Barfield first woman executed in 22 years

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Expressing sorrow "for all the hurt that I have caused," a pink pajama-clad Velma Barfield became the first woman executed in the United States in 22 years when she was put to death today for killing her boyfriend with ant poison.

Mrs. Barfield, 52, who passed up a special last meal and snacked on Coca-Cola and Cheez Doodles, was declared dead of a lethal injection at 2:15 a.m. She had offered her organs for transplant, and a team of doctors rushed her body to an unidentified local hospital.

Mrs. Barfield was the third person executed in the United States this week and the 29th since the Supreme Court restored the death penalty in 1976. The last woman executed was Elizabeth Duncan, 54, who died in California's gas chamber in 1962 for arranging the death of her daughter-in-law.

Clad in her own pink cotton pajamas with embroidered collar, Mrs. Barfield was wheeled on a gurney into the death chamber.

"I want to say that I am sorry for all the hurt that I have caused," she said in a final statement. Convicted of one murder, she confessed to killing three other people — her mother and two elderly people who employed her as a live-in housekeeper.

"I know that everybody has gone through a lot of pain, all the families connected and I am sorry, and I want to thank everybody who has been supporting me all these six years," she said.

As the deadly drug began to drip through tubes in her arms, Mrs. Barfield's mouth moved as though she were speaking. She lay still for several minutes, then her color changed from reddish to gray.

Mrs. Barfield "wanted to live very badly ... she never gave up hope until today," her tearful son, Ronnie Burke, said Thursday night.

Families of Mrs. Barfield's victims decided not to come to Raleigh because that was "like licking your chops after you eat."

When the execution began, cheers erupted from pro-death penalty marchers outside Central Prison, where prisoners banged on their cell bars about midnight. Death penalty opponents stood in a quiet vigil nearby.

Mrs. Barfield confessed to putting ant poison in the coffee and beer of St. Pauls farmer Stuart

VELMA BARFIELD

Taylor, who died Feb. 3, 1978, and admitted poisoning her mother and the elderly couple. She said she only wanted to make her victims sick, not kill them.

Sheriff, county attorney contests

Wheeler races are 'friendly'

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer
WHEELER — On city storefronts here, campaign posters for the Democrat and Republican candidates for sheriff are posted side by side.

"It's a local race and we're impartial," says one Wheeler merchant, reflecting the personal nature of the races for Wheeler County sheriff and county attorney. All four candidates for the offices say their opponents are also their friends.

In the race for Wheeler County Sheriff, former deputy Lonnie Miller is running as a Democrat against Republican Jim Adams, a former Amarillo police officer. Republican Jim Fling and Democrat Kent Sims are the candidates for county attorney.

In the May Democrat primary, Miller, who left his job in February, defeated his former boss Sheriff Doyle Ramsey and

Election Preview One of a series

Jim Rushing of Shamrock by taking nearly 70 percent of the vote.

"I'm going to be a working sheriff," Miller said, adding that drug traffic within the county is his greatest concern.

"Right now, it is the main problem facing our kids," he said. "I'll be working on the situation every day."

He said that he'll work closely with the Department of Public Safety and other law enforcement agencies to try to curb the drug traffic.

He also expressed concern about the rising number of kidnappings across the country and said he will "see that an educational program will be in every school two times a year."

"Our kids are the most important thing in Wheeler County," he said. "The safety of our children is a top priority."

One way Miller plans to combat kidnapping and other crimes is a roadblock system using community volunteer fire departments.

"Volunteer fire departments are very important to a community," he said. "I have not talked with a volunteer fireman or a private citizen that is not willing to help."

Pointing out that there are seven unsolved murders across the "imaginary line" in Oklahoma, Miller stressed that communication is important to a sheriff's office.

"The first 30 minutes after a kidnapping are the most important," he said.

"I'd also like to conserve and utilize our budget and the only way to do that is to use the our men to the best of their abilities," he said. There are now four deputies in Wheeler County, two based in Wheeler, one in Shamrock and one in Mobeetie.

A deputy with Wheeler county for four and a half years, Miller said he has training in such matters as criminal investigation, bookkeeping, and police supervision.

"A police department and a sheriff's office are two different worlds," he pointed out. "In a sheriff's office there is so much paperwork. A man with just police experience doesn't know what he's getting into."

"It's the best place to get sued," he added. "Keeping county funds is a big responsibility."

One man Miller would work with if he's elected would be District Attorney Guy Hardin, who recently

Jobless rate stalls at 7.4

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment stood still at 7.4 percent in October as economic growth created nearly 350,000 new jobs — just enough to keep pace with a strong demand, the government said today.

In the last major economic indicator before Tuesday's presidential election, the Labor Department said the stagnant civilian jobless rate left more than 8.4 million people unemployed, as the ranks of those officially categorized as jobless shrank by 29,000.

The total number of employed rose by 347,000, from 105,239,000 to 105,586,000.

The new rate was 0.1 percentage point below that when President Reagan took office in January 1981. The October rate was 0.3 percentage point higher the June rate, the best of Reagan's tenure.

An alternate unemployment rate, which includes the 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, was also unchanged.

Mother indicted in death of baby

A 223rd District Gray County Grand Jury indicted 19 people Thursday, including a 25-year-old Pampa woman charged in connection with the alleged beating death of her 16-month-old daughter.

Linda Armstrong, of 516 N. Starkweather, was indicted on a charge of injury to a child.

Authorities allege that Armstrong fatally injured her child, Valerie Jeannett Sigala, about 6:30 p.m. on Oct. 3.

The toddler was removed from life-support systems and pronounced dead the next day at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo. Armstrong surrendered to Pampa police about five hours after the child succumbed.

She was initially charged with murder in connection with the death and held on a $20,000 bond.

The grand jurors opted to return the injury-of-a-child charge Thursday, rather than some sort of homicide charge. Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton said the prosecutor pointed out that the injury charge is a first-degree felony, punishable by five to 99 years or life in prison, the same penalty provided for murder. ## County again rejects DA's salary request

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer
Gray County Commissioners refused to consider District Attorney Guy Hardin's third attempt to get his secretary a 26-percent pay raise in their regular meeting Thursday.

Commissioners last month rescinded their earlier approval of secretary Debbie Ruttman's $300 monthly raise. The county budget bosses cut the woman back to a five-percent increase.

Hardin has since threatened to move his office to Miami in Roberts County.

In a letter dated Oct. 23, the district attorney once again asked the panel to give the secretary the full raise. Hardin said the county commissioners don't have the authority to turn down or alter his budget.

He said commissioners "must approve our budget if it is reasonable and necessary."

"From what I have read and researched, it (approval of the budget) is not a discretionary thing..." Hardin wrote to County Judge Carl

Kennedy and the commissioners. The district attorney enclosed copies of case law that he says support his position and asked commissioners to "approve the budget as it was originally submitted."

"In the event of your refusal, we will be forced to take whatever steps that are necessary," Hardin wrote.

He also complained about the commissioners' refusing to pay him $270 per month in a salary supplement and their refusing to pay expenses not covered by the state. The DA said the refusal to pay apparently resulted from "some personal grievance toward myself."

"I hope you do not take this as a threat because I can assure you I do not intend it to be; however, I do intend to take whatever steps as may be necessary."

"I have never in all my years in law practice and as a prosecutor gone on crossways or had any serious disagreements with any commissioners' court, with the exception of the one you head. I sincerely regret that this has happened," Hardin concluded his plea. Commissioners talked about the letter Thursday but declined to place the request on their meeting agenda for reconsideration. The issue is closed, they said.

In other action Thursday, commissioners — held a public hearing on the installation of supplemental runway lights on the main strip, 17-35, at the Perry Lefors Airport. The high-intensity landing lights will cost $20,000, according to the proposal. A grant from the Texas Aeronautics Commission will fund 75 percent of the cost, with the county paying the balance.

— accepted a one-year agreement with the U.S. Wildlife Service for the "control" of "predatory" animals, mainly coyotes, in the county. The county will pay the service $700 per month, or $8400 per year, for getting rid of the canine critters.

— approved paying $2,895 to purchase a radar unit for the state highway patrol. The money comes from fines brought into the county treasury by local DPS troopers, Kennedy said.

— ordered the adult probation office and county and district attorneys to submit money from fines, probation fees, attorney's fees and the restitution program directly to the county treasurer. Before the change, the money collected by the offices has been funneled through the county and district clerks. The clerks have held the money until the amount due in a case was paid in full, then turned the funds over to the treasurer. County Clerk Wanda Carter pointed out that she presently has about $30,000 built up from the accumulation of fines and fees submitted by the offices. Kennedy said giving the funds directly to the treasurer will allow the county to earn interest on them.

— appointed Jim Ward as a member of the Panhandle Regional Finance Development Board. The board oversees a program that secures financing for the construction of residential housing through tax-exempt bonds.

fire report

The Pampa Fire Department reported no fire runs in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

CANYON - A former White Deer resident died Wednesday night in a fire at her Canyon apartment.
 Juana Jo Moore, 40, of Canyon, a graduate student at West Texas State University, was pronounced dead at the scene of a fire at the Canyon Crest Apartments, 1310 23rd Street, about 10 p.m. Wednesday.
 Canyon Fire Department officials said Mrs. Moore was found alone in her apartment when firemen arrived to battle the fire, confined to her apartment.
 The fire was under control within 15 minutes after the firemen arrived. No cause for the fire had been determined as of this morning, officials said.

 The Canyon Crest Apartments are fairly new, opening only about six months ago, fire department officials said.
 Graveside services will be at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in the White Deer Cemetery with Rev. Oland Butler, retired United Methodist Minister, officiating. Rev. Ivan Allen of the White Deer First United Methodist Church will assist. Arrangements are under the direction of Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Home of Pampa.
 Born Feb. 14, 1944, in Amarillo, she graduated from White Deer High School in 1962. She attended Texas Tech University at Lubbock, graduating in 1966. She had taught in Amarillo area schools for 11 years before beginning graduate studies at WTSU.

 Mrs. Moore was a member of St. Stephen United Methodist Church in Amarillo.
 Survivors include one daughter, Natalie Ann Essary, Amarillo; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Moore, White Deer; a sister, Linda Germany, White Deer; and grandparents, Mrs. Clyde Moore, White Deer, and Lillie Staack, Borger.
 Memorials may be made to the White Deer High School Memorial Scholarship Fund or the Edna Gladney Home of Fort Worth.

Indictments

said the injury charge saves the state from having to prove the suspect's state of mind.
 A homicide (murder, manslaughter or criminally negligent homicide) conviction hinges on the defendant's state of mind when the crime was committed. Whether a death was caused "intentionally, knowingly, recklessly" or through "criminal negligence" determines the type of homicide.
 A homicide charge that includes a range of offenses from murder to death by negligence could result in a conviction for criminally negligent homicide, a Class A Misdemeanor punishable by a maximum of one year in county jail, Hamilton pointed out.
 Hamilton said he prefers to prosecute Armstrong on the injury charge because it includes no lesser offenses, carries a heavy penalty and avoids the issue of the defendant's state of mind.
 The indictment says the mother caused serious bodily injury to the child by "violently shaking the child and by repeatedly forcing the child's head against a hard surface" in their Pampa home.
 District Judge Don Cain set the accused mother's bond at $15,000.
 Armstrong also was indicted on a charge of theft by check committed on Sept. 15, about two weeks before the alleged beating. The indictment says the woman bought $250 worth of groceries at Furr's supermarket with a personal check written on a closed account. Bond on the theft charge was set at $1,500.

 A Pampa car dealer also was indicted. Jerry Don Mackie, owner of the defunct Jerry Don's Motor Co., 501 S. Cuyler, was charged with theft by deception committed on Sept. 4. According to the charge, Mackie fraudulently sold a car to David Gee. The suspect gave the man a bill of sale to a car he didn't own, according to the charge. Gee had paid the dealer more than $3,000 for a 1977 Chevrolet, the indictment says. Bond on the charge was set at $5,000.
 The Citizens Bank & Trust Co. repossessed the cars on the dealership's lot last month. The action was taken after the dealer locked the doors and dropped from sight, according to a bank official.
 Others indicted by the grand jury Thursday and their charges and bonds include:
 Roy Bright, forgery by making on March 22, bonds totaling $4,000.
 Billy Don Williams, burglary on

Aug. 4, $10,000.
 Neva J. Davis, burglary of a habitation on July 21, $10,000.
 Donna Fitzer, burglary on July 21, $20,000.
 Martha Ferris Jackson Segura, aggravated perjury (committed before a grand jury investigating drugs) on Sept. 11, $5,000.
 Carlos Segura, aggravated perjury (committed before a grand jury investigating drugs) on Sept. 11, $5,000.
 Randal Menefield, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle on July 4, $2,500.
 Stan G. Brown, theft by check on June 22, $10,000.
 Curtis Brown, aggravated assault (causing serious bodily injury to Niles Rhea by striking him with a chair leg) on Aug. 21, $2,500.
 David K. Cook, three separate counts of burglary on July 25, Aug. 20 and Aug. 28, bonds totaling $7,500.
 Michael M. Jones, theft by check on May 17, $5,000.
 Joe Edwards, burglary on Aug. 13, $5,000.
 Joseph Campbell McCloskey, forgery by passing on July 5, $5,000.
 Curtis Wayne Hunt, burglary of a vehicle on Sept. 2, $5,000.
 Laura North, burglary on Aug. 18, $10,000.
 Jerome Bradshaw, unlawful delivery of marijuana on Sept. 1, $10,000.
 Penni Denise Jackson, two separate counts of burglary on Sept. 15 and Sept. 22, bonds totaling $2,000.

State's jobless rate unchanged

DALLAS (AP) - The Bureau of Labor Statistics today reported a slight increase in Texas' unemployment for the month of October, but the change is not significant and the economy continues stable, officials said.
 The state unemployment figure rose from 5.6 percent in September to 5.7 percent in October, according to economist Sharon Cohany.
 "But that is not statistically significant and we're saying the rate remained essentially unchanged," Ms. Cohany said.
 For the nation, the unemployment rate remained unchanged between September and October at 7.4 percent.
 Ms. Cohany said the long-term change is more significant. Last year in October, unemployment in Texas was 7.5 percent.
 The bulk of the Christmas hiring is not reflected in the new figures.

Wheeler contests

announced plans to move his office from Pampa to Miami. Because the distance from Wheeler to Miami is not much different than from Wheeler to Pampa, Miller doesn't feel the move would make any difference.
 And party affiliation doesn't make much difference, either.
 "But I wouldn't know. I've never been a Republican and there's never been a Republican sheriff in Wheeler County," said Miller, whose posters bear the Democrat donkey symbol. "I don't feel a Republican or a Democrat makes much difference."
 The popularity of President Reagan and Republican senate candidate Phil Gramm in the area has some Democrats concerned about possible coat-tail effects locally.
 GOP sheriff candidate Jim Adams said such top level popularity is "definitely not hurting me."
 "But this is my own campaign," he said, adding that he started way behind in the race. "I'm finding tremendous support throughout the county."
 "Being a whole person is what makes a good sheriff," he stressed.
 As part of his campaign, Adams is calling for "new ideas in law enforcement." And one such idea is a reserve deputy system.
 "There's always more to do in law enforcement than you have people to do it," he said. "I know of deputies here that put in 70-80 hours a week."
 "The reserves would assist in investigation, back up," he added.
 "It's nice to have a partner in the car with you. Then you know your back is covered."
 Adams stressed that the reserves would have to be well screened and well trained. And, if the proposed Sweetwater Creek Reservoir is ever built in the county, someone would have to be qualified in scuba diving, he said.
 "You back up a brother, regardless of where you're at, across the state line or across the county," Adams said, referring to the recent shooting of an Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper in neighboring Beckham County.
 The GOP candidate agrees that drug traffic is a big problem in the county. He pointed out how drug traffic affects other crimes.
 "Eighty to ninety percent of the burglaries and thefts are done by 10 percent of the criminal element and most of them are drug related," he said.

 A Wheeler County native, Adams spent nine years as a police officer in Amarillo, one year as Potter County Adult Probation officer, three years as a military policeman and three years as a private industry security manager for Sears Roebuck stores in Oklahoma City.
 While he sees a big difference between big city police work and rural county sheriff work, Adams feels he can handle it.
 "Crimes are just as serious here as they are in metropolitan areas, but they are fewer between," he said, adding that as part of security management for Sears, he was responsible for inventory, budgeting and personnel management. "I see no problem with the county management. There, we worked for a profit. Here, we work for the citizens of Wheeler County."
 "Wheeler County is more or less a safe place to live and that's the way I want to keep it," he said.
 In the county attorney race, incumbent Sims and Fling admit they've been too busy to campaign actively. Here, the main difference between the two candidates is the 16 miles separating Sims' home in Wheeler and Fling's office in Shamrock.
 Sims, county attorney since 1977, admits he's a little worried about the GOP's coattails.
 "But in 1980, Reagan carried the county, but the county did not select Mr. Fling," Sims said, referring to his first race against the Republican four years ago.
 "But I never predict juries or elections," he said.

In addition to his county attorney duties and private practice, Sims is on the Wheeler County Water Board and provides legal counsel for such bodies as the city of Miami.
 "But these other jobs have not taken away from my county work," Sims stressed. "If anything suffers, it's my private practice."
 Noting that the D.A. uses an office in Wheeler, Sims feels Hardin's proposed move to Miami will not affect work in Wheeler County. He added that he could work with either Adams or Miller as sheriff.
 Fling said that when he lost his first county attorney race by 400 votes, he had "not been here a long time."
 "But this time, it is something I planned to do for four years," he said. "It is a job where you can serve the people on a small level."
 He is also Shamrock City attorney and provides counsel for the Shamrock Independent School District.
 "But living in Shamrock shouldn't make much difference," he said. "It may help in some ways, because we have many people living in the south part of the county."
 Fling doesn't feel the GOP coattails will reach to the county offices.
 "We haven't had a Republican elected here in a long time, if we ever have," he said. "But in the past, we've had trouble finding Republicans to even run for office."
 And, despite the fact that Hardin lives in Shamrock, Fling does not think moving the D.A.'s office would affect business in Wheeler County.

Energas rates given approval

Energas Co. has announced the conclusion of a general service rate increase proceeding with 63 communities in the 30,000 square mile West Texas City Plant System area.
 In addition, the Texas Railroad Commission has allowed Energas to set new gas rates for customers in the unincorporated areas surrounding 46 communities in the system, including Pampa.
 A 4.3 percent rate increase for domestic and commercial type customers was approved by the governing entities of all the communities involved as of Tuesday, according to Robert F. Stephens, vice president of rates and economics for Energas.

 The rate increase is effective for billings as of Nov. 1.
 Under the new rate, customers will pay approximately 20 cents per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) more for natural.

Panel completes hearing on pesticides

AUSTIN (AP) — A consistent criticism of the way new state pesticide rules were drawn up pervaded two days of public hearings by the House Agriculture Committee.

The hearings were completed Thursday after more than 50 witnesses either for or against the Texas Department of Agriculture's proposed pesticide controls.

There was criticism from legislators and members of affected industry alike that they had not been given a say in preparing the new rules.

Committee Chairman Rep. Robert Saunders, D-LaGrange, said he felt the extended hearing had convinced TDA officials that some modifications were needed in the rules before they become effective.

"I think we have shown some changes should be made," said Saunders. "We have given everyone a chance to have their say."

"We are still willing to make changes," Deputy Agriculture Commissioner Ron White said during the hearings.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower did not attend the sessions in the House chamber.

"I think what we will do is appoint a committee, made from those who testified, to work with Hightower's office," Saunders said. "There will be attorneys, growers and farmers, those who really know what the situation is."

Saunders also said the agriculture department would get a full transcript of the testimony. At the beginning of the hearing Wednesday he said his committee's main purpose was to hear from persons affected by the proposed regulations and who were not consulted before the TDA announced them Oct. 19.

Saunders said there were no plans for the House committee to take a stand for or against the proposed regulations, although several members of the committee expressed opposition.

Ray Pruitt, representing Texas Citrus Mutual of McAllen suggested Thursday the 30-day public comment period set by TDA be extended by at least 30 days.

The TDA plans a series of public hearings beginning Nov. 12 in Lubbock, Austin, San Juan and maybe the Victoria area.

Pruitt also claimed the special committee named by TDA to recommend ways to control the drift of pesticides after being sprayed was not a fair representation. "There is no one on the committee to represent fruit and vegetable growers. There are representatives of labor on the committee but no trial lawyers who would handle such suits."

Tani Adams, director of the Pesticide Project of the Texas Center for Rural Studies, said Texas could not wait until the Environmental Protection Agency draws up federal regulations on the use of pesticides.

"If history tells us anything it could be 3 to 5 years before EPA acts," she said. "We need these regulations now. This is something people feel strong about. It affects jobs and its affects health."

"I really don't think we need pesticides," Dr. Martin Sprague of the Environmental Health Center, Dallas, told the committee. "They make people sick and die. I think the industry needs to find a better solution to these problems."

Sprague said the Dallas center handles 300 to 500 cases a year of people ill because of pesticides, many of them from the Rio Grande Valley and Houston areas.

AFTER ARREST—Fort Worth tactical squad officers lead an unidentified man to a police car after the man's arrest at St. Joseph Hospital Thursday evening. The suspect, whose name had not been released by police, held officers at bay for four - and - one - half hours, claiming he had a hostage and a bomb in the hospital's prayer room. ## Court of inquiry examines charge

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has called a court of inquiry into allegations by State Sen. Carl Parker of Port Arthur that a grand jury's manipulation led to recent indictments against Parker.

District Judge Jack King, who agreed to preside over it, said he first balked when District Attorney James McGrath asked Thursday for the inquiry.

But he decided to take the civil case, King told the Beaumont Enterprise, because "If I live in a county, I want to make sure the system works."

Parker called the grand jury system into question after his arraignment Monday on charges of aggravated perjury, aggravated promotion of prostitution, and wholesale promotion of obscene material.

In motions seeking to have indictments against Parker quashed, Parker's attorneys contend that six members of the grand jury that indicted Parker might have been biased against him because they are employed by the Port Arthur school district, serve on its board or have family ties to the district.

The conflict of interest exists, Parker contends, because he defended a former Port Arthur school district administrator who won an out-of-court judgment against the school district on grounds he was forced to resign because of a conspiracy by school trustees.

McGrath said he sought the court of inquiry because pretrial motions filed by Parker's attorneys to quash the indictments against Parker "are accusatory in nature regarding specific members of the grand jury, the grand jury as a body and a specific grand jury commissioner."

King said the court of inquiry probably will start next week, or the week after.

Charges against Parker stem from an April 19 raid by law enforcement officials on the Port Arthur home of Danny Lee, in which officers seized videotapes and equipment. A grand jury indicted Lee on eight counts, including promotion of prostitution, wholesale and retail promotion of obscene material, possession of marijuana and cocaine. A holdover grand jury, impaneled in April, indicted Parker.

Parker has pleaded innocent to all charges. Lee, operator of the Happy Times Video Co. in the house he once co-owned with Parker, is the only other person facing charges related to the case.

Jail inmate discovered dead in cell

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A 23-year-old jail inmate being held in the slaying of a North Richland Hills teen-ager killed himself in his cell by fashioning a noose out of his socks, a preliminary investigation by the Denton County district attorney's office shows.

The death Thursday of Mark Robert Mathtys, who faced capital murder charges, came only one day after he was shot in the neck by authorities in an escape attempt, a sheriff's official said.

"After interviewing all witnesses, indications are that he died as a result of suicide," said Marty Travelstead, sheriff's communication officer.

A final ruling will be made based on findings of the Dallas County medical examiner's office, he said.

Travelstead said Mathtys, who had no cellmates, was discovered dead by jailers at 5 p.m., only an hour and a half after his parents had visited him.

"He was hung with his socks. They were tied together," Denton County Sheriff Kenneth George said. "He was checked at 4:15 p.m., and we believe he took himself between 4:15 and 5 p.m."

The sheriff added, "We put him in a single cell by himself where other prisoners couldn't bother him."

Mathtys had been charged with capital murder in the death of Michelle Trimmier, 13, after his arrest late Tuesday, three days after her decomposed body was found, partially buried, on a farm he worked in south Denton County, near Roanoke.

She had disappeared three weeks earlier from the front yard of the Trimmiers' suburban Fort Worth home. Mathtys lived nearby.

George said Mathtys' father and stepmother visited for about 10 minutes with Mathtys at about 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

He had been arraigned earlier in the day by State District Judge James Erwin for capital murder and felony escape. Bond was denied on the capital murder charge and a $10,000 bond was set on the escape charge, chief deputy Jim Wilson said.

Mathtys was transferred to the jail Thursday after spending the night at a hospital for treatment of a gunshot wound suffered after he bolted from the courthouse Wednesday while he was being fingerprinted.

Mathtys had been transported from Tarrant County to Denton County about 2 p.m. Wednesday. Minutes later, he was racing down the street, officials said. Mathtys was zigzagging in and out of traffic and trying to stop motorists when he was shot, witnesses said. A Texas Ranger shot him in the neck about a half block from the jail.

Mathtys had been moved after prosecutors determined he should be tried in Denton County where the body was found, North Richland Hills police Capt. Randy Shifflet said.

Dallas County medical examiners had not determined the girl's cause of death.

Investigators said the girl's decomposed body was identified through dental records.

Schoolchildrens' votes mirror elders' presidential choice polls

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The nation's schoolchildren think pretty much like their elders, if the National Student-Parent Mock Election is any indication.

Most polls released in recent weeks give President Reagan a 10- to 15-point lead over Democratic challenger Walter Mondale. And last night's results from the student election gave Reagan a 19-point lead.

In the near-final tally — prospects for receiving votes from Oregon, Alaska and Hawaii were still uncertain — Reagan garnered 60 percent of the more than 1.6 million votes cast. That translates into 957,141 votes for Reagan and 647,814 for Mondale.

"It was really kind of surprised," said Tammie Rogers, a 10th-grade Fort Worth high school student. "I thought Reagan would do even better than he did. Mondale, like, he took five whole states."

Reagan's strength was uniform throughout the country, leaving Mondale victories only in Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Illinois, Maryland, Mississippi and New York.

Mondale even lost in his home state of Minnesota, where 51 percent opted for Reagan.

Tandy Corp. sponsored the event and provided computers for all 50 states and the nation's capital to help gather results. The tallies were funneled into "Election Central" in the Americana Hotel here for compilation.

John Roach, Tandy's chairman and chief executive officer, told the crowd assembled in his firm's hometown that the election "is not to provide a scientific projection" of how Americans will vote Nov. 6.

It was only supposed to get students involved in the political process and combat voter apathy, he said.

Nevertheless, a similar prediction vote with a much smaller number of participants — about 250,000 — came close to the national results in the 1982 elections, organizers said.

Tandy Corp. spokeswoman Linda Miller said Hawaii officials declined to release their results for fear of influencing the Nov. 6 election.

The "educational exercise" was organized by the Teacher's Guides to Television Family Institute, and emcee Bill Hix called it "an exercise in citizenship."

Besides huddling over Radio Shack terminals to tally the nationwide votes, the more than 200 students who gathered in Fort Worth sparred in debates, listened to music and maneuvered in "Whiz Quiz" question-and-answer sessions.

The student voters also spoke up on three key national issues:

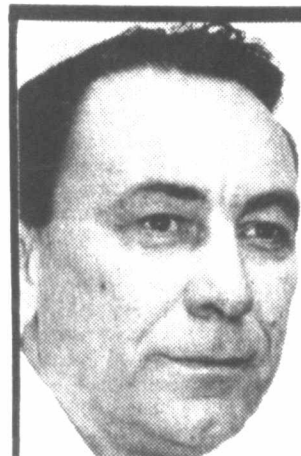

— About 42 percent agreed that a continued build-up of nuclear arms is the best way to maintain peace. About 55 percent disagreed.

— An overwhelming 63.9 percent said a tax increase is not the best way to reduce the federal deficit. Only 34.1 percent agreed it was.

— The students were evenly split on whether federal aid to education should be increased if it means reducing defense and social spending. Forty-nine percent said yes; 48.4 percent no.

The final presidential tally in Texas was 16,643 for Reagan and 14,760 for Mondale — or 53 percent to 47 percent.

The state's schoolchildren also preferred Democrat Lloyd Doggett for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring Sen. John Tower. Doggett got 11,429 votes as compared to Republican Phil Gramm's 10,921.

Winner won't have mandate

Larry Hollis, writing in this space yesterday, talked about a problem he has with this year's elections.

I also have a problem with the elections, but mine is a bit different. Larry is apparently disappointed with the candidates. I am not. I think they are no worse than candidates in past elections. Some might even be better.

My problem stems from the very philosophy of government that has evolved in this country and my inability to accept it as the proper way of doing things.

The government that was conceived as the servant of the people is now the master. Those who seek office in that government, though they will proclaim otherwise, believe it is all-powerful, and that election will give them a fundamental right to take citizens' property and to regulate their conduct in both personal and professional activities, always for "the good of society," of course.

My problem stems from a belief that theft is wrong, whether it is done by a government or an individual, and that tyranny is wrong, whether it is enforced by one person or a majority.

Now, if I voted for Walter Mondale and he took your money against your will to finance the social welfare schemes he espouses, or if I voted for Ronald Reagan and he took your money to build weapons systems which you oppose, I would be an accomplice in theft.

If you elected to live under Walter Mondale's rule and my vote helped elect Ronald Reagan, I would be guilty of helping force you to live under a rule you don't want. That is tyranny.

The system we have devised in this country does not allow me to vote for what I want without voting against what you want. Freedom for all individuals is not on the ballot.

This is a problem that confronts all people who follow the libertarian philosophy—a philosophy which holds that no person has the right to rule another or to take his property. Most libertarians solve that problem simply by refusing to vote. Some meet the problem by voting for Libertarian Party candidates, who promise they won't take anything from anybody or pass any laws governing the conduct of others. Those candidates contend that the only acceptable laws are those that protect individual citizens' persons and property, and those laws are already on the books.

Texas don't have that second choice because election laws passed by the Republicans and Democrats, which are used to eliminate political competitors, have kept the Libertarian Party off the ballot. That leaves those of us who try to live by the libertarian philosophy with only one option: we must not participate in the election.

Nevertheless, millions of Americans will go to the polls to vote for a president. At this point, it appears President Reagan will be re-elected by an overwhelming margin and his supporters will claim he has a mandate from the people to do whatever it is he wants to do.

But before the Reagan people start doing things "in the name of the people," they should consider the following:

Only about 65 percent of the people in the United States old enough to vote are usually registered. Just over 50 percent of those who register are expected to cast votes in the coming election. That means that somewhere around 40 to 50 percent of the total population is likely to vote Tuesday.

If those figures hold and President Reagan wins a really big victory, he will receive votes from about 25 percent of those who could have participated in the election. That means that about 75 percent of the population does not want Ronald Reagan to be president and it means that around 50 percent of the population doesn't want either Walter Mondale or Ronald Reagan, or they can't see enough difference between the two to make them care which is elected.

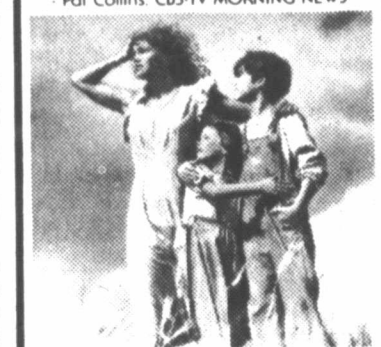

Mandate indeed!

The only imaginable mandate comes from that half the population which doesn't vote. And the message is this: We're not buying what you're selling; we don't want anything you offer; we will not participate in theft or tyranny, not even in self-defense against those who would rob us and rule us. We realize you have the power to do whatever you want to us, but we won't march to the polls and give you our consent to do it.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Do dress codes violate rights?

Are two-tone Mohawk haircuts too risqué to be displayed in school? By prohibiting them, are school administrators treading on a student's freedom of expression?

Those questions arose in Loara High School in Anaheim, Calif., recently when school officials suspended a student whose two-tone Mohawk haircut was deemed disruptive to other students in her classes. Her parents retained an attorney and the question will be placed before a court. Meantime, the student is back in school sporting a kerchief over her hair.

The crux of the problem here is not repressive school administrators or rebellious students. It is the public school system itself.

Students' rights to free expression and school officials' right to maintain discipline and decorum aren't always compatible in a monopoly education system.

In a free market of education, this would pose no problem. If a student's appearance clashes with the values one school was maintaining, the student would be free to seek another that would tolerate it. If there wasn't one, the student would learn that society as a whole did not share his or her view of appropriate appearance. The student would face the choice of conforming or dropping out and accepting the consequences.

Many private schools insist on strict dress and appearance codes; many such schools are in the business of instilling a value system in their students as well as educating them. This is not true of public schools. By their very nature of being "public" these schools are forced to reflect a wide variety of value systems—and that often results in no values at all.

Because the public school must cater to all students, it must accept all students, pink Mohawks and all, as school administrators are hamstrung when they attempt to impose a set of values—such as Loara did when it said two-tone Mohawks are not acceptable.

Youngsters have a right (subject to parental negotiation) to appear as they wish. School officials have a right to run schools the best way they know how. A tax-supported system that not only holds itself open to all political students from every background and value system, but forces every youngster to attend, tramples both of those rights.

Artificial barriers to polls

WORCESTER, Mass. (NEA) — In the early 1970s, when students at the colleges and universities in this city sought to exercise their right to vote, City Clerk Robert J. O'Keefe refused to register them.

In the mid-1970s, when women here insisted upon their right to register under the names on their birth certificates instead of their husbands' names, O'Keefe denied them access to the ballot box.

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, people who had moved from one home to another discovered on Election Day that they were ineligible to vote because O'Keefe had purged their names from the registration rolls even though they remained residents of the city.

Today, it's still business-as-usual in O'Keefe's office, where he presides over an autocratic political operation that has effectively disenfranchised uncounted thousands of Worcester's potential voters, many of them residents of the city's low- and middle-income neighborhoods.

But O'Keefe says people who won't take the trouble to register under his ground rules aren't really interested in voting.

His ability to frustrate many would-be voters earned O'Keefe a dishonorable mention in a recent congressional report on "artificial and arbitrary barriers" to increased voter participation in communities throughout the country.

Notwithstanding considerable progress since the passage of the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965, "citizens are still denied the right to equally participate in the electoral process by a variety of means," concluded a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee.

Literacy tests, poll taxes, physical threats and other blatant forms of intimidation have been replaced by more subtle but often equally effective measures.

In its reference to O'Keefe, the House report notes that he "does not deputize volunteers from the poor side of town." Actually, that's misleading because, in contrast with other cities throughout the state, Worcester refuses to designate people who don't work for the city as deputy registrars — regardless of whether they're rich or poor.

In Boston, 45 miles to the east, volunteers are deputized to register voters at subway stations, neighborhood picnics and church bazaars. In Springfield, 60 miles to the west, deputy registrars sign up new voters at public libraries, factories, union halls and unemployment compensation offices.

Here in Worcester, however, O'Keefe does little more than the minimum required by state law. Indeed, his narrow reading of those statutes has produced an average of almost one law suit against him every year for more than a decade — and the courts have decided against him in virtually all of those cases.

One non-election case, still pending in the courts, involved an extraordinary practice uncovered in 1981: In his role as municipal record-keeper, O'Keefe unilaterally decided to indicate that all babies born to single mothers were illegitimate on their birth certificates.

Those birth certificates carried prominent notations proclaiming "mother not married to father" or "father of child not husband of mother." The practice was suspended after it brought notoriety and embarrassment to the city.

In another case, Worcester's voters last year approved — by a margin of almost 4-to-1 — a ballot proposition initiating revision of the city's archaic charter.

"That was no mandate from the voters, whatever," insisted O'Keefe who tried to nullify the vote by claiming that the issue was not legally on the ballot — a position twice rejected by the courts.

Earlier this year, a coalition of community groups sought voter registration at the city's YWCA, at its largest public housing project and at a surplus food distribution center. O'Keefe summarily rejected all the requests.

"The right to vote is a fundamental right of citizenship, not a privilege," notes the congressional report — but O'Keefe apparently does not share that view.

"Well, if you can't help us turn our economy around, mind if we borrow Lee Iacocca for a while?..."

Today in History

Today is Friday, Nov. 2, the 307th day of 1984. There are 59 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 2, 1948, to the surprise of the experts, President Harry S. Truman held onto his office with a narrow election-night victory over Republican Thomas E. Dewey.

On this date: In 1976, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter defeated President Gerald R. Ford in their race for the White House. (Although Ford won more states, Carter received more electoral votes.)

Ten years ago: The Shah of Iran and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger met in Tehran. They agreed the oil-producing countries and consuming nations must cooperate to prevent world disorder stemming from inflation.

One year ago: President Reagan signed into law the bill creating a federal holiday to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Today's birthdays: Actor Burt Lancaster is 71. Actor Ray Walston is 70. Actress Stefanie Powers is 42. Thought for today: "All great truths begin as blasphemies." — George Bernard Shaw (1856-1950).

Hope for the hopeless

The preacher and the doctor were bowling in the same league, became friends, compared experiences...

And the Methodist Rev. Bob Adams...
And the Dr. Merlynn Colip...
Discovered that they shared a common professional problem.

That most of their patients and - or parishioners who were in trouble drank themselves into it.

And for a drunk in those days in their home state of Kansas there was no place to go, no opportunity to dry out and shape up and start over.

So - Pastor Bob and Dr. Colip decided there had to be a treatment center for this devastating, deadly disease if they had to build it themselves.

Today the seed they planted has become Valley Hope.

An alcohol treatment center with in - patient facilities and out - patient centers in Kansas and three adjacent states.

Non - profit, non - sectarian - privately funded - but professionally staffed.

And of all the alcoholism treatment centers in our nation, none has a more significant return per dollar spent - in helping the hopeless recover - physically, emotionally, socially, spiritually.

Here's the awesome challenge:

Our nation has ten million alcoholics. One way or another, 96 percent of them will die from it.

Only four - percent will seek treatment.

But since the beginning of Valley Hope, 17 years ago, 31,000 alumni have passed that way - plus 50,000 family members.

And 65 percent have resumed sober, productive - improved - lives.

Where family and - or industry cooperates in follow - up - that percentage goes up to 90 percent.

When a boozier hits bottom he will turn his liver to leather and his brain to mush while he begs, borrows or steals for just one more.

He or she will steal from household food money, from the children's piggy bank, from the poor box in church - sometimes from the real bank downtown.

Coroners find in nine of every 10 fatal car crashes a driver had been drinking.

If any other disease were proliferating through our population at this rate leaving such devastation in its wake it would be declared a "national emergency" calling for immediate quarantine, mandatory, total isolation.

Alcoholics and their families, in a free society, must seek that isolation and treatment for themselves.

And now there are places where they can. Now there are remedies that work.

In Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Nebraska there is VALLEY HOPE.

Letters to the editor

Reader gives view of presidential issues

Dear Editor,
Perhaps this is a timely resume of the 1984 presidential election issues.

ECONOMY: The economy was in grave danger when President Reagan took office. The Carter-Mondale "Windfall Profits Tax" crippled the oil business and related industries, creating mass unemployment and recession. Interest was 21 percent, inflation 13.7 percent and national growth zero. Interest is now 12 percent, inflation three percent, national unemployment six percent. In the past two years, seven million new jobs were created (most from small business) despite Tip O'Neill's blocking the "Work Program" bill for hundreds of people just to prevent President Reagan from having credit for improving the economy.

SOCIAL SECURITY: Mondale insults the intelligence of the voters with his comic-strip junk mail depicting President Reagan as "Robbin' Reagan" taking Social Security checks away from the elderly. The scare tactics could be reversed. The Carter-Mondale 1977 Social Security Amendment reduced retirement benefits for those born after 1916. The action to reduce the number of people receiving Social Security was started in 1960. Since President Reagan took office, Social Security benefits have increased 25.6 percent. An average couple is now receiving $180 more per month. Medicare has increased from $25 billion to $46 billion. AFDC (families with dependant children) are working and have decreased needs. Low-cost housing has more than tripled.

DEFENSE: Without a strong defense, the Soviets would take over the European countries, the U.S. and the world. Mondale voted against Democrat "Scoop" Jackson's defense proposal and voted over 30 times with McGovern. He plans to abolish the MX and B-1 bomber. Geraldine Ferraro was opposed to the Carter-Mondale MX and voted in Congress to scrap the MX, B-1 bomber, the Pershing II and the Trident, with a 20 percent cut in Army forces and one-third cut in nuclear carriers. Much of President Reagan's defense budget was to replace weapons over 20 years old, many so antiquated repair parts were no longer available. The people in Europe are fearful of Mondale's defense plans.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS: Moral decay is undermining our country. Many viewed the defeat of the 1970 Senate resolution to prohibit obscenity and pornography as a step toward crime and immorality. Mondale voted "against" the bill. Crime, riots, child abuse, rapes, murders and other atrocities have continued to increase since that time.

LEADERSHIP: As governor and president, President Reagan is a proven leader. Mondale was appointed Minnesota's attorney general to fill a vacancy. He was appointed to the Senate to fill the vacancy created by Hubert Humphrey. His first race for the Democratic nomination in 1974 failed ingloriously.

AGE: Age is technically a state of health. Mondale could be considered old, he takes three kinds of medication (number of times per day unknown) for high blood pressure, to prevent strokes and heart attack. President Reagan, according to the record, has excellent health, despite recovering from a near assassination. Winston Churchill was prime minister at age 81. The British apparently value experience.

HEAVY SECURITY—Roberto Suazo, president of Honduras, wearing white shirt and hat, walks through La Paz, Honduras, last week under very heavy security guard. The FBI arrested eight people Thursday in what it called a plot to assassinate Suazo and stage a coup d'etat.

FBI says eight are arrested in cocaine-funded Honduras plot

MIAMI (AP) — President Roberto Suazo of Honduras was reported to be under guard by 800 soldiers today after the FBI cracked a U.S.-based exile group and foiled what authorities said was a cocaine-financed plot to kill Suazo and overthrow his government.

Eight men were arrested here on Thursday and a warrant was issued for a ninth, Gen. Jose Bueso-Rosa, the Honduran military attache in Chile.

An FBI agent who infiltrated the plot was to be paid $300,000 to put together a team that would go to Honduras and kill Suazo, said Joseph V. Corless, head of the Miami FBI office.

The exiles, who called themselves "staunch anti-communists," were going to finance the operation through the sale of more than $10 million in cocaine seized by authorities on Sunday, the FBI said. The group included a businessman who lost more than $7 million when his business was nationalized by the Honduran government, authorities said.

In addition to the nine men charged by the FBI, Honduran authorities claimed that Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez, once considered the most powerful man in the country, was involved. Martinez now lives in Miami and was not indicted in the plot.

A Honduran presidential spokesman, who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name, said Suazo was in his hometown of La Paz, 51 miles north of Tegucigalpa, on Thursday night, guarded by about 800 armed soldiers.

Bueso-Rosa and Faiz J. Sikaffy, 49; Gerard Latchinian, 46; and Manuel Binker, 48, all of Miami, were accused of plotting to acquire arms and hire assassins to kill Suazo, then use newspapers and other institutions to create unrest and to install their own leaders between Oct. 14 and Nov. 15, 1984.

Sikaffy lost his cement business when it was nationalized and now operates a seafood business here, authorities said. Latchinian, a Honduran, was described by the FBI as an international arms dealer with business interests in that country. Binker is a U.S. citizen and former Cuban refugee, the FBI said.

Martinez, 48, moved here after Suazo dismissed him as commander-in-chief of the armed forces last spring — in part because of meddling in politics, according to the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa.

Honduran Attorney General Elizabeth Chiu Sierra said in Tegucigalpa she would seek the extradition of Martinez, the eight exiles and Bueso-Rosa. She said the suspects would face charges of high treason and related crimes in Honduras.

FBI agents on Sunday seized 760 pounds of cocaine worth $10.3 million after it was flown in from Colombia to a remote airstrip in southern Florida. Five men were arrested Thursday in connection with the seizure.

"The individuals have indicated in conversation that they are staunch anti-communists," Corless told reporters. "I believe they were just interested in putting in a man favorable to them."

Those arrested in connection with the cocaine seizure were Jerome Latchinian, brother of Gerard and a Miami resident; Jose Zimmerman, a pilot from Vero Beach; Robert Kurtz of North Pinellas Park; and Juan Roca and Alain Perez, both addresses unknown.

Texas Baptists keep options open on women's ordination

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Baptists, declining to join the Southern Baptist Convention in opposing the ordination of women, have voted to affirm the autonomy of local churches to ordain whomever they wish.

Delegates to the Baptist General Convention of Texas also declared Thursday that "all believers, whether ordained or not, have equal status in the Kingdom of God."

That feeling emerged in a conciliatory resolution that draws on the Baptist tradition of congregational independence and the universal "priesthood" of believers.

Although not endorsing the idea of women serving as ministers, delegates to the convention passed a resolution on "appreciation of women" in which they expressed support for "those women who labor for the Lord and the churches in places of special service to which God has called them."

Both votes came on the final session of a generally harmonious, 3-day annual meeting of the 2.4 million-member state convention.

At the national convention of Southern Baptists this summer in Kansas City, Mo., fundamentalists successfully introduced a resolution denouncing ordination of women on the grounds that Eve caused the fall of mankind by tempting Adam.

That resolution only expressed an opinion and could not halt any ordinations, which in the Baptist church are handled by individual congregations.

But the Texas convention declined to join in the negative view.

Further, during a press conference after his reelection Wednesday as president of Texas Baptists, the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo urged that Baptists work to make sure that the fundamentalist who now serves as president of the Southern Baptist Convention is not reelected to a second term.

The Rev. Charles Stanley of Atlanta was nominated to head the Southern Baptists by a conservative element that believes in the infallibility of the Bible and has won control of most denominational offices.

Moderate Baptists do not believe strictly in the Bible's inerrancy, but say it is the infallible word of God.

Moore, whose name has often been mentioned as a candidate to oppose Stanley if he seeks a second one-year term, says the two groups are not that far apart theologically and could be unified under the right leadership.

Moore said Stanley has lost support of the moderates by allowing himself to become involved with the conservative element to the exclusion of others.

"We need somebody (as national president) that both sides would accept and follow," Moore said at the news conference. "Charles Stanley is not the man."

Stanley responded Thursday to Moore's charges. In Dallas for a speaking engagement, Stanley said he has not decided whether to seek a second term, but added that if he is not the man to unite the divisions within the Southern Baptist churches, he would like to know who could do it better.

"I would just ask (Moore) who he had in mind."

Stanley also criticized recent statements made by two seminary presidents who have denounced political tactics of the fundamentalists. Roy Honeycutt, president of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., recently called for a "holy war" against fundamentalist takeover of Baptist institutions.

In other matters Thursday, delegates to the state convention:

- adopted a record $60 million budget for the coming year.
- decided to change the name of Dallas Baptist College to Dallas Baptist University.

- urged the Texas Legislature to reject "pari-mutuel race track gambling bills, lottery, casino and dog racing pari-mutuel gambling ... (and) any other gambling bills that are proposed."

Baby Fae would receive a human heart if necessary

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Baby Fae's vital signs remained strong as she neared the end of her first week with a transplanted baboon's heart, entering a period that doctors said may pose an increased risk of her body rejecting the organ.

Should rejection occur, a human heart would be sought for the infant who underwent transplant surgery Oct. 26, doctors said Thursday.

Three-week old Baby Fae, the longest-lived recipient of an animal heart, was in serious but stable condition Thursday, said spokesman Dick Weismeyer.

Her body had shown no sign of rejecting the baboon heart, but she was entering a period when chances for rejection may increase, said Dr. David Hinshaw, a surgeon at Loma Linda University Medical Center, where the experimental operation was performed.

In human-to-human heart transplants in adults, a peak period for rejection occurs seven to 10 days after surgery.

Loma Linda doctors said it was unclear if that period is equally critical for an infant who has received a baboon heart, but they were watching Baby Fae carefully.

Spokeswoman Terri Pfeiffer said Baby Fae's parents were with her most of Thursday and added, "She has a healthy appetite."

Asked if the baby could withstand another transplant and how far doctors should go to keep her alive, Hinshaw replied: "It's something one wouldn't like to contemplate having to do."

"But I believe fundamentally in struggling and fighting hard for human life when there's any possibility of it being a productive struggle," he said.

CREMATION SITE—Some of about 300 Indian workers seen engaged in building a 2.5 metr high brick platform at the grounds in New Delhi Friday where slain Indian Prime Minister Mrs.

Indira Gandhi will be cremated Saturday. The cremation will take place after a funeral procession through the capital. (AP Laserphoto)

Rampage toll reaches 230; suspect under heavy guard

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Mob violence triggered by Indira Gandhi's assassination continued across northern India today despite curfews and orders for security forces to shoot rioters on sight. More than 230 people reportedly have been killed.

Much of the violence — including lynchings, beatings and arson — has been directed at Sikhs by Hindus seeking to avenge the prime minister, whose assassins have been identified as two Sikh members of her security guard.

One of the guards was killed immediately after Wednesday's attack on Mrs. Gandhi. The wounded survivor was under heavy guard at a New Delhi hospital today and reported in "nearly critical" condition.

Dr. J.P. Singh, the hospital's surgical superintendent, said constable Satwant Singh had undergone surgery to remove bullets and was not yet in condition to be interrogated by police.

"We are fully conscious of the importance of this man for the nation. Doctors are straining very nerve to keep him alive," the surgeon said.

"We remember what Jack Ruby did," he added, in a reference to the Dallas nightclub owner who killed Lee Harvey Oswald, named by the Warren Commission report as the assassin of President John F. Kennedy.

Mobs set fires in several New Delhi suburbs today after crowds of Hindus had roamed the streets in some areas through the night, ignoring a 24-hour curfew.

Curfews were imposed today in Kashmir and Bihar states, in addition to the more than 30 cities already under curfew. The United News of India said a hand grenade thrown into a building in Kashmir killed 16 people.

In New Delhi — where some Sikhs were reported burned to death — and five other cities, police were told to shoot rioters on sight. Hindu mobs also were reported to have lynched and beaten Sikhs, and burned their shops, cars and homes. Some Sikhs huddled together for protection.

The assassination was claimed by anonymous Sikh extremists as revenge for the Indian army attack on the Sikhs' Golden Temple in Amritsar last June to flush out Sikh separatists.

The Sikhs number 13 million, a small minority in a country of 730 million, but they hold many prominent posts in the army and government. President Zail Singh is a Sikh.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, the 40-year-old former airline pilot who succeeded his mother, met with opposition leaders and they issued a joint statement that said: "This madness must stop."

"To subject Sikhs as a whole to violence and indignity for what a few misguided persons have done, however heinous their crime, is most irrational and unbecoming of our heritage of tolerance," the statement said.

Mourners again lined up outside Teen Murti house (House of Three Statues) where Mrs. Gandhi's body was lying in state. More than 600,000 people viewed her body in her former childhood home.

Mrs. Gandhi's body is to be cremated Saturday after a funeral procession through the streets of the capital.

No fires, no damages, no injuries in blowout

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — A natural gas well blowout was shut down Thursday with no damages, no injuries and no fires after about 30 families were evacuated for a few hours as a precaution, authorities said.

The blowout took place about 12:15 a.m. near the Judice community, about 10 miles west of Lafayette, on a well being drilled by Delta Drilling Co. of Tyler, Texas, for May Petroleum Co. of Dallas, said Delta Drilling spokesman Bob Bowman.

Bowman said drilling was shut down, the rig was evacuated, and its blowout preventer was activated when a buildup of pressure was detected at 11,900 feet. He said drilling began Sept. 29.

"I even hesitate to call it a blowout," he said.

Walesa criticizes strike call

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa says he disagrees with a call by other Solidarity activists from his hometown for a one-hour strike Saturday to protest the murder of pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko.

The strike call, which urged workers to end their "passivity," was the first such appeal by prominent union activists since Nov. 10, 1982, when Solidarity's underground leadership unsuccessfully sought a nationwide strike to protest the banning of the independent trade union.

"I think the climate is unfavorable for such actions," said Walesa, contacted by telephone in the Baltic port of Gdansk. "It is not my point of view."

Walesa, who helped found Solidarity in 1980, said he was not consulted about Thursday's call for a one-hour strike and added that he "stands by" his earlier appeal for calm and restraint in the wake of Popieluszko's kidnap and murder.

Walesa said he planned to speak Saturday during an outdoor funeral service for Popieluszko at Warsaw's St. Stanislaw Kostka Church, which thousands of Solidarity supporters are expected to attend.

Popieluszko's coffin was to be brought to St. Stanislaw's today and will sit on the altar until the funeral, church officials said.

The strike call came two days after Popieluszko's body was pulled out of a reservoir in northern Poland. A secret police captain and two lieutenants have been arrested for the Oct. 19 abduction of the outspoken 37-year-old priest and face possible charges of murder.

The strike statement was signed by six Gdansk union activists, including Solidarity's former deputy chairman, Andrzej Gwiazda, who was once defeated by Walesa in a vote for the leadership of Solidarity. In the past, Gwiazda has criticized Walesa's moderate stance.

The statement said, "We have to put a stop to passivity as a method of struggle against evil."

The statement issued by the Gdansk Solidarity activists said the strike should be held from noon to 1 p.m. either on Saturday, the day of Popieluszko's funeral, or, if that is a free day from work, on Nov. 9.

The statement also urged Gdansk residents to take part in religious ceremonies for Popieluszko, wear black armbands, and place candles in their windows for 15 minutes every night.

Candidates believe bitter race closer than polls show

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer
BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Getting out the huge Hispanic vote for liberal Democrat Lloyd Doggett is at the heart of Texas' bitter, expensive race to fill the seat being vacated by 23-year Senate veteran John Tower.

Trailing Republican Phil Gramm by as many as 24 and as few as six points in the latest polls, the lanky, lawyerly Doggett is counting on both a massive turnout among the state's 1 million Hispanics registered to vote and ballots from President Reagan's supporters.

"This is a very tight race," Doggett said. "We're not planning a victory party election night, we're planning a victory brunch for Wednesday because we won't know who won until then."

The contest represents both a litmus test of where usually Democratic Texas now stands politically and a chance for the Democrats to regain a seat in the Republican-controlled Senate.

Gramm, a conservative congressman who co-sponsored Reagan's 1981 tax program while still a Democrat, has the president on his team and hopes to ride his coattails to victory.

He is running strong among rural conservatives and Texas' affluent urban population, yet says he is spending the last week of campaigning "under the assumption that this is close."

"You've got a clear-cut choice in this race between a conservative who supports traditional values and a liberal who's philosophically closer to the thinking of (Sen.) Ted Kennedy (D-Mass.) than the average Texan," Gramm says at campaign stops.

Despite the long-shot odds of upsetting Gramm, "Landslide

Lloyd" Doggett, as the veteran Austin state senator calls himself after two razor-thin wins in a May primary and June runoff, appears confident.

He enjoys reminding voters of Texas Gov. Mark White's 1982 victory when an under-pollled minority vote surprised political experts and helped the Democrat oust incumbent Republican Bill Clements.

A recent Houston Post poll showed a large portion of undecided voters — 14 percent — in a Houston area where 20 percent of the state's voters reside. That poll gave Gramm a 10-point lead, and said the area polled generally runs three to six percentage points more Republican than the state as a whole.

The wild cards in the race remain the nearly 1.5 million newly registered voters — 18 percent of Texas' 7.9 million registered voters — and Doggett's ability to draw Reagan supporters.

A recent poll released by the White House showed Reagan leading Democrat Walter Mondale in Texas by 30 points — a spread that would require Doggett to capture votes from nearly 30 percent of the president's supporters to win.

Doggett's appeal as the only native Texan — Gramm was born and raised in Georgia — and as both a friend to farmers and a foe of nuclear waste dumps in rural Texas may play in tiny towns, Garza County Judge Giles Dalby said.

Gramm, a former economics professor from Texas A&M University, has countered by trying to position Doggett alongside Mondale. But Doggett has kept his distance from the Democratic presidential nominee.

Asked last week why he hadn't joined Mondale at an El Paso stop, Doggett said, "Oh, was Mondale in El Paso? I didn't know that."

"Lloyd Doggett can't tell you a major issue where he disagrees with Walter Mondale," Gramm said.

Gramm has outspent Doggett $7.6 million to $4.3 million, according to the latest Federal Election Commission filings, and has received $1.1 million from special interest political action committees, nearly doubling Doggett's $669,914.

Gramm's mother — Florence Scroggins Gramm — has even become an issue after a "hand-written" letter was mailed to thousands of senior citizens saying Gramm won't ever forget "those of us who depend on Social Security because I'll be there to remind him."

Last song for red-cockaded woodpecker?

MONROE, La. (AP) — The oilman cometh to the D'Arbonne National Wildlife Refuge, making life tougher for an endangered species of woodpecker that lives nearby.

Sixteen natural gas wells are being drilled in a 160-acre patch of the refuge, near the nesting area of the red-cockaded woodpecker.

Lee Fulton, refuge manager, said there's nothing he can do about it, although some of the new wells will be as close as 625 feet apart — less than one-third the distance needed anywhere else in Louisiana.

"It's the way the rules were written back in 1924," said Charles McGough, district manager for the state Office of Conservation.

"The mineral estate ... takes preference over the surface estate. All they are required to do is pay the surface owner for damages, no matter who the surface owners are."

Since 16 sites are being cleared, the 160 acres will lose one-tenth of its woods, Fulton said. The red-cockaded woodpecker, which feeds on insects under the bark of living trees, has a nesting place just north of the tract.

Fulton said he was concerned because this breed of woodpecker has limited range.

It's not that Fulton thinks all drilling should be kept out of the refuge, which was established in 1982 on land acquired in the 1970s by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

"A few wells out there provide diversity by breaking up the ... forest with grassland, which provides birds with insects. A few of them are good, but not when you get more than in my professional opinion we need," he said.

Good or bad, it's legal. In most of the state, the law requires at least 2,000 feet between gas wells. But the politicians who imposed that limit did not set any spacing requirements for the Monroe Gas Field, part of which extends beneath the refuge.

The refuge stretches across 17,000 acres in Union and Ouachita Parishes. However, the Corps only acquired surface ownership, it did not get mineral rights — and in this oil state, mineral rights take precedent.

Don Pilgreen of Terronne Petroleum Corp., which owns the mineral rights to 560 acres of the refuge, said his company plans to restore the sites after drilling is completed.

"This is not a new problem," he said. "It's really a bad situation that land was converted into a refuge in an area that more wells have been drilled than anywhere in the United States. If I had a choice, I'd rather be drilling off the refuge, but I don't have that choice."

Fulton said drilling is taking place on about 3,300 acres of the refuge, but not as heavy as Terronne plans.

He said he's also worried because gas wells produce salt water that kills all trees and plants — further cutting back what was set aside as a habitat for deer, squirrel and other animals.

Woman face to face with 'miracle' chance

By REGINA SEGOVIA
Port Arthur News

NEDELAND, Texas (AP) — Paula Pruitt Barnhart was born 26 years ago with half a face, the victim of a genetic disorder that left her with no bones in her ears, outer ear on the left side and no nose or muscles in her jaw. Now, thanks to a Public Broadcasting System program on a team of surgeons that can rebuild faces, she says she has hope for a face.

For 24 years she had at least two operations per year, and hope peaked that the next doctor would operate on her would give her a "normal looking face, an ear, jaws that could move her teeth to chew."

For 24 years they would throw her up on the table, operate and I would go through the pain. And I'd get the results I hoped for," Paula said.

"I knew I was odd, but when I went to school and they laughed at it really hit me that I was ugly," she said. "I ran home and cried all day. My mother told me to tell them that this was just the way God made me. She promised me that she would do everything she could to fix it. So every time I went in to have an operation I had hope. But the time it was never what I needed for."

It was less than two years ago that Paula finally gave up her quest for a normal face. She had found a man to marry her. "We met in a bar, and you know it's dark in bars and he really couldn't see me."

At some angles it is difficult to point what it is about Paula's face that is different. Her long, wavy blond hair hides the scars from the missing ear on one side. "If you look closely at her jaw you can see a slackness and notice she really has no muscle tone."

When she talks her mouth moves from side to side instead of up and down. It was the off balanced face that she said her husband, James, saw when they met in daylight. "We had a really long talk about it." But he didn't call her for two weeks.

"I was so depressed. I had been living in Houston for eight months and I was alone. I cried and thought he would never call again," she said. Finally, he called her back.

"Later he told me he had to really think about it. He didn't want to get into the relationship at first. He was just recently divorced and he was taking on a big responsibility."

Paula was pregnant before she learned her disease was genetic, that there was a 50 percent chance of passing it to her unborn child. She says she and her husband considered abortion, partly because she was scheduled for more surgery.

When she told her doctor about the pregnancy and asked his advice he told her to go ahead with her life. "He told me he couldn't guarantee the operation anyway. He was very candid about it for the first time. Something snapped and I thought 'All this time they have just been experimenting on me.'"

For the next months Paula concentrated on her pregnancy. "I was all-consumed with my baby. I was determined to accept what I was, even though it gets harder for me to eat all the time. I can't chew my food. But I concentrated on being a mother and worrying about how he would come out. He was healthy and right after he was born I had my tubes tied. I just couldn't see taking that risk again."

Her sister, Charla, is a striking contrast of health. She looks younger, rosier, and is not scarred on the outside. But her concern for Paula dates back to high school. "Here I was going to all the dances. Paula never was asked. Finally when she was a senior she had her first boyfriend. It was hard, really hard to watch that happening to your sister."

When Charla saw a television program on public television that depicted the work of a team of Boston doctors that rebuild faces, she was ecstatic. "I jumped up and down. I saw little children that looked like Paula did in school and after they operated they looked normal. It was a miracle."

The entire family watched a rerun of the program during a Christmas dinner. Shortly after the program Paula called the Boston team and her medical records were mailed the next day. Two months after that she was sitting on a stool in the middle of a horseshoe-shaped collection of 20 doctors who discussed what could be done. "There were bone specialists, muscle specialists, ear specialists all talking about what could be done and in a very caring way."

Finally they offered her several options, operations that could to varying degrees help her.

"I think the show was called 'Everybody Deserves a Face,'" she said. "I just want the chance to be normal. They didn't promise anything, but they did say that what they wanted to do was very predictable. They said I could have one of them, or all of them. There was nothing pushy about it."

In July, Paula received a letter from The Children's Hospital in Boston's Craniofacial Clinic outlining how they planned to construct bones in her lower jaw, remove the deteriorating chin implant and advance her chin and redrape the soft tissue over the lower jaw.

They said they would also, in a second operation, be able to reconstruct her outer ear. Insurance will pay for most of the medical costs associated with the operation. But Paula, and at least one relative, will have to stay in Boston for a week after her week's stay in the hospital. She will have steel pins in her face and her teeth will be wired closed.

Money for the flight, the room, food and living expenses is what Charla hopes to raise for her sister.

We are hoping some of our old friends from Nederland High School will come to a dance for Paula. We plan to have the Blackwater Band at the Nederland-Knights of Columbus Hall and if we can fill it up Paula will be set.

Autism a lonely world that's better understood today

By PAUL ROBERTS
The Brazosport Facts

REEPORT, Texas (AP) — This is a typical elementary school classroom with tiny chairs, sized black pencils, bright markers with cheery slogans. Beneath a smiling Mickey Mouse, she sits at a low table, writing the letter "J" on a ditto pad. Next to her, a teacher's aide is reaching occasionally to correct the pretty, dark-haired child's wandering scrawl.

"No, Jennie that's not a 'J,'" Donna Clark, taking the girl's hand and pushing it through a tangle of fishhook. "Now make a 'J', Jennie. Can you make me a 'J'?"

Jennie leans back, rolling her eyes toward the ceiling, smiling, takes the pencil and draws a scribble that looks like a "J". "Good girl!" Ms. Clark says, pulling Jennie's hair. "Good girl!"

What might appear to be a day in the life of a pre-schooler learning the alphabet changes abruptly when the student is examined more closely.

12. Jennie Garrison should be smiling, not groping for individual letters. At 12, she should be deeply entrenched in her first year in high school.

At Brazosview, teachers are just becoming familiar with the computerized instruction. But already several students who exhibit autistic tendencies have made progress punching buttons and watching messages flash on the video displays.

In addition to the new computer applications and one-on-one instruction, autistic students spend time in other special education classes, where they learn to socialize with students of similar ages.

Jennie, for example, attends regular music and physical education classes.

"The important thing to remember is that these children are individuals first, autistic second," says Monte Parker, director at the Autistic Treatment Center in San Antonio. "What may work for one student might not for another. There is no overall formula for success."

Currently, behavior modification, such as teaching Jennie to respond to stimulus, is the most common approach in dealing with autistic children, Parker says.

"Twenty years ago, autism was considered an emotional disorder, caused by what they called 'refrigerator mothers'—career women who didn't give their children enough love," Parker says. "This was supposed to leave the kids with no desire to take part in the world."

But today, the label, "emotional disorder," has been replaced with a far more practical definition.

"I just summarize autism as a communication disorder," Roy says. "We try to build a communication line with the child and however broad you make that line determines how much you'll get from that child."

Carnes often has to shout to get Jennie's attention. At times, she must physically draw the child's head around to force eye contact. But it works.

They've been working with Jennie for years now and you should see the progress," Ms. Carnes says. "She surprises me sometimes by responding to a big word that I didn't think she'd even catch."

More than that, Ms. Carnes helps instill a feeling of self-respect in Jennie and other autistic children.

"Her weight goes up and down and when we walk down the hall together, I tell her to 'suck it in' and she does," Ms. Carnes says. "She knows what I'm talking about."

And recently, help has arrived from an unexpected corner. Jennie and other autistic children seem to be more interested in inanimate objects than in people. Berryhill says.

This behavior, formerly the cause of extreme frustration among teachers and parents, is now being used, via computers, to get through the autistic child's mental "barrier."

"They like gadgets and we'd like to see if we can take their fascination with computers and teach them to interact with the computers," Berryhill says. "The computer will become the link between the mind of the child and the mind of the teacher."

LIFESTYLES

MAKE AN HEIRLOOM! — The cradle and chest combo in country style features raised-panel assemblies in sturdy frames. The cradle folds down sides and a protective hood. The chest features two drawers and a decorative front panel.

cabinet to save the new mother a few steps. The two units can be separated for easy travel and storage. Overall dimensions are 25 x 45 x 50 inches.

Make a family heirloom

By APRIL BAIL
 "bug" peculiar to women is to be sweeping the nest! Although the symptoms are many sufferers experience weakness, euphoria and depression (all at once), and found weight gain. Usually, their husbands have symptoms, too.
 Old wives tale has it that such plagues are the doings of a less, but awkward-looking called El Storko. Whatever the life, most of us are quite thrilled it happens to someone close in anticipation of my sister's baby. I've designed an heirloom cradle and chest combination.
 The cradle features fold-down sides and a protective hood. The chest has two drawers and a cabinet to save the new mother a few steps. Both sections are embellished with raised-panel assemblies. The two units can be separated for easy travel and storage. Overall dimensions of the cradle and chest together are 25 x 45 x 50 inches.
 This isn't a beginner's project. The help of a more experienced woodworker, however, you can make your own heirloom cradle and chest using our detailed plans. They include a materials list, step-by-step instructions, easy-to-follow assembly diagrams, and some full-size patterns.

 To order plans for the cradle and chest, please specify Project No. 2902-4 and send $3.95. Add $2.95 to receive a copy of our 1985 color catalog. It's chock-full of wood and fabric projects for every occasion.
 Mail your order to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.
 Begin by building the raised-panel assemblies that form the back and side walls of the chest and the door of the cabinet. The back wall is a four-panel assembly, and the sidewalls each have only two panels, which are identical to those in the back. The cabinet door is a single-panel assembly.
 The stiles and rails of the panel frames are assembled using splined joints. Dadoes along the inner edges of the frame pieces accommodate the panels.
 The chest front is simply a frame for the storage cabinet and drawers. The parts of the chest front are assembled around the plywood top and floor.

 The cradle is made almost entirely of raised-panel assemblies. They are more complex than those of the chest, because the cradle panel assemblies are cut at a number of different angles.
 The upper portion of each cradle side is formed by a row of spindles assembled between upper and lower rails. This assembly is hinged to the lower, double-panel assembly. A sliding bolt-and-socket locking device at each end of the top rail ensures that the hinged portion will stay in place when it's supposed to.
 Two posts support the cradle and extend down inside the chest section, where they are secured by screws. The cradle is joined to the posts by means of two pivot assemblies. A dowel pin will keep the pivot dowel from working its way out of the cradle and post when the pivot assembly is in place.
 A lock dowel inserted through a hole in the headboard post holds the cradle still when you want baby to stop rocking.

Inventor glides into business

WEST CORNWALL, Conn. (AP) — The damp air was cooling with the onset of evening when Tim Locke rushed out the front door with his small invention in hand.
 He planted his feet in the thick grass and launched the toy hang glider on a slow, looping flight that ended after a few seconds with a gentle landing.
 "You don't have to really wangle it. You just throw it," he said of the proper launching technique for his invention.
 Had the air been hotter, the foam and plastic glider might have caught a "thermal" — or a rush of rising warm air — and flown for minutes. Still, Locke was pleased with the flight of the toy that he has tinkered with for nine years.
 He tossed it into the air again, and then stood fascinated.
 "I'm into all wind sports," he said, explaining that his devotion to hang gliding led to his toy's development.
 The toy has a 14-inch foam wing and a hard plastic balancing weight shaped like a pilot that together give it the appearance of a miniature hang glider.
 "I've had many different designs. It looks mindless simple, but there's a lot that goes into it," Locke said.

 To protect the design, Locke has patented it in the United States, West Germany and Japan under the name Windseeker.
 Soon, the public will be able to test the glider itself.
 Locke and his partner, Carl Hermann, have formed Windseeker Corp. and have overseen the recent production of 30,000 gliders that they and their distributors will sell. The year-old corporation's first customer was NASA, which bought 48 of the gliders to sell at its Washington, D.C., gift shop. Another 48 have been sold to the New England Air Museum in Windsor Locks.
 The sales have been the high point in what has been a difficult and frustrating business experience for Locke and Hermann. It has been a more experience that has left the two more confident of their own abilities, but wary of others.
 "We had a lot of doubting Thomases along the way. That was almost the fuel to drive us on further," Locke said. "We believed that if we persisted, the persistence would pay off."
 Their troubles started in 1975 when Locke began working on the glider.
 "I had this brainstorm to construct a toy flying hang glider," Locke said, explaining that he built a working model that same day from materials he had at his home in West Cornwall. He then took the glider to Hermann to show it to his boyhood friend.

 "The moment he threw the first prototype at me, I knew we had something special to work on," said Hermann, a Falls Village resident.
 As Locke set out to improve his design, Hermann took over the business chores, such as trying to find a company willing to buy the glider. Hermann also set out to gain the necessary patents.
 The two first thought they would be satisfied selling the patent to a company and receiving royalties from its sales. They found many companies to be interested, but unwilling to take a gamble on the 30-year-old Locke, a logger by profession, and 29-year-old Hermann, a graphic artist.
 Eventually, they did reach a contract with one company, but that deal was cancelled last year. The two then rethought their strategy, and decided to form their own corporation and sell stock among their friends.
 "We realized no one has the energy for this like we have," Hermann said of the reason for striking out on their own. "You can't calculate the hours we put into this."
 With the support of their stockholders, the two finalized the glider's design, and found three small companies to make and package the glider.

Self-exam for parents

COLLEGE STATION — Most of us are so busy being parents that we rarely have the time to reflect on this important task, says a Texas A & M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.
 "Taking 'time out' for some observation and self-examination can shed new light on the job of parenting and give parents another perspective on their relationships with their children," says Diane T. Welch, a specialist in family life education.
 One type of parenting self-exam takes about a week. The first three days are spent observing your friends who have children near the ages of your children, she explains. As you observe, check the following points:
 —How do these parents act toward their children? Is their attitude friendly, courteous and pleasant? Do they appear to enjoy the children and approve of what they are doing, or do they appear critical, impatient and nagging?
 —How many parents request their children to do something or stop doing something and how many habitually order the children around?
 —How many embarrass their children in front of others?
 —How many expect conduct beyond their child's years, such as making a two-year-old share his toys in order to teach him to be generous?
 —How often do you see parents who show approval more often than they correct, and who seem to like and enjoy their children?
 —How many give orders so endlessly that a child has to develop deafness in self-defense? How many punish children for disobedience when the child fails to know which order was important enough to follow?
 For the next three days of the week, observe how you and — or your spouse parent your own children, says Welch. Without changing anything about the way you normally manage your children, ask the same questions about your parenting behavior.
 The final day is for thinking earnestly about what you observed in others, in each other and in yourself. Discuss whether you are satisfied with the way you are bringing up your children or whether you feel changes are needed in this important business, she says.

Dear Abby

A mistress by another name is either a Mrs., Miss or Ms.

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Margaret, an older widow who hates to be called "Mrs.," wants to know how "missus" could be abbreviated to "Mrs." since there is no "r" in "missus." For goodness sakes, there is no such word as "missus"—it's simply the sloppy pronunciation of "mistress," which is what they called the married lady of the house in the early days. "Mrs." is the abbreviation of "mistress"—which does contain an "r."

Since Margaret doesn't approve of titles, she would surely approve of the custom of the Society of Friends (Quakers) who address no one—not man, woman, doctor, king, general or mistress—by any title whatsoever.

When I was the director of a Quaker school, I was respectfully addressed by everyone—including the youngest child—as DOROTHY RUSSELL (who at 86 will answer to anything that feels comfortable to the addresser).

DEAR DOROTHY RUSSELL: Read on for more about how—and how not—to address a person:

DEAR ABBY: A male child is addressed as "master" until he reaches his teens, then he automatically becomes "mister." A female child is a "miss" until she marries; but if she remains unwed, she carries the juvenile form of address to her grave. That wrinkles my wrinkle! If a man can assume an adult title based solely on age, why shouldn't a woman do the same?

Since I am a woman with a name that can be either a man's or a woman's—and since it's been a while since I was either juvenile or married—there are times when that absurd "Ms." doesn't seem so absurd after all.

LYNN IN EL CAJON, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for Margaret, who wrote: When will we delete the absurd labels, which mean nothing?

I am even occasionally addressed as "Miss"—with three children, 13 grandchildren and a great-grandchild! Considering that record, "Miss" is absurd. With no husband, "Mrs." is absurd. And "Ms." is the most absurd of all!

I also hate labels. When I die I want inscribed on my tombstone: Please don't call me "Miss." It has a phony ring. Although I never married I didn't miss a thing.

EMMA G. IN PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Good grief, have you seen the new fashions for women? I like tailored clothes for women, but these clothes look like they are for men! Worse yet, the models look like punk rockers. This is chic? I always suspected that male fashion designers hated women. Now I'm sure.

JUST LOOKING,
THANK YOU

DEAR JUST: Keep looking; you don't have to buy. Men's fashions are equally far out. They're now showing caftans, brocaded fabrics and harem pants for men! Fashion writers have dubbed the look "Florence of Arabia."

Local church to host school for missions

Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks, will host the Hi-Plains School of Missions here Sunday through Friday.

Fourteen Christian churches in the Texas and Oklahoma area will join in featuring different missionaries each night at the school. Services will begin at 7 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. on weeknights.

Dale Marshall, who has spent 18 years in the mission field in Zimbabwe, Africa, will speak Sunday night. During his time in Zimbabwe, two English speaking congregations were established along with 54 African congregations and four fulltime African evangelists. His emphasis will be on leadership training.

Speaking Monday night will be Lloyd Rhoads, who spent 26 years in Christian missions for the homeless. He will discuss the practice of getting the Scriptures into the hands of those who have not had an opportunity to have them.

Eldon Potts, who has represented Christ to the Nations for nine years, will speak Tuesday night. Serving with special emphasis on missions in the Philippines and Korea since 1977, Potts will discuss supporting national preachers to minister in their own fields and distributing literature for special help with orphan children.

Tim and Vanita Davis, missionaries to Brazil for the past nine years, will discuss their activities during the Wednesday session. The couple has been actively planting churches in the frontier area near the Brazilian and iron mining areas on the Trans-Amazon Highway.

Thursday night David Pettit, representing Outreach International for eight years, will emphasize recruiting, motivating and equipping missionary recruits. Outreach International deals with recruiting missionaries, searching the mission field and training recruits the culture of the field.

The school will conclude Friday night with Wes Stepp, who has spent 11 years representing Youth for Christ International. He will discuss training national preachers overseas to increase their ministries and to be supporting.

Minister DeWayne Wright said the public is invited to attend and to participate in the school sessions.

DR. ROBERT R. BAYLESS

First Assembly for men seminar for families

Robert R. Bayless, a Christian psychologist and family minister, will conduct a Family Enrichment Seminar at the First Assembly of God Church, 500 N. Cuyler, Sunday through Wednesday.

Director John Farina said Sunday sessions will be held at 10:45 a.m., 6:30 p.m., with weeknight sessions beginning at 7 p.m.

Dr. Bayless has conducted family conferences nationwide for several years. Earning a master's degree in counseling psychology, he has taught courses in selling, family counseling, marriage and family counseling, and a variety of other related courses at the college level.

Dr. Bayless is a native of Arkansas, Dr. Farina has pastored in both Oklahoma and Texas. He has served as an advisor of student affairs at North Central Bible College in Minneapolis, Minn., and as vice president at Southern Bible College in Wuston.

Dr. Bayless received his master of science degree in counseling psychology from Indiana University. He was awarded his doctorate degree at the University of Minnesota. He earned his master's degree in theology and counseling from Southwestern Theological Seminary at Hachie, Texas.

Director Farina said there will be a charge for admission; however, a free offering will be taken.

Woman elected

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The RESPECTED WORD

The bible is a book translated into every known language. It is the word that men have died for, in order that it may be available to all men. It is the textbook for God's people.

The bible, itself, is not worshipped, but is respected, for it is the story of God and his relationship to man. It is man's guide for worship and daily living.

Attend church regularly, study, and seek God's will in your life.

"I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Local concert planned

Power and Light sees music as weapon in spiritual battle

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Members of a local group see their music as a means of fighting a spiritual battle in sharing the gospel of Christ with other young people.

Power and Light, a contemporary Christian music group, feel their music is not preaching; instead, they see it as a sharing of their beliefs.

The six-member group will be in concert here at the M. K. Brown Auditorium at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 11. Also appearing will be another contemporary Christian music group, Lazarus of Amarillo.

Randy Ray, bass player for Power and Light, said there is a spiritual battle going on in the world today "and this music is our way of fighting."

The group has been together for about two years, playing in various auditoriums and other places in the Texas Panhandle and parts of Oklahoma.

Ray was playing in another group - In His Name - when Tim Turner moved back to Pampa from Alabama. The two got together and wrote some songs. "They turned out pretty good," Ray said, so they formed their own group.

Turner had played with rock and roll bands in Mississippi and other places. "But I got sick of it," he said. "I had messed with all that stuff, and it came near to killing me." He decided he wanted something else.

In Pampa the two young men found other musicians to join them for jamming sessions. "People started listening for some reason," Turner said. "We found we had something different."

Ray said they found younger people could relate to them and their sharing of the gospel through their music. He said several members of the group had all had "some wild times" and then changed.

"We can show others there's something else," he said.

"But the music is not the main reason" for the group, Turner said. Instead, he feels the main purpose of the group is to share the gospel with others. "If the Lord didn't want us to be in it, we wouldn't be in it," he explained.

Power and Light plays all original songs. Most of the songs are written by Ray and Turner together, some separately. Recently, the Smith sisters, providing vocal back-up, have started writing some songs, too.

The group has undergone some personnel changes since its founding. Currently the band consists of Ray, bass player; Turner, lead singer and guitar; Oty Scalise, drummer; and back-up singers, Andora, Sherry and Tammy Smith.

The three sisters have sung in a local family group, The Song Smiths, since they were young girls. Though now members of Power and Light, they still sing with the family group at times.

Scalise has been a studio player in Amarillo, serving as a session player on some albums.

Also with the group is Harlan Hatcher, sound engineer. Hatcher has had sound experience in California. "He's quite knowledgeable about the equipment," Turner noted.

Tim Hutto serves as manager for Power and Light. Hutto prefers to remain in the background, but Ray and Turner said he has been a great help to the band. The group is booked solid for the next several weeks, with other bookings being lined up.

Ray, who will be graduating in December from West Texas State University in mass communications, said the group plays rock and roll - "not hard, but pop rock" - but it's really contemporary Christian music. The music is aimed mainly at younger people from junior high to college age, he said.

"But to our surprise, some older people like it, too," he said.

Turner, who says he's a carpenter and a musician, said one of the goals for the group is to get a recording contract. There are many steps along the way to that goal, he said.

The top goal for the group, though, is to travel around the country, Turner stated. An album would assist that goal, he explained. "People hear your album, then they want to see you," he said.

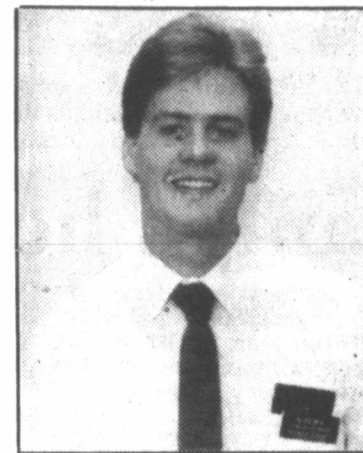

Turner feels Power and Light is a professional band, not just a local group. "The band has something going," he said.

Appearing with them at the concert here will be Lazarus, a seven-member contemporary Christian music group which has been together about five years. Members of the group include Andy Denton, lead singer; his wife, Janet Denton, back-up vocals; Phillip Dalton, bass; Gary Grice, guitar; Wynn Flemming, keyboards; Albert Flores, drummer, and another back-up vocalist.

The concert is being sponsored by Drug Free Youth Activity, a local anti-drug use organization. Admission to the two-hour concert will be $3.

ELDER ROBERT BEAL

Mormon missionaries serving in Pampa area

Two missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) are currently serving in the Pampa area, part of the Texas Dallas Mission of the church.

Elder Mark Duffin of Tooele, Utah, and Elder Robert Beal of Denver, Colo., are serving with the Pampa and Borger Wards (parishes) of the church to discuss the beliefs and tenets of the Latter-day Saints.

The two young men will be in the mission field for 18 months. Elder Duffin has been out for nearly 16 months on his mission, while Elder Beal has been on his mission for about seven weeks. They have been in Pampa for about a month.

The elders said their main purpose is to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ and the church of the Latter-day Saints through contacting and visiting with area residents. The missionaries cover the Pampa and Borger areas, also including Panhandle, White Deer, Skellytown, Fritch, Stinnett, Lefors, Canadian, Wheeler and Miami.

Elder Duffin said Mormon missionaries pay their own way while on their missions. Their expenses are generally paid from their own earnings or from the support of their families and home-ward members.

Elder Beal said the missionaries will be "happy to talk to anyone about the church and what we believe." They can be contacted at 669-1737.

The two are among about 25,000 Mormon missionaries currently serving throughout the United States and the rest of the world.

Church sets commemoration to note 90 years of history

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Members of the Pampa Church of the Brethren will come home Sunday to honor 90 years of church history.

According to the Rev. LaVerne Hinson, pastor of the Church of the Brethren, the church will commemorate its rich heritage with a "birthday" celebration at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Church. Featured speaker will be Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy. Sunday is also the church's "homecoming," in which past congregation members return for a visit.

Hinson asks that members bring a covered dish for a special lunch for the homecoming.

Sunday will also begin a week-long revival, featuring the Rev. Bert G. Richardson of Gray, Tenn. The first service will be at 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

The first church to be organized in Gray County, the Pampa Church of the Brethren was established July 21, 1894, with a congregation in Laketon. Abraham Molsbee of Nocona came to Gray County to organize the church. He stayed 13 days and preached 18 sermons, according to one church historian.

One of the founding pastors of the church, known as the Panhandle Church of the Brethren until 1929, was John Stump, the great-uncle of church member Mary Laverne Rose.

A member of the church since 1930, Rose remembers hearing of the early days of the Panhandle church.

"I guess you can say I was born into the church," she said. "I grew to accept the doctrines and beliefs of the church."

According to Rose, the church was established on her great-uncle's farm near Laketon in 1894.

"As the church progressed and grew, we moved to what was then the High Windy School," she said, adding that at the time, the school building served as a church, school and community center. "We had weddings there, and as far as I know, it was the only meeting place in Laketon at the time."

REV. BERT RICHARDSON

The church remained in Laketon until 1929, when the congregation bought a building at 637 N. Nelson to convert into a church and parsonage.

"It had previously been used as a dance hall," remembered Violet Pipes, the daughter of another early pastor, in a recent church letter. It was "only partly floored and the windows missing. With fall and winter not far off, everyone pitched in and worked. We soon had the building ready. C.C. Gillis and my father made the seats and my mother put in the floor in what was later the parsonage kitchen. We papered, painted and varnished, working almost night and day."

The church's current building, a gray masonry structure at the corner of Frost and Montagu, was built in 1938.

"It was done largely by members and donations," Rose remembered, adding that at the time, many prominent Pampa residents were members of the church.

In 1948, the church building was remodeled and enlarged. A colorful stained glass window, which bears a picture of Jesus Christ, was made specially for the church by an Oklahoma City window company.

Rose said that the window, which stands over the altar, has become a treasured part of the church building.

"We have been offered twice as much as we paid for it," she said.

Her brother, Bryce Hubbard, was pastor of the church from 1964 to 1983.

Today, the church has 55 members. It's a small congregation, Rev. Hinson admits, but it's growing.

"It's growing spiritually," he said. "It's almost an entirely different church than what it was when I got here in April."

Rose also treasures her membership in the church.

"I have a love for the church that I cannot express," she said. "It's a part of me."

Lutherans plan area convocation

A group of members from the Zion Lutheran Church will be attending the Circuit 1 and 2 Convocation in Amarillo on Sunday.

The convocation will begin at 3:30 p.m. in the Amarillo Civic Center meeting room.

Theme of the meeting is "Lutherans in the Texas Panhandle." Keynote speaker will be Rev. Norman C. Hein, consultant to congregations for the Lutheran Social Service of Texas.

Also on the program will be a skit by youths based on I Corinthians 12 and film-slide presentations from circuit congregations.

Topics of discussion will include congregational ministries and visions for the future.

Following the convocation, a supper will be held for those in attendance.

Oral Robert's son moving upstage in father's empire

By HERBERT G. McCANN
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — At the beginning of his television program, Richard Roberts, like many other talk show hosts, bounces out from behind a curtain and launches into an upbeat song when introduced.

However, unlike the typical host, Roberts sings inspirational songs. Instead of interviewing a guest about his or her latest movie, Roberts questions his guests about their religious experiences.

With the fall debut of the daily Richard Roberts Show, Roberts is making his first attempt at hosting a show in the medium that launched his father, evangelist Oral Roberts, into prominence.

For years, Roberts has appeared on his father's weekly television programs — singing and expanding on the religious doctrine preached by his father. In recent years, he also has served as executive producer.

The hour-long Richard Roberts Show is broadcast live from television studios in the Mabee Center, located on the campus of Oral Roberts University. The center also contains a sports arena. Roberts tells the viewers of his show that its purpose is to "encourage, entertain, inform and help them find answers to the problems they face daily."

Except for brief musical interludes provided by a 14-member band and a group called the Oral Roberts Singers, Roberts is on camera for most of the program. He is assisted on the show by his wife, Lindsey.

Immaculately dressed, Roberts wanders around the huge set either to sit on a sofa and talk to his wife about letters from viewers asking for prayers, or circulates among the audience.

In the audience, he seeks reports from "real people with miracle stories on physical, emotional, spiritual and financial problems they have overcome through prayers."

During a recent show, Roberts combined the real people stories with another segment of the show he calls "news updates" to form a near 15-minute promotion of Oral Roberts' City of Faith Medical Center which opened in 1981.

The hospital has had financial problems in recent months because of a lack of patients. Roberts talked of a number of hospital promotions and touted a new hospital policy of offering free treatment to the poor.

Roberts, in keeping with the recent emergence of his healing ministry, also prays for viewers who call a bank of telephones located on the show's set.

Like his father, Roberts has refused to be interviewed by the media in recent months, and recently declined to talk about the show sponsored by the Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association.

However, the producer of the show, Harry Salem, said the idea of the program came from the son.

"The idea resulted from Richard receiving word from a Chicago man who said he was delivered from drug addiction while watching Oral Roberts' Sunday show," Salem said. "He decided if that was what the show was doing, why should the viewer have to wait seven days to be helped by the ministry."

The cost of doing the show has not been determined, Salem said. He said because the show is produced in house, using the same technical people who produce the Oral Roberts shows, a budget has not yet been developed.

Earlier this year, Oral Roberts revealed that about $15 million a year is spent producing television and radio shows for his ministry.

During his show, Roberts makes pitches for contributions from viewers, asking for $100 first and then for lesser amounts. After the show, collection baskets are passed among the audience.

Currently the show is on about 80 television stations across the country, according to Salem.

NFL roundup

Miami eyes perfect season

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

When he's asked about the possibility of this year's Miami Dolphins emulating his 1972 squad, the last National Football League team to go unbeaten, Don Shula gives the standard answer about playing them one at a time.

If the Dolphins are still unbeaten after Sunday, the questions will get more frequent.

Miami visits Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., in the first of two meetings with the New York Jets, who are 6-3 and tied with New England three games back in the AFC East. If the Dolphins can get by New York on the road, the only serious obstacles left seem to be the Los Angeles Raiders and Dallas Cowboys and both those teams will have to visit Miami.

But, Shula worries this week only about the Jets and their pass rush, which will have to deal with a Miami front line that has allowed Dan Marino to be sacked only four times.

"Any quarterback can be sacked," says the Jets' Mark

Gastineau, who leads the NFL with 16½ sacks. "It's just a matter of applying the right pressure. But Marino is as elusive as anyone."

In other games Sunday, Cleveland is at Buffalo, Green Bay at New Orleans, Houston at Pittsburgh, the Los Angeles Raiders at Chicago, the New York Giants at Dallas, Philadelphia at Detroit, San Diego at Indianapolis, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, Cincinnati at San Francisco, Kansas City at Seattle, the Los Angeles Rams at St. Louis and New England at Denver.

Atlanta is at Washington Monday night.

The Jets' record has been built mostly against the NFL's lower echelons — they've lost twice to New England, which is also 6-3. That makes a win against the Dolphins even more important if the Jets are to have a good shot at the playoffs.

So while Shula worries about Gastineau, Jets Coach Joe Walton is concerned with Marino, who has already passed Bob Griese's Miami season record with 27 touchdown passes in nine games and seems almost certain to break the NFL mark of 36, held by George Blanda and Y.A. Tittle.

"He has uncanny ability," Walton says of Marino. "You can't outrun his arm."

The Cardinals, who have won four straight, are 6-3 and tied with Dallas at the top of the NFC East. They've beaten three straight division rivals — Dallas, Washington and Philadelphia — but Coach Jim Hanifan says he has no fear of a letdown against the Rams, who were shutout 33-0 by San Francisco last weekend and at 5-4 are three games behind the 49ers in the NFC West.

"If we were playing St. Mary's of the Wasatch this would be a big game," Hanifan says.

The game in Chicago is a big one for the Super Bowl champion Raiders, who dropped a 22-19 overtime decision and fell out of a first place tie with the Raiders in the tough AFC West. Los Angeles is 7-2, with both losses to 8-1 Denver, meaning help is needed from outside if the Raiders are to win the division.

The Bears, 6-3, need no help — they lead the NFC Central by three games.

Pampa hosts Borger tonight

Although the Pampa Harvesters won't be going to any football playoffs this year, the 1984 season could come close to being salvaged with a victory tonight over Archival Borger.

"There's always a big rivalry between our two schools," said Pampa head coach John Kendall. "They're going to be awfully tough to beat. They've been in every game they've lost this year and size-wise they're a lot bigger than us."

Borger dropped a 20-7 decision to Canyon last week to drop the Bulldogs to 3-4 overall and 2-2 in District 1-4A play. The Bulldogs must win their last two games to keep their hopes alive for a playoff spot. The top two teams in the final District standings advance to the playoffs.

Quarterback Bill Compton and fullback Wayne Dickson have been a solid 1-2 punch for Borger this season.

"I feel that Compton is one of the better quarterbacks in district," Kendall said. "Dickson is a power fullback and a good defensive player."

Dickson scored Borger's only touchdown against Canyon on a 17-yard run.

Last season, the Harvesters closed the season on a pleasing note, defeating Borger, 30-6, the last game of the season. The Harvesters were coming off consecutive shutout losses to Canyon and Lubbock Dunbar. That win avenged a 27-7 loss to Borger in 1982, Kendall's first year as head coach here.

Pampa (1-7 and 1-3) turned in one of its better performances in a losing effort last week against unbeaten Lubbock Dunbar. The Harvesters trailed at halftime, 8-0, before finally losing, 22-6.

"I felt like we played well, but we gave Dunbar three big plays and they scored on us," Kendall said. "We'd do all right if we would quit giving people the ball on turnovers and start taking advantage of other teams' errors."

Pampa will be without tight end Wiley Kennedy and offensive lineman John Stevens for the remainder of the season. Both are out with mononucleosis. Bill Hopkins, 170-pound senior, will take Kennedy's place. Stevens, who missed last week's game because of illness, will have his position filled by Shawn Greene, 175-pound sophomore.

Tonight's game kicks off at 7:30 p.m. at Harvester Stadium.

In other district games, Lubbock Estacado visits Levelland and Canyon is at Dumas.

Huskies not looking past Cal

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The top-ranked Washington Huskies may have found the cure for looking ahead as they prepare for a Pacific-10 Conference meeting with California.

The Huskies, 8-0, could be thinking about No. 18 Southern California, the leader in the conference and 6-1 overall, whom they meet next week. But Coach Don James has made a move to ensure his 20½-point favored team isn't forgetting about 2-6 Cal.

James has benched starting quarterback Hugh Millen in favor of fourth-year junior Paul Sicuro. Millen lost his job when he was intercepted three times and lost two fumbles in the first half of a 18-12 victory against Arizona last weekend.

"I would certainly hope that we've been around long enough to not be that dumb," James said of the look-ahead theory.

James used Sicuro in the second half against Arizona and opted for him to start this Saturday.

"The five turnovers," James said when asked why he was making the change.

While Washington is making alterations, Cal gets back its No. 1 signal-caller, Gale Gilbert. Gilbert missed the Golden Bears' 31-7 loss to Southern Cal last week because of a severely sprained ankle.

Elsewhere on Saturday, No. 2 Texas is at Texas Tech; No. 3 Nebraska visits Iowa State; Texas-El Paso is at No. 4 Brigham Young; No. 5 South Carolina goes to North Carolina State; No. 6 Miami, Fla., travels to Louisville; Wisconsin is at No. 7 Iowa; eighth-ranked Georgia hosts Memphis State; No. 9 Boston College is at Penn State; and Missouri is at No. 10 Oklahoma.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 Auburn plays at No. 13 Florida; Virginia visits No. 12 West Virginia; No. 14 Florida State journeys to Arizona State for a night game; Mississippi goes to No. 15 LSU, also at night; Indiana is at No. 16 Ohio State; Wisconsin visits No. 17 Iowa; Southern Cal is at Stanford; No. 19

Southern Methodist takes on Texas A&M, and No. 20 Texas Christian visits Houston.

South Carolina puts its perfect 7-0 mark on the line at NC State, which has come close to pulling off upsets the last two weeks. The 3-5 Wolfpack performed well in a 28-21 loss to North Carolina and a 35-34 defeat to Clemson.

Turkey shoot Sunday

Pampa Trap and Skeet Club is sponsoring a turkey shoot Sunday, starting at 12 noon at the club range located north of the Gray County Rodeo Arena.

Entrants will be shooting for prizes ranging from a turkey to shotgun shells. The public is invited to attend the shoot.

Peterson leads Mazda Golf

By HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Cauri Peterson of the United States fired a 4-under-par 68 today to claim a one-stroke lead after the first round of the $275,000 Mazda Japan Classic, the final official PGA tournament of the season.

Peterson, 15th on the 1984 Ladies Professional Golf Association money winning list, scored five birdies against one bogey over the 295-yard, par-72 Hachihonmatsu course at the Hiroshima Country Club.

One stroke behind was Taiwan's Huang Yueh-Chyn, who fired a 69.

Beverly Klass and Kathy Baker, both of the United States, and Australia's Jan Stephenson shared third place at 70.

Tied for sixth at 71 were Ku Ok-hee of South Korea, Americans Donna White and Sue Ertl, and Marta Figueras-Dotti of Peru.

American Betsy King, the current leading money winner on the U.S. tour, and Pat Bradley, shot 74s and were tied for 24th place.

Patty Sheehan and Amy Alcott, both of the United States, each carded a 75 and shared 38th place.

A field of 47 top foreign women pro golfers and 31 Japanese, Taiwanese and South Korean players is competing for top prize money of $41,250.

Har-rumph!

Huskies make Golden Bears shiver

By Major Amos B. Hoople
Peerless Prognosticator

Brrrrrr, friends! As the chill of fall sweeps across the nation's gridirons, red-hot college football teams are — kaff-kaff — getting as scarce as Indiana in summer. This may well be one of those seasons where no team finishes with a clean slate. Um-kumph!

At home in the north, the Washington Huskies, driving hard for the Pac-10 crown, welcome California this week. And the forces of Don James had best be at their best — heh-heh — to best the Golden Bears of wily coach Joe Kapp. In a touch-and-go affair, look for Washington to win, 28-24. Har-rumph!

The Boston College Eagles, soaring toward one of their best seasons ever, are trying to put a lock on the Lambert Trophy, signifying Eastern supremacy. If BC's Doug Flutie is to stay ahead of Keith Byars of Ohio State in the Heisman Trophy race, he has to have a big day against the Nitany Lions of Penn State. And Flutie can rise to the occasion. Boston College will triumph, 38-24. Hak-kaff!

With their Big Eight showdown two weeks hence, the Oklahoma and Nebraska forces had better concentrate on the work at hand — or the show-down may be for naught. Oklahoma will be hard pressed, but will beat Missouri, 28-22. Nebraska will get its running attack going, and subdue Iowa State, 40-17.

In the SWC race — which probably won't be decided until Turkey Day or thereabouts — the Texas Longhorns will triumph over Texas Tech, 24-12. And Southern Methodist will slip past Texas A&M, 26-22, in the 66th renewal of their series. Kaff-kaff!

Major Hoople's

Brigham Young rates the Hoople Nod to thump Texas-El Paso, 42-10; Ohio State will turn back neighbor Indiana, 36-18; and pass-happy Iowa should down Wisconsin, 38-17.

A pair of red-letter clashes in the SEC will see Auburn squeezing past a good Florida eleven, 24-21, and Louisiana State, the surprise of the conference, taking Ole Miss, 31-21. Um-kumph!

Two neighborhood brawls find surprising South Carolina dumping North Carolina State, 42-21, and West Virginia's Mountaineers edging the valiant Virginia Cavaliers, 28-20.

And a special tip from the Hoople Hat to Joe Morrison and his South Carolina Fighting Gamecocks. How many teams beat Georgia, Pitt and Notre Dame in the same year? The Gamecocks did. Har-rumph!

TCU hoping for first victory over Houston

By DENNEH. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Will success spoil the "smash-mouth" Texas Christian Horned Frogs?

Can they come back to reality after breaking into the Top Twenty for the first time in 22 years?

Can they beat the University of Houston for the first time, EVER?

The next chapter in their amazing Southwest Conference football odyssey is in the Astrodome at Houston on Saturday morning.

The breakfast game is set for 11:30 a.m. in the Raycom SWC television series.

Off to their best start in 26 years, the freshly ranked No. 20 Horned Frogs will be trying to beat the Cougars for the very first time in nine tries.

TCU, which adopted "smash-mouth" football as their 1984 motto, leads the nation in rushing, total offense and scoring.

And the Frogs have a bowl on their minds.

"Being in the Cotton Bowl would be nice, but after four years of pure hell, it'll be a thrill to be in any bowl besides the toilet bowl," said TCU safety Byron Linwood.

It was Linwood's halftime speech that was credited with TCU rallying last week for a 38-28 victory over Baylor.

TCU is a field goal choice over

Houston, which last week was knocked out of first place in the SWC race by Arkansas.

In other games, the No. 2-ranked Texas Longhorns are 14-point picks over Texas Tech in Lubbock; Southern Methodist is a 13-point favorite over Texas A&M at Texas Stadium; Arkansas is a 30-point selection over Rice; and Baylor is a touchdown choice over New Mexico in Waco, the final non-conference matchup of the year.

"We have found we can play with anyone," said TCU running back Kenneth Davis. "There is no goal that's out of our reach right now, except being 11-0."

TCU's only loss was to SMU earlier in the season.

Horned Frog Coach Jim Wacker is wary of the Cougars.

"There stands Houston, a super football team and one that's probably madder than a hornet after their game in Arkansas last week," said Wacker. "When Gerald Landry gets that Houston Veer to humming, it's a sight to behold. He is a magician."

Texas leads the SWC with a 3-0 record, followed by TCU and Houston at 3-1.

Arkansas, SMU and Texas Tech are tied with 2-2 ledgers followed by Baylor 2-3, Texas A&M 1-3 and Rice 0-4.

Issel sparks Nuggets

By The Associated Press

When Dan Issel was younger, he was renowned for going full tilt for 48 minutes. At age 36, his playing time has been reduced but not his competitive spirit.

Issel came off the bench to score 25 points in 27 minutes Thursday night, boosting the Denver Nuggets to a 129-113 thumping of the Chicago Bulls.

"Dan Issel really got it going," said Denver Coach Doug Moe. "It's a good thing we didn't start him, or he might be dead now."

"Old Dan — and I mean old — really gave us a lift."

In other National Basketball Association games, it was Detroit 118, Atlanta 114; Houston 109, Kansas City 106; the Los Angeles Clippers 107, New York 105; San Antonio 123, Golden State 108; Seattle 105, the Los Angeles Lakers 103; and Phoenix 139, Portland 130 in three overtimes.

"I thought we had a terrific effort from a lot of players tonight," added Moe, and Chicago Coach Kevin Loughery could only agree.

"Denver is much more aggressive defensively than they've ever been in the past," he said.

Calvin Natt scored 11 of his 31 points in the first five minutes of the fourth quarter to fuel Denver's romp.

Quintin Dailey led the Bulls with 26 and Orlando Woolridge added 24.

Pistons 118, Hawks 114
Kelly Tripucka, who scored 25 points, hit a layup with 24 seconds to play to snap a 114-114 tie. After Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins was called for walking, Isiah Thomas iced the Detroit victory with a pair of free throws.

Detroit's Dan Roundfield, a former Hawk, led all scorers with 26.

Rockets 109, Kings 106
Rodney McCray canned a 20-foot jumper with 28 seconds left and Lewis Lloyd added a pair of free throws as Houston ran its season-opening unbeaten streak to three games. Kansas City, meanwhile, slipped to 0-3.

Akeem Olajuwon led the Rockets with 25 points.

Clippers 107, Knicks 105
Norm Nixon scored nine of his 21 points in final period as the Clippers made a successful debut in Los Angeles. The Clippers, who played in San Diego last season, led 106-103 after Nixon's 20-footer with 1:20 to play.

Spurs 123, Warriors 106
Forward Mike Mitchell notched 33 points as San Antonio, winner of three straight, bombed mistake-prone Golden State. The Warriors, winless in four games, were guilty of 24 turnovers.

Sonics 105, Lakers 103
Ricky Sobers' 18-foot jumper with seven seconds to play to give Seattle a two-point lead. Los Angeles missed a final chance to tie the game when Magic Johnson threw a bad inbounds pass as time expired.

Arlington man faces murder charges in daughter's death

DALLAS (AP) — Karen Atwell, who works in the pediatric trauma unit at Parkland Memorial Hospital, has dealt with quite a few child abuse cases in her nine years as a nurse.

"However, this is the worst one I've ever seen," she said of the death of Una Yvette Boyd, 2½, who died Wednesday, two days after being taken to the hospital in a coma. She never regained consciousness.

The child's father, Bennie H. Boyd, 34, of Arlington is being held in Tarrant County Jail in Fort Worth on $100,000 bond. Charges of committing serious injury to a child were upgraded Thursday to capital murder.

Boyd's daughter had bedsores and bruises from "head to toe" when a baby sitter took her to an Irving hospital shortly after noon on Monday. The child was transferred to Parkland later in the afternoon.

Officials of the Irving hospital called police, and Boyd was arrested when he showed up at Parkland. The woman who brought the child in said initially that the child had fallen from a tricycle and from a bathroom stool, but later told police that Boyd had beaten the child, authorities said.

Parkland Hospital spokesman Gregory Graze said the child died of brain damage caused by heart and respiratory arrest that occurred before she arrived at the hospital.

The child "obviously had been abused over a long period," Graze said. Doctors found "some suggestion of sexual abuse," along with old scratch marks, a liver laceration, and a stomach injury possibly caused by a sharp kick or fall, Graze said.

By the color of the bruises, doctors concluded the child had been beaten repeatedly for at least a week.

Boyd described himself as a house painter, said Arlington police Sgt. Hugh Atwell. Police said Boyd told them his wife left the family in July. Boyd said he doesn't know where she is or why she left, authorities added.

Neighbors in the apartment complex where Boyd lived said they'd noticed bad cuts and bruises on the girl's body last summer. They said they suspected child abuse, but didn't report it because they weren't sure.

On Oct. 1, someone did notify the Texas Department of Human Resources that the child was being abused, but child welfare workers and Irving police were unable to locate her because the family had moved to Arlington, said Irving juvenile investigator Becky Fann.

Nurses, paramedics, police officers and firefighters who came to know the child in the past week took over funeral arrangements. An Irving funeral home offered to bury Una Yvette free. Ms. Atwell bought burial clothes. Arlington police have been collecting donations for a grave marker. Irving police have set up a trust fund to pay funeral expenses for future children in similar circumstances.

Officials said it is likely all of those at Monday's 2 p.m. funeral will be strangers, since the father is in jail and the mother's whereabouts are unknown.

"There are no other relatives that we know of that can be located," Ms. Atwell said. "If we didn't step in and do this, she would be buried by the medical examiner."

31 injured in roof collapse on prison garment factory

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Part of a roof collapsed on a garment factory at the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit, injuring 27 convicts and four employees, a prison spokesman said.

Only one inmate, Charles Forsythe, 30, was hospitalized with a broken collarbone after Thursday's accident, spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

"Apparently, a connector holding a beam at a reinforcing support column gave way," Guthrie said. He said the roof sagged, dumping metal and concrete into the factory at the unit, near Lovelady. A section about 40 feet by 60 feet was sagging into the factory, he said.

About 280 inmates and nine prison employees were working in the factory at the time.

"It could have been real bad," Guthrie said. He said the connector failure was being investigated by the prison's construction division.

Meanwhile, officials were investigating the attacks on three inmates at the Coffield Unit near Palestine and the knifing of another at the Darrington Unit in Rosharon.

Brown said the three inmates attacked at the Coffield Unit were attacked by four prisoners armed with a 12-inch metal hatchet, a two-foot metal chain, a seven-inch homemade knife, a four-inch razor blade box cutter and a 10-inch screwdriver.

Brown identified the victims of the Coffield Unit attack as George Guerra, 22, serving a life sentence for a capital murder in Medina County; John Anthony Ryan, 21, serving five-years for theft of property and burglary of a habitation in Collin County and possession of a prohibited weapon and unauthorized use of a vehicle from Dallas County.

Also injured was Luckey Marshall Wright, 40, serving 15 years for possession of marijuana and cocaine in Tarrant County and conspiracy to commit capital murder in Parker County.

The three inmates were in serious condition at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, Brown said.

Prison officials and officers of the Anderson County sheriff's office were questioning four inmates in connection with the Coffield attacks.

The Darrington Unit victim was identified as Youree McDonald, 30, serving 40 years for arson with a deadly weapon in Harris County. McDonald was stabbed in the right side of the chest, the left armpit, the front left shoulder and the back left shoulder, Brown said.

He was in stable condition at Angleton Danbury Hospital, Brown said.

Names in news

LONDON (AP) — Sir John Gielgud praised the late actor James Mason for his "brilliant combination of romantic panache and down-to-earth realism" at a memorial service at St. Paul's Church in Covent Garden.

Actor David Warner, comedian Spike Milligan, and actress Ann Todd were among the entertainers who attended the memorial service Thursday for Mason, who died in Switzerland on July 27 at the age of 75.

Gielgud directed Mason on stage in 1934 and they appeared together in Joseph L. Mankiewicz's 1953 film, "Julius Caesar," in which Gielgud played Cassius to Mason's Brutus. They worked together in Mason's last film, "The Shooting Party," which hasn't been released yet.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — President Reagan hasn't made it to the New Orleans World's Fair, but with only a week left in its troubled six-month run, first lady Nancy Reagan will visit Saturday.

Mrs. Reagan will attend a crafts demonstration at the fair's U.S. Pavilion, said White House spokesman Frank Thorvald. No other details of the trip were announced, Thorvald said.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Astronaut Jon McBride says his Oct. 5 launch in the space shuttle Challenger was a "near religious experience."

"Take the most electrifying amusement park ride you've ever ridden, triple that feeling, blend in the your first love affair, add the first time you fell off a horse, multiply everything by four, and you're getting close," he said.

McBride, 41, a Charleston native who lives in Houston, was honored Thursday as Gov. Jay Rockefeller declared Jon McBride Day in the state and bent the rules to present McBride with a "SHUTTLE" license plate.

BARRY MANILOW

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainer Barry Manilow will have a busy night Saturday as he sandwiches an appearance on NBC's Saturday Night Live between sold-out performances at Radio City Music Hall.

Manilow will finish his 8 p.m. show about 11:15 p.m., dash to the NBC studios where he will play himself in a sketch with comedian Billy Crystal, then race back for his midnight show, said spokesman Michael Ameen.

Fortunately, he'll only have to cross the street to get there.

Judge delays ruling on trust's request

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An attorney for financially troubled Braniff Inc. says the airline will suffer further harm unless it is allowed to make joint operating agreements with other airlines in a streamlining effort.

A federal bankruptcy judge said Thursday he has taken under advisement a trustees' request for a temporary restraining order against Braniff Inc. to block the agreements for plane rentals.

"Braniff will suffer immeasurable damage if they are prohibited from granting the agreements," Braniff attorney Robert Mow argued before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Michael A. McConnel.

The reorganized Braniff Inc. should be stopped from renting 20 of its 30 Boeing 727-200 aircraft to other carriers, argued attorneys for BRNF Liquidating Trust, which represents secured creditors of Braniff Airways.

The judge set Nov. 12 for a hearing on a preliminary injunction also requested by the trust. But he said he needed more time to study Thursday's arguments.

"I promise a prompt and reasoned decision," said McConnel, after attorneys representing Braniff and unsecured creditors of the airline's bankrupt predecessor presented arguments.

Renting the planes is part of a survival plan by Braniff, which is also scheduled to ground planes, curtail flights and lay off employees beginning Monday.

The trust was established to administer payments due to 240 listed beneficiaries who are secured creditors. If the trust successfully blocks the plans, Braniff could be forced to return some or all of the aircraft it operates.

The trust now leases to the airline 30 Boeing 727-200 aircraft for a total of $2.7 million per month. A BRNF trustee, James W. Toren, said a delayed ruling does not immediately threaten the trust's interests.

Stephen E. Herrmann, representing the trust, claimed the joint operations violate terms of the reorganization plan affirmed by the Fort Worth bankruptcy court last December.

Herrmann said that Braniff should end its lease agreements if it is unable to operate a regularly scheduled airline, as outlined in its reorganization plan.

"We believe quite frankly that this is a sub-lease," Herrmann said. "We believe this doesn't pass the smell test, no matter what you call it."

Braniff officials said they will only rent the planes.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The names of 15 more of the nation's Vietnam dead have been etched onto the black granite walls of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Jan Scruggs, the combat veteran who founded the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, the organization that built the monument, said Thursday the addition brought to 58,022 the names of dead and missing from Vietnam that are on the memorial.

Two of the 15 whose names were added died aboard Navy ships off Vietnam, Scruggs said. He said the others fought in the war and died later of their wounds. Last year, 68 names were added under similar circumstances, he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency, which banned all agricultural uses of EDB earlier this year, now wants to impose tighter restraints on the disposal of EDB wastes from the production of gasoline additives and other chemicals.

EPA officials said Thursday the agency intends to propose new regulations next week to add EDB — ethylene dibromide — production wastes to a list of 75 other hazardous substances subject to specific disposal requirements under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Although the amount of EDB, a known carcinogen, is expected to decline because of EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus' ban last February on its use as a pesticide, almost 90 percent of all EDB in the country is still being produced as a gasoline additive.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — University of Colorado students have rejected a proposal to stockpile cyanide capsules for mass suicides in a nuclear war, a plan approved by a wide margin last month at Brown University in Rhode Island.
