, who comprise 25 to 50 percent of all the homeless in America. Their precise numbers are not known, Lamb said, but overall estimates of the homeless have ranged from 250,000 to 3 million.

Lamb, who headed an association task force on the problem, said states should rethink laws that now make it difficult to involuntarily commit someone to a mental institution unless he or she can be proven to be dangerous.

"We are experiencing a new phenomenon — one of unprecedented magnitude and complexity — and hardly a section of the country, urban or rural, has escaped the ubiquitous presence of ragged, ill and hallucinating human beings, wandering through our city streets, huddled in alleyways or sleeping over vents," Lamb and Dr. John A. Talbot, the APA president, wrote in the summary of their task force report.

River, Mass., Gov. Michael Dukakis was expected to speak at a rally in the Lincoln Park amusement park ballroom, according to the council.

In Washington, D.C., the elderly were gathering outside Reagan-Mondale re-election headquarters on Capitol Hill to demand a response to their concerns, organizers said. Seniors New Cumberland, Pa., planned a motorcade to Republican state headquarters in Harrisburg to demonstrate with a large bottle containing dozens of small prescription bottles representing the out-of-pocket costs Medicare patients must pay.

Luke Garrett, gospel singer from Dallas, will be in concert at 7 p.m. Sunday at Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis.

Garrett is the featured soloist at the First Baptist Church of Dallas. He will be releasing his first album next spring.

Preceding the evening worship service, the Zig Zigar film series "Living Your Potential" will be shown in the church sanctuary at 5:30 p.m. The series concerns Ziglar's ideas on the dynamics of daily Christian motivation.

Rev. Norman Rushing, pastor, invited the public to attend both special activities.

Special meeting at Church of Christ

Jack Pape, minister of the Westside Church of Christ at El Paso, will be conducting a series of special meetings at the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ this Sunday through Wednesday.

Pape and his wife Sylvia worked with the Pampa church from 1970 to 1972.

He has done mission work in Tanzania, East Africa, and has been preaching for more than 20 years. He has served churches in New Mexico, Colorado and Texas. Pape has been with the El Paso church since 1980.

During the past year, Pape has made an in-depth study of the Gospel of Mark. He has prepared 28 sermons on Mark and plans to draw upon this material in his meetings in Pampa.

Gene Glaeser, local minister, said, "This is a great opportunity to let God's word fill and refresh you."

A period of fellowship will follow each evening service to allow the friends of the Papes to visit with them. Glaeser said. Glaeser invited the friends and acquaintances of the Papes to attend the series.

The Papes have three children. Two of them are married and are involved in church work at Stephenville and Richardson. A third child is a ninth grader.

Singing Sunday at St. Paul Methodist

St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 511 N. Hobart, will host "A Great Day of Hymn Singing" at the 11 a.m. service Sunday.

Jerry Lane will direct and narrate the collection of some of the world's greatest hymns, telling how and why they were written.

Organist will be Lois Fagan. Pastor Royce Womack invited the public to attend the special service.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The Knowledge of the Lord

Habakkuk 2:14. "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

The Church is chosen of God to spread the good news that God has a plan to redeem men and reconcile them unto Himself through the vicarious sacrifice of Jesus Christ our Lord. The Church will be so successful in spreading this glorious knowledge in the world that God says the earth will be as full of it as the waters that fill the ocean. Attend church and become a part of this great undertaking.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Small is profitable, when it comes to new magazines

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If you own a four-wheel-drive car, if you have a satellite dish, if you like computers, if you live in Chicago, New York, Los Angeles or a handful of other cities, there's a magazine aimed right at you.

Production of so-called specialty magazines have jumped 126 percent over five years as publishers divide their marketplace into small, lucrative pieces.

"Special interest (magazines) focus more on people, their leisure time activity, it's almost a captive audience," added Rose Marie Bratland, a periodicals specialist at the Commerce Department's International Trade Administration.

"The shift from general editorial magazines to a proliferation of very specialized publications filling a small niche has been amazing," said Curt Risley, publisher of the Ayer Directory of Publications, which keeps track of the industry.

Computer periodicals had been leading the pack, but some have begun to fall by the wayside. Popular science magazines such as Science 84 have also been doing better.

More homespun-sounding entries such as Blair & Ketchum's Country Journal are gaining ground among rural-oriented periodicals. And the more traditional women's magazines are losing readers as Working Mother, Working Woman and Washington Woman get more attention at newsstands. Especially specialized magazines include 4WD, the magazine for four-wheel-drive owners, and a periodical for owners of home satellite dishes.

Aggregate sales of specialty magazines averaged 193 million copies, according to the 1982 Census of Manufactures. That was up from just over 85 million in sales five years earlier, the Census Bureau reported.

During the same period, general interest magazines remained relatively stable in sales and news magazines showed smaller gains, the government said.

"Whenever one magazine goes into a new, more special-interest field, and has an obvious success, it tends, like any business, to attract competitors," said Marvin M. Gropp, vice president for research at the Magazine Publishers Association. "The most awesome example is computer magazines."

Risley's magazine director listed 137 computer-oriented periodicals in 1982, compared with 42 in 1977.

"You don't go through one day that someone is not talking about a personal computer or a piece of software," Risley said in a telephone interview from his Fort Washington, Pa., office.

Overall, Risley said, the number of magazines published in the United States climbed from 9,582 in 1977 to 10,952 in 1982.

One specialty magazine, TV Guide, has stayed near the top of circulation lists in the last several years. TV Guide led in 1977 with sales of 19,811,268, while by 1982 Reader's Digest was first at 18,171,628.

The preliminary Census report also showed a drop in average total circulation of women's magazines, which includes home, fashion, domestic, housekeeping and garden management publications.

The Census report showed advertising receipts of women's magazines rose 62 percent over five years to a 1982 total of $788.2 million. But income from advertising rose 118 percent for the specialty magazines to $991.8 million over the same period.

General-interest magazines had an advertising income increase of 87 percent to $472.1 million during the period, and news magazines increased their take from ads by 127 percent to $668.5 million, the Census Bureau reported.

Magazines have begun changing to attract the increasing number of women who work outside the home.

"We have magazines growing up to serve the changing women's lifestyles. These include magazines like Self, Working Woman, Working Mother and so forth. Those magazines are newer and are growing," Gropp said.

The more traditional women's service magazines are changing to compete with the new specialized magazines for women in the workforce, Gropp said.

The general women's magazines may actually be too big for their advertisers, Gropp suggested.

Loss in court doesn't discourage 19-year-old

By ANN LEVIN
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph
TYLER, Texas (AP) — In the year since 19-year-old Carolyn Prater sued a state university on the grounds it discriminated against her fundamentalist Christian beliefs, a remarkable thing has happened to the Tyler teen-ager.

An awkward schoolgirl matured into a poised young woman who said she expects to be a lawyer some day.

Miss Prater said the public flap when the suit was filed against Stephen F. Austin State University last summer caused her to gain 30 pounds and develop acne.

Yet Miss Prater, who will be a sophomore at Tyler Junior College this fall, says she would do it again, despite the notoriety it created.

"The most important thing I learned is that standing up for what you believe isn't always easy, but you need to do it," she said.

The federal lawsuit ended Aug. 26, 1983, when U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice denied Miss Prater's request to attend SFA classes in Nacogdoches pending the trial of the suit, which claimed the university's admission requirements are unconstitutional. Miss Prater said she was denied equal protection under the law when the university rejected her because the church school she attended, Grace Community School, is not state-accredited.

Miss Prater's attorneys saw the rejection as a denial of state benefits and a violation of her freedom of religion. They said her "B" average at Grace Community and 830 score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test were proof enough she could handle college.

The Praters have repeatedly said the lawsuit was meant to be a test case — a stage on which a devout, working-class family and their friends would fight a battle over whether the state has the right to tell churches what to do.

Miss Prater's trouble getting into college was a possible forum for a growing controversy between the government and churches that fight state regulation of Christian education.

No one expected Miss Prater would have to face a row of microphones, television lights and reporters in the dining room of the family's modest house in the Azalea District.

Looking back, Miss Prater said the publicity taught her the media can take quotes out of context and present only one side of an issue.

"I felt like everybody was looking at me," she said of the days when her face was splashed across the front pages.

"Some people would look at me, and then look again. They'd say, 'I know I've seen you somewhere.' It made me feel paranoid," she said.

Robert Provan, general counsel for SFA, said the suit was significant in retrospect because "had Miss Prater prevailed, we would have been forced to abandon our admission policy of demanding graduation from an accredited high school, and I'm not sure what policy we would have replaced it with.

"There is a very rapid growth of schools affiliated with Christian fundamentalists who believe any control by the state of their children's education is a violation of their religious beliefs," Provan said.

"The public interest is running head on into the movement of Christian fundamentalism. Since the state can't compel a youth to go to a public school, there are attempts to control private schools," Provan said.

University administrators defended accreditation. Provan called it "a self-improvement process," while Grace Community church leaders adamantly opposed it, even though they said the school complies with most Texas Education Agency standards and all local safety and health codes.

The non-denominational Christian church founded a kindergarten-through-12th grade school in 1972. Bible study and religion are part of the curriculum.

The choice to stay non-accredited is based on a scriptural belief that parents and the church are the only two institutions which should educate children, administrators said.

The court, however, upheld the state's claim that accreditation ensures a minimum level of teacher competence, course work, counseling and library materials. Justice said non-accredited schools are "unknown quantities."

"It may be that Grace Community is a superior secondary school. However, because no outside agency had made that assessment, Stephen F. Austin and its officers feel that they have no way of knowing whether Grace is a superior school or one which is inferior," Justice wrote.

Grace Community ardently wants the school to remain an "unknown quantity" — at least to the state.

Miss Prater's father, Jack, who owns a home decorating business in Tyler, has sent his other three children to Grace Community. He said he would have pursued the case beyond the preliminary injunction hearing if money had not run out.

Compact kiddie kitchen

By APRIL BAIL
Somehow the women's lib movement missed me. My only involvement was back in Cincinnati, when I was on my way to register for yet another course in woodworking techniques.

Being my usual, friendly self, I became engaged in a stimulating conversation with a woman wearing wire frame glasses and frizzy hair. That night, my grandmother saw me on television, and to this day, everyone thinks I burned my bra.

It's not that I disapprove of equality. I just never seemed to have the time to get involved. So, when someone suggested I give my son a set of toy dishes instead of a truck for his birthday, I decided it was time I did something for the cause. I went all out and made him an entire kitchen.

The compact kiddie kitchen unit I built features microwave and conventional ovens on the top, a counter with stove burners and sink, and underneath, a refrigerator and dishwasher. After playtime, the kitchen can be used for storing clothes or toys.

This project is as easy as boiling water when you use our fully illustrated plans. They include a complete materials list, step-by-step instructions, and cutting and assembly diagrams.

If you wish to order plans for the Compact Kiddie Kitchen, simply specify Project No. 1822-4 and send $3.95. Also available is the 1985 edition of our color catalog featuring hundreds of other exciting projects, for an additional $2.95.

Mail your order to: Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 159, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

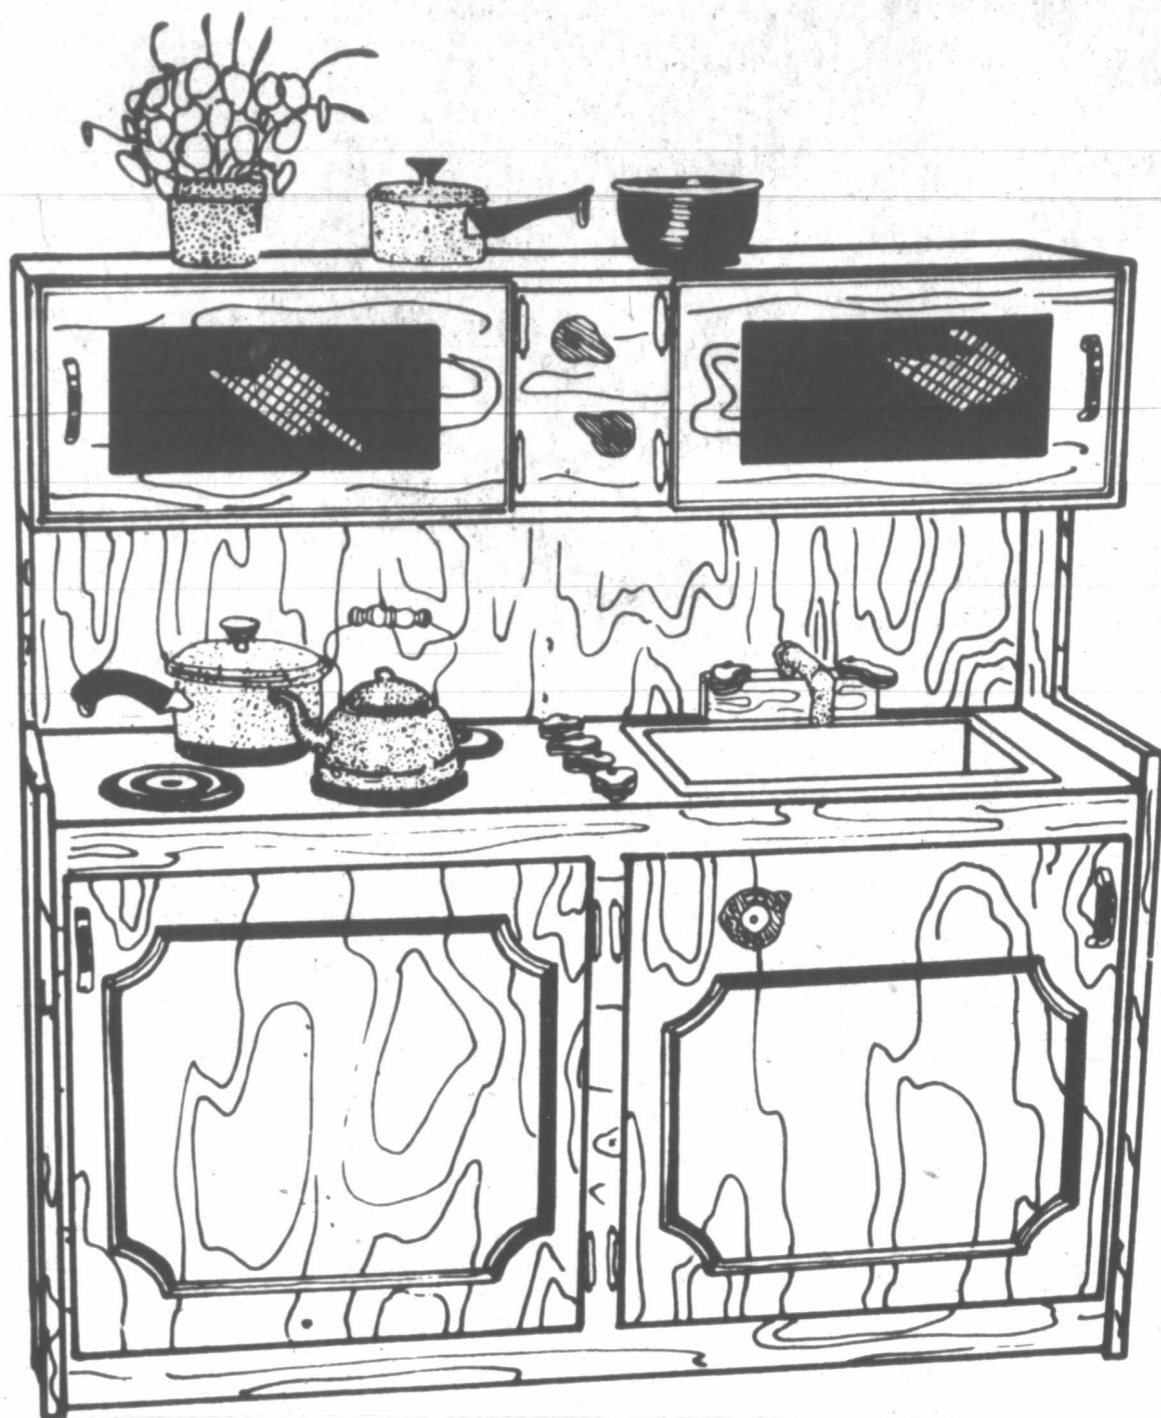

Our kiddie kitchen, sized for the five- to nine-year-old, is 48 inches high, 48 inches long, and 18 inches deep. Size can be altered for a different age group. You'll need a sheet of interior-grade, 1/4-inch plywood for the 4x4 foot back and a few other parts. The remaining parts are cut from two sheets of 3/4 or 1/2-inch plywood.

This cute little kitchen has a 1/2-inch plywood sink on the right, trimmed with 1/2-inch molding. The PVC faucet is mounted in a base of 2x4. Faucet handles, as well as appliance controls, can be cut from wood scraps.

The dishwasher, located under the sink, has a plywood rack to hold the dishes. The refrigerator, under the stove burners, has a plywood freezer compartment for that pretend ice cream, or after play, a pair of jeans.

Refrigerator and dishwasher doors are simple plywood rectangles trimmed with molding. Oven doors are 1/4-inch dark thermoplastic rectangles attached with mirror brackets to plywood frames. I used regular cabinet hinges, handles, and magnetic latches for all the doors in the project.

The compact kiddie kitchen was a terrific hit with my son. In between make-believe gourmet dishes, however, the kitchen sometimes becomes a gas station or an airplane hanger.

Dear Abby

Husband's rejuvenation is not cause for jubilation

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I found a paid hotel bill in my husband's possession. A room had been rented in a lady's name at a very expensive local hotel. It showed that a party of two had spent the night there and had room service. I was out of town at the time.

I also found a canceled check indicating that my husband had given this same lady a nice sum of money. (We have separate checking accounts.)

When I confronted my husband with the hotel bill and canceled check, he said he "found" the hotel bill at his place of business. The canceled check, he said, was a loan he had made to a young woman he hardly knew.

Abby, I know he's lying. I did some checking around and learned that the lady is 26 years old and married. (My husband is 58.)

When I told my husband I was going to mail the hotel bill and canceled check to the lady's husband, he begged me not to, but contends that he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

My husband has been impotent for the last eight years due to medication he's been taking for high blood pressure. I've been told that a young woman can arouse an older man when a woman his own age cannot.)

Should I mail the check and hotel bill to her husband? I think he should know, since I do. I understand he is a very nice man.

I will not make a decision until I hear from you.

DEAR ABBY: A 54-year-old, financially independent professional woman wrote to say that she had many suitors who enjoyed her company, but after she told them she was celibate, they disappeared. She wondered why they didn't continue seeing her and get their sex elsewhere.

Abby, celibacy has nothing to do with sex. In my Webster's Dictionary, a "celibate" is defined as "unmarried." The woman should have used the word "chaste," which means "innocent of unlawful sexual intercourse."

Furthermore, there would be no need for an unmarried woman to announce that she is celibate since a celibate is, by definition, an unmarried person.

Why didn't you straighten her out?

CELIBATE IN N.J.

DEAR CELIBATE: I didn't straighten her out because until you straightened me out, I also thought celibate and chaste were synonymous.

But celibacy, according to my Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, is also defined as "abstinence from sexual intercourse."

DEAR ABBY: Although I can't top "Pennsylvania Dutchman's" cousin, I think I can match him. From the Markwell family Bible: Lewis Markwell Sr. died in November 1879, shortly before his 80th birthday. However, my records show a cousin whose father was 90 when she was born!

My great-great-great-grandmother Armstrong, born in 1739, bore five children after she was 41 years old. The youngest was born when she was 49. I realize this is no record, as there have been children born to women in their 50s. But five children after 40 is not every woman's fondest hope!

Men that worked in the tin mines in England found their way to the copper and iron mines in Michigan. If you know the occupation of your ancestor this might be a clue in locating the family. The Michigan Unit Genealogy Sources, Department of Education, State Library Services, P.O. Box 30007,

The library has published a "Selected Bibliography, Genealogical Research for Young People" and distribution is free.

MINNESOTA settlers, for the earlier years, were primarily Scandinavians and persons interested in lumber industry. The 10,000 lakes attracted fishermen providing much of the labor in the establishment of the packing plants around the Twin Cities.

Marriage records and birth and death records before 1908 are in the offices of the clerks of the District Court in the particular county.

State census records for 1865 and 1895 are on microfilm at the MINNESOTA State Archives, St. Paul, Minn. When checking census for Minnesota, the 1836 Iowa Territory census includes the present Minnesota and should be researched as well as the Mortality Records.

Receiving blanket easy-to-sew, beautiful, too

CLEVELAND — The second generation of baby boomers is arriving. If you've been invited to more baby showers recently than you have in the past few years, here are instructions for sewing a quick and easy receiving blanket that will draw oohs and ahs!

Sewing the basic blanket is a simple three-step process that can be completed in an hour or less, says Grace McMahon Johnson, education director for a sewing machine company.

The blanket will require 1 1/2 yards each of cotton print fabric, either fleece or terry cloth in a contrasting color, and medium-weight polyester batting. Use a No. 14 or No. 16 needle to accommodate the thickness.

Johnson's directions begin with placing the preshrunk outer cotton piece and lining piece of terry or fleece right sides together on a flat surface. Make sure that the grain lines are straight and trim the edges to form a perfect rectangle. Place the batting on top and trim away the excess.

Next, sew around the rectangle, leaving a six-inch opening in the middle of one side. Trim the excess batting from the seam and turn the blanket to the right side, using your opening. Fold in the selvages on the opening and slip-stitch it closed by hand or use your machine, sewing around the entire rectangle.

Finish by lightly pressing the blanket for a professional look.

"For added attraction, you can decorate the blanket by trimming the edge with colorful seam binding or delicate lace," said Johnson.

"For an absolutely 'precious' look, sew numerous tiny satin ribbons on to the cotton side, tacking them on by machine for safety and durability. The ribbons can be tied into bows or simply knotted.

Appliques can be added to the blanket or, if you choose a bold pattern print or one with large figures, you can machine stitch around the figures through all thicknesses, creating a quilted effect."

Johnson cautions that hand or machine embroidered stitching should be completed before constructing the blanket. And she also emphasized that the cotton and terry or fleece must always be preshrunk and sized before you do any stitching so that the new mother will be able to safely machine launder the blanket.

"A little extra care will ensure that your gift will continue to be of service during baby's first year," concluded Johnson. "And what's a better 'security blanket' for you than knowing that."

His life is full in spite of handicap

GORDONVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Among the many things that keep Ray Meyers busy these days is latching together hooked rugs.

It's not really unusual for a man to be creating hooked rugs. Many men not only make hooked rugs, but do needlepoint and crochet, too. But Meyers may be the only man to create with his feet. He was born 73 years ago without arms.

Meyers, who isn't the least bit shy in discussing his "exceptional" ability, has in fact been an entertainer and has held center stage for more than 50 years of his life. He's still much in demand, playing his guitar with his feet, and either singing or playing a harmonica by holding it between his shoulder and his face.

There isn't much that this father of two sons and five grandchildren can't do.

Drive? He's an accomplished driver. Hunt? He's a good marksman with the rifle. Cook, paint pictures, work crossword puzzles, wash his hair, pick fruit, mow the lawn. These are all as common to him as saying the ABCs.

"You can't miss what you never had" seems to be the way Meyers has patterned his life. He has managed to work his way around any situation that demands two arms.

Born in Christiana in the middle of a large family and raised in Lancaster County, Meyers was always able to keep up with his brothers and sisters, even matching them in climbing trees. He went to public school in Vintage and graduated from Allentown High School.

He learned from birth to do with his feet what the average child does with his hands.

"I could have ridden a bicycle, but we couldn't afford to buy one in those days," says Meyers, who lives with his wife Eleanor in a spacious modular home in Gordonville.

He's a great CB radio fan and has his equipment set up in the family room. When he's on the air, you'll recognize him by the handle, "Minus Two." A woman once asked him how he came by that name.

"You know you're born with two arms and two legs, but I was born 'minus two,'" he chuckled, with the sincere humor that eases people into overlooking his armless shirtsleeves.

It only takes a few minutes of chatting with Meyers to soon forget that he is minus anything. He has a great talent for welcoming you into the "normal life" he lives.

Everything most people would do with two hands, Meyers does with his feet and toes. He wears slip-on shoes and black socks that have the toes cut out, giving him freedom to use both of his feet or just one foot.

Behind the wheel of his car, he is as much at home as he is in his living room. He handles the wheel with one foot and the floor pedals with the other. He has logged more than 2 million miles in 49 years of driving without one traffic citation. He is believed to be the only person without hands who drives a car without special equipment.

Many of those miles were driven while Meyers was making personal appearances and earning a name as a show business entertainer in country-western style. His career began in 1934 when he played in the Chicago World's Fair in Ripley's Believe It or Not "Odditorium." Later Ripley invited him to play on his radio program in New York City. A singer from the WWVA Jamboree in Wheeling, W. Va., heard him and issued an invitation to perform on the show.

From there he became very much in demand and did radio shows and personal appearances throughout the South. Meyers met his wife, Eleanor, while singing on a radio station in Fairmont, W. Va. They have been married for 46 years.

"There's not much demand for personal appearances anymore," explained Meyers. "Television has cut out a lot of the live shows. People would rather sit home and watch the tube."

While appearing as an entertainer, Meyers also worked 13 years with Trojan Yacht.

LEFORS—Perryton Junior Varsity had 130 yards in penalties and five turnovers Thursday night, but all that misfortune wasn't enough to keep the Deputies from spoiling Lefors football opener, 20-0, Thursday night.

Perryton also had 379 yards of total offense and a couple of long-distance touchdowns to counter the penalties and mistakes.

The loss spoiled Randall Morrison's debut as Lefors head coach.

Lefors just couldn't get its offense rolling. The Pirates had just 86 yards total offense and couldn't get past the midfield stripe the first half. Penalties and turnovers hurt Lefors much more than it did Perryton. A 56-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Russell Taylor to Bo Lake was nullified because of an off-sides penalty in the third quarter. A score there would have knotted the game.

Lefors threatened in the closing minutes when Perryton punter Greg Thomas couldn't get off a punt and was tackled by Jeff Wilcox on the visitors 17. After a quarterback keeper by Taylor for one yard, he threw a pass up the middle that was intercepted.

Three plays later and 40 seconds to go, Perryton scored its final TD on a quarterback keeper by Robert Jordan that covered 74 yards.

Perryton scored its first TD with 6:39 to go in the second quarter on an eight-yard run by Dan Rutz. Harvey Land, who rushed for 151 yards on 18 tries, broke loose up the middle for a 61-yard TD jaunt midway in the third quarter to make it 13-0.

Lefors didn't play bad defense overall. The Pirates halted a scoring drive by Perryton early in the second quarter when senior lineman Ronny Alderson stopped Land just short of the goal line on a fourth and two situation.

Hard-hitting by the Pirates forced Perryton to cough up the ball four times. John Winegeart, Steve Roberson, Jeff Smith and Richie Smith recovered fumbles. Winegeart also had an intercepted pass.

Taylor was Lefors' top rusher with 32 yards in 13 carries. Lake caught three of Taylor's passes for 30 yards.

Lefors visits Phillips next Friday night.

Pampa, AHS renew rivalry

The Pampa Harvesters, trying to rebound from a 35-0 opening-game loss to Monahans last week, renew old acquaintances with the Amarillo High Sandies tonight at Dick Bivins Stadium. Kickoff time is 7:30 p.m.

The two schools haven't played each other since 1981 when both were members of the same district. Amarillo High won the '81 outing, 21-10. Pampa was dropped into Class 4A while Amarillo High remained a Class 5A school.

Center Jimmy Leos was hurt in last week's game and will be out indefinitely, Kendall said.

Defensively, the Harvesters will have David Carter and Wiley Kennedy at ends; Dean Birkes and Lyle VanBuskirk at tackles; Tyrone Evans at noseguard; Rusty Rice and Michael Parker at linebackers; Michael Lopez and Wayne Roberts at cornerbacks; Brian Kotara and Ronnie Jackson at safeties.

The Sandies' offense will have Tim Packard and Kelly Aimes at ends; Jason Dippel and Randy Herring at tackles; Chet Dye and Marvin McLemore at guards; Len Wright at center; Don Riggan at quarterback; Thomas Huyck at fullback; Timmy Smith at tailback, and Bo Buchanan at wingback.

On Defense, the Sandies will line up with Tim Jeans and Dan Delich at ends; Bill Bobbora and Tom Mathiasmeier at tackles; Chris Jackson at noseguard; David Cox and Tommy Wilson at linebackers; Jeff Kelley at free safety; Koy Eddleman at strong safety; Brett Epps and Ronny Johns at cornerbacks.

"Amarillo High has got one of their better ballclubs this season," said Pampa coach John Kendall. "They've got a good offensive line and some good running backs."

The Sandies downed Odessa High, 17-14, last week to end a six-game losing streak against the Bronchos.

Quarterback Donnie Riggan and tailback David Cox scored TDs for the Sandies, while fullback Thomas Huyck rushed for 112 yards. Riggan also booted a 33-yard field goal that turned out to be the winning margin.

"Amarillo High has a good backfield, but their defense really showed up good against Odessa," Kendall said.

Tackle Bill Bobbora, a 227-pound senior, anchors the defensive line. Returning starter Jeff Kelley is considered all-state material at free safety.

Kendall said the Harvesters have been working on eliminating turnovers and blocking better this week.

"We had seven fumbles against Monahans, so we're working on trying to keep ahead of the football," Kendall said. "We're also trying to get the linemen to fire out and hold their blocks."

NFL roundup

Patriots face key test against Seahawks

The New England Patriots, who haven't looked like the up-and-coming team they were billed as at the start of the National Football League season, open at home Sunday against a team that has—the Seattle Seahawks.

For the Patriots, trounced last week by Miami, the team it has to beat in the AFC East, it's a key test.

New England Coach Ron Meyer calls the 2-0 Seahawks "on a par, if not better," than the Dolphins and linebacker Steve Nelson puts things in perspective:

"This is a big game. We've got three tough games in a row with Seattle and Washington and Miami. We have to come out from that with a couple of victories."

The Patriots-Seahawks clash is one of 13 on Sunday.

In other games, Atlanta is at Minnesota, Chicago at Green Bay, Cincinnati at the New York Jets, the Los Angeles Raiders at Kansas City, St. Louis at Indianapolis, Detroit at Tampa Bay, Houston at San Diego, the Los Angeles Rams at Pittsburgh, New Orleans at San Francisco, the New York Giants at Washington, Philadelphia at Dallas, and Denver at Cleveland in a Sunday night game.

Miami is at Buffalo Monday night.

Seattle, which made the playoffs for the first time ever last season, has started off like it will repeat with ease. The Seahawks have beaten Cleveland 33-0 (n) San Diego 31-17—leaving them tied for second in points scored and fairs, without any preseason, stepped right in and picked up 46 yards rushing last week.

But, the Patriots, who have scored just seven points in the last six quarters after taking a 21-0 halftime lead in a 21-17 opening game win over Buffalo, are worried about their own offense. In last week's 28-7 loss to Miami, there were five turnovers—Steve Grogan was intercepted four times and the Patriots lost a fumble.

"We've got to throw the ball a lot better than we're doing now, and catch it. They're just too good," Meyer said. "We're a good rushing team. Right now we're not the greatest. We just aren't executing completely."

The Cowboys, trying to regain their traditional form after a 28-7 beating by the Giants last Sunday, will have an old friend in Irving, Texas, to greet the Eagles—Harold Carmichael, wearing the No. 17 he wore as Philadelphia's all-time leading receiver.

The 34-year-old Carmichael, signed as a free agent after being cut by both the Eagles and the Jets is unlikely to play much because he's still learning the Dallas system. But his presence is symptomatic of one of the Cowboys' problems—depth at wide receiver following the retirement of Drew Pearson, the trade of Butch Johnson and an injury to Tony Hill.

"It feels weird wearing their uniform but I can't thank them enough for another chance," says Carmichael, who plagued Dallas as an Eagle. "I'm a Cowboy now."

The Chiefs have been one of the NFL's surprise teams, upsetting Pittsburgh and Cincinnati on the road with Todd Blackledge at quarterback in place of Bill Kenney, who broke his thumb in preseason. Now, they come home to take on the Super Bowl champion Raiders, who have methodically put away Houston and Green Bay without showing very much.

The Redskins, trying to become the first NFC team to go to the Super Bowl three straight years, will now try for another first—becoming the first team to get there after losing their first two games. They hope to start against a Giants team that has been one of the NFL's surprises with a 2-0 record.

Cobb wins decision

HOUSTON (AP) — Randall "Tex" Cobb turned to a stiff left jab and his power game during the closing stages to pound out a hard-fought, unanimous decision over Mark Lee Thursday night in a 10-round fight at The Summit.

Cobb, 25-3, who suffered a lopsided defeat at the hands of world heavyweight champion Larry Holmes nearly a year ago here, had difficulty solving the movement of the fighter from Carson City, Nev.

The outcome was in doubt during the middle rounds of the main event on the Houston Boxing Association card, and some in the crowd of 2,200 thought Lee should have been awarded the victory.

"I never felt I was really in trouble, but he did hit me with his jab. It was a world-class job," Lee said after the fight.

"Tex is a very strong fighter. When I watched him on TV in the past, I thought he had no movement, no power. But not only is he tough, he has power," Lee added. "Tex is a good fighter. He needs to get back in shape to fight world-class fighters."

Mets fall further behind in 14-4 loss to Pirates

By The Associated Press
Dave Johnson, winding down his first year as manager of the New York Mets, had the tired look of a man drained of easy answers after his pennant-contending team was blown out 14-4 by the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I don't understand why we have games like this," he said after the loss. "I wish I knew... because we've had games like this all through the season. Our concentration wanes and we forget what we're doing out there. When we're bad, we're very bad. Sometimes, it gets to us."

Montreal's game against the East Division-leading Cubs was rained out in Chicago.

Suffering its third defeat in four days, second-place New York dropped 7 1/2 games back of Chicago.

"In my mind," said Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez, "the killers were the games against the Cardinals (Monday and Tuesday).

When we lost those, it was really like nails in the coffin. Now we're hanging on the ledge."

For the Cubs, who face the Mets in a three-game series at Wrigley Field beginning today, the magic number to clinch the National League East is nine.

"If we don't sweep those games, forget it," said Hernandez. "It's over, no doubt about it. It's that simple."

As the Mets combined ineffective pitching with physical errors and mental mistakes Thursday, the Pirates broke out to a 9-1 lead in the seventh inning. By the eighth, Johnson had replaced eight of his nine starters.

"Early on, it looked like we needed a wakeup call," he said. "A lot of strange things were happening out there. It was terrible, just terrible."

Johnson talked about outfielders allowing runners to take extra bases, infielders forgetting to cover the right bases and pitchers not making the right pitch when they had to.

"There's a fine line sometimes between technique and effort. Sometimes the technique is so brutal it seems like the effort is not there. But heck, I know these guys are trying. There's a lot of character on this club."

Leading Pittsburgh's attack was third baseman Jim Morrison, who collected three singles, a double and a career-high six RBIs.

"The Mets are a great young ballclub," said Morrison. "The Cubs also have a lot of young players, but they also have a lot of seasoned veterans. That can make the difference."

Phillies 10, Cardinals 2
Juan Samuel and Mike Schmidt combined to drive in seven runs as Philadelphia crushed St. Louis.

Samuel had a two-run homer in the third inning and a two-run single in the fourth. Schmidt slammed his 31st home run of the season in the second inning, a solo blast, and added run-scoring singles in the third and fifth innings.

PRETZEL PLAY—New York Mets catcher Mike Fitzgerald gets his legs tangled with the Pittsburgh Pirates Denny Gonzalez during a play at the plate. The Mets lost, 14-4, Thursday and now trail the division leading Chicago Cubs by 7 1/2 games. Gonzalez was safe, scoring on a sacrifice fly by Marvell Wynne in the second inning. (AP Laserphoto)

Lynn powers Angels past Indians, 7-3

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Fred Lynn wasn't feeling well before the California Angels took on the Cleveland Indians. After the game, it was Cleveland who had that sinking feeling.

The California outfielder was bedridden Wednesday with a strep throat. Before Thursday night's game, he was still complaining of feeling weak.

"I didn't have a lot of energy or a lot of strength," said Lynn, who smashed two home runs in the Angels' 7-3 victory. "By the time batting practice was over, I already felt like I'd played the game."

In other American League games, the New York Yankees stopped the Toronto Blue Jays 6-1 and Texas edged the Seattle Mariners 9-7.

Lynn lined a three-run homer in the second inning and added a solo shot in the seventh, giving him seven homers in his last 12 games.

"I don't concentrate on homers because I'm not that type of a hitter," he said. "But when I get in a streak, I can hit a bunch in a short time."

The victory moved California to within 1 1/2 games of Minnesota and Kansas City, the co-leaders in the AL West who were both idle Thursday.

Jim Slaton, 7-7, scattered seven hits and struck out seven while walking three in 8 2/3 innings. Don Aase came on to record his seventh save.

Joe Carter hit his 10th homer of the season for Cleveland.

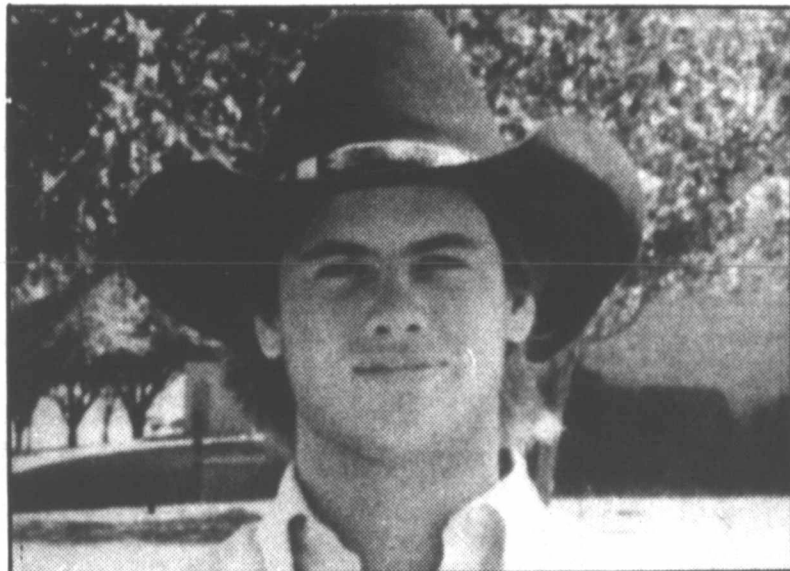

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 1

Ray Fontenot hurled eight innings, picking up his first victory since Aug. 10, as New York pushed Toronto one step closer to the brink of elimination in the AL East. The magic number for the division-leading Detroit Tigers now stands at six.

Rangers 9, Mariners 7

Gary Ward smashed a three-run homer and Bobby Jones added two run-scoring singles, pacing Texas over Seattle.

Ward's homer, his 18th, capped a four-run Texas sixth inning and gave the Rangers an 8-0 lead.

LEE LOWREY of Pampa is a member of the Vernon Regional Junior College rodeo team this year. Lowrey will be competing in the VRJC Rodeo Oct. 11-13 at the Santa Rosa Rodeo Grounds. Rodeo performances begin each night at 7:30 p.m.

Norfolk to have WABA team

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The fledgling Women's American Basketball Association plans to place one of its charter franchises in Norfolk, the team's coach and general manager says.

Nat Frazier, a former Morgan State men's basketball coach, said Thursday that Norfolk had replaced Baltimore as a preferred site "because of the interest in the Old Dominion women's program."

The first of 11 home games for the Virginia Waves, the team's tentative name, will be played Oct. 21.

Each WABA squad will be limited to 12 players. Frazier said he was not in a position to identify the prospective Virginia players.

The WABA also has franchises in New York, Dallas, Houston, Atlanta and Chicago, said commissioner Bill Byrne. Teams are tentatively set for New Jersey and Columbus, Ohio.

The league will play most of its games in October and November, avoiding conflict with the college basketball season.

This coming year you will find a lucrative market for special knowledge or expertise that you possess. Be aware that what you have to offer is of considerable value to others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be a good listener today if you are fortunate enough to be in the company of profound thinkers. Knowledge can be turned to power. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, circumstances may provide an opening for you to cut yourself in for a piece of the action where another has been the spade-work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something for which you've been hoping is about to be brought into being. An ally will play a great part in making it happen.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's no limit today to what you can achieve within your talents and capabilities. Believe in yourself and raise your sights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Although you may not deliberately seek attention today, your presence will have a favorable impact wherever you go. It's nice to be a standout.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Situations will have a way of eventually working out to your ultimate advantage today, even though early signals may not indicate this.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) If there is a delicate matter you've been wanting to discuss with a close friend, this is a good day to make your case. Accord is likely.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your good efforts will not go unrewarded today, especially in situations where you strive for personal acclaim. Do your best.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have a commanding presence today that companions will not find offensive. In fact, your behavior will enhance your esteem in their eyes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Taking bows isn't as important today as getting the job done right. Be the power behind the throne instead of the front man.

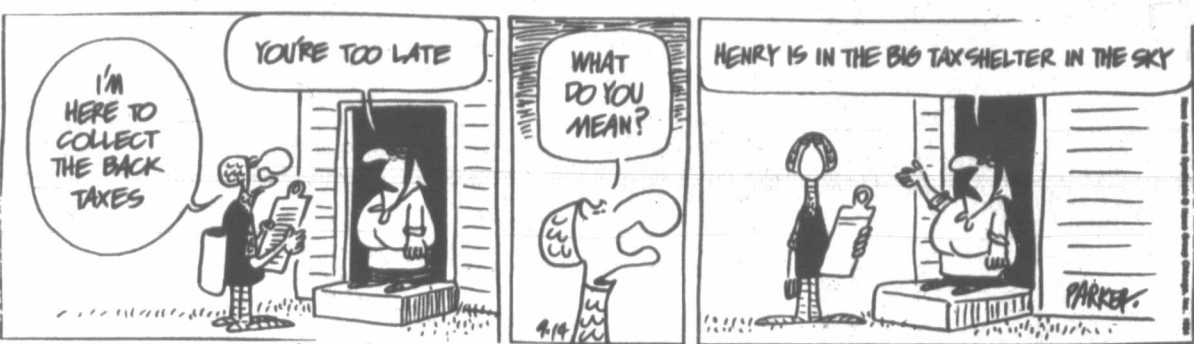

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your influence over your intimate circle of friends is rather powerful today. Use it in a manner that will benefit all concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although conditions are generally favorable for you today, you're apt to reap your greatest advantages materially or prestige-wise.

North Carolina residents emerge from shelters to assess damage

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Torrential rains pounded a "terribly damaged" North Carolina today as thousands of coastal residents emerged from shelters to view Hurricane Diana's more than $25 million swath of destruction and workers tried to restore electricity to nearly 45,000 people.

As Diana rapidly lost intensity Thursday and was downgraded to a tropical storm, Gov. Jim Hunt asked President Reagan for federal assistance because adequate cleanup from the season's first Atlantic hurricane is "beyond the capability of state and local government."

In this southeast coastal city, Diana's 110 mph winds toppled trees and power lines that clogged many streets, blew roofs off homes, swept boats off trailers on land and smashed and sunk many in the water. Many streets in coastal towns throughout the area were still flooded today.

The were no drownings, but the storm indirectly caused two deaths — one by heart attack and one by traffic accident, officials said.

"We've been lucky thus far even though these people have been terribly damaged and it has been bad for them," Hunt said Thursday as he toured Wilmington. "We have been badly hurt and badly damaged."

Heavy rains pounded interior North Carolina early today. Winds gusted to 30 mph in Fayetteville and Jacksonville and some evacuations were carried out in Grifton as floodwaters surged through the town, the National Weather Service said.

Since Tuesday, 17 inches of rain has washed across Wilmington.

Authorities planned to let people return to their homes today on the island of Carolina Beach, population 2,000, for the first time since the bridge joining it to the mainland was blocked Wednesday night.

Methods of management are argued

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Do you obtain good performance from workers by being nice to them — by being "people-oriented," as they say — or by enticing, exciting and directing them with material incentives and rewards?

A bit of both? Perhaps. But that hasn't prevented a wide rift from having developed between the behaviorists, or "people people," and those who tend to stress economics in the form of pay, bonuses and promotion opportunities.

This quotation, from the bestseller "In Search of Excellence" by Thomas Peters and Robert Waterman Jr., is very behaviorist:

"Treat people as adults. Treat them as partners; treat them with dignity; treat them with respect. Treat them (italics) — not capital spending and automation — as the primary source of productivity gains."

By paying positive attention, suggest the behaviorists, productivity can be improved. Nonsense, says Ronald Smith, associate dean of the University of Rochester's Graduate School of Management. He doesn't believe it.

In fact, he says, "paying positive attention will have little beneficial effect if employees face poorly designed incentive systems or if decision-making rights are not properly assigned."

Smith does not mince words. Behavioral approaches to management, sometimes expressed in participative arrangements such as quality circles, in which workers voice their views, can even be a sham, he says.

He cites instances of where the behavioral bias is so strong that wrong conclusions sometimes are drawn from the facts — facts, he says, that really are evidence that the University of Rochester has the correct approach.

Schmidt says that to get this message across to master's degree students is to give them "a very powerful tool they can use later as a business executive."

The message is contained in the "Corporate and Market Organization" curriculum developed by two economists, William Meckling, former dean of the school, and Michael Jensen, professor of finance and business administration.

Its evolution followed a battle at Rochester between behavioral scientists and those who think in more economic terms. "It was a substantial battle," says the dean. "Most behavioral scientists left."

The school has remained convinced of its position in spite of a spate of books in support of behaviorism. "We think we are supported by the evidence," he says.

About 20 National Guardsmen were sent to guard against looting at Carolina Beach on Thursday and a curfew was declared from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. Roads were blocked by water, debris and washouts and the state Department of Transportation bought 75 chain saws to cut fallen trees, said spokesman Ted Funderburk.

In Brunswick County, the fast-food chain Hardees Inc. planned to begin serving 15,000 meals today to 5,000 people in still staying at eight evacuation shelters. The evacuees went without food overnight Wednesday until the governor ordered meals and cooks shipped in from Red Cross headquarters in Wilmington.

Hardest hit when Diana raced for land just after midnight Wednesday were the small beachfront communities of Yaupon Beach and Long Beach, both on Oak Island about 25 miles to the south of Wilmington. Damage there was estimated at $20 million, according to state Highway Patrol Capt. Robert Barefoot.

Damage in Wilmington and New Hanover County was estimated at $5.6 million, said county inspections director Sky Conklin.

In Brunswick County, 22,000 customers were without electricity today, according to James Hubbard, executive vice president of the North Carolina Association of Electric Cooperatives.

At the height of the hurricane Thursday, 13,000 people were being housed in 57 shelters in 13 counties, said Red Cross spokeswoman JoAnne Jones. In South Carolina, more than 14,000 people spent the night in 16 shelters along the coast, officials said.

At Caswell Beach, some streets were under three feet of water and dunes were heavily eroded. The screened porch of one house was blown into a flooded street and the side of another house was ripped off, leaving interior stairs exposed. "It sounded like the roar of a couple hundred freight trains going through total darkness," said Southport Police Chief Bill Coring. "You could feel the force of the rain and winds on the buildings and windows."
