Kendall cut as football coach

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa High School football coach John Kendall has been punted upstairs.

Kendall was stripped of his coaching duties and made full-time athletic director following a closed-door meeting Tuesday night with Pampa school trustees.

Kendall, who suffered through a disastrous 0-10 season in 1986, will lead the search for his replacement.

The coach met with trustees for about 45 minutes in closed session before the board voted unanimously to make Kendall a full-time athletic director.

The district will begin an immediate search for new leader of Pampa football.

For the past three seasons, Kendall served as both football coach and athletic director. Trustees indicated that combining the two jobs may have hurt the football program.

Trustee David Robertson said this morning that Kendall agreed to a cut in pay in response to his reduction in duties. Robertson said the district has not yet decided on Kendall's new salary and has asked Interim Superintendent Tommy Cathey to study the pay issue.

Kendall had been earning $39,800 as coach-athletic director.

Kendall came to Pampa with high hopes in 1982 after leading Liberal, Kan., High School to a state football championship in 1980.

But Kendall failed to duplicate his Kansas success while serving in Pampa, a winless 1986 season dropping the coach's five-year Pampa record to 10-38-2.

Trustee Wallace Birkes said Tuesday that new University Interscholastic

League regulations and the number of varsity sports at Pampa High School require a full-time athletic director.

"With all of the things that are going on today and with all of the sports that we have, we feel like it takes two people to handle that job," Birkes said.

Kendall said the move was by mutual agreement between him and the board. He agreed with Birkes' assessment.

"The job right now is getting too big — too large to coach and do the administrative work," he said.

Kendall also said the time has come for a new face in the Pampa football program, even though that means putting an end to his 20-year coaching career. He said he reached some of his goals as a coach in Pampa, but not the ultimate goal of a winning record.

"I still believe that Pampa could be a great athletic town and a great football town," he said.

Kendall's contract runs through the 1987-88 school year.

Cathey said that despite Kendall's losing record in Pampa, he still considers Kendall a good coach and a "super administrator." He pointed to Kendall's winning record in Liberal but said a "dark cloud" seemed to follow him in Pampa.

Cathey said he supports the board's decision.

A graduate of Southwestern State University in Weatherford, Okla., Kendall's best season at Pampa was in 1983, when his team compiled a 5-5 record and went 4-3 in district play.

This past 0-10 season was Kendall's most disappointing, though the Harvesters did manage close losses to playoff contenders

Hunt for ISD boss on track

The search for a new Pampa school superintendent is "right on schedule" and a new school chief should be named in late March, an Austin search consultant told school trustees Tuesday.

James Jeffrey, superintendent search consultant for the Texas Association of School Boards, told trustees he has placed announcements for the post on TASB and Texas Association of School Administrators' computer networks and already has received five or six applications for the job.

"I think we're right on schedule. I think we've got a very good time frame," Jeffrey told the board Tuesday. "I believe we'll find some excellent candidates."

Jeffrey was hired to lead the search for a new superintendent following a September Pampa board meeting convened at the TASB convention in San Antonio.

Jeffrey

Superintendent James Trusty resigned in mid-December and Assistant Superintendent Tommy Cathey has been filling in as interim superintendent.

The temporary superintendent's position was recommended by Jeffrey during the San Antonio meeting.

Tuesday night, Jeffrey presented trustees with a 12-week timetable for the superintendent search. He said applications will be accepted until Feb. 20.

The consultant said he expects 50 to 60 applications for the Pampa post. He said he expects to receive applications both from Texas and out of state.

"This would be a very popular position," he said Tuesday.

The consultant noted that the Pampa district has a good reputation across the state and is a size many superintendents prefer.

In late February, he said, a two-member committee made up of area educators will trim the number of suitable applicants to five or eight candidates. Once they are chosen, Jeffrey said, he will meet with trustees to discuss the finalists.

Interviews with the board are scheduled for early March, during which time trustees expect to narrow the field to two or three finalists, Jeffrey said. He said trustees should visit the com-

Loser considers appealing Hemphill judgeship ruling

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — A district court judge's decision affirming the write-in votes for Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober has not sealed the fate of his opponent Don Schaeff, Schaeff's attorney indicated.

Judge Pat H. Boone Jr., 154th Judicial District, ruled Tuesday that only two write-in votes for incumbent Gober were invalid, and he awarded one of those votes to Schaeff, making the final tally 774 for Gober to 759 for Schaeff.

The district court recount matched the same totals recorded on election night Nov. 4.

A recount by the county clerk in November gave Gober two more votes.

Schaeff refused to accept the clerk's recount, however, and he filed suit in 31st District Court challenging the validity of 50 of Gober's write-in votes.

Judge Boone of Littlefield was called to preside in the case because 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny of Wheeler was ineligible by law.

Schaeff's attorney, Mack Sansing of Canadian, said Tuesday that he disagrees with Boone's ruling, "but I'm not saying he did anything wrong." "I guess that's why we have appeals courts," Sansing added.

The attorney said he plans to rest a few days before he and Schaeff decide whether to appeal Boone's ruling.

"After you've been through a ringing out like this, you want to rest," Sansing said. "You never want to make a decision in the heat of the battle. I'm going to think about something else for a day or two."

Sansing noted that the two Gober ballots that Boone threw out were among the ones that Schaeff was contesting.

"One had 'Don Gober' written in, and the other had 'Mr. G.' written away from the candidate box," Sansing said.

The ballot that Boone awarded to Schaeff had a mark in the box next to Schaeff's name in the Democratic list and "Mr. G." written in the write-in column, he added.

Gober's attorney, Joe Hayes of Canadian, said he's not surprised with the judge's favorable ruling. "Naturally, I'm pleased with it," Hayes observed, adding he has no idea what Schaeff and his attorney plan to do now.

Hayes concluded that the recounting and the appeals "are just part of the legal system. I'm glad the system is there, and I'm glad that it works."

Boone and the two litigants spent Monday afternoon examining 401 ballots from voting Precinct 1. Boone spent two hours sorting through the ballots, dividing Schaeff's votes from Gober's. The two

Pickens makes new bid for Diamond Shamrock

NEW YORK (AP)—A partnership led by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. today renewed its attempt to gain control of Diamond Shamrock Corp. by launching a partial tender offer for the Dallas-based energy concern.

An earlier bid by the Pickens group to acquire Diamond Shamrock for securities valued at $2 billion was rejected by the company Dec. 18, and the offer was dropped the same day.

The partnership—called Lucky Partners and which includes Mesa Limited Partnership, an Amarillo, Texas-based energy group of which Pickens is general partner, and Alabama businessman John M. Harbert III—today began a tender offer to buy 20 million Diamond Shamrock common shares for $15 each, or $300 million.

Together with the 5 million shares the partnership already owns, the 20 million shares would give the partners about 22.5 percent of Diamond Shamrock's approximately 111 million total shares outstanding.

David Batchelder, president of Pickens' Mesa Petroleum Co., said Lucky Partners' decision to make the tender offer came as a result of Diamond Shamrock's "hostile response" to the original offer.

"We're saying to the shareholders, 'Look, we want to increase our ownership level and we're willing to pay $15 a share to do it,'" said Batchelder. "We're intent on acquiring the company."

Diamond Shamrock's stock was up 8 1/2 cents a share at $14.25 in early trading today on the New York Stock Exchange.

"We have happy shareholders," said Batchelder. "This is a stock that hasn't traded at $15 in over a year."

In Dallas, Diamond Shamrock spokeswoman

Ginger Shearburn said the company declined to comment on Pickens' latest maneuver. Batchelder said Mesa Limited had received no response from Diamond Shamrock's management.

Lucky Partners said its tender offer was limited to 20 million shares because certain provisions of Diamond Shamrock's "poison pill" anti-takeover measures take effect if a stockholder acquires more than 25 percent of the company's stock.

However, the partners said the partial offer was a first step in their attempt to acquire the whole company, and that they believed the offer would "increase the likelihood that the company's stockholders will receive the opportunity to judge for themselves the merits of any proposal" the partners might make to buy the remaining stock.

Once the tender offer is completed, Batchelder said Lucky Partners would make a proposal to acquire the remaining Diamond Shamrock stock, probably in exchange for common or preferred units of Mesa Limited Partnership stock.

The offer, scheduled to expire Feb. 4, is not conditioned on a minimum number of shares being tendered.

When Diamond Shamrock's directors rejected Pickens' initial takeover offer, they cited the "uncertain value" of the Mesa Limited Partnership units to be exchanged for the stock, and questioned Mesa's ability to continue making the proposed cash distributions, or dividends, to holders of the units.

The company also said the directors agreed "that the long-term interests of our shareholders would be better served by an independent Diamond Shamrock pursuing its current strategies," which include cost-cutting and other restructuring steps.

House fire Robbery ruled arson

CANADIAN—Hemphill County Fire Marshal Jim Graham said a fire that gutted a rural Hemphill County house was deliberately set.

The home of Sue Lynn Fiel, seven miles southeast of Canadian on Texas 33, burned to the ground early on the morning of Dec. 29, Graham said. Firefighters with the Canadian Volunteer Fire Department began battling the blaze at 2:14 a.m. Dec. 29, but to no avail.

No one was at the house at the time of the blaze.

Graham said this morning that he couldn't determine where the fire started, but that he had taken samples from the ruins to the State Fire Marshal's Office in Lubbock.

Graham said there is nothing left of the house, which was not insured.

A benefit shower for Fiel and her two children will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the home of Dr. Pat Crouch, 500 Purcell in Canadian.

Tana Thompson, one of the shower organizers, said that they are seeking linens, kitchen utensils, furniture or other housewares that the Fiel family can use until they can afford to buy their own.

Those who cannot come to the shower may contact Thompson after 5 p.m. at 323-5172 or Betty Crouch at 323-6624.

Lewis and Dull were transferred to the Panhandle jail early this morning following their arrest in Pampa in connection with the armed robbery of the Allsup's convenience store in White Deer.

The men were accused of threatening a store clerk with a shotgun and taking $46 from the store.

Pampa Patrolman Brian Hedrick said he arrested one of the suspects after stopping a pickup truck for a defective taillight shortly before 1 a.m. today. Hedrick said he stopped the truck in an Allsup's parking lot, 1000 W. Wilks.

When the driver, Lewis, stepped out of the truck, Hedrick said he noticed a shotgun and a ski mask that matched the description of those used in the White Deer robbery.

Store employees pay co-worker's ransom

FORT WORTH (AP)—Employees of a grocery store paid a ransom to secure the freedom of an assistant store manager who was kidnapped and handcuffed to a tree, authorities say.

David C. Schmidt, 32, assistant manager of a Winn-Dixie store in Fort Worth, was held for about seven hours before he was rescued just off a major highway in nearby Johnson County, officers said.

Schmidt was found unharmed Tuesday after his co-workers dropped a plastic bag containing an undetermined amount of ransom money, police Sgt. Ray Clark said.

Officers said the man was abducted just after midnight Monday when he pulled into the driveway of his home after closing the store. The abductors obtained the keys to the store and the combination of the safe from Schmidt, police said.

Schmidt's wife, Diane, telephoned the store after becoming worried that her husband had not returned home, Clark said.

In other action, the board named former Pampa Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett as a half-time history teacher at Pampa High School. Sackett, an educator by trade, resigned as chamber manager Nov. 20, effective Jan. 15.

He will begin his new job Jan.

19, replacing Margaret Hopkins, who announced her resignation Dec. 16. Hopkins' resignation takes effect at the end of the semester, Jan. 17.

Also accepted was the resignation of Travis Elementary secretary Peggy Agan.

The board also voted to resume holding its action meetings at Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert, again, but continue holding its work sessions in neighborhood schools. Time for all meeting will continue to be at 6 p.m.

The board has been holding all meetings in neighborhood schools since September in an effort to increase public input. Several board members expressed disappointment in attendance at the meetings.

 College at Marshall. She attended East Texas State University and North Texas State University and earned a master's degree in special education from West Texas State University.

She taught at elementary and secondary schools before moving to Pampa. She taught at Pampa for 24 years before retiring in 1985. At Stephen F. Austin Elementary School, Mrs. Morgan taught trainable mentally retarded students. Many of her students participated in the Special Olympics and later received employment to help them become independent and self-supporting.

Mrs. Morgan was named Woman of the Year in April, 1984, by the Pampa Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

She was a member of Delta Kappa Gamma Society and was selected as one of the notable women of Texas. She also was a member of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority.

Mrs. Morgan also was active in the St. Mark's Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, which honored her with its Laity Award in 1978. She had served as general secretary of the church and was a member of the Stewardess Board, the Missions Board and the choir. She also had served as chairman of the Board of Christian Education.

Survivors include her husband, Leslie, of the home; a daughter, Cheryl Hensley, Pampa; five sons, Elbert Hensley, Greenville; Stanley Williams and Ronald Williams, both of Austin; Joey Baggett, Jewett, and Rory Baggett, Dallas; two stepdaughters, Barbara Conway, Altus, Okla., and Jo Ann Windom, Denver, Colo.; a stepson, Leslie Morgan Jr., Dallas; her mother, Mrs. Osie Whitaker, Texarkana; a sister, Osie Baggett, Athens, Texas; and nine grandchildren.

 Amarillo High and Hereford. Five of the Harvesters' 10 losses were by eight or fewer points. "The season was disappointing to me as a coach and to the players because we played better than our record indicates," Kendall told The Pampa News in an early-December interview. "We made a lot of mistakes which kept us out of the win column. "We had way too many turnovers and too many mental mistakes, which really hurt us."

Trustee Robertson said Kendall and Cathey will lead the search for a new head coach. The board expects to name the new coach in April or early May.

Texas man says son was hostage taker

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth businessman says a gunman who snatched a boy from his parents and held him hostage for eight hours at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport is his son, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

The gunman's father did not realize his son had been arrested until he saw newscasts Tuesday, the newspaper reported in a copyright story.

"If he had known, he would have gone there (to the airport) and himself put an end to it," said the interpreter, a family friend who declined to be identified.

The father said he is angry, upset and ashamed of his son's actions, and has tried to contact the family of hostage Michael Caruso Jr., 10, to apologize, without success.

Solah Kassem Abou-Kassem, 26, identified by authorities as the gunman, had told authorities he was from Syria and had jumped ship in Houston.

Authorities said they were not aware of the man's local connections, but said it fit in with their findings and is probably true.

"This marries up with the information we have that the man has lived in the area for some time," said Tom Shehan, D-FW Airport police chief. "None of the stories about him jumping ship in Houston are true, we know for sure."

Solah Abou-Kassem told authorities Tuesday he stowed away on a ship and came to the U.S. by mistake last September.

The father told the Fort Worth newspaper that his son and the rest of the family emigrated to the United States six years ago from Syria, to join another son here.

The father said he formerly owned an auto sales firm and a grocery store in Fort Worth. Employees of the Como Grocery Store said Solah Abou-Kassem worked at the store for at least six months before it was sold.

"I know him (Solah) personally and I saw him many, many times," said part-time store employee Geid Klosur.

Klosur said he didn't know when Solah Abou-Kassem last worked at the store or what he had been doing before the hostage incident.

The father said he planned to meet with authorities in Dallas today to tell them his son has been disturbed for several years. He said he had tried to persuade his son to undergo psychiatric treatment, to no avail.

Ron Chandler, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service office in Dallas, said the man acted strangely when questioned. He said the man had trouble when talking with investigators.

"He talks all right for a while and then he kind of lapses," Chandler said. "He seems to have trouble gathering his thoughts at times."

"He claims to have suffered an accident 10 years ago, a construction accident, with a head injury and he claims he hasn't been right since then," Chandler said.

Chandler said the man refused to discuss his actions at the airport with investigators.

"He just wanted to go to Egypt for whatever reason," Chandler said. "It's unclear, we don't know if it's premeditated."

A man Monday walked into the Delta Air Lines terminal at the airport, pulled out a pistol and abducted a 10-year-old boy, threatening to kill the youth if not flown to Egypt.

He surrendered quietly to police negotiators after an eight-hour standoff. The boy was released unharmed.

Abou-Kassem was charged Tuesday with aggravated kidnaping and making a terroristic threat and was ordered held in Dallas County jail on $750,000 bond.

White fires parting shots at TDC critics

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Outgoing Gov. Mark White says Gov.-elect Bill Clements is making Texas a "laughingstock" and U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice is "myopic" in his evaluation of the Texas Department of Corrections.

White made his comments late Tuesday in a surprise visit to the Ellis II and Walls units in Huntsville. He flew in his state-owned jet to Huntsville, accompanied by a handful of reporters to show them how well he believes the prison system is functioning.

The governor strongly disagreed with Justice's ruling announced Monday holding the prison system in contempt of court for failing to comply with his landmark prison reform order. The contempt order would fine the state $24 million a month if it does not complete reform measures by April 1.

White contended the judge could not fairly evaluate the prison system from his Tyler office.

"I think Justice is trying to be fair in his own way, but I think he's being myopic," White said.

The governor said Clements' criticism of his administration's handling of the prisons is "the worst baloney I've ever heard."

"Clements is making Texas the laughingstock of the nation," White said.

He said Clements had forced the recent resignation of TDC Director O.L. McCotter, whom the governor praised as doing more to solve prison problems than any past prison leader.

In reference to an upcoming Friday meeting between Clements and Justice, White said he doubted the two men would come to a "meeting of the minds" as Clements has promised.

"That's going to be impossible," White said. "Clements gets confused with even inanimate objects."

He also said Clements had turned the prison system into a political football.

Reggie Bashur, a spokesman for Clements, disputed the governor's criticism.

"For 15 months, Bill Clements called upon the White administration to act to solve the prison crisis," Bashur said. "There was either inaction or the wrong action, and it has culminated in this contempt citation from Judge Justice."

He called White's comments "unfortunate" and "inaccurate," saying "This type of heated, partisan rhetoric serves no purpose."

During walking tours of the two units, the governor pointed out what he said were improvements in cleanliness, food quality and medical care that he contended are making TDC a "constitutional prison."

He also defended the prison's solitary confinement policy, saying it is the only way to handle the 5 to 7 percent of the convicts who are "snapping dogs."

McCotter said he had been given only four hours notice of the governor's visit. He echoed White's criticism of Justice, saying the prison system is constitutional and would be less safe if Justice's proposal in the contempt order is implemented.

"I find him to be totally closed minded," McCotter said. "I've tried to get him down here for two years, but he won't come. If we could get him here, it would change his mind."

Police officers shot in mobile home incident

MONAHANS (AP) — A gunman who fired through the windows and doors of his mobile home wounded three officers and a teen-ager and held off police for about five hours before he was subdued with tear gas and a concussion grenade, police said.

W.D. Smith, 59, was in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa Tuesday with a gunshot wound to his back, internal bleeding and tear gas toxicity, said a hospital spokeswoman who would not give her name.

Two officers and the teen were in stable condition at Ward Memorial Hospital in this West Texas city known for its Sand Hills State Park. A third officer was in stable condition in Odessa.

The gunman was apprehended at about 8:45 p.m. when four officers stormed the mobile home and tossed a concussion grenade in the bedroom where he barricaded himself, said Monahans Police Chief David Mills. A concussion grenade stuns its victim, he said.

Mills said the ordeal began when two officers responded to a call about a man who had a gun at his home.

"The officers got there and he opened fire on them," Mills said.

The officers escaped injury in the initial gunfire, but the shots hit a teen-ager who was visiting a friend across the street, he said.

"We had officers surrounding the trailer and the guy started shooting through doors, windows, glass, everything," Mills said.

One of the officers was shot in the face and a second officer who tried to help him also was shot in the face, he said.

After telephone negotiations with the man failed, authorities fired canisters of tear gas into the trailer.

"He returned gunfire after the first two," Mills said. "After the last one he barricaded himself in the back bedroom and that's where the officers found him."

During the ordeal about seven or eight mobile homes in the vicinity were evacuated, and nearby street lamps were shut off, he said.

Monahans Police Sgt. Elis Franco was wounded in the face and eyes and transferred to Odessa for treatment, hospital officials said.

Lt. Dave Watts also was hit in the face and shoulder by shotgun pellets and Sgt. Wayne Poor, was hit in the right leg and left ankle, said Gary Shreze, Ward Memorial hospital spokesman.

The teen, who was not immediately identified, was wounded in the hip, he said.

The Monahans Police Department has 14 officers.

Officials say economic news threatens tourism

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's thriving tourism industry, which got a boost from the Sesquicentennial celebration, could be hampered by negative publicity over the faltering Texas economy, officials say.

In the wake of the oil bust, soaring unemployment and a depressed economy might give potential tourists the wrong idea, said Rupert Richards, chairman of the Texas Tourist Development Board.

"Tourists will think we are a rusting, dust-bowl economy if the negative publicity continues. There's no doubt the negative exposure will hurt Texas tourism unless we can counter with positive stories and more national advertising," Richards said Tuesday.

"If we continue to talk about how bad the economy is, without advertising the virtues, potential tourists will stay away in droves," added Larry Todd, executive director of the state's tourism agency.

The 1987 Legislature convenes next week and will be forced to deal with projected 1988-89 budget deficits of up to $5 billion for the 1988-89 budget years.

The tourism agency has requested a budget of $5.2 million — a five-fold increase over the last period — for national advertising and a toll-free telephone response number for each of the next two years.

Todd and other officials said the year-long celebration of Texas' 150th year of independence from Mexico generated enormous positive publicity nationwide for the state.

The Sesquicentennial including a visit from Britain's Prince Charles, the Public Broadcasting System' "Lone Star" history of Texas, and a network television special that was seen in 11 million homes, said Patrick Terry, executive director for the Sesquicentennial Commission.

"How can anybody call those results disappointing when it didn't cost the taxpayers anything?" he asked.

Todd said the celebration "resulted in millions of dollars in free national and international publicity, inspired many Texans to vacation in the state and boosted (the tourism agency) advertising budget with $350,000 in royalties from sales of official merchandise."

But Todd said Texas must continue a strong advertising campaign to continue attracting tourist dollars.

"We not only have to overcome the state's economic difficulties, but we have to compete against other states and countries that have more money for advertising than we," Todd said.

"That's what it's going to take to keep Texas in its position in the international and domestic marketplace," Todd said. "Travelers like to visit 'in' places and Texas is certainly a super place, but we must continue to show tourists that we offer them the best economic buy in the country."

Different as night and day

Off Beat
By DeeDee Laramore

There ought to be a law passed forbidding "day" persons and "night" persons from marrying each other. Maybe it could be handled when the couple goes to apply for a marriage license. That's it... Make them fill out a questionnaire before the license is issued.

It could read something like this:

1. Do you wake up in the morning feeling...
A. refreshed and ready to begin the day?
B. drowsy and in need of a cup of coffee to get you going?
C. growling like a bear while lying in waiting for the slightest reason to tear someone's head off?

2. Do you eat breakfast...
A. cheerfully?
B. grumpily?
C. with your eyes closed?

3. As the clock hands get closer to 10 p.m., do you...
A. Put on warm pajamas and climb into bed?
B. Plan on spending the next 30 minutes watching the evening news and then go to bed?
C. Begin remodeling the house?

3. If you awake at 3 a.m., do you...
A. Turn over and promptly go back to sleep?
B. Turn the radio on and then go back to sleep?
C. Get up, turn on lights throughout the house, eat breakfast and watch television before going back to sleep?

Anyone answering "A" to these questions can be considered a day person. Those answering "B" could be considered a borderline night person. The "C" answers are bona fide night persons.

I am a day person. As you may have guessed, I married a night person. Most of the couples I know are composed of one day person and one night person. I seldom encounter a day couple or a night couple, but I imagine if there are such phenomenons they must live a boring life.

What would life be like if every morning wasn't spent trying to drag your spouse out of bed, push him into the shower, and encourage him to put on the appropriate clothes for going to work? In the meantime, he is doing his best to cover every inch of his body with covers and pillows, make himself a deadweight, or force his wife back into bed.

By night time, the day person is slowly winding down, tired from a long day of activity and ready to "hit the sack." (Which reminds me of the Korean girl who had just arrived at Girlstown, U.S.A. in Borger. When told to "hit the sack" she went into the kitchen, picked up a grocery sack and asked the houseparents, "Now what do you want me to do with this?")

The night person, on the other hand, is just gearing up. Because of the dictates of society which means most available work must be done during the day, this night person has already put in a full day, yet as night falls, his energy has increased rather than diminished. So he goes to bed, where he proceeds to talk and wiggle and fiddle with the radio, much to the annoyance of his sleepy day person partner.

My parents were a day person - night person couple, too. It was opposite of Vic and I, however. Dad was the day person and it was his delight to wake us up every morning. He'd come into the room, turn on the light and sing, "Rise and shine. It's a beautiful morning!" I loved it. I'd throw back my covers and hop out of bed, ready to face the day.

But this is like throwing cold water on a night person. Nothing incites night people to do murder more than a cheerful day person early in the morning. We even have to deal with this problem around the newspaper office.

We've reached a compromise. We day people can say "morning" to a night person, but we cannot under any circumstances say "Good morning!" since that is an editorial comment that may or may not be true for everyone.

Goodness knows why some people are nocturnal and others diurnal. It probably relates to our ancestors way back in our primordial past. Some cave men liked to hunt in the day and others at night, I suppose. What's amazing is that these internal time clocks have remained through the years. Especially with the way day people and night people keep getting married. You'd think they'd have cancelled each other out by now.

Dry town still dry

NOVICE (AP) — The owner of the only grocery store in this West Texas town says she will pursue a goal of selling beer and wine despite a vote against the proposal.

Voters rejected alcohol sales in the town of 200 in a 53-41 vote Tuesday, even though the owner of Novice Grocery and Cattle Company had said she would have to close her doors if they did.

Despite the election loss, Martha Smith said she isn't ready to shut down.

"I'm not going to close my doors immediately," she said. "I've just got to find some way to keep it open. I don't give up on anything."

She said she may try to have another election if she can get another petition.

"I've got to do something because I'm at the point where I have to do something," she said.

Election Judge Laudy Piptard said the issue brought a "heavy turnout" of voters. She said about 110 were registered to vote.

Coleman County commissioners scheduled the election after

Ms. Smith complained her store, which caters to many elderly residents, would not survive unless she was allowed to sell beer and wine.

The measure was opposed by members of Novice's three churches — the Church of Christ, the Baptist Church and the Methodist Church. All three paid for an ad placed in the Coleman Chronicle and Democrat-Voice asking Novice residents to vote against beer and wine sales.

"I paid $90 for an ad and let everybody know I was against it, so I'm very happy with the outcome," said David Coffman, minister of Novice's Church of Christ.

Ms. Smith said the ad probably hurt her attempt to get the measure passed.

"We didn't really get out and campaign for the issue," she said.

Because of the economic slump, Ms. Smith said she has been unable to pay her bills. She said closing the store would hurt elderly residents who depend on her to deliver their groceries.

Grandfather jailed on child-sale charge

PASADENA (AP) — A roofer scrambling to make ends meet for himself and his 20-month-old granddaughter on less than $250 a week was charged with trying to sell the child for $1,700 cash.

Roy Dean French, 55, is in the Harris County Jail today in lieu of $25,000 bond after he was charged with sale of a child, a third-degree felony that could bring a 10-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine if he is convicted, jail clerk M. Wittington said.

Authorities said the man initially offered to trade the girl for $1,500 cash and an old pickup truck, but accepted the larger cash payment in the parking lot of a Pasadena discount store Saturday morning.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Soviets won't drop religious repression

If you didn't understand the system, you might think the Yuletide spirit had taken hold in the Kremlin. Andrei Sakharov, the distinguished physicist and Nobel Prize winner who earned the ire of the Soviet regime through his persistent advocacy of human rights was permitted to leave the closed city of Gorky and return to Moscow. His wife, Yelena Bonner, has been pardoned and will stay with him.

Meantime, Irina R. 'ushinskaya, the Russian poet who has spent three and a half years in prison for writing "anti-Soviet tracts," arrived in Britain with her husband, Igor Gerashevko. She was permitted to leave the Gulag to receive treatment for heart problems aggravated by her imprisonment. And Inna Kitrosskaya Meiman, wife of mathematician and human rights campaigner Naum Meiman, was scheduled to leave the Soviet Union for experimental cancer treatment in New York.

The Soviet leaders understand that Westerners get sentimental around Christmas time, and they knew they would get propaganda mileage from gestures of good will. Ratushinskaya put her release in perspective: "But I remember my Russian friends who must stay in prison and who will meet this Christmas in prison without meals and in the cold. . . I ask all of you to help them too."

Another reminder of the character of the Soviet regime came with news of a student "demonstration" in Alma Ata in the Central Asian province of Kazakhstan. For the first time, news of such dissidence was carried in the Soviet newspaper Tass, apparently because officials felt the news would leak out. The disturbance was said to be an expression of resentment that a Kazakh party leader was forcibly replaced by an ethnic Russian functionary from Moscow.

This disturbance highlights several internal contradictions now troubling the Soviet empire. Kazakhstan and other Central Asian regions are predominantly Moslem. Not only do the Soviet rulers create resentment by suppressing ethnic populations — in the Ukraine, Georgia, Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania, as well as in Central Asia — but they do not permit freedom of religious expression. No other government is so systematically intolerant of religion, but they cannot destroy belief.

We share the joy that those permitted more freedom by the Kremlin slavemasters must feel. While cheering these small victories, we must keep asking why the Soviet rulers cannot tolerate expressions of religious belief. When the Soviets permit churches, mosques and synagogues to operate without restraint, we may just listen to those who keep announcing the regime's changing character.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The column that appeared under Stephen Chapman's photograph and byline in Friday's Pampa News was written by Donald Kaul. Kaul wrote Friday and today's Tribune Media Services columns, substituting during Chapman's vacation.

By DONALD KAUL

I know, you're sick and tired of hearing and reading about the Iran-Contra Follies. I don't blame you. The "media," as the disrespectful call us, have focused on the White House scandal to a degree that borders on obsession for the past month. Even the dead know about it by now. Sure it's an extraordinary story and sure it's important, but there are other things to life, right?

In that spirit I was about to call a moratorium on the subject for the rest of the year and write about other issues. Don't applaud yet; I can't do it.

There are just too many dumb things still being said about the matter, too much foggy thinking. I feel like a person on a bus, overhearing a conversation in which the participants keep making misstatements of fact. You keep wanting to lean over between them and say, "No, that's wrong. Columbus discovered America in 1442, not 1942, you silly twits."

So bear with me. Let me set the record straight on the following:

■ Immunity: The President has asked that his former aides, John Poindexter and Oliver North, be given immunity from prosecution by the Senate Intelligence Committee so that they can tell the story of the sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of funds to the contras in Nicaragua instead of pleading the Fifth Amendment whenever the subject comes up. He has been joined in this plea by a number of politicians and columnists. The idea is that Poindexter and North will then be free to tell the truth without fear of winding up in the slammer.

It is a bad idea. I would think that Poindexter and North, once immune from prosecution, would be less apt to tell the truth rather than more. One suspects that their silence thus far is designed to protect others as much as it is to protect themselves.

With immunity they could say it was all their idea and take the fall for their superiors without worrying about paying a penalty. (Don't believe that stuff about "use" immunity allowing the pair to be prosecuted on other evidence later. If they get immunity, they walk.) They should be forced to make the hard choice between protecting their superiors and saving their own skins.

If, on the other hand, they really did carry out the contra fund operation on their own, they should go to jail. You can't have middle-level foreign policy officers going into business for themselves in the basement of the White House. At the very least they ought to pay rent for the office space.

■ The "He's The Only President We've Got" Cha-Cha-Cha: This, traditionally, is the last line of defense for supporters of a president in trouble. The thinking is that, yes, the president may have made mistakes but there is more to be lost in bringing him low than there is to be gained by seeking truth and justice. Supporters of Lyndon Johnson said that, as did those of Richard Nixon.

It is bad thinking. It is bad because our faith in our system of government depends on no man being above the law, not even the president. That is an idea Europeans tend to find naive but it is one of the things, in my view, that makes us better than Europe. We fall short of the ideal on occasion, but surely blatant lawlessness in the White House cannot be tolerated. Forgiven, perhaps; but not tolerated.

Once we have embarked on a search for the truth in a matter like this, we must pursue it to the end, however gruesome. That, for better or for worse, is the American way. I happen to think it's for the better.

■ Lying: President Reagan has said that he knew nothing of the diversion of Iranian funds to the contras while it was going on. His chief of staff, Donald Regan, has said the same thing. So has Secretary of State George Shultz, Vice President George Bush and CIA Director William Casey.

The scene is similar to the one that greets police investigating the assassination of a mobster in a public restaurant. There can be 100 witnesses, but nobody saw nuthin' and nobody knows nuthin'. The suspicion is that someone is lying.

I wonder why no one in the White House has thought of using a lie detector to sort out the facts. It wasn't more than two months ago that the president and his attorney general were willing to force a good share of the federal bureaucracy to submit to lie detector tests on grounds of national security.

If it was such a whiz-bang idea then, what's wrong with using it now? Put Regan and Casey and Schultz and Bush and, yes, the president too, on the machine.

If they're telling the truth, what have they got to be afraid of? That's the conservative way. There, I feel better now. And don't forget, Columbus was 1492.

Mother knows about squash

Some of us have been interested in nutrition since reading the earliest books of Ellen White. We have been convinced that some foods are good for you and some are not.

In the 1940s we were joined by the promoters of vitamins. In the '50s a few ecologists sensed that food grown in leached-out soil was less nourishing than previously.

There were some books written on the subject — notably, You Are What You Eat. But nutrition was still a "hobby," and food faddism was a "cult," and reputable medical scientists were either not interested or openly hostile.

Some of us could not have imagined that the highly conservative New England Journal of Medicine would ever prescribe "diet in the prevention of disease."

But it happened. People lacking vegetables and grains in their diet are 2½ times more likely to develop lung cancer.

Without enough of the beta-carotene that comes from leafy green and yellow vegetables you are four times more likely to develop one form of lung cancer.

And this is the sense of research now published in the prestigious New England Journal of Medicine.

While bookstores in recent years have been overstuffed with recommended diets, now traditional medical journals are recognizing nutrition as a "science." Medical schools are beginning to teach nutrition for disease prevention and therapy.

The American Cancer Society is recommending a "balanced diet."

Now that "everybody" is aboard the nutrition bandwagon, perhaps somebody should offer a word of constraint.

As surely as each of the several medical disciplines was created amid much enthusiasm — each — surgery, chemistry, therapy — each in times has turned out to be but part of a whole.

Nobody has yet offered "the last word" on the subject.

Because of variables among individuals, it may be that no prescription will fit all.

But among the present best books on the subject there is one, Nutrition, Health and Disease, by Dr. Gary Price Todd, which seems to me to combine our present best knowledge of medicine and nutrition.

Dr. Todd is convinced that "optimum health could possibly result in a lifespan well over a century, perhaps even the Biblical promise of 120 years. But physiological variables are such that everyone must become sufficiently knowledgeable to be increasingly responsible for his own health."

Deadbeats cause higher interest rates

By Robert Walters

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (NEA) — In recent months, the Connecticut National Bank has experienced what spokesman Brent DiGiorgio describes as "a volume problem" in handling requests for new credit card accounts.

The Hartford-based bank with 158 branches throughout the state has been "inundated" with credit card applications, says DiGiorgio, since it slashed the interest rate on those accounts last spring from 18 percent to 11.75 percent.

When consumer enthusiasm peaked, Connecticut National was issuing credit cards at a rate of about 1,000 per day. The Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., which touched off the rate competition by cutting its credit card interest from 18 percent to 12 percent, experienced similar success.

The rate at both of those Connecticut banks went up to 15 percent at the beginning of 1987, but that is still far below what is being charged elsewhere in the nation.

Banks in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Salt Lake City and other Western cities charge 21 percent interest on unpaid credit card balances, while the rate in St. Louis has reached 22 percent. Elsewhere, rates in the 18-20 percent range are common.

Why are these rates so high at a time when home mortgage loans are being offered at 9 percent, when the prime rate (at which banks loan money to their best commercial customers) stands at 7.5 percent and when auto makers sponsor promotional campaigns to finance new car purchases at less than 3 percent?

Paradoxically, the answer lies in the fierce competition in the field. Throughout the industry's boom years in the 1960s, 1970s and early 1980s, the annual growth rate was a phenomenally high 15 to 20 percent.

In the mid-1980s, however, it declined to less than 5 percent yearly — and credit card issuers must scramble to remain competitive.

Meanwhile, almost everyone who wants a credit card and is qualified to obtain one long ago submitted a Visa or MasterCard application. Indeed, industry statistics show that 731 million credit cards of all types have been issued to 105.5 million people — an average of almost seven cards per person.

The competition became even more intense in 1986, when Sears, Roebuck & Co. entered the field and distributed more than 8 million Discover cards throughout the nation.

Although approximately 2,000 financial institutions, department stores and others issue credit cards, 25 percent of all MasterCard and Visa cards are issued by only six banks — four in New York and one apiece in Illinois and California.

The high levels of competition and concentration in the field have forced most of those large issuers to resort to mass mailings to potential customers who are told that they have been "pre-approved" for a card.

In fact, their credit ratings have not even been checked. Their names are obtained from magazine subscription rolls or other lists and only a cursory credit investigation is conducted before a card is issued.

Indeed, there are countless stories about people who are simultaneously being dunned by one bank for long-delinquent credit card payments while being solicited by another bank offering a "pre-approved" credit line.

Many of those people turn out to be deadbeats. Of the more than $150 billion in outstanding credit card debt in 1986, almost $4.5 billion worldwide — and about $3 billion in this country — had to be written off as uncollectable.

The industry's dirty little secret is that excessively high interest collected on past-due balances is being used to offset those bad debts, thus sustaining the banks' credit card operations as profitable ventures.

"We have less bad debt because our requirements when considering applications and issuing cards are so strict," says Connecticut National's DiGiorgio — but other banks are not as scrupulous in screening would-be customers.

Israeli spy ring said to have bought many secret records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Admitted spy Jonathan Jay Pollard, using code names and secret meetings, sold thousands of pages of highly sensitive U.S. military documents to a sophisticated Israeli spy ring, the government says.

In a court brief urging a long prison term for the former Navy intelligence analyst, the Justice Department describes an Israeli spy ring that obtained classified descriptions of Soviet missiles, secret satellite photos and information about U.S. intelligence operations.

Pollard, who had access to some of the nation's most closely guarded military secrets, fed his Israeli contacts a steady diet of daily message and cable traffic rich with "details about U.S. ship positions, aircraft stations, tactics and training operations."

Pollard was paid $1,500 and later $2,500 a month and expected to receive more than $620,000 over a decade. One Israeli contact bought his wife a $7,000 diamond-and-sapphire ring she had admired in a Paris jewelry store, the brief said.

"By the summer of 1985, the evidence shows that defendant had become literally addicted to the high lifestyle funded by his espionage activities," according to the brief filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court.

The Pollards spent $25,000 to $30,000 above and beyond the $29,000 they earned from their jobs during the year before their arrest, the memo said. On a trip from Venice to Zurich, Pollard paid more than $700 to book a private compartment on the Orient Express, the fabled train of spies, the memo said.

During the 18 months Pollard was selling secrets, "more than a thousand classified documents were compromised," including many that were several hundred pages in length, the brief said.

Yassi Gal, a spokesman for the Israeli Embassy, refused to comment on the latest revelations in the Pollard spy case.

The information Pollard eventually provided in bi-weekly meetings "was immense in volume and far-reaching in scope, including thousands of pages of documents classified Top Secret and-or SCI," the memo said.

The SCI classification refers to Sensitive Compartmented Information that is carefully protected because its disclosure would compromise efforts to gather it.

The classified analyses of Soviet missile systems that Pollard admitted selling the Israelis "reveal much about the way the United States collects information, including information from human sources whose identity could be inferred by a reasonably competent intelligence analyst," the memo said.

Pollard, 31, is scheduled to be sentenced Feb. 10 on charges he conspired to sell military secrets to the Israelis. He could receive a life sentence and a $250,000 fine.

But prosecutors agreed when Pollard pleaded guilty last June 5 to seek only a substantial sentence instead of a full life term.

Pollard's wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, 26, faces a possible 10-year term and a $500,000 fine after pleading guilty to charges of conspiring to embezzle government property and being an accessory to the possession of secret military documents.

The Israeli government has contended that the four Israelis named as Pollard's unindicted co-conspirators acted without authorization of the country's intelligence establishment. The ring was termed a renegade operation.

The memo says FBI agents retrieved 163 classified U.S. military documents from the Israeli government after Pollard's arrest.

The latest government disclosures about the case reveal that the ring was highly organized, using Hebrew letters to designate each of several pay telephones near Pollard's Washington apartment where he was to receive his calls.

U.S. envoy meets with Hussein

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — U.S. envoy Richard Murphy met today with King Hussein as he began his thorny mission of trying to revive the Middle East peace process.

The U.S. assistant secretary of state went to Hussein's Al-Nadwa palace overlooking the city for a luncheon session with the monarch. There was no immediate word on the outcome of the talks, which followed a morning meeting with Prime Minister Zaid Rifai.

Murphy, who is fluent in Arabic and popular in the Middle East, arrived Tuesday night on the first stop of a three-nation tour. He was met at the airport by a ranking Foreign Ministry official rather than by a Cabinet minister.

It was not clear if the level of the reception, correct in protocol terms but lower than in the past, was related to the disclosure of U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Jordanian officials have said previously that Hussein was angered by the Iran affair, in part because Washington had encouraged him to seek international support for the proclaimed U.S. arms boycott of Iran.

Murphy told reporters upon arriving, "I would expect to discuss the issue of Iran" with Jordanian officials, but he said the Middle East peace process was his main concern.

Lebanese President Camille Chamoun in Christian East Beirut Wednesday.

Chamoun wounded by car bomb

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Former President Camille Chamoun was slightly injured today when a car bomb exploded in Christian east Beirut as his motorcade passed. Three bodyguards and a pedestrian were killed and 35 passers-by were wounded, police said.

"God is protecting us," Chamoun, 86, said in a steady voice on Voice of Lebanon radio after being released from a hospital where he was treated for shrapnel wounds on the face and hands. "I believe in the Virgin Mary, whose icon I always wear on my chest. She protects me."

Police said it was the fourth assassination attempt against Chamoun, a Maronite Catholic, since 1968. He was president from 1952-58 and now is finance minister.

A blue Peugeot laden with 165 pounds of explosives was detonated by remote control at 9:30 a. m. as Chamoun's motorcade passed by in east

Beirut's Mattahen industrial district, police said.

The force of the blast hurled Chamoun's bullet-proof gray Mercedes-Benz about 20 yards off the road, police said.

"But it miraculously landed on its wheels and he survived along with his driver," said one police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The bodyguards' car took the brunt of the blast, which carved a crater six feet deep and 14 feet wide in the road, the official said. Twenty-six other cars were destroyed, and glass shards littered the road for a 300-yard radius, witnesses said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing.

Police said Chamoun was en route to a meeting of the Lebanese Front. The Front is a coalition of rightist Christian groups involved in Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war against the Moslems.

Congress opens: For some, it was day of bewilderment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 100th Congress made its debut with high hopes and low comedy, boisterous parties, hours of droning rhetoric and — for rookie legislators — one long day of bewilderment.

The heat hadn't been turned on and the typewriters hadn't arrived in the makeshift office of Democrat Kent Conrad until a few hours before he took his oath Tuesday as the junior senator from North Dakota.

Freshman Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., managed to find his way to a brunch in a Senate office building and then got lost. He had to ask his host, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to escort him to the House chamber for his swearing-in.

It took Rep. Claude Harris Jr., D-Ala., his administrative assistant and their families a total of 51 hours to drive up from Tuscaloosa in a caravan of three cars, a rental truck and a trailer. "We broke down in every state we came through except North Carolina," Harris said.

Newly elected Rep. Tim Johnson, D-S.D., lost his luggage on the flight to Washington. "I've got khaki pants and loafers and a blazer, and that's it," he said. Worse, when he visited his new office, all the telephones were dead.

Still, Johnson is undaunted. "Obviously, it would be posturing and political to suggest that one vote out of 435 is going to turn around Congress," he said. "It's exciting. It's a huge challenge. I can't wait to get going."

Congress couldn't wait to get going either. A clean water bill vetoed by President Reagan was reintroduced. The Senate voted to set up a select committee under Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, to probe the Iran-Contra scandal. The Senate Budget Committee scheduled hearings to start today on Reagan's proposed $1 trillion budget. And Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, who took over as speaker of the House from retired Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., telephoned Reagan to wish him a quick recovery from prostate surgery.

But the first day of the new Congress was devoted largely to ritual and rhetorical flourishes.

It was family day in the House chamber. Members' children and grandchildren, all wearing their Sunday best, sat fidgeting, crying or sleeping through the opening prayer, speeches, Wright's election as speaker and the swearing-in of House members.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, held a chubby toddler who swatted another congressman with a pacifier before falling asleep in Leland's arms during the first lengthy roll call vote of the session.

Freshman Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, son of slain Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., who won O'Neill's seat in the November elections, was accompanied to the swearing-in by his twin sons.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, right, and Speaker of the House, Jim Wright of Texas, present the gavel to the new House members Tuesday.

Doubts raised about North credibility

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department pledged to give the independent counsel investigating the Iran-Contra affair "anything he wants" as the White House and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger raised new doubts about Lt. Col. Oliver North's credibility.

As the Senate set up one of two Watergate-style committees to look into the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the claimed diversion of funds to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh met Tuesday with Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who he said offered full cooperation.

"We offered him everything. Anything he wants, he can have. The decision is his," said department spokesman Patrick Korten.

Walsh, indicating he would take over some matters being investigated by Meese, said, "The attorney general has turned over to me all of those matters which are within the scope of the (court) order appointing me and has agreed to receive back from me those matters which I think would be better handled in the regular course by him."

He said the attorney general had offered to turn over all of the Justice Department's pending investigations with any conceivable link to the U.S. government's sale of arms to Iran or diversion of proceeds to the Contras which was disclosed by Meese on Nov. 25.

Weinberger expressed doubts that money actually went to the U.S.-backed Contras.

"I think it's a possibility" that the money never made it to the guerrillas, Weinberger said, noting that the only evidence that such a transfer took place is statements by North to Meese.

North was fired as National Security Council deputy, and National Security Adviser Vice Adm. John Poindexter resigned after Meese's disclosure. Both have cited their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination in refusing to give testimony to congressional committees.

Vice President George Bush, asked Tuesday whether he agreed with Weinberger that the money, reported by Meese at up to $30 million, may not have gone to the Contras, said, "I am inclined to feel that way, based on some information."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes raised further questions about North's credibility, saying the testimony before the committee "reveals that there are errors in fact" in a chronology that North prepared detailing the secret arms sales to Iran.

Speakes also said that examination of a shredding machine in North's office after he left showed that no substantial amount of documentation had been destroyed. He said the White House believes it has all of the documents involved in the case.

The New York Times quoted unidentified White House officials in today's editions as saying that their initial accounts of the Iran arms deal had been based on the chronology written in November by North, and that they had been misled.

North falsified information on the secret arms sale to Iran to suggest prior approval by Reagan, the officials told the Times.

The officials said a clear picture emerged only after Meese's investigation in November and congressional hearings last month.

The administration has said that Reagan did not approve specific arms sales to Iran until after the first one had been made in September 1985, although he had approved the contacts with Iran.

Other developments related to the Iran-Contra affair:

—Senators voted 88-4 to establish an 11-member panel which is expected to begin holding public hearings in mid-February into allegations that policies and laws may have been ignored in the Iran-Contra deals. The Senate agreed to give the panel until Aug. 1 to issue its report after Republicans said a proposed Oct. 30 deadline would drag on the controversy.

Conrail train passed signal to slow down

CHASE, Md. (AP) — A siren in the cab that could have warned a Conrail engineer to slow down had been disabled before he passed working signal lights into the path of an Amtrak passenger train that derailed, killing 15 people, according to authorities and published reports.

A signal warning the engineer to slow to 30 mph two miles from the crash site apparently was working at the time of Sunday's crash, investigator Joseph Nall of the National Transportation Safety Board said Tuesday. Investigators have not said if they know how fast the Conrail train was traveling.

Nall also said that, contrary to the board's earlier understanding, no alcohol or drug tests were administered to Amtrak crewmen who survived Sunday's crash that injured more than 170.

A track monitor told investigators Tuesday that the 30 mph signal was posted about two miles from the crash site, Nall said. The monitor was not identified.

A signal about 500 feet from the accident site called for a full stop, but the Conrail engineer was unable to brake his three-locomotive train before it entered Amtrak's high-speed tracks, Nall said.

The monitor, who was in a tower in Edgewood about 10 miles away, said he had no conversation with the crew of either train, Nall said.

Nall said preliminary NTSB tests Tuesday appeared to confirm Amtrak tests showing that the signals for the Amtrak and Conrail tracks were working when the crash occurred.

Investigators, meanwhile, planned to meet today with the Conrail engineer, R.L. Gates, and another surviving Conrail crew member.

Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black said Tuesday that trains between Washington and New York were being held to 30 mph through the crash area rather than the 100 mph at which The Colonial was believed traveling Sunday at the switching point near the Gunpowder River.

Drug and alcohol tests were performed on the Conrail crewmen, as mandated by federal regulations after a major rail accident, Nall said. Results of the tests were unavailable.

The Board had planned similar tests on the surviving Amtrak crew — a conductor, three assistant conductors and a dispatcher — but Amtrak officials requested an exemption from the regulations, Nall said.

He said the tests could help evaluate crew members' performances in rescue attempts.

'87 AG EXTENSION EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

We have quite a few Agricultural Extension educational activities scheduled for 1987.

As you get out new calendars for the new year, you may want to write down these dates for some real outstanding informational programs.

The following programs will be held here in Pampa at the Courthouse Annex meeting room on the dates indicated. Exact times will be announced later.

January 21 — Equitable Crop Share Lease presented by Lawrence Lippke, Extension economist - management

February 11 — Economic and Tax Management Up-Date by Wayne Hayenga, Extension economist - management

February 25 and 26 — Financial Management Shortcourse conducted by Danny Klinefelter and Steve Amosson, both Extension economist - management

March 18 — Ag Marketing Seminar presented by Ed Smith and Ernie Davis, both Extension economists - marketing

In addition an area cow-calf clinic will be held in McLean at the County Community Building on March 17 with John McNeil, Extension beef specialist, and John Beverly, Extension animal reproduction specialist.

On April 24, a range tour is scheduled to be held in the McLean area.

The jointly sponsored Conservation Day program should be held April 9 in conjunction with the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District and the local SCS office at the Clyde Carruth Livestock Pavilion.

In addition, there will be other programs in area towns as follows. Irrigation Conference in Amarillo on January 8; Vegetable Conference in Wellington on February 10; Horse Seminar in Wheeler on March 27, and the Texas Beef Conference will be in Amarillo April 16.

IRRIGATION CONFERENCE

Thursday, the High Plains Irrigation Conference will be held in Amarillo, at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd., West.

Registration, coffee and exhibit viewing will get underway from 8:30 to 9:25 a.m.

At 9:30 a.m., Dr. Michael Hickey, Extension soil chemist, will discuss "Match Soil Fertility to Irrigation". From 10 to 10:30 a.m., "Irrigation Management Guides" will be presented by Steve Amosson, Extension economist in management.

Following a 30 minute break to view exhibits, at 11 a.m. "Field Practices in Chemigation" will be discussed by Olan Moore and Dave Meeks, consultants from Dimmitt and Farwell respectively.

After a lunch break, the program resumes at 1:15 p.m. with discussion by Bill Lyle on "Chemigation and Irrigation Research".

The final part of the program is a Growers Panel from 1:45 to 3:30 p.m. featuring four producers. These include George Sides from Dimmitt; Wayne Lidstar, Dalhart; Joe Ed Helms, Quitaque; and Jay Spearman from Pampa.

There will be sixteen commercial exhibits on display throughout the day. Producers can visit and inspect these exhibits during breaks through the program.

This gives irrigation farmers the opportunity to up-date their knowledge on some of the latest techniques and information concerning irrigation practices for the Texas Panhandle.

THREE FINANCIAL DANGER SIGNALS

Many farmers who were forced out of business during the past few years did not have enough equity capital to finance a "capital hungry" farm operation, say two agricultural economists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Dr. Wayne Hayenga and Dr. Danny Klinefelter, economists-management, say that other producers also may be approaching the same situation without realizing it.

They note that farm operations fitting these descriptions may be candidates for failure:

- Your lender owns more than half of your business.
- Your short-term loans and accounts payable have increased each year for the past three years.
- Your interest bill is more than 20 percent of your sales.

You can easily determine if your lender owns more than half of your business by looking at the net worth statement entries of total assets and liabilities. This factor is critical because of earnings on the assets used in the business, they say.

Traditionally, the economists note, earning rates on agricultural assets are four to six percent. "A farmer earning the high rate of six percent on all assets, but paying 12 percent interest on half of his assets, has nothing left. If earnings fall below six percent or asset values decline, but interest rates stay at 12 percent, the owner's equity declines to the point he is unable to finance the business," they warn.

Hayenga and Klinefelter suggest that producers look at their last three years' net worth statements. Without a major increase in business size, if short-term loans and accounts payable consistently increase, sooner or later farmers will not be able to keep the loans and accounts current without increasing income, or refinancing land or long-term assets. When this happens, short-term debt will not be renewed and suppliers will demand cash before delivery, the economists caution.

Research indicates that when interest charges are more than 20 percent of sales, there is less than 20 percent chance the business will survive more than five years. "When interest charges are that high, there is not enough income from the business to pay off expenses, so losses occur. To continue in business, the farmer must finance the previous year's loss and loses even more in the second year. This cycle is repeated until the business is unable to be refinanced," Hayenga and Klinefelter say.

While the three factors may not apply to all businesses, if any one exists for any business, a detailed business analysis should be started, they recommend.

Greyhound sells 11 terminals

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Greyhound Corp. sold 11 properties belonging to its Greyhound Lines subsidiary in December for a total of $79 million, John W. Teets, Greyhound chairman, announced Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the head of a Dallas investors group that plans to buy Greyhound Lines met Tuesday in Dallas with officials of a union representing Greyhound drivers and other Greyhound employees.

"We held informal discussions with the Amalgamated Transportation Union today for the second time," investor Fred Curry said in a statement. "As in the first session, we had a good exchange of ideas. We agreed to hold further informal discussions with the full Greyhound Council (of unions), which we're looking forward to."

A spokesman for Curry said the meetings will be in Phoenix next Monday and Tuesday.

Included in the sale announced on Tuesday were the Greyhound terminals in St. Petersburg, Fla.; Chicago; Norfolk, Va.; Los Angeles; Dallas; Santa Rosa, N.M.; Baltimore; San Diego; Kansas City, Mo.; Philadelphia; and San Jose, Calif., according to Teets' announcement.

Greyhound began selling excess Greyhound Lines properties approximately two years ago in order to free resources for other areas of its business, Teets said, adding that the program so far has yielded over $166 million.

Dorothy A. Lorant, Greyhound vice president for public relations, said Tuesday that the 11 terminals were purchased individually.

She said most of the purchasers were investors or developers. But, she said, in some cases the properties were purchased by the municipalities in which they are located.

Herb Doherty, a Greyhound Lines spokesman, identified the cities involved in the purchases as Baltimore, Norfolk and St. Petersburg.

Homeport funding tops Reagan's Texas budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both U.S. senators from Texas applauded funding for Navy homeports in Galveston and Corpus Christi contained in President Reagan's $1 trillion-plus budget, but offered differing opinions on the plan's total worth.

The Texas homeports were allocated $67.8 million in the president's 1988 budget, submitted to Congress this week. Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat, and Phil Gramm, a Republican, both said they would fight for retention of homeport funding during congressional debate.

"These are the first requests the Defense Department has made for funds to begin actual building of the new homeports in Galveston and Corpus Christi. Now we're going to have to fight to make sure they stay in the budget as it moves through Congress," Bentsen said.

Figures released by Bentsen's office show the president's plan allocates $29 million for construction of a homeport for two guided missile frigates and three minesweepers at the Port of Galveston in 1988 and an additional $1.7 million in 1989.

Corpus Christi would get $38.8 million to begin building facilities needed to support a recommissioned World War II battleship and a variety of support vessels, according to Bentsen's office. Another $31.9 million would be allocated in 1989 under the Reagan proposal.

The homeport plan, which was supported by both Texas senators in Congress last year, is part of a strategy aimed at disbursing the U.S. fleet in order to protect it against a Pearl Harbor-type attack.

Gramm said construction of the homeports on the Gulf Coast would produce 15,000 jobs and draw an additional $250 billion in revenue into the state.

"From Texas's point of view it is a good budget," Gramm said. "It provides full funding for homeport in Corpus and Galveston and a total military construction budget of $252 million. That's just buildings."

Also contained in the president's budget were allocations for construction of several new water resources projects in Texas totaling $30.7 million as well as continuing projects worth $91.3 million.

"The budget includes money for several of the Texas projects that were part of the Water Resources Development Act signed into law last year," Bentsen said.

But while Gramm expressed confidence in the administration's budget figures Bentsen was skeptical. Both predicted a tough fight in Congress.

"The budget meets the Gramm-Rudman target," Gramm said. "It does it without raising taxes. It does it without controlling spending."

The target for the 1988 budget year contained in the anti-spending bill is $108 billion and the Reagan proposal predicts a shortfall of $107.8 billion.

Bentsen disputed the figures used by the administration to compose the entire budget and questioned whether the president's proposal was reasonable. "Congress and the president are going to have to work together to reduce the federal deficit, but I'm not satisfied that the president's budget is realistic," Bentsen said. "According to the Congressional Budget Office, it overstates revenues and understates the deficit by some $10 billion."

The administration is proposing to meet the Gramm-Rudman deficit cap through deep spending cuts in dozens of domestic programs and user fees and government property sales that Congress rejected in earlier years.

Backwoods business supports wildlife art

SULLIVAN, Ill. (AP) — Hidden in the backwoods of Moultrie County, miles from the nearest state highway, lies an unassuming gray cottage, its front strewn with stained glass windows, wagon wheels and milk cans.

The whipping wind is the only sound that disturbs the quiet of the surrounding prairie. Inside, it's pretty quiet too, save for the hum of computers that churn out pages and pages of mailing lists.

Welcome to the cluttered home of Sport'en Art, a multimillion-dollar business supplying 8,000 dealers nationwide with wildlife art.

Founded in the late 1970s by the father-and-son team of Paul and Burnett Harshman, the distributorship now has 45 employees.

Commissioned agents for the company tend showrooms in Los Angeles, Denver, Dallas, Seattle and Columbus, Ohio. There, collectors can view Sport'en Art's array of wildlife prints, duck decoys and other art works.

But at the cottage six miles west of Sullivan, there is hardly a clue that big business thrives inside.

"We operated for five years before we knew what we were doing and before we found out there was such a thing as collectors," said Paul Harshman. He traces the business to 1969 when his family opened an antique store at the site.

"In 1974, we got interested in duck prints because we were going to be on the north edge of Lake Shelbyville," Harshman said. But the family didn't start Sport'en Art, the wholesale arm of its business, until 1978.

Sport'en Art found its fortune in the proliferation of duck stamps issued by state governments. Beginning in the 1930s, the federal government printed and sold duck stamps as a way to license hunters and raise money for wildlife habitats.

But states didn't pick up the idea for another 40 years. California issued the first duck stamp in 1971, and during the next four years, Iowa, Massachusetts, Maryland and Illinois joined the ranks. Today, 29 states issue duck stamps.

Sport'en Art combines the duck stamps with limited-edition prints of the stamp design and sells the combination as a collectors' item. Today, duck stamps and prints account for 60 percent of the Harshmans' wholesale business.

"No state has the expertise to sell or market prints," said Curt Bloome, who handles marketing and promotion for the Illinois Department of Conservation.

That's why states have turned to Sport'en Art and other distributors in Minnesota, Kentucky and California.

Sister nuns become 'clowns for Christ'

EDITOR'S NOTE — "Bubbles" and "Mumsie" aren't traditional names for nuns, but then, the Benedictine Sisters of Erie, Pa., aren't your typical nuns. They're goodwill ambassadors in clown suits, true believers who celebrate the gospel through gentle humor and mercifully tender tricks.

ERIE, Pa. (AP)— At Mount St. Benedict, an unobtrusive priory where nuns pray and preach for peace and justice, the expression of faith often takes a colorful, circus-like twist. The Benedictine Sisters of Erie are "fools" for Christ, goodwill ambassadors in clown outfits who spread and celebrate the gospel through gentle humor and mercifully tender tricks. "The traditional Christian message seems to get boxed in. What we attempt to do is to break down some of those barriers," said Sister Peggy Pilewski, 39, otherwise known as "Bubbles." "There is an underside and you can laugh in the context of prayer," she said, showing off her yellow clown outfit and antennae. "It's OK. It's part of the human experience as well as being very stern and very solemn-faced." "It's important not to take life too seriously," agreed Beth Adams, 29, a postulant whose trademark is garish suspenders and a yellow back scratcher. For a religious order whose protests for peace, justice and women's rights have stretched from the steps of Erie's courthouse to the White House, donning clown costumes and painting faces for special services, retreats and benevolent outings is a particularly welcome change of pace. "It's real easy . . . to go from one vigil to the next," said Sister Anne McCarthy, 30. "You can easily get stuck in a position where you're saying 'no' all the time. 'No, we shouldn't bomb Libya. No, we shouldn't fund the contras. No, we shouldn't be involved in Central America. No, we shouldn't be building this weapon system." "To see the same group have clowning as part of prayer and part of worship integrates it. It all ties together, but I don't think people always put those together and I think it's good for them to see." In fact, their liberal views and frequent demonstrations have made their venture into clowning that much easier, at least as far as public acceptance is concerned. Only a handful of Mount St. Benedict's 150 nuns wear habits. The rest wear everyday clothes to their jobs on and off the 60-acre priory, located seven miles from Erie along Lake Erie's shore. "Our community in general receives a lot of criticism for various things that we do. This (clowning) is the least of them," said Sister Carolyn Gorny.

Church clowns are not just clowning around. The contemporary clown ministry movement dates back to the 1960s, although the concept has been around since the time of Christ, regarded by practitioners as the ultimate "fool" for sacrificing his life for others. In 1985, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' Committee on the Liturgy denounced clown ministry as inappropriate in liturgical worship. The panel's statement appears to have had little effect.

AFTER-THE-HOLIDAY BLAHS RELIEF!

The first thing most of us do after the holidays is breath a big sigh of relief. After all, it is the busiest time of the year. But, then, you suddenly get a kind of let-down feeling, because most of us really do enjoy the holidays, even though they can be somewhat hectic.

That's the time to stop by the Freshness Giant and spend a morning with us leisurely shopping for this week's supplies. There's always plenty of exciting things going on, but without the frantic pace that is set during the holidays. There's always something new to see, to try and to take home and share with your family. Shopping with us right after the holidays is a very pleasant way to ease out of the holidays and into a more normal pattern of life.

And naturally, after all the holiday treats and special meals, it's kind of nice to plan a normal week's menu, too.

So, this week, avoid the after-the-holiday blahs by stopping by the Freshness Giant and let yourself unwind gradually. And while you're at it, treat yourself to some really great grocery buys at the same time. It's just what the doctor ordered!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't do things today just because everyone else is doing them if they're not in accord with your standards. Pull the plug on peer pressure. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44110 13428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) One of your loved ones may come under attack from an outsider today. Be sure to let this hotshot know where your true loyalties lie.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is good in the worst of us and bad in the best of us. Try to keep this in mind today so that you view those with whom you associate realistically.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A situation is developing now that could be profitable to you, but if it isn't in accord with your business standards, it's best to pass the action.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today if you have a misunderstanding with a close friend, try to rectify it immediately. Left uncorrected too long, it might prove difficult to mend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone who has been kind to you in the past may be in dire need of your assistance today. If you make excuses for not helping, you'll regret it later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There's a possibility at this time that you might be a trifle jealous of a friend. If you don't monitor your behavior carefully today, it will be obvious to her and others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The person you're expecting to help you with something of importance today might not be available. A pinch-hitter may step in, but he or she won't be as effective.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When dealing with others today, graciousness and tact will accomplish your purpose. Heavy-handed methods won't do the trick, so don't try them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to keep your financial affairs in proper balance today. If you rob Peter in order to pay Paul, you may end up with red ink in both areas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be flexible today and try not to lock yourself into a course that will arouse opposition in others. Back off if you see unfriendly signals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's an obstacle to be cleared where your work is concerned today. If you hope to operate smoothly, get it out of the way early.

Chicken Asparagus bake - elegant for any occasion.

Gourmet chicken meets mood of any special-occasion meal

Special occasions call for special meals. A birthday or anniversary. Entertaining the boss. A candlelight dinner with old friends. The family together and unhurried.

A gourmet chicken dish will fit right in with the mood you want to create. Set the table with your best china and silver and then serve the meal with flair.

The National Broiler Council has developed a recipe some time when you want something "a little extra." Chicken Asparagus Bake is a colorful blend of textures and flavors. Only a salad or your favorite dessert are needed to complete an elegant meal.

Versatile chicken can be the creative cook's favorite entrée. It can be cooked in endlessly different ways to please the most sophisticated palate. And it doesn't need rich sauces or the addition of unwanted calories to lift a family favorite into the ranks of haute cuisine.

Serving chicken to guests makes entertaining economical, too. And it's a choice that almost everyone will like.

GOURMET CHICKEN BAKE

- 3 chicken breasts, halved
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- ¼ teaspoon curry powder
- ¼ teaspoon savory leaves
- ¼ teaspoon white pepper
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 2 packages (6 oz. each) seasoned long grain and wild rice
- 5½ cups chicken broth, divided
- 1 pound fresh asparagus
- 2 tablespoons almond slivers, toasted
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento

Mix together seasoned salt, curry powder, savory and pepper; sprinkle over chicken. Place chicken in large bowl, pour buttermilk over chicken, cover and refrigerate overnight. In large shallow baking pan, arrange chicken in single layer. Pour buttermilk mari-nade over chicken and bake in 350 degrees F. oven for one hour or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease.

Substituting five cups chicken broth for the water called for, cook rice according to package instructions. Cut asparagus three inches from tip and then cut remaining part in 1-inch pieces; place in small saucepan with remaining ½ cup chicken broth and cook over medium heat, covered about 15 minutes. Set aside and do not drain.

When chicken, rice and asparagus are tender, remove chicken from baking dish and mix together with pan juices the rice, one-inch pieces of asparagus and broth used in cooking asparagus. Arrange chicken over rice and place asparagus tips around the chicken. Sprinkle with toasted almonds and pimiento and return to 350 degree oven to heat through, about 15 minutes. Makes six servings.

Hearty budget stew serves company, too

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Sure, stew is a hearty, low-cost main dish for family meals. But there's another side to this humble meat and vegetable dish. When company comes, upgrade your stew with a combination of veal, fresh mushrooms and pearl onions. The rich flavor comes from the bouquet garni, a fragrant herb mixture wrapped in cheesecloth. The bouquet is easy to remove after cooking so there are no flecks of herbs darkening the elegant cream sauce.

- VEAL STEW
- 2 to 2½ pounds boneless veal, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 1-3rd cup butter or margarine
- 16 boiling onions
- 3 cups fresh mushrooms, sliced (8 ounces)
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1-3rd cup all-purpose flour
- 10½-ounce can condensed chicken broth

- ¼ cup dry white wine
- 1 leek, sliced
- 1 carrot, halved crosswise
- 1 stalk celery, halved crosswise
- 2 sprigs parsley
- 1 bay leaf
- ¼ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ¾ cup whipping cream
- 2 egg yolks
- Hot cooked fettuccine
- Snipped parsley

In a Dutch oven cook veal in butter over low heat 10 minutes. Sprinkle flour over meat; stir. Add broth, wine, leek carrot and celery. Tie the parsley, bay leaf and thyme in cheesecloth bag; add to mixture. Cover and simmer about 30 minutes or until meat is tender, stirring occasionally.

Remove and discard cheesecloth bag, carrot and celery. Stir in lemon juice. Stir together whipping cream and egg yolks. Stir about 1 cup of hot mixture into egg yolk mixture; return to hot mixture in Dutch oven, stirring constantly. Heat and stir until slightly thickened and bubbly. Serve over hot pasta with parsley. Makes six servings.

Taste of Texas

Honey sweetened treats

By ANN E. GRANQUIST
Texas Dept. of Agriculture

Honey, a naturally nutritious high energy food, is a delicious way to sweeten the menu.

In Texas, honey bees play a vital role in our state's agriculture. Bees not only gather the nectar for the honey, but they also pollinate many of the state's crops such as cantaloupe, melons, broccoli, cabbage, cotton and citrus fruits.

Honey produced by Texas beekeepers is valued at $7 million a year with approximately 190,000 colonies of bees. Texas ranks third in the nation, producing roughly 220 million pounds of honey each year. Because of its importance to the state's agriculture, beekeepers can be found in almost any part of the state.

Honey is a natural, unrefined food. It is unique because it is the only natural, unmanufactured sweetener available. The flavor, aroma and color of honey vary with the kind of flowers from which the bees gathered the nectar used to make the honey. Fructose gives the honey a sweet flavor, and the nectar adds the floral taste to it.

Color in honey can be light or dark. Generally the lighter the honey, the lighter the flavor. Honey keeps best in a tightly covered container, stored in a cool place. For more information on Texas honey and free recipes, write the Texas Department of Agriculture, 3652 North Dixie, Odessa, 79762.

BAKLAVA

- 1 pound (4 cups) finely chopped pecans
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 pound phyllo (strudel leaves)
- 1½ cups melted butter
- 1 cup honey
- Zest of one lemon
- 1 stick cinnamon
- 3 to 6 whole cloves

Butter a 13-inch baking dish. In a large bowl, mix together pecans, sugar, cinnamon and cloves; set aside. Cut phyllo into rectangles to fit baking dish. As you cut, cover phyllo sheets with plastic wrap and a damp towel to prevent drying. Place one sheet of phyllo in dish, brush with butter; repeat to make five more layers of phyllo.

Sprinkle with one cup pecan mixture. Layer mixture with six sheets of phyllo, brushing each with butter. Sprinkle with one cup pecan mixture. Repeat phyllo layering and pecan mixture two more times. Top with remaining layers of phyllo, overlapping any small strips to make rectangles, if necessary, and brushing each layer with butter.

With a sharp knife cut just half-way through layers in triangle shape to make 24 servings. Bake at 300 degrees F. for one hour and 15 minutes, or until top is golden brown.

Meanwhile in small saucepan, heat honey, lemon zest, whole cinnamon and whole cloves over medium heat until hot. Do not boil. Remove spices. Pour honey mixture over Baklava. Cool in pan on wire rack at least one hour. Cover and leave at room temperature until ready to serve. Makes 24 two-inch triangles.

HONEY PUMPKIN PIE

- ¼ cup honey
- 3 eggs
- 1½ cup fresh or canned pumpkin
- 1 cup light cream
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon ginger

- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
 - ½ teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1 (9-inch) unbaked pie shell
- Combine all ingredients except pie shell. Blend until smooth. Pour into shell. Bake at 425 degrees F. for 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees F. Bake 35 to 40 minutes or until custard is set. Cool. Serve with honey-sweetened whipped cream. Makes eight servings.

ORANGE NUT HONEY BREAD

- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 1 cup honey
- 1 egg
- 1½ tablespoons orange peel, grated
- 2½ cups flour, sifted
- ¼ teaspoon soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup orange juice
- ¼ cup nuts, chopped
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder

Sift flour with baking powder, soda and salt. Add the flour mixture to the creamed mixture and the orange juice. Add the nuts. Bake in a greased loaf pan at 325 degrees F. for 70 minutes.

Group of Pampans considers hospice care

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

A group of Pampa citizens are considering the possibility of hospice care for the dying here.

Hospice does not necessarily mean a hospital-like place for patients waiting to die, Hazel Barthel explained to the group who met at the Chamber of Commerce building Monday. "Hospice means you tell someone it's okay to die. You say 'It's okay to talk about it. It's okay for you to tell me what needs to be done and I promise I won't make you feel guilty about dying,'" Barthel said.

Barthel has recently resigned her position as assistant director at St. Anthony's Hospice in Amarillo and is now part time executive director of the Plainview's Hospice Of the Plains.

She told of how one dying man defined hospice: "It's like they came to me and surrounded me with a tent of love and then they crawled in the tent with me and then the tent went home with me," the man told her.

Interest in a Pampa hospice surfaced in November when more than 40 people attended a one-day hospice workshop taught by Barthel at First Christian Church. The workshop was co-sponsored by Clarendon College-Pampa Center.

Larry Gilbert, director of Clarendon College - Pampa Center, introduced Barthel at the Monday meeting. He told of how he and his wife had recently been directly involved with hospice through his wife's cousin, a holiday visitor. The cousin told the Gilberts about the death of her daughter who died when she was 3½ years old of brain cancer. "She said she could not have made it without hospice care," Gilbert said.

A 10-week class, "Hospice Approach to Living With Dying" is to be presented at the local college, Gilbert added. The class is scheduled to begin Jan. 19 and will meet on Mondays from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. through March 30.

Taught by Barthel, the class is a study of the effects of terminal illness on the patient and family while identifying the dynamics of death and dying, grief and loss and how this fits into the hospice concept of care. Continuing education credits will be awarded to participants who attend all class sessions.

Sponsors of the class hope to raise community awareness of death and dying and for the need for special care for the terminal ill patient and family. Sponsors also hope to evolve a plan for beginning hospice care here.

"It can be done in Pampa," Barthel said. "If you don't go away with anything else, I would like you to take away that hospice is a kind of care that can be done anywhere, especially at home."

Hospice care begins with an "interdisciplinary team," she said. Members of this team include a physician, a registered nurse, a social worker, and a counselor (which could be a clinical counselor or pastoral counselor). "If you have these four people, you're going somewhere," she said.

Then a hospice must have a dedicated volunteer group who are willing to handle the clerical duties of the program, help raise funds, and, if the volunteer wants, work with the patients and their families, Barthel said.

Barbara Dorman, a registered nurse from Plainview, told of how the Plainview hospice was started three years ago.

"We started very much like you're starting now," she said. "We had a meeting with very much the same clerical mix that you have at this meeting. From there we formed a steering committee from a nucleus of people."

Professionals in the community helped the group draw up articles of incorporation and form a non-profit organization.

"You have to realize that there is no money to be made in hospice care," Dorman emphasized. "One out of the 17 patients we helped the first year was able to pay anything."

The original eight members of the steering committee gave programs to "everyone who would listen," which helped raise funds for the hospice, she said. One-year grants totalling $40,000 also helped fund the organization.

Three years later, Dorman said, the Hospice of the Plains covers a five-county area and has been included in the budget of most of the city's churches. It is now licensed, employs a full-time nurse and is ready to hire another full-time nurse to handle the increasing number of people who have asked for its services.

As the hospice continues to grow, "It's very easy to become a part of a business," Dorman said. She told those at the meeting to guard against this happening. "If you lose sight of why you're there, then you've lost everything."

Toddler's disappearance is an open-and-shut case

DEAR READERS: How safe is your child in his or her crib? Well, listen to this:

A 58-year-old California woman was taking her usual early morning walk when she spotted a tiny toddler in his pajamas, crawling, walking and toddling merrily on his way down the sidewalk! She immediately called the police who came at once and took the bright-eyed, happy little adventurer into custody.

It seems that Sean, a 20-month-old youngster, had simply crawled over the side of his crib and escaped to the outside through the doggie door, wandering a half-mile from home.

When his parents awakened at 7:30 a.m. to discover that their child was not in his crib, they searched the house, panicked, then notified the police. Eight patrol cars equipped with bullhorns conducted a street-by-street search in the area of his home, but were unable to locate him.

The parents never dreamed this could happen to them, but it did. Could it happen in your home?

By the way, they have not owned a pet in some time, and you can be sure that the doggie door has been nailed shut!

Now that nature has built more acrobatic and resourceful children, perhaps the manufacturers of baby furniture will build a better crib from which Houdini himself could not escape.

DEAR ABBY: On Saturday afternoon I drive three women from my apartment building to the market for groceries. A few months ago another neighbor, Mae (fake name), asked if she could join us. We all agreed.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Mae has become a terrible pain in the neck. She has turned our weekly trips into thoroughly disagreeable experiences. She talks, talks and talks until we are ready to scream. She has a loud, harsh voice, and interrupts constantly to turn the conversation back to some unclear personal anecdotes. On top of that, she's one of the dullest people I've ever known.

I've heard that she has complained to other tenants that we rush her too much and don't take her to the markets she (and only she) prefers to patronize. She's a born complainer, although she tries to be a good neighbor and is basically a nice person.

We've tried all sorts of subtle suggestions to let her know that we don't enjoy her dominating the conversation, but they've gone over her head. Is there any gentle way to solve this dilemma without hurting her feelings?

A MAN IN HOLLYWOOD
DEAR MAN: You are not going to change Mae, so either accept her as she is, or tell her she may no longer come along grocery shopping, and tell her why. It's just that simple.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and father were divorced 15 years ago. My father has remarried, my mother has not. I lived with my mother after the divorce, but visited my father, and we remained close.

I have been married for four years. My mother thinks that when I invite her to a party at my home, I should let her know if my father was also invited as she does not want to attend if he will be there. She attended my wedding with no complaints, knowing that my father was going to be there.

It's my house, and my party, and I don't feel I'm obligated to tell my mother who else is coming. Don't you agree?

THEIR SON

DEAR SON: You are not "obligated" to tell your mother who's coming, but since she asks if her ex-husband (whom she clearly does not want to see) will be there, as a kind and considerate host, you should tell her.

Committee to study football playoff format

By TIM LIOTTA
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The public is clamoring for it, and the media has rallied behind the cause.

Now, all they have to do is convince NCAA schools that a playoff to determine a major-college football champion is the right way to go.

Two years ago, the Postseason Football Committee took the idea of a football playoff to the member schools, who overwhelmingly rejected it in a straw poll.

Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds, who will head a subcommittee that will reexamine the feasibility of a playoff, said circumstances have changed little since then. "One advantage we'll have this time is we'll know what happened with the Fiesta Bowl."

The intense interest in last week's Fiesta Bowl, which matched top-ranked Miami, Fla., against No. 2 Penn State, prompted the Postseason Football Committee to assign the subcommittee to study the playoff question.

Penn State beat Miami 14-10 in the Fiesta Bowl and was voted the national champion by voters in The Associated Press poll. Major-college football is the only NCAA sport which doesn't use a playoff system to determine a champion.

"In our discussions with the full committee this (Tuesday) morning, all of us felt just because of the interest in the Fiesta Bowl this year, the tremendous ratings and tremendous numbers of people watching... our committee felt it was our responsibility at least to look into it," Dodds said.

Joining Dodds on the subcommittee will be John Swofford, athletic director at North Carolina; Glen Tuckett, athletic director at Brigham Young; and Carl James, commissioner of the Big Eight Conference.

The subcommittee will present its findings when the full committee meet April 8-10.

Any plan coming out of that committee would, in turn, have to be approved by two-thirds of the full NCAA membership. The earliest such a vote could be taken would be January 1988 during the next NCAA convention. Therefore, the earliest any playoff system could be in place would be January 1989.

Fueled by the popularity of the Fiesta Bowl, the idea of a collegiate football playoff has gained support.

One of the biggest proponents of a playoff system is Penn State Coach Joe Paterno.

"I'd prefer to have four teams coming out of the bowls, playing two semifinals, then playing a final," Paterno said earlier this week.

However, the membership of the NCAA doesn't seem to take to the idea as enthusiastically as Paterno.

"The mood of the convention this year is such that it might not pass," Dodds said. "There seems to be a mood to pull back at this convention."

One thing the NCAA definitely doesn't want to do is alienate the bowl games already in existence. "The bowls put about $41 million a year into institutions around the country and I think the institutions feel good about that," Dodds said. "The bowls have been good for college football."

Wheeler trims Kelton

WHEELER — With only six games under their belts, the Wheeler Mustangs didn't have a lot of time to prepare for their district opener Tuesday, but they were ready and trimmed Kelton 79-49.

The Lady Mustangs found the going a bit tougher, but held off a determined Kelton squad for 47-45 district win and ran their record to 14-2.

"We shot the ball a lot better," Mike Newland, Wheeler boys coach, said of the victory that ended a two-game losing streak and saw the Mustangs up their season mark to 4-3.

One bright spot on the night for the Lions was Chad Caddel, who pumped in 31 points in Kelton's losing effort. "Chad Caddel is a super ball player," Newland remarked. "He gets points against you no matter what you do."

Newland also noted, "Cody Wiggins had his best game of the year." Wiggins led the Mustang stampede with 27 points. Bubba Smith and Drew Thomas were also in double figures with 15 apiece.

Wheeler jumped out to a 9-2 lead early in the first quarter, but the Lions rebounded and closed the gap to 13-12 after eight minutes. It was the second quarter, when the Mustangs outscored Kelton 20-8 that began the Lions undoing.

The Mustangs scored 20 points in the third quarter and 23 in the fourth while limiting Kelton to 13 and 16, respectively.

Kelton's Lady Lions fresh from victory at the Briscoe tournament, trailed 11-8 after the first quarter, but came back to lead 23-21 at the half. It was the third quarter, when the Mustangettes scored 14 points and Kelton 10 that proved to be the difference.

Marlo Hartman scored 25 points and pulled down 16 rebounds for Wheeler and Bridgett Wallace accounted for 10 more of the Wheeler points. Deann Jolly, a Wheeler stalwart, was sidelined with the flu.

Jeanette Hink led the Lady Lions with 16 points and Michele Keelin added 11.

Wheeler's Richard Smith fires a jumper while teammate Drew Thomas (41) moves in for a possible rebound.

Baugh remembers famous playoffs

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)—Six times in NFL history a team has lost two regular-season games to an opponent and come back to beat them in the playoffs.

Sammy Baugh is familiar with one of those instances. The year was 1943 and, ironically, the teams were the Washington Redskins and New York Giants.

Does it sound familiar to this year? "Slingin' Sammy" was the quarterback of the Redskins in 1943. Washington had things going its way until losing to New York 14-10 and 31-7 in the final two weeks of the regular season to force a conference playoff game with the Giants.

"I think we were in a position where all we needed to do was tie one of those last two games and we'd win the thing," Baugh said in a telephone interview from his Rotan, Texas home Tuesday night. "The second game we played terrible and I don't know why we weren't ready to play the game. It was kind of like what the Giants did to San Francisco on Sunday."

It was also kind of like what the 1986 version of the Giants did to the Redskins in the regular season. New York won the first game 27-20 and then scalped the 'Skins 24-14 in a game that was not as close as the score indicates.

Baugh, whose names are still featured prominently in the Washington record book, doesn't think beating the Redskins twice in the regular season proved an advantage for the Giants in 1943; in fact, he said it may have hurt them.

"I think it helped us really," said the 72-year-old Baugh. "We were real embarrassed in that second game. Some people say that teams who win two or three games before going into the playoffs are on a roll."

"A lot of times, the team that gets knocked down and gets embarrassed before going into the playoffs comes back and plays a good game," he added. "That was our position. It got us into a frame of mind where we played our best game."

The Redskins certainly did, blanking the Giants 28-0 to advance to the NFL title game against the Chicago Bears. In that contest, Baugh — who also played safety — suffered a concussion tackling Chicago quarterback Sid Luckman and the Bears went on to win 41-21.

"I think it happened in the first quarter," Baugh said. "I really don't remember much. I think I came back in and played the second half."

Baugh said he didn't remember much about the third Giants game that year, although he thinks he made an interception to set up a touchdown pass early in the game. The one thing he did recall was that Washington did not do much different in the game with New York, a team he said was equal in talent with the Redskins.

"Emotionally we were up for the game," he said. "After being embarrassed everybody was a little more ready. We wanted to show everyone that we weren't a bad ballclub."

Turning to the present, Baugh said the Giants and Redskins are the best teams remaining in the playoffs and the winner of Sunday's game at Giants Stadium will probably win the Super Bowl.

"If the Giants play like last week I don't think anyone will beat them," Baugh said. "They looked great to me against San Francisco. I thought they played the best game I've seen them play in 10 years."

If healthy, Baugh said the Redskins could give the Giants a good game.

So where is the former Texas Christian star putting his money? "If I had to just bet my money on it, I'd take the Giants," he said.

"They look very impressive."

Say you aren't betraying the Redskins, Sammy? "I'm not betraying anyone," he said. "I'm pulling for the Redskins. But you know what I mean, if I bet my money on it, I'd have to go with the Giants. They look that good to me."

Bosworth may still be able to play for Sooners

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Brian Bosworth's football career at Oklahoma may not be finished after all.

Bosworth was informed by Coach Barry Switzer on Monday that he should not plan on returning for his final year of eligibility. But Tuesday, Switzer issued a statement that left the door open.

"If Brian does not option to play pro football, he and I will discuss his possible future participation at a later date," Switzer said.

The turnaround came after Bosworth, a fourth-year junior, issued a lengthy apology in which he said he was "terribly embarrassed" by the concern his actions and remarks had caused university officials.

Repeated efforts to contact Switzer at his home Tuesday night were unsuccessful. However, reached at his office by The Daily Oklahoman, Switzer said Bosworth is "like a whipped dog. He's embarrassed. He regrets it, he knows he's wrong and he didn't realize the consequences."

"He didn't realize anything like this could happen to him," Switzer said. "He doesn't want to leave the University of Oklahoma as an 'expelled' player."

Switzer said Bosworth's apology "wipes the slate clean. I think it's something that can be positive for him and us."

The linebacker's association with Oklahoma depends "on how he handles this from now on," Switzer told the newspaper. "Everybody will be watching him."

What prompted Switzer's initial recommendation that Bosworth not return was the linebacker's actions during the Orange Bowl game last week.

Bosworth wore a T-shirt that, using the initials of the NCAA, read "National Communists Against Athletes."

The T-shirt was Bosworth's final say about the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which barred him from playing in the Orange Bowl because he had tested positive for steroid use.

"I know the drug program is in the best interest of the student-athlete and I should have been sensitive to the NCAA," Bosworth said in his apology, issued Monday night.

NBA roundup

New players make immediate impact for Bullets

By The Associated Press

The Washington Bullets have a new player — Jay Vincent — and a new point guard — John Williams.

Vincent, who was acquired by the Bullets in an offseason trade with the Dallas Mavericks, finally made a regular-season appearance in the Washington lineup, which was immediately changed by Coach Kevin Loughery.

Williams, a 6-foot-9 rookie, was shifted from forward to point guard in the Bullets' 112-97 victory over Los Angeles Tuesday night, the Clippers' 13th consecutive defeat and 25th in 26 games.

"This is what we wanted to accomplish in October," Loughery said of his new lineup. "But because of injuries and several other things, it did not come about."

Vincent, who scored 23 points against the Clippers, suffered a ruptured tendon in his right ring finger in the first quarter of Washington's opening exhibition game.

Williams scored nine points, grabbed six rebounds and handed out five assists as he saw time at point guard during his 29 minutes.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, New York beat Atlanta 118-86; Chicago defeated Cleveland 99-95; Milwaukee beat New Jersey 124-112; Indiana edged San Antonio 101-99; Golden State beat Houston 118-100; Seattle defeated Phoenix 138-108; and Sacramento downed Denver 112-104.

Vincent, who played 35 minutes, was happy with his first performance in Washington.

"I think I handled myself well," Vincent, who ran five miles a day while sidelined, said. "After three months off, I can't expect to be totally sharp."

Moses Malone led the Bullets with 27 points in 28 minutes, while Jeff Malone had 23 points and seven assists.

Knicks 118, Hawks 86

New York's Gerald Wilkins didn't outscore his brother, Dominique, but his team won.

The Knicks guard had 19 points, while the Hawks' forward had three more, but game was never as close as the brothers' battle after half-time.

"There's no one I'd rather beat than Atlanta because of my brother," Gerald Wilkins said. "He'll be buying two dinners for me after the game. It will just kill him."

Wilkins and Patrick Ewing combined to kill the Hawks in third quarter, scoring 11 and 14 points, respectively, as the Knicks broke open a close game.

Ewing finished with 31 points as the Knicks won their fifth straight home game for the first time since March 1984.

Bulls 99, Cavaliers 95

Cleveland held Michael Jordan under 30 points for only the fifth time this season, but the Bulls allowed the Cavaliers one field goal in 16 shots over the game's final 8:45.

Jordan, who is averaging 37.3 points per game, finished with 27 as the Cavaliers lost their fourth straight.

Bucks 124, Nets 112

The Bucks beat the Nets easily but lost guard Paul Pressey with a dislocated right ring finger. Bucks team physician Dr. David Haskell said Pressey would be out of action "a minimum of three weeks."

Ricky Pierce scored 27 points and Terry Cummings and Craig Hodges added 24 each for the Bucks, who won their third straight.

Pacers 101, Spurs 99

A goaltending call against San Antonio's Artis Gilmore with three seconds remaining gave the Pacers their fourth straight victory.

Gilmore was called for interfering with a short jumper by Vern Fleming.

Granville shakes up coaching staff

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville still wants a strong running game and he'll have a new offensive line coach next season to help him get it.

Glanville dismissed offensive line coach Bill Walsh and quarterbacks coach Gary Huff Tuesday and said he planned to offer them another position in the organization.

"I'd like to be able to run the football inside the 15-yard line," Glanville said. "Our priority will be to throw the football when it all gets compressed near the goal-line, you have to be able to run the football."

Glanville said he would interview prospective coaches during next week's Senior Bowl activities at Mobile, Ala.

Huff, 35, had just completed his first year with the Oilers and Walsh, who has been a coach in the AFL or NFL for 27 straight seasons, has been with the Oilers four seasons.

"I'd like to leave Gary and Bill on a positive note," Glanville said. "It may look like the blame is being put on them."

"What we did late yesterday (Monday) was change the assignments of some coaches. They have not been fired or kicked out of the organization.

"It is by no means the fault of Gary or Bill what happened to us last season."

The Oilers finished 5-11 for the second straight season and it was another disappointing year for the offensive line, which again was hit by injuries.

Oiler guard Mike Munchak said injuries caused the problems with the offensive line.

"It's unfortunate for him — all the talent he had, nobody was ever healthy for him at once," Munchak said. "If we can ever get it to where we have five guys playing together for at least a year or two, you're gonna see a big improvement."

"I've been with Bill the last four years. I owe a lot to him. I hate to see him leave."

At least one of the Oilers starting offensive linemen said during the season that the Oilers' blocking technique was outdated and too simple.

Walsh became offensive line coach for the AFL Dallas Texans in 1960 and stayed with the team 14 years. It later became the Kansas City Chiefs, which made two Super Bowl appearances with Walsh as offensive line coach.

Walsh spent eight years with the Atlanta Falcons before joining the Oilers in 1983.

Norman seeks to improve on championship season

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Greg Norman has a very simple plan for 1987. He wants to improve.

"Eighty-six was a pretty good year," Norman said in massive understatement. "There's no reason '87 can't be better."

That means Norman, the flamboyant Australian, will be attempting to improve on one of the great seasons in modern golf history.

In 1986, he led all four major championships through three rounds, winning the British Open and finishing second in the Masters and PGA. He also won two American titles, 10 in other parts of the world, including six in a row; led the American and Australian tours in earnings — the former with a record $653,295 — and was second in money-winnings in Europe. In all, he won $1.3 million.

"I don't think about '86. I don't reflect on '86. My friends keep talking about it, but I say, 'Hey, that's my job,'" Norman said.

How could he possibly top it?

"Just go out and do better. There's no reason why I can't," said Norman, whose quest for improvement began today in the $500,000 Tournament of Champions, the first event on the PGA Tour.

"I expect to win every time. I tee it up," Norman said. "If you don't, there's no point in playing."

"If you play as well as you can, and win as many as you can, there's no reason not to improve," said the man who, despite his disclaimers, ranked as the man to beat in this elite gathering of 29 tournament winners from the 1986 season.

"I'm playing pretty well, but my game is a little rusty right now, probably just from not playing in competition," said Norman, whose last official appearance was in Australia more than a month ago.

"I was losing incentive about then. I really didn't want to play. But after a couple of weeks' break, I was ready to go," Norman said. "I'm rested, relaxed and very confident," said Norman, who shot a 3-under-par 69 Tuesday in pro-am competition on the La Costa Country Club course.

His chief opposition in the chase for a $90,000 first prize include PGA champion Bob Tway, U.S. Open title-holder Ray Floyd and defending T of C champion Calvin Peete.

Other multiple winners from last year include Ben Crenshaw, Fuzzy Zoeller, Dan Pohl, Andy Bean, Hal Sutton and Corey Pavin.

Dirt riders to meet

The Top O' Texas Dirt Riders Association Inc. will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday night at Chase Oil Field Service, located on South Barnes Street in Pampa.

The Association has leased a 6,000 acre ranch and will be accepting applications for membership at the meeting. The lease is located 83 miles (1 hour, 15-minute drive) south of Pampa on Highway 70 near Turkey. Membership privileges include off-road motorcycling, 3 or 4 wheelers, camping and full hunting rights.

Membership applications will be available at the meeting.

The following guidelines have been established for use of the ranch facilities: 1. Memberships will include privileges for the member, spouse and unmarried children living at home. 2. All members will be expected to assist in putting on any club events. 3. Each member will be provided two guest passes per year, each of which can be used for one guest for one outing. 4. Full hunting rights are included. 5. Members will be responsible for the conduct of their families and guests.

All members and guests must have signed a release of liability form prior to using the lease. 6. The membership fee is $150 per year payable in advance. 7. The club will be limited to 50 memberships and must be approved by the board of directors. 8. The club will provide vehicle stickers which must be displayed on each vehicle entering the lease.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting Lynn Beznar at 665-6155 or Dwight Chase at 665-5518.

House ready for Iran-Contra probe

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House, following the Senate's lead, is ready to charter an Iran-Contra probe amid partisan bickering over the release of a secret Senate report said to show President Reagan knew nothing of the diversion of arms sale profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

The Senate voted 88-4 on Tuesday to set up an 11-member investigating committee, giving it a seven-month mandate to complete its work. Public hearings are expected to open in mid-February into allegations that profits from secret sales of U.S. arms to Iran were used to aid the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The House is set to create its own 15-member panel.

It was clear Republicans were concerned about the potential impact of the investigations on the 1988 presidential elections. And Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., won a compromise agreement requiring the new committee to wrap up its work no later than Aug. 1, three months earlier than originally proposed.

"It does not serve the national interest to belabor a point," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo. "It does not serve the national interest to keep an issue alive month after month after month after month."

Dole and his GOP colleagues pressed for public release of the 133-page report by the Senate Intelligence Committee which, according to Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the panel's former chairman, makes clear Reagan did not know of the diversion of the Iran arms sale profits.

The panel voted 7-6 on Monday not to release the report after Democrats said the document was flawed by important gaps in testimony.

Dole said that since the report has been officially unclassified, he would have no objection if someone took a copy to the Senate floor and read it into the Congressional Record. But no one did that.

The new Senate majority leader, Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said releasing it now, before all the facts and testimony are in, would be highly misleading.

"I personally have no evidence the president violated the law," Byrd said. "But that doesn't mean that I now know everything that is knowable."

Beyond that, Byrd said he had discovered "at least one glaring example" in which administration officials who had scrutinized the report to remove intelligence and national security secrets had removed "material that was not classified."

"Why all the hurry? Everything is going to be revealed. ... Let's not get in too big a rush here," Byrd said.

Durenberger told reporters the deleted material, about four pages, was not particularly embarrassing to the White House, but was removed because it came from staff investigators rather than direct testimony.

He predicted that public pressure will compel the Senate's majority Democrats to make the report public by the end of the month.

Names in the News

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (AP)—New York Mets outfielder Mookie Wilson autographed fellow jurors' summonses after he was included in a panel to hear a case in which a man was charged with pointing a gun at two youngsters.

Jury service supervisor Alison Kremer said Wilson, a member of baseball's 1986 world championship team, was recognized by a some early in the day Monday and that the "light dawned" later on the rest.

Wilson, of Lakewood, said the first day's proceedings were a bit boring.

NEW YORK (AP)—Michael Jackson is so thrilled with F.A.O. Schwarz's new Fifth Avenue digs that he wants to rent it for a slumber party, a toy company spokeswoman says.

After a recent visit to the giant toy store's glass-encased quarters inside the General Motors Building, the singer asked the owner's wife, Jan Harris, if he could rent the store for the night.

She told New York magazine in its Jan. 5 issue that the store has been used for private birthday parties and that a movie company may film inside it.

"I'm sure we could arrange to rent the store overnight to such a charming and gracious man," she said.

"That's as far as it's gone at the moment," said Erin O'Malley.

Saddle shop more than a tourist stop

PECOS (AP) — Tourists often enter the Pecos Saddle Shop, owned and operated by Gary Oden, hoping to pick up an authentic western souvenir of their visit. But they find more than souvenirs.

Located at 123 S. Oak St., across from the West of the Pecos Museum and the Judge Roy Bean replica, the shop is a natural focus of visitors to this West Texas town.

They aren't disappointed. The old-West decor includes a stuffed mountain lion, the skin from a black bear killed in the Davis Mountains and highly prized Western antiques.

But the tourists also find the modern trappings of the working Western rancher — jeans, shirts, boots, hats, saddle blankets, spurs, tack and stable gear of every description — flanking them on each side of the long narrow shop.

The unmistakable smell of tanned leather fills the shop. On display to see and touch are one of the main staples of ranch life in West Texas, roping saddles.

But Oden's saddles are not ordinary. Each one is custom made, right down to the saddle trees he buys from a maker in Marathon.

It's in the back of the shop that Oden plies his trade of 18 years, handcrafting and tooling top grade rawhide into rodeo trophy saddles and custom made roping saddles.

Oden, a descendant of the pioneer Ligon family in West Texas, seems to have inherited his share of the family's artistic talent. He follows his uncle, Earl Ligon Jr., in the craft of saddle making.

One of the highlights of Oden's career was the selection of one of his collector's saddles, made to commemorate the 1983 centennial of the West of the Pecos Rodeo, for exhibition in the "Handmade and Heartfelt" Contemporary Folk Art Exhibition.

The exhibit premiered in the Laguna Gloria Art Museum in Austin in September, and will be a traveling exhibit throughout the state of Texas into 1987.

The saddle selected for the exhibition features the centennial rodeo logo and an oak leaf design carved into the left sweat leather of the saddle.

On the right sweat leather, Oden hand tooled a barrel racer, a steer roper and a man with a megaphone, all set in a roping arena. Barrel racing and steer roping originated at Pecos rodeos, and his designs recall that history. The man with the megaphone represents the many years that Pecos rancher Buck Jackson announced rodeos here before and after the days of microphones and loud speakers.

Hostage case not first for Dallas airport

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Here is a chronology of incidents involving attempted hijackings, bomb threats or other violence at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport:

■ July 29, 1986 — Airport Department of Public Safety conducts investigation into security procedures at Delta Terminal 4E after woman is allowed to board plane following discovery of two military explosives devices in her luggage. Officials later found the devices, bought at an army surplus store, were not armed.

■ Feb. 5, 1986 — Ralph Adolphus Hughes holds passengers and crew of Delta Flight 139 hostage moments after plane lands at D-FW. Hughes holds penknife to throat of Delta flight attendant for nearly two hours before being overpowered by FBI agents.

■ Dec. 2, 1985 — Bomb threat forces Lufthansa Boeing 747 bound for Mexico City with 121 passengers back to D-FW. Plane is evacuated; search finds no bomb.

■ Oct. 30, 1985 — Bomb explodes in baggage compartment of American Airlines jetliner after it lands on flight from Austin. Police arrest Albert Lee Thielman, San Marcos, whose wife and three children were aboard plane. Thielman later convicted of trying to blow up family to collect life insurance.

■ Oct. 2, 1980 — Kenyan man goes "berserk" aboard Braniff International flight and fights with six passengers. Unarmed man is arrested after landing.

■ April 9, 1980 — American Airlines jet hijacked in Southern California refuels at D-FW on its way to Havana, Cuba. The hijacker, armed with a .45 pistol, is arrested by Cuban authorities after 727 lands there.

■ May 18, 1979 — Three men, including ex-convict, are arrested while trying to smuggle three pistols through security gates.

Texas-size mailbox

Rural Route mail carrier Kim Brosig leans out of her car window while delivering mail into a "Texas Size Mailbox" recently during her afternoon deliveries. The oversized box belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Neves of Odessa and is actually a standard sized mailbox with an extension welded onto the backend.

Dallas city spa gains detractors

DALLAS (AP) — Detractors upset by the cost and location of the city's new health spa say they aren't sure if the facility will work.

City officials gave this week Monday of the $115,000 spa called the Dallas Fitness Center. The center is located in trendy North Dallas amid dozens of other private health clubs.

The location has prompted criticism from those who say the facility can't compete in the area.

Dallas City Council member Diane Ragsdale wonders why the money spent for the treadmills and a sauna couldn't have spent to update the city's 39 recreational centers.

"If we're going to do that kind of thing, we might as well do it across the board so that everyone has access to that quality of programs," Ragsdale said.

Sandra Matney, assistant director of the city's Parks and Recreation Department, said the George B. Dealey recreation center in North Dallas is the city's largest center and the only one with room for the expanded health facility. North Dallas, one of the more affluent areas of the city, is heavily populated by young professionals.

"If it works, we'd like to come into other areas of the city and open fitness programs there, too," Matney said.

The city plans to recoup some of its expenditures by charging for club memberships.

Reagan proposes helium plant sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's 1988 budget includes a proposal to sell the nation's only major helium refining and distribution operation while retaining the gas itself, a Bureau of Mines official said Tuesday.

The proposal calls for selling the operation in Amarillo for an estimated $50 million, the official said.

Storage tanks beneath the city contain billions of cubic feet of the gas, currently being used to clear the fuel tanks of the space shuttle and for various Defense Department projects, said Jim Donahue, budget officer for the Bureau of Mines.

"We will look to the private sector to buy and operate the plant while the United States retains ownership of the gas," Donahue said.

The Bureau of Mines is developing a plan to deal with the 210 people who currently work at the plant and organize a system for taking bids on the facility, he said.

"Nobody even knew of the plan until (Monday), but there is private industry participation in supplying helium," Donahue said. Exxon and Union Carbide are two likely bidders, he said.

Three-quarters of the nation's supply of helium is being provided by private industry, but the government wants to retain a portion of the gas for defense purposes, which Donahue described as significant.

The gas is most often found in small amounts in natural gas deposits. The United States owns a substantial amount of the total global supply, he said.

Two much smaller facilities, in Satanta, Kan., and Keyes, Okla., are also on the trading block in the president's budget, which went to Congress on Monday.
