Last-week effort

Mondale goes for broke

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is going for broke, spending the last week of the 1984 presidential campaign talking about higher taxes and accusing President Reagan of hiding in the White House and taking voters for granted.

Beginning a grueling final eight days that will take him coast to coast, the Democratic presidential challenger said Sunday that Reagan has begun to isolate himself in the White House, even before next Tuesday's election.

"The administration has begun a strategy of hiding in the White House," he said at a new conference in San Francisco, taking note of the president's much more relaxed campaign schedule. "They are taking the American people for granted," he said.

After a relaxing weekend at Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Maryland mountains, Reagan was heading out to resume campaigning today in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was campaigning today too, starting in Manhattan and Erie, Pa. Vice President George Bush was embarking on an eight-state trip, with the first stops Birmingham and Mobile, Ala.

Mondale, campaigning Sunday in California, had a text prepared for delivery at a rally at a San Jose high school in which he described his own proposal to increase income taxes for Americans earning more than $25,000 to help offset the huge federal deficit.

The text for the speech said: "I want Americans to know the truth about my plan. If you make $100,000, I'll raise your taxes by $1,800. But if you make $25,000, your taxes won't go up a dime." But on delivery to a crowd of about 1,500 people, Mondale omitted all specific references to his tax hike proposal.

Instead, he said, "I am saying I want taxes to be fair."

Senior aides said Mondale would devote the closing days of the campaign to an intensive, unrelenting comparison of the differences in values and issues with Reagan, mainly arms control, human rights overseas and "fairness" at home.

A New York Times-CBS News poll released over the weekend showed Reagan with an 18-point edge over the Democrat, while a Newsweek magazine survey put the margin at 17 percent.

A Time magazine poll released Sunday said Reagan held a 24-point lead, 54-30. The poll of 1,000 voters last week has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

A USA Today poll out today gives Reagan a 23-point lead over Mondale, 59 percent to 36 percent. The survey of 1,320 voters, taken Thursday through Saturday, has a margin of error of 3 points.

Doggett, Gramm to criss-cross state

By The Associated Press

U.S. Senate candidates Lloyd Doggett and Phil Gramm were expected to spend the final full week of campaigning by racing around the state asking for support at rallies and speeches.

Doggett was to open the week with a large rally and family reunion today at Post, near Lubbock. Gramm prepared for the closing days of the campaign by meeting Sunday with political advisors, discussing strategy and prepared for a rally at Waco today.

Gramm acknowledged that polls show he is leading Doggett, but didn't indicate he plans to slow down.

"I don't know if it's close. I'm running on that assumption," Gramm said Sunday.

Issues that will contrast him with Doggett will be emphasized in the closing week of the campaign, Gramm said. Gramm said he also plans to emphasize his support for President Reagan's economic program, opposition to tax increases, support for a balanced budget amendment and backing of strong defense policies.

Gramm said he plans to visit all areas of the state in the final week.

His television ads will feature spots showing him with Reagan, Gramm said. He has spent much of the campaign emphasizing that Reagan's economic program has resulted in improvement of the economy.

"We have in four years brought the inflation rate down from the highest levels in peacetime history of our nation to the lowest levels in 20 years," Gramm said in an interview at Dallas Sunday.

"My tie to the president is not the traditional coattail effect. I wrote the president's (economic) plan," he said.

Doggett spent the weekend courting minority voters in South Texas and Houston before moving on to West Texas for the rally and reunion.

He made six stops in South

Texas, including the Lower Rio Grande Valley, Saturday.

Doggett visited predominantly black churches at Houston Sunday morning and flew to San Antonio later in the day to speak at a convention of Texas broadcasters and make an appearance at a rally with San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

Asked at Houston what he had to offer black voters, Doggett replied, "I have never been asked to be for what was black or what was white, but for what was right."

Carrying the Houston area, where as many as one-fifth of all Texans live, is important if he is to win Nov. 6, Doggett said.

Baboon transplant protested

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Doctors who implanted a baboon heart in a dying infant girl did not look for a human transplant donor and were unaware that one became available the day they performed the surgery, a spokesman for the surgical team said.

The director of an agency that finds transplant organs said Sunday that a heart became available Friday, the same day doctors at Loma Linda University Medical Center put a baboon heart into a baby identified only as Baby Fae.

The 17-day-old infant, who was in critical but stable condition today, had been dying because her own heart was only partially developed.

"We have a beautiful, healthy baby," said Dr. Leonard L. Bailey on Sunday. Doctors on Sunday began giving Baby Fae doses of cyclosporine to suppress her immune system and rejection of the heart.

Outside the hospital animal rights activists picketed, holding signs that read, "Ghoulish tinkering is not science."

"I'm not surprised that they didn't look for a human heart," said Lucy Shelton of the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals. "We can't forget about the non-human animals here. They (the scientists) are just playing around. It makes our outrage that much stronger."

Bailey, who headed the specially-assembled team that implanted the animal heart, said he could not speculate how long the animal's heart would keep Baby Fae alive, but doctors said it might grow as the girl grows. "We know we may be in for a long battle in the weeks ahead," Bailey said.

Bailey said the infant had "normal cardiac output," didn't require heart stimulants and was being weaned from a respirator that helped her breathe.

Dr. Paul I. Terasaki, professor of surgery at UCLA Medical School and director of the California Regional Organ Procurement Agency, first reported the availability of the human heart.

"Our coordinator called the Loma Linda kidney transplant people, but because they are a different team they were unaware that there was a need for a heart," Terasaki said.

Loma Linda hospital spokesman Dick Schaefer said, "We did not try to find a human heart," but added that the 2-month-old human organ may not have been compatible with Baby Fae's body, and she was so ill there would not have been enough time to check.

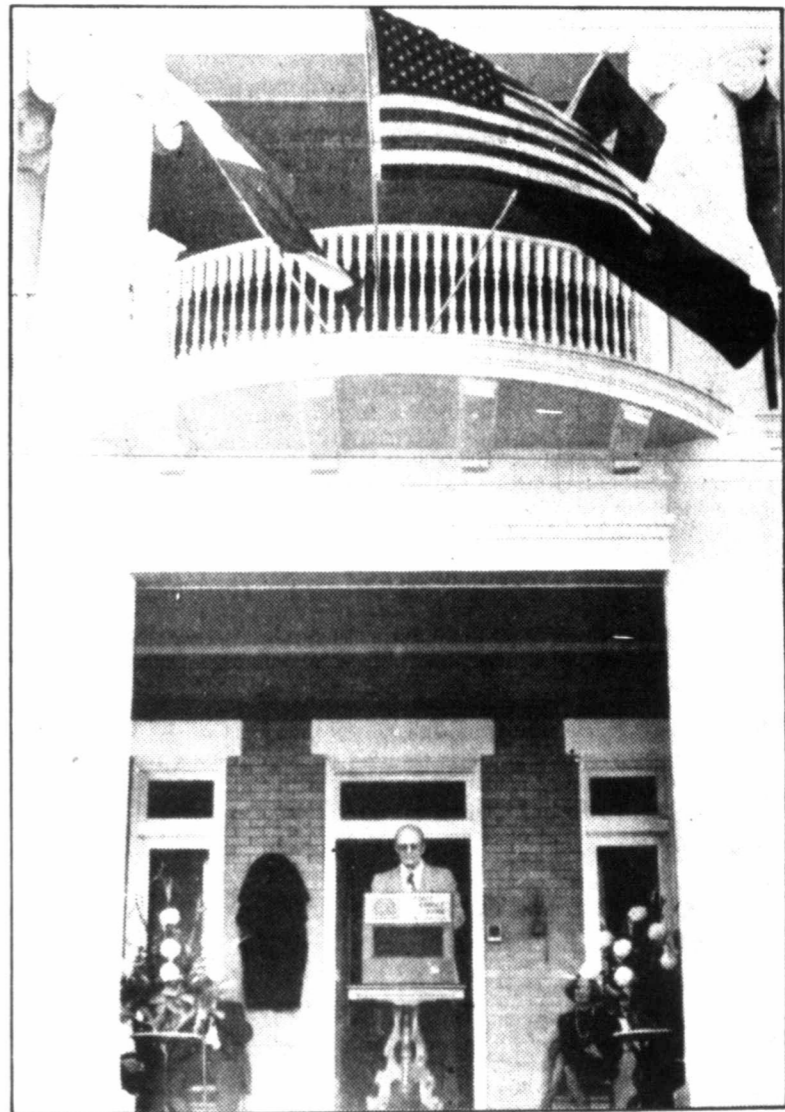

Schaefer said he did not know if Baby Fae's parents had agreed to their daughter receiving the baboon's heart regardless of whether a human heart was available.

However, he said, "The parents went through the most extensive informed consent (procedure) ever taken at the medical center," including signing a consent agreement twice.

"In essence, they killed a baboon to prolong the child's suffering. We feel it's just ghoulish tinkering," said Mrs. Shelton.

"Somebody obviously wanted to get Loma Linda on the map, and they obviously succeeded in doing that," said Michael Giannelli, a clinical psychologist and scientific adviser for the Fund For Animals.

Schaefer said Baby Fae had nearly died twice while awaiting the new organ — once just hours before the transplant was done — and the baboon transplant was the only way to save her life.

Special prosecutor urged to study Nicaragua manual

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson has urged a manual allegedly sponsored by the Central Intelligence Agency for anti-government guerrillas in Nicaragua should be studied by a special federal prosecutor.

Jackson, a former contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, claimed Saturday he could not rely on President Reagan's administration to investigate its own relationship with the manual's production.

"A multitude of sins has accumulated as we are obsessed with overthrowing the Nicaraguan government rather than negotiating with it," Jackson said in a brief news conference at San Antonio International Airport.

Reagan has ordered the CIA to investigate the production of a 44-page booklet distributed to antigovernment contras in Nicaragua. Officials said the booklet provides instruction on political kidnapping, assassination, blackmail and mob violence.

Jackson predicted that acts in Central America "will catch up with Ronald Reagan before the election or after the election," much as Richard Nixon eventually faced responsibility in Watergate.

Aside from the manual, Jackson charged that there was a larger pattern of allegedly illegal activity in Nicaragua, including the mining of the country's harbors, ambivalence toward the World Court's jurisdiction over the mining and the use of contingency funds to fight an undeclared war.

Jackson also said victory is still within reach of Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro.

"We're convinced we can win the state of Texas in part because Reagan has heaped so much pain upon the poor," Jackson said Saturday. "His foreign policy has been just as devastating.

Barefoot still confident he won't have to die

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer Thomas Andy Barefoot refused breakfast today and continued to insist he would not be executed as scheduled after midnight Tuesday morning, prison officials said.

But he lost one of his hopes for a reprieve today when the Supreme Court refused to block Tuesday's scheduled execution.

The justices, by a 7-2 vote, rejected the latest appeal aimed at keeping Barefoot alive, leaving the condemned man's main chances for another stay resting with Texas Governor Mark White.

The appeal contended that Barefoot was unfairly sentenced to death because prosecutors suppressed a psychiatric evaluation that may have pointed to life in prison as the appropriate punishment.

Barefoot's lawyers also argued that he not be executed by lethal injection until the high court decides whether that form of execution must be approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

The court is expected to decide that issue by July Barefoot, condemned to die by poison injection for the Aug. 7, 1978, murder of a policeman, said he believes he will be returned to his Death Row cell at the Texas prison system's Ellis I unit, prison officials said in a news release today.

He was offered breakfast but declined it at 7 a.m. and said during a property inventory he believed he would not be executed, the release said. Warden Marshall Herklotz was preparing to move Barefoot from Death Row to a waiting room next to the death chamber in downtown Huntsville, a secretary for chief prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

Barefoot, a 39-year-old former oilfield roughneck from New Iberia, La., was hoping either Texas' governor or the U.S. Supreme Court would decide to spare his life a fifth time.

Barefoot's victim was Carl LeVin, a policeman in the small central Texas town of Harker Heights.

Prosecutors claimed Barefoot feared LeVin would discover he was a fugitive from New Mexico, where he was wanted on a charge of raping a 3-year-old girl.

Barefoot's attorneys last week asked the Supreme Court to postpone the execution.

A prisoners' lobby organization also has asked Texas Gov. White to grant a 30-day reprieve. White said he would announce his decision today.

During more than five years of appeals, Barefoot's case has been reviewed 11 times and he has won four stays.

On Jan. 25, 1983, he was placed in a holding cell outside Texas' death chamber. But 11 hours before he was to be put to death, the nation's highest court ordered him kept alive so it could decide how much time condemned murderers should have to fight for their lives in federal courts.

Previously, many appeals courts routinely postponed executions until a more leisurely review of an appeal could be made.

But the justices later ruled federal appeals courts do not have to postpone executions of all death row inmates pushing non-frivolous appeals.

Barefoot has refused to give prison officials the names of five people to serve as his witnesses. In interviews at the Texas Department of Corrections' Ellis Unit, Barefoot said God has assured him the execution will be blocked.

Barefoot claims he was set up by two former roommates who were police informants using him to "put a feather in their own caps." He previously served time in prison for cocaine possession in Louisiana and possession of a sawed-off shotgun in Oklahoma.

"I've done a lot of things I'm ashamed of, but I've never done anything that I deserved to die for," he said.

But prosecutors said Barefoot killed LeVin with a single shot at close range and then boasted of his guilty to his roommates. Police following up a tip arrested Barefoot the following day as he got off a bus in Houston. They found in his pocket a pistol that ballistics experts testified was the one used to kill LeVin.

Barefoot has steadfastly maintained his innocence in LeVin's death and said the state will be guilty of the "most premeditated of murders" if he is executed.

"My heart is right with the Lord," he said. "I know I'm going to heaven when I die, be it today or 40 years from now."

Remembering the big upset Mondale likes to remember

By MIKE FEINSILBER

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If, despite the polls and the conventional wisdom, Walter Mondale wins...

It'll be the greatest presidential election upset since Harry S. Truman beat Thomas Dewey to the surprise of just about everyone in America except Truman himself.

Mondale's well aware of the analogy. He keeps making it. Last week, he toured the farm states — a la HST — and said he could "smell victory in the air."

Truman inherited the presidency when Franklin D. Roosevelt died in 1945 and his nearly four years in the White House were tumultuous — inflation and labor troubles at home, the start of the Cold War abroad.

Democrats at their Philadelphia convention that summer agreed that Truman's situation was hopeless. Republicans had taken control of Congress in 1946 for the first time in 30 years. Democratic Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas even suggested that Truman resign.

Some Democrats searched for an alternative candidate; the popular Dwight D. Eisenhower refused to make himself available for a draft. "I'm just mild about Harry," said signs at the convention hall.

The party split. Former Vice President Henry Wallace, in a break with Truman's anti-communism, formed the leftist Progressive Party and ran as its presidential candidate.

Southerners bolted at the convention over civil rights and nominated Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina — now a senior Republican, then a Democrat — as the Dixiecrat presidential candidate.

But Truman plunged into his hopeless campaign with gusto. He wheeled through in nearly 400 cities and towns, always introducing his wife, Bess, "the boss," and his daughter, Margaret, "the boss' boss."

A supremely confident Republican nominee Thomas E. Dewey, famed as a gang-busting prosecutor and efficient New York governor, wanted to do nothing to jeopardize a sure thing, so he didn't campaign as energetically and in his speeches offered windy platitudes about "national unity."

Truman, on the other hand, went after "that do-nothing 80th Congress" at every stop.

He was so under-financed he was sometimes cut off the radio in mid-speech for non-payment. Once in Oklahoma City, his staff had to take up a collection to get his train out of the station. His crowds were big and enthusiastic, but reporters on the train put that down to people's natural desire to see a sitting president.

Special city commission meeting Tuesday

Pampa city commissioners have scheduled a special meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday with an executive session to discuss approved pay raises for city employees.

In the adopted operating budget for fiscal 1984-1985, the commissioners approved about $214,000 in budgeted salaries for last year, representing about a 6.4 percent increase in salary funds.

The commissioners will discuss the allocation of those funds this week to establish the pay raises for city employees.

The pay hikes have not shown up on employee checks yet, awaiting the allocation, according to Allyn Moore, acting city manager.

In previous meetings Mayor Calvin Whatley had stated the increases were needed "in all fairness" for the employees to stay abreast of cost of living increases.

No pay raises except for normal merit increases have been made for the past two years.

The city budget also provides for increases in retirement benefit funds and similar fringe benefits. Of the 8.3 percent increase in the current budget over last year, the salary and benefits funds hikes account for 8.1 percent.

Traffic panel will discuss street signs for 25th street

The city's Traffic Committee will discuss the street signs on 25th Street during its regular meeting at 12:30 p.m. Nov. 6 at the Coronado Inn.

T. R. Kelley, chairman, said the committee will hear presentations on whether 25th St. should be made into a through-street.

Currently stop signs and yield signs are placed along the street, but the committee has received a request to consider the through-street designation, Kelley said.

One representative from each side will be speaking at the meeting on whether the signs should remain as they are now or should be changed. Since the meeting will only last a half hour, each representative will be limited to 10 minutes.

No action will be taken by the committee at this meeting, Kelley said. The committee will consider the matter later.

If the committee decides to accept the through-street status for 25th, then the members will make a recommendation to the city, he said.

Marijuana growing declines in East Texas, officials say

HOUSTON (AP) — Three years ago, marijuana was one of East Texas' most profitable crops, but lawmen say they're finding less and less of the leafy illegal plant in the region's 11 million acres of piney woods.

Some officials attribute the decline in marijuana seizures to increased surveillance, but others say law officers are simply receiving fewer tips.

"I truly believe that it isn't on the decline," said Sgt. H.L. Erwin of the Texas Department of Public Safety's narcotics division. "I believe it's due to the simple fact of lack of information and lack of manpower."

But Bill Eaves, who directs law enforcement for the Texas Forest Service, said he thinks previous marijuana field raid have deterred those who grow the plant.

"When they get wind that we've found a patch, they shy away from it like a goat would from a butcher knife," Eaves said. "A couple of years ago, we were finding 20 or 30 acres of stuff every week, but it's been six months or so that we've run across one that big."

East Texas' 54 counties have some 11 million acres of piney woods, said Bruce Miles, director of the Texas Forest Service at Texas A&M University. About 60 percent of that land is privately owned; about one-third belongs to lumber and paper companies; and the remaining seven percent is owned by state, federal or other government agencies.

"In 1981, marijuana was the 'No. 2 cash crop in East Texas, after pine trees. But this year it's way down the line," Angelina County Sheriff Sammy Leach said in a Houston Post article published Sunday.

Some of the reasons law officers cited for the decreased seizures include pine beetle infestation, growth of pine seedlings that block out sunlight for marijuana plants, increased searches by officials and drier weather — which is less favorable for marijuana plant growth.

"It seems like our marijuana problem has really slowed down in the past year," Tyler County Sheriff Leon Fowler said. "I've told my deputies that either we've slacked off or they've slacked off. I don't know which."

Although several East Texas investigators reported seizing less marijuana so far this year, marijuana seizures increased 180 percent in national forests in Texas during the same period.

Man kneeling with bible is found months after death

DALLAS (AP) — Wesley Whalon was a loner who frequently left town without telling anyone. So, when he disappeared 10 months ago, his sister thought he had gone back to his sinful ways since being "saved" by the Lord.

What Dorothy Williams didn't know was that her brother had died Christmas Eve. His body was found kneeling, cupping a Bible in his hands, authorities said.

Whalon, 55, was a former taxi driver who drank and smoked heavily most of his life. But in early January 1983, Whalon heard the word of the Lord and became a changed man, his sister said.

And she believed him.

"I knew he was saved," she said. "He had changed tremendously. He didn't drink and smoke — did not use profanity at all."

As a result, the two grew closer.

"He would call me every day at 5 o'clock and tell me to go get my Bible because he had something to say to me," Mrs. Williams told the Associated Press Sunday, a day after her brother's funeral.

Whalon's body was found Oct. 16 at his Dallas suburb home in Oak Cliff. His decomposed body was found on his knees. He held a Bible. He had died around Christmas time last year of heart disease, the Dallas Medical Examiner's Office has ruled.

He was Dallas native with six children from three different marriages and he was separated from his third wife, his sister said.

Mrs. Williams, 51, said she last saw her brother on Christmas Eve — her birthday — when the two of them went to visit her mother in a nursing home in nearby Pittsburg, Texas, and returned to Dallas for dinner.

She said it was the first time her brother and mother had seen each other in more than three years.

"They had a happy reunion," Mrs. Williams said.

She said her brother seemed like a different man that night, unlike the "know-it-all" of times past.

"He was very quiet. He didn't talk to nobody unless they said something to him first," she said.

She took him home that night and never heard from him again.

Mrs. Williams said she often went to her brother's house during the 10 months that he was missing. She said she peered through the windows, but could see nothing. She even asked neighbors and friends, who only asked her if she, in turn, had seen her brother.

"I think it was very strange they found him in the house I had been to 80 or 90 times," Mrs. Williams said. "I just didn't want to break the law."

Meanwhile, the grass in front of his yard turned to weeds and the mail stacked up.

Mrs. Williams had intuitions where her brother might be. She said she did not want to break into her brother's house because she didn't want any trouble from Dallas authorities.

She thought her brother had taken off to Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., and didn't bother to tell her.

"He had been talking about things he was going to do," she said.

She also thought that he may have gone back to his old ways and had taken the attitude of "no news is good news" if he didn't call.

She went to Parkland Hospital with a picture of her brother, thinking he might have had a stroke and couldn't talk. Hospital officials had never seen him, she said. She also went to the cab stands he usually worked, but couldn't find him.

"Nobody seemed to know where he was," said Mrs. Williams, who was in Corpus Christi in South Texas when told her brother's body had been found by men who worked for a mortgage company who had a lien on the house.

"I was just numb," she recalled her initial reaction. "I said, 'Oh God I knew he must have been somewhere where he couldn't contact me.'"

SIX FOUND DEAD—Ambulance personnel bring one of the six men found dead in a wrecked car in West Dallas Sunday afternoon up the bank of the West Fork of the Trinity River. The men, estimated by police to have been dead for six to nine hours, were found in a car that had smashed into the river bank under the Loop 12 overpass. (AP Laserphoto)

Six are killed in car wreck

DALLAS (AP) — Four brothers, their brother-in-law and a friend were killed instantly when their car left the road, sped between two bridges, got to a cement embankment and was airborne for 200 feet before nosediving into the Trinity River bed.

The bodies of the six men were discovered about 12:30 p.m. Sunday by two boys and their grandfather, who were looking for aluminum cans.

They were identified as Jose Guerrero, 27, the driver; Felipe Guerrero, 34; Salomon Guerrero, 23; Victor Guerrero, 28; Antonio Palacios, 34, their brother-in-law; and Gabriel Perez, 43.

The six lived at the same house in nearby Irving, authorities said.

The vehicle was traveling north on Loop 12 when it left the roadway, traveled on a median for about 500 feet and crossed between two bridges, got to a cement embankment and was airborne for 200 feet before nosediving into the Trinity River bed.

"The driver was either real tired or real drunk," said investigating officer T.G. Hershberger. "We won't know what happened until we get the blood test."

Hershberger said three men were in the front seat and three in the back seat of the light blue 1979 Ford Thunderbird. He estimated they had been dead between six to nine hours.

"It's been a while since we've seen a car wreck like this ... the impact ... the drama ... and the sheer number," said Mike Darst, a field agent for the Dallas County Medical Examiner who was at the scene.

Darst said the victims probably died on impact.

"They probably died of multiple injuries, but at this point we can't really tell," said Darst.

It took Dallas police and emergency medical personnel about two hours to free the bodies from the demolished car.

"We came over there and saw those people," said James Denney, 11, one of the boys who found the wreckage. "I said, 'There's someone dead over there.'"

Some changes were made

There have been numerous changes in the production of a newspaper since I first walked into the newsroom of The Pampa News 29 years ago this week.

No, I haven't spent all of those 29 years at this newspaper, although all of those years have been spent with papers in the Freedom newspaper group. I have been back this time, my third sojourn in Pampa, for nearly four years.

When I first started here in 1955 I was one of two reporters and also fulfilled the duties of staff photographer. Now we have three reporters and a full-time photographer.

In the old days the photographer carried around a heavy, 4 by 5 (inches that is) Speed Graphic camera which took pictures on single sheets of film. When these individual sheets of film were processed, the photographer (me) developed the pictures and then made engravings on blue plastic on a machine called a Scan-a-graver.

This machine, which used to sit just outside the darkroom door and near my desk in the newsroom, utilized a vibrating, heated needle to engrave the picture's image onto the plastic. This image was later impressed into a mat in the composing room to transfer the photo to the plate used on the printing press. More about this later.

Today the photographer uses sophisticated, electronic 35 mm. cameras and can expose and develop up to 36 images on a single roll of narrow film. When the prints (photographs) are made his task is done as the engravings are now made in the camera room on a large camera which also makes the negatives for the printing plate of each page of the newspaper.

The reporting part of my duties 29 years ago were much the same as those of the reporters of today. But, assembling of the facts are somewhat different. Back then I wrote the stories on an old upright manual typewriter — I think I'm still using the same typewriter today to write out the headlines so they can be set on a machine in the composing room.

After I finished the stories and they were edited by the editor 29 years ago, the copy was sent to the composing room where a "puncher" transferred them one letter at a time to a punched tape. This tape, which was a series of coded symbols, was later placed on a Linotype machine which used molten lead to form each line of type.

These lines of type, along with the headlines which were set on other machines using molten lead, were placed inside a metal frame, called a chase, which was on a heavy metal table, called a "turtle." Oh, the frustration in those days when a page of type was accidentally dumped on the floor and thousands of pieces of metal had to be reassembled into a page.

When all of the metal type was finally in place, the page was placed on a large machine where an impression of the type was made on a special mat. This mat was then placed on another machine where it was curved into a half-circle which was taken to a large casting mold where more molten lead was poured against it to form the half-circle plate used on the large printing press which eventually spewed forth the finished newspaper.

Today the reporters, as I am doing preparing this column, compose their stories on the screen of a computer terminal. Corrections and changes in the story are easier to make in the copy than in the old days when a pencil was used to make changes on the typewritten copy.

Back then a proofreader read the stories after they were set in type to find errors. Today the person editing the copy must find all of the mistakes as the copy is now set electronically on a machine using paper similar to that used for photographs — no one is reading the copy after the computer sends it to the typesetting machine.

The excess paper is trimmed from the various stories and they are "pasted" onto a sheet of paper the size of each page of the newspaper. When each page is completed it is placed on a large camera where a negative is exposed. When this negative is dry, it is placed on a machine which exposes the image onto a photo-sensitive sheet of thin metal which is then processed much like a photograph and placed on the off-set press to print the paper.

But, even this modern method of producing a newspaper is in the process of being changed. Some of the larger newspapers in this country are now experimenting with a new process called "pagination."

This new method utilizes the latest capabilities of computers to prepare all of the advertising and news content of the paper, along with the photographs, within the computer.

When everything is completed in the computer, one of the editors calls up the pages which contain the advertising and inserts the stories, headlines and pictures into that page. When it meets the editor's satisfaction he pushes a button on the comp: or terminal, which instructs the computer to send that page to a special machine which automatically produces the engraved metal plate used on the press. Being one of the smaller papers it will probably be some time before this process will be used in Pampa.

But, while there has been many changes in production of a newspaper since I first started at The Pampa News 29 years ago, some things are basically the same.

Reporters must still gather the facts and write the stories; the photographer must still take the pictures and make the prints; and editors still edit the copy, decide which of the stories go on each of the pages and write the headlines. Machines haven't been able to replace us. YET!

Ousted Smith County sheriff running again

TYLER, Texas (AP) — J.B. Smith, ousted as Smith County sheriff in 1982 by a jury, is asking the citizens of the county to return him to that office.

Smith, 41, faces Republican Andy Andrews, 48, owner of a Tyler polygraph firm and one of Smith's former political supporters in the general election. Smith defeated two other Democratic candidates, including the sheriff who had been appointed to replace him, in the primary election.

Smith blamed his troubles, which included indictments on a variety of charges and a civil suit to remove him from office, on a vendetta by Tyler's "elite" and courthouse enemies.

The former sheriff, who was elected to the post two times before his removal, says the vendetta resulted from two incidents.

One involved the arrest of about 70 young people, including some from prominent families, at a beer party in a pasture. The other involved his criticism after drug charges had to be dismissed against several people when it was learned that the undercover agents whose work led to the arrests were involved in misconduct.

"The best form of linguistics to use to describe the courthouse is, it needs an enema," Smith said when he filed for re-election.

State District Judge Glenn Phillips issued a statement the next day, saying in a written statement, "I learned a long time ago to not get in an argument with an egotistical paranoiac who is a liar and a fool. That boy J.B. falls in all three categories."

Andrews is quick to concede that Smith overshadows all other issues in the campaign.

"He has such notoriety. Everybody has heard his name. You have to discuss all his shenanigans before you can discuss your own plans for office," Andrews told The Dallas Morning News.

Smith's legal problems began in July, 1981 when he was indicted by a Smith County grand jury on several charges, including allegations that he had deputies patrol a Tyler apartment complex in exchange for a free apartment for his girl friend, that he made personal use of county equipment and that he attempted to burn the car of a man who had burned a county vehicle.

The foreman of the grand jury then filed a civil suit calling for Smith's removal from office because of official misconduct.

Smith's lawyers went to federal court and won dismissal of the criminal charges by claiming they resulted from a feud between Smith and the district attorney's office.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans overturned the federal court ruling, saying that the state cases could be prosecuted because the federal court had no right to interfere.

All the criminal indictments were later dropped, some because of legal faults and some because witnesses declined to testify.

A jury eventually heard the civil case alleging official misconduct and found him guilty of accepting the rent-free apartment. Smith, who had been suspended from office, was then permanently removed.

The removal suit wound up in the Texas Court of Civil Appeals and Texas Supreme Court where courts ruled first in his favor and later against him.

He had been removed from office, but had not been convicted of any crime, setting the stage for his re-election campaign.

Joe Tunnell, Smith's lawyer, says he doesn't want to discuss the criminal cases anymore.

"All legal problems are concluded. We're not in the courtroom anymore. We're in the political arena," Tunnell said. "He is running on the basis of his qualifications for sheriff."

Smith thinks the long legal battle has made him even more popular with the voters.

"They like the idea that I am a fighter and I fight for what is right," Smith said.

But Andrews, a former Texas Department of Public Safety officer, is confident that most Smith County residents will vote for him.

"It's not so much a vote for me as it is a vote against J.B. Smith," Andrews said. "The voters may not know me, but they sure know J.B. Smith."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Free marketplace shows its worth

Airline deregulation had its casualties, as it was expected to. The industry was shot through with inefficiencies encouraged by years of government regulation of routes and fares. Forced to compete for travel dollars that were shrinking with the recession that began in 1980, some airline companies flew straight into bankruptcy or saw their identity disappear in mergers.

But deregulation clearly has had a positive side, and it is highly evident in the sight of United Airlines breaking out of the clouds. United lost $235 million in 1979, and in ensuing years began to waver in its long-held top position in the domestic market. The challenge of the new hub-and-spoke concept of air routes found United locked into too many long-haul flights and not enough regional feeder routes. Fare wars began eating into its earnings. Its management was slow to adjust to the competitive environment.

Now, according to The Wall Street Journal, United has turned things around. It has developed its own hub-and-spoke system feeding flights into Chicago, Denver and San Francisco. The airline has increased the number of cities it serves by one-third. It has adopted fare plans that appear to be preventing a serious loss of business to scrappy new airlines offering cut-rate fares.

Significantly, United has streamlined its work force, reducing payroll positions by 20 percent and convincing its labor unions of the necessity of making wage concessions when survival is at stake. New employees are now starting at lower scales than they did under previous contracts. An officer of the International Association of Machinists told Business Week magazine last summer: "United has really educated the employee group. They know that this is capitalism, so if the company doesn't make money, it doesn't stay in business."

It's not traditional capitalism when government guarantees exclusive markets to a company, which is how our regulated airline system ran for many years. The unregulated marketplace in which United Airlines and others are now competing is the kind that makes individual companies, and national economies, healthy.

How the liberals go wrong

When Walter "Moondale" battered President Reagan with a barrage of negative and frequently specious charges in the first debate, I wondered why Reagan didn't simply ask: "Mr. Moondale, if my policies are as bad as you say, how come the American economy is now the strongest in the Free World?"

Mondale's own surtax - agenda shows he knows nothing about the way the economy works, or how tax rates affect job and business growth.

This is why he and virtually all liberal economists wrongly predicted that U.S. unemployment would stay high at more than 8.5 percent until late 1985. They were right about high - tax Mondalian Canada, where unemployment is still at 11 percent - but dead wrong about tax - cutting, supply - side America which has just had the two fastest job - growth years in modern history.

One reason is that over 80 percent of all new jobs are created by companies with less than 100 employees. And the last four years (1981 - 1984 inclusive) have seen 2.4 - million new business formations, the greatest new business boom in U.S. history.

Propelling this explosion has been the 60 - percent reduction in capital tax rates beginning with the late Rep. William Steiger's (R. - Wis.) capital gains tax cut in 1978, and culmination in Reagan's 1981 ERTA tax cuts - both opposed by Mondale.

Since 90 percent of the taxes paid by new and small businesses come from their owner's personal income tax returns, it is no surprise that these tax cuts have produced an entrepreneurial and jobs boom which liberals can't understand.

At the San Francisco convention, Senator Edward Kennedy (D - Mass) railed about 35,000 business bankruptcies. He said nothing about the 600,000 new businesses formed in 1983, or the near-record 566,000 new businesses formed during the recession of 1982 - or the 665,000 new - business formation rate for 1984.

After all, it was Kennedy who stopped new equity capital formation cold in 1969 by getting Congress and the president to double the capital gains tax to 49 percent, the highest in the world. By 1977, new equity issues had dropped more than 90 percent in seven years, a sickening plunge in the entrepreneurial spirit. The same thing would happen again under Mondale's surtax.

Demand - side liberals, who worry only about "protection" and "security," don't understand such a dynamic economy, in which rapid business formation also produces high numbers of business failures, and rapid innovation causes "creative destruction" of old capital. This is why Houston, Texas, with the nation's fastest - growing economy also has the highest business - failure rate - the freedom to fail being the flip side of the freedom to succeed.

Japan (with the lowest tax rates on capital formation in the world) has also had a much higher rate of business failure than the U.S. or Europe, but its economy has grown three times as fast.

But, the real difference between Reagan and Mondale is that the former looks at the economy through "micro" lenses, seeing it as the aggregate result of INDIVIDUALS, businesses, and markets, responding dynamically to incentives either for or against growth. Mondale sees the economy as a "macro - machine" manipulated by central government for the re - distribution of wealth, not its production; the protection of jobs, not their creation.

George Gilder defines this Mondalian view in his luminous new book, "The Spirit of Enterprise," as "capitalism without capitalists." He best illustrates his analysis with his chapter on "The Cuban Miracle" in which he describes how in the early 1960s more than 300,000 Cubans - most arriving with nothing more than the shirt on their backs - transformed a depressed city economy, and confounded the demand - side economists.

Gilder writes, "For the economy of Miami, 1961 was a grim year. The arrival of the Cubans seemed a deadly blow to the city's hope for recovery. Experts foresaw a prolonged age of medical crises, economic stresses and...a teeming burden of 'social disorders,' needs for housing, welfare...an impossible load for the already afflicted social services of the city."

But, Gilder documents, "The Cubans would be saved...not chiefly by the trickle down of grants from government, but by the surge of their own productive efforts."

By 1980, not only did Miami become one of the nation's strongest city economies, but the Cubans dominated it, owning more than 10,000 businesses with the highest per - capita income of any ethnic group. Brookings Institution sociologist Robert Bach called it "one of the fastest...urban transformations in U.S. history."

As Gilder notes, "Not only did the Cubans solve the problems that their arrival precipitated; they created jobs for hundreds of thousands of other Americans. Not only did they revive Miami's stagnant inner city; they transformed the entire Miami economy..."

The "demand - side" doomsayers who wrongly predicted Miami's downfall shared the "Mondale" vision of "human beings essentially as mouths, but not as minds - as consumers of goods - but not producers of them, as users of jobs, but not as creators of new work."

This, it seems to me is the real Reagan - Mondale difference. One understands this "spirit of enterprise" - the other doesn't really know it exists.

Legacy

In this feature we excerpt material that has appeared on Freedom Newspapers editorial pages in previous years, whether from the editorials or the columns written by many years by Freedom founder R.C. Holles.

It is hard for me to see how a man who wants no one to have any special privileges and for all men to be equal before the law and have equal rights to pursue happiness could rationally be regarded as selfish.

On the other hand, it seems to me that the man who wants to have laws passed that favor some people at the expense of others is selfish. If he were not selfish, he would want to help the unfortunate himself directly rather than use the power of the police club to make someone else help the unfortunate according to his ideas.

It seems to me that the man who wants to force someone else to give assistance is the really selfish person—he is the person who is the cause of bigger and bigger governments interfering with people getting all they produce.

Religion, politics always mix

In our country - in most countries - religion and politics are inseparable, always have been.

Priests, pastors and rabbis involved themselves in the anti - war campaign of McGovern, the civil - rights position of Humphrey - nor were they the first.

A.D. Clovis, King of the Franks, victorious over Alamanni, accepted the Nicene Creed, invoked the God of the Christians.

And he had his armies marched to the river in battalions and baptized by platoons.

Three thousand pagans thus "came across" in one afternoon.

Two thousand years ago, Americans have equated "patriotism and God" since the first politicians.

Nor is the present power struggle ours alone. Pope John Paul in Central America declares church over state authority when it comes to abortion, divorce, church schools.

In Washington, urging legalizing abortion, is the National coalition of American Nuns.

In Britain, the Church of England has broken centuries of apolitical tradition, challenging that government on its handling of the coal miners' strike.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Robert Runcie, spiritual head of 64 million Anglicans, says, "It is impossible for the church not to be involved in politics."

Here at home, how can one imagine that religion and politics need not overlap when ballot - box issues include school prayer, abortion, tax relief for private schools?

More than any other factor presently pulling Americans apart on this issue is the more than ever intrusion into politics of religious conservatives who, under the leadership of Jerry Falwell, have become both powerful and overt.

This worries Norman Lear who fears

"fundamentalists want to impose their religious views on others."

History says it can happen. Any faction which becomes too powerful - including any church - demands conformity.

But conversely, any society without a living body of beliefs is vulnerable to moral, social and cultural decay.

It's the cartoonists who are best able to reduce such an issue to its right size.

The Copley cartoonist Steve Kelly pictures Walter Mondale, Jesse Jackson and Jimmy Carter standing side - by - side.

Carter is wearing a born - again lapel button. Mondale is saying, "Republicans just don't respect the separation of Church and State."

Jesse Jackson is saying, "Amen, brother Mondale."

Carter is saying, "Hallelujah!"

A sour note on sugar

The U.S. government struck another blow the other day for unrest in our Central American and Caribbean backyard.

It cut the quota for sugar imports to 2.7 million tons for the next fiscal year, 16 percent and about 5 million tons under what it had been.

It doesn't seem that the move will affect you. You won't pay any more for sugar at the supermarket as a direct result. But it virtually guarantees - and this is its purpose - that you won't pay any less.

It is devastating news, however, for Central American and Caribbean sugar-producing countries. The impact on them is not unlike the effect the Carter administration's embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union had on American grain producers. In many cases, it's worse.

Already on the economic ropes as a consequence of depressed world agricultural prices, these countries must now find what other markets they can at drastically lower prices for their unexpected surpluses.

Consider the Dominican Republic, a showcase of pro-Americanism, which has enjoyed the largest quota share and so will suffer most. Sugar accounts for 40 percent of total exports.

In supersensitive Central American, sugar plays a lesser but still significant economic role in Costa Rica, El Salvador and Guatemala.

The quota system was originally devised to stabilize a highly volatile market. By eliminating boom-and-bust cycles it supposedly works to the advantage of all sugar suppliers. But the primary beneficiaries have been high-cost U.S. producers who would be squeezed out of a completely free market by the foreign competition.

The system in essence is plain old-fashioned protectionism. As such, even the good news has been bad news.

The underdeveloped Caribbean and Central American producers have been guaranteed at least a share of the U.S. market at well above world prices, but this has encouraged them to become overly dependent upon that one market.

Sugar is only part of that story of dependence. It has been repeated to one degree or another and by one means or another in country after country with coffee, cotton and bananas, as told in depressing detail by Walter LaFeber in "Inevitable Revolutions," a history of how the United States has compounded its problems with the hemisphere to its south for more than a century.

Quota adjustments are supposed to be automatic, set according to production expectations to maintain a fixed price, currently 22 cents a pound. Compare that to a world price of about 5 cents and you get an idea of how important a share of the U.S. market is.

Technically, therefore, Washington's policymakers can say that politics has nothing to do with the quota. Actually, that's not the case.

Quota shares can be and are being used as weapons for purely political reasons.

Polish Sausage Festival set for Sunday, Nov. 4

The seasoning has been mixed, sausage stuffed in casings and smoked for the 47th annual Polish Sausage Festival in White Deer on Sunday, Nov. 4, in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, one block east of Main Street. More than 6,700 pounds of the Polish delicacy is being prepared for an expected 2,500 persons who attend the festival annual from a 250-mile radius of this small farming community west to Pampa, says Proxie Warminski, member of the publicity committee. Each year additional sausage has been made to accommodate the demands of people buying sausage for the holidays. The sausage will be served barbecued on mesquite wood or steamed in the traditional Polish way accompanied by slaw, red beans, and apricots. Serving time will be from 11:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. Pre-dinner orders on bulk sausage are now being accepted by calling Stephen Warminski at 883-5431. Proceeds from the sausage sale will go for parish needs and charitable purposes. White Deer is the only Polish-oriented community in the Texas Panhandle.

Altrusa to host flea market

The Altrusa Club of Borger is to host a flea market from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., Nov. 3 and 4, at the Bunavista Community Center on Highway 136. The flea market is to feature a wide variety of merchandise including ceramics, art, antiques and collectables, jewelry, guns and handcrafted items. A unique selection of original design holiday decorations and gifts for all ages will also be there. Dealers are to come from Texas, New Mexico and Minnesota. The Altrusa Club of Borger is to have a food concession, serving homemade chili, barbecue sandwiches, cornbread, pies and other desserts. A few table spaces are available for rent. Anyone interested in display space may call Pam Sessions at 273-7741. All proceeds from table rent and food concession is to further the Altrusa Club's community service projects. Current projects include the ongoing financial support of Buttercup House Day Care Center, sponsoring the annual Senior Citizens Bazaar and providing vocational training to improve their self image as well as their position in the job market.

Dear Abby

Blackmail has become a part of Halloween's black magic

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Those who presumably worry about their children who are out trick-or-treating on Halloween should take a lesson from my mother and her friends. They never had to worry. We stayed home because she and her neighbors would toss the best party of the year—next to Christmas. They did this with little effort, permitting the children to do most of the work and planning. Hot dogs, hamburgers, soft drinks, cookies and cakes were in bountiful supply. We played games, bobbed for apples and received prizes for our costumes. Growing up in a small town (population about 9,000), I never heard of trick or treat until I moved to Washington, D.C. We didn't have to worry about poisoned candy, pins and razor blades in apples, or the threat of being lured into the home of a stranger to be molested. I personally despise the custom of trick or treat and refuse to condone it by encouraging children to come to my door. Call me Scrooge. Fortunately, more parents in my part of the country are beginning to see the sense in block parties on Halloween. I hope it catches on and replaces the deplorable custom of sending children out to beg for treats.

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: You hit upon something that has troubled me for a number of years. The very principle of trick or treat is pure and simple blackmail: "If you don't give me a treat, I will play a trick on you"—the "trick" being anything from overturning garbage cans, soaping (or breaking) windows, or doing serious damage to property. This kind of vicious and anti-social behavior should not be tolerated. Most police departments must call in extra hands on Halloween to patrol the streets in an effort to protect private and public property. What began years ago as a harmless holiday, celebrated by telling children scary ghost stories about imaginary witches, goblins and spirits, has turned into legalized blackmail. Halloween has become scarier than ever, and I vote for abolishing the custom of trick or treat. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I have been a resident in a nursing home for many years. My mind is sound, but my body is badly crippled. My wife visits me every day without fail. She has never neglected me and I know she loves me very much. I've always encouraged her to have a little social life, but every time she goes to dinner with a gentleman, and the employees here at the home see her, they think it is their "duty" to rush in and report to me that they saw my wife with another man. I am aware of what is going on, and I do not have to be reminded of my incapability to do things for her. Why, oh why, can't these people keep their big mouths shut? I'll bet others have this problem, too. If you print this, it will probably go up on a lot of bulletin boards. Thank you for listening.

FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Some people are more thoughtless than malicious. I hope this reminds those who carry tales to use their heads.

DEAR ABBY: Single American women shouldn't complain about the "Ms." title. In Australia an unmarried woman—be she 18 or 80—is officially listed as a "spinster" on her passport!

Condos, co-ops differ

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I hate to say it, but I don't understand when people keep talking about condominiums, cooperatives and town houses. I don't understand what the differences are.

Is there a difference between a condominium and a cooperative? If so, could you explain them in language I can understand? — J.P., TWIN FALLS, IDAHO.

DEAR J.P. — Sure, why not! In the case of a condominium, you actually own the wallpaper in your apartment. That wallpaper is yours, the floor is yours — you actually own it. You also have an interest in the common areas. For example, you and the other owners of the condominiums in your development all have a common interest in the lobby (and usually, but not always, the recreation area), driveways and parking lots.

The cooperative is much different. In the cooperative you don't own your walls, ceiling, floor or driveway, for that matter. You own nothing but shares in a corporation that owns your building.

For example, suppose there were 100 apartments in your building, 50 of them at 1,000 square feet and 50 of them at 2,000 square feet. The apartment shares might be as follows: one share for each person in the smaller unit and two shares for each person in the larger unit for a total of 150 shares. This way each shareholder would be assessed according to the amount of space he or she occupies. Or in the simple illustration I have given, the larger apartment would be assessed for common charges — taxes, maintenance, fuel and so forth — at double the amount the smaller apartment would be assessed. Now, this is the fundamental difference between cooperatives and condominiums.

More and more people are buying into cooperatives and condominiums. A few years ago it was uncommon. Today, it's a very common vehicle, particularly for that first home.

You also mentioned town houses. This generally refers to the type of construction as opposed to the legal nomenclature. The town house is a takeoff on the old brownstones one might see in older cities in the country which, except for the corner houses, are attached on both sides to its neighbors.

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS — I have my home, which is worth about $75,000, insured for fire for $75,000. Now my agent has told me about another form of insurance called "replacement value."

The policy I have now is called "fair market value." I'm a bit confused as to the difference and which way I should jump. My agent has done his best to explain the difference, but frankly, I don't understand. — D.E., SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR D.E. — All right, let's see if we can get a handle on things.

One of the best ways to illustrate a point is to make the example somewhat outlandish. Suppose you had a 25-room frame home in the country. You might be able to get $50,000 for that home on today's market, but if you were going to rebuild it after it was destroyed, it might cost as much as $200,000 to replace.

The first number would be the fair market value — the amount of money that house would have sold for had it not been destroyed. The second number is the replacement value — the dollars required to put another house back on the lot exactly like the one destroyed.

As you see in my example, frequently the numbers are very far apart. Which number is best for you? That's another question. You might not want to replace the 25-room house with a similar 25-room house and then again, you might. The difference between the two coverages is what it would cost to actually build a new home identical to the one that was destroyed, as opposed to the actual value of it in the marketplace.

Now that you know the difference, pick the one that serves you best.

Write to Bruce Williams in care of this newspaper. Volume of mail prohibits personal responses. Questions of general interest will be answered in this column. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Broncos' Karlis celebrates winning kick

Success may not save White

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Danny White doesn't have it made, yet. White's 1984 debut as the starting Dallas Cowboys' quarterback bordered on the sensational in a 22-3 National Football League victory on Sunday over the Indianapolis Colts.

But Coach Tom Landry refused to make White's new No. 1 status permanent.

White threw touchdown passes of 38 yards to Tony Hill and 5 yards to Doug Cosbie. He was on target with 21 of 32 passes for 262 yards.

The Cowboys' record increased to 6-3 and with the New York Giants' win over the Redskins, the Cowboys see themselves tied for first place in the NFC East with St. Louis. The Colts, meanwhile, dropped to 3-6.

But did White win the job over

Gary Hogeboom for the New York Giant game next week?

Not necessarily.

"I've said all along that I have two starting quarterbacks," said Landry. "I will use 'em when I feel like using them. If I feel like using Gary next week I'll use him."

Landry added, "Danny made a lot of good decisions because of his experience. He did exactly what I thought he would do. Still Gary did a great job in the first half of the season."

White, who played on a sprained ankle, said he would just wait and see.

"I hope I didn't have anything to prove but maybe I did to some people," said White. "It was fun doing it."

Landry said he would rather be able to name a permanent No. 1 quarterback.

"I don't like having to answer questions about it all week," Landry said. "I'd rather not have to worry about it. But it's important to do what we have to do to win games."

White's performance came as no surprise to Kush.

"He's always been a big play quarterback," said Kush, who coached White at Arizona State. "He was just like he has always been."

White said, "I'll take it. I felt very comfortable, good and relaxed. I couldn't move as good as I could."

The Cowboys activated punter John Warren for the game so White wouldn't be bothered with that duty.

He said he would be disappointed if he didn't get to start again.

"I don't know if this is a one game shot or not and only Coach Landry knows," White said. "He'll let us know. I'm just ready to do anything I can to help this team."

Tony Hill, one of White's biggest detractors who said he didn't serve up "medicine ball" passes, caught 8 balls for 125 yards.

"That's all water over the bridge," said Hill.

The Cowboys played conservatively in the second half after building a 13-0 lead at intermission.

Rafael Septien kicked three short field goals after Colt mistakes.

The Colts' only shining moment came on a 44-yard pass from Mark Herrmann to fullback Randy McMillan in the fourth period.

It setup a 52-yard field goal by Raul Allegre to prevent a Dallas shutout.

The game also marked a comeback for the Cowboy rushing game.

Tony Dorsett rushed for 104 yards on 24 carries for the Cowboys. It was his first 100-yard rushing game since December, 1983, over a period of 12 games.

But the main show was White.

Landry said he'd let everyone know about his starting quarterback situation.

Houston goes down again

HOUSTON (AP) — Cincinnati's Ken Anderson relived an old thrill and running back Larry Kinnebrew discovered for the first time the joys of running against the Houston Oilers.

Anderson has beaten the Oilers in his last six starts, completed 73 percent of his passes over that stretch and set a National League record 20 straight completions in a 1982 game against the Oiler secondary.

Kinnebrew had not plagued the Oilers until Sunday when he scored all four Bengal touchdowns on runs of one, three and one yard and caught an 11-yard touchdown pass from Anderson en route to a 31-13 victory.

Kinnebrew, a last minute replacement for Charles Alexander, didn't even know he would start until shortly before kickoff.

But it was enough time for the second year performer from Tennessee State to prepare for the Oilers.

Anderson completed 18 of 24 passes for 154 yards in his first start in four weeks, but he proved the same nemesis for the Oilers.

After allowing the Oilers to take a 7-0 first quarter lead on Larry Moriarty's one-yard dive, the Bengals scored 17 second quarter points on Kinnebrew's one and three yard runs and Jim Breech's 33-yard field goal.

Houston quarterback Warren Moon started out with six straight completions including a career long 76-yard pass completion to Herkie Walls to set up Moriarty's touchdown from the one.

But Moon was intercepted twice and lost one fumble as the Bengals regained control under Anderson's barrage of short-range passes.

"It was just like all the rest," said Moon, who hit 11 of 18 for 196 yards. "It's more mental than physical. When something goes bad, the guys get down. He have these little mistakes and the momentum drops off."

Denver shocks LA Raiders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The last two times the Denver Broncos visited the West Coast, they weren't happy experiences.

Last year, rookie quarterback John Elway had a hard time getting started against San Diego — in fact, he lined up once behind the guard and cost his team a penalty — and the Broncos went on to lose to the Chargers, 31-7. Against the Seattle Seahawks in the National Football League playoffs, it was another blowout, also by a 31-7 score.

Sunday, however, was different, as the surprising Broncos beat the Los Angeles Raiders 22-19 in a sudden-death overtime thriller on a last-second 35-yard field goal by Rich Karlis.

"It was a great win," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said after the struggle before 91,020 roaring fans in the Los Angeles Coliseum, the largest regular-season crowd in the NFL since Oct. 3, 1954, when 93,621 saw the San Francisco 49ers and Los Angeles Rams play to a 24-24 tie.

The game Sunday dropped the Raiders one game behind the 8-1 Broncos in the American Conference West race with third-place Seattle, 6-2, in action tonight at San Diego.

The Broncos-Raiders game highlighted a day of significant action in the NFL that included Miami's 38-7 victory over Buffalo to improve the Dolphins' record to 9-0 and a 37-13 shocker by the New York Giants over the Washington Redskins.

In other action, it was San Francisco 33, Los Angeles Rams 0; New England 30, New York Jets 20; New Orleans 16, Cleveland 14; Dallas 22, Indianapolis 3; Chicago 16, Minnesota 7; St. Louis 34, Philadelphia 10; Pittsburgh 35, Atlanta 10; Cincinnati 31, Houston 13; Kansas City 24, Tampa Bay 20 and Green Bay 41, Detroit 9.

Dolphins 38, Bills 7

Dan Marino continued his assault on Miami's team record book by passing for 282 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Dolphins over the Bills.

The second-year quarterback broke Bob Griese's single-season passing yardage mark of 2,473 yards late in the first quarter and finished the day with 2,672 yards with seven regular-season games left in the 1984 campaign.

Giants 37, Redskins 13

Joe Morris scored on three short runs and Phil Simms lofted two touchdown passes as the Giants overwhelmed the Redskins, who have played in the Super Bowl the last two seasons.

The victory was the Giants' first over the Redskins in seven games dating back to 1981.

49ers 33, Rams 0

Joe Montana threw for 365 yards and three touchdowns as San Francisco blanked the Rams. Montana completed 21 of his 31 attempts, including a stretch beginning in the second quarter when he hit 13 straight, accounting for 263 yards.

Patriots 30, Jets 20

Craig James ignited New England with a 25-yard third-quarter touchdown burst and quarterback Tony Eason threw five yards to Stephen Starring for the go-ahead score in the fourth period as the Patriots rallied from a 17-point deficit to beat the Jets and give Raymond Berry a victory in his NFL coaching debut.

Saints 16, Browns 14

Morten Andersen kicked a 53-yard field goal despite a driving rain as time expired to boost New Orleans over Cleveland and spoil the NFL debut of Browns' Coach Marty Schottenheimer, the Browns' defensive coordinator who replaced Sam Rutigliano last Monday.

Easy win for Dallas

Mavs continue 'owning' LA

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks coach Dick Motta had plenty of reasons to be pessimistic as his team awaited their game against the Los Angeles Lakers Sunday night.

The Lakers, who fell to the Boston Celtics in last spring's National Basketball Association championship, were coming off a season-opening 113-112 loss to the San Antonio Spurs Saturday night.

"We're on national television (WTBS), it's a full house and (Earvin) Magic (Johnson) loves the big crowds," said Motta. "I thought we were in for a buzzsaw tonight."

Instead, Motta's team led the entire game from the first bucket, went up by as many as 23 points and held off a pair of Laker rallies to take a surprising 107-96 win.

Pampa team in playoff for second

The Pampa High School volleyball team defeated Lubbock Dunbar twice over the weekend to finish district play in a tie for second with Borger.

Pampa and Borger will have a playoff match for second place, with the winner advancing on to the state playoffs. The match is expected to be scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday in Dumas.

The Pampa varsity defeated Dunbar 15-7, 15-8 in the first match and 15-5, 15-8 in the second, finishing district with a 7-3 record and a 21-10 mark for the season.

The local jayvees lost to Dunbar 15-9, 14-16, 7-15 to finish 1-6 in district and 7-18 overall.

Pampa Coach Phil Hall credited his team with a "super effort" against Dunbar. He said the team is playing very well now and was optimistic about its chances of gaining a spot in the playoffs.

on the Mavericks, who busted out to leads of 21-7 and 48-25, he Lakers cut the margin to 5 at 67-62 in the third quarter and with 4 minutes left in the game, they had trimmed it to 95-90 on a Michael Cooper fingerroll.

"We feel confident when we play LA that we can win the basketball game," said Rolando Blackman, who scored 14 points for Dallas, 1-1. "We know that if we can cut down on their fast break points, we can win. If we don't we're out of it."

The Lakers, who eliminated the Mavericks in the Western Conference playoff last May, were able to fast break only sporadically

Jury selection begins in trial of man accused in six deaths

DALLAS (AP) — Jury selection gets underway today in the murder trial of an unemployed Moroccan waiter accused of killing six people and wounding another in a sporadic shooting spree at a posh Dallas nightclub this summer.

Abdelkrim Belachheb, 39, is pleading innocent by reason of insanity in the June 29 incident at Ianni's Restaurant in North Dallas. If convicted, Belachheb faces life in prison. He also faces one charge of attempted murder.

Among the victims was Marcel Ford, 32, a woman who apparently refused Belachheb's advances at the club, setting off the bloody event, which has gone down as the worst mass murder in Dallas' history.

Jury selection is expected to take three weeks.

Besides Ms. Ford, 32, of Grand Prairie, other victims included Linda Lowe, 43, Janice Arbuckle Smith, 46, Ligia Kozlowski, 45, all of Dallas; Frank Lance Parker, of Arlington, and Joseph Minasi, 37, of Garland.

Belachheb knew Ms. Ford, secretary for a Dallas construction firm, and Ms. Lowe, a singer at Farfallo's Restaurant in Dallas, personally, investigators say.

John McNeill, 37, of Garland, owner of a refrigeration firm, was wounded in the attack, but survived.

Witnesses have told the Dallas Times Herald Belachheb had been talking with Ms. Lowe and Ms. Ford moments before the shooting erupted.

The witnesses allege Ms. Lowe had threatened to use her influence to prevent Belachheb from getting a job she had promised to help him get unless he was able to provide her with some cocaine or hashish. The newspaper also reported Belachheb was involved in sexual relationships with both Ms. Lowe and Ms. Ford.

As Belachheb and Ms. Lowe completed their conversation, witnesses said, Ms. Ford suddenly said, "I can't believe I made love to a monkey like you."

The witnesses said as Belachheb started to turn away and leave, Ms. Lowe grabbed him back of his hair and said, "Why don't you leave this lady (Ms. Ford) alone?"

Witnesses differ on exactly what happened next. Some say Belachheb left the restaurant and returned minutes later with a pistol. Others say he reached into his pocket and pulled a 9-mm semi-automatic pistol from his pocket and started walking down the bar, firing into the backs of heads.

Ms. Ford was the first shot, then Ms. Lowe, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Kozlowski were shot, witnesses said. They said he pulled the empty clip from his pistol, re-loaded and began firing again.

Parker and Minasi were then shot and killed and McNeill was wounded before Belachheb fled from the bar. Belachheb was involved in a minor traffic accident as he drove from the restaurant's parking lot.

Dallas police arrested Belachheb without incident later at the home of a friend where he went after eluding an extensive police search of the area.

Prosecutors and defense lawyers involved in the trial have been ordered through a gag order issued by District Judge Gerry Holden Meier not to discuss their cases with reporters.

Belachheb, who is being held in lieu of bonds amounting to $1.7 million, claims he has been on a hunger strike for about two weeks to protest unfair treatment by the judge. She declines comment on the allegation.

Studying pollen specimens has led Bryant to some surprising discoveries about the eating habits of early Texas inhabitants.

"I've seen some where the guy's swallowed an entire rat — whole," he said.

Bryant's work consists of collecting pollen from dirt below the ground and from coprolites, or animal feces.

"There's pollen in almost everything you eat," he said. "Anytime you eat broccoli, cauliflower, you're dealing with the flower of the plant. And your feces will be loaded with pollen."

Bryant said pollen is covered with a tough, durable shell,

Members of the early Texas tribe ate cactus, mesquite bark, flowers, fruit, seeds, nuts and herbs, Bryant said.

OPEC ministers meet for emergency session

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC oil ministers convene an emergency meeting today aimed at preventing a global price war, but maverick member Nigeria declared in advance that it would reject any plan to curb its production or rescind its recent price cut.

A committee of four oil ministers is recommending that the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries try to reach agreement on realigning prices and cutting overall OPEC production by at least 1 million barrels a day to stave off the cartel's second official price reduction in 19 months.

Britain and Norway, neither of them OPEC members, recently announced price reductions, and Nigeria promptly followed suit, breaking ranks with the rest of OPEC.

Many industry analysts have said that if OPEC fails to reach agreement on a production-cutting this week, a wave of price reductions will result, throwing the cartel into disarray and raising the prospect of a widespread oil price war.

None of the oil ministers in Geneva for the emergency OPEC meeting has said publicly how much his country would be willing to cut back to help preserve the cartel's benchmark price of $29 a barrel for Saudi light crude.

But Nigeria's oil minister, Tam David-West, Sunday ruled out joining fellow cartel members in reducing production and also said his country was not ready to rescind the $2-a-barrel price reduction he announced last Thursday.

"I did not come here to negotiate. I came here to listen," David-West said.

He said his OPEC partners understood that Nigeria had to react quickly to Britain and Norway's reductions earlier this month in order to "instill confidence" among the public. The Nigerian government took power in a New Year's Eve coup last year.

Under OPEC rules, member countries are not supposed to change prices without the cartel's unanimous approval, but in practice, several members have offered secret discounts to buyers.

Investigation launched into patrolman's killing

ELK CITY, Okla. (AP) — The investigation continues into the shooting death of Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper Guy Nalley, who was killed after he stopped a truck for speeding.

Nalley was shot to death Saturday night as he waited for a backup unit after it was learned that a trailer being pulled by the truck was stolen, authorities said Sunday.

A man driving a tractor-trailer rig was arrested Saturday night by Elk City police and Beckham County deputies, highway patrol spokesman Lt. Pat Collins said.

The man, whom authorities refused to identify, was lodged in the Beckham County Jail on Sunday. Collins said he didn't know what complaints, if any, had been signed against the man.

"We're not going to release the (man's) name ... until we find out from the district attorney what charges might be filed," Collins said.

Beckham County and Elk City authorities refused comment on the case, referring all queries to Collins.

The trooper "apparently had already had contact with the truck and had stopped it for a speeding violation" prior to the shooting, Collins said.

"His radar unit still had a speed locked on the radar when backup units arrived," Collins said.

Meanwhile, Gov. George Nigh ordered late Saturday that flags throughout the state be flown at half-staff from Sunday until Nalley's funeral. Services will be held at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at the First Baptist Church of Cheyenne.

Nalley was shot twice in the head, officials said. He was found at 8:45 p.m. by the trooper sent to back him up when dispatchers who checked the trailer's license warned that a computer check had shown it to be stolen, Collins said.

Nalley's body was taken to the state medical examiner's office for an autopsy.

Nalley, 29, was a two-year veteran of the Highway Patrol. His fourth child was born this month, Collins said.

"He apparently stopped the truck for some other violation and then ran a check on the tag and was told it was a 'hit,'" Collins said, referring to the computer's report of the stolen trailer. "That's when he was shot."

"As soon as he was given the 'hit' the backup unit was started," Collins said. The backup arrived 15 minutes later, he said.

"We do know he had contact with" the driver of the truck "at one time," Collins said. "He was talking to the unit responding to back him up and advised he was with the suspect."

Collins said he didn't know if Nalley fired his weapon.

The shooting took place about six miles west of U. S. 283 on Oklahoma 6. The trucker was arrested six miles west of Elk City and the trailer was discovered one mile east of Berlin in northeastern Beckham County.

Only one person was in the truck, Collins said. He said he didn't know if the man resisted arrest when he was stopped.
