

Elderly woman held all night with knife at throat

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

In an eternity of terror, an 80-year-old Pampa woman was held all night with a steak knife against her throat, police reported.

The ordeal didn't end until police burst through the door of the elderly woman's home and ordered her female attacker to drop the weapon, Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said.

Linda Thompson, 38, 411 Texas, was arrested inside the victim's home and charged with aggravated assault.

Allie Tate, 80, of 109 N. Wynne, suffered a single cut to the little finger of her right hand. She was treated at Coronado Community Hospital and released.

Tate's daughter, Mrs. Betty Trask, 50, called police shortly before 6 o'clock this morning and reported her mother was being held hostage.

After breaking down the front door, Corporal Steve Chance saw Thompson holding the kitchen knife next to the terrified 80-year-old woman, police said. Thompson obeyed the order to drop the knife. She was handcuffed and taken into custody.

Mrs. Tate told police that the suspect "kept her up all night with the knife to her throat," the reports say.

Thompson also repeatedly pushed the elderly woman down on a bed, police added.

The knife was taken into custody.

Baffled police this morning had no idea why the octogenarian was held at knifepoint.

"Who has any idea?" queried one police spokesman searching to explain the assault.

Zoning change asked for 'Kelley Horse Lot'

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Members of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission set two public hearings on zoning change requests and discussed annexation needs during their regular meeting Thursday afternoon.

The commission considered a request for zoning change from multi-family to retail for Tract D, Section 101, Block 3, IG&N Survey, generally known in the city as the Kelley Horse Lot, located east of Furr's Family Center between Harvester and Decatur streets and bordering Hamilton.

The request is being made by Mex-Tex Realty Co. of Amarillo, representing Furr's.

Jack Looney of Amarillo, Mex-Tex realtor, explained Furr's is planning a building expansion of 1500 to 1800 square feet, approximately 80 to 100 feet deep into the lot. Looney said acquisition of the property, currently under consideration, would be contingent on a zoning change being approved.

Forrest Cloyd, technician with the city Engineering Department, said the expansion could be permitted since the alley currently on the property is not a dedicated alley. He said the alley had been used only for access to delivery vehicles.

Water lines in the area have been diverted along Harvester, he added. A sewer line currently runs under the building, with access to it generally available for any maintenance needs.

Commission chairman Nolan McKean said the lot had been the subject of controversy in the past in zoning change efforts.

A public hearing had been held in May, 1982, on a request to change the zoning to commercial for the lot. But following protests from residents in the area, the zoning change was not approved, McKean noted.

Looney said Furr's is aware of the problems and is willing to develop the lot in such a way as to minimize any objections from neighborhood residents.

He said Furr's is willing to build an attractive fence or wall around the expansion area and to provide more parking spaces. Furr's would also seek to restrict times of its delivery vehicles to accommodate residents, he said.

In addition, Furr's is planning to locate a playground park in the southeast corner of the property for use by neighborhood residents. Looney said Furr's would also maintain the area to cut down on littering problems, he added.

Commission member Jay Johnson suggested changing the zoning request to specific use permit. He said the change would prevent Furr's from selling off tracts of land to other retail businesses. "It would give Furr's what they want and protect the neighborhood, too," he said.

McKean noted objections in the past had concerned the locating of any other businesses in the area. The specific use permit would allow Furr's - already existing in the area - to expand without any other businesses coming into the area.

The commission authorized changing the request to specific use permit designation, setting a public hearing on the matter for Oct. 18 at their next regular meeting.

The commission also authorized a request by Pampa Medical Development Association, Inc., for a zoning change from office district to specific use permit for Lot 1, Block 12, North Crest Section 11.

Dr. Robert Phillips said the association wants to add a small clinical pharmacy to the Medical Building. The pharmacy would dispense only medicines and other pharmaceuticals to patients, he explained.

The commission set a public hearing on the request for Oct. 18 also.

In other matters, the commission discussed studying future annexation of areas bordering Pampa city limits.

Cloyd said the city, under state

Consumer prices shoot up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, surging at their steepest clip in four months, rose 0.5 percent in August as both food and clothing became significantly more expensive.

For the first two-thirds of 1984, inflation is running at an annual rate of 4.2 percent, a slight deterioration from last year's 3.8 percent.

Much of last month's bad news was attributed to higher prices for food — up 0.6 percent, the most since February — and clothing — up 0.9 percent, the most since March 1980.

Housing prices rose 0.6 percent, their second big gain in a row.

Gasoline prices fell 0.9 percent. That decline, however, was only half the July improvement and helped explain the steep overall increase.

While the August gain was the steepest since April's 0.5 percent jump, Labor Department analyst Patrick Jackman said the new increase was likely to be the steepest for the rest of 1984.

"Most people are expecting inflation for the year to run at 4.5 percent to 5 percent. I think this will still be the case." He predicted that, for the balance of 1984, the department's Consumer Price Index will record monthly inflationary jumps of 0.3 percent to 0.4 percent.

Jackman called the August gain an "aberration caused by the jump in vegetable prices" and higher prices for new fall clothing.

Indeed, vegetable prices recorded a 13.2 percent jump, their largest since February 1977.

Supply shortages were blamed for all of the increase. Specifically, hot weather in California drove lettuce prices up 28.7 percent while delivery woes forced tomato prices up 30.8 percent. Potato prices rose 12 percent, with the gain blamed on small spring crops caused by heavy rains.

As for clothing, Jackman said that this year's robust economic growth had prompted manufacturers to raise prices for fall-season clothes more than in the past. He predicted clothing prices would stabilize, or might even decline slightly, in the coming months with the next sharp increase unlikely before spring lines appear in the winter.

Man killed on forklift

A Pampa man was killed Thursday night when the forklift he was driving overturned two miles south of Highway 60 on a county dirt road.

Rafael Tarango, 24, of 505 Carr, was pronounced dead at the scene by Gray County Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge at about 7 p.m. Thursday night.

A spokesman with the Texas Highway Patrol said that Tarango, a forklift operator with Suoco Oil Co., was driving south on the county road when he left the roadway and went through a ditch into a barbed wire fence. The vehicle got caught in the fence and overturned, pinning the victim. Prestidge confirmed that the man was decapitated.

A passing motorist reportedly found the victim and the Pampa Medical Services received the call at about 6:43 p.m.

Investigating at the scene were Texas Highway Patrol Troopers Danny Pierce and Luis Flores and Gray County sheriff's deputy Paul Ortega.

Services for Tarango are pending at Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Home.

Born in Chihuahua, Mex. on May 16, 1960, he was a resident of Pampa and worked for Suoco Oil Co.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rafael Tarango of Chihuahua; seven brothers, Armando of Pampa, Rodrigo of Perryton, Mario, Lorenzo, Margarito, Hector and Ruben Armando, all of Chihuahua; and four sisters, Maria Jauquez, Rosa Tarango, Olivia Tarango, and Luz Tarango, all of Chihuahua.

Ambassador says bombing could have been much worse

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rescue workers today ended their search for bodies in the wreckage of the bombed U.S. Embassy annex, and the U.S. ambassador said the devastation could have been "a hell of a lot worse" if a guard had not shot the suicide car bomber.

A Lebanese military investigator, Elias Mousa, announced today that the casualty toll from Thursday's bombing, based on hospital and coroners' reports, was 12 dead and 72 wounded. Earlier police reports had said 23 people were killed and 60 wounded when a van filled with explosives blew up just outside the annex.

U.S. Embassy Deputy Chief of Mission Stephen R. Lyne told reporters at the scene today that the search for victims was over.

"We have accounted for all Americans and foreign service nationals. All we are doing now is removing classified material for the sake of security," Lyne said.

Lyne put the final toll of U.S. casualties at two killed and 16 wounded seriously enough to be hospitalized. A U.S. source close to the search said earlier that 21 Americans were injured.

Lyne said four Lebanese, including two foreign service employees, were killed. The American source had said seven or possibly eight Lebanese employees of the embassy were killed.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said rescue workers had "found all the bodies we will find," but "there are people we're not going to find any part of."

It was impossible to determine how many Lebanese visitors or visa applicants were at the annex when the van exploded, the source said.

The blast injured U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew and British Ambassador David Miers, neither seriously, the source said.

Bartholomew left the Abu Jawdeh Hospital in a wheelchair today, with stitches across his upper lip, a small bandage on the back of his head and a cast on his arm. He said his arm was not broken. Surrounded by bodyguards, he was driven to his residence east of Beirut.

Speaking to the American NBC television network, Bartholomew said the bomber zigzagged through anti-vehicle concrete barricades after shooting a Lebanese guard. The bomber was fired at and slumped over the wheel before the bomb went off, Bartholomew said.

One British guard, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he fired five shots and saw the driver slump to the right, apparently preventing the car from reaching an underground parking entrance. If he had gotten under the building, the damage would have been much worse, Bartholomew said.

"God knows, this was bad enough, but it could have been a hell of a lot worse," he said.

In Washington, the Pentagon identified the American dead as Army Chief Warrant Officer Kenneth V. Welch, 33, whose mother lives in Grand Rapids, Mich., and Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Michael Ray Wagner, 30, of Zebulon, N.C. Both were described as embassy staff members.

GMC, auto workers agree on new contract

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers tentatively agreed on a new national contract today, with the union declaring that it had won its fight to protect members' jobs and the company calling it a "win-win" settlement.

Union leaders called for an immediate halt to strikes at 17 GM plants which had idled 111,000 of the company's 350,000 UAW workers nationwide and cost GM an estimated $30 million a day. But some local lea said they would oppose going back to work because of disputes over local issues.

UAW President Owen Bieber and chief union bargainer Donald Eplin issued a statement at 2:10 a.m. EDT announcing the agreement, but they refused to divulge details.

"It is an excellent settlement that makes more secure than ever in history the jobs of our UAW-GM members, while providing much deserved economic improvements immediately and in the years ahead," the union officials said.

GM Vice President Alfred Warren, speaking later at a news conference, said "there were two winners — the United Auto Workers and the General Motors Corporation. I have never seen a better win-win situation."

"Our customers will benefit from this agreement through increased competitiveness of the corporation, as will our shareholders, suppliers and the many communities in which GM has concentrations of facilities and employment," he said.

Warren said the company was "confident" that the agreement would be ratified quickly by the union's membership. Bieber and Eplin said the 11-member national negotiating committee unanimously recommended ratification.

The first step toward ratification takes place Wednesday in St. Louis when the UAW leadership unveils the specific terms to the union's General Motors Council, a 300-member advisory board of local union leaders. Ratification votes by GM workers would occur afterward and would take about a week.

Both Bieber and Warren refused to disclose details of the pact until it is presented to the council.

As to the 17 strikes, Bieber said, "We're going to be advising the local union leadership that we want them to return to work immediately."

The tentative agreement "inaugurates an unprecedented job security program with far-reaching new protections for our members against job loss due to outsourcing, the introduction of new technology, plant consolidations and the movement of work ... it also includes commitments from the corporation to maintain production and create new job opportunities in the United States," Bieber and Eplin said.

"There are also added wages, substantial pension benefit improvements for current and future retirees, provisions for continuation of quality health care, ... and many other advances. The profit sharing plan will also be continued."

About 111,000 GM employees had been either on strike or laid off as the effects of the selective walkouts spread through GM and related companies. GM reported layoffs at seven additional plants Thursday and said the strike had caused it to lose production of 45,600 vehicles.

Meese still faces big battle despite prosecutor's finding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fight over the nomination of Edwin Meese III to be attorney general is far from over despite a special prosecutor's finding of no criminal wrongdoing on the part of President Reagan's long-time friend and adviser.

The president says he still wants Meese in his Cabinet if there is to be a second Reagan administration, but Democrats in the Senate say they are not finished scrutinizing both Meese's ethics and the policies he'd pursue if he became the nation's chief law enforcement officer.

Meese welcomed Thursday's report of special prosecutor Jacob A. Stein that found no basis for a criminal prosecution on charges he used his position to get government jobs for friends who helped him financially.

But the president's counselor said the "long ordeal" had made its mark on the way he would conduct his official life.

"The experience has taught me a great deal about the special circumstances of official life in Washington and the need for constant vigilance and sensitivity, not only to actual conduct, but also to how conduct may be perceived," the nominee said. He read a statement to reporters at the White House but refused to take any questions.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said while he accepts Stein's findings of no criminality, he has "some real doubts about Mr. Meese's sensitivities to issues of civil rights and civil liberties."

And Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said that while criminality is "not an issue now, there appear to be numerous cases where the testimony elicited by Mr. Stein and his staff are at variance with previous testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee."

He called on Meese to ask Reagan to withdraw the nomination. That's been his position for many months.

The Stein report culminated a nine-month fight that left the Justice Department run by a lame-duck Attorney General William French Smith, who made no effort to hide his eagerness to leave.

At issue first in the battle between the Whpste House and the Democratic minority on the Senate Judiciary Committee was Meese's conservative political philosophy, including his attitude toward the poor.

Then the issue became Meese's ethics, as allegations surfaced that he abused his influence as Reagan's closest friend in the administration.

Finally last April, with the nomination bogged down, Meese asked Smith to seek the appointment of a special prosecutor, or independent counsel, under the Ethics in Government Act and Smith complied. Stein was selected by a panel of three judges appointed by Chief Justice Warren Burger.

In all, Stein methodically investigated 11 areas of concern.

United Way total hits 14 percent

Volunteer workers for the Pampa United Way campaign drive held their first report meeting Thursday afternoon, with contributions of $38,735.74 turned in.

The collections represent 14 percent of the United Way goal of $275,000 this year.

Significant contributions were made by Celanese Chemical Corp. and the Fatheree family, reported Jan Lyle, United Way office secretary.

The drive was launched officially Sept. 10 in efforts to raise funds to assist 15 service agencies serving Pampa and Gray County.

Volunteers have been contacting businesses, industries and individuals in the annual fund drive.

The current goal represents a $25,000 increase from the 1983 goal.

People wanting to make contributions or to receive information on the agencies may contact the United Way office on the second floor of City Hall or call 669-1001.

Texas ad campaign launched to discredit religious right

AUSTIN (AP) — An advertising campaign is being launched to tell Texans that the so-called "Religious Right" wants more influence on the government than the nation's founders intended, a Texas civil liberties organization says.

"The Religious Right is fatally out of step with traditional American values," Michael Hudson, Texas coordinator of People for the American Way, said Thursday.

"The Religious Right resorts to moral McCarthyism, where all who disagree are labeled anti-family, anti-Christian or unpatriotic. There is not one Christian way to evaluate political issues," Hudson said.

Hudson said the Texas group, part of a non-profit, non-partisan national organization, plans four events next month in Austin, San Antonio, Houston and the Dallas-Fort Worth area to raise money for a $1 million national advertising campaign.

Some TV commercials compare the words of the nation's founders — including George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison — to the words of current conservative religious leaders — including Revs. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority and James Robison of the American Coalition for Traditional Values.

In one commercial, Robison is shown saying: "This nation was built upon a Christian foundation, upon a Bible foundation. If you don't believe that, you know nothing of the truth of American history."

Hudson said People for the American Way doesn't oppose political involvement of religious leaders, as long as they tolerate other points of view.

"Morality and religion are important in America and they should impact on government decisions," he said.

"But simply because a proposition is a part of some religious belief does not make it good public policy. That is where the Religious Right departs from American tradition. They want to make their creed the law of the land."

Hudson also discounted arguments from Falwell and other religious leaders that their involvement in elections today is no different from the involvement of clergymen in the civil rights and anti-war movements of the 1960s.

"You did not see Martin Luther King or the anti-war priests of the 1960s claiming that they had some exclusive relationship with God, that God had dictated their particular political point of view to the exclusion of others, and then attacking everyone who disagreed with them as being anti-God, anti-moral, anti-Christian," Hudson said.

He also said public opinion polls indicate that the majority of Americans agree that politics and religion need to be separate.

"We believe that the American people, as recent polls have shown, do not want to repeal the First Amendment, do not want ultrafundamentalists controlling our government and do not want to replace our democracy with a theocracy and a state religion," he said.

Zoning

laws, could annex at this time property equivalent to about 30 percent of the current acreage within the city limits.

This would amount to about 1700 acres, he said.

Johnson said the city needs to take action to watch developing lands and to keep them under control. He suggested further study towards making specific recommendations to the city commission.

Cloyd said some areas bordering the city are already beyond the city's reach in imposing strict zoning requirements on development. He said that at present the city can only approve plats for nearby developments outside the city limits without being able to exercise any zoning power over them.

Public Works Director Allyn Moore said there have been some problems with developers developing tracts while outside the city limits and then requesting annexation after development.

He said sometimes the developers have used "poorer standards" than the city would have required if the land had been inside city limits. Upon annexation, the developers have gotten away with lesser standards — such as quality of streets — and the city has to accept them, he said.

Moore said other problems have arisen concerning areas outside the city limits using city water and sewer lines. The city does not really own the lines in some instances but has to provide maintenance for broken water meters and lines to prevent losses of city water, he explained.

He said the land east of the city is likely to develop toward Loop 171, with much of it going commercial or industrial. He said it "would be nice to keep it under control."

Johnson said annexing land would also bring in more revenue to the city.

But Cloyd said the city would have to figure what it would cost to extend services to the areas against what revenue would be brought in. He said the city would have to provide water and sewer lines to the areas within 2 1/2 years of annexation.

The commission members took city maps home to study for specific areas that could be annexed. The members will discuss the matter further at the next meeting.

State officials will look at flood-stricken South Texas

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Local officials say they will show representatives from the governor's office damage across far South Texas resulting from four days of unrelenting downpour that left an estimated 75 percent of the region under water.

Representatives from the governor's emergency management division were expected to tour eastern Cameron and Willacy counties today, officials said.

Information gathered by the state team will be submitted to Gov. Mark White, who may then declare the inundated counties a state disaster area and ask for similar status from the federal government.

County officials Thursday toured Brownsville, Harlingen, Port Isabel, South Padre Island and Los Fresnos by Coast Guard helicopter and "saw an enormous amount of damage," said County Judge Moises Vela.

"Half to 75 percent of Cameron County is underwater," he said.

Nearly two feet of water fell on eastern Cameron and Willacy counties between Sunday and Wednesday, forcing the evacuation of families living in low-lying neighborhoods.

Vela said public buildings, state and county highways and individual homes had suffered "between $25 and $50 million worth of damage."

County commissioners voted Thursday to declare the county a disaster area.

"We're looking for any type of assistance we can get," Vela said. "And if we get more rain, my God, I don't know."

The front that caused the rain remained stubbornly a few miles offshore, pieces of it breaking away to dump more water over the Valley Thursday afternoon.

Gale force winds and heavy rains were reported on South Padre Island and Port Isabel at noon Thursday. Seas were running up to 15 feet, according to the National Weather Service.

Richard Hagan, National Weather Service meteorologist in Brownsville, said the front covered the entire northern Gulf of Mexico from the Texas coast to Florida.

The National Hurricane Center in Miami dispatched two reconnaissance planes Thursday to monitor an area of "disturbance" in the northwestern Gulf of Mexico.

Hagan said the aircraft had found a "broad low pressure" system over the Gulf of Mexico with a poorly defined center and gale force, circulating winds about 200 miles east northeast of Brownsville.

The front was expected to remain stationary for the next 12 to 24 hours, he said.

"The longer it remains stationary over the water, the better chance it has of becoming something tropical in nature. Diana should have given everybody an idea that these things can develop any way they want to," Hagan said.

As the front moved up the coast Thursday afternoon, gale warnings were issued for Port Mansfield and the coast south of Corpus Christi. Heavy rain and possible flooding in low-lying areas was forecast for the area between Corpus Christi and Houston.

LBB works on state budget

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission says it needs $26.4 million for 1986-87, but state lawmakers headed for a budget crunch say the rate-setting agency can get by on about $6 million less.

The PUC budget recommended Thursday by the Legislative Budget Board is actually less than the agency's current budget because of a special $5 million federal appropriation now in effect.

Legislators on the 10-member budget board have started the cumbersome task of setting expenditures for the next two-year period. Their recommendations go to the Legislature next year.

Comptroller Bob Bullock this week guaranteed budget battles by projecting that the state could be as much as $1.7 billion short through 1987. Gov. Mark White, Speaker Gib Lewis and other state leaders have promised to try to avoid another tax hike.

Lawmakers this year raised taxes by $4.6 billion to pay for education and highway improvements.

The budget board, working agency-by-agency, looked at several state departments during Thursday deliberations. Board members indicated they will recommend no increase in personnel, unless the agency is under court order. Lewis and White have urged agency heads to ask for the same money they are receiving this year.

Nevertheless, the utility commission asked for a $26.4 million, two-year budget. The LBB said the commission could do its regulating of electric, water and telephone companies on a $20.6 million appropriation.

The LBB-recommended budget for PUC includes no pay hike for the three utility commissioners, who currently earn $59,200 a year. The PUC request called for $68,600 a year in 1986 and $71,300 in 1987.

The budget panel also scrutinized the budget request from Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle, the state lawyer who represents consumer and small business customers in PUC rate cases. Boyle submitted an ambitious budget request that asks for an increase of about 250 percent.

Bad weather creates hay shortage

DALLAS (AP) — A hay shortage could force Texas beef prices up as much as 10 percent next spring as beleaguered cattle farmers begin selling prize herds that they can't afford to feed, an agriculture official says.

Higher hay prices, caused by last winter's bitter cold and continuing drought this year, could also force smaller ranchers out of business when they are forced to liquidate their herds, said Ken Stokes, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service agent in Dallas.

The cost of coastal Bermuda hay has more than doubled in price to as much as $120 per ton, the TAES reported, and such high prices could prompt a massive selloff of livestock.

Even worse, Stokes said that may also reduce the quality of large herds that have been selectively bred for decades.

"Because it's been so dry, they need to start feeding hay right now," Stokes said, "and they just don't have it."

Officials say that if East Texas cattle ranchers are forced to sell off their breeding stock, meat prices would probably rise at least 10 percent in supermarkets next spring.

"It's more of a long-term problem," said Ed Uvacek, TAES livestock market economist. "The additional cows on the market do add to the supplies in the short run, but the real economic impact is on the long haul."

Officials said a 70-pound bale of hay, which sold for $1.75 to $2.75 before the harsh weather, is now going for $3.50 to $5 a bale.

Pug Thigpen, vice president of National Hay Exchange Inc. in San Antonio, said that as a result, 15 to 20 generations of animal breeding are going to the slaughterhouse.

Longtime cattle producers have traditionally kept their strongest animals, selling the weakest for slaughter. Thigpen said much of that prize gene pool may soon be lost.

Hypocrisy prevails on tobacco issue

The House of Representatives has approved a bill to require stronger warning labels on cigarette packages; swift approval by the Senate is expected. The purpose of the bill ostensibly is to protect people from the health hazards associated with cigarette smoking. In truth, the bill is nothing more than a smoke screen designed to appease both the tobacco industry lobbyists and the anti-smoking advocates.

For the past 13 years, cigarette packages have been required to carry the warning that "the surgeon general has determined cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health." In each of those 13 years, federal subsidies to tobacco farmers have continued unabated.

Rather than get out of a conflict in which it has no business, the federal government instead plays both sides, condemning directly and condoning indirectly the national tobacco farmers and cigarette manufacturers.

Several of the chemicals in burning tobacco have been proven conclusively to be dangerous to human health and extremely addictive. The printed warning on cigarette packages have had little effect in breaking that addiction; now the bureaucrats would try a stronger warning.

If the politicians were serious about the hazards of cigarette smoking, they would do two things: end the subsidies to tobacco farmers and remove mandatory warning labels from cigarette packages.

Spending taxpayer dollars to shore up any industry—not just tobacco farmers, cannot be morally justified. And mandatory warning labels? Consider this: they allow cigarette manufacturers to mask any possible liability for the product's obvious health hazards.

Would cigarette packages contain the surgeon general's warning if it wasn't mandatory. Probably not. But the facts wouldn't change: cigarette manufacturers are selling a product that endangers health. It is well past time to let the cigarette and tobacco industry stand on their own. To let them produce their product for a price the customer is willing to pay, and to face on their own civil liability lawsuits brought by customers who can prove that cigarettes caused the deterioration of their health.

The tobacco question has long clouded politicians' minds. Sen. Jesse Helms, whose state of North Carolina grows about 40 percent of domestic tobacco, is a case in point. Helms is such a good friend of tobacco farmers that he has been the leading advocate for placing restrictions of tobacco imports, a stance that contradicts every free-enterprise principle on which he otherwise claims to hang his hat.

While he might be inclined to applaud the government for its restraint in not banning cigarettes outright (remember what happened to Red Dye No. 3) it's long past time for Helms and his fellow politicians to come out of their smoke-filled rooms and end the hypocrisy.

The Keynesians discredited

It's no secret that economists have been profoundly embarrassed by their abysmal forecasting performance over the last four years. Noted liberal (Keynesian) economist Lester Thurow admitted in a recent column, "it is clear that something major has gone wrong with economic forecasting."

Thurow said "The actual growth rates of the economy have been two to three times as high as the consensus forecast, and no forecaster has even been close to the actual rates."

With all due respect to the professor's basic point, a FEW forecasters have called this recovery, and the recession preceding it, with extraordinary accuracy. But they all happen to be "supply - siders," or, better termed, "classical economists," for whom Thurow and his profession have had so much contempt. Moreover, these supply - siders have consistently argued that the Keynesian "demand - side" economic models have been wrong.

Thurow himself seems to agree: "If the forecasts are wrong, then there is something major wrong with the economic models upon which they are built, and these models are standards used by the entire profession."

Virtually all the major forecasting models are Keynesian, modified only slightly by monetarism; none has any supply - side market and tax incentive logic built into them. Since they were designed largely by leading economists, Thurow is admitting that the "prevailing wisdom" of the economic profession over the last twenty years is wrong.

He is, of course, right - but few of his colleagues are prepared to make such an admission. Indeed, some who have been most dreadfully wrong and predicted a weak or anemic recovery for both 1983 and 1984 are suddenly arguing that the current powerful recovery is really (as one recently said on ABC-TV), "A classic Keynesian recovery, led not by investment, but by powerful government stimulus and pent-up consumer demand."

David Jones of Aubrey Lamson & Co.; who made that statement, has been one of the most ubiquitous gloomsayers for the last four years, and one of those most consistently in error; a fact which has not kept the networks from calling on him regularly!

But, once again, Jones is wrong. The day he said that, an analysis by Merrill Lynch Economics (MLE) appeared in their Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary, under the title "The Investment Orientation of Growth."

In it, they pointed out that the current recovery, "the strongest since 1950," is the result primarily of a "capital spending boom," and "since the start of the expansion, real purchases of producers' durable equipment (capital goods) have shown a cumulative gain of 32.1 percent, more than double the average postwar recovery growth." And just last week, we learned that U.S. industry's capital spending plans for 1984 and 1985 are up over 38 percent. In short, this is NOT a "classical Keynesian demand - side recovery," but an investment - led recovery, in which retail sales and consumer demand have actually lagged capital spending.

MLE compared the components of GNP growth in the first six quarters of the current recovery with the postwar average recovery data for the same period. While "consumption" (consumer demand) contributed 56 percent of the GNP growth in all prior recoveries, so far it has contributed only 53 percent to the current expansion. While producers' equipment (capital goods) and business structures have contributed an average of 11 percent to all prior GNP recoveries, in this expansion, they are contributing 25 percent. Strangely enough, while government purchases have contributed nearly 5 percent to all prior recoveries, they are contributing only 1 percent to this one.

So, what we have here is exactly the OPPOSITE of what Jones and his Keynesian friends are arguing - a genuine supply - sided expansion, with capital spending on productivity - related equipment leading the way, and consumer spending actually lagging somewhat, in what MLE termed "a significant compositional change in total growth compared with prior cycles."

A few figures are in order: Gross private fixed investment, from the 4th quarter of 1982 to 4th quarter of 1983 rose a thunderous 32.8 percent. In the same period personal consumption rose only 9 percent and services 8.8 percent. And retail sales rose 10.3 percent in nominal terms, while capital goods spending rose 26 percent, or two - and - one-half times as fast.

No matter how you analyze it, more than any prior post-war recovery, this expansion is being led by capital spending and investment, the supply - side, not the demand side.

Why, then, do all four networks persist in going back to the same fully discredited economists to have them put out still more deliberate disinformation about what is really happening in the economy? I think I know, but you might want to ask them.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Sept. 21, the 265th day of 1984. There are 101 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 21, 1897, the New York Sun ran an editorial in which Francis P. Church answered a question from 8-year-old Virginia O'Hanlon: "Is there a Santa Claus?" Church wrote, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy."

Five years ago: The government of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia accepted the "general principles" of a British-drafted constitution.

Bad bugs crossing border

We had it made - almost. Modern medical science, improved nutrition and improved sanitation had totally defeated some ancient enemies: Diphtheria, measles, mumps, rubella, tetanus, polio, malaria, whooping cough.

Medical schools were discontinuing teaching the symptoms of several former childhood diseases; we were convinced they had been eradicated forever.

Even the cancer cure rate was up to 50 percent. Within 10 years we had accomplished a dramatic 25 percent reduction in fatal heart attacks.

We really had it made! Life expectancy for the average American increased in our lifetime from 47 years to 74.5 and was headed for a hundred.

The United States, whatever its residual problems and despite our continuing excesses involving smoking, drinking, drugs and promiscuity...

Despite the worst we could do to ourselves, United States of Americans had become the healthiest people in the world.

Until this year. This year our island paradise was invaded by parasites.

Parasitic diseases are the most widespread of all mankind's diseases, historically diseases mostly of Asia, Africa, South America and the Caribbean.

Now with millions of tourists going back and forth from there to here...

With immigration, legal and other, virtually out of control...

Parasitic diseases are here now: Schistosomiasis, Trypanosomiasis, Filariasis, Onchocerciasis, Leishmaniasis - and malaria again.

And for these diseases Americans have no natural immunity.

Our country has been invaded by AIDS bugs from Haiti.

Leprosy is an increasing stateside menace. And TB and foot - long intestinal worms.

Parasitic diseases already infect or affect 130 million Americans.

For Leishmaniasis, an infection in which the nose and mouth are eaten away, there is no known treatment.

Schistosomiasis causes irreversible damage to liver and kidneys.

Mosquito - transmitted Dengue Fever is entering the United States from Latin America and the Caribbean.

And new strains of hepatitis. Among each 100,000 Indochinese refugees, 68,000 have TB, 140 have leprosy.

If Americans cannot stop the bugs at the border, at the very least our health officials must more rigidly police food - handling.

Major differences in tax statements

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

(This is the second of two related columns concerning the platforms of the Democrats and Republicans.)

There is something more in the Democrats' and the Republicans' platform statements about taxes than just the question of whether taxes are to be higher or lower. There's the matter of the structure of the federal income tax system. On this point the two platform statements could not be more different.

The Republican platform statement is straight to the point on the matter of higher tax rates. "We therefore oppose any attempt to increase taxes," the platform reads. With regard to the indexing of tax rate brackets to inflation (so that taxpayers' real tax burden will not rise due to inflation) the Republican statement is equally blunt: "We will fight any attempt to repeal, modify or defer it (tax indexing)."

The Democrats' position states that "we will cap the effect of the Reagan tax cuts for wealthy Americans and enhance the progressivity of the personal income tax code...we will partially defer indexing."

In the matter of tax reform the Republican platform calls for simplicity - a modified flat rate tax with exemptions for low income groups and continuation of mortgage interest deductions.

The Democrats seek a broadening of the tax base (i.e., taxable income) by eliminating what they call "unnecessary, unfair and unproductive deductions."

When the two parties' statements are contrasted and analyzed, two clear differences emerge regarding the level of average income tax rates for the economy as a whole and the rate at which real resources are to be shifted from taxpayers to the government. While the Republicans want to freeze the level of the aggregate average income tax rate, Democrats want to increase it. Republicans seek to freeze the rate of transfer by indexing tax liabilities against income and the Democrats want to increase the rate of transfer through repeal of indexation for certain, as yet unspecified, taxpayers.

I concede that this exercise in comparing platform statements sounds so partisan that it stinks. But, as demonstrated by the voting pattern of the two parties in Congress, it's accurate. The Democrats have consistently sought to raise tax rates and repeal inflation indexing while the Republicans have taken the opposite ground. For a change the convention platforms reflect the reality of the situation. The differences reflected in the platform statements are not trivial, they are important - even striking.

They are important because they raise questions about how well politicians - both Republican and Democrat - grasp the meaning of the Welfare State and the problem the structure of the tax system presents for its financing.

The Welfare State is a transfer system - a system designed to take real goods from those who actually produce them and give them to those who do not. It includes everything from Social Security to food stamps, with a big dose of farm subsidies in between. But the fact that all such transfers are expressed in terms of dollars taxed and dollars spent does not alter the fact that it is goods, not just money, being transferred.

The problem is one of discerning whether or not the two parties' tax proposals are consistent with their presumed desire to protect the real purchasing power of Americans while building a rational incentive system to promote increased production and consumption possibilities for all sectors of the economy. In a word, the structure of the two proposed tax systems is important - especially since neither party proposes to end the system of adjusting transfer payments upward to compensate for inflation.

The Republican tax position effectively says, "We will not endorse a tax system that allows the federal government to gain a larger share of national income through inflation, and we will not permit inflation to benefit transfer recipients at the expense of producers." Given that Republicans have never given more than guarded support to income transfer programs, their tax plank, with its commitment to inflation indexing, is internally consistent regardless of whether or not one agrees with it in principle.

The Democratic platform, given their willingness to reject tax indexing while maintaining inflation protection for transfer beneficiaries, effectively says, "We will not resist the tendency of inflation to feed the growth of federal revenues and to benefit transfer recipients at the expense of producers."

Thus, there is far more at stake in the parties' tax planks than simply the question of how much revenue can be collected. There is also the question of how the structure of the tax system effects incentives to produce and earn as opposed to a system that discourages production: A tax system that protects the purchasing power of non-producers while failing to protect the purchasing power of producers by tax indexation, is filled with disincentives for production.

In this regard the Democrats' tax position contains a glaring inconsistency in that it thwarts the one thing a redistributionist philosophy must have - a rapidly expanding economy.

Van Eaton teaches economics at Hillsdale College, Mich.

Berry's World

"Hi, we're a couple of Reagan's rich, country club friends the Democrats keep talking about."

Soviets must find own way back

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — No concessions. That hasn't changed. The Soviets will have to find their own way back to the nuclear arms talks. President Reagan isn't going to try to woo them with bargaining concessions or a moratorium on U.S. weapons tests.

That's been Reagan's position since the Soviets quit Geneva in late November to protest the impending installation of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Western Europe. The first wave of missiles went in, and others are following — with no slowdown.

Kenneth Adelman, arms control chief, says the Soviets "will find us very flexible and very open to real progress in arms control." There will be no concessions to win them back to Geneva.

Robert McFarlane, the national security adviser, says "we are ready with flexible positions, imaginative options." But, again, that is after the Soviets decide on their own to resume negotiations.

Democratic challenger Walter Mondale proposed a temporary moratorium on U.S. tests in a good-faith effort to persuade the Soviets to talk.

Reagan is banking on American resolve instead. He figures that by now the Kremlin realizes the only way to slow the U.S. weapons buildup is to negotiate deep reductions for both sides.

Will it work? American voters will not know the answer until after the election. Secretary of State George Shultz meets with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko next Wednesday. Reagan sees the Soviet official on Friday.

The agenda has arms control at the top, and it runs through such knotty issues as Central America, the crackdown on dissidents and arms shipments to southern Africa.

No one expects the Soviets to free Andrei Sakharov afterward, and no one at the State Department expects an agreement to resume talks.

And yet, McFarlane predicts a return to the table by next spring — if Reagan is re-elected. He rejected, in a talk to students the other night, the idea that the president is not serious about arms control, or that he would conclude from a report on past treaty violations that they are untrustworthy.

Suit hinders search for new doctor

HOUSTON (AP) — A court-appointed doctor will care for Jill Newsome for five more days, but her father fears a replacement may never be found for his brain-damaged daughter because of a huge malpractice award the family won.

Five years ago, Jill suffered permanent brain damage during surgery to remove a birthmark from her leg. The 14-year-old girl has been in Houston Northwest Medical Center ever since.

In 1982, her parents, Earl and Gail Newsome, won an $11 million malpractice suit.

Dr. Stuart Yoffe treated Jill for the past five years. But he notified the Newsomes in June that he would be withdrawing as her attending physician Sept. because of "medical reasons of my own."

Yoffe said he provided good care for Jill and has been forced to take another physician into his practice for health reasons.

The Newsomes began searching for another physician. But they found that their successful malpractice lawsuit had marked them in the medical community.

Ironically, Newsome said, he's never collected on the malpractice judgment against Dr. Gerald W. Johnson because the physician has been embroiled in bankruptcy proceedings that have tied up his funds.

Since Sept. 1, nurses at the hospital have been supervising Jill, but they are concerned about continuing care without a doctor, Newsome said. Jill has twice stopped breathing, apparently heightening the nurses' fears.

AP News Analysis

The lesson to learn, he said, is that agreements must have tighter procedures for verifying the parties are honoring the terms. "You don't stop trying," McFarlane said.

The former Marine colonel, who sees Reagan almost every day to brief him, said "there's no question in my mind the passion and preoccupation of the president in the next four years will be a genuine reduction in nuclear weapons."

Adelman did not predict when the talks might begin. He spoke only in terms of hope. But in an interview Wednesday he also said "we are going to make it as easy as we possibly can for the Soviets to get back to real negotiations. We are not going to make it difficult."

There were two sets of talks in Geneva. One dealt with U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe. The other with longer-range nuclear weapons — and also ground to a halt, in December.

The Soviets have vowed not to resume the Euromissile talks until the U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles are pulled back. The Reagan administration is equally stubborn in rejecting a withdrawal.

But the two sides have not backed themselves into a corner on the long-range weapons. They could decide to break the deadlock by reopening those talks and bringing Euromissiles to the talks.

Adelman hinted at this kind of compromise. "If the Soviets have another arrangement for getting back to real negotiations we would carefully consider that other arrangement," he said.

Asked if the administration would object if the Soviets agreed to negotiations that did not specifically include Euromissiles at the start, Adelman responded: "Yes, we would carefully consider that."

District judge visits Pampa Commandery

Hon. Robert Paul Walker, judge of 279th District Court Port Arthur, Grand Sentinel Grand Commandery Knights Templar of Texas, is to make an official visit to Pampa Commandery No. 97 Knights Templar on Sept. 29.

Judge Walker is the visiting Grand Officer for District Eight of The Grand Commandery Knights Templar of Texas which includes the Panhandle and South Plains of Texas.

The group is to meet for a banquet at noon, Sept. 29, in the Masonic Lodge No. 966 hall, 420 W. Kingsmill.

During his visit, Judge Walker is to discuss with the officers of the Pampa Commandery, the activities of the Knights Templar Eye Foundation which last year spent more than $200,000 helping those who could not pay for eye care, the Knights Templar Education Foundation which awards 10 scholarships for college education and makes low interest loans for those who need to finish the last two years of college or graduate study, as well as an inspection of the local Commandery's records and esoteric work.

Judge Walker is a member of the Texas Bar Association, Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce, former mayor pro-tem of Port Arthur, Couch Council St. John American Lutheran Church, and president of the Texas Marine Academy.

Masonically, he is a member of Port Arthur Lodge No. 1264, A.F.&A.M.; Past High Priest of Port Arthur Chapter No. 250, Royal Arch Masons; Master of Port Arthur Council No. 185 Royal and Select Master Masons, Past Commander of Port Arthur Commandery No. 78, Elmina Shrine Temple and Scottish Rite Bodies of Galveston.

He is married to Kathleen Walker. They have three children, Robert, Paul, and Timothy.

Auditions for the Pampa Civic Ballet are to begin at 2 p.m., Sept. 23, at the Beaux Arts Dance Studio.

Area ballet dancers are invited to audition for the company. The first performance for the year is to be a "Christmas Spectacular," Dec. 1.

Auditions open for Pampa Civic Ballet

Dancers chosen to be in the company must be taking a minimum of two ballet classes per week from their regular teacher.

Audition examiner is to be Neil Hess of Amarillo. An audition fee is to be charged.

Dancers ages 10 through 13 are eligible for the junior company. Senior members are 13 years or older.

Dancers selected during the audition will be required to attend all company rehearsals.

Dear Abby

Wedding worries weigh heavily on bride-to-be

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I plan to be married next June, and I would like to ask my brother and his wife to be honor attendants. My problem is that they are both quite overweight. It's important for me that everything for my wedding be as perfect as possible. Since there is plenty of time until the wedding, I would like to ask them to go on a diet. I know they can do it because they were both thin a few years ago.

How can I make them understand that I am serious about the weight issue without hurting their feelings? If they refuse to diet, I plan to ask others in their place.

SLIM SISTER

DEAR SLIM: I recommend that you ask others in their place right now. To invite your brother and his wife to be your "honor attendants" on the condition that they lose weight is no honor—it's an insult. Are overweight people any less loving than underweight people? And since you want everything for your wedding to be "perfect," what do you intend to do about your far-from-perfect values?

DEAR ABBY: Last night my wife and I went to our weekly bingo night with hopes of winning a few dollars to put toward outfitting the nursery for the baby we're expecting in three months.

The woman seated across from us heard our conversation about the baby and asked my wife how far along she was. My wife replied cheerfully, "Five and a half months—well beyond the critical period."

With a broad smile, the woman said, "Don't start planning yet, dear, I gave birth to two dead babies before I had a family!"

Las Pampas chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution asks "Did you know that of a total of 26 amendments to our Constitution, three are directly concerned with insuring the right of citizens to vote? This is evidence that the Constitution is a working basis for government — not just a static document. The DAR urges you to celebrate Constitution Week, Sept. 17-23 by voting responsibly."

Abby, how could anybody be so unthinking? It so happened that my wife's first pregnancy ended in a miscarriage, and this time we felt able to relax and plan for our baby.

When I told a friend about the incident, he said, "The lady was right, you know. Even if your wife makes it to the delivery room, the baby could be either stillborn or deformed, and you must be ready for that."

What should we say to these people?

EXPECTING IN CALGARY

DEAR EXPECTING: Don't waste your energy trying to think of something to say to insensitive and ignorant people. Try silence. It speaks volumes.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 16 years old and my love life stinks. I like this kid who has been coming to my house for a year now. He likes to watch TV, make out and eat. (I make fabulous chocolate chip cookies. He can put away a double batch with two quarts of milk.) But, Abby, there are two things wrong with him: 1) He won't make any kind of commitment; 2) he never takes me anywhere.

I'm nothing to be ashamed of, and I am not boring. So what should I do?

GETTING NOWHERE FAST

DEAR GETTING: If he's going to drink your milk and eat your cookies, tell him he has to take you out occasionally. And you may quote me.

DEAR ABBY: I wonder if the general public knows that the waiter or waitress has to pay the check if the person he or she served walks out without paying?

WILMINGTON, DEL., WAITRESS

DEAR WAITRESS: They do now.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

During my research in the various states I have found the people of MISSISSIPPI the most helpful to the genealogist. The staff of the Department of Archives and History, Archives History Bldg., Capitol Green, Jackson, MS, 39230, will provide information that is indexed free or a copying charge if extensive papers are needed.

They will recommend persons that are familiar with the facility and that charge for the service. The department has newspaper files on microfilm and will search for an obituary if the death date is known. Also on microfilm are the Confederate soldiers records and the Federal Censuses and State Tax Rolls.

In 1776, the Natchez District of Mississippi remained loyal to England and many Tories moved their families into the area from other colonies.

An advantage to research in Mississippi is that the population due to migration has changed very little since 1850. If your family was in the state then, more than likely some of your relatives remain in the area.

Write to the Archives for the pamphlet "Research in the Mississippi Department of Archives and History" for a general overview of the material available to the public.

Many county libraries have unpublished cemetery listings.

usually by church and not indexed by individual. If you know the name of the church or the area of the county to help narrow the search, write the librarian and ask for assistance. Lawrence County has such a listing and the cost of the xerox page is 50 cents.

Marriage records are filed with the clerk of the circuit court of each county and the first correspondence should be to the county. If you do not know the county, but know the year of the marriage, try the Department of Archives as copies of many marriages are on file dating back to 1826. Send a money order for $5 and a five-year search will be made. The fee is not refunded if the license is not located. If it is located, a certified copy will be mailed. I have usually gotten a reply within two weeks.

More about MISSISSIPPI in next week's column. Happy Hunting!

REV. DANIEL H. MARCH

New associate minister at First Christian

Rev. Daniel H. March has begun his duties as new associate minister at the First Christian Church, 18th and Nelson Sts.

Rev. March took over the duties last Saturday, serving with Dr. Bill R. Boswell, pastor. He will serve the church with primary responsibility in the areas of youth work and education.

He and his wife Lynda were called to Pampa from Lubbock this summer.

Rev. March was ordained into the pastoral ministry of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) on Sept. 8. His ordination service took place in his home church, Central Christian, at Decatur, Ill.

Before some 100 witnesses, March received his charge into the Christian ministry to be diligent in study, industrious in work and a person of integrity, loyalty and humility.

March was the pastor of a small rural church at Colemansville, Ky., and was the associate responsible for youth and education at the Florence Christian Church.

In Lubbock March was employed and enrolled as a student in the Methodist Hospital chaplaincy program. Mrs. March is currently enrolled as a student at Texas Tech University.

Prior to Lubbock, they had lived at Lexington, Ky., where March attended the Lexington Theological Seminary. He received his master's of divinity degree in May. He received his bachelor of arts degree from James Millikin University at Decatur, Ill.

St. Mark CME schedules revival

St. Mark Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 406 Elm, will have revival services Monday through Friday.

Services will begin daily at 8 p.m. Guest speaker will be Rev. Billy Woodard of Pecos.

Rev. H. R. Johnson, pastor, invited the public to attend the revival services.

For further information, call 669-6743 or 669-7394.

Cuomo's address relieves tensions

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"Yes," religious beliefs of most Americans do go into the making of public policy, but "No," all religiously based values don't belong in public policy.

These were the two, contrasting pillars on which New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo, a Roman Catholic, built his case in one of the most extraordinary addresses by a politician in modern times.

It was a "classic," a "milestone in the history of the American church," says the Rev. Charles M. Whelan, a Catholic specialist on church-state relations at Fordham University law school.

Not since the 19th century, in some of Abraham Lincoln's addresses, has a U.S. public official dealt so forthrightly and perceptively with the often vying interplay between religious beliefs and governing policies.

"It deserves the widest possible distribution and the deepest possible study," Whelan — an associate editor of the national, Jesuit-edited weekly, America — writes in next week's issue.

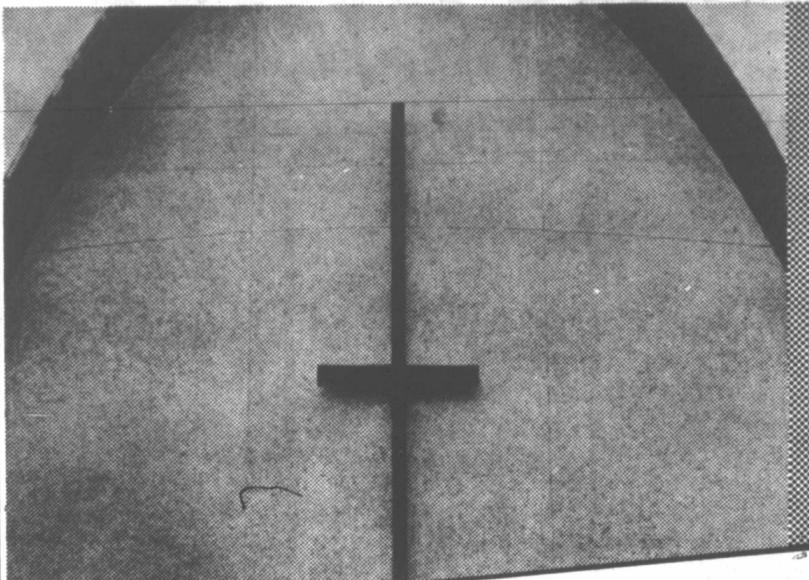

While opinion varies about the governor's conclusions, anyone participating in debate about abortion, politics and religion "must take serious account" of his address, Whelan says.

He adds that it could "do much to relieve the extraordinary tensions" that lately have arisen.

In the 7,000-word address, delivered Sept. 13 at the University of Notre Dame, Cuomo ploughed explicitly and deeply into fundamental ground where religious beliefs impinge on the course of government.

It is a volatile zone, where the strongest moral convictions interact with the making of laws, and politicians generally steer clear of the underlying force of it.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

the Long Arm of God

There may be times when your church seems to be growing slowly, when you become discouraged because your work seems to bear no fruit. Don't be discouraged. The Lord would say to you in Deut. 1:21, "Fear not, neither be discouraged," for I am with you.

During the very time you are discouraged, the Lord may have good news for you. This period of time may be more spring than winter. It is an open secret that God's arm is not shortened that he cannot save; neither is his ear heavy that He cannot hear.

Therefore, let us keep on working and praying that we may in our hearts possess the land of rest and comfort and peace with God. "The glory of the Lord shall be thy reward." He tells us in Isaiah 58:9, "Then thou shalt call, and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and He shall say, Here I Am."

We pray that the church and its fellowship will be your dearest treasure. May the church be the place where your "heart interest" lies. We invite you to attend services this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Rainy season causing problems for Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Heavy rains are causing havoc over most of the country and forecasters predict that the unusually harsh rainy season this year might be prolonged by as much as one more month.

Sunshine has been a rare occurrence in Mexico City since the start of the rainy season in June, but tropical storms and depressions off both the Pacific and Gulf coasts have blanketed most of the country with clouds for more than two weeks.

Downpours have caused rivers to overflow in Veracruz and Guerrero states, leaving several people dead and tens of thousands flooded out of their homes.

Two hurricanes in the Pacific, Norbert and Odille, were bringing heavy rains Thursday to most of southwestern Mexico. Federico Acevedo, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service, said Odille was hovering about 200 miles south-southeast of the state of Colima and could head for the coast.

Earlier this week, before its winds reached hurricane strength, Odille hit the state of Guerrero, leaving 11 people dead, according to Gov. Alejandro Cervantes Delgado. The governor told a news conference that 50,000 people had been evacuated and several towns were without drinking water or telephone lines.

Health authorities, fearful of possible epidemics because of the flooding, began vaccination campaigns in Guerrero.

In the Pacific resort of Acapulco, which is in Guerrero, emergency funds of $1.5 million dollars were earmarked to repair the port, according to the government newspaper El Nacional. The paper

Foul weather costs shrimper thousands

PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — Violent seas sent Michael Cateora's boats running for shore.

And with 15-foot waves still pounding the coast and both his shrimp boats docked, Cateora, one of 400 shrimpers based in far South Texas, said he'll lose thousands of dollars worth of shrimp by the time the weather clears.

"Fishing is like farming," said Cateora, 30, owner of the Brazos Fisheries. "We don't work in the winter and our season is fairly short, so it's serious when something stops us from going out."

Shrimp season lasts from June to December, he said.

Cateora's boats, the Michael Lynnwood and the Henry C, were scheduled to be out for a month but had been gone just five days when 7 foot-swells made it "too dangerous for them out there" and the crews were called to port.

About eight crewmen earn their livelihood on the two boats and Cateora said he had lost about $8,000 so far because of the weather.

Cateora's boats fish the entire Texas coast from the Texas-Mexico border to Louisiana.

"Even after the weather clears, it will be a while before we can fish," said Cateora, the father of two young daughters.

"Like a mud puddle after a rain, the Gulf is the same. It's murky out there and we don't start catching shrimp until the water clears a bit," he said.

Cateora said the interruption in the shrimping season comes on the heels of a poor catch in the spring and early summer. His boats brought in only 25 percent of their normal catch, a decline that Cateora attributes to last winter's freeze.

The son of a Spanish shrimper, Cateora said his family once had 30 boats. In his father's time, the Gulf was wide open to shrimping.

But now, shrimping in Mexican waters is illegal and the season closes part of the year to allow shrimp to mature.

Cateora said despite the problems, fishing is still a good life. "When we're working, it's great. I just hope I can send the boats out this weekend," he said.

"There's not too much to do when the boats are in. We're all just listening to the weather and waiting to work again."

said the tourist industry had not suffered any damages, although there had been earlier reports that several hotels were short of potable water.

Acevedo of the National Weather Service said navigation warnings were in effect for most of the Pacific coast.

The Gulf states, he said, were calmer Thursday, with only intermittent rain. A series of low-pressure systems in the Gulf have brought heavy rains and flooding to much of the country's eastern coast, from the Yucatan Peninsula to the state of Tamaulipas at the Texas border.

The newspaper Excelsior reported that the flooding of the Panuco river in Veracruz state cut off many roads, making it difficult to transport food to the region.

Mexico City, while out of the path of the fierce coastal winds, has had heavy rain nearly every day as a result of the Pacific and Gulf storms. Several major streets in the city have been flooded at times, causing heavy traffic tie-ups.

The National Weather Service has forecasted that the rainy season, which usually lasts from June to mid-September, may continue until mid-October.

Meanwhile, the state of Aguascalientes, in north central Mexico, continues to suffer from a severe drought.

New York physician to try Mount Everest again

EDITOR'S NOTE — The ancient Tibetans called it Chomolunga, the Goddess Mother of the world, and it stands as a challenge to a frustrated New York physician. Since Sir Edmund Hillary first did it in 1953, 160 people have reached the summit of Mount Everest, the highest peak on Earth, but Edward Hixson twice has failed. He is trying again.

By MARY ESCH
Associated Press Writer

PAUL SMITHS, N.Y. (AP) — Edward Hixson got to within 1,000 feet of the top before a stroke crippled him on Mount Everest last year. The year before, a fellow climber fell a mile to her death and then blizzards forced the expedition to abandon its attempt to reach the summit.

This fall, having progressed from tentative post-stroke steps with a walker to running up 4,867-foot Whiteface Mountain, the 42-year-old Lake Placid surgeon will try for the third year in a row to reach the highest point on earth.

"I'm not going back on a death wish, or to somehow defy the mountain," Hixson said in an interview in his log-walled living room before his departure for Tibet. "Getting to the top is not an obsession ... although perhaps being part of the climb is."

Hixson blames dehydration and a lack of sufficient oxygen at high altitude for the blood clot that lodged in his brain in May 1983.

Five fellow climbers made it to the top — including an ABC cameraman and Larry Nielson, the first American to scale Everest without oxygen — but Hixson had to turn back.

Blood clots in the lungs and legs are not uncommon at high altitude, Hixson says, since the blood gets very thick.

For Hixson, even commuting to work at Saranac Lake Hospital or to the Olympic Training Center in nearby Lake Placid, where he is medical director, is somewhat of a production.

The circa-1890 log chalet on Upper St. Regis Lake where he lives with his wife, Karen, and 1-year-old, blue-eyed baby, Ted, is hidden among tall hemlocks on a high promontory. Sixty-five stone steps lead down to the dock, from which Hixson boats or skis a mile to where his pickup truck is parked.

This year's Everest expedition, which set up base camp in Tibet on Aug. 20 and is scheduled to attempt the summit via the unclimbed North Face around Oct. 1, includes 10 veteran climbers.

They include leader Lou Whittaker, 54, whose twin brother Jim was the first American to reach Everest's summit; premier Himalayan climber John Roskelley; Dave Mahre, father of World Cup ski champs Phil and Steve; and Jim Wickwire, one of the first Americans to climb K-2, the world's second-highest peak.

"We've pretty much reassembled the group from the 1982 expedition," Hixson says. On that trip, Marty Hoey, 30, who would have been the first American woman to reach Everest's summit, took a wrong step and died in a fall from about 3,000 feet below the 29,028-foot summit.

But he has that drive that compels people to submit themselves lustily to the months of physical and mental stress required to reach the summit the ancient Tibetans call Chomolungma, Goddess Mother of the World.

"It's very unpleasant," he admits. "The weather is the harshest on the face of the earth."

On the mountain, climbers are often forced to bivouac in cramped tents for days, waiting out a storm. "At Camp IV on one trip, we dug an ice ledge in the side of the mountain to pitch our tents. To go out, you needed an ice axe, ropes and crampons," Hixson says.

A major problem is consuming the 7,000 calories and five or six liters of fluid needed daily by each climber to keep from losing weight. In previous trips, some have lost up to 30 pounds, including muscle, during the three-month expedition.

As expedition doctor, Hixson has a few hundred pounds of medical gear to deal with intestinal and respiratory infections, altitude sickness caused by the oxygen-poor atmosphere above 17,000 feet, frostbite and injuries, like a knee joint penetrated by a rock on the 1983 trip.

He planned to take only 20 bottles of oxygen to the high camps this fall.

"The majority of our climbers are not big on using it," he said. "A lot of climbers feel it's an unfair advantage. It's a question of esthetics."

"On the other hand," he added, "even some superb climbers cannot tolerate the lack of oxygen at extreme altitudes. That's pushing the absolute limit of what man can do."

Compared with earlier expeditions — like the 1963 expedition which had 19 American climbers, 47 Sherpas and more than 900 porters carrying 27 tons of equipment — this fall's trip is relatively small and inexpensive, Hixson said. "It will cost about $150-200,000."

Climbers put up little of their own money for such expeditions — companies donate most of the equipment, for the privilege of saying it was tested on Everest. Money is also raised by selling promotional T-shirts and by selling films, photographs and books documenting the expedition, Hixson said.

Since Sir Edmund Hillary first did it in 1953, 160 people have reached Everest's summit. Even if he doesn't stand on the top this time, Hixson said he wouldn't feel that he had failed. "I never really felt it was a horrendous defeat last time," he said. "I felt 28,000 feet was a heck of an achievement and I know the summit was within my grasp."

Kroc's dream comes true, Padres win NL West title

"I'm dreaming of a World Series title for the Padres." — Ray Kroc, 1902-1984.

By MARK J. KREIDLER
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ray Kroc didn't live long enough to see his San Diego Padres win their first National League West crown, but he wasn't forgotten on the day his once-laughable team wrapped it up.

"Ray would have loved this," said Ballard Smith, president of the San Diego Padres, after the team beat San Francisco 5-4 on Thursday en route to clinching the division title. "This was his dream."

Kroc, the man who turned McDonald's into the world's leading fast food chain, was widely credited with saving the languishing San Diego baseball franchise when he bought it in 1974, its fifth year of existence.

But by the time Kroc passed away at age 81 in January of this year, he had seen his sad sack team play above .500 only once, and his dream of a world championship was mired in the reality that the Padres never finished better than fourth in the West while he was alive.

Ironically, the Padres' most probable opponent in the NL championship series is the Chicago Cubs, the team that Kroc — born in the Chicago suburb of Oak Park, Ill., in 1902 — grew up adoring.

"It's doubly exciting that we're playing the Cubs," said Smith. Kroc's son-in-law, who was given charge of the team in 1979. "It's hard to believe that Ray didn't play some part in orchestrating all of this."

If he didn't, his acquisitions certainly did. The Padres combined young talent and enthusiasm with the experience of players like Steve Garvey, Graig Nettles and Rich "Goose" Gossage, all signed via free agency in the two years prior to Kroc's passing.

The entire club — players, coaches and trainers — gathered at Gossage's home in nearby Tierrasanta after the game and listened as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat Houston, eliminating the Astros from the race.

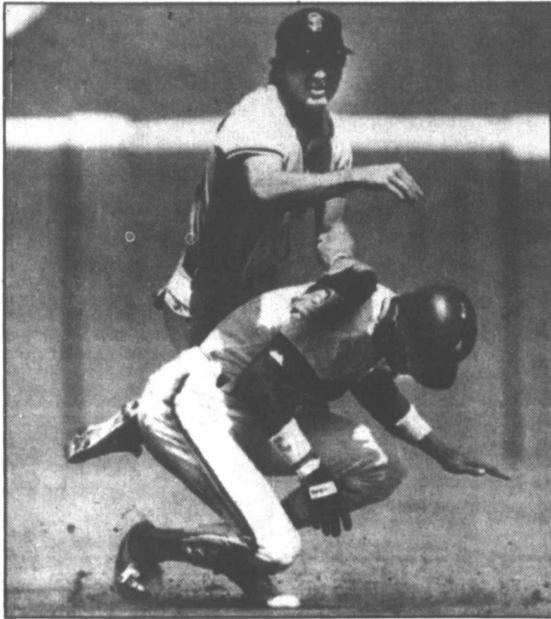

"This is as special as any title, because it's the first time the Padres have won," said the 35-year-old Garvey, who played on four World Series teams with Los Angeles. "One of my goals when I came here was to help this organization build a winning tradition, and I think we're beginning to do that."

Thursday's victory was fashioned in the usual manner for the Padres, who have developed a reputation as scratchers and clawers. Starting pitcher Tim Lollar boosted a sagging offense with a three-run homer, highlighting a five-run second inning that provided the winning margin.

Kroc, a fiery man who hated to lose, once rushed to a microphone after a Padre defeat and apologized to the home fans for "for some of the most stupid ballplaying I've ever seen in my life."

In 1984, Smith said, he would have had little to be sorry for.

The Padres' Alan Wiggins tries to break up a double play by sliding into Giants' shortstop Brad Wellman. San Diego's 5-4 win over San Francisco Thursday night gave the Padres the NL East crown. (AP Laserphoto)

Jesse Jackson visits Ali at hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali, his words slightly slurred, has demonstrated the ailment which landed him in a Manhattan hospital hasn't affected his wit — or, the former heavyweight champion says, his good looks.

"I'm still pretty, and I'm still the greatest in the world," Ali, 42, told a throng of cheering fans after emerging Thursday from his hospital room.

Ali, who was diagnosed as having Parkinson's syndrome, was joined on the steps of Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital by the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Jackson said he came to visit Ali because the ex-boxer was "a hero to a generation."

"I think it's a great honor for a great man like Jesse Jackson to take time out to visit a peasant like me," said Ali.

Later Ali flicked a few smiling verbal jabs, in one instance hoisting the former presidential candidate's arm and announced, "This is the new presidential ticket."

The three-time champion also told business associate Larry Kold he was pleased about grabbing more headlines than another Jackson — Michael.

He was "very happy that at last this week he is more famous than Michael Jackson," Kold related.

Pampa hosts Clovis tonight in annual football homecoming game

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

The Pampa Harvesters aren't reeling from two consecutive shutouts by the same identical 35-0 scores. Even faced with Clovis, New Mexico's top-ranked club, in the annual homecoming game tonight hasn't shaken the Harvesters.

"I feel like the kids have got a great attitude," said Pampa head coach John Kendall. "They realize they've lost to two good clubs. They haven't given up."

Pampa's offense was noticeably improved in its 35-0 loss to Amarillo High last week.

"We have improved," Kendall pointed out. "We threw the ball much better last week and we moved the ball real good on first and ten. It was our second and third down situations that hurt us."

Statistics bear Kendall out. On 17 first and ten plays, the Harvesters were thrown for a loss only once and had one first down. Pampa had three turnovers and lost yardage twice on running plays in other situations.

"It seems like we would start out good against the Sandies, but then we just couldn't seem to pick it up and keep going," Kendall said.

Pampa gained most of its yardage through the air as quarterback Jimmy Bridges completed 9 of 15 passes for 86 yards. Wade Howard caught six of those passes for 54 yards.

The Harvesters had eight first downs and 141 yards total offense against Amarillo High. Against Monahans in the opening game, the Harvesters had four first downs and 108 total yards in a 35-0 loss.

Injury-wise, Pampa has two questionable starters in tailback Dwayne Roberts (high bruise) and offensive guard Travis Adams (twisted ankle). Center Jimmy Leos is still out with injuries.

"This is our first home game and there's going to be a lot of people here for homecoming activities," Kendall said. "The kids want to make a good showing."

Clovis has won three consecutive Class 4A state titles and is picked to win again by New Mexico sports writers and sportscasters.

The Wildcats defeated a veteran Canyon club, 21-14, last week and Wade Howard was Pampa's top receiver against Amarillo High last week, catching 6 passes for 54 yards. Howard will be in the starting lineup tonight against Clovis.

opened the season with a 0-0 deadlock against District 3-5A favorite Palo Duro.

"Clovis has an explosive offense," said Kendall. "They run options and our kids are going to have to play defense or they could break a long gainer on us."

The Wildcats' defense is supposed to be their strongpoint, according to coaching reports, but junior running back Darren Kelley is a factor to be reckoned with on offense.

Kelley rushed 18 times for 123 yards and scored all three touchdowns against Canyon.

"He's a quick back," said Kendall. "Defensively, they've got good size and good speed. They held Palo Duro, a good offensive team, to no points."

Advance tickets for tonight's 7:30 p.m. kickoff are available at the high school athletic office for $3 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets at the gate are $4 for students and $2 for adults. The athletic office will be open until 4 p.m. today.

SWC roundup

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

Baylor senior linebacker Kevin Hancock figures the Bears are getting a lot of experience in their first two football games this fall.

"We played probably the best passing team in the country (Brigham Young), and will have played one of the best running teams in OU," Hancock said, referring to Baylor's encounter Saturday in Norman, Okla., against the Oklahoma Sooners.

No. 11 Oklahoma, victor by 19-7 over Stanford and 42-10 over Pittsburgh, is off to its best start since its 1974 national championship team went 11-0.

OU opened that string of successes with a 28-11 victory over Baylor, which went on to an 8-4 record, its first SWC championship in 50 years and its first berth in the Cotton Bowl.

The Sooners are 19-point favorites over Baylor, which is 0-1 after its 47-13 loss to BYU two weeks ago.

Such match-ups as that and Houston's contest in Seattle against No. 9 Washington, a 13-point favorite, make it unlikely the SWC will be able to dominate its inter-league opponents as it did last week, when conference teams won five of six games and tied the other one.

Not since 1957 had six league teams gone through a football Saturday without a loss.

Besides Baylor and Houston, six other SWC teams are in action Saturday. Only Texas, the nation's No. 3 team, is idle. The home team is favored in all eight games.

Las Vegas oddsmakers favor Texas A&M by 15 points over Iowa State, Arkansas by five over Tulsa, Rice by three over Lamar, Southern Methodist by 17 over North Texas State, Texas Christian by eight over Kansas State, and New Mexico by seven over Texas Tech.

Oklahoma quarterback Danny Bradley ran for two touchdowns and passed for two more against Pitt. Freshman running back Lydell Carr has rushed for 210 yards in two games, the best pace ever for a Sooner freshman.

Pampa eighth-grade routs Boys Ranch

BOYS RANCH — Quarterback Dustin Miller threw three touchdown passes, two going to Terrell Welch, as the Pampa 8th-grade Blue team trounced Boys Ranch, 38-8, Thursday in junior high football action.

Brandon McDonald scored twice for Pampa Blue, once on a 40-yard pass from Miller. Bennie Martinez scored Pampa's final TD.

"I was pleased with our game and with the effort of the players," said Pampa Blue coach Steve Porter. "They feel like they can win it all. They're 2-0 now with six games to go."

Porter said Troy Gregg played an outstanding game, both offensively and defensively, for the Blue. Chris Didway and Greg Ferguson also played well, Porter said.

"Ferguson made some fantastic catches at end," Porter added.

"He's tall and he can just reach up and take away passes from the defenders."

Pampa Blue plays Canadian there Oct. 4 in the final non-district game. Pampa Red plays Saturday at Hereford.

"We feel like our eighth-grade teams can go 1-2 in the district this season," Porter said. "We've really got some skilled players."

Next year when these two teams combine in the ninth grade, they're really going to be something."

In a sophomore game last night, Pampa was defeated by Caprock, 28-6.

Pampa's only score came in the third quarter when Glenn Pruitt caught a 13-yard pass from Kenny Steward.

Pats' Grogan loses starting quarterback job

By The Associated Press
Tony Eason and Matt Cavanaugh both held the job at one time. Now, it belongs to Steve Grogan and he isn't too pleased about it.

The position in question is backup quarterback for the New England Patriots. Eason had it as recently as last week, but he was announced as the starter for this Sunday's game against the Washington Redskins after he came off the bench to rally the Patriots from a 23-0 deficit to a 38-23 victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

Cavanaugh was the Pats No. 2 quarterback from 1978 through the 1982 season. He started a few times, but for the most served as Grogan's backup. This week, Cavanaugh could be the starter for the undefeated San Francisco 49ers because Joe Montana has bruised ribs and is considered questionable for the game against the Philadelphia Eagles.

In other National Football League games Sunday it will be: Houston at Atlanta, the Los Angeles Rams at Cincinnati, Minnesota at Detroit, the New York Jets at Buffalo, Pittsburgh at Cleveland, St. Louis at New Orleans, Chicago at Seattle, Indianapolis at Miami, Green Bay at Dallas, Kansas City at Denver and Tampa Bay at the New York Giants. San Diego visits the Los Angeles Raiders Monday night.

Grogan, who holds every New England passing record, has told the Patriots coaching staff that he does not want to get into a system of rotating quarterbacks for the 2-1 team.

"The decision to change to Tony is made, and I don't want to get into a musical chairs situation and I don't think it's fair to Tony to get into that situation, especially at his age," Grogan, 31, said of Eason, who is six years his junior and in his second year in the NFL.

"I honestly don't feel that last Sunday was a fair evaluation," Grogan, who has started 107 of the 114 NFL games he has played, said. "It's my fault that we fumbled on the first play of the game when I get sandwiched between two guys as I get back?"

It's like I say, I don't think a lot of it's fair but this is the way it's being dealt with so I'm going to live with it."

Eason could be living easy if his offensive line does the job against the Redskins, 1-2, who have allowed an average of 326.7 passing yards per game.

"We still have to keep the rushers out of there," New England center Pete Brock said of the pocket Eason will be throwing from. "Tony adds the dimension that Steve Grogan had earlier in his career, the rollout."

"I don't agree with that evaluation," he said. "Tony made one nice run (a 25-yarder for a touchdown against Seattle) and outside of that he never got out of the pocket outside of the bootlegs that were called. I've been running a lot of years and still feel like I can run."

Reynolds signs extension

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros shortstop Craig Reynolds, who filled in all season for injured Dickie Thon, signed a three-year extension with the National League club Thursday, Astros General Manager Al Rosen announced.

Reynolds moved into the starting lineup in the first week of the season when Thon was struck in the head by a pitched ball.

Reynolds has played consistently throughout the season and entered Thursday night's game against Los Angeles with a .263 batting average.

Reynolds was an All-Star selection with the American League Seattle Mariners in 1978 and with the Astros in 1979. Reynolds is seventh on the Astros all-time list with 40 triples.

Sanctuary supporters vowing to make trial forum on U.S. policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sanctuary movement worker Jack Elder and former Ambassador to El Salvador Robert White say it is the U.S. government that is breaking the law by deporting Salvadoran refugees, not sanctuary workers charged with transporting them. Elder, director of the Catholic diocese-sponsored Casa Oscar Romero refugee shelter in San Benito in far South Texas, is awaiting trial on charges of illegally transporting three Salvadorans from the house to a bus station six miles away.

White and Elder addressed a Thursday news conference on Capitol Hill where they were joined by William Ford, a New Jersey attorney whose sister was one of three nuns slain by Salvadoran troops; a masked Salvadoran refugee identified only as Rosa Maria; and Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., who has introduced legislation to temporarily halt deportations of Salvadorans.

Elder said his trial would not discourage the sanctuary movement, backed by many churches which argue the Salvadorans are political refugees fleeing terrorism. "We are unrepentant," Elder said. "We are unbowed. We intend to continue helping refugees who come here from El Salvador, and through this forum (his upcoming trial) bring focus upon what is going on in El Salvador."

If convicted, Elder could get a maximum of 15 years in prison and a $6,000 fine. His trial date has not been set.

Stacy Lynn Merkt, a Catholic lay worker at the shelter, was sentenced in June to two years' probation after being convicted of transporting illegal aliens in another case.

Elder said he does not believe that it was illegal for him to transport refugees he says are "being subjected to a foreign policy I believe would more appropriately be termed illegal." A Reagan administration official had said at a hearing earlier this year on Moakley's legislation that if the government opens its borders to Salvadorans, it would indicate a lack of faith in the newly elected government of Christian Democrat Napoleon Duarte.

Sanctuary workers complain that Salvadorans are virtually guaranteed of being turned down if they seek political asylum through conventional channels.

White, who served as ambassador to El Salvador under the Carter administration, said the United States is violating the Geneva Convention by deporting the Salvadorans.

"Under the Geneva Convention, the United States is constrained from returning refugees from any country where rights under the Geneva Convention are not being respected," he said.

Rosa Maria, her eyes peering over a bandana tied around her head, told reporters that after she began aiding refugees in a camp in San Salvador, a death squad came to her house, but she was not at home.

She said her mother borrowed enough money to pay smugglers to transport Rosa Maria and her 8-year-old daughter to the United States. She said after being jailed for three weeks in Mexico and deported, she worked her way back to Los Angeles and now is staying with relatives in the Washington area.

"On behalf of Salvadoran refugees and especially on behalf of those helped by these people like Jack Elder through Casa Oscar Romero, I would like to say thanks," she said.

Reagan retreats on MX missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has beat another multibillion dollar retreat from his Pentagon spending demands, agreeing to put the centerpiece of his defense buildup, the MX nuclear missile, on hold for further — and possibly ruinous — political tests next year.

With Reagan's consent, Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee struck a comprehensive compromise with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., late Thursday over a Pentagon budget battle that had the Congress in knots.

The major concessions came from Reagan's corner. They were:

—That both the House and the Senate each will have, in effect, two chances to singlehandedly kill the 10-warhead MX in votes next April. O'Neill said that means the MX "will never be deployed... the defeat of the MX is well at hand."

—That total defense spending will not exceed $292.9 billion, roughly the figure approved months ago by the Democratic-controlled House, in fiscal 1985. That would mean a real, or inflation-adjusted, increase of about 5 percent over the current year, and less if the MX doesn't survive the four "votes of approval."

Reagan originally sought $313 billion, or an increase of 13 percent, for defense. He later backed off to $299 billion, the figure approved in June by the Senate, and until Thursday had refused to budge further.

But the president's greatest retreat was on the MX, where he agreed to a procedural scenario crafted by House and Senate opponents of the missile. It works like this:

Instead of the 40 missiles originally sought by Reagan or the 21 approved by the Senate, the authorization and spending bills which emerge in the coming days will earmark $1.5 billion for production of just 15 missiles — but only if each chamber gives another go-ahead on each of those legislative fronts next April.

In short, Reagan must win four votes next April, MX opponents need win only one to kill the weapon.

The compromise buys time for both sides. House Democrats said they had the votes to kill the MX this year when the actual spending bill came up; Reagan is counting on an election victory that will give him more support on the MX in the House next year, though Democrats are virtually certain to retain their majority.

Therein lies a potential irony, however. The MX barely survived, by the tie-breaking vote of Vice President George Bush, a key test in the Senate earlier this year.

Men arrested in Texas town

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Two men have been arrested in Texas in connection with the abduction of 8-year-old Vicki Lynn Hoskinson but there is no word on her whereabouts, authorities say.

The FBI and Pima County authorities made the announcement Thursday night in a televised news conference.

The FBI identified the men in custody as Frank Atwood, 28, and John McDonald, 37. A spokesman said they were arrested about 6 p.m. Thursday in Kerrville, Texas.

Authorities said they have loads of leads and are extremely optimistic of finding her. She disappeared Monday night.

Sheriff Clarence Dupnik said the arrests were made on the basis of information "obtained very early in the case."

First reports said the girl may have been taken by a woman and the sheriff said authorities continue to pursue that angle.

Atwood is charged with kidnapping and McDonald is held as a material witness, according to Dupnik. McDonald also is charged with obstructing a criminal investigation and fraudulent scheming, Dupnik said.

Asked about the girl, County Attorney Stephen Neely said: "We are going to maintain an optimistic posture until there is reason not to." Neely said the arrest was made by Kerrville police and FBI agents.

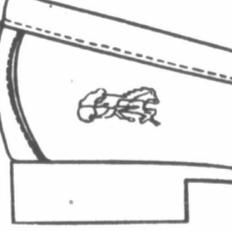

A massive manhunt was launched in the Tucson area after girl disappeared late Monday afternoon. Neighborhood children said they had seen her talking to a motorist in a late-model Datsun.

CHILDREN BRING JOY—Lynn Meadows, 22 months, shares a doll with Evelyn Thomas, a Lake Jackson Nursing Home resident, during a recent visit. Lynn is among a group of children that visit the nursing home in an interaction program set up by Lynn's mother Mary.

Tots visiting senior citizens

By VIVIENNE HEINES
The Brazosport Facts
LAKE JACKSON, Texas (AP)—The preschoolers toddle on unsteady legs in the living room at the Lake Jackson Nursing Home, maneuvering around wheelchairs, sofas, chairs and toys. About a dozen residents watch them with gentle smiles on their faces, reaching out an arm to one or talking to another.

"These are pretty children," says one white-haired woman to another. "Oh, they're beautiful," the other agrees.

Two-year-old Ysela Cruz of Clute walks sturdily over to them and stands there, looking. "How old are you, sugar? 5? 4?" asks the woman. Ysela just looks and smiles at her.

Ysela's mother, Luz Maria Cruz, comes to the rescue. "She's 2," she tells the women. They all smile.

Ysela and the other children at the home are part of a Tots Play Group organized in March by Mary Meadows of Lake Jackson. The children and their mothers visit the nursing home every other Wednesday morning to play with each other and the senior citizens there.

It is an opportunity for the children to be around older people and also an opportunity for the senior citizens to see young faces, says Mrs. Meadows.

"I think it's important, mostly for the residents of the nursing home, because they don't get a chance to see very many children since a lot of them don't have family here," she says.

Mrs. Meadows says she got the idea for the visits from a magazine article she read several years ago.

"I thought that when I had a kid, I would try to do something like that, too," she says.

So she organized a few other mothers with small children, put notes in her church bulletin to advertise the visits, and decided to make the biweekly trips. Usually, she says, about eight or 10 children show up but she'd like to see the number increase and for additional groups to do the same for other area nursing homes.

Mrs. Meadows says that generally, the hour or so at the home is spent in unstructured activities with toddlers and residents talking, visiting and playing together as they wish.

"What we want to do is to encourage the children's interaction with the elderly. Sometimes, the residents just want to watch the children or hold them on their laps ... sometimes, it's pretty chaotic but the residents don't seem to mind at all," Mrs. Meadows says with a laugh.

Mrs. Cruz says that she brings Ysela to the nursing home so that she can become accustomed to being around older people.

"Her grandparents are very far away and I wanted to expose her to senior citizens. And also to see the expressions on the residents' faces it gives you a good feeling," she says, watching her pigtailed daughter fondly.

Mrs. Cruz, who is pregnant and expecting twins in February or March, says she will bring her two new ones to the nursing home when they are old enough, too.

"I don't want them to be afraid of the elderly. I think they can learn a lot by being around them, talking to them," she adds.

Although the children all seemed relaxed with the nursing home residents on a recent visit, Mrs. Meadows says initially they were fearful of the situation.

"At first, they were a little bit afraid but now they're not," she says.

Teaching her little girl to be at ease around older people was one reason that Kara Dick of Lake Jackson began bringing 18-month-old Jessica to the home.

"She has lots of great-great aunts and a great-grandmother. And since we started bringing her here, she warms up to those relatives a lot faster. She's not as afraid of older people," Mrs. Dick says.

She also appreciates the fact that Jessica has a chance to be around other kids her own age.

"She's an only child and it helps her to play with other children ... it gets her to talk more. She jabbars at home but here with the older children, she has to make herself understood."

"Plus, I get a chance to see my own peers and talk to the ladies that live here get out of the house," Mrs. Dick says with a smile.

Judy Thacker of Lake Jackson brings all three of her youngsters to the nursing home, 3-year-old twins Tara and Traci, and 1-year-old Charlie.

"I thought it would be good for my children to have interaction with the elderly. I think it's good for them and healthy for the older folk," Mrs. Thacker says.

Although her children have one grandmother who lives in Oyster Creek, other elderly relatives live farther away.

"They have great-grandparents they see every two years and my parents, they only get to see once a year," Mrs. Thacker says.

"And with so many people living longer, children need to develop a healthy respect for the aged. A lot of people are afraid to walk into a nursing home ... I don't want my kids growing up without understanding what it is to grow old," she adds.

By and large, the residents themselves seemed pleased with their young visitors.

"I think this is wonderful if keeps us young," says Betty Burks, 76, as she watches a little girl push a yellow schoolbus across the rug.

Elizabeth Simandi, 89, echoes her sentiments.

"I think it's cute. I have only one grandson and he's in Houston. I see him about two or three times a year he's 39 years old.

Mrs. Simandi says she especially enjoys seeing the little girls.

"I always wanted girls but I had two boys. They were both in the Navy and one was killed in the Marines. The other was a flier for eight years. He died five years ago. And my husband died two years and two months ago I haven't got anybody," she adds.

Betty Silva, supervisor for housekeeping and maintenance, says the visits are visibly cheering for the residents.

"They love this because they get to open themselves up to the children. And just to see their faces light up when they see the little babies come in that's something good to see," she adds.

Fields is 'not ashamed'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democratic challenger Don Buford says the large profit incumbent Congressman Jack Fields made on a real estate investment in a company owned by one of Fields' contributors is a "slap in the face" of the working-class congressional district.

"I have to come to the conclusion that this is a very dirty campaign that I'm being subjected to," said Fields, R-Humble. He said Houston real estate developer Bob Perry offered him the deal because the two are old friends.

According to financial disclosure reports Fields filed with the Clerk of the House, he has made at least $150,000 on 150 shares of Perry Contractors Inc., purchased in late 1980 for no more than $1,000.

"It's a slap in the face of the people of this district," Buford said Thursday in a telephone interview.

Perry, one of Fields' political contributors, incorporated Perry Contractors in November 1980, the same month Fields was elected.

"As far as I know, there's nothing unusual about the enhancement of value in a business like this in Houston, Texas," Fields said in a Tuesday interview in his office.

In a telephone interview Thursday, Fields said Perry had told him to expect a dividend this year of less than $10,000.

Members of Congress are not required to reveal the exact amounts of their holdings, income and debts, but instead describe them in terms of broad value categories. The highest category of income is $100,000 and over.

Fields reported income of at least $156,350 in 1983, not counting his congressional salary, of which the dividend income accounted for at least $100,000.

Fields declined Thursday to reveal the exact amount of the income or value of the stock.

"I'm going to preserve that element of privacy," he said.

He listed the stock in 1981 as being worth less than $5,000. In 1982 and 1983, it was listed in the $50,001 to $100,000 category.

Fields said that he knew no details of the business other than "that in general that the business in a general construction type of business, the type of business that Bob Perry conducts."

Buford, a former aide to then-Congressman Jim Mattox, disputed the listing of the income as a dividend. If the income is a dividend, Buford said, "they're stupid businessmen" because taxes were paid on the corporate income and then on the individual income. He said the double tax payment can be avoided by calling the profit a salary or bonus.

Members of Congress are under personal income limitations but there is no similar limitation on dividend, interest, capital gains or rent income.

"It's incredulous to me that this is a straight business deal," said Buford, who says he has disclosed his own holdings and income as vice president of a janitorial service.

Perry told the Houston Post that there were other investors in Perry Contractors, a privately held corporation, but did not name them. He said no others were holders of public office, however.

The budget deficit: It's the problem that won't go away

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)— Even as the economy prospers you can hear it everywhere — a persistent, nagging, haunting voice that says something's got to give if the budget deficit isn't lowered.

Prosperity, it says, cannot survive deficits. It is the voice of bankers, savers, borrowers, candidates, blue-collar workers, executives, Republicans, Democrats, and even the president whose budget it is.

But the deficit, all $174.3 billion of it for fiscal 1984, sits like a rock on the White House lawn, adding another layer to the national debt, which in four years has risen from just over $900 billion to nearly $1.6 trillion.

Two more organizations, both claiming non-partisanship, added their voices to the commentary this week.

"The failure of our political leaders, executive and legislative, to confront the problem ... has brought us to the verge of an economic crisis of historic proportions," said the Committee on Developing American Capitalism.

price stability and expansion simultaneously.

In effect, both groups said the budget deficit should go, just as they have said before, and just as hundreds of other organizations have also urged.

But the more interesting and perhaps far-reaching suggestions came from the committee on capitalism, which believes that moving the rock will require a restructured tax policy.

According to a committee paper, it is now clear "that neither political nor economic circumstances will allow a solution on the spending side alone," and that some new form of taxation on consumption must be tried.

"To imagine that an additional $200 billion per year of spending reductions can be made is wishful thinking — a dangerous exercise at this point," the paper stated.

But, said the authors — Albert Ullman, former chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, economist Albert Sommers, and R. Keith Martin, dean of the School of Business, Fairfield (Conn.) University — it is also unrealistic to think that the money can be wrung out of the present income tax system.

How, therefore, would they manage what to date has been unmanageable?

They would simplify and reduce income taxes. They would apply a spending limitation, based on a certain percentage of the nation's total production of goods and services.

DR ABORTION

CAMPAIGN STOP PROTEST—Protesters make their anti-abortion feelings known during a campaign stop by Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro Thursday at the University of Texas at Arlington. About 10,000 people turned out to listen to Mrs. Ferraro. (AP Laserphoto)

Mixed feelings for Ferraro

DALLAS (AP) — After a warm reception at a downtown Dallas fundraiser, Geraldine Ferraro confronted some of the worst heckling of her campaign on the campus of the University of Texas at Arlington.

The Democratic vice presidential candidate's campus speech was repeatedly interrupted by several hundred sign-waving pro-Reagan demonstrators.

Gov. Mark White, who stepped to her side several times during the heckling, later tried to downplay the rowdy scene.

"We're doing our part for education reform in Texas. There are just a few students we haven't taught manners to yet," he told reporters.

But the campus crowd also included Ferraro supporters. Chants of "Ger-ry! Ger-ry! Ger-ry!" competed at several points with "Reagan! Reagan!"

The Queens, N.Y., congresswoman faced down her hecklers and pressed on with her speech. At one point, unable to finish a sentence about Reagan's record, she turned to the hecklers and said:

"I want to tell you — if I had a record like Ronald Reagan's, I wouldn't want anybody to talk about it either."

Earlier this week, her running mate, Walter F. Mondale, was confronted by a similar crowd of pro-Reagan hecklers at the University of Southern California.

During a campaign stop in Vermont on Thursday, Vice President George Bush said he had no knowledge of the USC heckling incident and added, "I don't like it and it invites retaliation." Bush was loudly heckled by nuclear freeze advocates during Thursday's stumping.

Ms. Ferraro began the day with a fundraising breakfast at the Fairmont Hotel that attracted an enthusiastic crowd of about 3,500, nearly twice what the organizers expected from this conservative, strongly Republican community.

A small crowd of mostly anti-abortion demonstrators marched outside the downtown hotel, but inside, the crowd cheered and applauded with vigor.

In speeches at both events, Ferraro criticized Reagan administration foreign policy.

"Like every mother in this country, I did not raise my son to die in an undeclared war for an uncertain purpose," she said in Arlington.

"Let's have a president that sends in the diplomats before he sends in the Marines," she told her first audience.

Judge gives instructed open beach verdict

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Harley Clark surprised state and defense attorneys alike with an instructed verdict for the state in the first full court test of the Texas open beaches law.

Notice of appeal was given immediately.

The decision, handed down Thursday afternoon, gave Attorney General Jim Mattox a victory over Robert Matcha in a civil suit filed to stop Matcha from repairing a hurricane-damaged house on West Galveston beach.

Fourteen other similar suits are pending.

Matcha was ordered by Clark to remove the remains of his two-bedroom house from the West Galveston beach and to tear down an artificial sand dune he built in front.

The order was stayed until Matcha has a chance to appeal to higher courts.

"Of course we will appeal and we'll win it in upper courts," said Karen Lerner, one of Matcha's attorneys.

"I am very pleased with Judge Clark's decision," Mattox said. "The judge has ruled that the public beaches follow the natural beaches. This is the heart of the Texas Open Beaches Act that exists to insure that all Texans have equal access to the beaches."

The state waived its demand for a $1,000 civil penalty.

However, Matcha was forced to post $500 bond to insure he will fulfill the court's order on removing the house, if his appeal fails.

Testimony in the seven-day case ended Thursday morning and the judge had announced final arguments of attorneys would be heard Friday.

The judge's decision came after a session between lawyers and Clark over preparation of the judge's charge to the jury.

"Part of the reason we got an instructed verdict was because we agreed to waive the fine," said Will Rogers, a spokesman for Mattox, "but he's going to have to tear down his property."

Ms. Lerner was critical of Clark's decision.

"Ever since this judge (Clark) issued a temporary injunction he has shown a bias for the state," Ms. Lerner said.

"Never before have I had case taken away without going to the jury. My client has been deprived not only of his prokerty but of his constitutional rights to a jury trial," Ms. Lerner said.

Mattox had contended in the civil suit that the house should not be rebuilt.
