Farmer Dunk Porter of Wheeler and VanZandt discuss farmers market.

Market idea takes root

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

State agriculture officials and area farmers have planted the seed; now they hope the idea of a Pampa farmers market will take root.

Texas Department of Agriculture market promoters met with more than a dozen area farmers and county officials Thursday at the Gray County Annex, trying to sell the idea of a local market where farmers could sell their produce.

The farmers harvested the idea. Three of those present — Pampa farmers John Triplehorn, Gene Cade and Gary Epperson — volunteered to form a farmers market steering committee. Others recommended friends, absent from the meeting, whom they felt would provide leadership for the market. Among the names brought up as potential steering committee members were Christine Atherton, a Wheeler woman interested in promoting area produce and Gerald Tate, a McLean-area melon grower.

The committee agreed to meet early in March to plan the Pampa Farmers Market.

A joint operation of the TDA and county extension services, Texas Farmers Markets have been established in 34 communities to provide markets for state growers and a chance for consumers to buy fresh produce.

The Golden Spread Farmers Market, established in Amarillo in 1986, has served up to 4,000 people a day, according to TDA bulk commodities specialist Gregg Boggs.

Boggs hopes the Pampa Farmers Market can begin operation by Aug. 1. But some of the farmers present expressed a desire to open sooner so that melons could be sold.

Gray County Extension Agent Joe VanZandt had expressed hopes of holding the market in the "bull barn" at the Clyde Carruth Livestock Pavilion.

Among those absent from the meeting were Precinct 4 Gray County Commissioner Ted Simmons, Tate and other McLean area farmers who support the Farmers Market program.

"Guess everybody was afraid of the snowy weather last night," Simmons said this morning.

Simmons said he was at a meeting in McLean and could not make it to Thursday's planning session.

But the farmers present represented a variety of interests ranging from vegetable gardeners to hay balers to a pair of White

Cuomo quits as 1988 candidate

By MARC HUMBERT
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. — Gov. Mario Cuomo, one of the Democratic Party's most eloquent spokesmen, has bowed out of the race for his party's 1988 presidential nomination with a simple statement that has left people wondering why.

"I will not be a candidate," the governor announced Thursday night on New York City's WCBS radio during a call-in show carried statewide by 10 other stations. Cuomo

"In my opinion, the Democratic Party offers a number of candidates who can prove themselves capable of leading this nation toward a more sane, a more progressive and a more humane future. I will not add my name to that number."

Cuomo, 54, said his decision was best for his family, state and party. He refused to elaborate on the program. He was whisked by helicopter back to Albany, where he also dodged reporters.

Cuomo, who rose to national prominence with a rousing keynote address at the 1984 Democratic National Convention, had agonized so long and so publicly about running that he was accused of turning the decision into political theater.

Even political confidants were caught unaware.

"He would have made a... good candidate," said Gerald Rafshoon, a media consultant who helped Jimmy Carter become president and who had been talking to Cuomo about a possible campaign. "I'm surprised. I'm not shocked."

Recent nationwide polls had Cuomo running a strong second to former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart as the choice among Democrats for the nomination.

Hart called Cuomo "the leading conscience of the Democratic Party" and said in a statement that all Democrats "will benefit from his leadership and sense of humanity for a long time to come."

Bill would permit Aggies' sterilization

AUSTIN (AP) — A senate proposal apparently filed as a joke seeks to regulate vasectomies — with the exception of men who attended Texas A&M University.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, filed the bill that would prohibit a physician from performing a vasectomy on a married man without written consent from his spouse.

It also would require unmarried men to donate sperm to a sperm bank annually for 10 years before receiving the operation. Two physicians, one of them female, would have to be present for a vasectomy operation.

But a physician would have a legal defense if he or she performed a vasectomy in a medical emergency, if the patient were older than 65 or if "the vasectomy is performed on a man who has attended Texas A&M University for longer than four semesters as a full-time undergraduate or graduate student."

The measure also would require parental consent for minors to have vasectomies. Violations would be punishable as misdemeanors.

Snow relief in sight

From Staff and Wire Reports

Wet, heavy snow fell over the Texas Panhandle and South Plains and western portions of North Texas as a powerful storm stalled east from New Mexico, prompting advisories throughout the area today warning that traveling is treacherous.

At least one traffic fatality was attributed to the storm that began dumping snow on the area early Thursday and which was expected to continue its wintry work today, police said.

A winter storm warning was in effect today for all of Texas west of a line from Montague to Jacksboro to Stephenville to Brady.

The snow was expected to let up from the west by late afternoon, the National Weather Service said.

A winter storm warning is in effect for Pampa and the area tonight, with a chance of 3 to 5 additional inches accumulation of snow. Pampa had received between 2 and 3 inches of snow since the storm began Thursday. The moisture amounted to 0.1 inch of precipitation in the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today.

The low tonight was expected to dip to the mid 20s. Easterly winds should blow at 5 to 15 mph.

The snow was expected to break by Saturday, with a high near 30.

A travelers advisory was also issued today for a vast area of North Texas. That advisory covered North Texas west of a line from Sherman to Fort Worth to Granbury.

Amarillo got more than 3 inches of snow, Lubbock received 2 inches, and up to 5 inches fell

Bulging prisons put county inmates on floor

From Staff and Wire Reports

Counties all over Texas are struggling to cope with the strain of bulging state prisons, some by making inmates sleep on floors, others by not jailing public drunks or by putting convicts only on "intensive probation."

But Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said this morning he hasn't experienced any problems as a result of state prison overcrowding.

"We haven't done badly at all," Jordan said, regarding the statewide backup of prisoners. "We surely haven't."

Jordan said he sent four inmates to the Texas Department of Corrections about two weeks ago and expects to deliver three or four more within the next 10 days. He said he plans to call Huntsville before sending the inmates to prison.

The sheriff said one reason he has not experienced overcrowding in the county jail, located on the top floor of the courthouse, is cooperation with local prosecutors. He said County Attorney Bob McPherson and Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer take into account the small capacity of the jail when working out cases.

The jail, built in 1930, can hold up to 18 inmates, the sheriff said, but has been averaging nine since August.

Jordan also said about 95 percent of those arrested for driving while intoxicated make bond by the next morning.

He said he can understand why the larger counties, with more prisoners, are having more problems.

In Dallas County, two inmates have filed a federal civil rights suit, claiming a dearth of beds forced them to sleep on the floor for nine days.

David Micheal Starks, 24, and Paul Hilson, 25, filed the suit Jan. 29 against Dallas County Sheriff Jim Bowles, seeking $25,000 each in damages and a halt to overcrowding at the Lew Sterrett Criminal Justice Center.

Meanwhile in San Antonio, Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland announced Wednesday that no one charged with public intoxication will be taken in at the county jail.

Copeland said his 739-inmate capacity jail has been repeatedly packed — it had 994 inmates Wednesday — and that barring people arrested for intoxication from the jail will reduce the population by about 50 inmates a month.

"Anything we can write a ticket for is better than trying to crowd the jail, especially now," Copeland said.

And in an effort to cut Taylor County's contribution to the overcrowded Texas Department of Corrections, 40 locally-convicted felons will be put on intensive probation supervision rather than sent to prison.

Paul Hurt, head of Taylor County's Adult Probation Office in Abilene, said that will be the result of a bill aimed at easing prison overcrowding that is awaiting Gov. Bill Clements' signature.

In intensive probation, a probation officer visits or "sees" the probationer at least twice a week. The felon could also get treatment for addictions or psychological problems.

Hurt said local judges would likely allow only those convicted on non-violent crimes to be put on intensive supervision.

The TDC, which reopened Tuesday for the first time in six days, closed Wednesday when sheriffs transferred a record 475 inmates into the state system, officials said. The TDC was expected to remain closed today.

The shutdown was the fourth this year for the prison system, which is operating under a 95 percent limit set by the Legislature to ease crowding.

'Romantic Comedy' cast provides pleasant evening

By MELISSA MACKEY
Guest Reviewer

In Romantic Comedy, ACT I's current production, the playwright Bernard Slade has two characters engage in the following exchange:

She: "Are the notices that important?" He: "Only if you want people to buy tickets!"

With that in mind, I recommend the play as a pleasant diversion on a cold February evening.

Romantic Comedy is aptly named, and much of its charm lies in the fact that it knows it is a formula piece — naked boy meets girl and all indicated complications ensue. The established playwright, the hero-worshipping virginal writer, the motherly agent, the noble-and-long-suffering-in-love-with-the-virgin male and the round-heeled actress are all familiar literary types.

But familiarity breeds comfort, and the play is like a homemade afghan: thin toward the end, rough in places, but overall a welcome sight.

This is no door-slaming farce of misunderstanding and mistaken identities. The key to the story is emotional timing. Will our hero and heroine ever want each other at the same time? Or will they perpetually be at the wrong station in the railway of life?

The major problem with this situation is that the hero is such a boor, you wonder how the girl can stand him. But better women than she have loved worse men than he, so suspension of belief and reality is an easy thing.

The interplay of playwright Jason Carmichael's urbane banter with blushing, stammering writer Phoebe Craddock's long-winded narrative is an interesting menage a deux in conversation style. He throws away his one-liners, while she is humorously voluble, and both are effective.

At times, however, "Bud" Behannon as Jason throws low and outside, and the pitch is no good. It is possible to be painfully urbane, and Behannon overdoes a good thing. Some things in life must be emphasized.

One of the best moments in the play occurs when Phoebe, played by JoDalene Brantley, becomes fed up with Jason. She packs and yells witty insults through tears in the best tradition of the theatre. Her exit line is the perfect finis to a fast-paced, well-executed scene. I'll never think of Chicago in quite the same way.

Every comedy should have one. The character who steals the scene in Romantic Comedy is actress Kate Mallory. Bonita McRae, in her first venture for ACT I, gives the double entendre a third meaning. From the moment she steps out of the bedroom with her clothes awry, there is no mistaking what she means when she says "artistic differences."

The production suffers at times from a lack of animation, but when Gus Shaver as Allison St. James steps onstage, the lack is not as abysmally apparent. She gives spark and dynamics to the rather one-dimensional role of Jason's politically ambitious wife. Although few of the laugh-lines are hers, she does make you aware of her character.

Jeff Langley as Leo Janowitz also breathes a spark of life into the production with his interpretation of the sartorially imperfect nice guy. The proposal scene is as impassioned as any woman could ask for, even the neurotic Phoebe. He doesn't ooze niceness and sincerity, he just is nice. But nice guys rarely get the girl. And when they do, they rarely get to keep her.

Throughout the entire play, Betty Gann, as Blanche Dailey the agent, dispenses motherly wisdom, advice and one-liners in the New York sophisticated fashion. Gann has a fairly steady performance as the in-and-about person in the scenes. She also gets my favorite line from the play — "If there's not going to be any drama, I'm getting drunk."

The set design by Paula Simpson is outstanding. However, all that I have mentioned are only pieces of a whole. The play, the actors, the set had to be formed into a coherent production, and experienced director Rochelle Lacy does an admirable job.

A reviewer's task is a strange one. We see a production with our own frame of reference, then talk or write about it for a group of people with completely different frames. A subjective view, but valuable all the same.

I have a criteria for this sort of entertainment. Does it make me laugh? Romantic Comedy makes me laugh.

The ACT I dinner theatre production will be presented in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium at 6:30 p.m. today and Saturday, with a Sunday dessert matinee at 2 p.m. For ticket information and reservations, call 665-7212.

Searchers find three skiers

BRECKENRIDGE, Colo. (AP) — Searchers who found the bodies of three skiers buried by a massive avalanche returned today to a Rocky Mountain peak to search for a fourth victim.

Two bodies were found Thursday in the hard-packed snow on the 11,600-foot Peak 7 near the Breckenridge Ski Area, about 65 miles west of Denver.

One body had been found hours after Wednesday's avalanche, which left a swath of snow a half mile across and 40 feet deep.

Forty rescue workers returned to the mountain not long after dawn today, and were to be joined later by volunteers, said Summit County Sheriff's spokesman Ron Milhorn.

More than 200 search and rescue team members and volunteers used dogs and long aluminum probes Thursday, digging each time a pole struck something hard in the snow. One volunteer said it was like shoveling wet concrete.

Dynamite was detonated at the top of the peak to break loose any other snow masses, and searchers wore tiny radio transmitters in case they were trapped in a snowslide.

The dead were identified as Martin Donnellan, 21, of Peekskill, N.Y., whose body was found Wednesday; and New Zealanders Paul Way, 23, of Auckland, and Nick Casey, 23, of Cambridge. The three had been skiing together, authorities said.

Cyclist improves City Briefs

AMARILLO — The condition of a Pampa motorcyclist injured Wednesday night in a collision with a pickup truck in south Pampa has been upgraded from critical to serious.

A nurse in the intensive care unit of Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo said this morning that the condition of Frank Herring, 27, Route 2, has improved. Herring remained in intensive care this morning.

Herring was taken to the hospital with head injuries late Wednesday after his motorcycle collided with a 1979 Ford pickup truck at Scott and Finley.

Market

Deer residents interested in finding a market for their game fowl.

And a variety of offerings is just what the TDA is looking for, according to TDA Farmers Market specialist Bernadette Phifer.

"The important part of a local market is variety," Phifer said. "You could just have tomatoes at a market and be successful, but it would be a very dull market."

Phifer said that markets can offer more than just fresh veggies and fruits. Some markets sell feed, floral arrangements, potted plants.

"And don't forget pumpkins for Halloween," Boggs suggested.

Whatever is sold, and whoever is allowed to sell, will be up to the growers' association that will manage the market, Phifer said.

"The limit is for you to decide," she said. "She added that local zoning and health regulations may affect what can be sold. This may affect processed foods or sales of poultry."

Baked goods and crafts could be sold at the Farmers Market, Phifer said, adding that the TDA prefers not to turn the market into a "flea market or swap meet" atmosphere.

Phifer stressed that since the intent of the program is to promote Texas goods, producers from other states should not be included. She admitted that associations in such border markets as Texarkana and El Paso do allow out-of-state growers.

Amarillo, for example, brings in Texas farmers from a 150-mile radius, Boggs said.

Boggs added that Pampa can avoid competition with Amarillo by having its market on alternate days. He said the Lubbock and Amarillo markets are open on alternating days.

Phifer said the market makes money through collection of association dues and stall rental fees. She handed out a brochure noting that the ideal location would be in a lower middle class area with a high traffic flow or population density, with enough parking for farmers' trucks and customers' cars.

She said the association should provide water, plumbing and liability insurance. Phifer explained that the liability insurance would cover accidents at the market, not the quality of the produce.

Snow

on communities such as Post south of Lubbock. Abilene had 3 inches of snow on the ground, the National Weather Service said.

Traffic bogged down on Interstate 40 in Amarillo because of a collision involving as many as 20 cars, and police had to close the route for a while to clear the vehicles involved. No major injuries were reported.

In the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today, eight minor accidents were reported in Pampa, though none involved serious injuries.

Meanwhile, heavy sleet was falling in the Brownwood area early today.

Snowfall in the Permian Basin had tapered off by dawn today, but forecasters said another 1 to 3 inches of snow was possible in that area.

As much as 5 more inches may fall before the storm moves out by Saturday, but the forecasters warn that another snow-carrying storm may be in the works for later this weekend.

While the sluggish weather system dumped moisture across Texas, it unloaded more snow on the southern Rockies and closed schools in New Mexico today after dumping more than 2 feet on the Southwest.

Today's forecast called for more than 6 inches of snow for parts of Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri.

"It's a little difficult to tell when the mush is going to end," said Fred Beeler a National Weather Service meteorologist in Oklahoma City.

Los Alamos, N.M., paralyzed by more than 40 inches of snow in a storm last month, was blanketed with 20 inches Thursday. Gascon got 24 inches and Las Vegas, N.M., 16.

Senate backs private prisons, hazardous waste center

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved bills to authorize the use of private prisons and to establish a hazardous waste research center touted as a moneymaker for the state.

A proposal by Sen. Ray Farabee would authorize the Texas Department of Corrections to contract with private companies, or counties, to build and operate prisons for up to 500 "minimum" or "medium-risk" inmates.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said Tennessee, Kentucky and Minnesota now have laws that provide for private prisons.

A prison contract in Texas could not be signed unless the state would save at least 10 percent on what it would cost to operate a similar state facility, Farabee said.

The bill allows for a three-year contract, with an option to renew for two years. Any private facility would have to meet court standards, as well as standards of the American Correctional Association.

Sens. Carlos Truan and Craig Washington said they had concerns about the measure, which was sent to the House on a 23-2 vote.

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said, "I think it ought to be tried." Hobby said facilities for 500 could be available "in 60 to 90 days from the day the contract is signed."

Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said he was "hesitant about placing prisoners in the hands of a private contractor.... We are doing away with the tradition that... we as citizens, as taxpayers, provide the necessary money for the prisons and jails."

"Where are you going to stop? Are the schools going to be next?" Truan asked. "We don't even enough money for our public prisons much less to contract for private prisons."

Farabee said the bill "spells out where we're going to stop, and that is unless you can save at least 10 percent, you're not going to use this method."

He suggested that the savings could be used for other state services such as better distribution of food stamps and nursing homes.

Washington, D-Houston, said some duties of the state should not be delegated and one is its police power. "This is closely akin to police power," he said.

In these "difficult economic times, we look for ways to ameliorate our problem, and perhaps we grab at straws we wouldn't have looked at 10 years ago," Washington said.

Parker's bill to create a hazardous waste center at Lamar University in Beaumont was sent to the House on a 25-0 vote.

The center would organize a consortium of universities to develop new and better ways to handle hazardous wastes.

Congress already has appropriated $5 million for the center, and the universities are asking the Legislature for $600,000 start-up money.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said the center "will bring millions more in research (money) to Texas, and this will allow us to get our fair share."

Bill which would abolish subject-matter testing of teachers approved by panel

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate committee has approved a bill removing the requirement that teachers be tested on how much they know about the subjects they teach.

June Karp, assistant to the president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said the bill "removes the specter of TECAT II, and we appreciate it."

TECAT, or Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, was a literacy exam administered to teachers last year over the objection of most teacher organizations.

The bill abolishing the "subject-matter" test was sent to the full Senate on an 8-0 vote Thursday, after representatives of teacher organizations testified that getting rid of the test would boost teacher morale.

Sen. Carl Parker, Education Committee chairman and bill sponsor, offered two reasons for abolishing the test — it is costly and fails to insure quality education.

Administering the test would cost the state nearly $14.4 million in 1988-89, according to an estimate by the Legislative Budget Board.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, estimated the cost at $10 million to $20 million, and said, "We will not, in our time, have enough money to afford it."

Also, he said, "I'm satisfied... that it is not a practical way to insure quality in the classroom. We'd do better to stick with evaluators."

The bill was supported by representatives of the Texas State Teachers Association, Texas Classroom Teachers Association, Association of Texas Professional Educators and the Texas Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

TSTA President Charles Beard said Parker's proposal "is probably one of the biggest morale boosters in a long time, and lord knows they (teachers) are entitled to it."

Eva Jo Kasinger, an Abilene teacher and president of TCTA, said the bill "comes at a time when teacher certainly need a boost."

"The way to remove a teacher" who is not competent "is through the appraisal system," she said.

Ms. Kasinger was asked if she agreed that deleting subject-matter testing from the law would improve teacher morale, and she responded, "It's a yoke around teachers' necks, and getting it off will make them much happier."

The House Committee on Public Education approved its version of the bill 6-1 on Feb. 11.

On Wednesday, the Texas Supreme Court said the original TECAT, passed by approximately 99 percent of the teachers, was constitutional.

Controversy on judge selection continues

AUSTIN (AP) — The controversy over whether Texas judges should be elected or appointed has now gotten sidetracked into a dispute over whether voters should have a say.

"Why are they conducting such a vigorous campaign against letting the people vote on the change?" former Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert W. Calvert told a news conference Thursday.

"We'd be voting all the time if we let people vote on every proposal that came along," said Charles Herring Jr., spokesman for Citizens to Protect Our Right to Elect Texas Judges, in a back-to-back news conference. "It's up to the Legislature to decide."

Herring's group, which includes eight of the current Texas Supreme Court Justices, is opposing a constitutional change backed by a group headed by Chief Justice John Hill.

Hill's plan, if approved by voters, would have commissions nominate candidates for judges, with the governor making a final appointment. Judges appointed would have to be approved by voters later in retention elections. District judges could be named the same way, or in non-partisan elections, according to local option elections.

Calvert said Thursday that 12 of the 15 living former supreme court justices favor the appointive or "merit selection" plan. Two support the present partisan elective system and one wants a non-partisan election.

"It all comes down to whether we believe in democracy or not," said Herring.

"The opponents of merit selection are afraid to let the issue go to the people," said Calvert. "That is the only way the issue can be settled — so, why not back off and let the democratic process work its will?"

"The elective process has worked for 111 years," Herring said. "It is up to the Legislature to decide if a constitutional amendment is placed on the ballot."

Calvert said a survey in 1963 showed that more than 50 percent of Texas judges are appointed by the governor to fill vacancies, then have to face voters later for re-election. "The same is true now," he said.

Ross Perot roasted by Dallas Press Club

DALLAS (AP) — Billionaire businessman H. Ross Perot's past efforts to rescue American hostages are well known.

But Thursday night, Perot was held hostage for a few hours as the Dallas Press Club roasted him during a benefit for the club's scholarship fund.

Friends, admirers and other paid $60 to $500 a plate to watch as Perot was tortured by a merciless onslaught of one-liners during the "Perot Held Hostage" event.

The roasters included newsmen, friends of Perot and politicians.

"It's said that this man could be president of the United States, and I think it's great for us to be here tonight to honor the man who said that," said former television newsman Murphy Martin.

Martin told the estimated crowd of 900 that he was the first person to put Perot on television.

"I learned he could talk two hours about any given subject," Martin said. "And if he knows something about it, he can go on for four hours."

Television newsman Tracy Rowlett said that Perot had recently been injured while taking a walk. "He was hit by a ski boat," Rowlett said.

Perot founded Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems in 1962, a computer company that eventually had 42,000 employees and offices in 50 states and several foreign countries.

In 1979, he engineered the rescue of two EDS employees who were held captive in Iran.

Perot also was involved in efforts to improve the treatment of American prisoners of war in North Vietnam, and he has worked to seek a full accounting of U.S. servicemen still missing in Southeast Asia.

EDS became a subsidiary of General Motors in 1984 in a $2.5 billion merger. But after a falling out with GM officials, the automaker bought out Perot's share of stock last year for $700 million.

The celebrated buyout was a frequent topic Thursday night.

"Ross is so dedicated and loyal...he didn't even deposit the check for three weeks," said Norman Brinker, a longtime Perot friend and restaurant executive.

Traces of cyanide, lead found at explosion site

TURNEY (AP) — Cyanide is in the smoke and lead in the water at a plastics plant that was still smoldering this morning and keeping some 250 residents at bay as investigators probed the ruins, officials say.

The J&J Plastics Recycling Co. plant caught fire Wednesday night, releasing chemicals that were still burning late Thursday, Texas Forest Service spokesman Sam Logan said.

A light rain that began to fall before midnight forced the service to build two dykes and a polyethylene-lined holding pond to trap contaminated runoff from the plant, Logan said.

An EPA team from New Jersey that was to arrive at the scene Thursday night was delayed and would probably begin probing the fire scene today, Logan said.

"We won't know the extent of the contamination or how dangerous the chemicals are until we get more sophisticated testing equipment in here" later today, he said.

Preliminary tests, however, found traces of cyanide in the smoke and lead in the water around the isolated sheet-metal building that is "in the boondocks" six miles south of Jacksonville and about 110 miles southeast of Dallas, Logan said.

Some residents who live near the plant ignored federal warnings of toxic fumes and returned to their homes Thursday, Environmental Protection Agency spokesman Roger Meacham said.

"That's their decision," Meacham said. "If they want to return home, they can return home."

But many others who attempted to return heeded police warnings that their homes were not yet safe, and Logan said he expected most would be allowed to return today.

Authorities identified the burning substance as acrylonitrile-butyladiene-styrene, whose fumes can cause mild to severe irritation to the eyes and throat, Meacham said.

No injuries were reported after the explosion and fire Wednesday night, when about 250 people were evacuated from a one-mile radius of the plant, Logan said.

After the fire began, some residents took refuge in a Baptist church and community centers, while others were put up at the Jacksonville fire department, six miles north of the plant.

Plant manager Tom Kiser said a spark of unknown origin ignited plastic material and the flames shot to the roof, setting insulation afire. A forklift and two gasoline tanks exploded.

"It was like a blowtorch," he said.

The EPA advised firefighters to let the blaze burn itself out because water could produce more toxic fumes.

School administrators argue with researchers over dropout data

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Administrators should be more concerned with controlling the dropout rate rather than arguing about a study that angered educators, a researcher who worked on the study said.

The survey was compiled by the Intercultural Development Research Association of San Antonio, which used reports submitted by school districts to the Texas Education Agency.

Researchers analyzed the number of students entering the ninth grade in 1982-83 and followed them to the 12th grade.

Researchers also used data from the U.S. Census Bureau and student surveys from a sampling of 629 of 1,286 school districts across the state.

The study, conducted between May and October 1986, showed that the San Antonio Independent School District's 1982 freshman class had the state's highest attrition rate at 47 percent.

Bexar County superintendents on Thursday met with three representatives of IDRA and discussed their displeasure with the study. Administrators in other parts of the state also blasted the study.

But Dr. Maria del Refugio Robledo, a researcher, defended the study, saying a year ago there was no system to track dropouts.

"Now we can at least talk about it. Where we move now depends very much on your individual school district," she said told administrators.

"Whether's its 30 percent or 40 percent. It's totally irrelevant to the kid who's dropping out today," she said.

SAISD Superintendent Victor Rodriguez said the school district actually has a dropout rate of 20.7 percent.

The rate is based on different criteria submitted annually to the TEA, he said.

"It's not something that we're proud of," Rodriguez said. "I really feel the dropout rate is a very serious problem. I believe whether it's 10 percent, 20 percent or 40 percent, we've got to do something about."

Researchers said the attrition rates had been adjusted to account for students transferring to other school districts and believed nearly all of the numbers represent dropouts.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Controls take away incentive to produce

Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige wants to ease controls on exports to non-communist countries — a welcome announcement. Concern about supplying communist countries with high-tech military equipment has gotten out of hand, the program to control such exports evolving into control for its own sake.

As much as 40 percent of U.S. merchandise shipped to U.S. allies requires an export license. Licenses may be delayed, which is expensive, or denied because bureaucrats run fewer risks by saying no than by saying yes. So U.S. companies get a reputation of being unreliable suppliers, and buyers overseas look elsewhere. While U.S. companies lead in many fields, few things produced in the United States cannot be produced elsewhere.

Baldrige would provide for virtually unrestricted exports to companies controlled by the 16 governments of the Coordinating Committee on Export Controls (Cocom), consisting of the NATO countries and Japan; he would speed license approval and ease controls on exports to China. The secretary can make some of the changes himself, though some will require White House approval, and some will require legislation.

The National Academy of Sciences recently estimated that export controls cost the United States $9.3 billion and 188,000 jobs in 1985 alone.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle seized on the imprecise nature of the estimate to call it "rubbish." Perle seems obsessed with keeping export controls in place for national security reasons, but the NAS pointed out that keeping a vigorous high-technology sector active will be increasingly important for national security, and that export controls cripple high-tech companies unnecessarily.

Perle seems to have cooled his rhetoric, agreeing that U.S. exporters should not be at an unfair disadvantage in competing with companies in Europe and Japan, but he still opposes efforts to roll back controls to the already excessive levels of the late 1970s.

A desire for strong, comprehensive export controls reflects a desire for the government — and more specifically, the military — to have a dominant voice in what technology will be produced, how it will be sold, and how it will be used. But government seldom sets such priorities well, and in doing so infringes on the rights of individuals to set their own priorities.

One reason the United States is at odds with communist countries is this disagreement over core values. Communists believe that state should control virtually every aspect of life, while most Americans believe the state's role should be more limited, and that the state should respect individual rights.

This respect for individual rights is one of the main reasons for United States is a diversified economic powerhouse, while communist and socialist countries are economically backward. When people are free, they will work, invest, innovate, and produce. No command economy approaches the efficiency of free people in free markets.

Rumsfeld sits at the back

Invited to take a seat at a long table in a newspaper conference room, Donald Rumsfeld says, "I'll sit at the end, so I won't have anyone behind me." In the presidential race he plans to enter in the next few months, having people behind him probably won't be Rumsfeld's biggest worry. His candidacy may be both the most logical and least logical of all the contenders for the Republican nomination. In terms of training for the job of directing the executive branch of the federal government, no one — not even George Bush — has a stronger background.

Rumsfeld has been a congressman from Illinois, chief of staff to President Ford, ambassador to NATO and secretary of defense, to cite just the highlights. By all accounts, he performed well in each of those jobs.

As befits a Republican, he has compiled a stellar record in private business, having transformed G.D. Searle & Co., known mainly as the maker of NutraSweet, from a bloated, ailing concern to a lean, profitable one. Rumsfeld's eight-year management of the firm, which involved 11-hour days, ruthless cost-cutting and immersion in all the company's ventures, showed his talent as an administrator. It also made him rich enough to do what he pleases.

What would please him most is to spend the years from 1989 to 1997 in the White House, but that takes more than money, and what it does take Rumsfeld may not have. So far he ranks as the longest shot in the Republican field, at least this side of Alexander Haig. He has been largely out of the public eye since 1977, and he hasn't won an elective office since 1968. He himself notes that no businessman has won a major party nomination since Wendell Wilkie in 1940.

Aside from his record, nothing about Rumsfeld is likely to make him stand out in a congested contest. From his air of relaxed geniality, it's obvious he has made an effort to take the edge off his imperious personality, which at Searle got him named one of Fortune magazine's "10 toughest bosses." Still, he won't win many votes on pure charm.

His campaign style is about as colorful as a CEO's wardrobe, and with his youthful looks intact at 54, he may find himself mistaken for a Secret Service agent. Nor has Rumsfeld staked out, in past government service or in his preparation for this race, any energizing issues as his own. That leaves him with plenty of room to maneuver, but without an obvious constituency.

Like most of the other candidates, Rumsfeld faces the problem not only of how to set himself apart from his opponents, but of how to distinguish himself from Ronald Reagan while wooing the sort of people who put him in the White House. He stresses his experience in foreign affairs, which, even Reaganists don't need to be told, might have prevented a mistake like the Iranamok deal. He also uses an old Reagan theme that most of his rivals can't: "I haven't been in Washington. I've been doing normal things, wrestling with real problems."

Rumsfeld opposes tax increases to lower the deficit, but on other domestic matters he doesn't exhibit the kind of well-defined views that powered Reagan's drive to the White House. And he will have trouble making inroads with social conservatives. On abortion, for instance, he says that although he is "personally against it," he's doubtful about amending the constitution to ban it, something Reagan favors.

Still, Rumsfeld is loath to put distance between himself and the president on issues. Asked where they disagree, he says with cautious precision, "I'd elevate trade as a priority. I'd have put less stress on the tax bill. He has not made the budget deficit as high a priority as I would have." The closest to a pointed criticism comes on the easiest issue, a vow that he would never ransom hostages.

This approach is aimed first at self-preservation. Rumsfeld says most presidential aspirants don't get beat — they beat themselves. His hope is to stay in the fray long enough to let the bigger guys knock each other, or themselves, out. What he doesn't say, and may not want to consider, is that even by losing on the ticket, he may land a plum job (say, secretary of state) in the next administration or enough admirers to provide the basis for another race in 1992.

Asked his strategy, he says with a grin, "Not to peak too early." Rumsfeld may find that in the running for president from the back of the pack, a sense of humor is the indispensable asset.

Contra-versy hurts credibility

The major television networks, curtailing news budgets, are mostly trimming fat. But the move also reflects a realistic reappraisal.

Management is no longer intimidated by the journalistic jargon of those who consider themselves endowed custodians of our nation's social conscience.

History must give us this: Few instances of malfeasance in public office would ever be ventilated except for the tenaciousness of some nosy newshawk.

But for the most part we are professional parade watchers calling out to anyone interested those parts of the parade which interest us.

And whenever we stray from reporting news to making news we are on the wrong side of the microphone.

And whenever we turn a valid expose into a vicious personal vendetta, we risk winning our argument and losing our audience.

A Gallup Poll for the Times Mirror Co. reveals that the believability of news organizations — the press and TV — declined steeply this past year, largely as a result of the degree to which we belabored the contra-versy.

Network television's credibility rating fell from 80 percent to 63 percent during that period. Publisher Lou Cashman of Mississippi's Vicksburg Evening Post is "disturbed" by these numbers.

Mr. Cashman suspects that the public is reacting to the sometimes rudeness of a media that shoves microphones in to the faces of bearded widows while asking them how they feel that their loved ones have died.

While a certain amount of bad manners may be the price a society pays for a free press, ultimately, says Mr. Cashman, "We are reporters and editorial writers; not politicians."

Blaming the messenger for the message is a perennial problem for the media but "it is also a cliché that we, the media, too frequently rely upon to defend shoddy reporting."

"And," he says, "when the people tell us that we are losing credibility we have to listen because when credibility goes, little else matters."

When Page 1 becomes a distortion — I'm speaking figuratively, because what applies to print media also applies to the electronic media — when Page 1 becomes a fun-house mirror reflecting mostly that which is sensational, then we are imitating the tabloids at the supermarket checkout counters and inevitably will end up, as they do, with popularity and without credibility.

New Soviet openness offers opportunity

By Ben Wattenberg

Now is the time for Ronald Reagan to reassess, and perhaps redirect, American foreign policy. It can help America, and help Reagan. Call it "supply-side detente."

Something is going on in the Soviet Union. It's called "glasnost," a Russian word meaning "openness," but perhaps encompassing more than that.

To review the bidding: Some of the harsh strictures in the Soviet Union have been relaxed somewhat. How much has happened is the subject of much debate.

Anatoly Shcharansky was allowed to emigrate. Andrei Sakharov was released from exile. That's just two people. This month, however, a larger number of dissidents were released.

There also seems to be change on the emigration front. In all of 1986, there were only 914 Jewish emigres. In just the first month of this year, the Soviets claim that permission to leave was given to 500.

There are articles appearing in Soviet newspapers these days that are critical of Soviet government practices. Artists and musicians who had defected are now being asked to return to an allegedly freer Russia.

There are many caveats, however. Yes, more emigres may be coming out, but the emigration law was changed in a way that may end up more restrictive. Yes, there are criticisms of government — but directed against Gorbachev's adversaries in the system. No one has publicly criticized the boss. Yes, a few political prisoners have been released, but 5,000 to 10,000 remain, still subject to punishment in freezing isolation cells, without blankets, on a bread and water diet.

Yes, there is glasnost, but its purpose is not to enhance civil rights, but to unclog an inefficient and corrupt economy. Most important, there has yet to be any change in the substance of Soviet foreign policy. The genocide in Afghanistan continues.

How should we respond to all this? The way porcupines make love: carefully.

Glasnost, like "detente" before it, poses painful choices to a democracy like ours. By the time President Ford expunged the word "detente" from American diplomatic parlance, "Detente is a one-way street" had become an everyday metaphor. We increased trade with the Soviets and signed documents about human rights. We slowed down military spending. The Soviets took the trade, ignored human rights, built up their military and advanced in the Third World.

This time we need a supply-side, hard-headed detente. When the Soviets supply mini-steps, we can consider supplying mini-responses and explain our actions. If the Soviets supply serious changes in foreign policy or human rights, we can consider supplying responses in kind.

Glasnost offers an opportunity for Reagan. He's slumping. He ought to call together a new foreign policy working group. It should include his own Cabinet-level foreign policy officials but also key congressional players including the Democratic leadership of Jim Wright, Thomas Foley and Robert Byrd, and foreign policy, defense and intelligence chairmen Dante Fascell, Les Aspin, Lee Hamilton, Claiborne Pell, Sam Nunn and David Boren — a responsible group — as well as ranking Republicans.

Reagan ought to tell them: "Look, we may have a new situation. I want you in on the takeoffs because I, or my successor, will need you to be in on the landings. Let's try to figure out a set of first principles together."

Such a high profile initiative might get us talking about the future of the world, rather than the past in Iran. That's a plus for Reagan. More important, it could yield a major step toward that elusive goal, a "bi-partisan foreign policy", the mode of operation under which America prospered and grew strong.

Reagan speaking to conservative activists

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is delivering his annual pep talk to conservative activists at a time when they still are searching for the candidate to carry his banner in the 1988 presidential election.

Two of the leading bidders for conservative support—Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and the Rev. Pat Robertson—were on the agenda at today's session of the Conservative Political Action Conference.

Reagan, who has addressed the annual conference every year since he became president, was the luncheon speaker.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III pinch hit for the president at the conference banquet Thursday night and assured the conservatives that Reagan has no intention of coasting through the final year and a half of his presidency. "There is a lot of work that must and can be done," Meese said.

The banquet was billed as a Salute to the Reagans and the president was supposed to be the speaker. But at the last minute, White House aides said he wouldn't appear. They said Reagan would address the group by telephone and appear in person at today's luncheon.

Reagan's voice kept fading in and out during Thursday night's telephone hookup.

"Are you hearing me at all?" the president asked, aware there was some problem.

"It's not a wrong number," quipped David Keene, chairman of the American Conservative Union and master of ceremonies at the dinner. "But we're having trouble."

Finally, the president expressed his "deep and lasting thanks" and said he would see the group the next day.

Many of the younger delegates at the conference wore big yellow buttons that read, "Buchanan Believer '88," proclaiming their support for former White House communications director Patrick J. Buchanan.

Long a conservative favorite, the pugnacious Buchanan flirted with the possibility of running for president before announcing he would not make the race for fear it would divide the conservative vote and hurt Kemp.

North, who was fired from his White House job because of his involvement in the Iran-Contra affair. The buttons proclaimed North "An American Hero."

Keene conceded at a news conference that many conservatives "don't like some of the things the administration has chosen to push the last few years."

Meese appeared determined to deal with the frustration felt by many conservatives by proclaiming that Reagan was pushing ahead with his agenda.

"We are far from finished," the attorney general said.

U.S. policy toward Iran shifted after TWA hijacking, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran's influence in freeing passengers held hostage aboard a hijacked flight in 1985 led to a shift in U.S. policy for dealing with the Tehran government and to a proposed invasion of Libya, a report published today said.

Meanwhile, former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane told a special presidential commission that he falsified a document outlining the Iran-Contra affair to give the president the option of denying he authorized an August 1985 arms shipment to Iran, The New York Times and the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The National Security Council and Robert M. Gates, nominated by President Reagan to run the CIA, drew up plans in the summer of 1985 for Egypt to attack Libya, capture half its territory with U.S. air support and then use this position to force Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi from power, The Washington Post said.

McFarlane, along with his former deputy, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, and another NSC aide, Donald Fortier, devised the plan, the newspaper said.

The drive "was to embrace the Ayatollah (Khomeini) and demolish Gadhafi," the Post said, quoting an administration official who was involved in the policy-making.

It was thought that Iran, because of its assistance in the June 1985 hijacking of TWA flight 847, could be of further help in gaining the release of other Americans held hostage by pro-Iranian groups, the Post said.

Gates, then head of intelligence analysis for the CIA and now acting CIA director, wrote a paper in mid-July 1985 saying a U.S.-Egyptian attack on Libya would present an opportunity to "redraw the map of North Africa," the newspaper said, quoting sources who have read the document.

The White House was considering the action against Libya even though there was no evidence linking Gadhafi to the hijacking, the newspaper said. The purpose was to get tough with what the Reagan administration believed to be the most vulnerable of the governments supporting terrorism.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz considered the plan "crazy" and summoned Nicholas A. Veliotis, then ambassador to Egypt, home on a secret weekend mission to help thwart the proposal, the newspaper said.

Although the State Department failed to stop a mission to Cairo by Poindexter, it did succeed in limiting his authorized discussions to contingency planning rather than preparations for military action, the newspaper said.

TV stations accept condom ads

By The Associated Press

CBS and NBC stations in three of the biggest television markets have decided to accept condom advertisements, and ABC will begin running 30-second public-service announcements on their use against the spread of AIDS, executives said.

However, the big three networks continue to decline network-wide condom ads.

CBS announced Thursday it will allow the four TV stations and 18 radio stations it owns to accept condom advertising based on the attitudes of the local viewing or listening community.

WCBS in New York, WCAU in Philadelphia and KCBS in Los Angeles all said they would accept such ads.

"In evaluating the issue and our viewers' strong feelings both for and against it, the bottom line always returned to the urgent need to help save lives in our community," said Tom Van Amburg, KCBS vice president and general manager.

The fourth CBS-owned TV station, WBBM in Chicago, will set up meetings to gather local opinion, said Jonathan Rodgers, vice president and general manager.

CREATION...

ISN'T IT AMAZING
... Scientists say that there are no two snowflakes alike! How many snowflakes do you suppose there have been since the beginning of time? Billions? It staggers the imagination when one thinks of all the things that God has created from nothing.

Genesis, the first book in the bible means beginning. It tells of many of God's more major creations, and how He created all these things for the benefit of man. Attend church, study God's word and learn more of God's plan for man.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Jesus answered, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me." (John 14:6 NIV)

Several years ago, my sister's family and my family went camping together at a national park. My 7-year-old niece, Donna, was a poor camper and made sure everyone within earshot knew she was there under protest. However, the promise of an afternoon of fishing soothed her. We each chose a likely fishing spot along the rocky bank of the lake, baited the kids' hooks first and settled down to patiently await the telltale jerks on our fishing lines. At least, everyone but Donna was patient. Everytime one of us got a nibble, she pulled her hook from the water and moved to a spot under the elbow of the lucky fisherman only to move again at the next indication a fish was teasing a bait. Soon her enthusiasm for fishing dissolved into tears because she couldn't decide where to fish and couldn't catch so much as an old boot. Indecisiveness was a more serious problem for an acquaintance. Decisions were so difficult for this lady she often would not change from her nightclothes because she couldn't decide what to wear. Her condition degenerated to the point that she required psychiatric treatment. During a therapy session, her doctor forced her to make a minor decision; she was so distressed she went into the ladies' room and fainted. In John 14:6 Jesus makes clear the truth that He is the one and only way to salvation. Many people remain nonbelievers because they find this fact unacceptably harsh and they resent the exclusivity. However, God didn't set up his plan of salvation to exclude anyone or to be cruelly narrow-minded. On the contrary, He showed great compassion and understanding of our humanness. Had He given us a multiple-choice salvation, the majority of us would miss eternity in His presence because of our anxiety, confusion and indecisiveness. Because of God's wise simplification, the only decision to be made is whether to accept Christ as Savior or not. Jesus waits with open arms!

Religion Roundup

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Church workers who are constantly dealing with problems of others must guard against what the Rev. Charles Page calls an "empty-bucket syndrome." Page, pastor of Nashville's First Baptist Church, told Sunday school leaders that continually working to help others can cause a heavy drain on their own creative energies. "The empty-bucket syndrome is so subtle," he said, that "the bucket can be totally empty before we realize it."

Scientists of faith advising teachers on evolution topics

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An organization of 2,500 scientists who are Christians are advising the nation's public schoolteachers to shun ideological absolutes about human origins and discuss it "with accuracy and openness."

In a time of conflict between exponents of "creation-science" and "general evolution," the American Scientific Affiliation deplores "dogmatism at either extreme who insist that theirs is the only tenable position."

The manual generally defends basic evolutionary concepts, but cites qualifications, weaknesses and limitations, saying these factors tend to be ignored "in the heat of the debate and much popular writing."

This leaves "the erroneous impression that all creationists are united against all evolutionists," the manual says, but adds that instead the differences arise "where the scientific data are inconclusive."

The organization is distributing its 48-page manual to about 40,000 biology teachers across the country, advising them to guard against unsubstantiated conclusions and deal more frankly with unresolved questions and problems.

"Such considerations are generally ignored in biology textbooks and museum displays," the guidebook says in regard to a particular absence of transitional fossils between species, adding:

"It is time for a more balanced account of the evidence for macro-evolution at the level of general education. After all, coping with unsolved problems is what science is all about."

The booklet, "Teaching Science in a Climate of Controversy," details extensive evidence for the evolutionary theory, saying most scientists defend it as a key biological concept, but that calling it "fact" is unjustified.

"At present no consensus exists as to how evolution occurred," the booklet says, and the theory is built "only by extrapolation from small-scale evidence (and by reasoning that 'it must have happened')." On the other hand, the booklet says most scientists agree that "creation science" which claims the Earth is only a few thousand years old lacks a sound theoretical basis. However, some creation scientists don't claim a young Earth.

The affiliation, with offices in Ipswich, Mass., includes "theistic evolutionists," those who see evolution as how God works, and some "creation scientists" who maintain complex life forms appeared in abrupt stages.

"A broad middle ground exists in which creation and evolution are not seen as antagonists," the booklet says. "With that middle ground in mind, a teacher need not 'take sides' at all."

Biochemist Walter R. Hearn of Berkeley, Calif., who edited the booklet with wide consultation, says "a lot of teachers have said it's been very helpful. Before they've only had these polemical attacks or defenses of evolution."

"We've tried not to take sides, but just weigh the evidence," Hearn said in a telephone interview. "In science, evidence is what counts."

In the present atmosphere, he added, "it's hard to say anything that somebody won't disagree with. People on both sides claim too much."

The booklet cites numerous uncertainties and continuing changes in evolutionary theory, and sometimes past frauds seeking to provide "missing links," such as the Pittdown man.

"The classic missing link, the last ancestor common to both apes and humans, is still missing," the booklet says, citing abandonment of earlier claims that ape-like Ramapithecus of 9 million to 14 million years ago led to humans.

Yet, "somehow the creature found its way into many textbooks" as a definite human ancestor, despite serious doubts raised about it even from the first, the booklet says.

It says the National Academy of Sciences, in a 1984 booklet sent to teachers, "ignores the current situation in anthropology" in contending the "missing links" that troubled Darwin... are no longer missing.

This is "dogmatic rather than tentative" and "in science tentative conclusions should be stated in tentative form," the booklet says.

The booklet also says that researchers now warn against past assumptions that the first cell life resulted from random chemical processes and that it now "must be considered highly improbable," adding:

"At this stage in our scientific knowledge, it would be irresponsible to give students the impression that 'life arose by chance.' Scientists do not know how life arose."

However, teachers were told "it is unnecessary, and in many circumstances unwise, for a teacher to 'take sides' in class on the religious issue of Creator versus no-creator."

In the midst of current controversy over the subject, with all its explosive political, educational, religious and legal implications, teachers were advised:

"Science must be taught without omitting important points, overstating its claims or distorting the truth."

The booklet, prepared by the affiliation's Committee for Integrity in Science Education, headed by biologist David Price of Springville, Calif., and approved by a panel of consultants, says:

"Advocates of extreme positions tend to paint a win-or-lose, either-or picture... Yet between those extremes lies that broad middle ground where real science can coexist with real faith in God."

'A broad middle ground exists in which creation and evolution are not seen as antagonists.'

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — A church delegation back from a 19-day visit to the Middle East says religious passions increasingly are becoming involved in conflicts there.

However, the group said that leaders of several of the seven nations visited are open to religious efforts at peace-making, especially when Christians, Moslems and Jews work together.

The Rev. Arie R. Brouwer, general secretary of the National Council of Churches who headed the 11-member delegation, said such efforts were encouraged by several foreign ministers and parliamentary leaders.

They felt that the ministry of the three religious groups "is extremely important" because of existing "fears, distortions and misunderstandings that government officials find it most difficult to address," Brouwer said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Church groups concerned about corporate responsibility have voiced opposition to a New York Stock Exchange proposal to allow corporations to issue non-voting stock.

It would undermine the right of shareholders "to participate in company management" says Joyce Sohl, treasurer of the United Methodist Board of Global Ministries.

Religious bodies for years have been using their stock holdings to try to bolster ethical policies among corporations.

The Rev. Allen M. Mayes of the United Methodist Board of Pensions, a major stockholder, says issuance of non-voting stock would make it hard to carry out "our mandate to be responsible investors."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A gossip acquaintance who might not necessarily have your best interests at heart may skillfully question you today regarding things you want to keep secret.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Tips given you today by a well-meaning friend should not be taken at face value. His or her intentions are good, but the information could be faulty.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Companions shouldn't be permitted to make decisions for you today. What is advantageous for them might not serve your best interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be logical instead of wishful when sizing up testy developments today. Resolutions aren't likely if your assessments are unrealistic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even if you secretly feel a trifle superior to people with whom you'll be involved today, keep your thoughts to yourself. Arrogance breeds resentment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be asking for trouble if you find more to criticize than to praise in your mate's behavior today. Concentrate on his or her good qualities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If someone goes out of his or her way to assist you today, be sure to show the proper gratitude. No thanks will get no help the next time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Manage your money prudently when shopping today. Small extravagances could add up to a whopping total when finally computed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your awareness for details will be sharper than usual today. Try to use this as an asset, not an obsession. No one appreciates a flaw finder.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have to deal with someone today with whom you've recently had a disturbing experience. Don't pick up where you left off.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Being around pals who are penny pinchers will make you feel uncomfortable today. Seek out companions who are as generous as yourself.

Mourner of pet needs sympathy

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend whose dog is sick and growing feeble, and will soon have to be put to sleep. He has had the dog for 13 years and is very attached to her. When his pet dies, what expression of my sympathy would be appropriate?

This truly concerns me. I want to show my friend how much I care about his loss, but I don't want to come across as foolish or overreacting.

HIS FRIEND OF MANY YEARS

DEAR FRIEND: One who must put a beloved pet to sleep after 13 years of togetherness will grieve for that pet much as a parent would mourn the loss of a child. Not to diminish the depth of human relationships, but that's the feeling many pet owners have experienced. So do send flowers or a warm letter of condolence. It will be deeply appreciated, I assure you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 41 years died last summer, so in order to avoid receiving Christmas cards addressed to Edith Johnson, which I detest, I sent my Christmas cards out early and clearly wrote my return address as "Mrs. Horace A. Johnson."

Well, some insisted on addressing their Christmas cards to Edith Johnson. I was so angry that I drew a line through the "Edith" and above it wrote "Mrs. Horace A." and returned it to the senders, explaining that although I had lost my husband, his name was given — not loaned — to me.

A neighbor insists that a new etiquette has taken over, and a widow's mail should be addressed to her by her given name.

MRS. HORACE A. JOHNSON

DEAR MRS. JOHNSON: Your

neighbor is in error. It's the woman's choice. She may use her first name, the initial of her maiden name and her husband's last name — or, as your prefer, she can be addressed as Mrs. Horace A. Johnson. That name is yours until you change it by remarriage. And if you never remarry, you retain your husband's name forever.

DEAR ABBY: The pastor of our church (Olivet Baptist) said that you had been married three times. I see nothing wrong with divorce, I like your column, and his remarks will not stop me from reading it.

I don't believe you've been married three times and would appreciate knowing the truth.

A FAN IN LAWTON, OKLA.

DEAR FAN: The truth is your pastor is mistaken. I am still married to my first husband.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in regard to the man who became violent when a neighbor determined he was too drunk to drive and took his car keys. I am a recovering alcoholic who has been sober for over a year. I speak from experience when I say that alcoholism is the only fatal disease known to man where one of the major symptoms is denial of its existence.

It's too late to determine "how drunk" a driver was after someone has been killed by a drunk driver. Please don't drink and drive.

WANETTA HILL

EDDIE BURTON

Recital to feature Hill, Burton

Pampans Eddie Burton and Wanetta Hill will be presented in a joint vocal recital at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at St. Matthews Episcopal Church, 727 W. Browning.

The recital is sponsored by Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Hill will sing "Air Champetre (A Country Song)" by Francis Poulenc; "Die Forelle (The Trout)" by Franz Schubert; "Un bel di vedremo" from Madame Butterfly by Giacomo Puccini; "On My Shepherd I Rely" from Cantata No. 92 by Johann Sebastian Bach; and "Eternal Life" by Olive Dungan.

Burton will sing "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains" from Op. 41, No. 3 by F. Flaxington Harker; "Holy Art Thou," Largo from Xerxes by G.F. Handel; "Alleluja" from the motet Exultate, jubilate by W.A. Mozart; "The Holy City" by F.E. Weatherly and Stephen Adams; and "The Lord is My Light" by Francis Allitsen.

Accompanying the vocalists will be Mary Bush, pianist; Jennifer Scoggins, pianist; and Heidi Kolb Rapstine, violinist.

Hill, a Pampa native, received her Bachelor of Music degree with an all-level teaching certificate from the University of Texas at Austin in 1973. While attending UT, she was active in opera workshop and community theater. Closer to home, she was a member of the "Texas" cast in Palo Duro Canyon during the summer of 1970.

Since 1973, she has been a private teacher of voice, piano and guitar, and has been music director at First Presbyterian and First Christian Churches of Pampa. She is a past junior fine arts director for Pampa Fine Arts Association and has helped with Chautauqua stage presentations.

In 1984, Mrs. Hill became music teacher at Horace Mann Elementary School. She has sung solos in the Community Chorus presentations of the "Messiah." Since 1985, she has been working toward a master's degree in education from Wayland Baptist University, and will receive her degree upon completion of a masters recital on the Wayland campus this spring.

She and her husband Richard have three children: Damian, 11; Megan, 8; and Nathanael, 3. They are all active in the music ministry at First Baptist Church.

Eddie Burton is a long-time Pampa resident. He graduated from Pampa High School in 1975, where he was a member of all-region, all-area and all-state choirs. He attended West Texas State University, where as a returning student he graduated in 1984 with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree in business management.

Burton was music director at First Christian Church of Pampa for five years, and has helped organize stage and sound shows for Chautauqua for the past four years. He has also sung solos and served as assistant director in the Community Chorus presentation of the "Messiah." Most recently, he was the featured entertainment for the Chamber of Commerce Country Fair at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Burton will leave Pampa after Sunday's recital for Cincinnati, Ohio, where he will work on a record project which he hopes will lead to a professional gospel music career.

He and his wife Tonya have two children: Lance, 3, and Luke, 1. They are active in the music ministry of First United Methodist Church. Mrs. Burton is an English teacher at Pampa High School.

Mary Jennings Bush will play "Souvenir de Porto Rico" from Op. 31 by Louis Moreau Gottschalk, in addition to accompanying the vocalists. She began studying piano at age 4 in her home town of Tulia. She received her Bachelor of Fine Arts in Applied Music degree from Texas Tech University in 1981, graduating cum laude. Her honors there included Mu Phi Epsilon Outstanding Senior, Mu Phi Epsilon Alumni Scholarship for Excellence in Performance, and the Eva Browning Music Scholarship.

Mrs. Bush opened the Mary Bush Piano Studio in 1983 and also is a free-lance professional accompanist and performer. She and her husband Fred have a daughter, Elizabeth, 1.

Heidi Kolb Rapstine, a Pampa native, is an honor student at Amarillo College. She is a piano student of James Rauscher and a violin student of Beverly de la Bretonne. She is also studying cello performance with Edward Tillary.

Jennifer Scoggins is a music teacher at Baker Elementary School. She is a graduate of West Texas State University.

Veterinarians provide emergency care

By MARGARET BAUMAN Associated Press Writer

WESTMINSTER, Colo. (AP)—Zak the cat protested mildly at first, but Dr. Ann Brandenburg-Schroeder continued to rub more corn starch and corn meal into the cat's gray and white fur to absorb the oil that coated the feline.

It was 2 a.m., and Brandenburg-Schroeder, an emergency care veterinarian, worked steadily until she was relieved by technician Betsy Sylvester, who alternately held, scrubbed and talked to Zak.

A petroleum-slicked cat may not qualify as a life-threatening situation, but it's one of a number of jobs emergency care veterinarians handle these days. They provide emergency care to thousands of animals who need help in a hurry on nights, weekends and holidays.

Many have pets of their own, and they enjoy the challenge and independence their skill allows. Their experience and equipment prepare them to handle situations ranging from gunk-coated cats to Great Danes with pneumonia to victims of fights and poisonings to euthanasia.

Emergency veterinary care costs more than a routine office visit. Initial fees run about $40 or more.

Dr. Wayne E. Wingfield, chief of emergency medicine and intensive care at the Colorado State University College of Veterinary Medicine and Biomedical Sciences at Fort Collins, is optimistic about the future of emergency care.

"Everywhere I go emergency care is a very booming business," Wingfield said during a tour of the hospital's intensive care unit. "There are a lot fewer kids today and a lot of pets are being used for child substitutes." Wingfield, whose staff treated 17,000 small animals in 1986, conducts lengthy seminars on emergency veterinary care in many states and in several foreign countries.

He works at the hospital too. Before he got off duty early one recent morning, his staff had seen 15 emergency cases. He was also overseeing the care of pets in the intensive care unit.

There was Maggie, a German short hair-pointer cross from Jamaica Plains, Mass., resting between sessions of radiation therapy. Maggie, who was recuperating from emergency brain surgery, was doing well, Wingfield said.

Spooky Bear, a large black dog from Cheyenne, Wyo., in remission from lymphosarcoma, was being treated for a urinary tract infection.

In a special ICU oxygen unit, Max, a Great Dane from St. Augustine, Fla., was recuperating from pneumonia.

The CSU veterinary school has the most and the best of costly veterinary equipment (an ICU oxygen unit for a single pet runs about $6,000), but private emergency clinics also are well equipped to handle most emergencies.

They also see victims of fights and cruelty to animals.

Dr. Mike Sweeney is the chief veterinarian at Animal Emergency Service Inc. in Lakewood, which handles emergencies for 40 veterinarians. He recently stitched up Chelsey, a small white poodle mauled by two pit bulls at a private kennel.

Dr. Mary Anne Smith of Central Veterinary Emergency Clinic in Denver recently found herself suturing inside the mouth of a 6-week-old chow, which had been attacked by its father for eating out of the wrong food bowl.

There is no Medicaid or Medicare for dogs, cats, birds, gerbils, snakes, frogs, rabbits and other pets. Pet insurance is available, but most pet owners don't carry it and coverage is somewhat limited.

"The best insurance for most people would be to keep their pet in the yard," Sweeney said.

Harvester baseball team scrimmages PD, Caprock

Weather permitting, the Pampa Harvesters will scrimmage Palo Duro and Caprock in the first baseball action of the season Saturday in Amarillo. And Pampa Coach Bill Butler isn't the least surprised at the climatic turn of events. He's as accurate as the weatherman in predicting snow at the beginning of baseball season.

"I've been here seven years and it's always been like this. It never fails," Butler said.

The Harvesters are scheduled to open the season next Friday in Amarillo against Amarillo Caprock.

Pampa returns six starters, including shortstop Troy Owens, center fielder Mark Williams, left fielder Shawn Frye, third baseman Glen Pruet, pitchers Grant Gamblin and Bret Mitchell, from last season's squad.

Butler said the Harvester pitching should be strong, but he's concerned about the defense, a sore spot last season.

"We have to improve on our defense. We made a bunch of errors last season," Butler said. "If our defense can come around and we can hit the ball a little better, we should be in pretty good shape."

Giving starters Gamblin and Mitchell mound help will be Owens, Pruet, Williams and James Ellison.

Groom, Kelton girls tangle in area game

Saturday at 7 p.m. at the McNeely Fieldhouse, the Groom Tigerettes meet the Kelton Lady Lions in Class 1-A area playoff action.

The Lady Lions, guided by Coach Dave Johnson, and coming off a bi-district win over the Follett Pantherettes, are 22-3 on the season. Johnson said the team's main problem in preparing for Saturday's contest is battling influenza which has hit two players this week. Kelton is the Class 4-1A runner-up.

At Groom, Coach Frank Belcher has not had the flu problem this week with his girls and he looks forward to an exciting game.

"Kelton is known for having quick kids and being good outside shooters," Belcher said. "We're going to have to stop them from taking 2nd and 3rd shots, play good on defense and just do what we do best."

The Tigerettes, representing District 2-1A, have compiled a 20-7 mark this year.

Aside from the flu haunting the Lady Lions, neither coach has had a problem with injuries this week.

The winner of the Kelton-Groom game will meet the winner of the Wheeler-Claude matchup which is set for 7:30 tonight at Clarendon College.

The National Football League announced last week that former Harvester grid coach TOM TIPPS was retiring in March from the Green Bay Packer scouting staff. Earlier plans to do so were delayed by five-bypass heart surgeries in November.

Rockets fizzle before Celtics

HOUSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics battled the Houston Rockets on the court for a 99-92 NBA victory and then Celtics Coach K.C. Jones went on the warpath after the game.

"It was more than physical, it was dirty basketball," Jones said following Thursday night's bruising victory in The Summit.

Jones' ire was directed at Houston forward Jim Petersen and center Akeem Olajuwon for their aggressive play in the game between the 1986 NBA finalists.

It wasn't playoff basketball, but it was close.

"Those elbows were no accident," Jones said. "It's unfortunate that players like Petersen and Olajuwon have to throw elbows. That doesn't say much for those players."

"I'm surprised to see players of their quality stoop so low."

Petersen dished out an elbow to Kevin McHale in the third quarter, inspiring a 10-2 Celtics spurt that put them into the lead for good. McHale scored six straight points after a brief altercation with Petersen.

"It's better to just let us play than to get us aroused," said forward Larry Bird, who was the recipient of an elbow from Olajuwon. "We have so much strength on offense and defense."

Olajuwon drew four fouls and a technical foul over a 1:37 span of the fourth quarter and caught Bird with an elbow that required stitches under his right eye.

"When you throw elbows like that it can end somebody's career," Jones said. "But it just got Kevin going with his game."

"There's no need to throw elbows like that. We're one of the least physical teams in the league."

Houston held a 63-62 lead midway in the third period but a basket by Bird, the Petersen-McHale scuffle, and three straight buckets by McHale put the Celtics ahead for good.

While Jones criticized the rough play, Bird took it in stride.

"I play the game and I've given some and I've taken some," Bird said. "That's basketball. We were bumping a little and we got bumped. They threw a few elbows."

Olajuwon finished with 15 points and 11 rebounds but he had to sit down through much of the crucial fourth quarter when the Rockets were scratching to get back in the game.

"The key was we lost our composure," Petersen said. "The ball kicked out a couple of times and they got the fast break. We had some possibilities to win the game."

While Olajuwon was forced to the sidelines with the flurry of fouls, Boston center Robert Parish saved the day with 30 points and 12 rebounds.

"He was the best player on the court tonight," Bird said of Parish. "Things were happening out there tonight without me making them happen."

Second year guard Steve Harris led the Rockets with 22 points, followed by Petersen with 20 points and Robert Reid also had 15 points.

McHale hit 21 points and Bird finished with 16 for the Celtics.

Houston Coach Bill Fitch grimaced as he pulled Olajuwon in the fourth quarter.

"Akeem had some silly fouls," Fitch said.

Harvesters to finish up basketball season tonight

After a severe beating in the first game, Pampa Coach Robert Hale will be looking for some revenge against Levelland in the final game of the basketball season tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse.

"We sure would like to get them, not only because they beat us so bad the first game, but it's the last game for the seniors," Hale said. "It would also be nice for the players who are coming back."

Pampa lost to Levelland 64-34 in the first meeting.

"Levelland has a pretty good club. They're not real tall, but they're quick, a whole lot like Borger. They play pretty physical and they like to press a lot," Hale said.

Tonight's finale tips off at 7:30 p.m. A junior varsity game between the two teams will start at 6 p.m.

The Harvesters also hope to snap a five-game losing streak.

"A win tonight would put us in the double-figure column," Hale said.

Pampa is 9-20 overall and 5-10 in district play.

Both teams suffered lopsided losses Tuesday night. The Harvesters fell to district champion Borger 88-67 while the Lobos were downed by Hereford 75-56.

PERES, Marquette women's basketball coach, whose winning ways are getting to be a 'habit'.

Think Texas' UIL program is confusing? Iowa has both six-player and five-player state championships in girls basketball, as schools cannot agree on which style to play.

One would think there could be enough leadership found on the Pampa School Board to schedule board meetings when the basketball team isn't playing, as has happened several times this season, thus showing at least a modicum of support for school-sponsored activities and consideration for constituents.

Marquette and Dayton are expected to join the seven-team Midwestern Collegiate Conference, thus terminating long on-going discussions about a Catholic school conference involving Notre Dame and De Paul.

Trivia: What NBA bench-warmer was the first to take the UIL to court over the summer camp rule?

"The Celtics, the NIT and top sports agent Bob Wolfe were all out watching us," ROBERT McPHERSON said from his Bos-

Pampa swim squad in district meet

The Pampa High girls' swim team will challenge Amarillo High for the district championship Saturday at the Maverick Club in Amarillo.

Based on past performances, the Sandie girls and Lady Harvesters should go right down to the wire for the team crown.

Pampa finished second to Amarillo High in the Amarillo Invitational two weeks ago with the Sandies scoring 175 points and the Lady Harvesters 129. Pampa finished ahead of 16 teams.

"It should be between Amarillo High and us among the eight teams entered," said Pampa Coach Norma Young. "It's just a one-day meet. Whoever makes the top six in the morning will automatically qualify for regionals. The finals will determine who is district champions."

Richelle Hill in the 200 individual medley and 500 freestyle is Pampa's best bet to win a first-place medal, but the Harvester girls are also strong in other events. Pam Morrow, 200 freestyle; Betsy Chambers, 200 freestyle and 100 backstroke; Michelle Scott, 50 freestyle and 100 freestyle; Jennifer Hinkle, 50 freestyle and 100 freestyle, all have the ability to qualify for regionals. The 400 freestyle relay team of Scott, Hinkle, Morrow and Hill are also strong contenders.

"We're tapering off right now so the swimmers can get some rest before district," added Young. "We should be rested up enough to drop some of our times at district."

The Pampa girls won eight of nine duels this season and placed second in two meets.

"That's pretty good, considering we've only got 12 girls on the team," Young said. "Teams like Amarillo High have as many as 25."

Earlier, the Pampa girls placed second in an 11-team meet at Midland.

The Pampa boys' team don't have enough numbers to compete for the team title, but Patt Richards, 100 fly; Brad Pope, 200 freestyle, and the 200-medley relay team of Pope, Richards, Neil Turner and Greg Logan stand a good chance of qualifying for regionals, Young said.

Amarillo High is favored to win the boys' title.

Preliminaries for the district meet get underway Saturday with the finals scheduled for 6 p.m.

The Pampa girls finished fourth in the district meet a year ago.

Blue announces retirement

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Left-thander Vida Blue, who helped the Oakland A's to three world championships in the early 1970s, has decided to retire while he's still in good health.

Blue, 37, announced his retirement from baseball Thursday, less than a month after signing as a free agent with the A's and one day before he and the team's other pitchers were due to report for spring training.

Team spokesman Jay Alves said the announcement came as a surprise and the A's did not know anything beyond Blue's formal comments.

"Over the past few years I have been contemplating retirement," Blue said in the statement. "So with mixed emotions and slight remorse, the day has finally come when I will no longer be playing major league baseball. "My physical condition is good, so while I am still in good health I have decided to retire."

Blue, a resident of Oakland, helped the A's to world championships in 1972, 1973 and 1974, recording three 20-victory seasons in seven full years with the team.

He pitched for the San Francisco Giants the past two seasons, going 10-10 with a 3.27 earned-run average in 1986 and running his career record to 209-161 with 2,175 strikeouts.

After leaving Oakland following the 1977 season, Blue spent four years with the Giants and two with the Kansas City Royals. He was suspended from baseball for the 1984 season after being convicted for cocaine possession.

Fate of SMU football program still uncertain

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Despite some indications the NCAA won't impose the so-called "death penalty" on the Southern Methodist University football program, it probably will be a week or more before the school learns its fate, SMU's faculty representative said.

When he and other school officials met last weekend with the NCAA infractions committee at San Diego, the NCAA enforcement staff stopped short of recommending the suspension of football at SMU, faculty representative Lonnie Kliever said Thursday.

The enforcement staff's proposal at the hearing was the same as SMU's, Kliever told The Associated Press.

"We went into the hearing with the staff and the institution agreeing on violations and proposed penalties. Neither the institution nor the enforcement staff went in asking for the death penalty," Kliever said.

Kliever would not say what penalties the school and the enforcement staff proposed.

However, Kliever emphasized that the NCAA's infractions committee is not bound by the enforcement staff's recommendation and still could impose the maximum penalty on its own.

"I have no indication ... what the conclusion of the infractions committee will be. I have not been told that we will not get the death penalty," Kliever added.

Under legislation adopted in June 1985, the NCAA may suspend repeat offenders for up to two years, prohibiting competition, recruiting, coaching or scholarships during that period.

SMU, the most penalized school in NCAA history, was already under sanction when it was reported last fall that senior tight end Albert Reese and former player David Stanley were living in rent-free apartments provided by an alumnus.

Larry White, SMU sports information director, said he is preparing for a news conference that will be called when the school gets the word on its fate. That could be a week or more away, White said.

"We have received no word from the NCAA as to what our penalty will be," White said.

David Berst, director of enforcement for the NCAA, would not discuss the case or what penalties the NCAA sought.

SMU's program already is in shambles, Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer noted Thursday in saying he hopes the NCAA will be lenient.

SMU head coach Bobby Collins and athletic director Bob Hitch resigned after the latest allegations, and no replacements have been named, pending the NCAA's ruling.

Because of the existing sanctions, Southern Methodist was allowed no new scholarships in 1986 and only 15 new scholarships this year. However, with the future of the program in the air, no recruits were invited onto campus and none was signed on the Feb. 11 national signing date. SMU is also under a two-year ban against live television or bowl appearances.

"Look how SMU has already suffered," Switzer said. "They're already in disarray and turmoil, and the people responsible for most of what happened are no longer there, they say. People talk about the death penalty being a two-year proposition, but it in fact would force them into doormat status for a decade or more. And who can recruit to a doormat?"

Frank Remington, professor of law at the University of Wisconsin and chairman of the six-member infractions committee, said last week that lesser penalties are an option of his committee.

"The legislation calls for the imposition of a major penalty, the loss of contests, subject to exceptions authorized by the committee in unique situations. It is called the death penalty, but it says the prohibition of 'some or all' contests. We could cancel as few as one game. It is an oversimplification to call it the death penalty.

"Its purpose is the desire of membership to have substantial penalties. We are bound by what the membership tells us."

Remington said he considered the 427-6 vote by NCAA schools to adopt the death penalty a mandate.

"We believe if we do not apply the measure of the new penalty structure when it seems appropriate, we will have to answer to the membership as to why we did not."

He added, "The membership indicated they wanted serious infractions viewed seriously. That message was loud and clear. There is no question that that was the message. That's the message the membership sent to the infractions committee. That is the message we heard."

Kliever said SMU had no indication that its presentation at the hearing "blunted the committee's sensitivity to the nature of the infractions," but he said the university believed there were mitigating circumstances that would justify a lesser penalty.

Pair shares lead in Tsumura Open

HONOLULU (AP) — It takes a couple of tournaments to settle down and begin playing well, according to the first-round leaders of the inaugural $300,000 LPGA Tsumura Hawaiian Ladies Open.

Alice Ritzman, a 10-year LPGA veteran, said she has always had trouble with the Florida tournaments which start the tour.

"I've never done well in Florida," said Ritzman, who shared the lead with Chris Johnson at 4-under-par 68 in the 54-hole tournament at the Turtle Bay Hilton course.

"I hit the ball well in Florida," Ritzman said. "In fact I hit better there than during the first round here. But I just seem to have bad luck in those opening tournaments in Florida."

Ritzman was one stroke shy of making the cut at both January's Mazda Classic in Boca Raton, Fla., and at the Sarasota Classic held earlier this month in Sarasota, Fla.

Last year, Ritzman missed the cut at only five of the 26 tournaments she entered. She placed in the top 10 in six tournaments on the way to earning $84,443, the best of her career.

Johnson said she finds early tournament play difficult because she becomes rusty after the winter break. She said she needs at least two tournaments to settle into a rhythm.

"I get into a routine of taking Monday off, practicing on Tuesday and Wednesday and being ready for play on Thursday," said Johnson, a seven-year LPGA tour veteran. "Although I did do better in Florida this year than I ever have before, I can see that my concentration is growing here in Hawaii."

Johnson finished 12th in the Mazda Classic and fourth at Sarasota.

Cindy Rarick, who shot 3-under-par 69 to tie Dawn Coe for the runner-up spot after the first round, said she also has trouble in the early Florida tournaments.

"During my first two years on the tour, I definitely did not play well in Florida," said Rarick, who was 71st in the Mazda Classic and tied for 19th at Sarasota.

Heather Farr, Hollis Stacy, Mary Murphy and Missie McGeorge were next at 70, while Pat Bradley was among 10 players who shot 71s.

Mavericks not at elite status yet

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks haven't reached elite NBA status yet.

Although they still lead the Midwest Division by two games, the Mavs discovered in a 113-96 loss to the Boston Celtics Wednesday night that they are not on a level with the NBA champions.

"We really don't worry about the Dallas Mavericks," said Larry Bird, who had 16 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists for his second triple-double of the year. "We just go out and play against them. We've had good success against them throughout my career (13-1)."

"Dallas just caught us on a bad night," said Kevin McHale who led Boston with 28 points. "After losing two in a row and playing as poorly as we did, (Coach) K.C. Jones really got on us. He doesn't yell too often, so when he did we got our tails in gear."

The world champions were riding a two-game losing streak after a 20-point loss to Utah and blowing a 17-point lead to the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I think we saw what it takes to win a world's championship," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta. "They played like they were possessed. They just kicked us all around."

It was the first time in 68 NBA games that Dallas had been held to under 100 points.

Boston outshot Dallas 50 percent to 40 percent and outrebounced the Mavs 59-43.

Bird said "We had played two bad games in a row and we wanted to get back on the winning road. We knew we would have a tough game Thursday night against Houston. We didn't want to go there with three losses in a row."

Danny Ainge scored 25 points, and Robert Parish had 14 for the defending world champions.

Ainge said, "We had a lot of rest and really got into our transition game tonight. It may have looked easy but it wasn't. We had to work for every point we got."

Dallas was led by Mark Aguirre who had 29 points and Sam Perkins who added 22.

Dallas starting guard Derek Harper missed his first game of the season because of an infected left foot. "Dallas is a different team without Derek in there," said Ainge.

Mac O'Grady makes his presence felt

Wins first PGA tourney of '87

By Murray Olderman

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (NEA) — Mac O'Grady is the reigning mystic of the pro golf tour. Actually, he's more of an iconoclast, which has made the golf world very much aware of his presence.

He is also finally becoming known as a winner — at the age of 35.

O'Grady won the first PGA tournament of 1987, at La Costa, Calif.; it was his second career victory on the pro tour. In 1986, he won the Greater Hartford Open, beating Roger Maltbie on the first playoff hole.

Yet O'Grady has also made a name for himself by bucking the establishment.

Commissioner Dean Beman of the PGA Tour slapped O'Grady with a $5,000 fine and a six-week suspension last season for making critical remarks. In a feud over a previous $500 fine, O'Grady had been quoted as calling Beman "a thief with a capital T."

Now O'Grady has clammed up, turning his attention 100 percent to golf and trying to build on his successes before turning his iconoclasm loose again.

That is not to say Mac O'Grady hasn't proven his ability to play golf.

In the last two years, O'Grady won almost half a million dollars on the PGA Tour and proved he can strike a ball with the best. Last season he was ranked No. 8 in average driving distance.

O'Grady also ranks among the leaders of the game in exotic verbiage.

Listen to him speak: "Golf is going through a transition. You have the predictable stable of superstars going through the vicissitudes of change. They no longer play like the virtuosos of the past. There's a new generation coming up, but everybody seems to be cut out of the same die. I could say, 'OK, I played well today, made some good shots, enjoyed the round and I'm looking forward to tomorrow.' I color it up a bit."

At LaCosta, O'Grady sprang such phrases on the golf media as "focal dystonia myoclonus," "my conscious mind is hemorrhaging," "atrocityies start to eventuate," "emotional memory circuits are activated."

That's how he explains the "vicissitudes" of playing golf for a living, which he knows from experience.

Born on April 26, 1951 (his name was Phil McGleno, but he changed it in 1978 for private reasons), O'Grady was one of seven children. His family moved from Minneapolis to Los Angeles in 1960. At age 12, he started caddy at Riviera and Bel-Air country clubs. Later several of the golfers he caddied for became his sponsors. He turned pro in 1972.

O'Grady spent years trying to get on the PGA tour, failing qualifying school 16 times before he finally made it in 1982. He was 31 years old.

He still feels a bit like an outsider on the sophisticated PGA Tour.

"I try to be a mystery man," O'Grady admits, "but underneath it all, I'm really a very simple fellow. I'm the most ultraconservative person you know."

O'Grady is in fact an ascetic. He retreats to the California desert at Palm Springs, which is home for him and his wife, Fumiko. He spends afternoons running uphill 2.7 miles from Highway 111 on the outskirts of Palm Springs to the base of a tramway that ascends 10,000 feet to Mount San Jacinto.

The whipcord-lean 6-footer was once a marathoner.

"I've never been into drugs," O'Grady says. "I don't drink alcohol. I have taken impeccably good care of myself all my life. I run, eat properly, get good exercise, use discipline."

O'Grady has no agent, plays no exhibitions, signs no endorsements, has no outside contracts. He is determined to focus on golf for the next five years.

He is involved, however, in a project called Morad, which is an acronym for Mac O'Grady Research and Development — the name is on his golf bag.

O'Grady has funded a study, pouring in $150,000 over the last two years, to "find out how neurology views the brain, larger muscles, reaction time, length, tension and curve of muscles, proprioception, to see if it's possible to come up with new theories to explain how young prodigies develop to a virtuoso stage, and how to stay there."

Placing second were Jerrod Cambern, 250 C Class; Keith Stowers, Open C Class, and G.M. Walls, 125 C Class.

Trey Walls was third in the 16 & Under Small Wheel Class and Clint Deeds was fourth in the Open A Class.

Also competing were Jerry Brazile and Garry Metts.

The next Enduro is March 8 in Lubbock. The Association has scheduled an Enduro on its lease near Turkey May 17.

Dirt riders place at Carlsbad

Brandon Strawn, a Pampa High School sophomore, won the overall title among all classes riding the short course in the Hackberry Motorcycle Enduro held recently in Carlsbad, N.M.

Strawn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Danny Strawn of Pampa and a member of the Top Of Texas Dirt Riders Association.

Other Association members placing first were Raney Bradley, 250 C Class; Dwight Chase, 40 & over A Class, and Heath Babcock, 125 C Class.

"I try to be a mystery man, but underneath it all, I'm really a very simple fellow. I'm the most ultraconservative person you know."

— Mac O'Grady

A book is in the works, but O'Grady says he won't release the material until he's won a couple more tournaments.

It'll certainly delve into the phenomenon of why he puts left-handed, though he is basically right-handed.

O'Grady swears that if he is ever leading by four or five strokes going into the last day of a tournament, he is going to play the entire final round with left-hand clubs.

Which probably says something about his growing confidence.

"To get where I am today, in my own inner liberation," says O'Grady, "I feel as omnipotent as (Jack) Nicklaus feels..."

"How high in this spacious firmament will I go? How much pull will the gravitational force field be on me and limit my development and my progress?"

Maybe only the mystics can say.

Public Notice

Notice is hereby given by the City of Pampa, Texas that the following Ordinance No. 1063 will be considered at a Regular City Commission Meeting scheduled for February 24, 1987.

ORDINANCE NO. 1063
AN ORDINANCE AMENDING SECTION 7 OF ORDINANCE NO. 780 GRANTING A FRANCHISE TO MERRILL CABLE TV, INC. (SAMMONS COMMUNICATIONS, INC. ITS SUCCESSOR IN INTEREST) BY PROVIDING FOR EXTENSION REQUIREMENTS AND COST REIMBURSEMENT FOR SUCH LINE EXTENSIONS; AMENDING SECTION 11 OF SAID ORDINANCE NO. 780 TO INCREASE THE FRANCHISE FEE PAYABLE TO THE CITY OF PAMPA.
BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY OF PAMPA, TEXAS:

Section 7 of Ordinance No. 780 adopted on its final reading by the City Commission of the City of Pampa, on July 27, 1976 is hereby amended in its entirety to read as follows:

"Section 7: TYPE OF SERVICE: Cable Company agrees to furnish prompt and reasonable service to any person, firm or corporation within the City, upon request, SUBJECT, however, to the following line extension requirements: Cable Company will extend its trunk and distribution system to service new subscribers requesting service after the date hereof at the normal installation charge and monthly rate under the following terms and conditions:

(a) Where the new subscriber or subscribers requesting service are all located within 500 feet from the termination of the system and

(b) Where the number of homes to be passed by such extension is equal to or greater than 50 homes per mile of such extension

In the event that the requirements set forth in (a) and (b) above are not met, Cable Company will extend its cable television system based upon the following cost-sharing formula:

(1) Total Cost to Construct Extension - Miles of Extension - Cost per Miles of Extension
 (2) Total Cost Per Mile of Extension
 (3) Company's Share Per Home

(4) Total Cost to Construct Extension Subscribers Requesting Service - Cost Per Subscriber
 (5) Company's Share Per Home - Subscriber's Share
 "Total Cost to Construct Extension is defined as the actual turn-key cost to construct the entire extension including electronics, pole make-ready charges, labor and the cost of the house drops.

Cable Company shall not assess any additional cost for service drops of 150 feet or less. For drops greater than 150 feet, the subscriber shall pay for the additional feet over and above 150 feet on a cost-plus-labor basis.

By way of example and for illustration purposes only concerning the formula above for line extension, based on an estimated total cost of $28,500 and a five (5) mile extension, the result would be as follows:

(1) $28,500, 5 mi. = $5,700 cost per mile
 (2) $5,700, 50 homes = $115 Company's share per home
 (3) $58,500, 30 homes = $950 cost per subscriber
 (4) $950 minus $115 = $835 subscriber's share

Cable Company further agrees to maintain all of its equipment in a good state of repair at all times, except and unless its operations are disrupted by fire, strike, riot or other occurrence beyond its reasonable control, or by an act of God, in which case the Cable Company will use its best efforts to restore normal service within a reasonable time thereafter. The Cable Company shall permit the City, its agents or employees, to make a reasonable time and on as many occasions as the City may deem necessary for its supervision. Notwithstanding any other provision hereof, the Cable Company will furnish one (1) free connection to each of the following within reach of its facilities: each hospital, fire station, police station, each public and church school, with the provision that said signals will not be reamplified or reproduced at more than one television set."

SECTION 2
 Section 11 of said Ordinance No. 780 which provides for the franchise fee to be paid to the said City in the amount of three per cent (3%) of the "Gross Subscriber Receipts" is hereby amended only as to said franchise fee so that said Section shall provide for a franchise fee of five per cent (5%) of the Gross Subscriber Receipts. The increased franchise fee shall be effective on the first of the month following the month in which this Ordinance is finally adopted and passed.

Bomb blast

Rescue workers carry away a body from the wreckage of a bombing in the Pakistan border city of Peshawar. At least 10 people were killed and more than 60 were injured in the attack Thursday on an office of an Afghan guerrilla group.

Government makes debt payment

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico paid off a $1.1 billion bridge loan from central banks of 16 countries and the U.S. Treasury Department, the government announced.

The credit, approved in August 1986, provided funds while the country negotiated a new long-term loan with foreign commercial banks.

In a related development, Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricoli was quoted Thursday saying that the country will receive in March $7.7 billion in credit pledged by the foreign banks, part of a $14 billion international rescue package.

Delivery of part of the credit was delayed when some banks refused to endorse the agreement.

"We are about to receive the money," the government newspaper El Nacional quoted Petricoli as saying.

"Because of the favorable evolution of our balance of payments, Mexico can cover without difficulties the mentioned bridge credit, even though it has not yet received the resources from the commercial banks," the Treasury Department's announcement on the bridge loan said late Wednesday.

It said the balance of the loan was repaid last Friday.

Nearly half the bridge loan was provided by the U.S. Treasury Department, which contributed $272 million and the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank, $273 million.

The Bank of Japan provided $75 million and the central banks of Argentina and Brazil $60 million each. Smaller amounts were contributed by central banks of Belgium, Canada, West Germany, England, Spain, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Sweden, Colombia and Uruguay.

Mexico's non-oil exports grew by about 34 percent in 1986, surpassing oil for the first time since 1979, but were not enough to make up for losses from the plunge in world petroleum prices.

Official says economy worse than during the depression

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Mexico would feel betrayed if the United States enacts protectionist measures against its exports, says an adviser to President Miguel de la Madrid.

"What's the game? We would feel very uncomfortable," said Enrique Cardenas.

Cardenas, an economist and president of the University of the Americas in Puebla, Mexico, said

U.S. protectionist legislation would make implementing de la Madrid's fiscal plans more difficult as the country tries to emerge from its worst economic crisis in decades.

Mexico's economic crisis is deeper than the Great Depression in the United States more than 50 years ago, Cardenas said Thursday.

Druse gain control of West Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Relative calm settled over most of west Beirut today as a Druse-led leftist alliance consolidated its gains against Shiite militiamen. Police said at least 200 people were killed in the all-week battle for control of the Moslem sector.

A Syrian-brokered truce took hold Thursday night and appeared to be holding today in most of the embattled capital.

However, heavy sniping interspersed by occasional blasts of rocket-propelled grenades kept patrols of a special security force from moving into Tarek Jedideh and Karakoul el-Druse neighborhoods, where Druse and Shiite gunmen were only 50 yards apart, police said.

Amal, the main Shiite Moslem militia, has been fighting a leftist alliance of the Druse and Lebanese Communist Party since Sunday. Police said more than 200 people have been killed, 400 wounded and scores of buildings gutted by fires in the battle.

The special security force made up of 200 Syrian army commandos, 750 Lebanese troops and policemen, 150 Druse and 50 Amal militiamen set up buffer zones in six neighborhoods with shoot-to-kill orders, police said.

Syria, which maintains 25,000 soldiers in east and north Lebanon, supports all the factions involved in the fighting and has tried to stop the killing.

A police official said Walid Jumblatt's Druse militia had routed Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Amal militia from several west Beirut districts and had gained control of about 75 percent of the Moslem sector.

Most leftist gains were in the Hamra commercial district and the predominantly Sunni Moslem residential districts of Zarif, Aisha Bakkar and Tallet Khayyat, according to police. They said three Amal pockets held out in Hamra.

Some of the fiercest fighting took place around the seven-story Commodore Hotel, which the Druse captured in a seven-hour battle Wednesday.

Premier says Bush had role in trip

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's prime minister said Vice President George Bush played a role in secret arms sales to Iran but claimed American "party factions" are trying to conceal it.

Iran's official Tehran radio Thursday night quoted Prime Minister Hussein Musavi as saying unspecified documents showed Bush was involved in former U.S. National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane's visit to Iran in May 1986.

McFarlane brought a plenitude of American weapons in an effort to improve relations with Iran and seek Tehran's help in obtaining the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon.
