

Still no trace of former exchange student

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

More than three months after an Irish garment wholesaler discovered a former Pampa foreign exchange student's trunk in a gutted warehouse, the whereabouts of Anastasia Mama are still not known.

In a Sept. 8 letter to Pampa High School administrators, John T. Mallon of Dublin, Ireland, asked them to help locate Mama, a Cyprus exchange student who attended PHS in 1974.

Mallon, who owns a home in Cyprus, said he found a trunk full of her Pampa souvenirs when he visited the tormented Mediterranean island country earlier this year. Inside the trunk were her 1974 Harvester yearbook, a bible, an American flag, an American Field Service plaque and

Touched by the sentimental salutations Mama's classmates had written in her yearbook, Mallon took the trunk home to Dublin and asked PHS officials to "trace this lovely girl and return these treasured items to her."

Mallon still has the trunk and the Greek Cypriot woman has still not been located.

Pampa High School AFS sponsor Howard Graham and Ruby Davis, who hosted Mama during part of her 1974 stay, say they have heard nothing about or from the woman since before the Irishman contacted the school.

"Apparently nobody has," Davis said. "We have no way of finding her. We have sent her letters to the latest address we have and there has been no response for two or three years."

Davis said she and her husband Earl assumed that Graham had tried to reach her.

Graham assumed the Davis's had made the attempt.

"I have not done anything," Graham said, adding that Mama has not corresponded with her friends or host family very much in the 10 years since she's been in Pampa.

"Earl Davis was going to write the Greek Embassy," he said.

While she was an AFS student at Pampa, Mama stayed with the Davis' and with the Bill Haggerman family. After she graduated from PHS, she returned to her homeland with high hopes and fond memories. What she found on her return to Cyprus was increasing strife between Greek Cypriots and the Turkish Cypriot minority. In July, the conflict erupted when the Greek supported Cyprus National Guard overthrew the government. Five days later, the island nation was invaded by Turkish forces. Within a year, the conflict tore the island in half, with the Turkish occupying the northeast and the Greek Cypriots occupying the south. Nearly 200,000 refugees were left homeless in the conflict. Among the refugees was Anastasia Mama.

No Pampa resident has heard from Mama since 1981, when she announced her engagement to a Greek dental assistant.

Freda Haggerman received one of the wedding announcements.

"The last time we heard from her was the announcement," she said in September. "At that time she was very happy. She was going to Cyprus to get married. We sent her a gift but we got no answer."

Mama's last known address was Khanion 6A, Droscha, Larnaka, Cyprus. She was to marry Koamas Christoulouides, a dental technician

New statistics show economy gaining steam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge jumped 1.3 percent in November, the biggest gain in nine months, as various business barometers offered new evidence that a four-month slowdown is ending, the Commerce Department reported today.

The sharp increase in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators followed a revised 0.5 percent drop in October.

Before November, the index had fallen in three of the last five months — something that had not occurred since the recession year of 1981.

The declines had spurred growing concern that a new recession might be imminent. Overall growth, as measured by the gross national product, dipped to an anemic 1.6 percent from July through September — far below rates of 10.1 percent and 7.1 percent turned in during the first and second quarters this year.

However, a variety of economic statistics have pointed to renewed strength last month. Unemployment fell sharply and orders for manufactured durable goods posted their biggest gain in almost four years.

Despite the revival in the domestic economy, the country is still suffering from huge trade deficits.

In a new report today, the Commerce Department said the trade deficit rose to $9.9 billion in November, up 7.6 percent from the October level of $9.2 billion.

The increase stemmed from a 2.7 percent rise in imports and a slight 0.1 percent dip in exports. For the first 11 months of the year, the country has posted a trade deficit of $115.4 billion, virtually guaranteeing that the total deficit will almost double last year's record of $69.4 billion.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators is a compilation of 12 forward-pointing economic measurements.

The increase for November was broad based with nine indicators contributing to the gain.

The biggest boost came from an increase in building permits during November. Other positive factors in order of their influence were a gain in the money supply, an increase in plant and equipment orders, a rise in sensitive materials prices, gains in net business formation and the length of the average workweek, a drop in initial claims for unemployment insurance, a rise in stock prices and in new manufacturers orders for consumer goods.

Two indicators which detracted from the gain were a change in the growth of credit and in the time it takes companies to fill orders.

Analysts cautioned about reading too much into the latest increase.

The government reported last week that overall economic growth bounced back somewhat to a rate of 2.8 percent for the final three months of this year.

Agency bans 'happy hours'

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Alcoholic Beverage Commission, trying to curb Texans from gulping cut-rate drinks, has banned two-for-one "happy hours."

"Some retailers of alcoholic beverages were getting carried away," said TABC Administrator W.S. McBeath. "The practices we are banning tend to encourage very rapid consumption."

The rules, announced Thursday and effective immediately, bar two-for-one happy hours, but do not prohibit selling doubles for the price of singles or offering half-price drinks.

An Abilene lawmaker on Thursday filed a bill that would ban all happy hours and contests involving drinking. Rep. Gary Thompson said his bill is patterned after a recently approved Massachusetts law.

"This legislation is aimed squarely at one of the major causes of traffic accidents — overindulgence encouraged by restaurants and bars," he said.

Texas Restaurant Association Vice President W.H. "Buckshot" Price said the TABC rules announced Thursday are "inadequate and confusing." He complained that the ban does not cover "the more potent drink and drown" nights, free drinks and nickel beer.

The rules bar only the sale of "two or more containers of alcoholic beverages for the price of one."

"TRA maintains that action taken by the TABC will not eliminate the problem because it focuses only on the sale of alcohol through bars and restaurants and fails to consider alcohol abuse which takes place in schools, cars, homes and the workplace," said Price.

Joe Darnall, McBeath's assistant, said two-for-one promotions "appeared to be the area where action seemed to be needed."

The rules are not intended to "regulate prices or get into price-fixing," he said.

Darnall said doubles and triples for the price of a single were not banned because "that has not been the same sort of problem we've had with multiple containers."

"It's not the price, it's the number of drinks," said Darnall. "Where you've got multiple containers as part of the deal, then the customer says, 'Yes, I'll have a drink' and he ends up suddenly with two or three."

The rules are aimed at reducing "the extremely rapid consumption our agents have observed," he said.

McBeath said the new rules come under the commission's ban on "giving an inducement with the sale of alcoholic beverages." The commission also can restrict businesses "conducted in a manner contrary to the public welfare," he said.

One Austin bar owner said he likes the new rules.

"We'll still serve doubles" for the price of a single drink, John Benavidez said through a spokesman. "That's fine with us. It saves on washing glasses."

Benavidez is an owner of Casablanca's, which features a three-hour happy hour.

Psychics strike out

Pire predictions of forecasters fail to materialize

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California hasn't slipped into the ocean. No lightning bolt has struck Mr. T. And Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has yet to elope to Europe with his secretary.

None of these non-happenings surprised Robert Sheaffer, a skeptic who says the nation's psychics generally struck out in this year's spiritual game with dozens of predictions that haven't come true.

"It never ceases to amuse me some of predictions that are made — and how short people's memories are," said Sheaffer, a member of the Bay Area Skeptics, a group that since 1982 has traced the track records of psychics' annual prognostications.

Presuming the final four days of 1984 don't prove the psychics correct after all, this year's predictions were dismal, but no worse than other years, Sheaffer said Thursday. "1983 was quite terrible, too. This kind of thing happens every year."

For example, Jeanne Dixon of Washington, D.C., predicted that Fidel Castro's agents would take over two small Latin American countries, that drug scandals would leave the "outcome of the Olympic games in doubt" and that Richard Burton was "very likely" to step back into Elizabeth Taylor's life.

"She somehow failed to predict Burton's death," Sheaffer said. "They never seem to do too well with specifics like that."

"Some psychics are experts at being vague," Sheaffer said. "Jeanne Dixon is the best of these. She might say, 'Nancy Reagan is entering a time of great crisis.' That's a great prediction because it says nothing. It's bound to be true."

Dallas psychic John Catchings predicted Kennedy would elope; Miami psychic Micki Dahne predicted that Mr. T would be struck by lightning attracted to his gold jewelry; and local psychic Barbara Mousalam foresaw an assassination attempt against President Reagan on the campaign trail in October.

"People say, 'What about the serious psychics?' Well, these are the serious psychics," said Sheaffer, adding that psychics use publicity from their annual predictions to attract customers for private readings that cost as much as $300.

But even Sheaffer admits the tellers of the future occasionally were on the mark.

For example, Ms. Mousalam predicted a woman would run for vice president on the Democratic ticket. However, journalist Jack Anderson made the same prediction in a Parade magazine article, he said.

"Most people can do as well by guessing. And a lot of the predictions could be made by anyone who reads the newspaper," Sheaffer said.

Bush will go to bat for Texans: Boulter

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Vice President George Bush has promised to petition President Reagan for a meeting between the president and Texas oilmen furious over the administration's proposed tax-reform plan, U.S. Rep-elect Beau Boulter says.

Boulter, R-Amarillo, told reporters at a press conference Thursday he had pressed Bush during a trip to Texas earlier in the week aboard Air Force II.

"I explained (to Bush) that, as the vice president should well understand being from Texas and an oilman himself, our energy independence is too important to tax our new domestic production out of existence," Boulter said.

Bush agreed to urge the president to meet with independent oil and gas producers, Boulter said.

"The vice president acknowledged that President Reagan himself should hear the concerns of the independent oil industry over this plan," Boulter said.

"With the vice president going to bat for us, I think we'll see that meeting with the president occur in the near future," he said.

If adopted, the president's proposed tax plan would deal a "death blow" to the independent oil and gas operators in Texas, Boulter said.

"It could be just about the last nail in the coffin," Boulter said in a press conference sponsored by the North Texas Oil and Gas Association.

A spokesman with Bush's office in Washington confirmed Thursday that Boulter had been on the vice president's jet for the trip but said he had no knowledge of what issues were discussed.

Boulter said he found Bush "very receptive to the problem the independent oil industry might face if tax plans were passed as written."

He said he had stressed that the new tax program would not leave in place any of the tax advantages for capital investment in exploratory "wildcat" wells that currently exist.

Bush was unavailable for comment Thursday night.

Wanderer to get respect after death

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decorated World War II hero who froze to death three weeks ago in a park facing the White House was being buried today in Arlington National Cemetery, honored in death with respect that eluded him during the last 20 years of his life as a homeless wanderer.

Jesse Carpenter, 61, apparently homeless since leaving his wife and family in 1962, froze to death in Lafayette Square, a park across the street from the White House that has become a gathering place for the homeless in the nation's capital.

Carpenter's body was found in the sub-freezing chill on Dec. 5 by U.S. Park Police. Aside from his clothing, his only protection from the cold was the warmth of his friend and fellow street person, wheelchair-bound John Lam, 59, who was found huddled near the veteran's body.

Carpenter's ashes were to be placed in the National Cemetery's columbarium, which holds the cremated remains of some 3,300 other service personnel.

A brief service was scheduled and the Community for Creative Non-Violence, a Washington-based homeless rights group, said it planned to take a busload of homeless people, many of them Carpenter's friends, to the ceremony.

Lam said he planned to attend the funeral. He told reporters in the park Thursday that Carpenter took care of him, pushing his wheelchair to soup kitchens, shelters and public restrooms.

"I knew him (Carpenter) 20 years," Lam said. "I met him drinking (on the streets)."

Carpenter, who entered the Army in September 1943 in Indiana, was awarded the Bronze Star in 1944 in Brittany, France. According to the award certificate, the Army private made three trips carrying the wounded to an aid station 400 yards from the fighting, "braving the unabated fire."

Police seeking witnesses to accident

Pampa police are looking for witnesses to last Friday's fatal traffic accident involving a Department of Public Safety patrol car and a car carrying three Pampa residents.

The wreck happened about 6:25 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Hobart Street and 17th Avenue.

Police have asked anyone who saw the accident or has information about it to call Lieutenant J.D. Laramore at 669-7407.

The patrol car is a marked, black and white DPS unit, a 1984 Ford Mustang. The patrol car has emergency warning lights in the front grille, not the "cherry tops" lights installed on the top of many police cruisers.

The DPS car, its emergency lights and siren on, was traveling at a high rate of speed in pursuit of two speeding vehicles on North Hobart, when it collided with a red orange 1983 Ford Thunderbird, authorities said.

The Thunderbird, driven by Candice Ruth Smith, 35, of 1801 Lea, was southbound on Hobart and attempted a left turn onto 17th in front of the northbound DPS unit, according to initial police reports. The patrol car, driven by Pampa trooper Johnny Carter, slammed into the Smith vehicle on the passenger's side, the reports say.

Mrs. Smith sustained serious injuries in the accident and died the next day. Her husband, William Smith, 40, and daughter, Andrea, 13, both passengers in the car, also sustained serious injuries but have since improved to satisfactory condition.

Trooper Carter was treated and released for his injuries.

Police also are seeking information about the two reported drag racers whom Carter said he was pursuing on North Hobart at the time of the collision with the Smiths' vehicle.

Polish officer claims superior implicated in murder of priest

TORUN, Poland (AP) — The trial of four secret police officers charged in the killing of a pro-Solidarity priest resumed today with one of the defendants continuing testimony about alleged involvement in the crime by his superiors.

A Polish radio report said Lt. Leszek Pekala returned to the witness stand as the trial entered its second day.

Pekala testified Thursday that he was told he had "the agreement of his superiors" to kidnap the priest, the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, and would be protected even in the event of the priest's death.

The Oct. 19 killing of Popieluszko, a staunch defender of the outlawed independent trade union Solidarity, shocked Poland's predominantly Roman Catholic population.

The impact of the priest's death was so severe that it led Communist authorities to take the unprecedented step of placing secret police officers on trial for the crime.

The official Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu commented today that the trial indicated the authorities' determination to reveal all the circumstances of the priest's killing.

The trial "demonstrates that every Polish citizen will answer for his misdeeds before an independent court if he commits a crime, because there is only one measure of justice and accountability for crimes which incur even the death penalty," Trybuna Ludu said.

During his testimony Thursday, Pekala was asked to name the "superiors" and he initially said he could not. Later, however, he testified that on several occasions one of the defendants — Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski — mentioned support from a third defendant, Col. Adam Pietruszka.

The defendants — Pekala, 32, Piotrowski, 33, Pietruszka, 47, and Lt. Waldemar Chmielewski, 29 — all work for the Interior Ministry, which controls Poland's uniformed and plainclothes forces — but they were handcuffed and wore civilian clothes in court Thursday.

The indictment — which took 90 minutes to read aloud — charged that Piotrowski, Chmielewski and Pekala abducted and killed the priest the night of Oct. 19. It also charged the three officers with the attempted murder of the priest's driver and the attempted murder of Popieluszko on Oct. 13, when they allegedly threw stones at the priest's car.

Polish authorities issued six passes Thursday to the trial to Western correspondents but did not grant one to The Associated Press, citing a lack of space. Correspondents who attended the trial provided the AP with their notes and described the proceedings in the courtroom.

The trial of the secret police officers is unprecedented in this Communist country.

Mama

Mallon said that since writing to Pampa officials, he tried to write to Mama's latest address, but to no avail. Mallon, who does business with both Turkish and Greek Cypriots, reports that the turmoil has eased in 10 years.

"If there could be some element of trust, there could be a possibility of reunion, (between the two factions)" he said. "I read in The London Times that your president Reagan is putting pressure on Turkey to help solve the conflict."

She must have been a wonderful person because the Harvester book is full of accolades, good wishes and compliments from many pupils that year," he noted. "You must have a lovely community."

Ranchhands found dead

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — Authorities today sought two illegal aliens suspected in the stabbing deaths of two other aliens whose bodies were found on a ranch 35 miles north of here.

All four men worked at the Christmas Tree Ranch in northern Uvalde County.

Officials said they are Mexican nationals and undocumented aliens.

The identities of the dead men were not immediately released, pending notification of next of kin. Sheriff Kenneth Kelley said one man was 29 and the other 39.

Kelley said officers theorize the stabbings occurred after a fight in or near a trailer the four men occupied.

"It could have been a big fight. There was a large area covered with blood," he said.

One body was discovered on the ground, the other lying across the seat of a pickup truck parked within 50 feet of the trailer, the sheriff said.

Survey group of clergy approves unmarried sex

HOUSTON (AP) — Only 40 percent of a group of Christian and Jewish teachers and counselors surveyed say they believe it is immoral for an unmarried man and woman to have sex and 16 percent did not think adultery is wrong.

G. Sidney Buchanan, a University of Houston law professor who is an expert in constitutional law, also found that nearly half the approximately 500 people who answered his survey believe homosexual relations are not immoral.

The findings, released this week, were based on questionnaires sent to 950 faculty members of religious departments in colleges throughout the United States and counselors chosen statistically at random from the Directory of The American Association of Pastoral Counselors. Fifty-one percent of the questionnaires were returned, Buchanan said.

"Of those who responded, nearly all were clergy in the sense of having a doctor of divinity degree," he said. "Theology was their major area of study."

Buchanan characterized their responses as "moderately liberal but not wild-eyed liberal."

Buchanan, along with one of his students, Mark Johnson, conducted the survey from the fall of 1982 to the spring of 1983. He previously has researched government aid to parochial schools and religion in public schools.

"Our main idea was that there has developed in constitutional law the right of privacy," Buchanan said. "We were intrigued what would be the attitude of theologically oriented people toward the morality of sexual conduct outside of marriage and their attitude toward the regulating of that sort of conduct."

"We thought that group was an important part of what you might call the Judeo-Christian heritage."

The survey also found:
—75 percent thought adultery was morally wrong; 16 percent did not consider it wrong. The remainder were not certain.

—87 percent did not believe adultery should be a crime.

—91 percent believed the government should not regulate sex between homosexuals.

—53 percent thought the legal system should limit marriage to opposite sex couples.

—71 percent would approve a male homosexual teaching elementary school.

Of those who responded, nearly 17.7 percent listed themselves as Roman Catholics, 14.9 percent were Methodists, 12.6 percent were Baptist and 11.5 percent were Presbyterian. Others included teachers and counselors in the Church of Christ, Lutherans, Episcopalians and Jews.

The average age was 48 and 87 percent of those responding were males. The questions did not include whether those surveyed ever were involved in homosexual or extramarital relationships, Buchanan said.

The law professor's research indicates 29 states and the District of Columbia have laws barring at least some forms of private sexual conduct between consenting adults.

"From a legal viewpoint, if there's any trend, it is moving in the direction of lessening of governmental restraints, particularly on the criminal side," Buchanan said. "Since 1970, some 20 states have decriminalized private sexual conduct between consenting adults."

But he said in civil law, covering areas like employment, adoption and child custody, "there do remain significant government restraints on sexual conduct outside of marriage and probably the power of government will continue."

The Supreme Court, meanwhile, "has not spoken conclusively" on sexual conduct regulations, he said. "For example, a lower court upheld a Virginia law making the practice of homosexuality a crime and the Supreme Court indicated it agreed with the law, but issued no written opinion."

Mexican political protestors block international bridge

EAGLE PASS, Texas (AP) — For the second day in a row, Mexican protestors blocked the international bridge between Eagle Pass and its sister Mexican city, Piedras Negras, preventing vehicles from crossing, authorities said.

The blockade, which began late Wednesday, forced some American tourists to abandon their vehicles in Mexico or drive several miles out of their way to cross the border, according to James Bazemore, an inspector with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Eagle Pass.

Leaders of the Partido Accion

Nacional called for the blockade to draw attention to what they claim was voter fraud during the Dec. 2 mayoral election in which a candidate from the established Partido Revolucionario Institucional was declared the winner.

PAN claims it won the election by 490 votes out of 23,000 votes cast, even though the candidate was given the victory by 183 votes. Protestors have vowed to continue the blockade until the PAN candidate is formally recognized as the winner.

The newly elected mayor is scheduled to be inaugurated Jan. 4. The blockade began about 4 p.m.

Wednesday and resulted in a complete shutdown of the bridge to vehicle traffic, Bazemore said Thursday.

American tourists were forced to drive to Del Rio about 60 miles away to bring their vehicles back across, Bazemore said.

Members of a wedding party had to walk across the bridge, and during a funeral procession, a casket had to be carried into Mexico on a gurney instead of in a hearse, officials said.

Protestors began blocking entry points to the bridge after the elections, Bazemore said, but never for 24 hours straight.

State health agency to seek Medicaid cost reductions

AUSTIN (AP) — A "major effort" to cut the cost of health care for the poor and disabled is under way at the Department of Human Resources, an official said.

J. Livingston Kosberg, the chairman of the department's board, said Thursday a special staff unit will propose ways to reduce costs in Medicaid in Texas.

Medicaid was established in 1967 to furnish medical assistance to disadvantaged families with dependent children and disabled whose incomes could not pay for health care.

More than 600,000 Texans at the poverty level are eligible for Medicaid, and two-thirds of the department's $2.3 billion budget goes for health services.

In an effort to reduce costs, human resources commissioner Marlin Johnston has established the Project on Health Care Policy Alternatives and charged it with examining every phase of Medicaid.

"A major effort is required to reduce expenditures," said Kosberg, Houston.

He said the department wants the staff to devise by January 1986 a new system of reimbursement for hospital care.

Johnston said, "Project staff have been directed to give priority attention to strategies to meet increasing Medicaid program costs and propose ways to reduce costs."

Here are some topics, as outlined by Kosberg and Johnston in a written statement, that the staff will review:

- Mandatory surgery in "appropriate outpatient settings."
- Prior authorization for selected services.
- Promotion of office-based medical care instead of more costly institutional care.

— Health Maintenance Organizations.

— Paying physicians a set amount and charging the physician with managing the entire health care needs of an individual.

Study shows Texas has 3rd largest alien concentration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas has the third largest concentration of illegal aliens living within its borders, a study shows.

The study by Courtenay Slater, a Washington consultant and former chief economist for the Commerce Department, showed that Texas had 186,000 illegal aliens, behind California's 1,024,000 and New York's 234,000.

Illinois was next with 135,000, and Florida had 80,000, the study said.

An analysis of the study indicated that illegal aliens are a big factor in the job market in many communities, but their impact may be more beneficial than has been suggested.

The base of low-income workers provided by illegals may well help attract industries to certain cities, and this can both create jobs by making companies more competitive and lower consumer prices, according to the study by Ms. Slater.

Her findings, based on data from the Census Bureau and other sources, appear in the January issue of American Demographics magazine.

"A common-sense interpretation of the Census data shows that the number of illegals is not as large or as threatening as believed," Ms. Slater wrote.

Many illegal aliens are men in the 15-to-35 age group, which makes them likely to be active in the job market, she reported. But rather than harming Americans they may have a positive impact on local economies, she said.

For example, she cited an Urban Institute study indicating that by providing an ample supply of low-wage labor, aliens helped attract industry and jobs to the Los Angeles area.

While she contended that the aliens do not take jobs from Americans, she did concede that their willingness to accept low-paying positions will tend to hold down pay in some areas.

This, however, must be balanced with the additional jobs generated by more competitive industries and the lower costs to consumers that result, she continued.

And since most aliens are employed, the taxes they pay more than offset the demand they place on government programs in most cases, she contended.

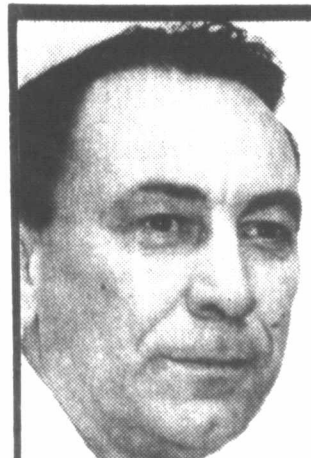

Assessing the impact of illegal residents has been complicated by the lack of accurate information in past years. Congress debated immigration reform legislation last summer but was unable to reach agreement on a bill during the highly charged political season.

Some estimates of the illegal alien total in this country have been as high as 12 million. But studies by the Population Division of the Census Bureau last year indicated a maximum illegal population of less than 4 million, and the 1980 national head count found only about 2 million at that time.

The Census didn't ask people whether they were in the country legally, but estimates were developed by comparing the number of foreign-born people found by the Census with the number of legal immigrants who had registered with the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Drinking age plan unfair

I do not doubt that our state senator, Bill Sarpalus, means well. But his announced intention to try and raise the legal drinking age in Texas to 21 disturbs me.

I am not disturbed because it would affect me personally. You can look at the photo above this column and tell that I would not be affected if he raised it to over 40. (I will not say how far above 40 he would have to go before I was affected.)

One of the main things that bothers me is that approval of the law would place restrictions on a lot of people who haven't done anything that under any system of justice deserves restrictions.

The proposed law is designed to keep those under 21 from driving cars while they are drinking. It probably would not accomplish that goal, but that is not my point. It would also place an undue restriction on anyone under the age of 21 who does not get drunk and drive cars. That is unfair.

If the objective of those who support raising the legal drinking age to 21 is to keep young drinkers out of cars, they could prohibit everyone under 21 from driving. Most everyone would agree that is unfair. But I can't see that much difference. Either would punish a lot of people who are not guilty of anything.

Some might suggest that stiffer punishment for anyone under the age of 21 caught drinking and driving might get the job done. But that wouldn't be fair either. Would it be justice to hand out stiffer punishment to a person simply because of his age? Of course not.

And what about those statistics that show the most dangerous drivers are those 24 and under. Would anyone propose that the legal drinking age or the legal driving age be raised to 24. Obviously not.

The problem with all these proposals is that they are aimed at groups of people rather than individuals. I think any law restricting the activities of a certain class of people is discriminatory. Any law, in my mind, must hold an individual responsible for his own actions and not be a blanket restriction on a group if it is to be considered just. I thought the civil rights laws established that principle.

Those who support raising the legal drinking age will probably tell you they have no other choice; that they can't think of any other way to keep teenage drinkers out of cars; and that if they don't pass the law, Big Uncle is going to withhold some of our precious highway funds.

But if our state legislators are going to allow the federal government to force them to pass unfair laws by threatening to withhold funds, I can't think of any reason for having a state government. Can you?

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Legalize delivery of nation's mail

Come February, it's going to cost you more to mail a first-class letter through the U.S. Postal Service. Predictably. Postal Service management is blaming higher labor costs for the need to increase prices. And, of course, the postal unions are blaming Postal Service management for the same thing.

But the real culprit—the one neither management nor the unions are eager to cite—is the Postal Service's guaranteed monopoly.

Are there ways to move the mail for less? Absolutely. It has been proved time and again. But each time that has happened, the Postal Service has gone running to the courts asking its government-protected monopoly status be upheld. And each time the courts have agreed, upholding the Postal Service's right to the inefficiencies and high costs that come with the absence of competition and putting the efficient private companies out of business.

What changes could competition induce in the present mail system. According to John Crutcher, a member of the Postal Rate Commission, they would come in two key areas: wage comparability and structure, and productivity.

According to the General Accounting office, postal wage increases have far outstripped those of other government employees. In a 1982 study, the GAO noted that in the first 10 years after postal reorganization, Postal Service employees received pay increases of 123 percent, while other federal employees with whom they were previously linked, received pay increases of only 70 percent.

In a 1981 study sponsored by the Postal Service itself, two professors at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business found that postal wages were one-third greater than wages in the private sector for equivalent levels of skills.

And productivity? Crutcher calls Postal Service figures for "gross productivity" just that—gross. He points out that they fail to take into account two major factors: the number of parcels handled relative to letters is declining, and an enormous amount of presorting is being done before the mail ever reaches the post office.

Crutcher says the gross productivity measure is so misleading that real productivity could actually decline from year to year, but the gross productivity measure would still show an increase.

What's the answer? Open up the Postal Service to competition from the very companies that have proved themselves so capable of undercutting the post office in the past.

Rather than a rate increase, the Postal Service Board of Governors should be clamoring for Congress to decriminalize private mail delivery. That's the only way mail consumers will ever get a break.

A case for South Africa

Anyone who doubts this, need only consider how skillfully the American Left has used the recent highly visible protests of South Africa's repugnant apartheid policy to shove the horrifying face of famine in Marxist-led African nations into the media background.

It is in no way to mitigate the moral degeneracy of South Africa's racial policies to point out that in the scale of human horrors it still falls far short of the economic genocide routinely practiced in the name of Karl Marx, from the jungles of Cambodia to the desert wastes of the African Horn.

Millions of Africans are starving today not primarily because of climactic conditions, but as a direct result of the dreadfully deliberate policies of their own central governments which have spent vast fortunes on armaments and on irrelevant but conspicuous infrastructure, even as they have systematically starved out their own basic food production resources.

Indeed, several of these countries are now using these precious agricultural resources to produce fancy cash crops for EXPORT to the luxury food trade in Europe and America, from strawberries to avocados, simply to generate the cash flow to pay off their vast indebtedness, mostly to Western banks.

Ironically, the noble American and European humanitarian relief efforts now underway, are propping up and possibly saving not only the wretched regimes responsible for this human tragedy, but the sickly loan portfolios of the major banks in the U.S. and Europe.

Worse, in Ethiopia, as columnist John Chamberlain recently observed, the Soviet Union may be reaping the propaganda and strategic rewards, since it is their warplanes that are finally distributing U.S. grain - and their "selective" distribution policy has turned this grain into a genocidal weapon against the government's considerable opposition.

No wonder America's own far Left has been so eager to shift the media spotlight away from the African Horn, and put it on Johannesburg, and on Bishop Tutu's well-orchestrated ascent to the Nobel ceremonies by way of the White House.

No reasonable freedom-loving American can or should ignore the impassioned pleas of this genuine patriot. But, at the same time, both the good bishop and the American people may well ponder the fact that black South Africans, despite their humiliating oppression, enjoy a level of economic and physical well-being virtually unmatched by any other African nation.

While simple and human subsistence and survival alone cannot compensate for the indignities of a racist society, they are, nevertheless, the prerequisites for real human reform. Indeed we are constantly reminded by folks such as Jesse Jackson that, as oppressive and tyrannical as Castro's Cuba plainly is, at least its people are now being fed, and their health needs met.

By that standard, alone, South Africa is utopian - when compared with all other African and Third-World governments. As statistics on fifty-eight major nations reported by the Population Reference Bureau show, the greatest national rise in life expectancy from 1975-1983 was in South Africa, which increased its longevity by a whopping nine years, nearly 50 percent more than the world as a whole in this period.

On virtually every vital statistic, South African blacks are not only far, far ahead of blacks in the rest of Africa, but their raw economic progress is more rapid than anywhere in the world.

What's more, if it were not for the relative advancement and economic vibrancy of the South African economy, at least two other Marxist African nations, Angola and Mozambique, would already have joined the ranks of the famine-imperiled, and Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe might not be far behind. Any action to dismantle, rather than reform, South Africa's economy would be suicidal for blacks.

Fortunately, for the world, as well as its own billion people, the world's most populous nation, China, has now formally recognized the utter bankruptcy of the same Marxist economic theories which so many American and African black leaders still espouse, and is rapidly moving its people toward modified market capitalism, and seeing its own standards of living soar, as a result.

On the same day that Jesse Jackson's daughter, Santita, and three far-Left members of Congress were arrested in Washington for picketing the South African Embassy with banners ablaze with limousine Leninisms, China's Communist party declared that it would be "naive and stupid" to cling to Marxist principles while seeking to modernize China. "We cannot use Marxist and Leninist work to solve our present-day problems," said the official People's Daily in its front-page commentary, adding, "Marx died 101 years ago."

Unfortunately, around the world, and especially in Africa, millions continue to die in Marx's name - in the name of centrally planned economies that routinely wreak economic holocausts against innocent people - and then blame them on the weather, or the U.S.

That, of course, is the real reason why South Africa's apartheid suddenly became public distraction number 1, and Ethiopia was permanently consigned to the Red Cross.

Sports replaces religion

I was cheering for Dallas Cowboys the other day when suddenly it occurred to me that the Dallas Cowboys aren't there anymore!

Roger Staubach isn't there anymore; he's selling Roloids.

Harvey Martin and Drew Pearson aren't there anymore; they're network announcers.

Billy Joe DuPree and Larry Cole and Pat Donovan and all the good 'ol boys who were 'The Cowboys' aren't there anymore.

There is not one present Cowboy player who was on that team 12 years ago.

So when we, out of loyalty, cheer for this year's Cowboys - for whom, for what are we cheering?

My home base city is Chicago. This year Chicago's Bears have their first division championship in 21 years.

Of course the Bears are not "the same team" now as then.

The player roster of every athletic team is a revolving door; the average for a player in the NFL is to stay with one team no more than 4 1/2 years.

So when we cheer for "The Bears," for whom are we cheering?

I hear people insisting, "I've been a Cubs fan all my life" or "I've been a Bears fan all my life."

Some who say that are not Chicagoans; live nowhere near Chicago; yet they profess a lifelong allegiance to a team - the members of which come and go so fast that last seasons' players are just as likely to be playing "against" as "for."

Intrigued by this "loyalty to nobody" I began asking around: "Why?" Here's how it appears:

From the halcyon days of each of us we identify with places that were through a soft, pink glow which flatters each. We remember the funtimes, the good friends, the sunny days in Wrigley Field and the back-slapping happy hours after.

And if team allegiances are less valid than in the days of the Yankees and the Bums - identification with any one affords a degree of continuity, a toehold on immortality. Immortality?

The Institute of Sports Medicine recently heard from psychiatrist Dr. J.A. Harrington that multiple media coverage has contributed to enhancing the significance of spectator sports to where for many "as a reason for being it has replaced religion."

...And the single-wing has disappeared

BY D.R. SEGAL

Something has happened to football.

For as long as I can remember, a football team consisted of: a right and left end, a right and left tackle, a right and left guard, one center, one quarterback, one right halfback, one left halfback, and one fullback. Is that 11? I think so. The center snapped the ball to the quarterback who ran, threw a pass to his ends or backfield men, or handed the ball off to a back who ran it. I remember.

Now, as nearly as I can understand O.J., we have pulling guards, tight ends (you could look it up!) cornerbacks, wideouts, strong - and weak - side linebackers, punt return men and wide receivers. Also there is something called a noseguard.

There are special teams to kick off, return kicks, throw passes, defend against passes, make goal-line stands, get short yardage and, for all I know, fetch Tom Landry's clothes from the cleaners. I know that, despite the new nomenclature, there still are 11 men on each team. The reason I know that - or think I do - is because teams sometimes are penalized for having only 10 men on the field.

Another difficulty I have with modern football is the constant reference to track records - thus "Hardy Zoftig, at 347 pounds, can run the 440 in 15.6 and bench press a ton and a half with one foot off the ground." All I get out of that is that Zoftig is one big mother. Football announcers on the TV also tell us how high or far a man can jump.

O.J.: "Hamhocks Slathers can broadjump 62 feet and 4 inches, Don."

Don: "He reminds me of an old boy who used to play for the Ponies at SMU, O.J."

Frank: "Hamhocks just bought his own Explorer Scout troop and gave it to his sister for her 16th birthday. Hamhocks is a quality person."

This sort of conversation generally crops up when a game is 87-6. The more "background" and "color," the worse the game. And when they begin to talk track it's a real bomb.

It is an exceedingly difficult game to follow anymore, filled, as it is, with free agents, first-round draft choices, Czechoslovakian field-goal kickers and fine-arts majors bent on mayhem. I went over to the newspaper office the other day to get a briefing from our sports editor but he wasn't in. I hope he has not lost his momentum.

Shuttle scrutiny yields to military secrecy

By HARRY R. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Until now, America's space shuttle program has been an open one, with the ships called Columbia, Challenger and Discovery as visible as postal trucks.

All that goes into sharp reverse in January when Discovery goes aloft carrying a payload the Air Force has gone to extraordinary lengths to keep secret.

The Air Force is trying the secrecy route, probably to set a pattern for the future. In October, the military will have its own shuttle launch pad at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California and will be using the shuttle frequently. Undoubtedly, the protection of future secret cargoes contributed to the attempt last week by the Pentagon to sidetrack news stories about the huge spy satellite aboard the January flight. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger talked with executives of some news organizations and when The Washington Post went with the story, he said it may have given "aid and comfort to the enemy."

The January launch will deposit into space what is believed to be the first of a new generation of powerful spy satellites. The United States has been looking for a way to monitor Soviet missile launches ever since the fall of the Shah of Iran deprived this country of a key spot from which to watch.

Without the military's interest, NASA would not have a space shuttle fleet today. Military uses for the shuttle always were a factor when the space agency went to Congress for money and military uses dictated the design of the ship.

Still, the NASA-Pentagon alliance is an uncomfortable one; openness versus secrecy is not the shuttle's ground track — the areas over which it was flying — be withheld during the flight lest the public think the mission was for reconnaissance. The advice was rejected.

According to the authoritative Aviation Week magazine, NASA established a board to prevent the release of "any pictures taken of potentially sensitive Soviet or other foreign areas and also to withhold, if necessary, any pictures taken over the U.S. and its allies that might show sensitive facilities friendly to the U.S."

An AP News Analysis

only discard. The shuttle was built to do away with expensive one-use rockets. But the military, impatient with shuttle launch delays, is shopping for 10 expendable satellite launchers.

Shuttle crews include civilian and military astronauts. But the Pentagon's flights will be made by military crews only and an elite team of military specialists has been formed to deploy, operate and refurbish defense payloads.

Within NASA, there has been debate whether pressure from the defense and intelligence communities is compromising its charter for free and open dissemination of data.

Last October, the shuttle Challenger performed radar photography over large parts of the globe as part of an Earth survey mission that was scientific in nature. The agency's own defense department division asked that the

Bargain hunters can expect some good January sales

By The Associated Press
The nation's retailers, overly optimistic about the Christmas selling season, are heading into January with overstocked shelves that not even holiday promotions could empty, economists and analysts say.

Christmas sales were below expectations, but retailers and industry watchers said Thursday that the overall results were upbeat.

"There is inventory to clean up in the whole industry and we'll all be doing the best we can to do it," said Bob Northam, senior vice president of J.C. Penney Co. "It's normally a very promotional time anyway."

David Wyss, an economist with the forecasting firm Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass., said, "We felt at the beginning of the season that retailers were too optimistic and it looks like we were right."

"This was a good Christmas. It wasn't a great Christmas," he added.

Toys 'R' Us Inc., for example, announced it had record sales for the November-December period but that comparable toy sales for the eight weeks were up only 3 percent over the same period last year.

"While these record Christmas season sales were good, they were below our aggressive sales plan," the Rochelle Park, N.J.-based specialty retail chain said in a statement.

Murderer goes to death with a wink

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — With a final wink to the nun who helped him through his last hours, a cocky Robert Lee Willie went to his death in the electric chair today as the parents of the 18-year-old woman he raped and murdered watched.

Willie, 26, winked at Sister Helen Prejean, his spiritual adviser and a death penalty opponent, but avoided eye contact with the seven other witnesses in the death chamber, including Elizabeth and Vernon Harvey, the mother and stepfather of the victim.

He was pronounced dead at 12:15 a.m. by Dr. Alfred Gould, said C. Paul Phelps, Secretary of the Department of Public Safety and Corrections.

"I would just like to say Mr. and Mrs. Harvey that I hope you get some relief from my death," Willie said in a statement 12 minutes before his death. "Killing people is wrong. That's why you've put me to death. It makes no difference whether it's citizens, countries or governments. Killing is wrong."

During trials and interviews Willie had expressed no remorse and said he had "lived a good life."

The Harveys showed no emotion but watched intently as Willie was strapped into the electric chair and was jolted by four alternating surges of 2,000 and 500 volts.

When Gould, coroner for West Feliciana Parish, pulled back Willie's white sweat shirt to check his pulse, he revealed tattoos of a woman and of the Grim Reaper carrying a knife and a burning hourglass.

Faith Hathaway, 18, was kidnapped, tortured, raped and then stabbed 17 times in 1980.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something in your column about grown children who choose to live at home. I am a widow with a large house and three grown children who live with me because their jobs are in this area, and so are their friends, their church and a university where they take advanced courses to enhance their careers.

Every day some busybody (usually a woman my age whose children have all left home) asks, "Why are your children still living at home?" Such astonishment is expressed that one would think there was something wrong with adult children living at home. My children tell me they often find themselves trying to justify their living at home, as though it were some kind of abnormal lifestyle.

We hope that one day they will all have homes of their own, but in the meantime, living together offers each of us financial and emotional support. Besides, there are four of us to share all the household chores, and that ain't bad.

A MOTHER WHO LIKES HER KIDS

DEAR MOTHER: When grown children want to live at home, and their mother wants them to, I would say it's an ideal arrangement.

Three cheers for you, Mother. (Make that four.)

DEAR ABBY: "Charlie's Pal" wrote to say that Charlie was hit by a car while crossing the street listening to music on his headset. So Charlie winds up in the hospital with two broken legs and a broken arm. "Charlie's Pal" told Charlie to sue the manufacturer of the headset for failing to warn the buyers that headsets could be dangerous if worn in traffic.

Abby, following that kind of logic, manufacturers of paper bags should be required by law to put a warning on their product stating that if the paper bag is worn over the head while walking in traffic—or operating machinery—it could cause serious injury or death. If we could only protect the fools from the world, we could have a world of fools.

DIK BROWN

DEAR DIK: I received a ton of mail on that one. Hear this from Chelsea, Mich.:

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine (I'll call him Charlie) was walking down the street reading your column when a car hit him. The driver said Charlie had walked against the light, right into the car's path. Now Charlie is all banged up.

If it hadn't been for your column, Abby, Charlie would have blamed himself for not paying attention. Instead, he hired a real sharp lawyer to sue you. After all, you should have put a warning in your column to let people know that it's dangerous to read "Dear Abby" in traffic. Right? Sorry.

ANOTHER CHARLIE'S PAL

DEAR ABBY: I have a crush on a guy. I'm 25 and he's 29. I felt that he was as attracted to me as I was to him, although he never asked me for a date.

I knew that your advice would be, "Tell him how you feel about him," so I did.

He told me that it would be a long, long time before he got into a new relationship after having broken up with his girlfriend of several years. (They broke up about a year ago.)

I'm afraid that if I'm not the one to change his mind, some other girl will. The only time I see him is when my friends take me to the club he belongs to.

Do you think I blew it? What should I do now?

DEAD END

DEAR DEAD: Do I think you blew it? Probably. Now, back off. The next move, if there is to be one, should be his.

Quiet is an elusive entity for a parent ... there's usually too much or too little of it. Too little quiet can send a parent's nerves to the red line. Too much often signals parental warning, because it means the kids are probably doing something they shouldn't, such as making mud pies in the philodendron.

I removed my measure of parental anxiety from the quiet times by designing this 9x14 inch fabric book that provides silent activities for small children; even for the little ones who can't read.

Each page in this book shows a different forest friend and activity. The activities are designed both to entertain and to help the child develop basic dexterity skills: button, snap, tie, hook, lace, open or close.

You can make a quiet book for a lucky little one using our fully illustrated plans. They include full-size, iron-on patterns for each page of the book, painting and color guides, a complete materials list, cutting and assembly diagrams, and easy-to-follow, step-by-step instructions.

The iron-on patterns provide both the figures and the text, and the color guide makes the painting as easy as paint-by-number. Clean-up's a breeze because acrylic paints require only soap and water.

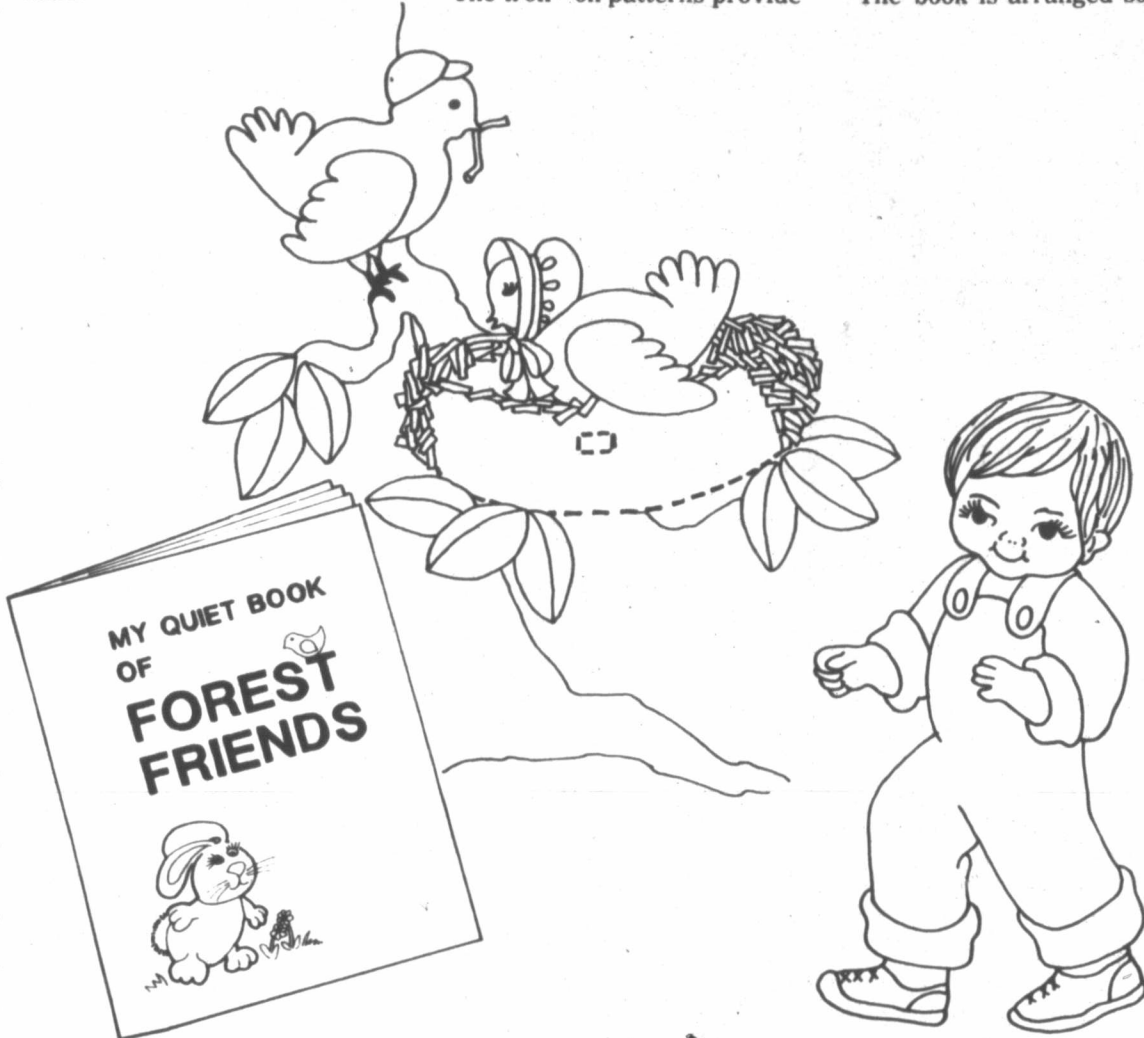

If you would like to order the plans, please specify project No. 1821-4 and include $3.95. Don't forget to order your copy of our new color catalog. It's only 2.95, and features hundreds of unique and useful fabric and wooden projects for you to make. Mail your order to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

The book is arranged so that the child can move a stuffed-fabric child through each page, as he helps the squirrel hide the acorns, button the bear's den door, hook the log for the fox, hide the baby rabbits in the rabbit hole, snap the green plants to the fish pond, and lace the bird's nest together.

The pictures are painted on eight fabric rectangles, which are placed back to back and then sewn together. Trim the edges of each page using pinking shears to prevent raveling.

The effort invested in making a cloth book is worthwhile because the pages won't tear (a sound that sends chills up an average adult's spine), and it can be washed when necessary ... try that with a paper book!

GLORIOUSLY SILENT ACTIVITIES for small children! Every parent's dream can be yours when you make this 9x14 inch fabric quiet book. Each page in the book shows a different forest friend and activity. The activities are designed both to entertain and to help the child develop basic dexterity skills: button, snap, tie, hook, lace, open and close.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

The New Year is just around the corner. Have you thought about a New Year's resolution? Welcome 1985 with a promise to yourself!

I would like to get at least two of my family lines back to Europe with proof connecting all the generations. This will require time and energy that I have not been spending on genealogy. If that is your goal, start with a definite plan.

Make a list of each generation including both husband and wife and the missing information. Positive proof of birth, death and descent must be acquired for each person to have a valid lineage.

Proof of birth might be a birth certificate. Many individuals born in the early 1900s have filed for a "delayed certificate" that might be available even if the state did not require registration until a later date.

Baptismal records or family Bibles are accepted in most cases as proof. Wills and other probate records often prove birth by wording "my daughter" or "the son of." Divorce proceedings that include custody of minor children would prove birth.

Death might be proven by a death certificate, tombstone, church records or an obituary. The local mortuary might have a record even if the grave is not marked. Several states have statewide cemetery listings that were compiled during President Roosevelt's administration. The family Bible of a cousin might have the information about your parents as well as aunts and uncles. Routinely ask if anyone has a family Bible. That is a good way to develop new contacts.

Often descent is the hardest to prove, especially in southern states that married a couple by "jumping the broom." Marriage license, banns and bonds might be available. Mistakes have been made by assuming a marriage took place because the license was obtained.

When dealing with the license, try to prove that it was recorded. Occasionally, the date of the license and the actual ceremony will be several months apart. Usually, however, it was the same day of three to seven days later.

As with birth and death, wills and land records often prove marriage. Pension applications and insurance policies are another source.

Be careful what you assume until positive proof is found.

May 1985 be the BEST for you!

Tips for taking medication safely

COLLEGE STATION — Elderly people who take medications may be tempted to crush or mix pills so they will be easier to swallow.

But not all medications can be safely treated this way, cautions gerontologist Dr. Judith Warren.

Some tablets are coated to conceal the unpleasant taste of the medication, prevent irritation of the mouth and esophagus, or to delay release of the drug, says Warren, a specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program.

Crushing a coated tablet immediately releases the drug and may cause a bitter taste in the mouth, stomach irritation and nausea. This may cause some elderly to avoid taking the medicine as prescribed, Warren says.

Drug overdose can also result since some preparations are designed with multiple coatings or beads that permit gradual release and slow absorption of the drug, cautions the specialist.

When time-release capsules are crushed or mixed with a liquid, a greater than normal amount of the drug is released and the symptoms of overdose or intense side-effects can occur, she adds.

Some elderly may prefer to mix their medication with milk or fruit juice, but this is not always safe either, says Warren. These liquids can alter the solubility and absorption of some drugs.

Since crushing or dissolving any medication can alter its effects, elderly patients or those who care for them should ask the pharmacist, doctor or nurse whether an alteration will be safe.

Boy living in nursing home has four dozen 'grandparents'

By ROBERT CADWALLADER
Waco Tribune-Herald
TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — It was inevitable. Weldon Jackson would be spoiled rotten.
The youngster, born with an underdeveloped esophagus and heart defects, has been showered with love and affection since coming to live with the senior citizens at Tutor Nursing Home four years ago.
And he has learned that anyone with four dozen grandparents can get about anything he wants.
"He's a little devil," said 73-year-old Johnnie Fisher. "He's spoiled. He does what he wants to do. But everyone loves him."
Recently, the nursing home residents and employees threw a birthday party for Weldon, who turned 5 years old. They gave him presents and even let him tear into his blue and white birthday cake with his fingers.

He didn't hear any of the praise. He is deaf, but doctors at Scott & White Memorial Hospital are hoping that additional surgery will help.
Already his health has improved dramatically, and senior citizens say a lot of the healing power has been in the warmth they give him.
"When he was a baby, he was just like a vegetable," said nursing home owner Alice Tutor, who considers Weldon one of her 20 grandchildren. "He couldn't move his hands or feet. He couldn't move his head. He was fed through a tube in his stomach.

"When he was 2 days old, he had a complete blood change. When he was 9 days old, he had open-heart surgery."
His father didn't want him, and he gave up his legal rights to the boy.
And the miracle soon began. It took only some wheelchair rides, free candy from adoring flower shop employees at the corner, early morning strolls and roughhousing with the more energetic residents to put life into the boy.
"He's come so far it's unbelievable," said J.T. Tutor, Mrs. Tutor's son and nursing home administrator. "I think 99 percent of it is because of all the attention he gets. There's not anything Weldon can do that there're not people cheering him on."

And now ABC's "Good Morning America" television program has contacted the nursing home about featuring Weldon on a show.
"He's got it made," Tutor said. Weldon seemed oblivious. He was more concerned about his presents. Wearing a "Return of the Jedi" belt, he fumbled with the gift wrappings.
Though he doesn't speak, he squealed with delight when he pulled a green rabbit from the wrapping paper. After unwrapping several children's books, he thumbed through the pages as though reading them.

He can't read, but some day he will, his fans promise.
Perhaps his best friend is Fisher — or "Mr. Fish," as the nursing crew calls him. And there he was at Weldon's side, helping him open the presents.
The honor of "No. 1 Grandparent" is sadly accepted by Fisher. The previous No. 1, George Tidwell, recently died.
"Weldon definitely liked him a lot," Fisher said.
Mrs. Tutor said they haven't told Weldon of the death, "but he's going to notice."
Someday Weldon will be adopted. The Department of Human Resources is screening couples who want him. But the idea is not a pleasant one around the nursing home.

"He's a good kid — of course, he's spoiled," said Stanford Fodge, 56, a 13-year resident. "I sure would miss him if he weren't here. He's what we have to live for."
One would think Weldon knows that.
"He knows who to go to to get anything he wants," Tutor said while giving Weldon his daily ride in the pickup truck. "He knows who has candy at their bedside tables. He knows who will take him on walks."
"He knows just about everything he has to know."

Growing Child: how a toddler learns to talk

Child development does not proceed evenly and smoothly. Children have spurts and plateaus in their maturation.
When they are starting to walk, their energy is needed for movement. During this time speech may not increase in frequency or fluency. In fact, there may be less speech for a time, says

Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter.
Once walking is well underway, a toddler redirects her energies toward speech development. She develops a gesture language to help out and convey her needs. She points, pulls you toward what she wants, screws up her face in different ways.

Between the first and the second year, a toddler's sentences are most often single words. "Ball" is likely to mean "I want the ball" and "more" is used to indicate "I want more."

At this point adults can help speech development by practicing "expansion." When the toddler says "Car," meaning "I want to go in the car," the parent can respond by repeating the word and developing the meaning into a full sentence. "Yes, we're going to ride in the car."
These expansions are made on the basis of various cues — what is going on in the toddler's life at the moment. Adults read the situation and provide the toddler with a proper sentence form for what she isn't yet able to express.
Just because a toddler only uses single words, we must not assume that her understanding is limited. Her comprehension exceeds her production of words, and this is generally true for the rest of her life.
Does she understand all the words in the sentence? No. She depends on a variety of cues, too.
If you say to her, "Would you like some juice?" she may go to the refrigerator where there is a container of juice. But she might have done the same thing if you had said "You don't like juice" or "Colorless red juice swings furiously."
"Juice is the significant word. She knows "juice" and associates it with the refrigerator. Separate words are not attended to."
In fact, up to the age of 10 a child rarely tries to understand each word — she simply incorporates what she hears into the general scheme of her perceptions at that time.

Other cues that a toddler uses for purposes of understanding are the tone and rhythm of your voice, body postures, facial expressions, and hand gestures. As adults in a foreign land, we may also find ourselves depending upon early types of learning such as these in order to understand unfamiliar language. In the same way, extra linguistic cues help a toddler understand what we say.
The Growing Child newsletter follows a child's development month-by-month from birth to six years old. For more information and a free sample newsletter, write to Growing Child, P.O. Box 620 N. Lafayette, Ind., 47902. Include child's birthdate when writing.

DEAR POLLY — If you thread needles for someone (or if someone does this for you), try this: Unwind 10 to 12 inches of thread from the spool. Don't cut off the thread. Thread several needles onto this length of thread, then rewind the thread and needles around the spool. Fasten the end of the thread to the spool. The person who's sewing will have several needles threaded and needs only to slide them along, keeping the remainder on the spool of thread as each is used.

Faith, politics fuss selected as top story

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The nation's election-campaign controversy over faith and politics, including arguments about abortion and the biblical end-time battle of Armageddon, was judged by religion news specialists as 1984's top religion story.

It featured a headline cast, the presidential aspirants, their political supporters and sundry religious figures.

In a poll of religion news reporters and editors across the country, conducted by the 200-member Religion Newswriters Association, 64 responded, voting that the campaign furor about religion was the top religious development.

It sparked discussions of beliefs from both President Reagan and his Democratic rival, Walter Mondale, and sideline fireworks from his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro.

She and two other New York Catholics, Bishop John O'Connor and Gov. Mario Cuomo, carried on a running feud about outlawing abortion, while other bishops urged broader life concerns. Several religious figures criticized Reagan for his professed interest in the biblical images of Armageddon.

But evangelicals overwhelmingly backed him, 66 percent of them according to a post-election Gallup poll, as did majorities of Protestants and Catholics.

The year's second-placed religion story, the release by Catholic bishops of the first draft of their strongly liberal pastoral letter on the U.S. economy urging more government help to the poor, also had political ramifications.

But the bishops had delayed its issuance until after the election.

In order of their ranking, as compiled by religion writer Wilmar Thorkelson of Minneapolis, these were other big religion stories of the year:

Third — The wave of violence by militant, homeland-demanding Sikhs in India following the storming of their Golden Temple, ensuing in the assassination of India's president, Indira Gandhi.

Fourth — Awarding of the Nobel Peace Prize to South African Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, an eloquent black critic of his country's race-separation system, later elected bishop of Johannesburg. The government concluded an investigation of the South African Council of Churches he had headed with no action against it.

Fifth — Congress voted down a school-prayer amendment backed by the Reagan administration, but passed an "equal access" law giving student religion groups the same rights to meet on school premises as other extracurricular clubs.

Married Catholic theologian backs pro-abortion stand

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Two FBI agents paid a visit to pro-choice Roman Catholic theologian Daniel C. Maguire one recent morning.

A letter bearing Maguire's forged signature had threatened the life of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun, who wrote the court's 1973 decision upholding the legality of abortion.

The agents told Maguire that they believed a radical anti-abortion group was responsible for the letter.

The Blackmun threat was not the first time that the Marquette University professor has been a target because of his views on abortion. Anti-Maguire picketers this September greeted parents of incoming freshman and distributed leaflets.

But the Catholic institution has upheld his academic freedom.

Maguire, 53, and his wife, Marjorie Reiley Maguire, also a theologian, believe that Catholic doctrine permits abortion in many instances.

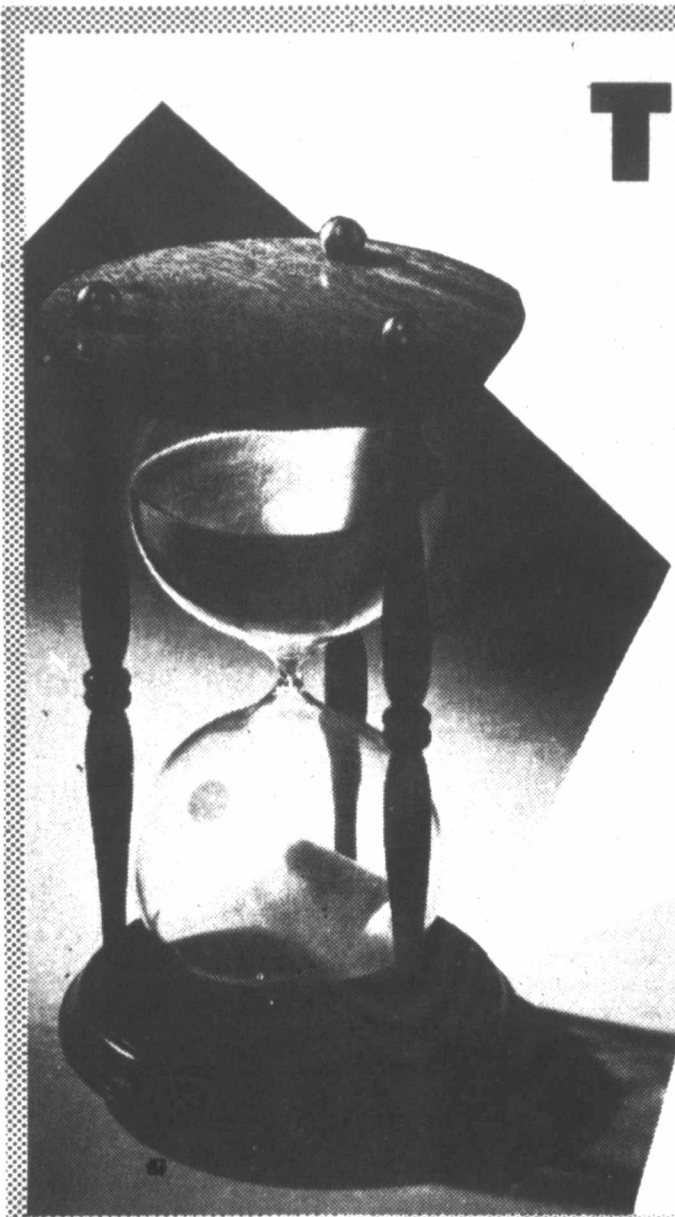

Maguire was the theologian Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was quoting when she said the church's position on abortion was "not monolithic."

The bespectacled, balding former priest reflected on his latest bout with controversy in an interview in his sparse monk's cell of an office on Marquette's campus.

"I think it's been a great advantage to my theology to be a married man and a father because I think that I can see this less abstractly than the priest theologians," he said.

"For one thing we had two children. The first one, Danny, died one year ago at age 10½ and he had an illness that we diagnosed at 22 months. So for 10 years we nursed a dying child. That's an experience of life that you don't get in a monastery."

TIME...

As the old year passes and the new begins, we are more conscious of time itself than we are at any other time of the year.

These are days when most everything is geared to a higher speed. Automobiles are faster, aircraft set new records. Production is speeded up to make the best possible product in the shortest time... but this is a good time to slow down and re-view the past and to make plans for the future. Think of the past, but only of how you can improve on it. Plan now for the future. Make sure that you will have time for the Lord this New Year. Start now to attend church, make it a regular habit.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Civilian court can try former military rulers

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's Supreme Court has ruled that civilian judges can hold public trials for nine former military junta members accused in the abduction, torture and killing of thousands of people during the 1970s.

The high court said the three-man Federal Court of Appeals acted properly in deciding to take control of the cases from a military tribunal that had failed to act in nine months.

The ruling issued late Thursday clears the way for trials before the appeals court that local news media liken to the Nuremberg war crimes trials of Nazis that followed World War II.

The defendants — three former presidents and six other former military commanders — had appealed to the Supreme Court, contending the charges involved actions in their capacity as military officials and that they could only be tried in military courts.

The high court, rejecting this appeal, said: "We are not dealing with the judging of military institutions as a whole, but only of those members that may have applied methods contrary to the most elemental ethical and judicial values."

"The defendants have the full guarantee for a proper trial" in the civilian court, the ruling said.

The defendants are accused of involvement in disappearance of at least 9,000 people during a campaign against leftist subversion by security forces in the late 1970s.

The nine include generals and admirals who made up three successive three-man juntas that ruled after a 1976 coup.

They are former presidents and army commanders Jorge Videla, Roberto Viola and Leopoldo Galtieri; former navy commanders Emilio Massera, Armando Lambruschini and Jorge Anaya; and former air force chiefs Orlando Agosti, Omar Graffigna and Basilio Lami Dozo.

President Raul Alfonsin ordered their prosecution three days after his Dec. 10, 1983, inauguration ended nearly eight years of dictatorship.

Libyan partition, drought ravage Chad

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Nine months ago this luckless nation reaped a bumper cotton crop and, behind a screen of French troops, was slowly recovering from a 19-year-long civil war.

Now Libyan troops have effectively partitioned the country, and a devastating drought has resulted in a third of its population going hungry.

"The Chad people are courageous and can surmount their problems, but only if the Libyans leave. There can be no major development while the war continues," said Ndikibeungar Bassounda.

Bassounda, director-general of the Ministry of the Struggle Against Natural Calamities, was referring to the several thousand Libyan troops who Western intelligence sources say hold northern Chad in violation of a mutual withdrawal agreement with France.

France has withdrawn its 3,500-member Operation Manta force; a contingent of soldiers from Zaire has also left.

"The Libyans have remained in good numbers and heavily armed. They have done their best to destroy the real hope this country had. Now it is the ultimate basket case," a senior Western diplomat said.

A U.S. Embassy economic report says Chad is "arguably the world's poorest country..."

The diplomat, who declined to be further identified, also said Libya was largely responsible for a recent upsurge of fighting in the country's largely Christian southern food-growing area.

The fighting combined with the drought has sharply cut food and cotton production, and several thousand famine deaths have been reported in the south.

At least 100 people are dying daily from the famine, mostly in the central Sahel region, and the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization estimates a third of Chad's 4.5 million people are going hungry.

The situation in the south cannot entirely be blamed on Libya, however. Amnesty International accused the mostly Moslem Chad army of massacring several hundred southerners in September and November.

The government of Moslem President Hissene Habre, which has split ministries evenly between Christian southerners and Moslem northerners, denied the charge.

The Western diplomat said, "Nobody relieves the government of a good deal of responsibility for what happened in the south."

The diplomat said a government drive to persuade several anti-government commando groups to turn in their arms had scored some successes in the last year and enabled the country to produce West Africa's biggest cotton crop.

But insurgents who turned in their weapons received payoffs, and "the Libyans had more money than the government. They also have airdropped supplies," the diplomat said.

Still, there are signs of hope in the capital, which probably holds the world record for the town most riddled by small-arms fire.

An open-air Mass was celebrated Christmas Eve in N'djamena's Roman Catholic cathedral. It was the first Mass in the church since the roof was blown off in "les evenements" of 1980. "The events" is the phrase used here to describe the nine-month battle between Habre's forces and the Libyan-backed Goukouni Oueddei for the capital.

Habre was defeated, but when Libyan forces pulled back, his troops easily recaptured N'djamena in June 1982.

Oueddei's forces returned with Libyan help but French soldiers intervened to block them in northern Chad in August 1983. A new Oueddei offensive appears highly unlikely, barring direct Libyan support.

Habre's government has been credited by Western diplomats and relief agencies with working hard to combat the famine and rebuild Chad.

The country's limited revenues, only $23 million in 1984, rule out any major development programs of its own. It requires major aid from France and other Western nations just to meet its budget of $37 million.

It's a paltry sum for a country twice the size of Texas with only 157 miles of paved road. Most transport, industry and roads were destroyed or fell into disrepair due to lack of maintenance because of the war.

OPEC hoping for full agreement on oil

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC ministers reconvened today hoping to formally approve an unprecedented plan to monitor each member nation's production and pricing — a last-ditch bid to stop a tailspin in world oil prices.

Twelve of the 13 OPEC nations tentatively agreed to the proposal on Thursday. The 13th member, Nigeria, a major OPEC producer that has suffered from steadily falling prices and strayed from cartel policy as a result, was expected to declare its position today.

Nigerian Oil Minister David Tam-West showed up late and missed the meeting Thursday at which the consensus on the enforcement plan was reached.

Ecuador's delegation expressed opposition to the plan earlier in the day, but changed its mind after consultation with its government, according to Oil Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti of Venezuela.

Chances of the plan's success do not hinge on Ecuador, a small producer. But the decision of Nigeria, one of OPEC's biggest producers, will be crucial. Nigeria, seeking to bolster sagging sales in a time of slackened demand for oil, has not indicated which way it will lean.

OPEC's members are Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Libya, Kuwait, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

Auburn slips by Hogs

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The big play — only a fingertip away for Arkansas — became reality for Auburn and halfback Bo Jackson, whose 40-yard, fourth-quarter touchdown run gave the 16th-ranked Tigers a 21-15 Liberty Bowl victory.

Despite four pass interceptions by the Auburn secondary — one turned into a 35-yard TD run by cornerback Kevin Porter — Arkansas, 7-4-1, came within a whisker of capping its 1984 season with an upset victory Thursday night at Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium.

After seeing an early 3-0 lead turned into a 14-3 first-quarter deficit on a 2-yard run by Jackson and Porter's TD return, the Southwest Conference Razorbacks gave Auburn and Coach Pat Dye everything they expected and a little more before becoming the Tigers' ninth victim in 13 starts.

"They did exactly what we thought they'd do, and they did it well," Dye said. "The only thing that beat Arkansas is four turnovers."

The Razorbacks put on a determined rally in the fourth quarter, scoring on a 2-yard run by fullback Marshall Foreman with 11:56 remaining to cut the Southeastern Conference Tigers' lead to 14-9. Then they came within one play of possibly taking home the trophy.

That play, on fourth-and-one from the Tiger 46, saw Arkansas halfback Bobby Joe Edmonds drop a sure touchdown pass from quarterback Brad Taylor in the open at the Tiger 15.

Five plays later, Jackson, who gained 88 yards on 18 carries and was named the game's MVP, slithered through the hands of the Razorback defense at the Arkansas 38 and raced into the end zone with the deciding touchdown.

"We went for it all on fourth-and-one," said first-year Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield. "We felt the play would be open. If we scored, it would put us ahead and would force them to throw the ball late in the game when they were tired."

Edmonds said it was a case of "being too open."

"It was a lack of concentration. It looked like the pass would be long, then I thought I'd have to dive for it. Then the ball was there and I knew I was in trouble when I felt it go off my hands and into the air," said Edmonds, who set a Liberty Bowl record for pass receptions with 10, covering 68 yards.

After Jackson's scoring run, the Razorbacks got a 25-yard TD pass from Taylor to split end James Shibest with 3:10 remaining, but could not move past their own 45 as the clock ran out on their final possession.

"I told our team they would have to fight and scratch the whole game if they were to beat Arkansas, and that's exactly what they did," Dye said.

Gator Bowl kicks off tonight

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Oklahoma State has prospered under Rusty Hilger's leadership, but the senior quarterback isn't one to rest on past laurels.

"In playing the game of football, you have to have a short memory," says Hilger, who'll lead the ninth-ranked Cowboys against No. 7 South Carolina in the 40th annual Gator Bowl tonight. "We can't expect what's happened in the past to help us. We've got to be mentally and physically prepared."

Hilger, the Cowboys' all-time passing leader, is the first quarterback to guide Oklahoma State to three straight post-season appearances and the Big Eight school has compiled a 19-8 record with him as a starter.

On Thursday night, Bo Jackson rushed for two touchdowns to lead No. 16 Auburn past Arkansas 21-15 in the 26th annual Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn. The triumph left Auburn, which was ranked No. 1 in the preseason poll, at 9-4 while Arkansas ended 7-4-1. Jackson scored on a 2-yard run in the first quarter and then galloped 40 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown that gave the Tigers a 21-9 lead.

A victory over South Carolina would give the 9-2 Cowboys their first 10-victory campaign in history and relieve a bit of the pain lingering from a 24-14 loss to Oklahoma that cost the team the Big Eight championship and an Orange Bowl berth.

South Carolina hopes to end its most successful season ever with the school's first bowl victory.

"We want to make history... win it for the people back home in Columbia," said All-American linebacker James Seawright, leader of the Gamecocks' Fire Ants defense. "It's very important to us."

South Carolina, which cracked the Top Twenty four weeks into the season and eventually climbed to No. 2, will carry a 10-1 record into the 8 p.m. EST contest, which will be shown on ABC-TV.

No. 20 Wisconsin and Kentucky meet Saturday in the Hall of Fame Bowl in Birmingham, Ala. (8 p.m., WTBS).

Wisconsin went 7-3-1, led by quarterback Mike Howard. Kentucky, 8-3, has a strong defense anchored by linebacker Cam Jacobs.

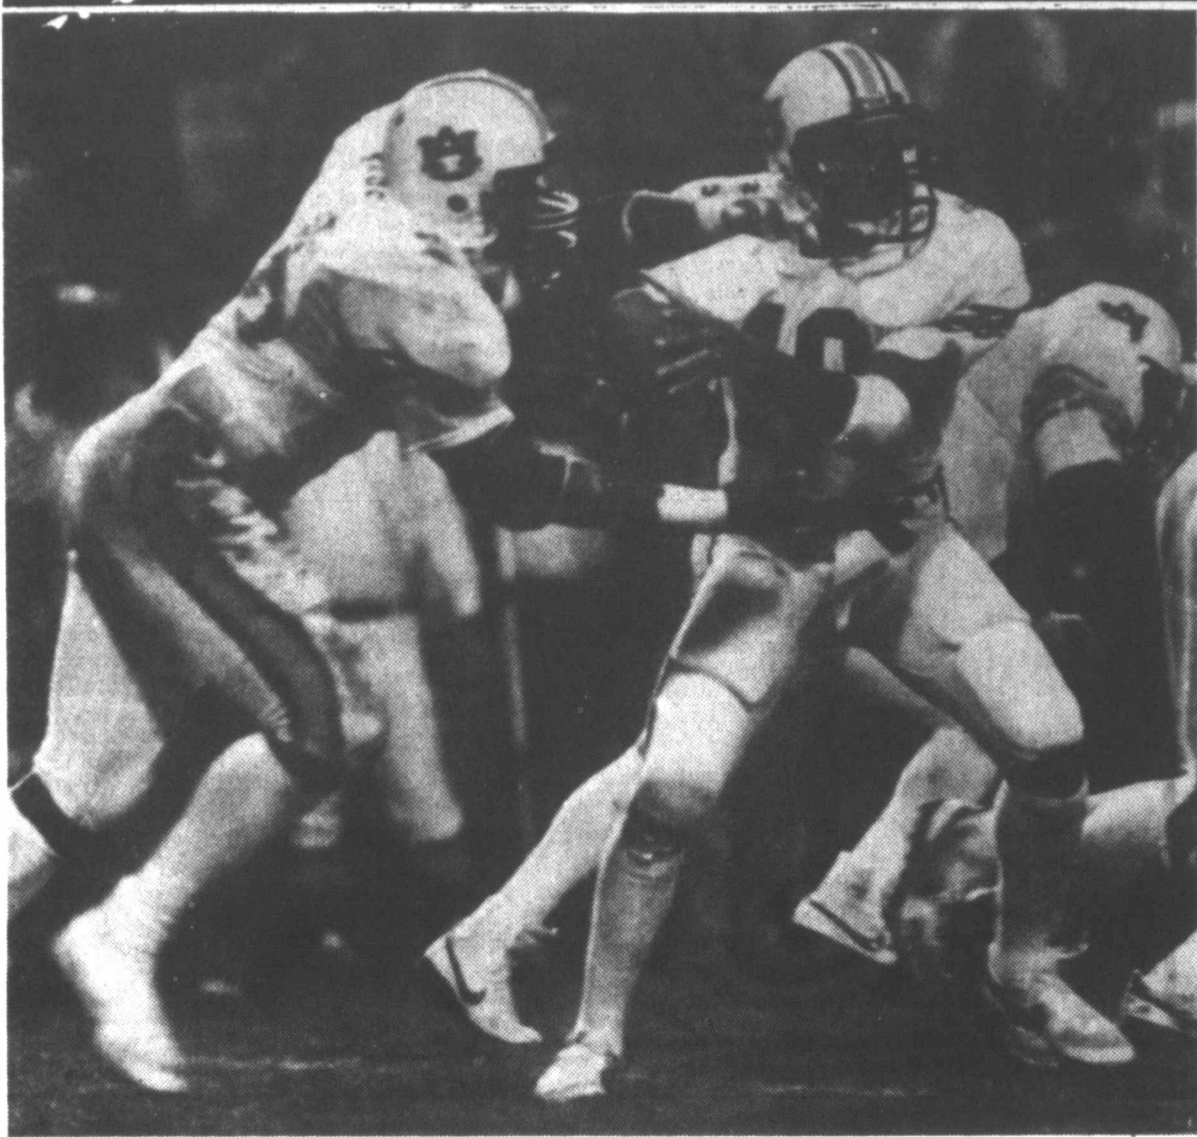

Howard completed 163 of 285 passes for 1,924 yards and 10 touchdowns this season.

Says Jacobs: "A lot of teams have come out throwing against us, but no one has ruled the skies."

The game will mark Kentucky's second bowl trip in three seasons under Coach Jerry Claiborne. The Wildcats fell to West Virginia 20-16 in last year's Hall of Fame Bowl.

The Aloha Bowl, featuring No. 10 Southern Methodist against No. 17 Notre Dame, also is scheduled for Saturday in Honolulu (8 p.m., ESPN).

SMU, 9-2, won its last five games while Notre Dame, 7-4, overcame a shaky start in winning its last four.

Harvesters edge Ft. Worth Nolan, Pampa girls win tourney opener

FORT WORTH — Dunivan Lewis hit a driving layup after a steal to give the Pampa Harvesters a 50-48 win over Fort Worth Nolan Thursday in the opening round of the Fort Worth Lions Club Tournament.

Lewis' shot came just before the final buzzer sounded to lift the Harvesters' record to 11-3 for the season.

The Harvesters played Fort Worth Mansfield in second round action Friday morning.

The score was tied a dozen times in Thursday's opener and the Harvesters never had the lead in the second half until Lewis' game winner. Rodney Young topped the Harvesters in scoring with 18 points while Petey Davis finished with 14. Lewis followed with eight, while Jeff Gaines had six, Richard Rogers and John Tarpley, two points each.

Eric Trumphower led Nolan with 16 and John Douglass chipped in 12. Nolan led twice by six points in the first and third quarters, while Pampa never had more than a two-point advantage.

Pampa's Lady Harvesters also won their tournament opener at Slaton, defeating Roosevelt, 53-36, Thursday.

Pampa led by only three, 27-24, at halftime, but outscored Roosevelt, 20-10, in the third quarter on the way to the lopsided victory.

Kerri Richardson scored 16 points and pulled down a dozen rebounds to lead the Lady Harvesters. Sandee Greenway followed with 13 points. Melissa Nichols and Rogina Fly had eight points each. Jackie Reed had six and Melanie Morgan had two. Reed and Nichols had eight and seven rebounds respectively.

McCallister, Sherrell and Harmon had 10 points each for the losers.

Pampa (5-5) plays Sweetwater in quarterfinal action today.

Quarterbacking duo part of Horned Frogs revival

HOUSTON (AP) — There were times when Texas Christian's quarterbacking tandem of Anthony Sciaraffa and Anthony Gulley weren't certain they'd be a part of the Horned Frogs revival.

"I honestly thought several times that I'd just be here to help get it started and the real success would come later," said Gulley, a senior. "I just wasn't sure it could happen this year."

But it did happen. The Horned Frogs, 1-8-2 in 1983, battled into the top 20, posted their first winning season since 1971 and will play in a bowl game for the first time since 1965 Monday night in the 26th Bluebonnet Bowl against West Virginia.

"It's nice to go out a winner after being here for four years," Sciaraffa said. "We've had so many close games the last two years, so many games we'd lose by one point. We were on the one-yard line last year against SMU and we didn't score to win with two minutes left."

Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker hasn't decided whether he'll open with Sciaraffa or Gulley against the Mountaineers in the 7 p.m. CST New Year's Eve matchup.

"All I know at this point is his name is Anthony," Wacker said of his senior duo that has split playing time this season. "But they don't get uptight about who is going to start. They know that both will play."

Sciaraffa earned the starting job for TCU's season opener but was sidelined with a sprained ankle in the first quarter.

Gulley came on to take full advantage of his chance, directing the Frogs to seven touchdowns over the next two quarters in a 62-18 victory over Utah State.

The shuttle system has been going on all year with Wacker going with the hot handed quarterback to lead the Frogs to one of the nation's biggest turnaround seasons after a 1-8-2 finish in 1983.

Sciaraffa, a 5-11 195-pound bundle of competitiveness, walked on first at Texas and then TCU to get a chance to play. He came off the bench during the season to lead come-from-behind victories over Baylor, Arkansas and Texas Tech.

Gulley, considered the better runner, scored the two-point conversion in a 32-31 victory over Arkansas and had a season high 147 yards rushing against Rice.

Sciaraffa, the better passer of the duo, has started only two games this season and missed three others with the injury.

"I'd prefer starting because right at the start of the game everyone is real emotional and into the game," Sciaraffa said. "I keep the emotion going on the sideline but it's not the same as if I was starting."

Gulley says the shuttle system was distracting at the beginning of the 1983 season but no longer.

"We know that we are going to share time and that whoever has the best week of practice will start, so it's no problem," Gulley said. "When I come out and then go back in, it only takes a couple of plays to get back in the groove."

"I guess we'll go in like every other game and try to establish a running game," Gulley said. "If that doesn't work, we'll try something else until we find what it takes to win."

Yankees sign Whitson to 5-year pact

NEW YORK (AP) — In his only World Series appearance, San Diego right-hander Ed Whitson lasted a mere two-thirds of an inning against the Detroit Tigers. Now, as a member of the New York Yankees, he wants a rematch.

The Yankees announced Thursday that Whitson, who spent the past two seasons with the Padres, had signed a free-agent contract, bringing him from the National League to the American League. The five-year deal is worth about $4.5 million, sources say.

"I hope to get a second chance at Detroit one of these days," Whitson said at a news conference, and Yankees Manager Yogi Berra piped in: "He'll get a chance to pitch against them again."

The 29-year-old Whitson, the Yankees No. 1 priority in the free-agent re-entry draft last month, will join a pitching staff that has grown older and a little feeble. But he is only part of a total revamping job the Yankees have done this offseason.

First, the Yankees acquired speedy outfielder Rickey Henderson from the Oakland A's, giving up a minor league outfielder and four young pitchers, including Jay Howell and Jose Rijo.

"Now we're done," Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said. "I'm happy. The players we had to give up for Henderson have now been replaced."

Last season, Phil Niekro led the Yankees staff with 16 victories, but he will be 46 years old in April. Ron Guidry, 34, had his worst major league season, finishing 10-11. Marty Bystrom and John Montefusco have been injured, and youngsters Joe Cowley and Dennis Rasmussen are unproven.

Even Whitson, a seven-year major leaguer, has yet to prove himself a top-notch starter. Although he was 14-8 for the Padres last year and helped the team to the World Series, his lifetime record is 53-56.

In the playoffs against the Chicago Cubs, Whitson worked eight innings to win Game Three. In the World Series, he pitched only two-thirds of an inning before being knocked out in Game Two, which the Padres went on to win 5-3.

"Playing in the World Series was the greatest thrill in my life, other than making the big leagues," Whitson said. "There's not enough I can say about it. I was making good pitches, but a lot of their hits had seeing eyes. Baseball is a funny game."

The development of a palm ball late in the 1983 season may have helped Whitson turn his career around. He developed the pitch almost by accident, when he cut a finger on his pitching hand on a piece of metal on a soda-pop can.

"I was supposed to pitch the next night. But I couldn't use the breaking ball at all the next night, just the fastball," he said. "So I had to use it (the palm ball), and fortunately, for me, it was a gift."

Cougar gridder feels sympathy for Flutie

DALLAS (AP) — What's this? Houston Cougar safety Audrey McMillian feeling sympathy for Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie?

"Sure, I feel sorry for him," said McMillian with the New Year's Day Cotton Bowl Classic five days away. "He's got so much pressure on him you can't help but feel sorry for him."

McMillian explained "the pressure is on because Flutie is the super hero, the guy in the sky. Everybody expects him to do this and do that."

McMillian added, "I think the hype for Flutie is great. That means the entire nation will be watching."

Eighth-ranked Boston College was a touchdown favorite in the New Year's Day game, which starts at 12:35 p.m.

Flutie has been closely hounded by the press since he arrived in Dallas on Wednesday.

McMillian had some complaints Thursday about the way Houston was being treated by the press.

One newspaper had a column with the headline: "Houston roaches crawl over SWC."

The story referred to the Cougars' lack of acceptance by other Southwest Conference schools and implied they had soiled the Cotton Bowl by being the host team.

"Nobody wants to give us the respect that is due," said

McMillian, who hails from a university located in Houston's inner city. "It's probably because of the location of our school and our newness in the conference."

"Some of the personal views of the University of Houston are just a lack of intelligence. And the story was definitely racist," McMillian said.

He said he thought the Cougars were called cockroaches because "nobody can say anything good about a cockroach. All I can say is that a cockroach is hard to get rid of."

Houston linebacker Bryant Winn said the criticism of the Cougars was nothing unusual.

"We get it everywhere we go," Winn said. "There was one story that said half of us will come up here and eat at 7-11 stores and the other half will try to hold it up. We're getting publicity but it's not good publicity."

McMillian said he didn't blame the Cotton Bowl officials for the lack of attention being given the Cougars.

"I don't have any bias or animosity toward the Cotton Bowl," McMillian said. "We just need to go out and do our job."

"We've reached our goal and the pressure is off."

Thousands of tickets still remained for the game although Houston had sold 13,000 and the Eagles had 17,000 fans coming.

Sports of 1984

It really was a gold medal year

By Murray Olderman

My list of the top 10 sports stories of 1984 starts with the most impressive athletic achievement of the year. Carl Lewis' four gold medals at the XXIIIrd Olympiad in Los Angeles. Forget his aloof posture and his blatant intent to commercialize his Olympic success. Lewis' four-event blitz of track and field at the Olympics was an astounding personal triumph.

In many ways, it was more difficult than Jesse Owens' capture of the same gold medals in 1936. Lewis faced much more intense media pressure. The victories in the 100 meters, 200 meters, long jump and 4x100 relay were expected — anything less would have been a debacle. Lewis carried off the sweep with relative ease.

Doug Flutie's "Hail Mary" TD pass to beat Miami. Already inscribed among the legends of college football, it capped a fabulous four-year career for the little Heisman-winning quarterback from Boston College. Flutie is the Athlete of the Year.

Six seconds were left when Flutie put the ball in play on the Miami 47. It was raining, the field was slick and a wind was blowing in his face. He launched the ball 64 yards in the air, over frantic Miami defenders and into the cradled arms of Gerard Phelan in the end zone for a 47-45 win. There never was a passing exhibition like Flutie and Bernie Kosar of Miami put on that day.

End of a 39-year drought for the Chicago Cubs. The last time a pennant was unfurled at Chicago's Wrigley Field was in 1945. Yet they thrilled their long-suffering supporters by breezing to the National League East title.

They were led by a marvelous young second baseman, Ryne Sandberg, who won the league MVP award, and a revived pitcher, Rick Sutcliffe, acquired during the season. Succumbing to the San Diego Padres, the Cubs missed the World Series. It was an emotional summer in Chicago.

Super Bowl scapting of the Redskins. The Washington Redskins were the defending champions for Super Bowl XVIII. They had set a new NFL scoring record of 541 points. Their defense led the NFL against the rush and in pass interceptions.

Opposing them were the rowdy Raiders of Los Angeles. Result: a 38-9 rout of the Redskins. And a brilliant one-man show by LA's Marcus Allen, who ran for 191 yards and two touchdowns — one a 74-yard scamper that was the longest in Super Bowl history.

Mary Lou Retton's Olympic vault for the gold medal. Mary Lou Retton, a West Virginia spry with amazing bounce and a contagious smile, was the heroine of Los Angeles. No American woman had ever won a gymnastics medal. It all came down to Mary Lou's final vault. She charged down the runway, flew off the apparatus, gaining incredible height, executed a layout back somersault with a double twist and nailed the landing for a perfect score of 10. She won the gold medal by .05 of a point.

Cornhuskers gamble and fall in the Orange Bowl. On Jan. 1, 1984, the mighty Nebraska Cornhuskers, winners of 22 straight, were one point from an undefeated season and a national championship. They had just scored against Miami to trail, 31-30, with seconds remaining. Coach Tom Osborne could have played it safe: kicking the extra point for a tie would have preserved their No. 1 ranking. Quarterback Turner Gill's two-point conversion pass was batted down. Nebraska lost. And Miami became the national champion.

Martina Navratilova's victory string. Martina Navratilova's domination at both Wimbledon and the U.S. Open emphasized her approaching recognition as the greatest women's tennis player ever. There is no one in sight to threaten her, despite her failure to gain a seventh Grand Slam victory in a row in the Australian Open — where she lost for the first time in 75 straight singles matches.

Olympic skier Bill Johnson going downhill. No American had ever won a men's Olympic gold medal in Alpine skiing. But a brash iconoclast named Bill Johnson broke through at Sarajevo. A rank longshot, he catapulted down the slick, windy course to win the downhill. Just as he had predicted. He was irrevocable.

Triumphant Detroit Tigers go wire to wire. Not since the fabled New York Yankees of 1927 had a major league baseball team held the top spot for the entire course of a season. The 1984 Detroit Tigers, managed by Sparky Anderson, won the first day, won again and again and again — 85 of their first 40 games, in fact. They never stumbled en route to the American League pennant.

Associated Press releases Little All-America squad

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Wegher, a 5-foot-7 running back from South Dakota State who wound up the season with a great performance against a Division I-A team, was named today to The Associated Press Little All-America college football team for 1984.

Wegher set 11 school records this season and finished second nationally in the NCAA's Division II with an average of 119.7 yards a game. That broke the school record of 112 yards a game set in 1952 by Pete Retzlaff, who went on to become an All-Pro receiver with the Philadelphia Eagles.

In his final game, Wegher rushed 39 times for 231 yards in a 45-29 loss to Wyoming. He had 357 all-purpose yards in the game.

Joining Wegher in the Little All-America backfield are running back Joe Dudek of Plymouth State and quarterback Scott Barry of Cal-Davis. Dudek rushed for 1,378 yards on 199 carries and led Division II in scoring with 21 touchdowns. Barry finished second in Division II passing efficiency, completing 189 of 293 passes for 2,365 yards and 17 touchdowns, with just six interceptions.

The Little All-America team is compiled from Divisions II and III of the NCAA and all NAIA schools.

The wide receivers are Gregg Brenner of Indiana University of Pennsylvania and Steve Hansley of Northwest Missouri State. Brenner caught 45 passes for a whopping 1,008 yards and 10 touchdowns while Hansley caught 57 passes for 1,123 yards and 11 TDs. The tight end is Jim Jones of San Francisco State, who had 59 receptions for 836 yards and five touchdowns.

The offensive line consists of tackles Ron Petersen of Nebraska-Omaha (6-10, 287) and 280-pound Dan Remsburg of Abilene Christian, guards Terry Brooks of Towson State and Mitch Geier of Troy State, with Greg Hagfors of North Dakota State at center.

The placekicker is Herve Roussel of Wayne State in Nebraska, a Frenchman who kicked 30 of 33 extra points and 22 of 31 field goals.

On the defensive unit are ends Brian Cox of Union, N.Y., and Fred Manley of Case Western Reserve, tackles David Burnette of Central Arkansas and Ed Lively of Hayward State, middle guard Ike Headon of Hampton Institute, linebackers John Greene of Virginia State, Gerry Quinlivan of the State University of New York at Buffalo and Frank Sheptock of Bloomsburg — the only repeater from the 1983 first team — and backs Nick Frost of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Chris McMahon of Catholic University and Daryl Smith of North Alabama. The punter is Jeff Guy of Western State (Colo.), who averaged 43.7 yards per kick.

McGovern led the nation by intercepting 13 passes in just nine games.

Good old fashioned productivity gains

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As the industrial economy renews itself with brand new industries and products, it is taking on an old-fashioned look in at least one respect:

Productivity is growing again, just as it used to grow before Americans became complacent.

That impact of that is enormous, involving employment and unemployment, recession and expansion, inflation and price stability, foreign trade, wages, corporate profits, living standards and pride.

Productivity is merely the efficiency of production, and productivity gains are improvements in that efficiency. For many years the United States set standards of production efficiency, and in the process built the biggest and most productive economy the world has ever seen. Then, it lost its edge.

Some contended unions interfered with efficiency. Others blamed lazy managements that couldn't understand that rewards require risks.

Others said it was a combination of reasons, including the aging of industrial plants, the need to clean up a polluted environment, government regulation and tax policy.

And another very large factor: Consumerism. Americans fought to consume the economic pie, but they didn't put the same energy into making a bigger one. And as everyone knows, unless you bake a bigger pie you can't take a larger slice without cutting your neighbor's share.

Wage increases exceeded gains in production efficiency, and corporate profits were disbursed as dividends rather than reinvested in improved plants. In business, short-term profits often came at the expense of long-term strength.

Government stepped up its activities, the better to serve people, but as history demonstrates, it was easier to give assistance to people — government aid, in fact, came to be known as an "entitlement" — than to finance it.

Productivity gains, which had averaged around 3 percent annually — and even reached 9.4 percent in 1950 and 6.9 percent as recently as 1973 — all but disappeared in some years. In 1975 and 1976, and 1980 and 1981, output of goods and services actually shrank.

A study by the Conference Board, a non-profit research and educational organization shows that growth in U.S. productivity between 1973 and 1982 was the lowest 10-year figure in nearly a century.

Tornado aid denied

DALLAS (AP) — The federal government has denied Gov. Mark White's request to declare Dallas and Ellis counties major disaster areas, thus making victims of the Dec. 13 tornado ineligible for most relief aid, officials said.

The request was turned down because a majority of homes suffered only minor damage and most homeowners had insurance, officials said Thursday.

The tornadoes, which swept T. Dallas and Ellis counties, damaged more than 600 homes and businesses and caused approximately $27 million in damage, according to local estimates.

White House officials said President Reagan acted on the recommendation of the Federal Emergency Management Administration in denying the request for eligibility to three major federal aid programs.

The action means that about 260 tornado victims who might have qualified for special assistance must find other forms of aid, said Lauren Chernow, spokeswoman for the governor's Division of Emergency Management.

Eligibility was denied for the Individual and Family Grant Program, which could authorize up to $5,000 in aid; the FEMA Temporary Housing Program; and the Disaster Unemployment Assistance program.

Eligibility for two other programs — Small Business Administration low-interest loans and Farmers Home Administration low-interest loans — still may be granted, Ms. Chernow said. The SBA, which makes loans available to victims at interest rates of 4 and 8 percent, may approve relief aid in a day or two, she said.
