

Plan gives most taxpayers break

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department's dramatic overhaul of the American tax system would slice federal income tax rates, do away with a variety of deductions and double the personal exemption to $2,000, administration officials said.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan was unveiling the plan, which needs the approval of President Reagan and the Congress, later today.

It would retain the deduction for mortgage interest on taxpayers' principal residences but limit to $5,000 the deduction for all other interest, including that for mortgages on second or vacation homes, said the officials, who spoke only on the condition they not be identified.

In all, the officials said 78 percent of individual taxpayers would see their income tax payments fall or hold steady under Regan's nearly year-long effort to come up with a better way to tax the nation. On average, American taxpayers would find their federal tax bills fall 8.5 percent, the officials said.

Twenty-two percent of taxpayers, mostly those in high tax brackets, would turn over more to the government by being stripped of ways to shelter their income from the tax collector, they said.

President Reagan ordered the Treasury Department in January to undertake the study in an effort to make fairer and simpler the complicated tax code. Adoption of wide-ranging changes would mark the biggest overhaul of the system since the income tax came into being 71 years ago.

But the likelihood Congress will go along with any wholesale revamping is questionable. Some influential members have vowed that steps to reduce the budget deficit, projected to run in excess of $200 billion this year, will take priority over tax simplification.

The Regan plan, according to the officials, centers on a "modified flat" tax proposal for individuals that slashes the number of tax rates and ends many deductions, exclusions and credits. A pure flat-tax plan would tax everyone at the same rate, regardless of income, and wipe out nearly all deductions.

The Treasury's modified plan clips the current 16 tax rates to three, with the top bracket sliced from 50 percent to 35 percent for the wealthiest taxpayers. The two other rates are set at 25 percent and 15 percent, according to these sources.

The lowest rate currently is 11 percent. But the officials said taxes for those in lower brackets wouldn't climb because higher personal exemptions would be put in place to protect them.

"Taxes would be virtually eliminated for anyone at the poverty level or below," one official said. He added that some low-income taxpayers would find their tax bills tumbling by 30 percent.

The plan calls for raising the personal exemption for taxpayers, spouses and their dependents from the current $1,000 to $2,000, officials said.

The amount for the standard deduction would rise from $2,510 for single taxpayers to $2,800; from $3,710 for joint returns to $3,800; and from $2,510 for heads of households to $3,800, the officials said.

Business lobbyists said they understood that Regan's plan calls for eliminating the investment tax credit, which is used as an incentive for business to buy equipment, and the research and development credit, which helps firms that boost their expenditures in those areas.

City okays new code

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners today approved on first reading a new city electrical code.

David McKinney, employee in the city's Code Enforcement Department, said the new code would incorporate all other related ordinances and update the city standards to accord with the 1984 national code.

The city regulations on establishing the Electrical Board, setting wiring standards, providing for electrical inspections, determining licensing standards, setting fees and providing other guidelines would thus all be in one general ordinance, McKinney said.

The new code also increases the Electrical Board by one member.

The appointment of the new member to the board was on the agenda this morning. But commissioners delayed any action on the appointment until the ordinance has received final approval.

The commission approved on second reading an ordinance regarding the Texas Municipal Retirement System.

The city will increase its share of contributions to the TMRS fund for retirement, supplemental disability and supplemental death benefits for city employees.

Mayor Calvin Whatley said the action would help to cut down the problem of turnovers in city employment. "It's a step in the right direction to make municipal work more attractive to people," he stated.

In other action, commissioners approved on second reading an ordinance providing for the enforcement of yield right-of-way signs at the intersection of 20th Ave., Dogwood Lane and Evergreen.

The commission approved on first reading an ordinance permitting a zoning change from Office District to Specific Use Permit for the addition of a clinical pharmacy to the North Crest Medical Plaza.

City Attorney Don Lane said the pharmacy will not be a general drugstore or retail store. Instead, it will be limited to the sale of prescription and over-the-counter medicines and other related health

Youngster found asleep in cold after wandering from his home

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A six-year-old Pampa boy who reportedly wandered off from his home in the middle of the night and spent several hours exposed to the freezing weather was found asleep on the ground this morning by a woman taking her child to school.

Charles Adam Rainey, son of Stevon and Betty Rainey, 721 N. Wells, was treated and released for exposure at Coronado Community Hospital.

Pampa police said the St. Matthews first grader apparently left his home some time during the night and walked about 10 blocks.

The boy was found on the ground next to a chain link fence in front of the Horace Mann School, facing the 400 block of North Hobart, about 7:50 a.m. today.

Police said the child, dressed in a pajama top, light robe and pullover jacket, socks, cowboy boots and a pair of underwear, apparently was exposed to last night's chilling cold for several hours. The low temperature in Pampa this morning was 25 degrees, but winds howling at 22 m.p.h. at 7 a.m. dropped the chill factor to well below zero.

The child didn't suffer any serious injury as a result of his exposure to the weather, a hospital spokesman said today.

The boy's parents called police to report him missing about 7:30 this morning.

Police searched the area for the boy, but the 42-inch tyke was found by Melissa A. Wilson, 1217 S. Sumner, when she dropped her child off at the school.

The woman said the boy was wrapped in a blanket and lay on a pillow he had carried from home.

"I saw the blanket. You couldn't tell anyone was in it. I thought, 'No, it couldn't be a child in this weather,'" Wilson said.

She said she let her son out of her car and started to leave the school, but had to check out the bundle to relieve her nagging doubts. She walked up to the blanket, then saw little legs sticking out. Wilson said she was afraid of what she might find.

"I touched him and he turned over. He said, 'I had a long story,'" Wilson said. "He said he'd been out there all night. I don't know how long he had been there, but he was cold."

She said the boy told her, "Somebody came and got me, and I escaped."

Wilson said the child told her where he lived and the names of his parents. She said he didn't seem frightened and answered all of her questions. She took the boy to the police station.

Police took the child to the hospital and gave his worried parents the good news.

Sgt. Charles Love said police didn't take the boy's story of a kidnapper seriously. He said the parents told police that the boy often prowled the house in the middle of the night but had never gone outside. Love speculated that the boy went outside, found the door locked when he tried to get back in, then wandered off.

More cold nights in forecast for area

From staff and wire reports

The Pampa area and much of West Texas had the first hard freeze of winter this morning, and strong north and northwest winds continued to force cold air into the region.

The temperature in Pampa dropped to 25 degrees this morning, combining with winds of 22 miles per hour to drop the chill factor to below zero.

Another cold night is in the forecast for tonight, with a low of about 20 expected. Local temperatures were not expected to climb above the 40s either today or Wednesday.

The extended forecast calls for slightly warmer weather the rest of the week, although nighttime lows are expected in the upper 20s through Saturday. Daytime highs, however, are expected to be around 60 Thursday and in the 50s Friday and Saturday.

The chilling winds continued to press into other parts of the state today. A cold front passed through much of the state late Monday, pushing eastward along the Texas-Louisiana border and extending southwestward along the Gulf Coast.

The National Weather Service issued a freeze warning for the Concho Valley and the Hill Country for tonight and a frost warning for South Central and Southeast Texas.

The forecast for Wednesday calls for afternoon highs in the 60s and 70s in South Texas and the Big Bend, and the 40s and 50s elsewhere.

Citizens group asks hearing on driveway issue

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A group of Pampa citizens angered over the city's removal of driveway pipes and entrances across town has asked city officials for a hearing to settle claimed damages.

The Citizens for Better City

Government hired an Amarillo lawyer to sue the city for alleged damages caused by the removal project.

E. Byron Singleton sent city officials a letter this week that asks for an "arbitration conference" to settle the group's claims for damages.

"What we're trying to do is negotiate the whole thing without a lawsuit. A lawsuit is expensive and takes time," Singleton said.

The letter says the city project violated local residents' civil rights and damaged their property. It says the removal of the pipes under asphalt mounds at the front of many Pampa driveways denies the citizens access to city property (the streets).

"People have a right to access to public highways and streets, just as they have a right to access to city hall," Singleton said. "Many of these people have been deprived of that."

"Some have had the bridgways for 25 or 30 years and had them ripped out without due process," the lawyer added.

The attorney's letter is littered with misspellings and grammatical errors and doesn't

Travelers trapped by Colorado snow

By MARY MacVEAN
Associated Press Writer

An intense Pacific storm pushed 40 mph winds and ankle-deep snow into the Northwest today, while more than 1,000 travelers were trapped in one Colorado city and rescuers followed twine tied tree-to-tree to rescue three people from an Idaho mountain shack.

Storm and gale warnings and travelers' advisories were posted in several areas of the Northwest early today, and as much as 12 inches of snow was expected in Oregon's Cascades and Siskiyou mountains overnight, the National Weather Service said.

Meanwhile, warm air ahead of a cold front stretching from Wisconsin to Texas prompted tornado watches early today for parts of Louisiana and Mississippi. Record rainfall was reported in Little Rock, Ark., while three Michigan cities reported record high temperatures.

Interstate 70 was closed for several hours Monday night from Denver into Kansas as visibility was limited by snow whipped by gusting winds.

Up to a foot of snow dropped in the Colorado mountains, 8 inches fell in southern Colorado and 2 to 4 inches hit cities along the Front Range. Highways over most Colorado mountain passes were slick Monday night, and tire chains or snowtires were required on several passes.

The Pacific storm prompted gale warnings for parts of Washington, Oregon and the Northern California coast. And winter storm watches were in effect for eastern Washington and Oregon, where freezing rain and snow was forecast.

"The storm looks like it will move into the northern Pacific Coast, Oregon and Idaho," Paul Fike, a meteorologist with the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said early today.

"It should start to move inland during the day. It's a pretty significant storm, the winds have been fairly strong," he said.

Western Kansas received about an inch of snow Monday.

Commissioners gave approval to the final plat for Lot 2, Block 12, Section II of the North Crest Addition concerning the construction of two medical buildings, including the North Crest Medical Plaza.

In a non-agenda item, representatives of the Gray County Extension Committee on Aging discussed a proposed agreement with the City Water Department to take care of utility needs for the elderly and other people in need for meeting city water bills.

Suzie Wilkinson, R.N., said the committee is also planning to submit an agreement to Southwestern Public Service and Energas for helping needy people keep up with utility bills.

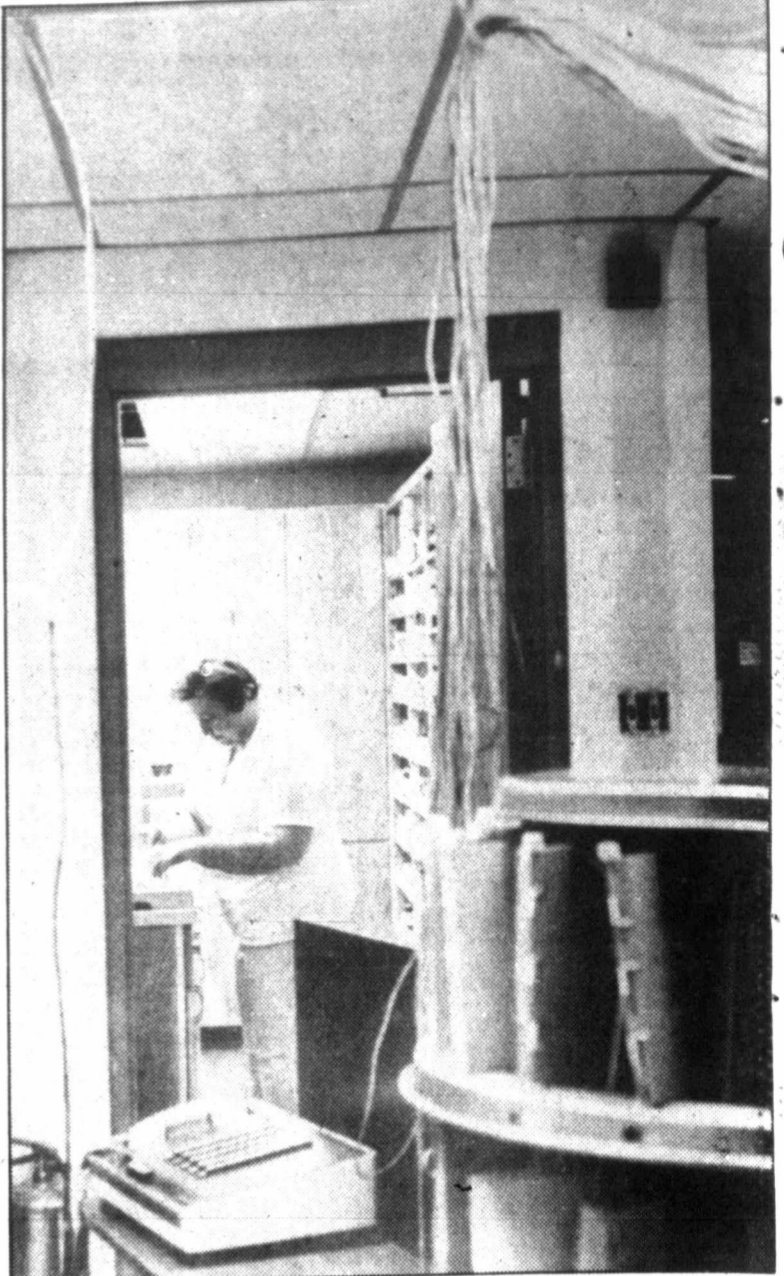

"It's a real need in Pampa," she said.
Meg Parsons, R.N., said the agreement would set up standards for Good Samaritan Christian Services and the Salvation Army to follow with the city in making payments on city utility bills for the needy.

Under the agreement, the city would allow the charity organizations 48 hours after contact with the department to make the payments. During that time, the city would not cut off water. In addition, the city would not make any reconnection or deposit charges.

Acting City Manager Allyn Moore said he was "generally in favor" of the proposal after an initial study.

Commissioners will consider the agreement at a later meeting.
The commission delayed any action on a Wyatt Company proposal for consultation on health insurance bidding.

In other business, commissioners approved accounts payable.

Wheeler hospital gets addition, renovation

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHEELER — For staff members at Parkview Hospital it's business as usual, despite dangling telephone cables, the hum of dirt movers and the hammering of metal pipes.

By the middle of January, it should all be over as the hospital completes its $1 million renovation and addition project.

According to administrator Charles Hix, the hospital is adding 10 private rooms, four semi-private rooms; a laboratory, a respiratory therapy room and a cafeteria. This will increase the capacity from 28 beds to 40 beds, Hix said. What used to be the cafeteria will become the X-ray room as a chapel moves into the old X-ray room. The nurse's station, which juts into the large lobby, is undergoing an overhaul and the nursery is being moved toward the front of the hospital.

In addition, the front waiting room, the halls and the semi-private rooms are being redecorated in beige and blue to give the 20-year-old hospital a more up-to-date look. Hix anticipates renovation and addition work to be completed at the beginning of 1985.

While other small hospitals in the area are struggling to remain open or to re-open, Wheeler Hospital is apparently having the opposite problem. Hospital officials decided to expand the hospital and update facilities about two years ago to curb overcrowding.
"We were a 28-bed facility running at 100 percent capacity," Hix said. "And anytime we needed a private room, we had to mark one of the semi-private rooms as such."

Although the additions look more contemporary than the existing building, Hix said the outside appearance will not be changed.

With construction completion more than a month away, the private rooms have already been used and the laboratory and nurses station are already in operation.

"The new rooms are used to some extent," he said. "As we move into one area of the building to do work, we move the patients to a quieter part of the building."

flow from one point to the next. Singleton said his secretary is to blame for the errors.

Acting City Manager Allyn Moore said he received the letter and will turn it over to City Attorney Don Lane.

"I've seen it. At this point, I have no thoughts on the content or purpose of the letter. I haven't deciphered it yet," Moore said.

The administrator said he would give the city commissioners copies of the letter at their meeting this morning.

Mayor Calvin Whatley said before the meeting today that he hadn't seen the letter.

"I'd just turn it over to our city attorney," he said.

The letter demands a conference with the city officials to discuss the dispute.

Singleton said the conference could be held at "any reasonable time or place in my office, Panhandle, Pampa or Timbuktu."

The lawyer said the legal action is designed to make the city replace the pipes and "pay damages, where appropriate."

"They're finished eating turkey. I know. Surely, they'll give me an answer in two or three days," Singleton said.

The city started removing the pipes and asphalt humps installed at curb level during the course of street repairs earlier this year. The city officials said the pipes prevent proper drainage of the streets and hinder street repairs and snow removal.

Because of the high slopes between the drives and streets, the removal made it difficult or impossible to get in and out of many of the driveways. The project left many residents in need of expensive driveway repairs.

Bomb explodes outside embassy

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A bombing outside the U.S. Embassy here appears to signal a new terror campaign by Colombian drug traffickers aimed at halting a crackdown on marijuana and cocaine smuggling to the United States, an embassy source said.

The 22-pound dynamite bomb killed one woman and injured six men, all Colombians, Monday afternoon. Twelve days earlier, Colombia's drug traffickers — who operate a multi-billion dollar business — threatened to kill five Americans for every Colombian extradited to the United States on drug charges, U.S. officials said.

As a result of that threat, the State Department evacuated the families of six embassy employees to the United States, the embassy source told the Associated Press on Monday. Families of other employees have been asked to return to the United States on a voluntary basis.

President Belisario Betancur and his justice minister, Enrique Parejo, both said recently that their lives have been threatened by drug traffickers.

Parejo's predecessor, Rodrigo Lara, an outspoken opponent of the drug traffickers, was assassinated April 30, and one of his killers said he had been paid $10,000 by drug dealers.

No one claimed responsibility for Monday's bombing, which created a thunderous blast on a street running alongside the embassy and a building housing the offices of Exxon.

But the U.S. Embassy source told the Associated Press that the embassy is assuming the bombing was the work of drug traffickers.

The source spoke on condition he not be identified, saying he feared that exposure may make him a target of the traffickers.

U.S. authorities say Colombia's major drug traffickers make billions of dollars a year by smuggling cocaine and marijuana into the United States.

Judge delays ruling on change of venue motion

HOUSTON (AP) — Many potential jurors probably believe a teen-ager murdered a female letter carrier because his parents refused for almost two months to testify before a grand jury investigating the case, two reporters and a radio talk show host have testified.

Defense attorneys contend David Port, 17, could not get a fair trial in Houston because of extensive news accounts surrounding the shooting death of letter carrier Debora Sue Schatz.

"This is not the average, ordinary case," argued defense attorney Jack Zimmermann, adding potential jurors have been bombarded with reports of public outrage, an alleged confession and scenes of the handcuffed suspect being led away by police.

State District Judge I.D. McMaster said he will rule Dec. 3 on the change of venue request.

The youth's attorneys subpoenaed reporters Mary Flood of The Houston Post and Tom Moran of the Houston Chronicle and Ben Baldwin, a talk show host for Houston radio station KPRC.

All three testified Monday the case has received widespread coverage and that they believe the majority of Houston residents probably think the teen-ager is guilty.

"Based on the calls I received, the majority probably feel as though he's guilty based on the fact that his parents would not testify," Baldwin said.

A criminal lawyer in Houston, John Ackerman, also testified that he thought potential jurors would have trouble separating the facts of the murder case from the events surrounding the jailing of Port's parents.

"The general feeling is that the parents would not remain in jail so long unless they were holding out information, so obviously he must be guilty," Ackerman said.

McMaster spent almost three days reading more than 700 newspaper articles and radio and television transcripts and watching portions of videotaped accounts, including one in which the teen-ager was labeled an "admitted murderer."

"Our opinion is that people in Houston have concluded that David Port is guilty," Zimmermann said.

But prosecutors said Port would get a fair trial in the city, insisting it would be possible to find 12 unbiased jurors.

"There are over 1.2 million qualified jurors in Harris County," said Assistant District Attorney Mary Milloy. "With such a diverse, sophisticated populace, the chances of getting a fair trial here are much better than in a smaller community where a case of this type is not seen that often."

Port is charged with murder in the shooting death of Miss Schatz, 23, who disappeared June 7 while delivering mail in the affluent westside neighborhood where the Ports live. Her body was found two days later in a remote, wooded area.

Investigators searched the Port home and found bullet holes in the stairwell and blood on the steps.

The teen-ager's parents, Bernard and Odette Port, were jailed on contempt charges Sept. 12 for refusing to testify before the grand jury. The couple argued they should not be forced to testify because it would violate a parent-child privilege similar to one which prevents spouses from testifying against each other.

The couple testified after almost two months in jail.

Prosecutors contend Mrs. Port might have information that could warrant upgrading the charge against her stepson to capital murder.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want
Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from "formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again."

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 992, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Board rejects statewide probe

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Morticians has refused the request of two consumer rights groups to hold public hearings on proposals that could require funeral homes to disclose their prices.

In a meeting Monday, a majority of the regulatory body rejected the requests of the Consumers Union and Gray Panthers for new price disclosure requirements, saying the additional rules were not necessary.

The state board on Monday also rejected the two consumer groups' request that it "immediately initiate a statewide investigation into the price disclosure practices within the funeral industry."

The groups filed a petition with the board seeking a number of changes in funeral home practices. But the board, with undertaker members generally opposing public members, rejected several of the proposals.

Controversy over funeral pricing first surfaced in August, after board member T. Grady Baskin Jr. of Tyler conducted an undercover survey of two dozen funeral homes.

Baskin posed as a family member seeking information on funeral prices and found that only one of the funeral homes he checked was completely complying with state pricing laws.

The board endorsed writing a rule the groups sought to require funeral homes to display a consumer information brochure.

It rejected other proposals, including the statewide investigation and withdrawing its application for exemption from the Federal Trade Commission's trade regulation rule on funeral industry pricing.

Officials said the board has notified all funeral directors about pricing provisions in state law and said it will distribute a newsletter every three months informing funeral directors of changes in the law.

Board Chairman Aubrey Fife of Junction said Monday he believes funeral homes want to comply with state laws requiring price disclosure information on funeral services.

"I feel like we are progressing as fast as we can to see about price disclosure practices. From what I'm hearing ... everybody wants to be in compliance. It's a matter of being informed," Fife said.

Carol Barger, attorney for the consumers' Union, said she was disappointed with the board's decisions.

"They say the industry is going to be a lot better informed, but it was clearly demonstrated (at a public hearing last month) that the industry is not informed and certainly not responsive to informing the public about their rights," Ms. Barger said after the meeting.

Good music keeps on going

Am I getting old, or what? I was at the record store buying a tape to help ease those dull Saturdays at the office when a teen-age boy with sunglasses dangling from his neck and a bright blue sleeveless sweatshirt looked through the budget tapes. He ran across a tape of "Loggins and Messina: Best Friends" and studied it as if something looked familiar.

"I know that's Kenny Loggins," he said with a hint of uncertainty. "But who is this Messina guy?"

"Oh, that's Jim Messina," I explained. "He sang with Loggins about 10 years ago. Don't you remember 'You're Mama Don't Dance' or 'Angry Eyes'?"

I might as well have asked him if he remembered "Mairzy Doats." "Must have been before your time," I concluded as he left the store. I turned to the store clerk. "I can't believe he doesn't remember Loggins and Messina. Gee, I still like to listen to all those early Olivia Newton John songs, don't you?"

"Oh, you mean like 'Let's Get Physical,'" she said, thinking about that steamy 1981 video.

Actually, I was talking about 1974's "I Honestly Love You" and "Don't Play B-17." But I kept quiet, not wanting to reveal my age.

I can understand why the kid can't relate to "Your Mama Don't Dance" or why the store clerk didn't know that Olivia sang country before she decided country wasn't cool. But I refuse to believe that I'm on the old fogey end of a rock 'n' roll generation gap.

I especially feel old when I go home to visit my 14-year-old sister in Oklahoma City. At this moment, Sis is into Heavy Metal groups like Ratt and Twisted Sister. They're the ones who bang their guitars at the loudest volume and the highest pitch possible. Sometimes they sing songs the average person can understand, but not often. The last time Twisted Sister tried that in Amarillo, the lead singer got arrested.

Last year, her only group was Duran Duran, five guys from England who were hot teen idols last year. She lined her walls with posters of the boyish band members and would drop everything she was doing every time they came on TV. This year, a mention of Duran Duran will get you a quick scowl and a "Gaw, they are so gross."

Luckily, I don't feel too much like a fossil, not when Tina Turner, one of the hottest ladies on the rock charts, was belting out rock classics before I was even born. I also breathe a sigh of relief when "old-timers" like Paul McCartney (who had this group called the Beatles before he went solo), David Bowie or Elton John come out with chart toppers.

Our Thursday Off Beat writer goes back even further. He's got a drawer full of tapes that range from the Drifters and Ink Spots through the Jefferson Airplane and the Monkees to the latest from Prince and Wang Chung. He can quote title and artist of any song from any Top 40 list over the past 30 years.

And for those who go back even further, take heart! People are rediscovering the standards, those simple and uncluttered songs that filled the airwaves and Your Hit Parade back in the 1940s. Rosemary Clooney, Doris Day and the McGuire Sisters are recording again. Linda Ronstadt recently took a break from her rock ballads and Gilbert and Sullivan operettas to cut a hit record with Nelson Riddle. Now she's trying the opera "La Boheme."

Gilbert and Sullivan or Loggins and Messina, Doris Day or David Bowie, the best music knows no generation gap. I guess I'm not ready for the old folks home, after all. Spaulding is a staff writer of The Pampa News.

New nongame stamp to help preserve wildlife

AUSTIN (AP) — A new state program to provide money for protecting nongame wildlife and endangered species is the first of its kind in the nation, Gov. Mark White says.

The project will raise funds through the voluntary sale of nongame stamps, similar to duck stamps, and won't cost taxpayers any money, White said Monday.

"The Texas Nongame Stamp Fund is the first program in Texas — in fact, the first anywhere in the 50 states — to offer a voluntary funding program for the sole purpose of conducting nongame wildlife research and management, public education and acquiring habitat for endangered species," White said.

The stamp features a painting of two whooping cranes, and the governor said it was a particularly appropriate choice.

"The whooping crane has become a symbol of efforts to successfully bring one of our most beautiful birds back from the brink of extinction. It is appropriate that the whooping crane be depicted on the first Texas nongame stamp," he said.

The Legislature created the Texas Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Fund.

The fund will be financed through the sale of the nongame stamps at $5 each, plus decals, prints and medallions. Money raised from the sales will be placed in the fund and administered by the state Parks and Wildlife Department.

"This unique new program is fostered by the kind of cooperation

Former sheriff is given sentence

PECOS, Texas (AP) — Former Hudspeth County Sheriff Mike Armstrong has been sentenced to five years in prison for his pleading guilty to drug charges.

In addition, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton on Monday ordered that Armstrong be placed on parole for two years and on probation for five more years after serving his prison sentence.

The former sheriff pleaded guilty Nov. 5 to two counts of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Armstrong, 36, was indicted on the possession charges and on charges of conspiracy to distribute the drug after his arrest Sept. 7 at the Hudspeth County courthouse in Sierra Blanca, a small West Texas town 90 miles east of El Paso.

 EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
 TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

How do we break the trap?

In 1981, the Reagan administration plowed right into "welfare reform" with none of the agonizing doubts that had plagued all prior such efforts. The premise was simple and old-fashioned: if a person could find and hold a job, they should not get welfare.

For this reason, they eliminated the 1967 "thirty-and-a-third rule," the so-called "income disregard" under which welfare recipients could get full-time jobs and only lose sixty-seven cents worth of benefits for every dollar of earnings. The 1981 "reforms" stipulated that all earnings above a minimum of seventy-five dollars a month would reduce AFDC benefits on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

The Reagan proposals drew immediate and continuing fire from economists on both sides of the spectrum who argued that they would dramatically increase the "marginal tax rate" on those who chose to work, and this would tend to drive many working welfare recipients back onto the full-time welfare rolls.

Yet, although the "marginal tax rate arguments" were correct, the results initially were very different. Not only did the "reforms" cut total welfare caseloads by nearly 400,000 nationwide, less than 15 percent of them opted to go back on welfare. In Massachusetts total welfare rolls were cut from 121,000 to 85,000 in 1984, and the downward trend continues.

Despite this, supply-side economist Arthur Laffer weighed in recently in a careful paper for the CATO Institute, titled "The Tightening Grip of the Poverty Trap," charging that as a result of the Reagan "reforms" the marginal tax rates on families who choose to leave welfare are now at all time highs. To prove his point, Laffer used an actual case analysis of a Los Angeles welfare family of four to show what would happen to their net monthly family income as their monthly earning increased from zero to $1,600: "Over the entire wage range from zero to $1,600 per month, the family's monthly spendable income (from working full-time) rises by only $69. This corresponds to an average effective tax (rate) of 95.7 percent."

"Never before," Laffer concludes, "has there been such a paucity of opportunity for the law-abiding poor to better themselves." He argues that the marginal tax rates on working welfare recipients should now be cut, drastically.

Laffer's arguments seem to be validated by the experience in a few key states, California, New York, Illinois, Ohio and Texas, where major caseload reductions in 1982, were dramatically reversed in 1983-1984, and are now HIGHER than in 1981.

On the other hand, Charles Murray, in his new book, "Losing Ground: American Social Policy, 1950-1980," argues the opposite point. He shows that although the income-disregard rule in 1967 drastically lowered the "disincentives" for welfare recipients to work, it also helped fuel the fastest rise in welfare caseloads in history.

The reason, Murray says, is that while the "thirty-and-a-third rule provided an incentive to work for those women already on welfare...the same rule provided an even stronger incentive for women who were NOT on welfare to get on it, and...trapped in it."

Indeed, the whole 1967 idea of combining work and welfare dramatically changed attitudes toward both, making them a socially acceptable combination, a lower-middle-class "entitlement."

Murray says this is also why, in 1968, employment rates for young blacks in the welfare-ridden inner-cities, which had been rising from 1959 to 1968 - FELL twenty points over the next ten years - all under the influence of the "income-disregard" rule which was supposed to make work more attractive, but didn't.

Thus, Murray argues that no matter how you tinker with the welfare system to reduce work disincentives, the system itself will continue to destroy the work ethic.

To illustrate why, Murray uses a hypothetical effort to design a program to get people to stop smoking. The more incentives you provide to the smoker to quit, the more perversely you wind up providing incentives for the non-smoker to start!

This is why, he says, "as inducements (incentives) become large - as they must, if the program is to deal with the most intractable problems - the more attractive they become to people who were not in need of help in the first place."

Murray calls this "the Law of Net Harm" under which the bad effects of welfare always outweigh its humanitarian purposes. And it is why he concluded that the only real solution to the disincentives of welfare is to abolish welfare, and let the unemployment compensation program be the only federal "safety net."

Whatever, it is now clear that if Reagan is to break the "poverty traps" cruel grip, he must either listen to Murray or Laffer, because the trap appears to be getting tighter.

Opinion

Reagan has chance to redeem himself

The resignation of Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell gives President Reagan an opportunity to make the kind of changes in the way the federal government interacts with schools that some had expected during his first term.

When Ronald Reagan was a candidate for president in 1980, he promised to abolish the Cabinet-level Department of Education created by former President Carter. There were sound reasons for such a stance.

The department is rife with bureaucratic waste. It exercises more pervasive control from the federal government level over both public and private schools than is warranted by the contribution the federal government forces taxpayers to make to education or is healthy in a free society.

Instead of abolishing the department, Reagan appointed Bell. That Bell is unlikely to have had much intention of presiding over dissolution of the department he headed can be inferred from his statement on departure. Criticizing those should would reduce federal education programs, Bell said, "I think education is so special that it ranks in priority alongside and possible ahead of the Department of Defense."

There is no question that education is special. It is so special that those who value education or liberty (or both) should be alarmed at increasing government control.

Any government is bound to be tempted to use an institution with so much influence over the minds of young people as a means of subtle or blatant indoctrination into the values the government would prefer people to hold—the antithesis of genuine education.

It may be too much to ask the president to redeem his original promise. He might, however, appoint somebody to succeed Bell who is sensitive to the potential dangers of too much federalizing of education rather than an unabashed enthusiast of government power.

What we'll do with space

Now that they are going to take politicians into space - which is a good place for many of them to be taken - I have had to ask myself if ever I would like to take such a trip.

I think I would. And I would like to make my first trip into space as soon as possible, before somebody messes it up.

As space travel becomes more commonplace and as more people start going into the heavens, it's a cinch that the American habit of development will occur there.

Actually, it's already started. The Americans and Russians already are operating a hardware store in the outer reaches and it likely will be just a matter of time before so many people are going into space that somebody will open a convenience store out there.

The store will sell beer and ice and Slurpies, and Iranians will run it.

After the convenience stores will come the fast food joints, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Waffle House and taco franchises all over the universe. McDonald's likely will be first, however. Go to the Big Dipper and hang a right and look for the Golden Arches. You can't miss it.

With all those businesses operating in space, housing will be necessary, so the condo developers will come in. There will be high - rises with names like Mars Arms and The Pluto Plaza.

I'm not sure how anybody will be able to put a golf course in space, but Yankee ingenuity will prevail. I am sure, and so there will be condos that surround golf courses in space and a lot of Republican retirees will move there.

There will be a need for other recreational facilities, too, things for the kids to do while Mommy plays Thursday morning hit - and - giggle doubles with the girls. Lolling should be interesting in outer space tennis.

There will be water slides and arcades with video games and crazy teen - agers probably will drive their space vehicles out on Friday nights and play chicken with passing meteors.

There won't be any beach in space so people won't worry about getting a tan when they go there. As a matter of fact, they might simply lie out in the darkness and get a pale.

Being pale will be a prestige sort of thing, an indication that you have enough money to go to space on your vacation.

"Love your pale," the girls at the office will say when you come home.

Space, I am certain, eventually will have its own pro football league. Don King, who looks like he just crawled off Uranus, will be the commissioner. The L.A. Raiders eventually will move their franchise to outer space.

Former California Gov. Jerry Brown will become the first mayor of space and Billy Graham will hold a crusade there.

Industry will come in and space will become congested and polluted and it will smell like Cleveland.

It's bound to happen. Look at what we did with the last frontier we conquered. The West had lots of Indians and creatures and pretty scenery to look at and we turned it into Los Angeles.

So take me to space now. Before the moonies move in.

Developing nation emphasizes education

By Don Graff

NIZWA, Oman (NEA) - In 1970, in all of Oman there were exactly three schools with 900 students (all boys) and 30 teachers.

Today, the figures are 500 schools, 170,000 students (more than a quarter girls) and close to 8,000 teachers.

Among the most remarkable of the many remarkable developments in this rapidly modernizing nation on the heel of the Arabian peninsula is the development from scratch in little more than a decade of a universal, free system of education.

I came here, an ancient oasis town famous for its silverwork and other traditional Omani crafts, to see if the educational effort in the rugged interior of the country differed from the impressive achievements in the booming capital area 100 miles to the northeast on the shore of the Arabian Sea.

I found what I was advised in advance would be the case - essentially no difference other than size.

There are separate schools for boys and girls with current enrollment in the former at 600 and the latter at 388, compared with more than a thousand in their respective capital counterparts.

But both are housed in modern, fully equipped structures - in the case of the boys a small campus, since many from home villages too distant for daily busing are boarding students.

The curriculum is the same, and includes a heavy dose of mathematics and sciences for girls as well as boys.

English is taught from the fourth year of primary school. By the time they have completed secondary studies, equivalent to American high school, students have had nine years of the language. Most can be described as fluent.

Capital and provincial schools are the same in another respect. Very few of the teachers are native Omanis. Most have been recruited from other Arab countries - Egypt, Iraq, Tunisia, Sudan - but also farther afield, from Pakistan, India and Sri Lanka. Wherever the expertise is to be found that Oman requires for its self-modernization but cannot yet supply itself.

About the girls, they are as yet a minority of the national student body but their percentage is rising yearly as more and more enter the educational stream at the primary level.

They are unveiled, as are almost all Omani women. The stereotype of the Arab woman shrouded in black has never applied here.

Girls are on an equal educational - and, when they complete their studies, employment - footing with boys. Many go on to university work.

At present, that means going abroad, most to nearby Arab countries but some to Europe and North America.

That is something else about Oman that is in the process of changing.

The nation's first university is currently under construction near the capital. It will have schools of agriculture, engineering, sciences and medicine - disciplines most needed as Omanis increasingly take their country's modernization into their own hands.

But when the university opens its doors in September of 1986, very nearly one-half of the openings in the first class of 540 will be in another field.

Education. First things first.

RESTING AMONG MACHINES—William Schroeder rests Monday among machinery in his room at Humana Heart Institute in Louisville. Schroeder received an artificial heart at the hospital Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Artificial heart recipient wanted 'to go all the way'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William J. Schroeder didn't quite give the thumbs-up sign when he awoke after becoming the second recipient of a permanent artificial heart, but he "had that look in his eye" and a doctor said today he could be out of bed by the weekend.

Schroeder remained in critical condition today, his third day of life with the polyurethane and metal heart, but his vital signs were stable.

Meanwhile, doctors at Humana Heart Institute International, which has permission to perform five more implants, were already screening two other candidates for the operation.

Doctors inserted a second tube into the left side of Schroeder's chest Monday after X-rays revealed that fluid was continuing to accumulate following a massive loss of blood Sunday night, six hours after the implant.

Later X-rays were "infinitely clearer," suggesting that the decomposing blood and fluid leaking from surrounding tissues had been removed, said Dr. Allan M. Lansing, the chairman of the Heart Institute who assisted Dr. William C. DeVries during the heart implant.

Schroeder was awake and visiting with his family Monday night, and it was expected he would have a restful night, according to a 9 p.m. bulletin issued by the hospital.

He was described as "very alert" and was being kept under a mild sedative to prevent discomfort from the tube in his throat that was helping him breathe. "He does know, however, that he has survived and the family is with him," Lansing said. "He didn't quite give the thumbs-up sign but you could see that look in his eye."

In her first public remarks, Schroeder's wife, Margaret, said, "It was kind of left up to Bill to make up his own mind" about whether to undergo the implant.

"He said, 'I have no other thoughts but to go all the way,'" she told reporters from radio station WITZ and The Herald of Jasper, Ind., the family's hometown.

"Dad wanted to go through with this and we're all behind him 100 percent," said the Schroeders' oldest son, Melvin, 30. "We are extremely proud of Dad and we are cautious optimistic on the progress."

Mrs. Schroeder said she had received a telegram with best wishes and prayers from Una Loy Clark, the widow of Barney Clark, who became the world's first recipient of a permanent artificial heart on Dec. 2, 1982. Clark lived 112 days after the operation.

Schroeder, 52, lost half his blood Sunday night when he began to bleed at the point where the artificial heart was stitched to his aorta, the artery that supplies the body with oxygen-rich blood.

Schroeder was given transfusions of 16 pints of blood.

Asked whether Schroeder faced the risk of hepatitis, AIDS, or other blood-borne diseases from the transfusions, Lansing said, "He should be so lucky to develop AIDS three years from now," meaning that Schroeder would be fortunate to survive three years with the artificial heart.

Bundling up baby may figure in crib death

LONDON (AP) — Parents who bundle up their babies with too many blankets or place them in overheated rooms raise the risk of crib death for their children, a study by a pediatrician indicates.

Crib death, or sudden infant death syndrome, is the name given to the unexplained death of an apparently healthy baby. About one to three deaths in every 1,000 babies is blamed on the crib death. A fault in the baby's breathing mechanism has been linked to the syndrome, but the actual cause is unknown.

The parents of most of the babies included in the study of crib deaths "seemed to have an unusual concept of what constituted normal warmth," wrote the author, Dr. Anthony Stanton.

"The babies had been clothed and wrapped as if they were sleeping outdoors and at risk of hypothermia," Stanton said.

The doctor said parents should be educated "away from the folklore that babies catch cold to the reality that many are at risk from overheating."

He said his study, published in the current issue of the British medical journal The Lancet, found that keeping a baby too warm was a possible cause of crib death.

The pediatrician said previous scientific studies have linked overheating to crib death, but that researchers assumed elevated body temperatures in the bodies of the dead infants were caused by undiagnosed infections.

"Nobody is saying it is the only cause," said Stanton, who has investigated crib death for seven years. "But the coincidence that they were very hot comes up again and again."

Stanton, a consultant at Scarborough Hospital in northern England, studied the deaths of 34 babies in Scarborough and Oxford between December 1981 and May 1984.

The ages of the babies — 12 girls and 22 boys — ranged from 27 days to 9 months. All died unexpectedly at home and were certified by coroners as victims of sudden infant death syndrome.

Of the 34 babies, all but two were found to have been in danger of overheating, Stanton wrote, and those two babies had low birth weights.

Stanton said 24 babies were excessively clothed or bundled under layers of blankets; 19 were unusually hot or sweating when found dead; 17 had evidence of infection that would cause a fever; and 14 died in oppressively hot rooms.

Some of the babies fit into more than one category.

Excessive clothing or overwrapping, according to the study, was the equivalent of an undershirt, stretchsuit, cardigan, sheet and three blankets in a room at 64 degrees Fahrenheit. A room temperature above 64 degrees was not considered too hot if the baby was dressed appropriately.

Disabled freighter struggles for shore

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A freighter with 52 people on board was taking on water in rough seas early today as it struggled to make it to port before sinking, authorities said.

U.S. Coast Guard Seaman Paul Gardner said a 482-foot Indian ship, the Ratna Kirti, was taking on water through a four-inch hole in its bow. The vessel was about 250 miles off Cape Mendocino, where gale-force winds and 20-foot waves were hindering rescue operations.

Gardner said it was possible the ship would sink before it reached San Francisco Bay.

The ship, carrying a load of fertilizer, was en route to Singapore from Port Angeles, Wash.

Youth killed trying to run roadblock

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Howard County authorities and the Texas Rangers are investigating the death of a San Angelo teen-ager who was fatally shot while trying to run a roadblock in a stolen car, authorities said.

Joe Guadalupe Garza, 16, was shot in the head at 2:45 a.m. Monday about 8 miles south of Big Spring on U.S. 87, said Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard.

Garza, a student at San Angelo Lake View High School, died about four hours later at an Odessa hospital.

Standard said the youth was struck by at least one pellet from a pair of shotgun blasts fired by Sheriff's Deputy A.D. Majors, a former chief of police at Coahoma.

A 17-year-old passenger in the car, Richard E. Flores, also of San Angelo, was not injured but was being held in Howard County Jail in connection with the theft of the car. He is jailed in lieu of $15,000 bond on an unauthorized use of a motor vehicle charge and $10,000 on the burglary of a motor vehicle charge.

Somali hijackers free hostages, are granted asylum in Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Five Somali dissidents armed with pistols and explosives today freed 103 hostages held since Saturday on a hijacked jetliner, surrendered and were granted asylum by Somalia's bitter foe Ethiopia.

The hijackers had several times set deadlines for blowing up the Somali Airlines plane and passengers if their demands were not met.

James Dell, 30, of Orangeburg,

N.Y., identified as the only American hostage, told reporters: "They kept us frightened as best they could, so they could control us."

Ethiopia's foreign minister, Goshu Wolde, said the passengers were well and expressed joy when told the hijackers had agreed to surrender and hand over their weapons.

Ethiopian officials permitted the hijackers to have a news conference at Addis Ababa airport, where the Boeing 707 has been since it was commandeered Saturday on a flight from Somalia to Saudi Arabia.

The hijackers' leader, identifying himself as Somali army Capt. Awil Adan Dourhan, said the hostages were freed after the Somali government guaranteed it would not execute seven high school students who had been sentenced to death in October for anti-government political activities.

Reporter charged with sedition

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Brahma Chellaney, an Associated Press reporter, says the government has charged him with sedition, a crime that carries a maximum sentence of life in prison and a fine.

Chellaney has been in the city of Amritsar in Punjab state undergoing interrogation on previous charges related to his report in June describing the Indian army's attack on the Sikh's holy temple there.

Chellaney, who was interrogated for the fifth straight day Monday, said in a telephone call to New Delhi that he was informed of the new charge by official sources.

The United News of India news agency also reported that a sedition charge had been filed.

The Associated Press bureau in New Delhi, despite repeated attempts, was unable to reach police officials in Amritsar, either because of communications difficulties, which are common in India, or because the police did not answer the telephone late Monday night.

The wife of the spokesman for the Home Ministry in New Delhi, which has authority over India's police forces, refused to wake her husband when the AP called him.

Chellaney, 27, an Indian citizen, had earlier been accused of maliciously inciting communal discord because of his AP dispatch, never distributed in India and published only abroad, that said at least 1,000 Sikhs and 200 soldiers had been killed in the army's operation in June to flush out alleged terrorists from the Sikh's Golden Temple in Amritsar. The dispatch quoted police and medical sources as saying that some Sikhs had been shot with their hands tied behind their backs. The government said about 600 people were killed in the attack.

The leading Indian news magazine India Today later reported the same death toll as in Chellaney's dispatch. The Indian Express, the country's widest circulating English-language daily newspaper, also reported that some Sikhs were found dead with their hands tied behind their backs. It quoted post mortem reports.

Chellaney has declined to disclose the sources for his dispatch, citing journalistic ethics and constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press.

Sedition is defined by the Indian penal code as bringing or attempting to bring hatred or contempt, or exciting or attempting to excite disaffection toward the government.

North postpones talks with South

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea today postponed its planned economic talks with South Korea, saying the delegates' safety could not be guaranteed because of tension arising from the shootout between border guards of the Communist North and the pro-Western South.

North Korea's official Radio Pyongyang, in a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, said notification of postponement of the planned Dec. 5 meeting "until next year" was given by Vice Trade Minister Li Sung Rok, the chief North Korean negotiator.

It said Li cited "heightened tension at Panmunjom in the wake of the shooting incident there" last Friday as the reason for the North Korean decision. Panmunjom is a village in the demilitarized zone separating the two Koreas.

Three North Korean guards and one South Korean soldier were killed and one American soldier and one North Korean guard were wounded in the exchange of fire that broke out when a Russian tourist from the Soviet Embassy in Pyongyang defected to the South after crossing the demarcation line running through the middle of the truce village, according to the United Nations.

Executives admit false export claims

DALLAS (AP) — A federal investigator said an attempt to pass off more than 3,000 dozen foreign-made drill bits and drill bit braces in Egypt as U.S.-made tools was one of the poorest attempts at disguise he had ever seen.

Two Dallas executives, Jeffrey Jacobson and Louisa Ennis, pleaded guilty Monday in a Dallas federal court to charges they lied when submitting documents to the Agency for International Development certifying the tools were made in the United States.

Gene Richardson, assistant inspector for investigations for AID, said the guilty pleas are the first involving source-of-origin problems.

The tools were bought for use in Egyptian vocational schools under a $500,000 government contract that specified they had to be manufactured in the United States.

The tools never made it past a receiving dock in Egypt, Richardson said.

The words "made in Japan" on the tools had been crudely scratched off and were covered with a white label bearing an American manufacturing mark, he said.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders sentenced Jacobson, a native of South Africa, to five years probation and a $10,000 fine. Ennis was ordered to serve four years probation and pay a $5,000 fine.

Jacobson and Ennis were president and vice president, respectively, of Hardways, Inc. They claimed that the drill bits had been made at Giller Tool Co. in Dallas and that the drill braces were manufactured at Great Neck Tool Co. in New York, according to Rolf Hong, who investigated the case for the inspector general's office.

Silver screen inspired this swordsman

By JOE JANSEN
The El Paso Times

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Errol Flynn. Ronald Coleman. The Three Musketeers.

Eddie Koons fell in love with fencing more than 40 years ago because of those dashing swordsmen on the silver screen.

"I always had a hankering for the martial arts. Plus, I loved to watch those men at the movies," Koons said. "I guess it's the one-on-one competition that I enjoy so much."

Koons, who has taught fencing in El Paso for almost 25 years and instructs a class each Wednesday at the Central YMCA, said he believes fencing has not caught on with the mainstream because of a lack of publicity that other sports enjoy.

Not that fencing isn't as physically and mentally demanding as football, golf, bowling or any other recreational sport.

"Fencing requires a lot of self-discipline. It's a lifetime sport," Koons said. "However, the gratification, the self-satisfaction is equal to that of any sport."

There are three types of fencing weapons: foil, epee and saber. Of the three, foil is the one basic to beginners.

The object of foil competition is to touch the opponent's torso with the blade. Unlike epee where a touch anywhere on the body is a valid touch — there is a logical sequence of attack.

Koons compares it to chess. "You have to learn offensive and defensive techniques plus you start thinking three and four moves ahead of your opponent," Koons said. "Soon, it becomes a game of outguessing and outmaneuvering your opponent."

In saber competition, which resembles the swashbuckling sword fights in the movies, touches are scored from the upper part of the body above a horizontal line drawn through the highest points of intersection of the thighs and trunk of the fencer. The arms and head also are valid touch areas.

The saber attacks are different from those of foil and epee. Instead of concentrating on thrusts and parries, a cutting — almost slashing — style is used. It also is the most difficult of the three to master.

Koons' students come from all walks of life.

Joanne Peoples, a mathematics instructor at the University of Texas at El Paso, became involved in fencing when she registered her daughter for a gymnastics class.

"I went to sign up my daughter for tumbling at a recreational center in Dallas and found out about fencing," Mrs. Peoples said. "I figured if my husband could play racquetball one night a week, I could fence one night a week. It's great competition."

But, the fencing bug also bit Mrs. Peoples' husband, Wayne, who now is chairman of the Border Fencing Division and pretty good with the blade himself.

Gonzalo Martinez, who started fencing in January, said he finds the sport a physical alternative to his job.

"I always thought it would be interesting to learn how to fence. It's different," Martinez said. "I was surprised how physically demanding it is."

Ralph Hassell, president of a microfilm corporation and a weekend tennis buff, likes the vigorous workout he gets in a short period of time.

"Fencing is great for eye coordination and leg strength," Hassell said. "Plus it's not like spending five hours on a golf course. It takes less time."

"I also enjoy the idea of one-on-one sports instead of team sports. You don't have to count on a whole team showing up. If just one guy shows, I know I'll have a workout."

Being the only fencing club in El Paso does have its drawbacks, Koons said — mainly, finding other clubs to compete against.

"We haven't gone to a fencing tournament in about five years," Koons said. "But we are trying to contact New Mexico State as well as other clubs in New Mexico and Arizona. We would like to compete against others rather than ourselves."

Some of the El Paso fencers aren't ready for combat yet. George Beitzel Jr. and Wolf Carter, both high school students, said they are not ready for prime time.

Of course, with only five weeks of practice under the belt, one wouldn't look to start anything with Darth Vader and his light saber.

"I'm not ready for foil competition yet. I still need a lot of work," Beitzel said. "In addition to the physical part of it, the concentration part is tough."

Carter became interested in fencing after watching his father work out in Koons' class. "It's hard work but it's fun. My father didn't push me into it or anything," Carter said. "It's just something I wanted to try."

Marino ties record in Dolphins' win

MIAMI (AP) — Dan Marino was only a baby when George Blanda and Y.A. Tittle etched their names into the National Football League record book, and now, in the infancy of his NFL career, he is on the verge of erasing their single-season mark for touchdown passes.

The Miami quarterback — just a few months old when Blanda threw for 36 TDs in 1961 and a mere toddler when Tittle did the same in 1963 — pulled even with the Hall of Famers on Monday night, throwing for 192 yards and four scores to lead the Dolphins to a 28-17 victory over the New York Jets.

"It's a great honor, but what makes it so much fun for me is that so many other guys contributed and helped me accomplish this," the second-year pro said. "Everybody was excited about it and I was just as excited as they were."

Marino tossed touchdown passes of 5 yards to Mark Clayton and 1 yard to Bruce Hardy as the 12-1 Dolphins built a 14-10 halftime lead and then equaled the record with two more in the third quarter to put the game away.

Dan Johnson's 7-yard scoring reception gave Miami a 21-10 advantage 1:13 into the second half and Hardy's second TD reception, a 12-yarder, gave the Dolphins' quarterback No. 36 with three games left in the regular season.

"I'm so happy and proud of Dan," Coach Don Shula said. "He deserves all the recognition he's getting. It's hard to believe that a guy in his second year is accomplishing these things."

Blanda, who played between 1949 and 1975, set the record in his 12th season of professional football as a member of the Houston Oilers of the old American Football League. Tittle did it for the New York Giants in his 15th NFL season. Both accomplished the feat in 14 games.

"The record is something you realize is there, but I didn't think about it much," said Marino, who'll get his first opportunity to shatter the mark when the Dolphins host the Los Angeles Raiders next Sunday.

Shula was a defensive back in the NFL in the 1950s when Blanda and Tittle were also playing and suggested it was senseless to try to compare Marino with them.

"I think you have to judge him on what he's doing in games in this day and age with sophisticated defenses, situation substitutions, three-man lines and eight-men secondaries," Shula said. "A guy like that with everything he's done deserves that record."

A fifth Marino touchdown pass — a 47-yard bomb to Clayton in the second period — was nullified by an illegal procedure call against Dolphins tackle Cleveland Green, a penalty that denied the quarterback outright possession of the record.

"That happens," Marino said, shrugging off a question about the play. "I'll have my chances the next couple of weeks."

The loss was the fifth straight for the 6-7 Jets, who got a 267-yard passing performance from Ken O'Brien and a 116-yard rushing effort from Freeman McNeil who over the 1,000-yard mark for the first time in his career.

Breunig among injured Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas linebacker Bob Breunig and offensive linemen Kurt Petersen and Phil Pozderac were listed as questionable for Sunday's National Football League game in Philadelphia.

The injury problems included Breunig's bad back, Petersen's ankle injury, and Pozderac's knee.

The Cowboys, who have an 8-5 record and are tied with the New York Giants and the Washington Redskins atop the National Conference Eastern division, were idle Sunday.

Lady Longhorns upset top-ranked Georgia

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Gay Hemphill and Fran Harris led a patient Texas attack that consistently found the open player under the basket for an easy layup as the No. 3-ranked Lady Longhorns upset No. 1 Georgia 83-69 in women's college basketball Monday night.

Hemphill had 18 points and Harris added 16 for the Lady Longhorns, 1-1, who shot 70.4 percent from the field in the second half.

"Hopefully, we made giant strides to come together as a team. I would give us a great mark on effort tonight," Texas Coach Jody Conradt said.

Katrina McClain scored 21 points and grabbed nine rebounds for the Lady Bulldogs, 2-1. Janet Harris added 19 points.

Texas slowly pulled away to a 43-36 halftime lead and continued to build the margin after intermission.

College football poll

Sooners gain ground on BYU

By HERSCHEL NISSENON AP Sports Writer
Is history about to repeat itself and give once-beaten Oklahoma a national championship over an undefeated Western Athletic Conference team?

The Sooners closed appreciable ground on No. 1-ranked Brigham Young in Monday's Associated Press college football poll, evoking memories of 1975 when they finished 11-1 and captured their second straight national championship over 12-0 Arizona State, then a member of the WAC like BYU.

BYU, which became No. 1 last week for the first time ever, completed a 12-0 regular season Saturday by defeating Utah State 38-13. The Cougars, who will face Michigan in the Holiday Bowl, received 34 1/2 first-place votes and 1,133 1/2 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the next-to-last regular season poll.

Meanwhile, Oklahoma downed third-ranked Oklahoma State 24-14 to earn a share of the Big Eight crown with Nebraska and a trip to the Orange Bowl. The Sooners, 9-1-1, received 18 1/2 first-place votes and 1,128 1/2 points.

Last week, BYU led Oklahoma 40-7 in first-place ballots and 1,124-1,053 in points.

"I'm pleased we moved up some," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "We played pretty good."

Asked if he felt that strength of schedule should be a factor in deciding the national championship — Oklahoma tied Texas 69-67, Nebraska when those teams were No. 1 and polished off No. 3 Oklahoma State; BYU's only Top Twenty opponent was Pitt, a team the Cougars beat 20-14 and Oklahoma demolished 42-10 two weeks later — Switzer replied, "It has before."

While Oklahoma State slipped to ninth place, Florida moved up from fourth to third with five first-place votes and 1,048 points. The Gators, who were ruled ineligible for a bowl game last week by the Southeastern Conference after winning the SEC championship, are 8-1-1 and wind up their season Saturday against Florida State.

Washington, Oklahoma's Orange Bowl opponent, climbed from fifth place to fourth with one first-place ballot and 991 points. The Huskies completed a 10-1 regular season a week ago.

Sugar Bowl-bound Nebraska, 9-2, vaulted from seventh place to fifth with 939 points. Texas, No. 6 last week, was upset by Baylor 24-10 and skidded to 13th place with a 7-2-1 record. Meanwhile, Rose Bowl-bound Ohio State, 9-2, rose from eighth to sixth with 837 points.

South Carolina's 22-21 triumph over Clemson enabled the 10-1 Gamecocks to jump from ninth to seventh with 830 points. Boston College's dramatic 47-45 last-second victory over Miami jumped the 8-2 Eagles from 10th to eighth with 764 points, barely in front of 9-2 Oklahoma State, which received 762 points. OSU will play South Carolina in the Gator Bowl.

Southern Methodist, 11th last week, defeated Arkansas 31-28 and received 612 points to round out the Top Ten.

The Second Ten consists of Auburn, Florida State, Texas, LSU, Maryland, Miami, UCLA, Georgia, Notre Dame and Southern California.

AC cagers post double victories

BIG SPRING — The Amarillo College Badgers and Lady Badgers defeated teams from Howard College in Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball openers Monday night.

The AC men, pre-conference favorites according to a coaches' poll, beat Howard, 78-65, after a slow start.

Andrew Kennedy led the Badgers with 22 points while Steve Dailley chipped in 19.

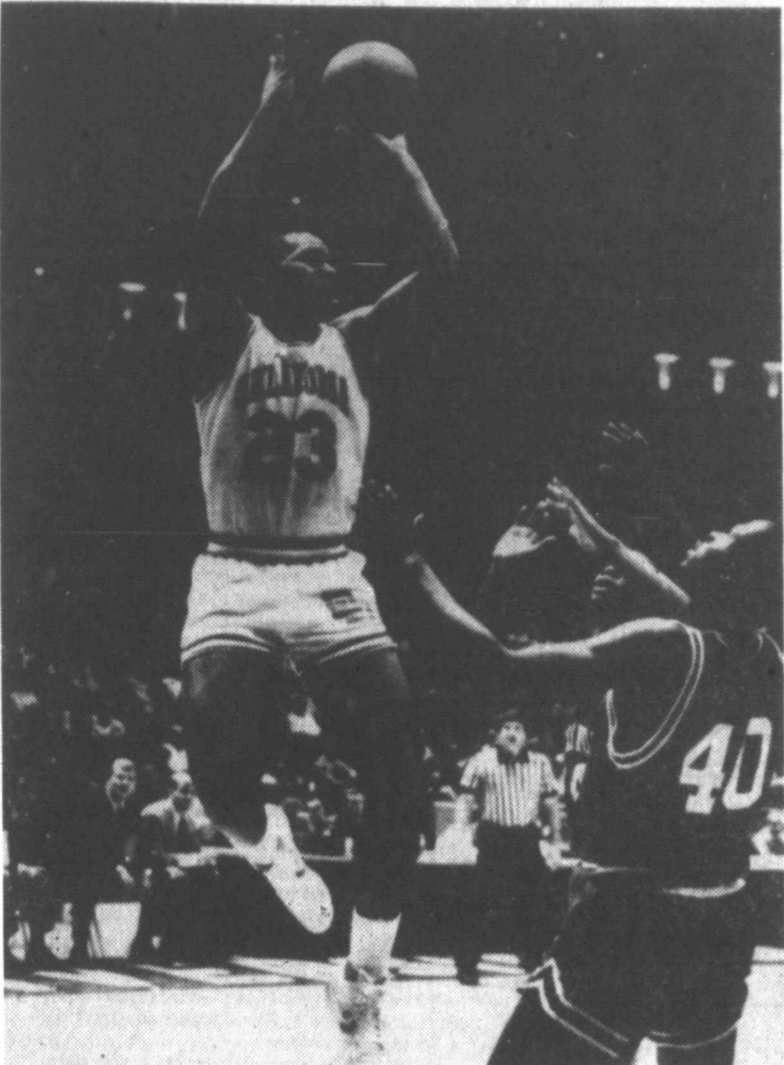

Michael Porter had 24 points for the losers.

The Badgers are unbeaten after nine games this season.

The AC women had a surprisingly easy time with the Hawk Queens in a 68-48 victory.

Debby Jones led AC with 24 points. Georgia Walton added 19.

Joyce Boudreaux had 10 points for Howard.

MR. T SHOOTS—University of Oklahoma's Waymon Tisdale (23) shoots over Arkansas-Little Rock defenders during college basketball action Monday night. Tisdale scored 29 points and pulled down 22 rebounds in the Sooners 90-63 win.

Georgetown still atop cage rankings

by JIM O'CONNELL
AP Sports Writer
Georgetown, the defending national champion which opened the season with a two-game swing through Hawaii, remained atop the Associated Press' college basketball poll today.

The Hoyas garnered 55 of the 57 first-place votes cast by a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and had 1,127 points in all.
Georgetown defeated Hawaii-Hilo 81-47 and Hawaii Loa 74-45 in a quick trip through the Islands before the Hoyas open at home Saturday against Southern Connecticut.

DePaul, which won its first game under new head Coach Joey Meyer by just one point over Northern Illinois, moved to second from third and received one of the first-place votes not given to Georgetown and 941 points.

St. John's, which has not yet played, was third with 859 points and Duke, which received the other first-place vote, was fourth with 838 points.

Memphis State rounded out the top five with 775 points, followed by Louisville, which improved from 17th in the preseason voting by upsetting then-No. 4 Indiana 75-64, Illinois, Washington, Southern Methodist and Oklahoma.

Illinois, which was second last week, fell five places after being upset by Alabama-Birmingham in the Great Alaska Shootout. The Fighting Illini, who handled Oklahoma easily in the Tip-off Classic, was also forced to triple overtime by Oregon in the third-place game in the Shootout.

Alabama-Birmingham went on to win the Shootout and entered the Top Twenty, finishing 13th. North Carolina, which defeated Fordham 81-65 in its only game, was the other newcomer to the poll, finishing 19th. The only team to fall from the Top Twenty — there was a tie for 20th place this week — was Kentucky, which has not played yet this season and was 18th in the preseason poll.

The Second Ten this week is: North Carolina State, Indiana, Alabama-Birmingham, Syracuse, Virginia Tech, Louisiana State, Arkansas, Georgia Tech, North Carolina and Nevada-Las Vegas, 0-1, and Kansas, which finished in a tie for the 20th spot. Kansas was second in the Shootout, dropping the title game 50-46 to Alabama-Birmingham.

The preseason Second Ten was: Nevada-Las Vegas, Syracuse, North Carolina State, Louisiana State, Virginia Tech, Arkansas, Louisville, Kentucky, Kansas and Georgia Tech.

'Horns hopes slim for Cotton Bowl

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas coach Fred Akers, defending Longhorn quarterback Todd Dodge, says that "somehow or other" Akers failed to get his team ready for Baylor, which upset the Longhorns.

Baylor's 24-10 victory at Waco on Saturday left Houston needing only a victory over Rice, 1-0, this weekend to claim the host spot in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas against Boston College.

If Houston should win, Texas — regardless of the outcome of its game with Texas A&M here on Saturday — reportedly would play Iowa in the Freedom Bowl at Anaheim, Calif., on Dec. 26.

"I think it's an honor to go to any bowl game," Akers told his weekly news conference Monday. "Our first choice is our championship bowl. We still have (a chance) — although it's just a glimmer of hope for that. Houston has a definite inside track. ... But you can't name a bowl that it wouldn't be an honor to go to."

The loss to Baylor, in which Dodge threw three interceptions, soured Texas' hopes for the Cotton Bowl, and Akers was asked if he was concerned about his passers, especially Dodge, a Port Arthur junior.

"Well, sure," said Akers. "He (Dodge) has broken passing records for us. He's enabled us to win the ball games that we've won, and he's had a couple of bad ones in which case we didn't win, but our passing attack is not, percentage-wise, where I would like it to be, no. But the others haven't done that (well) either."

The other passers are redshirt freshman Bret Stafford and Akers' son, Danny, a walk-on who later turned down a scholarship.

Told by one writer that Akers knew better "who's ready to go" at quarterback, Akers responded, "Thank you. I appreciate that. I know that's a large concession for you."

Asked if Dodge, who bruised his right knee and was knocked dizzy against Baylor, would be the starter against A&M, Akers said, "He'd be a candidate."

"Let me tell you this, we're not taking a poll, so regardless of how concerned you are, or anyone else is...we still think it's our job and our right to select our personnel, and believe it or not, we probably have a better view of it than somebody else might think," Akers said.

Asked if he had any explanation for Dodge's second poor performance in three weeks — he had five interceptions against Houston — Akers said, "No, there was nothing we could detect. He was rushed some, and made some poor choices, just a combination of things."

Akers said, however, "We didn't have 11 people out there ... that at any one time were going all at the same time — offensively, defensively or in the kicking game."

Texas was ranked No. 6 before the Baylor loss, and Akers was asked if he thought his team, 7-2-1, was still a top 10 team. "No, I don't think we should be," he said.

Holmes announces retirement plans

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

One more fight, says Larry Holmes, and he'll retire.

"Larry, you've said that a lot of times before?" said a caller.

"I never told you to print it before," said Holmes Monday. "This time, print it."

Well, it's been printed before. But this time, maybe the premier heavyweight in the world means it when he says, "I'm going to fight David Bey and quit."

A defense of the International Boxing Federation title against Bey is not the one he wants. He wants to fight light-heavyweight champion Michael Spinks, but he doesn't think that match can be made.

"Whoever I fight," said Holmes, "It's my last fight."

And if the Spinks bout doesn't develop or promoter Don King doesn't come up with $2 million for a Bey match, Holmes said, he won't step into a ring again.

There are people who would like to see that happen ... for a variety of reasons.

— If Holmes retires now 46-0, he will be remembered as one of two heavyweight champions to retire undefeated. Never mind, that he didn't break the late Rocky Marciano's record of 49-0.

— There is a certain sadness about watching a fighter of consummate skills, fight at a lower standard because of dues paid to age and countless rounds in gyms and fights and seemingly interminable miles of roadwork.

The mind flashes back to Muhammad Ali and his dismal career-ending losses when he was stopped after 10 rounds by Holmes and when he lost a 10-round decision to Trevor Berbick.

Holmes has not slipped to the level Ali did in those last two fights, but at 35 his "boxing slip" is showing.

So why fight again at all? Maybe, because Holmes doesn't want to leave on his last performance. He said he wants to look sharp in February.

Last Nov. 9, Holmes stopped James "Bonecrusher" Smith on cuts over his left eye in the 12th round of a scheduled 15-rounder at Las Vegas, Nev. Holmes had big leads on all three official cards when the bout was stopped, but there was feeling at ringside that if the fight had not been stopped, Holmes was not a cinch to win.

Holmes was badly hurt by right hands in the fifth and eighth rounds. Even the best fighters at the height of their game get tagged, but Holmes got hit by a cumbersome 31-year-old man, with only a 14-1 record against mediocre opposition, who doesn't know how to use the left jab to set up the right.

Holmes blames Smith's awkwardness and inexperience as reasons for his problems, saying how should he know what Smith was going to do, if Smith didn't.

There was also the matter of a break in the first knuckle of Holmes' right thumb, which Holmes said did not trouble him that much.

Holmes had the thumb checked out last week and said he will be able to begin sparring in late December-early January for Bey, who has a 14-0 record.

"He walks straight in; he doesn't bob and weave," said Holmes. "He busts up easy. I know he's going to be strong, but he'll be easier than Smith. Bonecrusher was so awkward."

Taking a look at another Oiler loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Just when the Houston Oilers thought they had discovered a comeback punch, they were punched out by the Cleveland Browns.

The Oilers trailed the New York Jets 13-0 two weeks ago before reeling off 31 straight points en route to a 31-20 victory, their second in a row.

The Browns ended the Oilers brief celebration Sunday with a 27-10 victory and the Oilers never charged.

"Sometimes when someone drops a ball and then catches one the next time, it will turn things around," Campbell said. "Other times, when things aren't working, it multiplies."

The Oilers have had plenty of chances to battle from behind this season.

"That's a feeling that with more experience they'll be able to play their way through," Campbell said.

Campbell credited the Browns defense with shutting down the Oilers offense and keeping big plays to a minimum.

"Both teams came into the game at an emotional high and both teams played hard but their defense played better than our offense and that was the main difference in the game," Campbell said.

The Oilers dropped to a 2-11 record going into Sunday's game in the AstroDome against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Pampa loses frosh game

Pampa Blue was defeated by Borger Red, 50-29, in a ninth-grade basketball game Monday.

Ford led Borger with 18 points. Derik Ryan paced Pampa with 20 points, followed by Mike Been with 12, Brian Hogan, six; Alex Casels, five, and Chris Wilson four.

Pampa wins soccer game

The Pampa Soccer Club defeated Amarillo, 2-1, recently in a men's indoor soccer game.

Pampa, now 2-0, had goals scored by Jim Bridwell and Gary Griggs.

Other members of the Pampa team are Scott Fleming, Jim Lee, Scott Smiles, Jerry Shoopman, Steve List, Britt Smith and Shane Ethridge.

Cleveland cornerbacks pressured Oiler receivers on the line of scrimmage, making it difficult for them to get into their patterns quickly, Campbell said.

"Other teams have warned us and the films showed that they are aggressive at the corners," Campbell said. "We've had trouble with teams that play that type of defense."

The Browns held Oiler quarterback Warren Moon to only nine completions on 29 attempts for 84 yards in one of his leastproductive performances of the season.

Second year Larry Moriarty's string of 100-yard games ended at two. Moriarty left the game on a stretcher after the second play of the fourth quarter with a pinched nerve in his neck.

Moriarty had 81 yards on 16 carries when he left the game.

Campbell said he would not know until later in the week if Moriarty would play against the Steelers.

Houston's only touchdown came on Keith Bostic's 25-yard interception return and the only points by the offense came near the end of the game on a field goal by Joe Cooper.

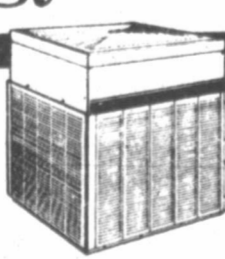

The Oilers dropped two passes and were stopped on their first series. Cleveland took over and drove for a touchdown to start the Oiler downfall.

The Steelers shocked San Diego, playing without quarterback Dan Fouts, 52-24, improving their record to 7-6, making Sunday's Oiler game a possible title clincher.

This coming year you might have to shoulder more work or career responsibilities. Something rewarding will result, provided you do a good job.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The freedom of independence you so highly prize could suffer restrictions today because of your own behavior, instead of the action of others. Astro-Graph predictions for each zodiac sign at $1 each or the Matchmaker set at $2 each make excellent stocking stuffers for the entire family. Send for them today by mailing your request to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In your social involvements today be sure to voluntarily pick up your end of the tab. Don't give pals cause to label you a freeloader.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll have to be a trifle thick-skinned and able to cope with obstacles today if you hope to achieve your objectives. Don't be a midgetoast.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Have alternate plans ready today just in case your first ideas fail to work. If you're prepared, roadblocks can be circumvented.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Unless you know exactly what to expect from another, joint ventures could fizzle today. Don't get involved with any unknown quantities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In important career matters today, rely solely upon yourself and not upon others. The support you're soliciting may not be available.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your own thoughts could contribute to uncertainties today and cause unnecessary pressures where work is concerned. Don't get rattled.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you gamble on unfamiliar people or situations, you're not apt to like the payoff today. Stay in your own playing field.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It will be wise today not to resurrect volatile, old issues that you don't see eye-to-eye on with your mate. Don't ask for trouble.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you have to perform any tedious mental tasks today, try to have someone double check your work. You could make errors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could be taken advantage of today if you're an impulsive buyer. Take a hard look at anything offered as a bargain before plunking down your cash.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be careful today that you are not a stern disciplinarian in family situations you normally tolerate. Don't let minor infractions cause you to overreact.

Mexico making a big push for U.S. tourists

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE DEL CABO, Mexico (AP) — Where only sand fleas and sea gulls once prevailed, the Mexican government is building vacation resorts in hopes of drawing U.S. tourist crowds and their dollars.

The transformation of this quiet fishing village at the tip of Baja California was started in 1978 by the National Trust Fund for Tourism Development, or Fonatur, with a 20-year development plan for the Los Cabos area.

Currently, there is a new international airport outside the city and three beachfront hotels with 11 more planned. In coming years, plans call for condominiums, a shopping center and golf course — all aimed at American tourists.

"The United States is the main market of tourism and the number of tourists is up about 20 percent over last year," said Carlos Kennedy, Fonatur marketing director here.

He said Fonatur is developing the area with "Old World charm" because "we don't want tall buildings and high rises all along the beachfront."

Tourism is second only to petroleum in producing income for Mexico and brings in about $1.5 billion annually. With the price of oil dropping on the world market, Mexico is hoping tourism can take up some of the slack and help pull it from the economic crisis it has faced since 1982.

Fonatur also is developing other resort areas, often carving them out of wilderness where studies showed tourists would go — areas with beach fronts, natural surroundings and an air of tranquility.

Its first venture was Cancun, an island off Mexico's Caribbean coast that boasts some of the best scuba diving areas around and the site of Mayan ruins, according to Fonatur spokesman Carlos Zugasti Islas.

On the Pacific shore, Fonatur developed Ixtapa into an area of beachfront hotels, golf courses and boating.

Additionally, Fonatur is developing Loreto, 210 miles north of Laz Paz on the eastern coast of Baja California, and plans to further promote Puerto Escondido in the southern state of Oaxaca and a still-to-be-started resort further south on the Pacific near Puerto Angel.

Zugasti said employment generated by the resorts is a benefit in a nation where 40 percent of the population is either jobless or underemployed.

"Because most of the places we develop do not have many people, we have to bring in the personnel to work, and this, of course, helps reduce the number of people without jobs," he said.

For instance, 114 people lived on Cancun before Fonatur developed it in 1974. Now it has 54 resort hotels and more than 100,000 permanent residents, most of them working in hotels or related industries, Zugasti said.

Mexican officials say recent publicity about increased danger of traveling here is unwarranted. They insist several incidents involving American motorists on Mexican highways, and concern expressed by the U.S. Embassy, represent only a small proportion of the millions of visitors to Mexico each year.

There also is concern that Mexico's inflation rate, which hit 80 percent last year and is expected to drop to between 55 and 60 percent for 1984, will make the resorts less attractive to American tourists.

Bargains can still be found, however. A room in a beachfront hotel in Ixtapa was $30 in October and a gourmet dinner $10.

Even so, most of the places are out of the price range of the average Mexican.

Africa's food crisis likely to last for many long years

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The haunting television images of skeletal, starving Ethiopians burst suddenly onto the world's consciousness, triggering a flood of sympathy and aid.

But as the images fade, the specter of mass starvation continues to stalk Ethiopia and more than half of the rest of Africa's nations. Some experts talk of one of the greatest calamities of modern times in the making.

It certainly is a problem, they say, that won't go away once the television sets are switched off, and it is likely to affect a generation of Africans.

Whether cameras are there to record it or not, destitute families will continue to trek from parched fields to emergency feeding centers for food handouts. The emaciated bodies of children will continue to be sewn up in burlap sackings for burial in common graves.

The secretary-general of the Ethiopian Red Cross, Getachew Araya, remarked in Geneva earlier this month that "the world is currently looking at Ethiopia" and that a feverish effort had been launched to help more than six million victims of famine in his country.

"But I'm a little bit scared, and the Red Cross in Ethiopia is a little bit scared, that maybe this fever is a 15-day wonder," Getachew said. "If the fever goes down, maybe after a month or so, and if supplies are not forthcoming ... At least for one year, we are back to where we were a month ago."

Dawit Wolde Giorgis, chief of the Ethiopian government's main agency dealing with the famine, the Relief and Rehabilitation Commission, told a news conference in Rome: "The catastrophe is just beginning."

He said the impact of the failure of Ethiopia's "small rains," January through mid-April, is being felt now. "But the impact of the failure of the main rainy season, in June and July, will be felt in December," Dawit said. "The main rainy season was a total failure."

Ethiopia's Marxist military leader, Mengistu Haile Mariam, said in a rare news conference here Nov. 16 that the failure of the "small rains" forced farmers to eat the seed grain that had been put aside for sowing before the June-July rains. When those rains failed, he said, the government had to appeal for outside help because its reserves were nearly exhausted.

The story in Ethiopia has been similar throughout much of Africa because of what Mengistu called "a radical change in the general ecological situation."

A devastating drought — from Morocco in the north to Mozambique in the south, from Somalia in the east to Senegal in the west — is in its third straight year in some places.

Mengistu said drought has become chronic in parts of northern Ethiopia over the past decade, although many experts say bad government policies and primitive agricultural methods that strip the land are also to blame for the present famine.

The drought has left 35 million people "in desperate need of help," according to a recent report by the office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Coordinator in Geneva.

It said 27 African nations — whose populations account for about 200 million of Africa's 500 million inhabitants — are now listed as urgently needing external food aid and that, overall, 36 countries face food shortages.

Harvester sells ag division

CHICAGO (AP) — International Harvester Co., struggling for four years without making a profit, has agreed to sell its agricultural implement division to Tenneco Inc.

Under the agreement, announced Monday, Tenneco will pay $260 million in cash and $170 million in preference stock. The transaction is expected to be completed early next year.

Harvester's farm operations will be joined with Tenneco's J.I. Case Co. affiliate, headquartered in Racine, Wis.

Tenneco is a Houston-based company with interests in gas, oil, insurance and manufacturing. It posted $14.5 billion in sales in 1983.

Harvester, one of the pioneers in the mechanization of the world's farmland, will now be only a manufacturer of medium and heavy trucks.

Included in the sales agreement will be Harvester's combine plant in East Moline; an implement facility in Hamilton, Ontario; an engineering operation in Hinsdale; machine tools from its plants in Rock Island and Memphis, Tenn.; North American farm implement dealerships, and Harvester's subsidiary in the United Kingdom.

Business metamorphosis is leaving little trace of past

NEW YORK (AP) — Brand new high-tech companies that soar into the space age from ground zero in the manner of Apple Computer, Digital Equipment and Prime Computer might get the attention, but they're not getting all the sales. Simultaneous with the emergence of such companies has come a less-publicized but equally profound development, the metamorphosis of relatively ancient enterprises into modern companies that leave little trace of their past. Some of the changes have been sweeping: Gould Inc. from industrial products to electronics, American Can from packaging to financial services, Penn Central Corp. from railroading to electronics and telecommunications, The Singer Company from sewing machines to aerospace electronics. For all those companies, moreover, there are dozens of others that have evolved into different entities more suitable, their officers thought, to the changing times. W.R. Grace, for example, flipped to chemicals and retailing from shipping, while Allied Corp. dropped "Chemical" from its name and added aerospace, oil and gas, and automotive ventures.

In many instances the original products continue as parts of a larger stable, and in some the newer products represent a natural progression in the same market area. But changes at Gould, American Can, Singer and Penn Central are almost total. As recently as the late 1970s Gould was a diversified industrial products company, perhaps best known for batteries. Today it is almost totally electronics. The new Gould concentrates on minicomputers, factory automation equipment, test and measurement instruments, medical devices, defense systems and electronic components, including semiconductors, for the electronics industry.

The largest activity of The Singer Company, once a class smoketack operation, is now in aerospace electronics, which company officials expect will be responsible for 50 percent of total sales in 1984. Singer's change was as calculated as Gould's, the result not only of social and economic factors that led to a decline of home sewing in the United States and Europe, but because of intense foreign competition.

News in brief

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, which has opposed racial quotas, says it will appeal a federal court order that traditionally black Tennessee State University's enrollment be 50 percent white by 1993. The division Monday filed papers saying it will appeal to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals the September order by U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Wiseman Jr. that was meant to settle a 16-year-old lawsuit.

The suit was filed by blacks to desegregate all state-supported colleges and universities in Tennessee, and soon focused on TSU, which was founded in 1912 solely for blacks.

Names in news

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Guitarist Dick Dale, best known for his surfing hits from the 1960s, says he's doing concerts again despite serious burns he suffered in a kitchen accident last month. "I'm tough as a snake," said Dale, 47, whose best known hits were "Let's Go Trippin'" and "The Scavenger." Dale, who spilled sizzling oil on one leg and his guitar-picking hand Oct. 12, said Monday he's received get-well calls from friends like Annette Funicello, whom he met while filming surfing films in the 1960s.

and nearly called off the wedding. I'd characterize our relationship as rather volatile." McCartney, 42, did not say what the row was about, but added: "We're not bored. We're still interested in each other. It's lusty. We do have wonderful children and a lovely marriage. And yes, I expect it to go on forever."

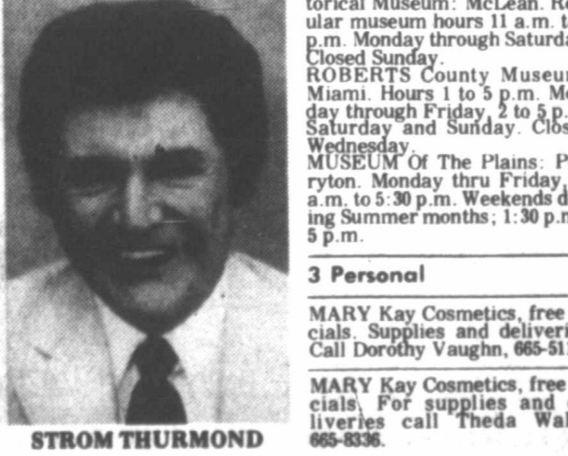

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney says he and his wife, Linda, nearly called off their wedding because they had a row the day before, and that the spat continued 15 years later. But he expects the marriage to "go on forever." "People have this image of us — oh, isn't it wonderful — the perfect marriage. But our marriage isn't an idyll," the former Beatle said in an interview with the British magazine Woman. "We had a row the day before we got married —

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Jeffrey Geller, the medical student who kissed American soil after being evacuated from Grenada by U.S. troops last year, says he's not disturbed at the barb tossed his way by "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau. In Sunday's funny pages, Trudeau presented a student at a Caribbean medical school who said he hadn't studied for finals, and was so relieved they were called off by the invasion that he kissed the ground when he got home.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Liberace, the flamboyant pianist whose glitter and glamour have captivated audiences around the world for four decades, is about to be immortalized in his own hometown. The 65-year-old entertainer is to be on hand Dec. 8 to kick off a $1.6 million renovation drive for the 103-year-old Ward Memorial Theater, which will be renamed for him. The theater is located across the street from Liberace's childhood

Both man and nature to blame for the African famine

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere was scathing in his indictment of Western governments, saying they didn't respond to the plight of famine-stricken Africa until their people "saw corse ito", speaking of bumper crops and "food mountains" in the developed world, the newly elected chairman of the Organization of African Unity told a news conference here that "we must not allow people to die when we have the means to stop a disaster."

But assigning the blame for a prolonged drought and famine, which has pushed more than six million Ethiopians to the brink of starvation and threatens a total of some 35 million people in Africa, is not an easy task. And some say it would be a fruitless exercise anyway.

"There's more than enough blame to go around," Rep. Howard Wolpe, a Michigan Democrat who heads a House subcommittee on Africa, told an American television audience. "The issue at this point is how do we save the lives of literally tens upon tens of thousands of people who are dying."

One could first point a finger at nature itself — at shifting cyclonic patterns that failed to bring seasonal rains, at a cruel and relentless sun that has baked and cracked once-fertile land and dried up rivers and reservoirs.

But droughts are part of nature's pattern, and Africa's farmers and herders also bear a burden of blame. Over many centuries, the land has become denuded and exhausted by the cutting of trees for firewood, overgrazing of livestock, the failure to rotate crops so the land can lie fallow and replenish itself.

Ethiopia's Central Highlands, covering an area the size of France and home to 70 percent of the country's population, are a case in point.

Once a vast wooded watershed, the region has been stripped of trees over centuries of habitation in this ancient land and now is "Grand Canyon country" — in the words of a Western diplomat — with precipitous barren hillsides and gorges scored by erosion.

A report issued by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization earlier this year called the highlands one of the world's largest areas of ecological degradation. It said 30 percent of the highlands was forested in 1935 and only 3 percent now.

Ethiopia's Agriculture Ministry has said 494,000 acres of forest are being destroyed and 148,000 acres of arable land are being lost every year through cutting of trees and erosion.

African governments, specialists say, should also shoulder some of the blame for an 11 percent decline in the continent's per-capita food production between 1970 and 1980.

Some governments have stressed cash crops such as tea, coffee and tobacco, as a source of needed foreign exchange, and downgraded food crops. Other nations, such as Zambia, banked on income from copper and other minerals to pay for imported food, but people went hungry when mineral prices slumped.

African leaders, worried that discontent in the continent's burgeoning cities might cause their downfall, have tended to keep food prices in urban areas low by having state marketing boards pay farmers a minimal amount for their produce. This has helped accelerate a shift from the countryside to the city and meant a drop in food production.

In Ethiopia's shift to a Marxist economy over the past decade, the development of state and collective farms has been stressed. Although they have been given priority in allocation of such resources as fertilizers and tractors, but the state and collective farms still account for only about 6 percent of agricultural production.

Conference tackles violence as disease

ATLANTA (AP) — More than 50,000 Americans are murdered or commit suicide annually, and the carnage poses a major public health problem, according to current and former officials with the national Centers for Disease Control.

"There are few problems in public health as disturbing as violence," Dr. William Foege, former director of CDC, said Monday at a conference at the Center for Public Policy, established by former President Jimmy Carter.

Dr. Mark Rosenberg, chief of the CDC's Violence Epidemiology Branch, recited a litany of statistics to those gathered for the center's Health Policy Project:

— Homicide, suicide and aggravated assault accounted for more than 50,000 American deaths in 1980, depriving their victims of 1.3 million years of life they would have had if they had lived to 65.

— The average American's chance of having his life end in homicide is about 1 out of 150.

— For a black man who dies between 20 and 24, the chance that his life ended in homicide is greater than 1 out of 3.

— Suicides claim about 27,000 lives in the United States each year.

— Attacks by husbands on wives result in more injuries requiring medical treatment than rapes, muggings and auto accidents combined.

"Violence is not traditionally thought of as a public health problem," said Rosenberg. But he said violence could be reduced, just as heart or lung disease can be reduced.

More than 60 percent of all homicides are committed with guns, he said. "This country has failed to appreciate the impact of firearms... The need for something to be done is clear," he said.

But Rosenberg said it would be "destructive" to look at the issue of violence and health policy simply as a referendum on gun control, and predicted that efforts to limit gun ownership would meet fierce resistance.

Texas Demo seeks panel chairmanship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, has sent letters to more than 200 colleagues in the House of Representatives to apprise them of his interest in becoming chairman of the prestigious Budget Committee.

The 42-year-old lawmaker from Dallas, who just won reelection to a fourth term in Congress, has said he will not seek the post if the Democratic Caucus changes its rules next week to let the current chairman, Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., or the next senior Democrat, Rep. Leon Panetta of California, remain on the committee for a fourth term.

Jones has been an excellent chairman over the past four years and Panetta has been one of the most knowledgeable and valuable members of the committee, Frost said.

"But if we do not change our rules and neither Jim nor Leon are allowed to run, I would urge you to keep an open mind as to who can best serve as chairman of the Budget Committee," Frost wrote his colleagues Monday.

Frost was chairman of the Democratic Caucus Committee on Organization, Study and Review that recommended last week against a change in the rule that limits members to three terms on the panel.

However, Frost said that the proposal was considered in "a totally impartial and objective manner" and that he abstained when the final vote was taken, on Monday of last week.

In his letter, Frost said the next budget chairman "must be able to unite all elements of our party in the face of extraordinary economic and political pressures so we can successfully resolve the major problems that confront us."

As the majority party in the House, Democrats control the committee structure and will name the chairman when the new Congress meets in early January.

"It would be an interesting time to be chairman," Frost said, anticipating a battle between President Reagan and Congress over the nearly $200 billion federal budget deficit. "It's an intriguing possibility."
