Suicide follows guilty verdict

Maynard shoots himself after trial

BY JEFF LANGLEY Senior Staff Writer

WHEELER-A former Pampa police officer convicted in the Dec. 10, 1980 murder of his ex - wife shot himself to death just outside the courtroom minutes after jurors returned the guilty verdict Saturday afternoon, officials said.

Preston Wayne Maynard, 49, who most recently lived in Booker, took his own life after the eight man, four - woman Wheeler County jury found him guilty on the charge of murder

Jurors deliberated an hour and 29 minutes to reach the guilty verdict after Maynard's second trial for the death of Shirley Louise Maynard, 40, at the couple's Pampa trailer home

The defendant's family was in the Wheeler courtroom for the reading of the guilty verdict and Maynard's subsequent suicide in a law library just across the hallway.

AFTER THE VERDICT was announced, 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany asked whether the parties were ready to proceed with the punishment phase of the trial. Defense attorney Bill Kolius asked for time to further interview two state's witnesses scheduled to testify in determining Maynard's punishment. The judge ordered a 10-minute recess, then those in attendance at the trial milled around the courtroom and adjoining halls.

About three minutes later, a single gunshot echoed through the second floor of the courthouse

"People started scattering like quail," Assistant District Attorney a .38 - caliber, short - barrel, nickel David Hamilton said.

Several people in the hall screamed, "He's got a gun! He's got a gun," Hamilton said, while those in the courtroom took cover. 'Get down! Get down!," the prosecutor screamed at jurors remaining in the courtroom. An investigator for the DA's office, Michael Hartsock, rushed for his briefcase to get his weapon, Hamilton said. The defendant's mother, Mrs. Jean Duke, immediately attacked Hartsock and attempted to wrestle the gun away from him, Hamilton said. He said the woman nearly succeeded in getting the gun, while screaming, 'He was innocent. He was innocent! Somebody will pay. Somebody will pay for this,' Hamilton said.

THE PROSECUTOR SAID he and Gray County Sheriff's deputy Jerry Holland, the court baliff, grabbed the woman and pulled her off of Hartsock

When Hartsock and another officer crossed the hall and opened the door to the small law library, they saw Maynard lying mortally wounded on the floor. Hamilton said the man was attempting to lift the death weapon again but was unable to do so, because of the extensive damage caused by a single gunshot wound into his chest, "right through the heart," Hamilton said.

It was the same place the jury said he had shot his wife, four years and 12 days earlier.

The guilty man shot himself with plated Smith & Wesson pistol. Maynard shot himself after he was briefly left alone in the room, Hamilton said. The last person to see him alive was his stepfather, former Lipscomb County Sheriff Basil Duke, he said

MAYNARD WAS PREVIOUSLY convicted of murder in his ex wife's shooting death in a Pampa trial that began July 27, 1981 and ended a week later. The jury in that case sentenced him to 30 years in prison. An appeals court ordered the new trial that began on Monday after ruling that hearsay testimony given in the first trial was inadmissible. Maynard has been free on bond since shortly after the reversal in December last year.

Hamilton said that because he had been free pending the outcome of the trial, Maynard had an unlimited opportunity to get the gun that ended his life.

Judge McIlhany, who had crossed the hallway to the district clerk's office when the shot rang out, never officially summoned the jurors back to the courtroom. The panel just went home. The prosecutor said he thinks the final judgment will read that Maynard was convicted but never sentenced in the case.

The state's attorney said that following the shooting, a defense lawyer remarked that some on the iury panel said they would have considered probation for the guilty man. Hamilton said the intended leniency reported probably was prompted by the defendant's suicide, but he believes jurors would have given Maynard a prison sentence.

"I've never had somebody I'm prosecuting to go out and kill himself over the deal," Hamilton

"It's a real sad thing for everybody. Why did he do it right there around his parents?" he said. In addition to his parents, those present in the courthouse at the time of the shooting were Maynard's daughter, Lisa Harvill, 23, of Victoria, and his brother, Ken Maynard, and half-brother,

Darrell Duke. "He destroyed Christmas for everybody, for the jurors, for his family, for everybody. It was selfish and inconsiderate. It shows he had no consideration for anybody else, period," Hamilton

Final arguments in the case began at 9:30 a.m. Saturday in Wheeler district court.

Judge McIlhany instructed jurors to return a verdict of innocent if they believed that the shooting was an accident. The judge told the jurors to convict Maynard on the murder charge if they believed beyond a reasonable doubt that he knowingly and intentionally shot his wife to death.

In his opening remarks, Hamilton summarized the question decided by the jurors Saturday.

"Did this man kill his wife, or was there an accident as they were struggling over this gun?'

Local woman dies in two-car crash

A Pampa woman is dead and her husband and daughter hospitalized in Amarillo following a two-car collision on North Hobart St. Friday night with a Texas Department of Public Safety automobile.

Candice Ketchum Smith, 35, of 1801 Lea died early Saturday morning at Northwest Texas Hospital after undergoing surgery Friday night for injuries received in the accident near the intersection of Hobart and 17th

Her husband William Smith was listed in serious but stable condition Saturday night at NWTH after surgery Saturday morning.

A hospital spokesman said he had received serious head injuries and fractures.

The couple's 13-year-old daughter, Andrea, was reported to be in satisfactory condition after surgery for multiple injuries, the spokesman said

The accident occurred about 6:25 p.m. Friday when highway patrolman Johnny Garth Carter was reportedly involved in a high-speed pursuit of a motorist, according to witnesses.

His 1984 Ford, a DPS vehicle. was in collision with the 1983 Ford Mustang driven by Mrs. Smith, according to Pampa Police Department reports.

The Smiths were transported to Coronado Community Hospital by Pampa Medical Services ambulance and then transferred shortly afterwards to Amarillo, the police reported.

Ambulance personnel had to use the jaws of life to pry open the Smiths' vehicle to get the injured victims out.

Carter was also taken to CCH where he was treated and released for minor injuries Friday night. He was not admitted as a patient into the hospital. Police and DPS units responded to the scene, where they blocked off Hobart and access streets and

Pampa all set for Christmas

By LARRY HOLLIS

Staff Writer Families will be gathering, last-minute shopping occurring and stores and offices closing as Pampa area residents get ready for the celebration of Christmas activities Monday and Tuesday.

Disappointing to many, satisfying to others, a mild weather spell is expected to continue at least through Christmas Day, dispelling any hopes of a White Christmas for the Panhandle this

Though the snow won't be glistening, the fair weather will aid travelers heading home for the holidays. And despite the clear streets and highways, law enforcement officials are still advising motorists to exercise caution on their trips, allowing plenty of time for travel and watching out for other drivers.

Only one usual shopping day remains as Christmas Eve falls on Monday. But a number of Pampa stores have decided to remain open today. Most will close at 6 p.m. Monday, ending extended hours for shoppers observed during the past week to permit their employees to enjoy the evening and Christmas Day with their families and friends

Most public employees will get a four-day weekend, with most city, county and federal offices being closed both Monday and Tuesday, resuming regular hours and services Wednesday. Emergency personnel in fire, police Department of Public Safety and sheriff's offices will remain on

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce office also will close Monday and Tuesday.

The U. S. Postal Service will have regular hours Monday including mail delivery. The post office will be closed Christmas Day and will resume regular hours Wednesday.

Banks and financial institutions will close at noon Monday and reopen Wednesday morning.

The Pampa News will be delivered Monday, but no issue will be published Christmas Day. Because of the holiday, the business and advertising offices have changed deadlines for classified and display advertising. Regular hours will resume Wednesday

Also observing the holiday, most grocery stores and fast-food restaurants will be closed Tuesday or have limited hours. Many also will close early Monday to allow employees to join in Christmas Eve activities

Local students are out of school for the holidays, with classes resuming Jan. 2. Most college students will enjoy longer holidays before returning to their colleges and universities after the start of the New Year.

While others are completing shopping and wrapping chores and preparing Christmas feasts, personnel and volunteers with the Salvation Army, Good Samaritan Christian Services, various churches and organizations and many individuals will be delivering gifts and food to many of the needy and underprivileged residents in the area to help them enjoy the Christmas spirit, too. Many churches have scheduled special services in observance of Christ's birthday for today, with others having special Christmas Eve services and masses.

Salvation Army Christmas fund short

The Salvation Army is more than $5,000 short of what it will require to assist needy families during this Christmas season. Captain Milton Wood announced.

The Army has raised $9,581 in its annual Christmas drive and still needs $5,418 to reach its goalof $15,000, Capt. Wood said. He said food vouchers have been given to 367 families that needed assistance and the additional funds are needed to pay the food bill. In addition, others are still coming in seeking assistance, he noted.

Persons wishing to donate to the Salvation Army Christmas fund can mail contributions to Box 1458, Pampa, 79065.

In addition to assisting the 367 families with food, 1,853 new toys have been given to 384 children under age 11; 126 will be served Christmas dinner in local restaurants; 315 nursing home residents have been given gifts and 15 prisoners assisted. making a total of 1,244 people who are receiving assistance, the captain said.

With disputes over oil and gas rights continuing in the West Panhandle Field, Dorchester Gas Producing Co. is hoping to win change of venues involving seven lawsuits in Gray and Carson Counties.

Dorchester won one victory in its efforts last week when 100th District Judge Robert Montgomery of Memphis granted a change of venue Thursday in Dorchester's suit against Lucky Bird Petroleum and Mark Fahle of Borger

Dorchester had sought to get the case transferred to Lubbock, where it won its suit against the Harlow Corporation in August. But the court granted the change of venue to 181st District Court in Potter County.

Dorchester attorneys have argued a fair trial could not be had in Carson and Gray because of the large number of independent oil producers operating in the area. They said a fair trial would be more possible in Lubbock because oil and gas exploration are not major businesses there.

But defendants have said a jury familiar with oil and gas exploration procedures would be needed to guarantee them a fair

Montgomery has been hearing testimony on four separate change of venue requests in Panhandle since Monday.

Venue requests in three other cases involving Dorchester were scheduled Wednesday in Pampa, but the hearings have been postponed until the Panhandle hearings are completed. Testimony in the hearings in Harlow's lawyers had argued the RRC rules and regulations were necessary to their defense.

Broadus Spivey, Austin attorney representing Harlow, said after the Lubbock trial that Montgomery's charge was "the second worse charge I've ever seen. The worst was in Energy-Agri."

But Judge Love's rejection of the recusal motion permitted Montgomery to continue presiding over the change of venue hearings in Panhandle.

Three cases involving Dorchester are pending in the 223rd District Court in Gray County. Dorchester has suits against J. B. Watkins and Internorth, et al., while Sharon Lease Oil and Judy Oil have a joint suit against Dorchester. Dorchester is seeking change of venues in all three cases, using the same arguments as in previous requests to get the cases tried outside of the county. Dorchester won its change of venue against Harlow in Pampa last April. having convinced Montgomery to decide it could not get a fair trial

In its suits Dorchester has claimed the defendants have produced and converted gas belonging to it on leases in the West Panhandle Field, generally located in portions of Gray and Carson Counties.

The firm, which Damson Oil Corporation purchased in April, claims in its petitions filed in the suits that it had rights to all natural gas, including casinghead gas, produced from "all producing horizons situated in whole or in part above sea level" in portions of the field.

That claim was limited somewhat when Montgomery ruled in the Harlow trial that oil production includes rights to casinghead gas, defined as gas or vapor indigenous to an oil stratum and produced with oil from such

Dorchester has continued its claims that oil operators have perforated and produced gas from formations it lays rights to for gas production.

The company seeks damages resulting from the production, conversion, sale and gas it claims it has title to under lease agreements extending back to July 1, 1954, when Dorchester - a Delaware based corporation acquired the gas rights from Nalam Corporation

It has claimed damages generally only for production since 1979, when independants allegedly began to pump gas from the field in formations Dorchester claims as In their suit against Dorchester,

Sharon Lease Oil and Judy Oil counter Dorchester's claims to casinghead gas rights in Gray County. They claim lease agreements, farmouts and assignments have given them rights to the oil and its related casinghead gas.

Their petition in their suit claims Dorchester's "assertions have cast a cloud" over their ownership of their wells and "have jeopardized" their ability "to continue to produce said wells and market the oil and casinghead gas produced therefrom.

"You, the people of the Panhandle, should be the stewards of your own soil, not the watchdogs of someone else's waste," White told about 350 people gathered for an anti-dump rally in the Hereford High School auditorium.

The U.S. Department of Energy last Wednesday picked Deaf Smith

County as one of three possible locations for the nuke repository scheduled to open in 1998. White, Attorney General Jim Mattox and local lawmakers came to Hereford to promise a fight. The promises played well to a county in fear.

"Should all other efforts fail, as a last resort we can exercise our state veto power," White said "And I assure you, I will not hesitate to exercise that power."

The governor also predicted the Texas congressional delegation would work to make that veto stick.

Under federal law, the state picked for the dump can nix the decision. But Congress can override that Texas has filed a lawsuit challenging the selection of Deaf Smith County as a finalist along with sites in Nevada and Washington state.

Mattox told the rally the lawsuit was "a shot heard in Washington." "We better make sure all the sparks fly as possible," Mattox

National media spoils plan

I had planned to offer up my hide and challenge the general who threatened to investigate any news reporter who even "speculated" what cargo might be carried in the upcoming, "secret" space shuttle launch. I had planned to speculate to high heaven about what the government might have been planning to send up into space with our tax dollars and in our names.

Then, the Washington Post and a host of others beat me to the punch. The news organizations didn't just speculate about what will be on board in the space shuttle — they told the American people and the Russians too - exactly what cargo is scheduled for orbit.

The national media spoiled my column and intended challenge to the donkey's rear with a single star on his shoulder.

I would have hypothesized, speculated and outright guessed about the cargo for the shuttle, and waited for the general try to make something of it. I could think of all sorts of secret packages that might go up in the shuttle. Maybe a secret experiment involving a pure and darker hair dye, capable of being made only in the zero gravity of space. The White House might order something of that sort to go up in the craft. Perhaps it would be Dolly Parton's bra blasting off into space, I would have said, even though I know the shuttle can't carry a load that large.

But the day after general Richard Abel issued his threat, the Post and the Associated Press and the networks came out with the story that the shuttle will be carrying a spy satellite to be launched into stationary orbit over Soviet territory

The Russians already know everything there is to know about the launch, I'm sure. After all, the Reds already have their hands on the blueprints to our more - sophisticated satellites. They also monitor on radar every piece of space garbage orbiting the Earth.

A big cry over printing the story was made by the Pentagon, only because our government is jealous of the way the communists and their "free" press can work together in keeping secrets. When the Soviets tell Pravda to sit on a story, it sits on a story, no questions asked. Some of our military men, such as general Abel, wish they had the same control here, and can't understand why they don't.

A click of the heels, and a "Sig Heil" to you, dear general. Have a nice day.

Harlow Corporation files for bankruptcy

LUBBOCK - The Harlow Corporation has asked 100th District Judge Robert Montgomery of Memphis to vacate his recent judgment against the firm because the Amarillo-based company is bankrupt. Harlow and other defendants filed a motion Friday asking Montgomery to wipe out his judgment of more than $966,000 against them on grounds a bankruptcy filing automatically invokes a stay against recovery of any claim. Judge Montgomery had entered the judgment against Harlow, Lawrence Hagy, Sybil Harrington, the Harrington Foundation and other investors more than a week ago as the result of Harlow's loss of a lawsuit with Dorchester Gas Producing Co. over gas rights in Gray County.

A Lubbock jury had ruled against Harlow after a five-week long trial in July and August in 99th District Court, where the case had been moved from Pampa on a change of venue.

Montgomery had ruled Harlow must pay more than $700,000, including attorney's fees and paralegal fees. The remainder of the judgment was entered against Hagy, Sybil Harrington and the Harrington Foundation - all of Amarillo - for their overriding interests and against investors in the two wells involved in the dispute. In their motion, all the co-defendants - except owner Bill Harlow's former wife, Lynn O'Bryan - contend Montgomery's judgment should be ruled invalid because the Harlow Corp. had filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy Dec. 5, prior to the filing of the judgment against them

Hagy, Harrington and the foundation had been intervenors in the case.

The motion also claims the dismissal should include all defendants because of their interrelation in the matter.

The Harlow motion also asks Montgomery to defer to rulings by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), a federal agency which has a ruling pending concerning federal price controls and dedication of natural gas in the West Panhandle Field.

According to the defendant's motion, FERC and Dorchester have continued Harlow should have received a lower price for the gas they sold from production of the two wells located eight miles south of Pampa on the Beaver's

The lower price should have been placed on the value of the gas because of its alleged dedication to interstate markets under federal regulations, Dorchester and other major gas firms have claimed.

But the judgment entered against them was based on the higher price Harlow actually received for the gas, the motion contends. Thus, the judgment should have been for a much lesser sum, defendants indicated.

Dorchester had sought the judgment for damages against the firm from the production and sale of the gas they claimed belonged to them under lease agreements.

In the trial, Harlow argued it had been producing casinghead gas from its wells. Dorchester had claimed rights to all gas produced in formations above sea level.

Montgomery, though, had ruled that casinghead gas was defined as gas or vapor indigenous to an oil-producing stratum and produced with oil from such stratum.

Dorchester contended Harlow was not pumping any substantial amount of casinghead gas and instead had perforated into the gas-producing brown dolomite formation, pumping gas Dorchester to which it had the

The jury ruled in favor of Dorchester, deciding Harlow had been pumping gas belonging to

Hamilton asked. Maynard testified in the trial that the woman's killing was an accident. The defendant said he and his ex - wife were arguing in the kitchen of their Pampa trailer home. He said he went to the rear of the home to change shirts. When he returned to the room, the woman was pointing his .357 Magnum pistol at him and threatened to shoot, Maynard claimed. The defendant said Shirley Maynard then turned the gun toward herself. He grabbed the gun, and in a struggle for the weapon, it accidentally discharged, shooting his ex - wife doesn't remember how he got shot in the knee. The state said Maynard shot his wife in the kitchen and carried her body to a living room couch, where officers found the dead woman. He later shot himself in the knee to support a fabricated story that the woman shot Maynard, then took through the heart, Maynard claimed. He testified that he

her own life, the state alleged. "Preston Wayne Maynard is a liar." the prosecutor said. 'Everything the defense asks you to believe is predicated on believing Wayne Maynard. Hamilton said in the closing arguments

He said the defense refused to discuss physical evidence in the case, "because their client is guilty as sin.

Pampa attorney Ken Fields said his client is innocent.

"The assistant district attorney prosecutes cases whether they are guilty or innocent, and anybody whose testimony disagrees with his theory of the case is a liar," Fields

"How horrifying it must be to Preston Maynard to know that this was an accident," Fields said of his client's prosecution.

The attorney then gave jurors an explanation of "reasonable doubt" and "intent."

Fields said that even if jurors thought it was "possible" or had a "strong suspicion" that Maynard purposely murdered his wife of 20 years, the law says the beliefs aren't enough to justify a guilty verdict. Even if jurors thought it 'quite probable,'' or even 'highly likely" that Maynard committed the crime, the panel had to return a verdict of innocent, Fields said the law demands

The lawyer said the jurors could find his client guilty, "only if you are certain beyond a reasonable doubt, to a moral certainty" that Maynard intended to kill the victim.

"He didn't know if she was going to shoot him. He didn't know if she was going to shoot herself. He had to act." Fields said.

According to testimony, the Maynards had a "stormy" marriage of 20 years but received a divorce about two months before the shooting. The couple was living together again at the time of the killing, however

Shirley Maynard took scores of drugs and suffered a variety of ailments, reduced to "eating baby food," near the end of her life, according to the testimony.

A short time after the shooting,

Maynard phoned his parents, his stepfather Basil Duke, former Lipscomb County Sheriff, and his mother Jean Duke.

Maynard didn't call authorities or for an ambulance for his wife or himself. Instead, he started drinking vodka and taking drugs, the defendant testified. Basil Duke said Maynard told him there had been a "homicide suicide." Mrs. Duke said her son, who sounded highly intoxicated, told her Shirley was dead and that he intended to take his own life. He wanted a double burial in Booker, Jean Duke said. The Maynards sent two other sons to the Pampa trailer home and notified authorities. The group waited outside the home about two hours before going inside. The woman was dead on the couch. A wounded and highly intoxicated Wayne Maynard was lying on the The wounded man later told medical personnel that his wife 'went crazy" and shot him and herself, according to five state's witnesses. However, the later testimony about the struggle over the gun and inability to remember being shot was fabricated by Maynard when he found out about evidence that made the other story impossible, the state alleged. The bullet that passed through the victim's heart was recovered from a kitchen chair. An Amarillo physician who treated Maynard for the gunshot wound to his leg testified that the defendant wouldn't have been able to carry the victim to the couch. "Is he going to tell you the truth now, when he couldn't think of it four years ago?" Hamilton asked. "He's laughing under his breath,

'I've got this thing whipped.' He's had four years to come up with this story...You can't get me. I'm too smart for you. Watch me lie my way out of this one," Hamilton said of the defendant.

Throughout the trial, the defense attacked the character of Shirley Manyard and potrayed the defendant as a loving husband and father. The stategy was anchored by the testimony of the couple's daugher, Lisa Harvill, 23, of

"He was always very loving...He said of the defendant. Her mother, on the other hand, "was always temperamental...She became angry very easily.

'(Maynard) always tried to be helpful and gentle with her," Harvill said

Her mother was always drowsy and often physically violent because of heavy drug use, the woman said. The drug abuse reached a point that she made her daughter get a prescription for sleeping pills that Shirley Maynard took, Harvill said. Finally, her mother had to be hospitalized, she

"They had to tie her to the bed,"

she said The drugs damaged her mother's mind and caused hallucinations. Harvill claimed.

'One time, she said, 'Look at all the cats on the floor...meow, meow, kitty, kitty.' It was very strange, the daughter testified injuries sustained in a traffic accident. The state introduced medical records, however, indicating that

Shirley Maynard's reported hospital stay in 1978 was prompted by a beating from her husband. Under cross - examination, Harvill said she was not - in the prosecutor's words - "trying to portray her (mother) as a sorry individual" to keep her father out of prison. The defense lawyers continued the battering of Mrs. Maynard's character, claiming that the woman had once wounded Maynard in the foot in a previous, unrelated shooting. (Maynard testified in the couple's divorce proceeding that the wound was self -inflicted) "You have heard such bad things that Shirley did - horrible things,' defense attorney Bill Kolius of Amarillo said.

"Lisa said her mother was hallucinating, that she was restrained in the hospital," Kolius said.

"He was cooking the meals, washing the clothes, going to the grocery store...That's what kind of husband he was...Who was with her around the clock? Her ex - husband Wayne Maynard - the only person who ever loved her," the attorney told the jury. Hamilton said in rebuttal that if the shooting was an accident, then why didn't Maynard get help for his wife or notify authorities.

"If he loved her so much, then why on God's earth didn't he call her an ambulance?" he asked

Kolius admitted that his client's reports to medical personnel about the shooting "cannot possibly be factual stories.'

"But Dr. McCoy offered a logical explanation for Wayne Maynard's illogical conduct," Kolius said.

Amarillo psychiatrist, Dr. B.E McCoy, a defense witness, testified that Maynard had suffered "catastrophic stress" before and after the shooting. The man was probably in "a shock - like state" when he told the medical personnel the story he later changed. The man was probably incapable of trying to cover up a crime, the witness said.

"I don't think he was functioning well enough to come up with any designed concealment," Dr. McCoy testified Friday.

In the final arguments, Hamilton termed McCoy, the defense's

'hired, mouthpiece shrink.'' The prosecutor said the attack on Shirley Maynard's character wasn't backed up except by the testimony of Maynard's family members. He said the defense could not produce records of Shirley Manyard's heavy drug use and reported hospitalizations.

"Do you really think Shirley Maynard was a dope fiend? Hamilton asked the panel.

He reminded jurors of physical evidence on the angle of the bullet wound and the testimony of a DPS firearms expert who said the fatal shot was fired from a distance of at least one foot.

Finally, Hamilton asked the jury to disregard the testimony from Maynard's family about the defendant's being a good father and husband and think about the dead woman. "December the tenth - merry Christmas to Shirley Maynard," he remarked about the date of the shooting just over four years ago.

The retrial on the murder charge began Monday. The new trial was ordered by an appeals court that reversed Maynard's 1981 conviction and 30 - year prison term. The higher court ruled that hearsay testimony in the defendant's first trial in Pampa was inadmissible. The retrial was moved from Pampa to Wheeler on a change of venue.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Tax plan may not be worth pursuing

The details of a "modified flat-tax-rate plan" are now available to most Americans, and the collective shudder of apprehension is enough to shake the cardboard box full of receipts stuck in a corner of your closet.

Fairness and simplification, at first glance, seem to be all the Reagan administration is aiming at in the plan. Simplification is measureable—if you can get the hundreds of income-tax forms currently in use down to a dozen or so, you have simplified the tax code, period. A worthy goal, all other things being equal.

Fairness is a different problem. We agree with columnist Walter Williams on fairness: "I keep what I earn, you keep what you earn." But if all of us are forced to pay something, it may strike you as fair that each of us at least pay the same percentage of what we earn with no exceptions—the essense of a true flat tax.

In a "modified-flat" system, in which the gap between the highest and lowest tax rate is narrowed and some. but not all. exceptions (deductions and shelters) are eliminated, fairness remains nearly as complicated as under the present system.

If you are angry that an immensely profitable corporation pays little or not corporate income tax, the elimination of the investment tax credit and reduction of depreciation allowances may strike you as eminently fair. If your employers does not pay for your health insurance, taxing fringe benefits such as that, which others receive, may seem the essence of fairness.

Well the politicans and the lobbyists and the political action committees will be sorting all that out in the next few months

For now, a bill that simplifies income tax reporting by eliminating some tax brackets and some deductions—by shifting the total tax burden without reducing it-may not be worth pursuing, if it means expending all the political capital the president earned in his re-election

That capital would be better spent on efforts to reduce the total burden of government on the private economy. which can be accomplished only by reducing what government spends.

Politics bears strange fruit

The year's not quite over, but leading the pack for insult - of - the - year award are those election reports that conclude President Reagan's personality caused his landslide victory. Can't you just see American voters agonizing at the ballot box: "Mondale's record and proposals for the nation are so much better, but, gee, Ronnie's such a nice guy," and slam goes the Reagan voting machine lever. There're just two ways you can cut that scenario. Either the political experts think Americans who voted for Reagan are stupid, or the experts are doing a bit of wishful thinking.

The election even had a Titanic twist to it: on election night when all but three states had been decided for Reagan and the District of Columbia had gone for Mondale, Washington, D.C., Mayor Marion Barry had this to say, "At least we did our share." That's like the captain of the Titanic, as it lists in the sea, announcing to the passengers, "At least the deck chairs are lined up evenly.

But politics bears even stranger fruit. Ask any American his opinion of politicians. Included in the wide range of responses you'll get are words like: crook, dishonest, hustler, and smooth talker. And that's just the response you'll get in mixed company. Now ask that same American, "Who should take care of such urgent problems as unemployent, poverty, drug addiction, teenage pregnancy and so on?" Most often the answer will be, "The government."

That's amazing, especially when you consider their opinions of the politicians who run the government. I surely wouldn't want my problems in the hands of those kinds of people.

One of the biggest post - election stories to date has been the first draft of the Catholic Bishops' "Pastoral Letter on Catholic Social Teaching and the U.S. Economy." It contains such jewels of morality as: "No one is justified in keeping for his exclusive use what he does not need, when others lack necessities." And, "Labor and Leisure must become more congenial to each other." Or there should be "...justice in the economic sphere, so that the poor in our country and the world will benefit more fully from God's gifts.

Examination of the full text of the Bishops' Letter reveals two things: to implement the program they propose would require a dictator more in control than Adolph Hitler; and the Bishops' plea is virtually identical to the intellectual foundations of Nazism

And there are those little gems of phrases interspersed, such as "God's gifts." Whenever I read that phrase (and I don't mean this to be sacrilegious), I ask, "If all these comforts are God's gifts, how come the government is always bothering me to fork over money to feed the poor?" Why not tell them, "Go get your gift."

The Bishops tell us we have no right to things we don't need while there are others who are needy. That means get out some big bags; go around your house and collect what you don't need, then pack it

Let's start with the lady of the house. Do you REALLY need: diamond rings, ten changes of clothes, fifteen pairs of shoes, or that Princess phone? And guys, do you REALLY need: that riding mower, Ford Ltd., electric shaver, or the stereo system? What about the kids' Pac - Man. Michael Jackson video, and designer jeans? If you are guilty of having unneeded things, according to the Bishops, you're part of America's immorality problem. So let's give it up!

And speaking of the Bishops, I'm wondering when we're going to resume our gunboat diplomacy in Latin America. Latin America has a heavily Catholic population. If it's lost to the Communists, not only does America lose, the Catholic Church loses as well. And besides, what's wrong with gunboat diplomacy anyway. From what I see, its major critics are those without gunboats. But that's a subject for another column.

"I've had the same thing. We call it an 'ETHI-CAL HEADACHE."

President will have to act this year BY CHARLES VAN EATON supported increased federal campaign I traveled through

In one sense the voters gave Mr Reagan a mandate. In another sense they did not. Therein lies both his problem and his opportunity.

Ronald Reagan walked all over Walter Mondale. There is really no other way to describe it. But if Reagan's victory is to be interpreted as a mandate, it was a negative mandate - a clear rejection of the high - tax, high welfare spending policies offered by Mr. Mondale. The voters understood what Mondale was selling and they refused to buy it. But, in my opinion, the voters' rejection of Mr. Mondale's program was a rejection only in principle and in the abstract.

At the hands - on level of spending programs currently in place, the voters refused to turn principle into practice by giving Mr. Reagan the House and Senate seats he needs to put every aspect of his own program into effect. In that sense the President was refused a mandate

During the course of the Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, and, of course, my own home state of Michigan. In each of these states I heard and saw political ads for House and Senate incumbents. All said they were "fighting" to cut waste out of government. And they were all also "fighting to defend those programs vital to the needs of our people."

On the first count one could be excused for wondering how this nation ever managed to have 24 deficits over the past 25 years. After all, if all these Senators and Representatives have been busy fighting waste, then the growth rate of federal spending should never have been anywhere near the 12 percent to 14 percent annual rate which prevailed throughout

It's on the second count that one can understand why we've had the tremendous growth in federal spending and deficits. In "fighting for programs" these incumbents were saying that they had always spending and would, if reelected, continue to do so.

And they were reelected. The Republicans gained only 14 seats in the House - fewer than they lost in 1982 - and lost two seats in the Senate. The Democrats discovered that while the public doesn't want the Mondale prescription of higher taxes, neither are they ready to give up the spending programs to which they have become accustomed.

And therein lies Mr. Reagan's problem. But it's not an insurmontable problem. He came out of this election with enough personal moral and political capital to get what he has to get to reduce the drag which high government spending places on the productive power of the economy. It is now his show, and his alone.

But he doesn't have much time. He doesn't have four years to complete the work he started in 1981 but aborted in 1982 - 1984. He doesn't have three years. Neither does he have two years. He has one year and one year only. But it can be done if he is willing to ignore those around him who blocked him from moving boldly in 1982 for fear of negative political repercussions.

Ronald Reagan doesn't have to worry about his own re-election. He is free and, therefore, powerful. He must use the power the voters gave him. But because Senators and Congressmen still face political pressures, 1985 is the only year open to the President.

When January 1986 comes every member of the House and one third of the Senate will be looking to defend those spending programs which they have learned can buy their re-election.

When January 1987 opens the only thing that will be on the politician's minds will be the 1988 Presidential race. Pro - Bush and Pro - Kemp Republicans will be defining their turf and the in fighting will be fierce. On the Democratic side there will be a full scale war going on to redefine positions for 1988. Nothing constructive in the way of spending

WHITE DEER - Mama, who always said to never write on the walls, would be shocked if she saw what they've got on the wall of the Buck Country restaurant.

Dominated by a bold blue "Bucks, Does we love you," spray painted on the back wall, two walls of this spacy cafe are marked with the signatures and slogans of White Deer school kids. Real and imagined couples are etched in blue magic marker valentines, as are several "we love Michael Jackson" signs.

Reagan, others find no way to plug leaks

WASHINGTON (AP) - 'Tis the season of intrigue around the Reagan administration, and neither the president nor his defense secretary is jolly about it.

First came the spate of stories about the infighting over next year's budget, with all those unnamed sources pegging Caspar Weinberger as a holdout against lowering the deficit But what lowering the deficit. But what really set off the defense chief was the disclosure of the secret military mission of the next space

Major leaks, and the claim, spurious or not, that national security is at stake are nothing new in the relationship between the media and the current administration. For that matter, every president in the modern era has been driven up the wall at one time or another by unauthorized news accounts. Weinberger called it the "height of journalistic irresponsibility" when The Washington Post revealed that the shuttle Discovery would carry a spy satellite to be put in stationary orbit over the Soviet Union. Weinberger suggested the story caused "actual damage" to the nation's security. A White House spokesman made clear that Reagan was unhappy about the disclosure, just as he was about the leaks over the budget debate — an annual rite as sure as Christmas itself Reagan once complained that he'd "had it up to my keister" over leaks. They continued, nonethless.

One scholar who has studied the issue at length — and from a unique vantage point — says he agrees with Reagan's own assessment that leaks have

'reached a new high' under his administration.

Stephen Hess, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, spent a year from 1981-82 inside the government's press offices, including those at the White House, the Pentagon and the State Departments. His book, "The Government-Press Connection,' was published this year by Brookings.

Hess, a former aide to Republican presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and Richard M. Nixon, relates a number of possible reasons for Reagan's rash of leaks, including "the number of undisciplined ideologues that Reagan brought to Washington" and the president's style of management

Hess said he remains a "card-carrying Republican" sympathetic to the administration, but he parts company over its handling of the issue. "I tend to have a show-me attitude about the national security aspects of leaks," he said. "I could not find any among those I looked at."

cuts will happen after 1985 - thus, 1985 is the only year Mr. Reagan

What should he do? There is only one thing he can do. If he wants to see the real economy - which means the private - property, free enterprise economy - move ahead. he must propose really significant spending cuts. For starters he should be looking for spending cuts in the $100 to $200 billion range. This means farm programs, the so - called entitlement programs including the cost - of - living adjustments in Social Security, civil - service pensions and military pensions - and defense.

Nothing, absolutely nothing, should be off limits.

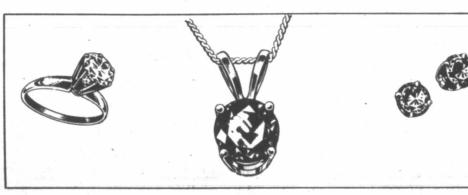

On the tax side Mr. Reagan must move toward a true flat - rate tax system. The public refused to buy the tired old "tax the rich" garbage offered by Mr. Mondale. Mr. Reagan must build from this which, in my judgment, is the real foundation of any mandate he has toward a tax system which helps the private sector get on with the business of creating jobs.

He can do it - but he only has one

U.S. economy rebounding

NEW YORK (AP) — Much of nature is stilled by the onset of winter. But the economy is showing signs of renewal with this year's change of seasons.

After a lackluster third quarter in which growth crawled at an annual rate of 1.6 percent rate, the economy's rate of expansion has rebounded to 2.8 percent in the current quarter, the Commerce Department said this past week.

The fourth-quarter pace remains well below that experienced in the first half of the year. It also is subject to later revision, since the 2.8 percent rate is the department's "flash estimate" based on early, limited data. Still, the upswing was more robust than many economists had expected. And other indicators this past week reinforced the notion that the economy is picking up

Americans' personal income climbed 0.7 percent in November, and their spending rose 0.9 percent, the Commerce Department said.

The agency also said factory orders for durable goods shot up 8.3 percent in November, the first gain since August and the steepest monthly climb since September

More than half the increase was attributed to a rise in orders for military hardware. But even excluding the defense gain, new orders for such items as appliances, automobiles and factory equipment climbed a strong 3.3 percent.

Housing starts fell 0.7 percent in in five months, but permits for new construction shot up 11 percent, the department reported.

Another development this past week, a sharp slide in money market interest rates, bodes well for the economy in early 1985, especially if the decline in rates reflects an easing of credit conditions by the Federal Reserve Board, as some credit analysts

Major U.S. banks, responding to the rate decline, cut their prime lending rates by a half-point to 10.75 percent - the lowest level since August 1983.

There is speculation on Wall Street that the Fed's primary battle - containing inflation - has been successful to the point where the central bank might now concentrate on keeping interest rates down in order to promote economic growth.

Be comfortable with investment

investing by financial consultant and author Bob Upton is a regular Sunday feature in The Pampa

BY BOB UPTON

Last week we talked about setting goals when we invest. In determining our investment goal safety, income or growth, it's vital to consider our own personality and temperament. Are we self assured, comfortable in making our own decisions, or are we prone to be swayed by the opinion of

An individual who owns and operates his own business, regardless of size, is usually more comfortabe in making an investment decision than a housewife whose major activities are confined to the management of her home. (Please ladies, don't fuss at me over this example!) The business person makes investment decisions daily - how much inventory to hold, where and when to issue credit making an investment decision. weighing the risk - reward and applying it to his or her situation is not entirely unfamiliar. He or she is more self - assured in the investment world

On the other hand, there are those who will jump at the first suggestion of another, even though that person may not be as successful as they. Try to explain it? We can't - it's just human nature. Remember the old story of two people looking at a partially filled glass of water - one sees it as half full; the other, half empty? The optimist sees a stock that's dropped some in its market value as just correcting itself for a giant opportunity. The pessimist sees the drop in price as the first step toward a total loss. So, you can see the one who's pessimistic might be uncomfortable with an aggresive growth stock which makes radical moves up and down. Thus, he or she should invest in something less

Also important is how much time one has to devote to investments. Investment situations are constantly changing and the investor must be aware of these changes and be ready and willing to react. If your time is limited and your investments must lay unattended for long periods, perhaps professional management is the answer. In any case, you can see the necessity of considering your own personality before establishing an investment

Rice farmers showing vegetables can also grow in water beds

RICE, Texas (AP) - Off Interstate 45 stands an 180-foot long building housing a new business that uses a still-developing hot house technology where what's in the water is more important than what's in the soil.

Golden Circle Farms of Rice, a small town about 45 miles south of Dallas, uses the science of hydroponics to grow lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes, primarily in liquid-mineral solutions.

The results are large, quick-growing, clean and tasty vegetables which are fast becoming a favorite in local groceries and restaurants.

Farm manager Wayne Burkhalter Jr., a partner with Corsicana entrepreneurs Walter Erwin and Dean Milkes, said that the purity and freshness of the products comes from the control the greenhouse can exercise over the plants' environment.

The greenhouse holds about 9,000 tomato plants, 2,000 cucumber plants and several thousand heads of lettuce in various stages of development.

Golden Circle Farms is one of the largest privately owned hydroponic businesses in the state, Temperature, nutrients, fluids and pests can be tightly controlled through frequent monitoring, Burkhalter said. Furthermore, because fluid rather than soil is the nutritive medium, many plants can be grown in a small space.

'Man for centuries has tried to grow things in water, but for a long time people didn't think it could be done because they didn't realize that nutrients are nutrients whether they are found in the soil or water," he said.

One of the tenets of hydroponics is that "soil is nothing more than an anchorage medium that holds the plant in place and allows it access to the solution," Burkhalter

"Rather than planting in mineral-rich soil and letting rain dissolve the nutrients, we supply the solution already mixed," said.

In a warehouse a few yards from the 20, 90- X 20-foot, linked greenhouses, plant nutrients tirst are dissolved in a large barrel with hot water. Then the fluid is pumped into two, 5,000-gallon tanks.

Fluid from the tanks is fed in timed, regulated doses to each plant through a system of metal and plastic pipes

Diesel-fueled heaters warm the building in winter, and fans cool it in summer

The tomato and cucumber plants grown in modified-hydroponic system in large plastic buckets filled with sand to hold them in place.

Each plant is irrigated a set number of times a day for a set period with a specific concentration of nutritive solution. "The plants also are pollinated with an electric blower three times a week," Burkhalter said. "Those tomatoes are spoiled rotten and it shows. We can get from three to five tomatoes per cluster, and that's excellent. The lettuce are on a separate irrigation system and the setup is more truly hydroponic. The seeds are sprouted in a tiny cubes of biodegradable sponge, then transferred to long plastic pipes drilled with small holes for the plants to poke through as they grow. The nutritive solution flows underneath

By the time the lettuce head is ready for harvest, the foundation is mostly roots, which are kept on the plant as it is sold to keep it fresh.

The plants are European hybrids, although Burkhalter has begun experimenting with the popular American head lettuce, which has yet to be grown successfully in a large-scale hydroponic operation.

The greenhouse's lettuce and cucumbers were ready for marketing about three weeks ago, and Burkhalter estimates the tomatoes will be ready for sale in about three to four weeks.

Dallas wholesalers also have expressed an interest in the produce, he said, and when the greenhouse is up to full production, the business should be able to get a premium price for the vegetables in the city but still keep the price low for Corsicana-area customers.

Erwin was the instigator of the commercial hydroponic project, and said he first read about the technique in a "Wall Street Journal" story about three years ago. Immediately intrigued, Erwin flew out to the California farm profiled in the article and toured the facilities.

Although he later discarded that facility's growing method in favor of other designs, Erwin was sufficiently sold on its potential to become a strong supporter of hydroponic research at Navarro College and donated the land and helped get the grant money for the college's geothermally heated hydroponic greenhouse and shrimp

Erwin later approached Burkhalter, head of the college's agriculture department, to provide the expertise for a commercial greenhouse that he and long-time partner Milkes wanted to build on property they owned in Rice.

After analyzing technical and financial aspects of creating such a large operation, Burkhalter agreed.

Man-made comet to glimmer in sky

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first of 1985-86. man-made comet will glimmer high above Earth early Christmas Day, tracked by an armada of satellites, airplanes and ground observatories as scientists herald 'the year of the comets.

The artificial comet will be created by chemicals to be ejected from a West German satellite 70,160 miles above the Pacific Ocean at 4:18 a.m. PST Tuesday. It should be visible in the southern or southeastern sky from the Midwest to Hawaii and Tahiti, and from southwestern Canada and most of northern Mexico west of a line from Hudson's Bay to near Chicago through Mexico City.

It is part of a $78 million, U.S.-British-West German study of how the solar wind interacts with Earth's magnetic field. The solar wind is the hot, electrically charged gas or 'plasma' that speeds away from the sun at nearly 1 million mph. Its interaction with the Earth's magnetic field creates the Northern Lights.

The choice of Christmas Day for the comet was not meant to elicit comparisons with the Star of Bethlehem, scientists insist. They say it is simply the best day this year for ground and satellite observations, with skies dark thanks to a new moon

Scientists said the study lacks immediate practical application, but could provide insight into how space plasmas collide with dust and gases to help form comets, planets and stars; how plasma might be contained to harness fusion energy; how solar winds disrupt satellite and Earth communications and power lines; and how they influence Earth's weather.

The man-made comet also will help astronomers fine-tune an array of sophisticated instruments for the appearance of Comet Giacobini-Zinner next fall and Halley's Comet during the winter

'It's an exciting and significant event," said Bob Cameron of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Mountain View, Calif. "It's the start of the year of the comets.

The biggest uncertainty is how bright the comet will be. Scientists said it should be visible to the naked eye for up to 10 minutes, to people using 7x50 binoculars for about 20 minutes and to astronomers using telescopes for an hour or more.

'If you expect this to exceed Fourth of July fireworks, you'll be disappointed," said physicist Morris Pongratz of Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Everybody who wants to see it should get well away from any city lights and should by all means take a pair of binoculars," said Gerhard Haerendel, a coordinator of the project and director of the Max Planck Institute for Extraterrestrial Physics in West Germany

At first, the comet will look "like a little star which has green rings and a yellow-red center," Haerendel said. "That will last about a minute. Then it will grow in

After two minutes it will turn purple-gray, he said, and appear the size of one-sixth the diameter of the moon. It will become more grayish as it fades.'

MOSCOW (AP) - Marshal Sergei L. Sokolov, for 52 years a career soldier in the Soviet mold, was appointed Saturday to succeed the late Dmitri F. Ustinov as the Soviet Union's defense minister.

Diplomats said the speedy appointment indicated that the 73-year-old Sokolov, a World War II combat commander and a first deputy defense minister since 1967, had been selected well before Ustinov's death Thursday.

The diplomats, speaking on condition they not be further identified, also said the grooming process during 76-year-old Ustinov's long illness suggested

I most cases, parents worry too much about low to moderate fevers, giving their kids drugs that they do not need. Here are the fever facts: A tempera-ture of 101 degrees Fahrenheit or greater, measured rectally, signals fever in childred aged six months to four years. A child's temperature may be as high as 100.4 degrees during a normal day. An oral reading of 100 degrees signals fever in children over four years old. It is not until a fever reaches 106 degrees that harmful side effects such as brain damage can

Unlike Ustinov, a non-soldier who rose to lead the Soviet military for eight years, Sokolov has been in the army since 1932 and saw front-line action as an armed and mechanized forces commander in World War II.

After the war, like many Soviet military commanders, he went through various military institutes and was gradually promoted.

He became commander of the Leningrad military district in 1965 and was named first deputy defense minister two years later.

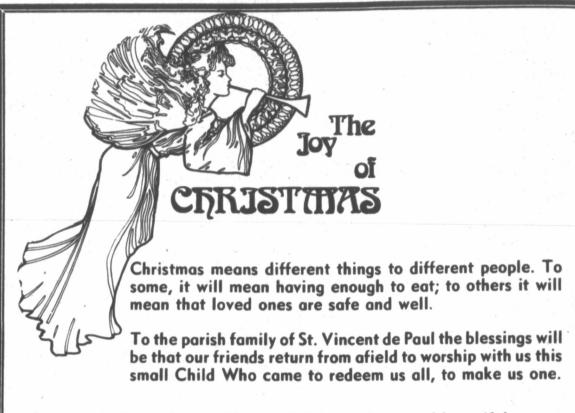

Western diplomats in Moscow said little is known about Sokolov, but predicted that the appointment would do little to shift the balance between military and political leaders in the Soviet hierarchy.

Sokolov has been a member of the Communist Party's Central Committee since 1968, in line with the tradition of keeping the influential military firmly linked to the dominant party.

At 73, Sokolov is about the same age as most of the aging Kremlin leadership - seven of the 11 Politburo members are 70 or older - and is thus expected to keep step with its political decisions. "It's a conservative, predictable choice," one Western diplomat

Texas' congressional delegation members have ambitious goals

a football analogy in a discussion of politics, but Texas is a football kind

You see, the new Texas congressional delegation is like a football team that has won a couple of Super Bowls, but now the old legends have retired. The ranks are being filled with ambitious rookies. There are a lot of substitutions and trades going on. It's in the process of rebuilding.

This year, the delegation has been the subject of a major trade four Democratic seats for four Republican ones.

Texas elected seven new members of Congress this year, not particularly unusual. It is, however, unprecedented that six are Republicans, bringing to 10 the Texas GOP contingent.

"It makes us the third largest state in the country in terms of Republican seats," said senior Texas House Republican Bill Archer of Houston. "And that's quite a new experience, considering that when I came up here (in 1971), there were only three of us."

Only two of the five Democrats who were replaced had any seniority to speak of. New members of Congress have little influence for their first two or three terms, especially members of the minority party.

The House is controlled by 253 Democrats to 182 Republicans.

But, says Archer, his new Republicans, even though freshmen, will be an asset to the state, because the White House will respond more quickly to them that it did to their Democratic predecessors.

Republicans will get a little help from their friends in the administration. But judging from the campaigns waged by Texas' new GOP congressmen, their support of most Reagan administration proposals can be taken for granted. They have no clout on Capitol Hill. And the Reagan administration is not looking at a re-election campaign down the road.

Democrat Charles Wilson of Lufkin maintains, on the flip side. that the loss of Democratic members means a loss of Texas clout with the leadership in the

But the names Tom Vandergriff and Bill Patman probably do not loom large in the mind of House Speaker "Tip" O'Neill. They were first-and second-termers replaced by Republicans this year. But even a freshman Republican from Texas is a well-known figure to Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth, and Wright is expected to become Speaker in 1987.

What about the loss of seniority? Wilson has a barnyard epithet for those who long for the good ol' days when you could reach in a bag and pull out a committee chairman and there would be one chance-in-three that he would be from someplace like Waco

"Since I've been here, the trend's been positive, because most of the senior members that were here when I came here, all the committee chairmen, were very senior and very old," says Wilson, now a senior member of the delegation with 12 years.

'They didn't pay any attention to anything but their committees," he said. "We've got a lot of new blood, and I think that's been very constructive.

The new blood is wasting no

Appropriations. Second-termer Mike Andrews of Houston is poised to get a spot on Ways and Means, to make up for the loss of Democrat Kent Hance on that committee. Albert Bustamante of San Antonio is expected to get a seat on Armed Services, in place of Abraham "Chick" Kazen, an 18-year veteran who lost to Bustamante in the Democratic primary.

Down the roster on committees like Agriculture, Public Works and Energy and Environment, members take care of business, pushing for grants and favorable funding ratios for their districts and their brothers' districts, if they want to get the same in return.

Texas used to regularly keep congressmen in office long enough to put them at the top of those committee lists. At one time, the state could claim Appropriations Chairman George Mahon, Veterans Affairs Committee Chairman Ray Roberts, Science and Technology Committee Chairman Olin "Tiger" Teague and Agriculture Committee Chairman Bob Poague.

Now Texans chair only two major committees - Jack Brooks of Beaumont on Government Operations and Kika de la Garza of Mission on Agriculture. Dallas Congressman Martin Frost is going to run for chairman of the Budget Committee, but he is a long shot

In the Senate, meanwhile, the switch of party control in 1981 turned things upside-down. Lloyd Bentsen, who would have been chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee next year, instead becomes ranking minority member.

The change did give Texas a John Tower as chairman of the Armed Services Committee. But he stayed in that job only four years. Tower is retiring and he is a major loss to the state. His successor, Republican Phil Gramm, is going for a "hail Mary" try at an unprecedented freshman appointment to the Budget Committee, where Gramm's fervor lies. Gramm shows only a perfunctory interest in Armed

In the House, the delegation's seniority and clout will really change little in the 99th Congress.

In 1975, the average Texas congressman had been here for 32 years. Now Brooks is the only one with that many. The average seniority of the delegation dropped to 7.7 years between 1977 and 1979, and that's where it has remained ever since.

But the political face of the delegation may have changed for good.

Texas Republicans are calling the 1984 elections a "turning point" for them. But it was also a turning point in 1961 when John Tower became the state's first Republican senator since Reconstruction.

For the Texas GOP, that was all they got, until 17 years later, when their next "turning point" came -Bill Clements was elected the the state's first Republican governor since Reconstruction. In 1982, he was replaced by a Democrat.

It is conceivable that the Republicans swept in by the Reagan tide in 1984 will be swept right back out again in 1986 when there is no Reagan on the Republican ticket, no liberal Mondale-Ferraro and Lloyd Doggett for Senate on the Democratic side.

No matter. Most, if not all, will win re-election.

more than "half-way competent." Joe Barton, an engineer, takes over the seat vacated by the flamboyant Gramm. Gramm's seat was considered safe, and Barton probably can call it his for as long he wants it. One of the reasons is geography — the district runs from Dallas to Houston, making it a very expensive district in which to challenge a satisfactory incumbent. There are a half-dozen media markets that serve the district, two of them the state's

Mac Sweeney, a young ex-political operative who sneaked up on two-term incumbent Bill Patman with a lot of Republican money, has a similar situation to 14th district includes several media markets.

But Sweeney's district has not been particular loyal of late. After John Young retired with 20 years, his replacement, Joe Wyatt, stayed only one term. Patman, though well-known in the district, having been in the Legislature for 18 years, got only two terms before being turned out.

Tom DeLay, who takes over Republican Ron Paul's 22nd district in suburban Houston, can look forward to a safe seat. The Sugar Land exterminator is smart, funny and has some solid legislative experience behind him.

Larry Combest brings some Capitol Hill knowledge to his new job representing the 19th district. The former aide to Tower succeeds the popular Hance.

Combest is a smart, attractive politician with a knack for organization and a sure seat on the all-important Agriculture Committee. Since Hance spent most of his last term running for the Senate, the district probably will see and hear a little more from its new congressman.

Dick Armey took his 26th district seat away from a man who spent almost $1 million in 1982 to get it popular long-time Arlington Mayor Tom Vandergriff. When the seat supposed to go Republican. Vandergriff, a conservative Democrat, is weighing a race at Armey in 1986

"I would like to have a head-to-head contest with Professor Armey without Reagan on the ticket," Vandergriff said.

It's hard to imagine Armey, a soft-spoken, idealistic and very conservative economics teacher, not feeling overwhelmed by the hard-ball players he is about to meet. He lacks experience and is insisting he will spend much of his time with his family, who are staying back in the district. Armey says he plans to be here about 20

Beau Boulter is a pipe-smoking Amarillo attorney and former county commissioner who bumped Hightower from his 10-year seat.

Hightower admitted the seat never was safely his, and he is not likely to try to get it back. Boulter, like the other freshman Republicans, ran on pocketbook issues.

BEN SUC, Vietnam (AP) — Ben
Suc is back.

Blown up by American troops nearly 18 years ago, chilterated in a way that came to symbolize the devastation of U.S. "search-and-destroy" operations in the Vietnam War, the little town of Ben Suc has now been rebuilt. But not all wounds have healed.

"Many people were killed, all things burned," says Phan Van Chinh, 60, a former town leader. "It made the people hate the American imperialists very

But Chinh quickly added: "We hate only the American imperialists who came here and destroyed and killed our people. We don't hate Americans."

Launched on Jan. 8, 1967, the operation was called "Operation Cedar Falls," and it ushered in a period when "search-and-destroy" became a byword of the U.S. war effort.

Ben Suc, 20 miles northwest of the former South Vietnamese capital of Saigon, was in the heart of an area the U.S. military dubbed the "Iron Triangle," a Viet Cong stronghold of dense jungle, tunnel networks and rubber plantations, wedged between Route 13 and the Saigon River.

Military tacticians decided to destroy Ben Suc in order to deny the Communist guerrillas a supply base and access to villagers who supported them.

supported them.
Chinh recalled the American air strikes that preceded the arrival of U.S. troops.

"Nothing on the surface of the earth was left. Houses were destroyed and trees were uprooted," he told a visiting American reporter.

After the Americans evacuated the town's almost 6,000 residents and their livestock, demolition teams planted 10,000 pounds of explosives in a large hole scooped out near the center of the town. They then detonated it, hoping to destroy any undiscovered tunnels.

The people did not want to leave, Chinh recalled. Field reports of the time spoke of long columns of frightened women and crying children shuffling down the rutted clay roads, carrying their meager belongings of pots and pans, bedding and family keepsakes, their thatched-roof homes burning behind them.

One of them was Tran Thi Tu.

'I was afraid of the bombardment," she recalled. "My husband, father, mother, sister and brother were killed."

Today, 10 years after the Communist victory in Vietnam, the 46-year-old woman is back in the rebuilt Ben Suc, selling chicken, pork and vegetables from a stall in the town marketplace.

Rubber trees have been newly planted, the town is producing rice, and many other former residents have also returned.

Sitting in her new home,
74-year-old Huynh Thi Bai said her husband — a farmer and Viet Cong soldier — was killed in the fields by a bomb. She hid in a shelter.

"I was taken to a refugee camp with houses covered with plastic roofs and hot sand on the floor," she said. "I got a lot of headaches because of the heat."

She showed her visitor her "lucky towel," which she had wet and used to help relieve her headaches. She kept it as a

Town officials like to show off another reminder of the war — a Viet Cong tunnel the Americans missed

Remnants of those days are scattered over the landscape. Oxen pull carts loaded with straw past an abandoned American tank along a dusty dirt road. Nearby, the former headquarters of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division, the "Big Red One," is overgrown with grass, its entrances and guard posts rotting away, its empty shell grazed by cows. The airstrip that once bustled with U.S. Army helicopters lies unused.

In Ben Suc today, villagers pedal bicycles down country lanes. Women walk briskly with baskets of vegetables balanced on bamboo poles across their shoulders. Children sit obediently in open-air schoolhouses.

Although all appears peaceful, the war's end has not meant the end of upheaval in southern Vietnam.

An estimated 400,000 former Saigon government officials, army men and other southerners were incarcerated in strict-regimen "re-education" camps. Many southern peasants resisted forced collectivization of their lands. As many as one million Vietnamese have fled the country, many by boat, since the Communist takenum.

But, despite this impoverished country's continuing troubles, the memories of that January day remain painfully fresh. OPEN MONDAY DECEMBER 24th From 9:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.

'exas artists' holiday songs gathered in album

By BOB DARDEN Waco Tribune-Herald

AUSTIN (AP) - Craig D. Hillis produces records. In the past he's been a manager, promoter, and public relations man.

The past three years his small Austin record label, Felicity, has released a number of albums. Felicity is particularly visible around Christmas when it releases the well-loved "Austin Christmas Collection" albums.

This year sees the Collection issue its third edition, which has become a popular item in record stores throughout the state. In making the Collection album, Hill asks top Austin-area musicians to contribute one Christmas-related

This year, Willie Nelsons sings "Silent Night" and Ernie Sky and the K-Tels perform "All I've Got for Christmas Is the Blues." In years past, Steve Fromholtz "The Christmas Song," Rusty Weir did "Santa Claus is Back in Town," Carolyn Hester did "Happy Birthday, Jesus" and "Is There a Pryor read Santa Claus?

That's in addition to dozens of lesser-known, but no less talented, Texas musicians offering their own unique interpretations of famous and obscure Christmas carols, hymns and pop songs.

"I had the idea years and years and years ago," Hillis said. "It was a logicial progression: Since there are so many bands here and there's such a healthy music scene with so many clubs and so much original music, I though there'd be enough to do an Austin Christmas album Probably a lot of other people had that same thought earlier. We just had the wherewithal to do it.

"The first one was in 1981. In 1982. we re-released the first one because we were still paying for it. The second one didn't come until 1983, and this year's is the third one. Although I think all of them are good, I think this year's is the best because of better production and mastering techniques and skills on our part.

'The Austin Christmas Collection First Edition" sold 4,500 units in Austin alone, which makes it the best-selling regional album in Austin history Hillis says he has a simple way of working out the contracts with so many diverse artists. "The majority of the artists are either unrecorded or on their own labels," he said. "They are no problem. A lot are between labels these days since labels aren't signing people like they used to. That's no problem. A few, like Willie, pretty much write their own "But for the others, if I have to deal with some accountant out in Beverly Hills, I simply won't fool with them. If we can't work it out, I just don't mess with it. That's the beauty of living in Austin. We're certainly not short on artists or music down here.'

As producer, Hillis tries to match artist with material. Sometimes the group will suggest a tune, sometimes Hillis does the suggesting. He also tries to avoid duplicating from previous LPs.

Well, we do have two versions of Elvis' 'Santa Claus is Back in Town,' but they are totally different," he said. "I know all of their styles, so I suggested to Extreme Heat, for example 'I'll Be Home for Christmas.' 14K, on the other hand, came up with their own version of 'Ring Christmas Bells (Ukrainian carol).' I said, 'That's great, we won't change a thing' and went in and recorded it.

Hillis' one criterion is that the artist either lives in Austin, is from Austin originally, or has influenced the Austin music scene. Folk singer Carolyn Hester was a natural because she's from Austin and lives there now. Englishman Arthur Brown - best known for 1969's monster hit 'Fire' - now lives in Austin.

Virtually every song has somethign to recommend it, but a few stand out, including Beto y los Fairlanes' "We Three Kings" on the first edition, Tomas Ramirez's "Silent Night" from the second, and Brown's "The Lord of the Dance." from the third.

"Those three are classics," Hillis said. "Beto is definitely a brilliant arranger. Some day I'd like to take a vacation and crawl around in his mind and see where all of this stuff comes from. The arrangement of 'We Three Kings' is unique, so progressive, my words can't touch it. You have to hear it to believe it.

'Tomas' 'Silent Night' is another. Believe it or not, when I asked Tomas if he had something he could wrap that big saxophone for Christmas, he said his uncle taught him a nice arrangement for 'Silent Night' a long time ago. I don't know who his uncle is, but he must be a heck of a sax player.

"Arthur's 'Lord of the Dance' is entirely his own, something he put together in the attic of his mind. hen I approached him about doing a song for the 'Third Edition' he went right away and cut this one in his studio. It's just a reel, an old English ballad of some sort. But when he was through, it was something entirely different. We remixed it here, but there was so much neat stuff going on, deciding what to mix up or down was like bobbing for apples. The three album covers have the same basic design on the front, except that each year has a background of a different color. Austin artist Dick Reeves did the original artwork.

Although he's proud of the success of the "Austin Christmas Collection," Hillis is quick to point out that's not all Felicity does.

"We haven't released too many albums: we're not trying to be the next CBS. We just want to release good music for people who care about it. We've done the reunion of Frummox, an Austin 'all-stars' album with various artists and we've just released a single by Steve Fromholtz and Willie Nelson titled 'Hondo's Song.' It's a song Hondo Crouch that Steve wrote years ago. We've also got a Steve Fromholtz live album.

"Still, I don't have any plans to quit making these Christmas albums, but I think after the fifth year we'll stop and take a look back on what we've done. It might be a good point to re-release all five LPs in one, low-cost package. Then the next year or so, I'd like to do a 'best of' collection, as well.

"I have a lot of goals for the Christmas albums yet. I still want Michael Murphy - who I used to manage — to cut us a song. We've contacted Delbert McClinton, Grimalkin, Joe Ely, Bert Rivera and some others. I'd like to reform both Uncle Walt's Band and Kiwi for songs. But there's lots of time

Students from numerous countries share residence

By JENNIFER JUERGENS AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) Manhattan's Upper West Side can be a tough place. Tough to walk through, tough to live in, and tougher still for foreigners trying to get an education.

But perched atop one of Manhattan's highest points overlooking the Hudson River and Grant's Tomb, there's a place that atmosphere where students from all over the world can learn about life in the United States.

It's called International House. I. House, as it is generally referred to, is a dorm-style residence where on any given floor there may be students from as many as 15 to 20 countries. A third of its residents are American. Students pay about $300 a month for small rooms and married couples pay about $500 for apartments. Curtis Ingraham, who has lived there for the past two years, says the residents' rooms were made small and the meeting rooms large purposely so the students would come out and mingle.

The 530 students who live here are in New York City to further their education in graduate schools at Columbia and New York universities, City University of New York, Parsons School of Design, Juilliard and Manhattan schools of music.

More than 2,000 students apply annually to the non-profit house, supported by individuals, foundations and corporations. International House's yearly budget runs to about $4 million. I. House is more than just a place to eat, sleep and study. It is a place where foreign students live with Americans to learn more about life in the United States, says Nancy Cooper, director of development and alumni affairs. "Many warm friendships - and marriages have been made," she says.

Svava Bernharsdottir, 24, a viola player, is from Iceland and has two more years at Juilliard. She says New York is a wonderful place to study. "I've gone to concerts I never would have dreamed of going to. You have the whole world in a nutshell. I've talked to people from Africa to Salvador. I've become a well-rounded person.

Spiros Branis came from Greece to get his master's degree in physics at the New York City University Graduate Center. His tuition and living expenses are being paid by the city of New York. In return, he teaches physics to nursing students at City Gollege. He also earns minimum wage at the house as an equipment .

International House was the dream of Harry Edmonds, acformer secretary of the YMCA, who died in 1979 at the age of 96. Edmonds had begun playing host to small gatherings of foreign students in 1909. He got the idea after a Chinese student thanked him for being the first person to speak to him since his arrival in New York three weeks before.

By word of mouth, the gatherings grew and Edmonds had to find other meeting places. In 1920, he enlisted the help of John D. Rockefeller Jr., who gave almost $3 million for the Upper West Side site and the building itself.

Mrs. Rockefeller designed and urnished the house, a building with meeting rooms with high ceilings and panelled walls.

In 1924, International House in New York City was opened, and in 1930 the Berkeley, Calif., House was opened, followed by the Chicago House and the Paris House. More than 60 International Houses and Centers now operate worldwide.

American students may stay in the house here one year and foreign students are allowed two. Those who are awarded fellowships may stay an extra year.

Eighteen resident fellows are on hand from 9 p.m. to midnight every night to help students. They are also responsible for arranging the many, varied programs that go on in the house.

There's the "Night of Nations" festival in the spring when visitors sample everything from Belgian waffles to tacos while listening to calypso, bluegrass and jazz music at booths set up by the residents.

In addition to a literary magazine, photography club, and a 60-piece orchestra, activities include serving the community. The Harlem Tutorial program enlists the aid of residents to tutor 4th-and 6th-graders from New York's Public School 125.

There's also a ham radio club that enables students to call their families and friends around the world, and a pub that has more varieties of beer than most bars in Manhattan. And there are occasional weekend trips.

Herman Rottenberg, president of the Performing Arts Foundation, affiliated with International House, participated in one excursion. When the students got on the bus they looked straight ahead, almost afraid to speak to anyone," he recalled. "These 50 people are now pals. It was a microcosm over one weekend of what we hope will happen over one year.

Discount drop may not lower interest much

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Reserve Board has once again lowered a key lending rate but analysts doubt that any subsequent drops in interest rates will be as great as those triggered a month aro.

The board announced late Friday that it was cutting its discount rate - the rate banks are charged when they borrow from the Federal Reserve - to 8 percent, the lowest level in six years. It marked the second time in a month that the Fed has cut the discount rate. It stood at 9 percent Nov.

21 when the central bank announced the first one-half percentage point decline. Economists said the move underscored how aggressive the Federal Reserve intends to be in ensuring that the sharp downturn in economic activity since July does not turn into a recession. The central bank plays a major role in influencing interest rates through its control of the money supply. The Fed tries to supply enough money to the banking system to keep the economy growing but not too much to cause a fresh surge in inflation. Critics last spring charged that the Fed was choking off the recovery by keeping interest rates

But since August, various interest rates have declined about 3 percentage points. The economy, which had slumped to a growth rate of 1.6 percent in the third quarter, is growing at a slightly more robust 2.8 percent in the final quarter of the year.

While analysts gave much of the credit for the upturn to the Fed's decision to loosen, few were predicting that Friday's discount rate decline would provide as much of a spur to further interest rate

"This discount rate cut really ratifies the rate reductions that have already occurred and will tend to ensure that rates stay down," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman-American

Sinai and other economists predicted that there are likely to be small drops in interest rates, including mortgage rates, in coming weeks, but not the sharp declines seen since Labor Day.

The prime rate, the base lending rate banks use in figuring business loans, had stood at 13 percent in September. It is now down to 10.75 percent, with the latest cut coming this week. Michael Evans, head of Evans Economics, a private Washington forecasting firm, predicted the prime could fall to 10 percent. David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., another forecasting firm, predicted that interest rates would continue failing slightly until late spring. He said to help matters along the Federal Reserve would probably make one more reduction in the discount rate by early February.

The discount rate has not been at 8 percent since October 1978. In the intervening six years, the central bank raised the discount rate to a high of 14 percent in the spring of 1981 as it struggled to bring inflation under control.

Inflation was tamed, but the economy went through the steepest recession since the Great

The Fed's latest move came only a week after Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, in the sharpest administration criticism in some time, complained that the Fed was still not doing enough to ease credit conditions and was hurting Christmas

Reagan tries to sell Thatcher on system

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) -President Reagan conferred with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher at his secluded mountaintop retreat Saturday, hoping to dispel doubts about his space weapons missile defense system and trying to forge a unified stance among Western leaders on nuclear arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

But even as they met, a source close to Mrs. Thatcher praised current nuclear strategy as brilliantly successful warned that "what she is concerned about is to avoid an arms race in space.

Following several hours of talks with the president, Mrs. Thatcher was to fly back to London, barely 18 hours after her arrival in the United States

Mrs. Thatcher was expected to give Reagan a first-hand report on her talks with Soviet official Mikhail Gorbachev, the No. 2 person in the Kremlin.

Reagan, on the eve of Mrs. Thatcher's visit, expressed confidence he could calm concerns of the prime minister and other European leaders about space weapons technology, a $26 billion research program aimed at protecting the United States against incoming missiles.

"Well, I'll get them to understand what it is ...," Reagan said. "Today, the only defensive weapon we have is to threaten that if they (the Soviet Union) kill millions of our people, we'll kill millions of theirs. I don't think there's any morality in that at all.'

Panhandle loses out 2A title contest

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) -Groveton running back Michin Horace led his team to a 38-7 victory over Panhandle in the Class 2A finals Saturday. It was Panhandle's first appearance in a state championship game.

The Panthers never found a way to stop Horace, who scored on runs of 3, 5, 81, and 12 yards from scrimmage and added a fifth touchdown on a 79-yard interception return. Horace finished the night with 269 yards on 33 carries for a career total of 7,675 yards — better than the Class 2A record of 7.652 set by the late David Overstreet of Big Sandy in 1973-76.

Groveton wrapped up its season with a 13-3 record while Panhandle finished at 11-3-2.

Groveton built a 17-7 halftime lead, then broke the game by scoring on its first three possessions in the second half.

Horace had a 3-yard scoring run late in the first period and his long interception return early in the second quarter gave the Indians a 14-0 lead

Mecom wants to sell Saints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The Pritzker family of Chicago has offered to buy the National Football League's' New Orleans Saints from owner John Mecom Jr., but a spokesman for the family won't say how much was offered.

Denzil Skinner, the Pritzkers' representative in the purchase negotiations, said he doubted if any deal could be completed for at least a month.

'You don't do this kind of transaction overnight," he said. "A lot of things have to take place. We just now got a handle on their assets. Everything is on track. Mecom has said he'll take no less than $75 million for the 18-year-old NFL franchise. Negotiations between representatives of the Pritzkers and The Mecom Co. have been under way for weeks.

Skinner is president of the Pritzker-owned Facility Management Group, which runs the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans for the state of Louisiana.

The Pritzker interests also include the international chain of 150 Hyatt hotels, including one adjacent to the Superdome.

The Saints, who play home games in the Superdome, closed their 1984 season with a 7-9 record. Skinner said it is too early at this point in negotiations to talk about purchase figures because there are too many financial details still to be worked out. "So you could play around with numbers that have a variation of many millions," he said.

Harvesters win loop opener

Pampa News Sports Editor This may not be the same 25-6 Pampa team and unbeaten district champions of a season ago, but the 1984-85 Harvesters are going in the right direction.

The Harvesters captured their fifth game in a row, including the District 1-4A opener against Levelland, 65-54, Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa sped to a 12-0 lead in the opening minutes, but saw that lead dwindle to one when the Lobos scored the next 11 points. However, Pampa regained that 12-point advantage in the third quarter and more, as the Harvesters built a 15-point lead, 46-31, after three

Davis pulled down a half-dozen rebounds while Young and Gaines had five each.

"We were pretty pleased with the way the kids played," said Pampa assistant coach Frank McCullough. "We had that one cold spell in the first half, but by the middle of the third quarter there was no doubt as to the outcome of the game.'

The Harvesters had one of their better shooting nights, hitting 25 of 36 attempts from the floor for 69.4 percent. The Harvesters missed only four shots from the floor the second half and led by as many 21 points in the fourth quarter. The visitors hit 23 of 53 tries for 43.4

Seahawks win, 13-7

SEATTLE (AP) — Dave Krieg teamed with Daryl Turner for a 26-yard touchdown strike and Norm Johnson had two field goals Saturday to give the Seattle Seahawks a 13-7 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders that knocked the defending Super Bowl champions out of the National Football League playoff derby.

The win in the AFC wild-card game moved the Seahawks on to Miami for a playoff game with the AFC East champion Dolphins next Saturday, a rematch of a game in which the Seahawks upset the Dolphins last year.

While their lone touchdown came through the air, it was virtually an all-running show for the conservative Seahawks, who had passed 88 times in lopsided regular season-ending losses in Kansas City and at home against Denver.

But this time, Krieg attempted just 10 passes as the brunt of the attack fell on Dan Doornink, who carried the ball 27 times for 123 yards. And the Seahawks' defense, which surrendered 34 and 31 points to Kansas City and Denver, returned to the form that it showed in turning in three shutouts this

Jim Plunkett, the Raiders' 14-year NFL veteran quarterback, made his first start since the sixth game of the Los Angeles regular season but couldn't get anything going until he drilled a 46-yard touchdown pass to Marcus Allen with 5:05 to go in the game. The deepest previous Raiders' penetration was to the Seahawks' 41-yard line in the second quarter.

The Raiders got the ball back on their own six-vard-line with 45 seconds left, but Kenny Easley intercepted a desperation heave by Plunkett to clinch the game.

The Seahawks, who finished behind Denver and one spot ahead of the Raiders in the AFC West, led 7-0 at halftime on a 93-yard. nine-play touchdown drive. It was second-quarter 26-yard slant-in to the Seahawks.

pass to Turner, who beat the Raiders' Lester Hayes and Odis

McKinney. The march started on the Seattle 7-yard line after the Raiders' Ray Guy strategically booted a 36-yard punt out of bounds. It was kept alive by a 23-yard pass interference penalty against Hayes while defending the Seahawks' Steve Largent.

David Hughes had a 12-yard run and caught a 10-yard pass from Krieg while Doornink had a 10-yard run in the drive.

The touchdown came with 4:19 left in the half and the Seahawks almost scored again after getting the ball back on the Los Angeles 46 two minutes later. But 14-year NFL veteran defensive end Lyle Alzado powered over Doornink's block to sack Krieg, who was back to pass, for an 11-yard loss on a third-and-four situation from the Raiders 40

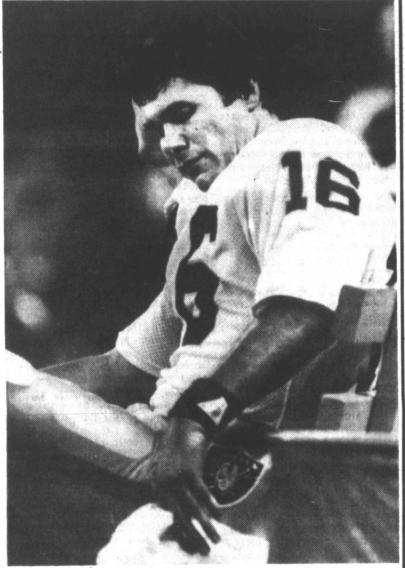

The Seahawks, who lived on takeaways in recording a 12-4 regular-season record, finally got a Los Angeles turnover 10:58 into the second half. They converted it into their first field goal.

Plunkett completed a short pass to Frank Hawkins but the Seahawks' Bruce Scholtz stripped the ball from Hawkins and Keith Simpson recovered it on the Raiders' 38

The Seahawks went 21 yards in seven plays to the Los Angeles 17 and Johnson kicked a 35-yard field goal with 1:29 left in the third quarter. He kicked his second, a 44-varder, to make it 13-0 with 10:50 remaining in the game when after the Seahawks went 23 yards in five

In addition to his 123-yard rushing performance, Doornink caught four passes for 81 yards.

The Raiders went 78 yards in six plays for their lone score. They scored just one touchdown against AFC Central winner Pittsburgh in Los Angeles last Sunday in losing climaxed by Krieg's pinpoint the home-field playoff advantage

Owls win Optimist tourney

The Owls, led by Niki Ryan and Lisa Ray, topped the Bears, 28-19, Friday to win the Optimist Club City Girls' Basketball Tournament championship.

The Bears got the chance to play the Owls by overcoming a third-quarter deficit of eight points, trailing the Red Raiders, 15-7, Thursday night. The Bears won the game in overtime, 21-17, mainly due to the clutch play of Rocky Striplin.

The Owls were unbeaten in the tournament and had drawn a bye to the final round. They also won the regular season championship with a 9-1 record, losing only to the Bears, 21-13, earlier in the season.

At the conclusion of the tournament, an all-tournament team was announced.

Making the team were Stephanie Moore and Sheila Reed of the Raiders. Jennifer Bailey and Rocky Striplin of the Bears, Niki Ryan and Lisa Ray of the Owls. Striplin was named the tournament' most valuable player. She was cited for her floor play and team leadership.

END AROUND— Maryland wide receiver Greg Hill (4) is brought down by Tennessee defensive back Andre Creamer after a short gain on an end around play in Sun Bowl action Saturday.

Maryland wins Sun Bowl

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Junior fullback Rick Badanjek ran around right end with 2:28 remaining in the game to score his second touchdown of the day and climaxed No. 12 Maryland's comeback from a 21-0 halftime deficit to give the Terrapins a 28-27 victory over Tennessee in Saturday's 51st annual Sun Bowl.

On Nov. 10, the Terps had set an NCAA Division I-A record by coming back from a 31-0 deficit to beat Miami (Fla.) 42-40.

Badanjek had 20 carries for 90 yards and was named the Most Valuable Player in the game, which was played before a record-setting Sun Bowl crowd of 50,126.

On third-and-one, Badanjek took a hand-off from Maryland quarterback Frank Reich and easily scampered into the end zone for the Terp win.

The victory, which Maryland is hoping will boost it into the Top 10, improved the Terps' season record to 9-3.

Tennessee, which fell to 7-4-1, threatened to score within the final minutes of the game, but a fumble by quarterback Tony Robinson halted the Vols' hopes.

Maryland held Tennessee's all-time leading rusher, Johnnie Jones, to 69 yards on the ground.

The game was a rematch of last year's Citrus Bowl, which Tennessee won, 30-23. The Volunteers plowed through Maryland's defense for the first two quarters, while their own defense held the Terrapins to 55 offensive yards.

But the Terps rallied in the third period, scoring 22 points and allowing Tennessee to possess the ball for only 2 minutes and 42 seconds. After Maryland took a 22-21 lead, Vol sophomore running back Pete Panuska grabbed a Terp kickoff in the end zone and raced 100 yards for a touchdown, which put Tennessee up 27-22.

And until Badanjek's winning score, it appeared the Vols were headed for a win.

Giants eye revenge against Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Eric Dickerson had a so-so game, relatively speaking, the last time the Los Angeles Rams faced the New York Giants, gaining 120 yards.

But the second-year pro from Southern Methodist, who went on to set a National Football League single-season rushing record with 2.105 yards, was called upon to carry just 20 times as the Rams' defense keyed a 33-12 romp.

The two teams meet again Sunday at Anaheim Stadium in the National Football Conference wild-card game, with kickoff scheduled at 12:30 p.m. PST.

Although Dickerson didn't kill the Giants last time, New York Coach Bill Parcells said his team will have their hands full with the running back and the rest of the Rams.

"They have a great running game and a lot of firepower on the outside," said Parcells, whose team brings a 9-7 record into the game against the Rams, 10-6.

Los Angeles Coach John Robinson said the Rams will play their usual game, based on Dickerson's running with an occasional pass by quarterback Jeff Kemp.

"The most important thing in games like this is not to lose them by making mistakes, not give the game to the other team," Robinson said. "We just hope to do what we do efficiently."

Robinson said the Sept. 30 regular-season meeting with the Giants, in which the Rams logged an NFL record three safeties and held New York to eight yards rushing, means nothing now.

"That was a long time ago," he said. "It feels like six years ago.

"The Giants over the course of the season have beaten some of the elite teams (Dallas, Washington, St. Louis) ... Their defense has improved, and (quarterback Phil) Simms has thrown the ball well."

The Giants' playoff appearance will be only their third in the last two decades.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Joe Avezzano, head coach at Oregon State for the past five years, has been named offensive line coach at Texas A&M University, Aggie head coach Jackie Sherrill announced Saturday.

Avezzano, who worked with Sherrill at Iowa State from 1970 to 1973 and at Pittsburgh from 1973 to 1977, left Oregon State after university officials decided not to renew his contract.

"I'm just pleased that I've got the opportunity to join such a good football program and to contribute to the success at Texas A&M," Avezzano said in a prepared statement released Saturday. "It's also a pleasure to be around a

Citrus Bowl ends in deadlock

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - With its high-powered offense shackled, 15th-ranked Florida State used a 49-yard blocked punt return by Joe Wessel with 3:58 to play and a 2-point conversion to gain a 17-17 tie with Georgia in the 39th Florida Citrus Bowl football game Saturday

Georgia, which once led 14-0, was attempting to run out the clock in the waning minutes when Lenny Chavers blocked Chip Andrews' punt, smacking it toward the the goal where Wessel scooped it up on the 13. Darrin Holloman then scored the 2-point conversion on a reverse to gain the tie.

Georgia's Kevin Butler was just short on a 70-yard field goal

NEW YORK (AP) - Walter Berry had a career-high 23 points as 8th-ranked St. John's rebounded from its only loss of the season to outclass UCLA 88-69 Saturday in college basketball.

Four other Redmen hit double figures as St. John's ran its record to 6-1 in its first game since being upset at Niagara a week ago. The Bruins fell to 2-5.

St. John's broke the game open early, as Willie Glass' seven points led a a 15-3 spree early in the first half that produced a 24-13 lead that was never in danger.

Berry, a 6-8 sophomore from New York who played at San Jacinto (Tex.) Junior College last season, scored 14 of his points in the first half as St. John's took a lead of 48-35 at intermission. His previous high for a single game was 18 in the season-opener against UCLA came to within 52-41 early in the second half. But the Redmen, with 7-foot Bill Wennington scoring six points, then outscored the Bruins 16-6 to take a 68-47 lead.

Chris Mullin, the 6-6 member of the U.S. gold-medal winning Olympic team, had 16 points for St. John's. Wennington had 14, Glass 11 and Mike Moses 10. Nigel Miguel, Kelvin Butler and Maloncon each scored 10 points to lead UCLA.

Reggie Miller, the 6-7 forward who had started the Bruins' previous six games, was benched for the first half for what a spokesman said were disciplinary reasons. He played sparingly in the second half and did not score.

Odessa Permian, Beaumont French tie for 5A football championship

He was proudest of Bosco, latest

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Beaumont French linebacker Charles Goodman picked off an Odessa Permian pass with 31 seconds left to preserve a 21-21 tie Saturday afternoon and a co-championship in Class 5A, the first time two schools have shared the title at the top level of Texas high school football in 39 years.

Playing before 13,108 at Texas Stadium. Permian had come back from a 21-7 deficit to tie the game in the second half. The Panthers had driven from their own 35 to the French 35 when quarterback Alton Holloway threw a short pass over the right side into the arms of Goodman, who fell down at his own

All but one touchdown came in the first half as French, after falling behind 7-0, scored three times to lead 21-7 late in the second quarter. Permian scored on a 1-yard run by fullback Dal Watson, who finished with 124 yards on 25 carries, to make it 21-14 with 33 seconds left in the first half. Watson scored the game's final touchdown midway through the third quarter on another 1-yard run and Woody Bryant's third PAT tied the game at 21-21 with 4:28 to play in the quarter.

A go-ahead touchdown by Permian was nullified three plays later when Danny Servance picked off a French pass and ran it 38 yards for an apparent touchdown. An illegal block by Permian after the interception brought the ball back to the French 46 and six plays later the Panthers were intercepted.

A Permian penalty in the fourth quarter caused another touchdown to be called back when a 10-yard run into the end zone by Rich Fletcher was wiped out by an illegal procedure penalty. Robert Kiel intercepted another Holloway pass at the 6-yard line to end the threat and maintain the tie score.

The last time two teams tied for the state championship in Texas' top high school classification was 1945, when Highland Park and Waco High shared the title.

Permian, which spent most of the season atop the 5A rankings, scored two minutes into the game when Greg Anderson returned a French punt 82 yards for a touchdown. The junior end also caught a school record 11 passes for 133 yards.

The Buffaloes made it 7-7 just 21 seconds later when Paul Jones carried the ball over from the 11.

French scored again late in the first quarter after taking possession of a partially blocked punt at the Permian 36. On the first play, French quarterback Mark Guilbeaux lofted a deep pass to Willie Williams, who caught it at the 3 and went in for the score.

In the second quarter, Beaumont took over at the Permian 33 on a fumble recovery by Thad Nobles. Guilbeaux hit split end Keith Wycoff for the score and Paul Jones hit his third PAT to make it 21-7 with 3:39 left in the half.

The Panthers took the kickoff and mounted a 13-play drive that covered 80 yards. Watson carried it over for the score to bring Permian within 21-14 at intermission

WACO, Texas (AP) — Denison quarterback Erick Harper passed for a touchdown and a two-point conversion and kicked two field goals to carry the Yellowjackets to their first Class 4A State Football Championship in 68 years with a 27-13 victory over the Tomball Cougars Saturday.

The Yellowjackets, who started playing in 1916 but had never reached the finals, finished with a 16-0 record and the Cougars bowed out with a 14-1 ledger.

Denison built a 16-6 halftime lead before 12,569 fans at Baylor Stadium, but had to beat back a spirited fourth-quarter rally by Tomball

Tomball quarterback Lance Pavlas completed a 33-yard touchdown pass to Bubba Greely in the second period and flipped a six-yard pass to him in the fourth period to cut the lead to 16-13.

Police surveillance legality questioned

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union say they will investigate the legality of police surveillance of protesters outside the South African consulate on Dec. 7.

Bruce Griffiths, staff counsel for the ACLU, said his office has received telephone calls from protesters who complained that police intimidated them by videotaping them outside the consulate. "People are upset with the idea that the police were down there taking pictures when what they (protesters) were doing was perfectly legal," Griffiths said.

The surveillance was suggested by officials with the Harris County District Attorney's office, said Capt. Sam Nuccia, who heads the Houston Police Department Criminal Intelligence Division.

Handicapped man finds magic at tip of wand

By CAROL MOUCHE

Brenham Banner-Press
BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — With his wand attached to his head,
Brenham State School client Leo
Cook is learning that he can perform magic when given a

The 41-year-old mentally retarded man has already shown the public his receptive language capabilities. For the third year in a row, Cook is marketing brightly colored Christmas cards he painted through the use of his head

The wand, or pointing device, is connected to a brace which slips over the man's forehead.

Cook is confined to a wheelchair because he has no use of his arms or legs. He cannot communicate verbally, except for uttering a gutteral "yes" or "no" in response to questions asked him.

In the past few weeks, however, a male voice which identified itself as Leo Cook has been heard more than once in the halls of the speech department at the state school.

"Hello," the staccato voice began. "My name is Leo Cook. It is very nice to meet you."

As usual, Cook was seated in his wheelchair with a long pointing stick attached to his head. But the welcoming remarks were not coming from his mouth — they were being emitted by a computerized machine.

Cook was in command. Patiently and determinedly he directed his head wand toward the machine, pushing on the smooth surface where a large keyboard of touch sensitive buttons was displayed.

"The machine I am using is called a 'Phonic Ear,'" Cook said via the computer. 'It gives me a voice for the first time.
"I am working very hard to learn to use it. Many people are working to help me find a way to buy a machine liek this.

"I want to be able to talk to people every day."

Cook smiled. He had hurdled one more communication barrier without ever leaving his seat.

Much of the credit goes to Cindy Walsh, speech pathologist at the state school, who was able to procure the programmable, computerized voice synthesizer from its manufacturer for a two-week trial.

"The Phonic Ear company will let people have a machine two or three weeks for diagnostic testing, to determine the potential of an individual to use it," Ms. Walsh said. "I got on the waiting list for this five months ago."

Ms. Walsh is one of five staff members of the school's speech department, which focuses its efforts on intensive, individualized therapy to increase communication skills in clients.

The Phonic Ear is a first in Ms. Walsh's therapy program. She said she felt Cook would benefit from its higher-level capabilities.

"In the past couple of years, Leo has mastered a lot of things, especially when he started learning how to paint," said Ms. Walsh.

"Up until then, there was nothing he could hook up to in vocational rehabilitation because his physical limitations overshadowed everything else.

"He's one person that technology had to catch up with."

The Phonic Ear Vois-130 has been on the market for four years, said Ms. Walsh. It was developed for cerebral palsy victims of normal intelligence and for people who have lost the use of their voice.

The machine "has four levels of pre-programmed words that can be used to form sentences," said Ms. Walsh. "One level is programmable so each square can form a sentence.

"It is programmed on a phonemic basis — you program each sound and its duration to make words.

"Leo is a client who is very appropriate for it, because he already uses a head wand to point to symbols and words on a slanted board to communicate his basic needs."

But a board does not talk. The Phonic Ear does.

"I see him being able to use the synthesizer in the work place, where he lives, in the classroom," said Ms. Walsh. "It may open up the academic things he could work on.

"Before it was difficult to get an accurate response back from Leo."
Conversation would have to be initiated by another person, who could elicit an answer through process of elimination after pointing to many pictures on his board.

But after the trial two weeks with the synthesizer, Ms. Walsh said, "I was able to ask Leo — 'If you are cold and want a sweater, what would you do?' And he would look at an overlay I put on the keys, scan the board for a sweater, press it, and say, 'I need a sweater.'

"When he was questioned, he could answer with the machine."
Listening to the machine's voice,

Listening to the machine's voice, she said, automatically tells Cook if his answer is right or wrong.

If the portable machine is purchased, said Ms. Walsh, she hopes that Cook can keep it on a lap board attached to his wheelchair.

"A lot of his expansion hinges on him being able to converse with people and feel like he is actively communicating" she said communicating," she said.

"What good is it if you have a million people walking around you, but you can't get their attention?"

"I'm not being unrealistic," said Ms. Walsh. "It would take a while for Leo to use the board functionally. But he's able to understand most basic conversation. And I feel he should be given the chance to say some things himself."

Ms. Walsh programmed several sentences for Cook to use while he had the machine for the two weeks.

"I will keep you informed of my progress," the man said via synthesizer's male voice. "Many of your readers have probably seen the Christmas cards I paint. I hope they bring many people happiness this Christmas."

Cook listened intently to the machine as it "spoke," then smiled on the last sentence, his expressions showing he understood the meaning of his programmed words.

Ms. Walsh said she is hoping that money can be raised to buy the Phonic Ear machine for Cook. Because demand for the synthesizer is so low, it is priced at a high $3,200.

UNFULFILLED INTENTIONS

One of the most frequently used excuses for disobedience by both saint and sinner, is, "I know I should and I intend to, someday, but...." To be able to choose the most convenient of days or times to serve God faithfully certainly would fit in with the ease and luxury to which we are accustomed in luxury to which we are accustomed in this day and time. It seems that many are reluctant to put forth any great amount of effort to serve God. Jesus taught that following Him was a daily responsibility (Luke 9:23.) Whether it is easy or difficult, whether it is convenient or inconveninet is not considered. Whatever is required, under any and all circumstances, one is to faithfully follow Christ.

It seems that the frequenst excuse of intending to someday, is in order to do other things which are of more interest to the individual. Studying God's word, worshipping Him in spirit and in truth, living unspotted from the world are all responsibilities which require time and effort. These things do not accidentally happen. They happen because of a desire to make them happen.

In the parable of the ten virgins (Matthew 25), we see, in contrast, those who made some preparation and those who made additional preparation in order to be absolutely sure they made it in to the marriage feast with the bridegroom. It is obvious that the five wise virgins had given thought to the occasion, planned things accordingly, and then put forth the effort necessary in order to be ready when the bridegroom came.

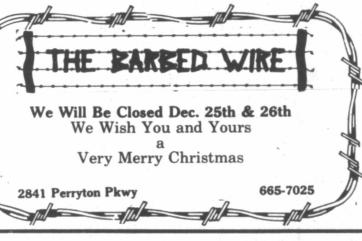

If a person truly believes the word of God, then he will realize spiritual perfection in adequate preparation. Certainly one has to have the intent in order to realize any completion of service, but intentions, alone, will not attain it.

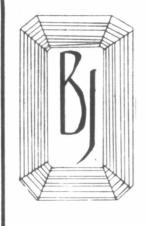

The apostle exhorted the Ephesians to "redeem the time" which means to "buy up the opportunity" (Ephesians 5:16.) Time is running out for all of us. When our sojourn on this earth is over, then we must give an account of ourselves (2 Corinthina 5:10; Romans 14:10-12.) Whatever may have been our intentions, it means nothing unless those intentions are fulfilled.

They're all memories. Memories of Christmas past, some as early as the turn of the century, a time, a way of living, a type of people, all kept alive in the minds of four members of Pampa's sometimes unnoticed treasure — the elderly.

Helen Dixon's earliest Christmas memory centers on a sugar cookie in the shape of a horse. She was four years old at the time—about 1901, she recalled. "We had something goin' on at church and at the end of the program they gave each of us a cookie. Mine was in

"It was the most wonderful thing, you just couldn't imagine," Mrs. Dixon remembered. "I took it home and everybody told me to eat it. But I didn't want to. I wanted to keep it. My mom finally told me it was okay to eat it, so I bit off one leg and I cried and cried."

Years later when Mrs. Dixon had children of her own, she made sure they had lots and lots of animal cookies.

Jimmy Hannon, 91, remembers best the Christmas of 1925, the year he bought his first car — a black Model T Ford Roadster.

"I'd made a good crop that year — cotton and corn. Got a good price for both of them," Hannon remembered. He sold his cotton for 25 cents a pound. He had to wait until December to buy the car, so he could be sure he had enough money, he said. He bought the Model T for $407.50 — he'll never forget the amount. "I paid cash for that," he added, proudly.

Of course when Christmas rolled around Hannon and his family had to try out the new car, so they motored to Waller, Okla., to visit relatives. The weather was bitterly cold, he remembered. The morning they were to start home, it was so cold that the car wouldn't start with the crank, so Hannon had to jack up a back wheel and turn that until the engine started.

hat until the engine started. The old Model T had no windows, just curtains that fastened around the sides and a bit of plastic in front of the driver. The Hannons nearly froze driving back. "We'd stop at every little town to warm our feet," Hannon remembered. Then when they were almost to the house, the car got stuck.

"I was pretty stout back then," Hannon explained. So he just lifted up the back end of the car and set it out of the ruts.

Ethel Arthur's fondest Christmas memories are of her dad hitching up the team of horses to a big wagon and she and her four brothers, two sisters and parents climbing in and driving to her grandmother's house for Christmas. Mrs. Arthur grew up in the timber country of the Ozarks Mountains in Missouri.

She remembered her grandmother's house as being made partly of logs. Her two brothers were born in a log cabin built by her father on the land he homesteaded about a 100 miles west of St. Louis. Mrs. Arthur, however, was born in the house her father built of lumber later.

Christmas dinners, Mrs. Arthur remembered, owere traditional with turkey and dressing. "Mother raised turkeys and we always had a nice turkey for Christmas," she explained. "And we had the best dressing." She remembered that dressing as being half corn bread and half stale bread pieces ("We'd save biscuits and light bread scraps when we had it"). And they'd add onion and sage and salt and pepper. "We always had sweet potatoes and white potatoes, too.

"We grew all our own food. We never went to the store for anything but sugar and soda," Mrs. Arthur said.

"We had a cellar in back of the place with bins where we put the vegetables. They'd last all winter long," she recalled.

Tim Timmons remembered a special Christmas that he and his wife "Myrt" shared 85 miles from nowhere on the prairies of New Mexico about 1927.

"I remember one Christmas we spent in a camp northwest of Roswell, N.M.; about 85 miles from town," Timmons, a cowboy, said.

Helen Dixon

"It was just me and my wife, Myrt. We'd been married about five years.

"We didn't have no tree," he drawled, with a smile as slow as his words. "So I went out and roped a clump of bear grass and jerked it up. Brought it inside and jobbed it down into a can. Myrt put paper around it.

"My wife had bought some cherries, so we strung them and put them on it. I had got her a wrist watch for Christmas, so I hung it on the bear grass and told her if she peeked, she wouldn't get anything.

Timmons, Mrs. Arthur, Hannon and Mrs. Dixon all remembered their Christmas as being small and uncomplicated. They hung their black cotton stockings up Christmas Eve and the next morning they'd find them filled with candy, nuts and if they were lucky, a piece of fruit. An apple or an orange was something they rarely saw. Sometimes they had yuletide church services if they lived close enough to a church to go and they always had a big Christmas dinner of homegrown vegetables and home butchered meat, beef, pork and poultry — whatever was available.

They didn't always have a Christmas tree and they certainly never bought one. Hannon would cut down whatever was available — whether pine or live oak. Mrs. Arthur's family went out to the mountains and chopped down the prettiest evergreen they could find. Mrs. Arthur and Mrs. Dixon remembered handstuffed dolls with china heads and tiny sets of dishes.

When Mrs. Dixon was asked what she wanted, if she could have anything, she answered, "Two good eyes. No, really, my wants are no more. I just want things for my children — for them to be able to get what ever they want."

no more. I just want things for my children — for them to be able to get whatever they want."

Mrs. Arthur's wish was to "have my little daughter home for Christmas."

Timmons didn't hesitate a minute in saying what he wanted — "It would be my wife."

Give memorable holiday party

By DONNA BRAUCHI County Extension Agent

The holidays are definitely here. Perhaps you are planning to give a party. You want your guests to enjoy themselves. You also may be planning to serve alcoholic

So that your guests will remember your party for the enjoyment it provided (not for how bad they felt the next day), consider these tips:

The home setting - Greet your guests and instead of sending them directly to the "bar" for a cold drink introduce them to someone they don't know or reacquaint them with an old friend.

Pace the drinks - Serve drinks at regular reasonable intervals. The length of the interval will depend on whether the guests are enjoying the company or the drinks more. A drink - an - hour schedule means good company prevails.

Don't double up — Many people count their drinks. But if you serve doubles, they'll be drinking twice as much as they can handle. Doubling up isn't generous, it's rude. If you have a bartender, choose one of known discretion. Make sure he is not a drink pusher

Don't push drinks - Wait until the glass is empty before you offer another drink, especially if someone comes up empty too fast. When a guest says, "No, thanks" to an alcohol drink - don't insist.

Push the snacks - Offer snacks while your guests are drinking, not after. Food slows down the rate at which alcohol is absorbed into the bloodstream. It also slows the rate at which people drink.

Serve nonalcoholic drinks, too -One out of three adults chooses not to drink at all. Occasional drinkers sometimes prefer not to. Offer a choice of drinks besides alcohol, such as fruit and vegetable juices, tea, coffee and soft drinks.

Offer more than drinks - When guests focus on the drinks, the party is slipping. Introduce two people who don't know each other. Get a conversation started. Share a Set drinking limits - When a guest has had too much to drink, politely express your concern for them by offering a substitute drink - coffee, perhaps. This is a gentle way of telling a guest that they have reached the limits you have set for your home.

Closing the bar - Decide in advance when you want your party to end. Then give appropriate cues by word and action that it's time to leave. A considerate way to close the drinking phase is to serve a substantial snack. It also provides some nondrinking time before your guests start to drive home.

In spite of your best intentions, someone may become drunk at your party. See that the drunken guest gets home safely, but do not let him drive. Sometimes it's best to let the guest "sleep it off" instead of going home. There is no way to sober up quickly because it takes about one hour per drink for Serving dinner - If you're going the body to metabolize the alcohol the hub of the system. "This is a new concept. Inquiries are already coming in from around the nation.

The system provides varying levels of care at varying costs, depending on the patients' needs. For example, a patient who has had heart surgery at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, where room rates average $515 a day, may recuperate at University Memorial Hospital, where rates will average $310 per day.

Other patients may go to the Oaks Nursing Home, or, if they need the lowest level of care, the Magnolias Rest Home at $590 per month. Other facilities under the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Hospital Authority are the Charlotte Rehabilitation Hospital and Huntersville Hospital.

"Health care has been late in applying good business practices from the private sector," said Pruitt. "In order to compete, for some systems to survive given the reduction in payments from federal and state sources for patient care, some hospitals have to learn good management practices. Rather than being forced to do it, we are taking the lead.'

The system is taking advantage of an economy of scale by pooling its best managers, by combining services like laundry, computers and telecommunications and through group purchasing.

An independent expert on hospital management said other hospitals had operated nursing homes for years, but he agreed that the Charlotte hospital system was on the cutting edge of change.

"We're basicaly talking about vertical integration," said Rick Lee, public policy director for the Washington Business Group on Health, which represents large employers in health-care matters 'They've got it from birth to death, from the least intensive to the most intensive level of care. That's the kind of hospital system that's going to be profitable in the long run.

Since 1981, Charlotte Memorial's 3,500 patient-care employees have been under a merit pay system which is also an unusual practice that may become commonplace Pruitt said. Eventually, all of the system's 4,600 patient-care employees will be paid according to their performance.

University Memorial Hospital taking shape in northeastesrn Charlotte amid several other projects near the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, will be the most advanced hospital in the region, Pruitt said. The 130 beds are laid out in six corridors radiating out from nursing stations on each of six floors. Each patient including surgery, emergency, room will be private and within 36 labwork and labor and delivery. If feet of a nursing station. "It's a prototype in that it's the minimum size — 130 beds — where a hospital can operate efficiently," he said. "With anything below 130, the expenses of operating the hospital are out of proportion.'

The $15 billion hospital will have all the normal hospital services, necessary, a second patient tower of the same "snowflake" design can be added, he said.

Pruitt said the new concepts were largely the work of Dr. Harry Nurkin, who became president of the 901-bed Charlotte Memorial Hospital in 1981 and of the hospital authority in 1983

Art sought for cover of county history book

All area artists and photographers are asked to submit paintings or colored photographs that are representative of Gray County for the front cover of the Gray County History Book to be published for the sesquicentennial year, 1986.

Deadline for the art, to be at least 5 inches by 7 inches in size, is 12 noon, January 7. Credit to the artist or photographer whose work is chosen for the cover, along with a piographical sketch included in the history book.

Items should be mailed to Gray County History - Nolte, Box 2196, Pampa, or delivered to The Gift Box. All items will be returned after the selection is made. Art work should not include specific public buildings.

A meeting of all volunteers wishing to assist in the production of the history book, from collecting biographical histories and features to typing and bookkeeping, should attend the organizational meeting on Jan. 7, 1:3 n.m. Lovett Librar conference room.

Tho is who in Who's Who

WTSU, Canyon - When Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges announced 53 selection from the West Texas some interesting patterns emerged. The "typical college stident" of a few years back doesn't seem to be an appropriate stereotype anymore.

Among the standout WTSU students recognized this year, 66 percent are women, 28 percent married, and 13 percent come from outside the state. But perhaps the most startling figure in the Who's Who statistics is the large number of returning students on the list. Nearly one of three Who's Who inductees are older students who have returned to college for one reason or another.

Obviously, a sampling of 53 students is hardly adequate for predicting any nationwide trends. But the figures from WTSU do lend support to current theories among teachers and school administrators that college education is being perceived more and more as a lifelong process.

Returning students come back to the classroom for a wide variety of reasons. Some want to keep abreast of the latest research in their fields. Other are in the process of changing careers or improving their positions in their present > careers. Still others delayed entry into college or had their normal education interrupted by jobs, marriages, children, or personal crises, and are only now finding the time to return.

For example, look briefly at Joyce Fowler and Janie Sims. who are among WTSU's 1984 Who's Who recipients. Fowler didn't enter college until the ripe old age of 37. After raising a family, she decided to pursue a career in journalism. Now she's editor of the alumni newspaper as well as the campus newspaper, "The Prairie."

Sims, on the other hand, worked on a music performance degree at WTSU for three semesters before leaving school to go on the road with "Sunday," a Christian singing group. Sims was gone four years before she and her husband decided a stronger foundation in music training was a must for her career. Now, thanks to the added help she has received. Sims is singing beyond anything she formerly would have anticipated and thinking about a career in opera.

Dozens of other stories, just as interesting and unique, could be told by the other Who's Who inductees, and each might strike a blow to the stereotype of collegians we carry in our minds. The university experience isn't just for that kid own the street who brings home sacks and sacks of dirty laundry every weekend. Even the "older" folks are in college now. and doing quite well, thank you.

It's always refreshing to see someone like Bill Tuke on his way to a Rotary Club meeting. Bill exercises a lot of courage and quiet determination, always in a mild manner, in regaining his health

About 100 volunteers, board members and friends who have contributed to the lives of the clients of Pampa Sheltered Workshop and Activity Center were special guests for Christmas lunch in the middle of busy last week. Eight clients with the help of volunteers Liz (Mrs. Mike) Conner, Nancy (Mrs. Maynard) Kotara, Sue Terry, Liz (Mrs. Ken) Edwards, Lois Wilkinson and Jimmy Jordan prepared the scrumptious meal. Tom Ammons helped, too.

Tom is the volunteer handyman who helps in a dozen different ways. Barbara (Mrs. Bob) Benyshek assisted with decorations. The day before, members of the Golden Harvest Extension Club - with Iona Thompson in charge - hosted a luncheon for the clients.

They presented the clients with a gift certificate for the works at McDonald's and red apple ornaments with their names on

One afternoon each week Evalon Hernandez and Susan Day, cosmetologists volunteer their services with manicures, shampoos and haircuts. Accolades to Ruth Harmon, director for 16 years, and Ernestine Ammons, assistant for 10 years for their untiring efforts at the Center.

Janyth (Mrs. Charles) Bowers looked like a professional model in a spiffy electric blue hat topping a brown plaid poncho suit. Another day Gladys Bowers was smartly dressed in a Christmas red ultra suede coat.

Heard and overheard: Attendants at MESSIAH and the next night at the First United Methodist Church choir program were fascinated at the dexterity displayed by Greg Williams, who played between six and 10 percussion instruments. Betty and Alton Flinchum came all the way from Staavanger, Norway, to spend a month visiting Betty's mother March Crutcher of Lefors and Alton's mother Thelma. Last week they left to spend Chrsitmas with their daughter in Atlanta. They will be moved back to the States next year.

Congratulations to Opal and Rufus McCathern who celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary today with a reception for friends and relatives at Grace Baptist Church. Hosts are their children Velma and James Rhoades, Neal McCathern, Marie and Darrell McCathern, Jan and Glen McCathern. Relatives will come from Hereford, Lefors, Shamrock and Lubbock.

Belva (Mrs. Wayne) Harris is the personable and enthusiastic secretary at Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ.

In memory of their parents, Carolyn and Price Smith sponsored the Hanging of the Greens at First Christian Church a couple of Sundays ago. Cindy (Mrs. Jack) Gindorf, assisted by Jamie White and Vicki (Mrs. Ron) Hayes and Mike Roby, sound man, directed the activities.

An impromptu program, totally unrehearsed that resulted in memorable entertainment for the Noon Lions Club annual Christmas dinner simply could not have been better had it been rehearsed. Doug Carmichael, president, did what every president does when a planned program falls through: He called on his wife Sarah to help.

They read some Christmas readings and Lisa Malone, accompanied by her mother Estelle (Mrs. A.C.) sang several Christmas carols for a perfectly delightful evening. Myrna (Mrs. Darville) Orr played pre - dinner music so that Kathleen (Mrs. Jeff) Anderson, pianist for ever so many years, could be an honored guest. Jack Gindorf was jolly Old St. Nick. Tree care for ice damage

BY JOE VanZANDT COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT The ice storm last weekend certainly played havoc with a lot of trees and shrubs around the area.

Some tree species are more vulnerable to limb breakage during ice storms. Generally these are the fastest growing trees. Slower growing trees tend to have stronger wood and are more resistant to storm damage. Tree owners that had a lot of limb breakage may want to consider replanting a slower growing variety of tree. It seems Chinese Elm trees also fall into the category of having weak wood as they suffered a lot of limb

Broken limbs of trees should be pruned back to a main scaffold branch or to the central trunk. Cuts on trees should be made with a sharp saw and made flush to a side branch or to the trunk, making certain that no stubs are left. WOUND DRESSINGS

In recent years, much has been written about the advantages and disadvantages of using a wound dressing on large cuts. Normally, the wound dressing is used only on cuts larger than an inch in diameter. However, some scientists have found that wound dressings are strictly cosmetic and have little to do with preventing insect or disease damage to the wound area. A pruning paint slows down the healing process when applied to the cambium tissue exposed by the wound; however, wound dressings prevent wedging or checking cracks that develop in large untreated cuts allowing deep penetration of diseases and insects into the tree. Therefore, it is best to use pruning paint on large cuts to prevent cracking but make sure it's only used on the wood and not applied to the exposed cambium layer or healing may be delayed.

Since the pruning paint has a tendency to weather and crack, it is necessary to periodically inspect the wound surface and repaint if needed. Clean the surface with a wire brush before repainting, avoiding damage to the new callous tissue on covering it with pruning paint. Purchase wound dressings or pruning paints from local garden shops and nurseries.

An excellent reference booklet "Pruning and Training Landscape Plants" is available in the Gray County Extension Office. Call or come by for your copy. It has excellent illustrations on pruning and caring for landscape plants. TIPS ON GIVING PETS FOR GIFTS

Receiving or giving a pet for Christmas can be an extremely rewarding experience.

Gift pets may be better received if they are not a total surprise. Someone receiving a particular pet should want it and be willing to furnish proper daily care.

Choosing a pet that will comfortably fit the environment available for its care is an essential planning step. Small, cute puppies of medium and larger breed types quickly outgrow the confines of a small dwelling.

The purchaser of the gift pet should always obtain an agreement from the seller to furnish replacement or other remedies should the pet be found to be sick or have serious physical defects. Such agreements usually furnish a reasonable period of time following purchase to have a veterinarian examine the pet and make appropriate recommendations.

Exotic animals, such as skunks, are not recommended as pets by the American Veterinary Medical Association since they may be inapparent carriers of rabies. Safe and effective approved rabies vaccines for skunks and other exotic animals are not available.

Additional information concerning pet selection and health maintenance may be obtained from your local veterinarian.

Journey to Mexico where the echoes of the mystical civilizations of Aztecs and Maya can still be heard...to places of mystery, where heroic tales are told of human sacrifices to the Haustic god of Pulgue, at the Temple of the Niches in El Tajin.

These obscure tribes are gone now, vanished into the unknown. All that remains of these people is the haunting, magical silence, deserted by all except the winds. If you look deeply into this Haustic god mirror, you may still see a richly garbed victim preparing himself for death because he failed to do the impossible, for this was his passport to the underworld.

The Haustic god mirror has over 450 individual handcrafted pieces glued to fiberboard and designs burned into each piece with a woodburning tool. It weighs 16 lbs. and is 57 inches

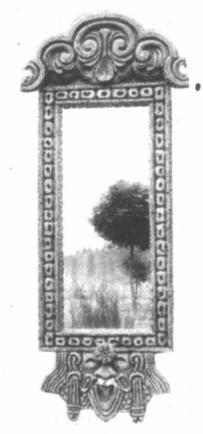

Alone one cold and dreary night, as I was sitting by the fireplace, a cold chill suddenly came over me. All at once I felt someone's presence. Something had caught my eye, and as I turned my head, I could have sworn I heard whispers and movement coming from this mirror hanging on the wall behind me...How ridiculous! Probably just the wind blowing the screen against the window. Perhaps it was just my imagination. Or was it?

Dear Abby

Mother harps on marriage: son can't change her tune

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 38-year-old bachelor. I live alone, have a secure job that I enjoy, have a couple of hobbies that occupy much of my time and I am completely satisfied with my social life. So what's the problem, right?

The problem is my widowed mother, who thinks I need a wife and she needs grandchildren. In every letter, phone call and visit, Mother nags and harps on the subject. I've heard everything from, Who will take care of you in your old age?" to "Who will you leave your money to when you die?" I have told her that I am quite happy with my lifestyle. I've tried ignoring her, changing the subject and trying to reason with her. So far nothing has worked. I've pointed out that I have no desire to have a wife or children. Everytime someone over 25 gets married or one of her friends has another grandchild, she calls to tell me.

I love my mother dearly, but her constant nagging on this subject gets on my nerves so badly I find myself wanting to avoid her. I've even told her that, but it hasn't discouraged her.

Any suggestions, Abby? I've had about all I can take MOTHER-RIDDEN

DEAR RIDDEN: You can't change anyone but yourself, so quit trying to change your mother. Give her all the respect due her, but don't argue with her-tune her out. She may mean well, but her concern for your future has become an obsession, which is her problem. Don't make it yours.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon, but there is one thing we cannot agree on. I want my fiance to wear a wedding band after we are married. He says he will not wear one because he does not care for any kind of jewelry.

I notice he always wears a wristwatch. He says he "needs" to wear one so he won't be late for court or Calif. 90038.)

business appointments. (He's a

I told him that he "needs" to wear a wedding band so women will know that he is a married man.

Am I wrong to insist he wear one? ANONYMOUS BRIDE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: You're being unrealistic. A wedding ring will not stop your husband's circulation-no matter how tight it is. Back off. A wedding band does not a faithful husband

DEAR ABBY: I've been a waitress for six years. My fellow waitresses and I drew up a list of people we hate to wait on the most:

- 1. bustnessmen 2. secretaries
- 3. single women
- salesmen 5. truck drivers
- 6. drunks
- . lawyers

These people made the list because they are rude, inconsiderate and cheap. Sign me ..

BURNED UP

DEAR BURNED UP: I have a tip for you. You could be burned out. You also have an attitude problem.

Businessmen, secretaries, single women, salesmen, truck drivers, drunks and lawyers? Who's left?

Pampan joins in simulated negotiations

Matt Turner, an Austin College student from Pampa, was among 70 students who participated in the International Conference on Security and Cooperation Dec. 2-4 at the college. Turner, the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Joe L. Turner, was a member of the China delegation. The conference was a final project of an international relations course taught by Dr. Shelton Williams, professor of political science. Members of 10 delegations from as many countries agreed to control strategic and theater nuclear weapons as well as weapons testing by anyone, but left unresolved the issues of the trade debt and Central America during the three days of intensive international negotiations

Through a structured format much like real negotiations, students were required to think and act in the way their representative country would in real negotiations.

Each country began negotiations with varying amounts of economic and political power in units called ''wombats.'' During the negotiations, delegations could lose or gain power (points) depending on their strategy and activity. Williams says that on occasion

NEW YORK (NEA) — Jimmy is 12. When he was 2 1/2, his parents divorced. By the time he was 10 and telling his story to Jill Krementz for her new book "How it Feels When Parents Divorce" (Knopf, $12.95), he'd had a lifetime of anguish.

His parents yanked him through custody battles, and once his mother 'snatched' him away to Florida where Jimmy had to repeat the first grade because she couldn't risk discovery by writing for his school

His father found him anyway and Jimmy legally returned to New York with him, while his mother remained in Florida. It seemed the chaos had ended; but Jimmy ended up seeing four psychiatrists.

At a party Ms. Krementz gave for the 19 children in her book — age 7 to 16 (from Connecticut, the New York area and Washington, D.C.) — and their families, Jimmy agreed to talk about his experiences. But he was so guarded and discomforted that the interview lasted only seconds. "Probably the worst part is being separated from my mother, although she's coming to see us soon," he said.

The past still pains him, but living it was worse. Specifically, of his time in Florida, he says, "I don't think about it except I realize now I should have called home."

"But you were only a little boy," he's told. "You couldn't have known that then.

He thinks for a moment, but makes no reply and his expression suggests that his feelings haven't changed: He should have called home. If he had, as he says in the book, his father wouldn't have had to spend every-thing — $34,000 — to track him down. His father and stepmother would have more money now.

It's hard for Jimmy to smile Heather, who is also 12, smiles often although her parents still haven't fought out all the details of their divorce, which began when she was 9. "I guess it's better now because my parents don't yell," she says. "That was the worst. But they're still doing really bad things to each other. Then they each give me guilt trips about themselves and there's not much I can do. I just want them to get weekends is often more than their schedules can accommodate, not to mention their fragile psyches.

"Also, a child's room is really important. Many children, like Heather, are upset by having two. She feels like she's camping out all the time. Neither room feels like her own."

Beyond that, what most distressed the children interviewed was "being used as a message carrier or middle man (or weapon) by their parents," says Ms. Krementz. "If there's one message divorcing parents can learn from this book, it's to try to keep that at a minimum. But many times they do it so subtly. 'Why don't you call your father and remind him to pick you up on Saturday?' the implication being if the child doesn't, the father might forget.'

Far worse are the things divorced parents often say outright about each other to their children, things, Ms. Krementz says, that astonished her "Divorce gets a bum rap in terms of how it affects children; it's rotten marriages that hurt them," he says. when she heard them. "That's one "Jill's book is very helpful because it shows 19 very together children. My own are with me half the time so they reason this was the saddest book I've ever done, more so than "How It Feels When a Parent Dies." Being Still, says Ms. Krementz, "Without exception, all 19 children felt the pain around those single parents was uplifting because most were doing of divorce much more keenly than a such a wonderful job trying to help their children through the experience.

And even the most well-intentioned "Divorce causes more pain, I think resolution, like joint custody, can conbecause there's a certain finality with tinue to bruise. Wet weather plagues Texas cotton harvest

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Wet conditions in the plains and western areas of Texas are continuing to plague the cotton harvest as 1984 winds down, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The prolonged wet weather is starting to hurt fiber quality and is causing some cotton to string out of bolls, Carpenter said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture.

More than half the cotton remains to be harvested in the South Plains where over 50 percent of the Texas crop is grown. A considerable amount of cotton also remains to be harvested in the Panhandle, Rolling Plains and Far West Texas.

Wet conditions also are hampering the completion of peanut harvesting in West Central and North Central Texas, Carpenter said.

However, harvesting of peanuts and vegetables remains active in Southwest Texas, and vegetable and sugarcane harvesting continues in the Rio Grande Valley. Sugarbeets, the state's other sugar crop, are about 90 percent harvested in the Panhandle and South Plains.

Pecan harvesting continues over much of the state although this year's crop is short due to a large crop last year, the severe cold last winter, and this year's drought and insects. About 30 percent of the crop remains to be harvested; it will total about one-fourth of last year's more than 70 million pounds.

Livestock will be going into the winter season in fairly good shape considering the year's severe drought, noted Carpenter. A mild, wet fall has boosted grazing on warm-season grasses and has gotten small grains (wheat and oats), clovers and ryegrass off to a good start to provide fall and winter grazing. Some livestock feeding has started, and some cattlemen are continuing to trim down herds to reduce the number of head to overwinter.

While small grains are doing well, many fields need a topdressing of nitrogen for sustained growth, Carpenter said, particularly where fertilizer was applied before heavy fall rains fell.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Damp weather is hampering cotton harvesting; about half the crop is still in the field. A few sugarbeets also remain to be harvested, and cabbage and carrot harvesting continues in Deaf Smith County. Wheat is making good growth and providing grazing for livestock. Range cattle are getting supplemental feed.

SOUTH PLAINS: About half the cotton crop remains to be harvested due to weather delays. Fiber quality is starting to suffer due to the prolonged dar o conditions. About 10 percent of the sugar beet crop also remains to be harvested. Wheat is making excellent growth and providing good grazing for stocker cattle.

ROLLING PLAINS: Inclement weather is keeping the wraps on cotton and grain sorghum harvesting. Cotton is stringing out of bolls due to prolonged wet conditions. Wheat is supplying good grazing for livestock, with stocker cattle making excellent gains. Stock water remains short in a few counties.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wet conditions are continuing to hamper the completion of peanut harvesting and small grain planting. Winter vegetables are in production while a short pecan crop has been harvested. Cattle are in fair to good shape, with supplemental feeding under way.

NORTHEAST: Wheat is making good growth although excessive moisture is hampering livestock grazing. Most livestock are in good condition going into winter. About 10 percent of a light pecan crop remains to be harvested.

FAR WEST: The area's cotton harvest is in poor shape due to continued damp weather. Pastures and ranges are improved due to rains and warm temperatures, and most livestock are in good shape with winter approaching. Poisonous plants pose a proble. for livestock in a few counties.

WEST CENTRAL: Continued damp weather is delaying the completion of cotton and peanut harvesting. Cotton yields are down sharply due to the drought while the peanut crop also is below normal. Harvesting of a short pecan crop is about complete. Wheat and oats generally are doing well. Some cattle feeding is under way.

CENTRAL: Wheat is making good progress although winter grain mites are showing up in some fields and some fields need a topdressing of nitrogen. Some fields are being grazed. A short pecan harvest is about complete. Ear ticks and lice are heavy on untreated cattle. Cattle feeding is active.

EAST: Oats and winter pastures are making good growth but need a topdressing of nitrogen. Excessive moisture is hampering livestock grazing on pastures. Livestock are in good condition, with large numbers still going to market to reduce the overwintering herd. A few pecans remain to be harvested; yields are low.

UPPER COAST: Farmers are getting cropland ready for next spring as field conditions permit. Some are applying fertilizer. Pastures are in fair shape while most livestock look good going into the winter. Cattle feeding is in progress.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Wheat is making good growth although some fields need a topdressing of nitrogen fertilizer. Farmers are preparing cropland for next spring where field conditions permit. Most livestock are going into winter in fair to good shape, with supplemental feeding active.

SOUTHWEST: Rainfall is still short for the year--about 63 percent of normal. Wheat and oats are making excellent growth and are providing good grazing for livestock. However, supplemental feeding is active due to sparse grazing on pastures and ranges. Harvesting of peanuts, carrots, spinach, broccoli, collards and cabbage remains in full

COASTAL BEND: Most of the area needs additional moisture for small grains and winter pastures. Livestock are in fair condition, with some feeding under way. Hay supplies are short. Pecans are about 90 percent harvested, with low yields.

SOUTH: Sugarcane and hay harvesting remain active. Carrots and peppers are in fair supply while supplies of cabbage and broccoli are light. Onions are making good growth. Livestock conditions continue to improve, with good grazing in most

Winter wheat plantings are down

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers have reduced winter wheat plantings by 9 percent for the 1985 harvest, according to a new Agriculture Department report.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said Thursday that surveys indicate 57.6 million acres of winter wheat were planted this fall, down from 63.4 million acres planted for the bumper 1984

A record 66.5 million acres of winter wheat were planted for the 1982 harvest, and farmers reduced plantings to 62.1 million for 1983.

They boosted plantings slightly a year ago for the 1984 crop.

The 57.6 million acres of winter wheat planted for next year would be the fewest since farmers seeded about that acreage for the 1980 harvest, according to USDA records.

Carl Schwensen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said that while "we're not stunned" by the 9 percent reduction in winter wheat plantings, it was somewhat more of a cutback than had been anticipated. Schwensen said one factor was wet weather in parts of the Southeast that prevented farmers from planting on schedule. Farmer signup in the 1985 acreage program also was a major reason, he said.

Farmers have to agree to reduce 1985 wheat plantings by 30 percent in order to qualify for government price support benefits on next year's crop.

Winter wheat, planted in the fall for the next summer's harvest, makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production.

BY JOE VanZANDT County Extension Agent BINDWEED RESEARCH

Experiment Station researchers since 1976 has given some new insights into controlling field bindweed with post-emergence herbicides.

This work showed that Roundup and 2.4-D should be sprayed only when bindweed growth is lush. On the other hand, Banvel or a mixture of Tordon 22K and 2,4-D gives best results when applied in the fall

With these herbicides, lush growth of bindweed is not a prerequisite for excellent control These conclusions are based on research conducted at the experiment station by Allen Wiese, Wayne Chenault and Mark Wood, weed scientists. The researchers conducted most of their studies on clay loam soil on the Joe Detten farm south of Amarillo. One test was conducted on clay loam soil in cooperation with Dink Wilson, county agent near Quanah.

The researchers applied over 20 separate applications of many herbicides to the bindweed over a five year period. In three studies, Roundup sprayed at 1.5, 3 and 4.5 pounds per acre gave 54, 72 and 80 percent control the year after spraying. The rates of application were the same as 0.5, 1 and 1.5 gallons of Roundup per acre. Because 4.5 pounds per acre of Roundup was not much better than 3 pounds per acre, all subsequent applications were made at 3 pounds per acre. In all 20 applications, and after one year, 3 pounds per acre of Roundup, 1 pound per acre of 2,4-D and 1 pound per acre of Banvel, control was 75, 67, and 73 percent, respectively. Wiese says, "Actually, all of the herbicides did an excellent job of controlling the bindweed."

In the course of the research, applications were made in the spring, summer or fall. Control with Roundup averaged 80 percent or more with spring and summer applications. At the same time, 2.4-D gave 65 percent control and Banvel was a little better gfiving 70 percent control. In the fall, control with Roundup and 2,4-D each dropped about 20 percent. The situation was reversed with Banvel, and control averaged 81 percent with all fall applications. The researchers realigned their results and calculated control when bindweed growth was either lush or poor. Lush conditions occurred at four separate applications when soil moisture was excellent and poor growth occurred at three times when the soil was very dry. This apprasial showed it was best to apply Research by Texas Agricultural Roundup when bindweed averaged 92 percent. In one instance, the 3 pounds per acre of Roundup completely eliminated the bindweed

Control with Banvel and 2,4-D under lush growth conditions was 63 and 52 percent. On the other hand, Banvel did the best job when growth was poor. This primarily occurred in the fall. With dry soil. control with Banvel was 85 percent or twice as high as when 2,4-D or Roundup were applied under the same conditions.

In ten of the studies, Tordon 22K was mixed with either Banvel, 2.4-D or Roundup. "These mixtures were compared to Roundup, 2,4-D pounds per acre made after June or Banvel alone," Wiese said. In these comparisons, Roundup gave 95 percent control when bindweed growth was lush. This was markedly better than the three mixtures with Tordon 22K that gave from 59 to 71 percent bindweed control. Banvel and 2.4-D alone, each gave less control that the mixtures. When growth was poor, the situation was changed. Roundup and 2.4-D gave little or no control. Banvel alone and the Tordon mixtures gave from 80 to 90 percent control.

Because Banvel and Tordon persist in the soil, wheat was planted each fall after applications to test for chemical residiues. Applications of Tordon 22K at 0.25 injure wheat planted in the fall unless it was sprayed after September. Until these studies were completed, the researchers thought growers could obtain good bindweed control with post-emergence herbicides only when growth was lush. This is still injured wheat planted in October.

Banvel at 1 pound per acre did not the case with Roundup and 2,4-D. However, these studies proved that Banvel or a mixiture of Thordon 22K and 2.4-D could be applied in a dry fall and excellent bindweed control would result.

'Now growers can select herbicides that will control field bindweed any time of the year regardless of growing conditions," Wiese concluded

Ag yearbook covers goats

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department unveiled its new yearbook today, a 688-page volume about the health of cows, pigs, gerbils and tropical fish.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said the book, called "Animal Health - Livestock and Pets," has "something of interest for nearly everyone." The book has sections on raising backyard poultry and pet birds, cattle, sheep and goats, swine, fish, dogs and cats, rabbits and other small animals and horses. In the section on rabbits and other small animals, chapter titles include: The Gentle Gerbil.

Nostalgia reigns

By JENNY NARKIEWICZ Beaumont Enterprise

NEDERLAND, Texas (AP) -He sits in his rocker at the window enticing young and old to come it and tell him what they want for Christmas.

"Several people have said they'c like to sit on our Santa's lap because he looks so real," Kathy Crawford says. "But, of course, they can't because he's not real." Mrs. Crawford designed the jolly old fellow based on a 1953 Christmas Coca-Cola advertisement "that was my Santa when I was growing up. I was six years old then and that's how I always envisioned him to look like.

A touch of nostalgia, perhaps. But then, so is a visit to the Nederland Pharmacy, where Santa Claus is the newest window display in drugstore that also features another trace of times past, a lunch counter and soda fountain.

Used to be, a long time ago, every neighborhood drug store had a soda fountain and lunch counter. Mrs. Crawford's husband, James, fountain operator and antique toy enthusiast, is known by lunch counter regulars for his displays that cover almost every available space inside the fountain area.

Mrs. Crawford spent nearly two months building the papier mache Santa. Except for his boots and long underwear, everything is handcrafted

"When I started on him, I didn't know if he would come out," she says. "But it was worth a try and I think he looks great.'

Indeed, he does. Santa's bright blue eyes appear to twinkle with delight and his chubby cheeks are rosey red, perhaps from the nippy North Pole cold. The Santa window display isn't

Mrs. Crawford's first. The window saw Christmas elves and toys the year her husband first took over the lunch counter. "My mother was very ill last year and we really couldn't decorate the window," she says. Her mother died earlier this year. 'But this year, we went all out." A lot of people have asked about a Mrs. Santa for next year or inquired about a Santa for their own homes. "I've always liked making things," she says. "I have a degree in commercial art from Lamar University. But what I really like to do is make things out of scrap, the stuff no one else wants. It's a lot of fun to see what can come from someone else's junk.' The displays of antique toys started three years ago when Crawford took over the lunch counter. At that time, pharmacy owner Kenneth Sheffield was about to close it down and tear it out.

"But James came along and decided to have a go at it," Sheffield says. "He's done a real good job with it, too."

The pharmacy itself goes back to the turn of the century, Sheffield says. The soda fountain and lunch counter stand in the pharmacy's original building, which was known in the early 1900s as the Half Way House because it was halfway between Beaumont and Port Arthur.

"Back then, every drug store had a soda fountain," Sheffield says. 'But that was a long time ago and things have changed. We really like our fountain because they're becoming almost extinct."

According to local accounts, C.X. Johnson opened the pharmacy's doors for the first time in 1900. Legend has it that Johnson used the "X" because he didn't have a middle name. He had the first telephone in Nederland installed there and the pharmacy was the center of town on election nights before the days of radio and television.

F.A. Roach bought the pharmacy in 1922 and updated the fountain to include curbside service to the increasing number of automobiles in the area.

"When I was in high school, there were five boys out there car-hopping," Sheffield says. Ella and Marvin Wagner bought the pharmacy in 1946, and a year later, Sheffield began working there. After Wagner's death in 1949, Sheffield became the pharmacist.

"It's the first and only job I've ever had," he says. Ella Wagner instituted several changes, the most noticeable being the pharmacy's expansion in 1968 to include a spacious area for medications and sundries.

Sheffield bought the pharmacy a few years later and things have "pretty much stayed the same," he

Character leads a frustrating experience on Dallas

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the history of television, District Attorney Hamilton Burger is probably the only character to lead a more frustrating existence than Cliff Barnes on CBS'

Cliff, played by Ken Kercheval, lays elaborate plans to trap the slippery J.R. Ewing, but usually to

During nine years on the air, Raymond Burr as "Perry Mason" never lost a case in court. Or, to put it another way, Ham Burger got his teeth kicked in every week. But he was always back the next week, eager to go another round.

Cliff Barnes, out to avenge the real and imagined wrongs done to his father by the Ewings, hasn't had much better luck, although he recently got a big

"Cliff has enormous new-found wealth in off-shore oil leases," says Kercheval. "He has wealth comparable to the Ewings. But, no, it doesn't satisfy him. He wants more. I don't know that he wants the money as much as he wants the demise of the

The feud is an old one between the two families. Barnes contends that old Jock Ewing (played by Jim Davis until his death in 1981) cheated "Digger"

Barnes out of his rightful share of the oil company partnership. After that, Barnes, in various official capacities and as a private citizen, has been the chief adversary of J.R. Ewing, played by Larry

Now, after seven years, Cliff Barnes is finally in a power position and can wage his vendetta against the Ewings on even terms.

"The bottom line is that his father was a down-and-outer," Kercheval says. "Cliff is misdirected in his thinking. He has a blind loyalty to his father that's admirable but not too realistic. He aspires to have his father's memory become as famous as Jock's, but society just doesn't glorify down-and-out drunks.

"Cliff has become as shifty as J.R. He learned from the master. Cliff has become a worthy opponent for J.R. If ever there was a character whose theme song should be, 'Pick yourself up, Dust yourself off, Start all over again,' it's Cliff.'

The interview with Kercheval came a few days after the announcement that Patrick Duffy is quitting his role as Bobby Ewing and that Lorimar Productions is not renewing the contract of Charlene Tilton, who plays Lucy Ewing Cooper.

"What it really comes down to is that while an actor would like to argue that his contribution is indispensable, the bottom line is that it isn't true.

Classical rock group steams up the charts with Christmas classic

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) -Mannheim Steamroller was an 13 on the singles chart with "Deck obscure rock group from the Midwest until they took a Christmas classic, added their own heavily syncopated rhythms and started shooting up the charts.

fourth on Billboard magazine's latest holiday albums chart with its who creates the visual

new LP, "Christmas," and was No. the Halls.'

"We're outselling (opera star Luciano) Pavarotti and the Chipmunks," said 34-year-old Carol Davis, who is vice president The Steamroller has moved to of American Gramophone, the group's own record company, and presentations used in Mannheim Steamroller performances.

Her husband, Chip, composes and arranges the group's music, produces its albums, and is president of the record label. Davis, 37, also plays percussion and wind instruments and does what little singing there is on Mannheim Steamroller LPs.

The Davises already had a potential musical empire. All they needed was a hit to start turning vinyl into gold.

"It's the greatest Christmas present we ever could have gotten," Davis said. "It makes you feel you're going in the right direction, and it makes you feel like there's a bright future for this kind of music."

Davis described Mannheim Steamroller's music as "18th century rock 'n' roll." That may be defining it too narrowly, because while the music has a space age texture that features all sorts of synthesizers and studio tricks. Davis' influences date back to the Renaissance.

His music is as much an amalgam as his background. Davis studied the bassoon at the University of Michigan, taught music classes at a junior high school, sang in the Norman Luboff Choir and composed jingles for

America used 3-D to look at Soviets

By ED MORENO Associated Press Writer LAS VEGAS, N.M. (AP) - What difference can one man make on the U.S.-Soviet arms race?

If the man is Ronald Reagan, probably a big difference. But for ordinary people, like Jim Terr of Las Vegas, the proportions of a global arms race and possible nuclear conflict are somewhat overwhelming.

At least they were in 1982 when Terr, sufficiently concerned about the destruction of the world, visited the Soviet Union to meet the people who make up the Soviet empire.

Terr, 36, is the thoroughly American grandson of Russian immigrants. He admits to having fearsome thoughts about the the Communist superpower and its inhabitants.

"It was interesting to me to realize that I had never really thought of them as people, or thought that they might be nice, nice to Americans, or thinking about this or anything; in other words they had no dimension to me." Terr said in a recent interview at his Las Vegas home.

That changed when the jingle-writer and graphics designer attended a three-dimensional slide show.

"It's so real, the 3-D," he said. "I just had the idea of trying to get a 3-D outfit, going over, seeing what I could see - making this real for myself - and bringing it back and getting as many people as I could

So, armed with only a pair of 3-D cameras, Terr spent 21/2 weeks in five cities of the Soviet Union, from Leningrad to Armenia, taking 3-D pictures of everyone he could meet in situations not often seen by Americans

The result is a collection of what aside from the 3-D effect — could be considered ordinary snapshots of Soviet people in casual surroundings, at leisure, wearing T-shirts, smoking Marlboro cigarettes and being just plain people.

"This is what I think is missing in our view," Terr said. "When you have no experience with the people, you just think it's monolithic. (You think) people are doing nothing but spending their time thinking how to do in the United States

"It's kind of a paranoid view, but I had it myself. You find out people are there living their lives - and that's all I'm trying to convey.

Since his return, Terr has been traveling, largely in the Las Vegas area, showing his slides to civic clubs, church groups and schools and producing a 1985 calendar featuring photographs of Soviets and Americans.

Terr also sent about 20 small pop-up 3-D viewers and some slides to key members of the Reagan administration and Congress.

"I simply want to do my part to let people see what I saw - that these are people. Maybe it will spark a feeling that they are people with their own lives and own interests that we can deal with as human beings," he said.

Terr says he is careful to avoid editorializing on the dangers of nuclear war or his one-man diplomacy when he shows his slides."I'm very careful not to give people (a message) ... I don't think people are interested in people's opinions that much. If your opinion is not backed up by what you see, nobody cares, so I just provide the visual information.

However, Terr is not just a dreamer who hopes his one-man diplomacy can change the world.

'Obviously, appreciating the Soviets as people and dealing with their government are two different things," he said. "But, on the other hand, you can at least start to appreciate that Soviet leaders are people, they have families, they live in the society, they're influenced by the society, like here, you know.

"I know (the Soviets) get a good amount of anti-American propaganda. I also know most of them seem to take it with a grain of salt," he said.

People were "very curious about America," he added

Although the experience has not resulted in financial benefits for Terr so far, he says he hopes to continue spreading the word by marketing his calendar and perhaps writing a book.

"I'm trying to get (the pictures) circulated around the Soviet Union, for instance, with people I know who are going over, because I think they need to see us," he said.

"Something I'd really like to do is take 3-D pictures of Americans, which I have not, and make up a set and get them placed in as many American and Soviet libraries as possible with these little 3-D viewers. Again, no comment, just take a look, see what's on the other
