Prosecutor probes White Deer funds

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — District Attorney David McCoy confirmed Thursday that he is investigating allegations of embezzlement of White Deer-Skellytown school funds, including an employee's purchase of $764 in pantyhose within one year.

But he wants the Texas Education Agency, which made the allegations, to provide him with more proof before he prepares any criminal charges.

TEA auditors Tom Canby and David Pugh visited White Deer ISD offices Feb. 10 and 11 to investigate charges made by an unnamed complainant that then-Business Manager Beverly Gaines was misappropriating school funds.

Gaines resigned Feb. 16, reportedly at the request of school officials, and has repeatedly declined comment on the audit.

When contacted at her White Deer home Thursday, Gaines, business manager since the 1982-83 school year, said she has nothing to say about the investigation.

Trustees hired a new business manager, Jack R. Back of Lefors, at a special meeting Monday.

After their February investigation, the auditors said they found $5,150 in "questionable expenses" on a district Visa credit card, an American Express credit card, a Texaco credit card and in cash payments. Among the expenses the auditors questioned was the reported purchase of $764 in pantyhose through the school district's Visa credit card.

All but $263 of that total reportedly was reimbursed to the school, auditors said.

The auditors also cited 11 examples of what they called internal accounting control weaknesses. These included lack of petty cash vouchers acknowledging receipt of cash, failure to deposit cafeteria receipts in a timely manner and concentration of all the accounting responsibilities with the business manager.

Canby and Pugh noted that Superintendent Tom Harkey and other administrators "expressed concern about the internal accounting control weaknesses and appeared ready to implement changes in the district's policies."

The TEA auditors concluded their report by recommending that White Deer administrators conduct their own extensive audit, going back two fiscal years.

Along with the school's audit, the TEA will send its findings to "the appropriate legal and federal authorities," the report states.

The school board appointed the Amarillo accounting firm of Cornell & Co. to conduct the school district's separate audit.

White Deer School Superintendent Tom Harkey said he expects the district's audit to be concluded some time next week.

"But we have 30 days to answer the TEA's report," Harkey said.

The auditors also want the school to examine the list of charges on the school's gasoline credit card to see which charges could be related to school business.

The TEA sent copies of the auditors' conclusions

QUESTIONED EXPENSES

Texas Education Agency auditors Tom Canby and David Pugh say they found the following "unauthorized expenditures" after an investigation at White Deer ISD offices on Feb. 10 and 11:

- The purchase of $764 in pantyhose with the district's Visa credit card between March 1985 and February 1986. The auditors said the business manager showed them a personal check reimbursing the school for $191 and various receipts for meals and supplies totaling $310, for which she apparently had not been reimbursed. Auditors said school officials could not substantiate reimbursement of the remaining $263.
- Five disbursements totaling $1,986 from the school's special fund bank account to pay American Express card bills, even though, the auditors claim, the school has not had an account with American Express. The auditors maintained that the district officials could not produce any invoices or receipts documenting these purchases. The auditors said Business Manager Gaines confirmed that the account number on two of the bills was hers.
- Numerous checks, totaling $960, made to "cash;" although, auditors claimed, the district had no records showing who received the cash and no endorsement on the checks. The auditors alleged Gaines could neither locate these expenditures in her accounting records nor locate copies of the checks or stubs.
- Charges totaling $1,941 that the business manager allegedly made on the district's Texaco credit card. Auditors said that district officials felt the purchases were excessive and "not all could have been related to school business." Compensation for the business manager set by the board did not include additional amounts for such fringe benefits as a gasoline allowances.

The TEA auditors also cited 11 examples of "internal accounting control weaknesses:"

- Lack of petty cash vouchers acknowledging receipt of cash.
- Apparent signing of blank checks by business office and administrative personnel.
- Issuing partially completed checks to school personnel to purchase supplies locally, instead of establishing an account with a business.
- Failure to reconcile the special account statements in a timely manner. This had not been done since September 1986, auditors said.
- Lack of cash receipt records in the business office for cafeteria monies transferred to the business manager for deposit.
- Failure to deposit cafeteria receipts in a timely manner.
- Concentration of the accounting responsibilities with the business manager.
- No separate filing of carbon copies of checks in numeric sequence.
- Using the district's gasoline credit card during times other than official travel.
- No written policy concerning travel expenses and reimbursement.
- District personnel not filing travel reports.

to McCoy and Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Harkey said he "will not agree or disagree" with the TEA report until he sees what the school district's internal audit reveals.

"Then I'll have some direction," Harkey said. "A lot of it has to be proven," Harkey said, adding that he was surprised and disappointed at what the TEA report had to say.

"I think they looked at the frequency of the expenditures," he added. "But time will tell on this thing."

McCoy said Thursday that he will investigate TEA's allegations against Gaines before the Carson County grand jury convenes March 16.

But first, he wants the TEA auditors to provide more proof of their conclusions.

Reagan considers arms control pact

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, trying to put the Iran-Contra affair in the background, is conferring with arms negotiators on a "breakthrough" Soviet offer he says makes him more optimistic than ever about an agreement.

The negotiators — Max M. Kampelman, Maynard W. Glitman and Ron Lehman — flew back to Washington from Brussels, Belgium, after briefing the 16 NATO ambassadors on the Soviet proposal at a closed-door, two-hour meeting Thursday.

The Soviets have offered to sign a treaty to scrap medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, apart from any agreement on long-range nuclear missiles and Reagan's prized "Star Wars" missile defense plan.

Reagan, addressing a gathering of newspaper executives Thursday, said, "This change in the Soviet position is a great

Pampa building leads last year by many bricks

The margins have narrowed, but the value of construction issued Pampa city permits still is greater than in both the last fiscal and calendar years.

According to the monthly report from the Department of Building Inspection, the city issued 10 building permits in February with valuation listed at $285,584.

That's down nearly $154,000 from the $439,400 recorded for 13 permits in February 1986.

But thanks to a large valuation recorded in January — $1,522,600 — the overall totals are still running above last year's, noted department director David McKinney.

For the 1986-1987 fiscal year period to date, valuation stands at $3,783,299, more than $871,000 above the $2,911,969 recorded in the same 1985-1986 fiscal year period. The fiscal year runs from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

For the 1987 calendar year, which begins Jan. 1, valuation for building permit construction totals $1,808,184, more than $1 million above the $797,800 recorded for the first two months of 1986, McKinney reported.

Miami school district closed for candidates

MIAMI — Any residents who wanted to stop by Miami school offices this week to file for the school board election would have found the office doors shut.

But Miami school Superintendent Allan Dinsmore said he doesn't find anything wrong with that, and apparently neither do state election officials.

After all, it is spring break. "Anybody who wanted to apply for office could call me at my house," Dinsmore said.

The superintendent added that there was no posted notice that potential candidates could have called him at home prior to the filing deadline at midnight Wednesday.

"Miami's not too big of a town that people don't hear about it. We had custodians and maintenance people up here this week," Dinsmore said. "They told people where to go."

Spring break didn't keep three candidates from filing for the two available Miami trustee positions. They are incumbents Charles Byrum and Tom Henderson and challenger Ken Gill.

Dinsmore added that to his knowledge, there is no law that says school offices must remain open throughout the filing period. The candidates' applications are filed with the secretary of the

Superintendent candidates list aspirations

All six finalists for the Pampa school superintendent's job say working with the community will be one of their primary goals.

But at least two of the candidates have learned to live with controversy in their home districts.

Pampa school trustees were to begin interviewing candidates at 4 p.m. today, with interviews continuing behind closed doors through Sunday. The board plans to discuss each finalist again at 7 p.m. Monday, with the new superintendent to be named March 17. Former Superintendent James Trusty resigned in December.

The half dozen finalists for the job, all currently Texas superintendents, are: Dr. Harrell Holder, 55, of the Hereford Independent School District; Dr. Jack Ammons, 47, of Northwest ISD in Justin; Charles Greenawalt, 40, of Joshua ISD; Dr. Harry Griffith, 36, of Ingram ISD; Dr. Roy Hartman, 52, of Forney ISD; and Dr. Don Hooper, 38, of Gainesville ISD.

Holder, the only Panhandle applicant of the six, recently saw Hereford school trustees vote not to extend his three-year contract — after 11 years with the district. Hereford Brand Publisher O.G. Nieman said Thursday that the controversy developed over an education program targeted at Hispanics and required by House Bill 72.

Nieman said several Hereford teachers were unhappy with the person chosen to head the program at Hereford and, when Holder stood behind the program chief, a Hispanic parents group was formed. The group eventually managed to elect new school board members, the publisher said.

Holder said this morning that the controversy hasn't been as great "as the TV screen might have led you to believe." He said the goals of parents and the administration have been the same: To decrease the dropout rate among Hispanic students.

He added that, when parents and the administration came to an agreement at a recent meeting, the result was downplayed by the Amarillo television media.

Holder said one of his primary goals in Pampa would be to work with the community and determine what Pampa citizens want from their school system.

"As a neighbor, I've always admired the Pampa schools, and I feel like they have a system that I'd like to be a part of," he said.

Hooper has also seen his share of controversy during his two years at Gainesville, mostly due to a problem he inherited from a previous administration. Gainesville voters recently passed a rollback election, following a 41-cent tax increase.

Hooper said Gainesville schools were operating in the red when he arrived and the school board had depleted reserve funds.

"Some of these are just sort of conclusions they reached," McCoy said. "I want to see how or why the TEA reached these conclusions. I'll want to see invoices, copies of checks."

McCoy added that "it is too early to say" whether his investigation will center on Gaines or any other school administrator.

"But that is certainly one of the focal points," he added.

McCoy said if he can get the evidence and information in time, he could present a case at the Carson County grand jury meeting March 16.

"But we're not going into this investigation with the intent of indicting anybody," he said, adding that he has yet to hear from the Texas Education Agency.

TEA Director of Audits E.E. Randall of Austin said Thursday that the investigation stems from a complaint made by an unnamed White Deer school patron.

"I couldn't say that there were or weren't more than one person involved in our investigation," Randall said.

He added that when an individual files a complaint with the TEA, "they have to give us something specific."

"We don't respond if someone just calls and says so-and-so is a crook," Randall said.

Randall said the TEA sent copies of its findings to the district attorney's office to see which, if any, criminal charges would apply. The attorney general's office was also sent a copy of the report. Randall said had federal school funds been involved, the report would be turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Randall said school officials have "cooperated very well" with the TEA investigation.

Building

In the January report, both the current fiscal and calendar year totals were running more than $1 million higher than the previous year's figures.

Last month, department personnel issued two permits for single family dwellings with a valuation listed at $203,400; one permit for a commercial building, $35,000; one permit for a mobile home, $15,000; two permits for garages, $5,763; two permits for alterations or additions to dwellings, $14,921; and two permits for alterations or additions to commercial buildings, $11,500.

Total fees collected for building permits in February were $666, down from the $923 collected a year ago. Total fees for the current fiscal year period stand at $5,226 for 72 permits, more than $1,000 under the $6,259 in fees collected at this time last year for 86 permits. Fees for 17 permits issued in the first two months of the current calendar year total $2,267.

The city also issued 10 electrical permits in February for fees of $179. In February 1986 the department issued 15 permits for fees of $236.

For the current fiscal year to date, 62 electrical permits have been issued, with $1,753 collected in fees. That compares with the 85 permits and fees of $1,585 reported for the first five months of the 1985-1986 fiscal year period.

McKinney reported 17 electrical permits have been issued in the calendar year to date, with fees totaling $224.

Twenty-six plumbing permits were issued in February, with fees totaling $334. A year ago, 25 permits were issued for fees of $331.

For the fiscal year period, personnel have issued 201 plumbing permits, collecting fees of $3,199, running above the 159 permits for $2,336 in fees reported in the same 1985-1986 fiscal year period. In the first two months of the present calendar year, 54 permits have been issued for fees of $601.

Under new regulations which are nearing their first year of implementation, five mechanical permits were issued last month for fees of $439.

Personnel have issued 30 mechanical permits for the fiscal year to date, with fees standing at $1,318. For the calendar year, seven permits have been issued for $489 in fees.

The yearly comparisons for mechanical permits will begin in March, since the first ones were issued in March 1986.

school board. At Miami, Trustee Kay Thompson is school board secretary.

Sharon Hanko, director of the legal section of the secretary of state's Election Division, said the Texas Election Code just isn't specific enough to address a spring break.

"There is a provision in the Election Code that says the secretary of the board shall keep the office open for three hours during a regular business day," Hanko said. She noted that there may or may not be a "regular business day" during spring break.

She said her office hasn't confronted the spring break issue.

"We may need to get a ruling to get a definition on 'business day' to see if it would include school spring breaks," Hanko said.

Pact

breakthrough and shows that, in working for the cause of peace, preparedness pays, patience pays, and firmness pays."

The president said, "I've never felt more optimistic about the prospects for success in this area than I do today."

However, he cautioned that some important issues remain to be settled, such as shorter-range nuclear missiles capable of striking Western Europe.

Reagan said there also were problems about verification and large imbalances in the shorter-range missiles, chemical weapons and conventional forces in Europe.

Emphasizing the issue of arms control, Reagan attempted to turn the page on the Iran episode.

"We've spent enough time the last few months on the inside-Washington politics: Who's up and who's down, who's in and out," he said.

He said investigations of the Iran-Contra affair would continue and his administration will cooperate. "But so far as I'm concerned, the American people sent me here to do a job, and there are just two years left to get it done."

Yet the issue confronted him anew Thursday.

His brother, J. Neil Reagan, said in a published interview he believes the president arranged a diversion of profits from the Iran arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

"My brother said that?" the president said with a look of amazement as he posed for pictures with GOP senators. "I'll skin him."

The president has insisted he knew nothing about such a diversion.

Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush, campaigning in Iowa, said, "I'm catching the Dickens" for failing to stop the Iran initiative.

"Things are very clear, ex post facto, but I didn't see quite so clearly before," he added. The vice president agreed that trading arms for hostages "wasn't so hot."

While acknowledging the Iran crisis will not go away, White House strategists hope to repair damage to Reagan's credibility and erase doubts about his ability to govern by focusing on other subjects and stressing the need to keep the government moving forward.

As part of the White House public relations strategy, the president's point man on the Iran affair, Ambassador David Abshire, spent 1 1/2 hours Thursday in radio interviews.

Talking with Mutual Radio, Abshire said Reagan did not need to apologize for his role in the Iran-Contra affair because the American people want a strong chief executive and such expressions of regret are not "the presidential way."

"When it was gone, and House Bill 72 hit them, they didn't realize the financial impact," he explained.

Hooper said part of the solution was raising taxes "and that's always painful." He also said the district was forced to make significant cuts in some programs.

He said he can foresee the possibility of a similar problem occurring in Pampa. Pampa trustees grappled with an $800,000 budget deficit last summer before deciding to make up lost revenues out of a reserve fund.

"I think that's one of the pluses that I could bring to Pampa," he said. "I think it's the kind of expertise that the Pampa school district could use at this time."

Hooper is no stranger to the Panhandle. He grew up in Stinnett and served as superintendent in Darrouzett for several years.

Hooper said he and his wife, a Perryton native, want to return to their Panhandle roots and added that Pampa is a larger district than Gainesville, with an excellent reputation.

He said his first step upon coming to Pampa, would be to conduct a "needs assessment" of the school system.

"The main thing would be to get the board and the community and the staff to crystallize what their wants and needs are," he said, adding that community involvement would be a major factor. "They (citizens) are all stockholders in this corporation."

Forney's Hartman also traces roots to the Panhandle as one of eight original members of the regional educational service center in Amarillo. He was also superintendent in Hereford for seven years, preceding Dr. Holder.

After leaving Hereford, Hartman served as superintendent in Abilene, Wylie and Liberal, Kan., before coming to Forney last July.

Hartman said he would leave Forney after only a year with that district because Pampa is a larger district with a good reputation and because Pampa is close to his parents in Sayre, Okla., and his grandchildren in Liberal. "Geographically, Pampa is an excellent location," he said.

His major goal, Hartman said, would be to get all those involved with education in Pampa to work together for academic achievement.

"In promoting academic achievement, it's necessary to have good faculty morale, good faculty relationships, a good teamwork situation between board, administration and staff," he explained.

Ammons said the Pampa job provided him with a chance to grow professionally and return to West Texas, where he once taught in Lubbock. He said his family has West Texas roots.

"I've always had a great deal of admiration for the people in West Texas," he said.

Ammons said public schools cannot succeed without community involvement.

"Public school education is a people process, and you're going to have to involve the people and you should involve them," he said.

Greenawalt said Pampa struck him as a district where he could make a difference and get involved in the community. His Joshua district serves what is basically a Fort Worth bedroom community.

"I guess I want to get into a situation where I can feel the community atmosphere," he said.

Greenawalt said his major goal is all-around academic excellence, but added community involvement is an important part of that goal.

Greenawalt was formerly director of community education in College Station, a program that opened the school doors for taxpayers to take adult classes at night.

"I think it's very important for the community to know what's going on in the school district," he said. "I believe in communicating. You can't isolate the community from the schools."

Griffith, the only South Texas finalist and the youngest candidate, said he would strive to give each school employee a sense of importance. He also spoke of strong community involvement.

"I feel very strongly that a participating, decision-making process is important to the school district for the success of every child," he said.

Fund established for Pampan

A fund has been started to help defray medical expenses for a Pampa man who recently received a kidney transplant.

Paul Trolin of 1185 Varnon Drive, a longtime Pampa resident, underwent a kidney transplant operation Feb. 25 in the Methodist Hospital at Dallas.

A hospital spokesman reported Trolin is doing fine and that the kidney is functioning well.

Trolin has been a disabled kidney dialysis patient for the past 14 years. He is not covered by any private insurance plan.

In spite of his disability, Trolin has been active in the Top O Texas Kiwanis Club. He presently serves as president of the Panhandle Area Kidney Patients Auxiliary.

Trolin has presented programs and classes on kidney dialysis to various area organizations.

Uncovered medical costs, medications and other related expenses from his recent operation are expected to total approximately $10,000 during his stay in Dallas.

A fund to help with those expenses has been started at First National Bank. Those wanting to contribute to the fund should contact Janelle Cochran, bank vice president.

In addition, the Beta Alpha Zeta Sorority is placing contribution containers with Trolin's photograph on them in various merchants' stores cooperating in the fund-raising drive.

Anyone wishing to assist with the drive can contact Dannie Hoover at 665-0819.

Those wishing to send cards or flowers to Trolin while he is in Dallas should send them to Paul Trolin in care of Methodist Hospital, Dallas, Texas, 75208.

NCAA: 'We were intentionally misled' by SMU

DALLAS (AP) — The NCAA's top investigator says he was "intentionally misled" in his probe of scandal-racked Southern Methodist University and that disclosures were squelched in what amounted to an official cover-up.

David Berst, enforcement director for the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said Thursday he believes that SMU officials were instructed to withhold information about board-level approval of improper payoffs to athletes.

"I think it's clear — I guess it's at least my opinion — that we were intentionally misled," Berst told the Dallas Times Herald. "I think there had to be some instruction from elsewhere ... Obviously others were involved, and there was a barrier put up to keep us from getting there."

Lonny Kliever, the faculty member responsible for overseeing the university's internal investigation, said he believes "there was information that I could have been given that I wasn't given."

Neither Kliever nor Berst used the words "cover up" to describe what occurred, but Berst agreed it was an appropriate term and that he was merely describing it in other words.

Their comments are the latest fallout in the spreading SMU athletics scandal. Gov. Bill Clements disclosed Tuesday that he and others on the school's Board of Governors authorized continuing cash payments to some athletes even after the NCAA put the school on probation in 1985.

Revelations of $61,000 in continuing payments between September 1985 and December 1986 prompted the NCAA to cancel SMU's 1987 football season and severely restrict the one in 1988.

Clements contends the NCAA knew and sanctioned a continuation and gradual phasing out of the improper payments, but Berst called such that claim "ridiculous" and "absurd."

"I think he's trying to find somebody to help share the burden of this," Berst said. "But it's not going to be us."

Meanwhile, a former booster who was banned from associating with SMU after the 1985 violations said Thursday night that there are still people on SMU's Board of Governors who were involved in the payments.

Corpus Christi businessman Reid Ryan at first denied being one of nine banned boosters Thursday, but admitted later in the day that he had lied "because I was so upset over the whole thing."

"Yes, I was one of those boosters," he said. "But I can tell you something else — there are still people on that board who were also involved and they're lying if they say they weren't. They should resign."

He refused to name names, saying he was afraid of being sued.

Board members, shaken by Clements' claim that some in their ranks knew of payments to athletes, insisted they did not and said Thursday they hope a bishop's investigation will clear them of wrongdoing.

"For anybody to think that we're sitting up in a governors' meeting discussing payments is ludicrous," said board member Ruth Collins Sharp of Dallas.

A special panel will be formed to determine if any current university officials were involved in or knew about improper payments to athletes, North Texas area Bishop John Russell said in a prepared statement Thursday.

"A breach of integrity in any part of the university destroys the reputation of the university. As United Methodists, we are embarrassed and greatly concerned that SMU did not abide by NCAA rules," he said.

Russell is a board of governors member and president of the church's College of Bishops South Central Jurisdiction, which owns SMU. He said the church expects SMU to maintain a high moral and ethical quality and the university deserved the severe penalty meted out by the NCAA.

The university announced the appointment Thursday of another committee to examine the structure of the 75-member board of trustees. The board of governors acts as an executive committee to the trustees.

Chairman Leighton Farrell said the self-study committee would look at the mechanics of university government and probably would have little to do with Russell's committee.

In the meantime, Ryan said he is part of a group of SMU alumni that is raising funds to file a lawsuit against the NCAA, and possibly SMU. The group seeks to obtain a restraining order that would save SMU's 1987 football season.

The Times Herald reported earlier that SMU officials are reporting pressure from the NCAA to permanently ban the nine boosters from the athletics program. Ryan said he and others were banned for just a few years in 1985.

The newspaper quoted a source as saying SMU plans to argue that a permanent ban would be unfair because some of them have complied with the sanctions imposed on them by SMU and the NCAA in August 1985.

Opponents speak out against tort reform

AUSTIN (AP) — One side insists farmers would suffer under controversial liability insurance reforms now under consideration, but the other says the rules must be revised to keep farmers' finances healthy.

Opponents to tort reform will continue their testimony before the Senate Economic Development Committee Monday. The group also will hear testimony next week on proposals to change state laws concerning liability insurance in Texas.

"Farming is far more risky than most people think," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Thursday. "Agricultural machines now cause more than half of all machinery-related deaths ... Farmers and farmworkers alike suffer more than their share of pesticide poisonings."

Hightower said passing tort reform measures the committee is considering would make it "impossible for an injured farmer to prove which wrongdoer caused what percentage of the damages."

"Farmers will not get full recoveries, and they will pay for losses they had no hand in causing," Hightower said.

But Bernie Glasson, speaking for the Texas Farm Bureau, supported tort reform. "The size of recoveries in pesticide cases and the amount a farmer must pay for his own health care have hurt many farmers," Glasson said.

Another witness, Dallas attorney John Marks, gave an example of why he and his Texas Civil Justice League say there must be reform.

"A prize bull died because a non-English speaking employee could not read the pesticide applied," Marks said. "The bull's owner got $1.7 million actual damages and $7 million punitive because instructions on the bottle were not written in both English and Spanish."

"There are not too many lawsuits because of the civil justice system," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, a consumer-oriented group.

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, committee chairman, promised that opponents would be given another chance to testify Monday, including representatives from the Texas Trial Lawyers Association.

Harris said all bills concerning tort reform and liability insurance changes would go to a subcommittee after the public hearings.

The six legislative proposals on tort reform before the committee would put a cap on non-economic and punitive awards by juries, limit attorney fees in damage suits and make numerous other changes in the present civil justice system.

Ms. Claybrook said the proposal by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, to put a $250,000 cap on non-economic jury awards was "immoral, lacking in economic rationale and is arguably unconstitutional."

House approves tax increase extension

AUSTIN (AP) — Tax increases approved as last year's temporary solution to the state's fiscal woes have been backed by the House as a permanent part of this year's solution.

But it's not the end of tax talk in the House, Speaker Gib Lewis predicts.

"The bills we passed today I don't think are enough to meet the needs of Texas for the next biennium," he said Thursday after registering his votes for the bills.

Following Lewis' lead, the House overwhelmingly approved a plan that would keep the 5 1/2 percent sales tax and 15 cent per gallon motor fuels tax on the books permanently. Both would expire Sept. 1 if the Legislature takes no action.

Lawmakers approved the increases last September, raising the sales tax from the previous 4 percent and the fuel tax from 10 cents per gallon.

If approved by the Senate and signed by Gov. Bill Clements, the taxes would raise $2.9

billion for the state in 1988-89, when the state is projected to face a $5.8 billion deficit at current spending levels.

"The House acted courageously this morning, I think, by getting us about half the way there," State Treasurer Ann Richards said after the Thursday vote.

Several amendments, including a proposal to dedicate some of the money to prisons, were handily rejected. Approved, however, were amendments that removed the Sept. 1, 1989, expiration date in the bills as they came out of committee.

The sales tax bill won 115-29 approval and the fuel tax bill was approved 119-25.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby agreed the $2.9 billion that would be raised in 1988-89 by the increased taxes would not be enough.

Several House members complained it would be unfair to make the temporary taxes permanent. They said the increases were intended as a stop-gap measure until the Legislature could this year conduct a full review of the tax system, including a possible expansion of the sales tax to cover now-exempt services.

But Clements, who backed the $2.9 billion plan, opposes any sales tax revision that is not "revenue neutral." Some House members say it would be pointless to face the political heat of a sales tax expansion bill if it would not raise more money for the state.

Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, was among those complaining on the House floor Thursday.

"I suggest to you that what we're about to do here is tantamount to legislative malpractice," said Price, who believes the sales tax places an unfair burden on the poor, while the wealthy do not pay taxes on services.

"On the contrary, every damned thing that poor people buy is touched and continues to be touched," Price said.

FCA not authorized to transfer funds

LUBBOCK (A) — A federal judge has ruled that Congress never authorized the Farm Credit Administration to transfer funds among its member land bank and production credit associations.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward's finding Thursday came in a permanent injunction finalizing the temporary one he issued in October preventing FCA from sending $72 million from Texas associations to financially troubled associations in six states.

Nine Texas associations, including Caprock-Plains, Muleshoe, Plainview and Amarillo, sought to block the transfer ordered by FCA in 1985.

The judge invalidated the FCA's order on grounds that it was outside Congressional intent.

"Regulations cannot exceed the power granted by Congress," Woodward wrote.

The judge noted that the applicable law provides for a voluntary system of loss sharing and a corporation to loan money to troubled member institutions. The Texas associations, Woodward held, would suffer irreparable harm if the FCA enforced the transfer regulation.

The wording of the order indicated that he agreed with the associations' position that taking money from healthy members to prevent the collapse of unhealthy ones would jeopardize the financial standing of strong associations without adequate protection.

The case resulted from a two-year legal controversy in the Farm Credit System.

Judge returned to committee for questioning

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has decided to shelve the appointment of a Dallas appeals court judge until he responds to questions about whether he once tried to discourage minorities from voting.

The name of Craig Enoch, appointed Feb. 19 by Gov. Bill Clements as chief justice of the 5th Court of Appeals, was removed from a short list of appointees Thursday and returned to the Senate Nominations Committee.

Committee chairman Chet Edwards said Enoch, 36, "may have been one of those persons involved in passing out and pasting up statements" at polling precincts in minority areas in Dallas several years ago.

"These particular notices said people could be prosecuted if they aren't following election law — there have been a number of questions raised about this in the past, and several members of the Senate" asked the committee to reconsider the nomination, Edwards said.

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, asked, "Do you want to talk to him or does Sen. (Eddie Bernice) Johnson?"

Edwards, D-Duncanville, responded, "Sen. Johnson asked me if it would be appropriate to consider him before the committee, and I said it would be ..."

Enoch, a former state district judge, was cleared by the committee Tuesday without being required to appear for questions.

Edwards said the committee would question Enoch on Tuesday.

Ms. Johnson, D-Dallas, told reporters signs were put up at minority precincts in November 1982 that said in bold letters, in essence, "Stop, you could go to jail if you are a felon." Asked if she would ask the Senate to reject Enoch's appointment, Ms. Johnson said it depended on the judge's response to certain questions.

She said if she does not like what she hears, "I'll try to get enough votes to stop him."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Company giveaway bolsters good image

Rep. Henry A. Waxman, the California Democrat, perhaps put it best: "They are due a good image because they are doing something good for the American people." Waxman was talking about a plan by the giant pharmaceutical concern, G.D. Searle & Co., to distribute $10 million worth of a newly approved medication for high blood pressure to poor patients free of charge. This action won't by a long shot solve all the problems associated with being poor and having a long-term medical condition, but it's something concrete and constructive.

Both Waxman and company officials seemed compelled to respond to questions apparently rooted in cynicism about anything done by a giant corporation. Waxman was allowing as to how this action might well be good for the company's corporate image, and that company officials just might have considered that fact. And company officials had to "insist" the plan was not a marketing gimmick to promote the drug Calan.

Part of any good reporter's job, of course, is to ask uncomfortable questions that might seem rooted in cynicism. It may be interesting to speculate on just how widely another unspoken assumption behind such questions is shared: the notion that there's something fishy, suspect, faintly disreputable about private people doing things that further their personal or corporate interests.

This vague suspicion may be rooted in a common failure to make distinctions between the political arena and the marketplace. When a person or company uses the coercive power of government to further his private interests, citizens are perfectly justified in being suspicious or even outraged. Not only is such a person employing force to promote his special interest, he is subverting the instrument (government) whose purpose is supposed to be equal protection of the rights of all.

It's a different story in the marketplace. The only way to succeed in that arena is to get somebody else to make a voluntary decision to buy your product or service. In a truly free marketplace, the only way to further your own interests is to serve the perceived interests of others. Persuading others that your interests coincide may sometimes involve questionable taste, but the decision to buy or not is ultimately voluntary.

The marketplace, reflecting the diversity of producers and consumers, is also flexible. One may seek to cajole the consumer with screaming commercials, humor solemn recitals, promotions, publicity — or even by polishing one's corporate image by doing a genuinely nice thing.

A decision to give away $10 million worth of anything probably reflects varied motivations, including the nice feeling most people get from doing something nice. Whatever the reasons, Searle deserves congratulations. It will be interesting to see whether other companies follow suit.

Disease of political scandal

The first lesson of Watergate for presidents and their aides was simple: Don't break the law. The second was equally easy to grasp: Don't compound mistakes, especially serious mistakes, with dishonesty. The American people can forgive a lot of faults in their leaders, but they don't like to be lied to and they don't like to see laws broken by the people entrusted with enforcing them.

Those lessons, as the Tower Commission report on the Iranamok scandal makes plain, were lost on Ronald Reagan and those around him. They behaved as if gaining occupancy of the White House were a license to do whatever they pleased — as if they had never heard what happened to Richard Nixon and company. A misguided humanitarianism, ideological zeal and disdain for the tedious requirements of constitutional government thus produced a devastating series of errors and crimes.

Just 27 months ago, Reagan was re-elected by one of the biggest margins in history. Now, his administration is crippled, probably beyond repair. Getting rid of chief of staff Donald Regan is assumed to be a big step toward restoring the president's standing. Well, it can't hurt. But the true responsibility for what has happened and for what happens next lies with Reagan himself.

On the origin of the Iran arms deal, the commission minced no words. Though Reagan has stoutly insisted that he was engaged only in a daring diplomatic attempt to moderate Iran's hostility, his three hand-picked examiners essentially said the president has lied. The shipments, they declared, amounted to "a series of arms-for-hostages deals" that "rewarded a regime that clearly supported terrorism."

The commission was also skeptical about Reagan's claim that he doesn't recall whether he approved of the first Israeli arms shipments in the fall of 1985. "The board believes it is plausible to conclude that he did approve of them in advance," the report said, while admitting that the members were "unable to reach a conclusive judgment."

Neither scenario is flattering to Reagan. Either he gave his approval to a drastic reversal of U.S. policy and forgot or lied about it later, or else he failed to exercise even minimal control over his subordinates. Equally damning is that, based on what we know about our president, either scenario is wholly believable.

Certainly his subordinates seem to have been willing to pursue the president's foreign policy goals by whatever means they could find. As the commission found, former National Security Adviser John Poindexter evidently knew that funds were being diverted from the arms deal to the Nicaraguan Contras, but didn't bother to investigate or to let Reagan know. Lt. Col. Oliver North arranged the diversion, even though a law was then in effect forbidding such aid.

But the surreptitious help to the Contras hardly contradicted Reagan's preferences. Long before the Iran deal, North and his superior at the time, Robert McFarlane, had set up a "private aid" network to evade the congressional prohibition, an idea Reagan was happy to promote. The administration had demonstrated its contempt for the law. If North took that demonstration a bit further than his superiors may have wanted, the blame doesn't lie entirely with North.

The deal with Iran can be excused as a mere mistake, however awful. But the diversion of money to the Contras, however legitimate their cause, is something worse. Congress had prohibited such aid. If the administration thought the law interfered with the president's constitutional prerogatives — as the Reagan apologists at The Wall Street Journal argue — it could have settled the question in court. That it didn't suggests that it knew it would have lost.

Besides, it had an easier option at hand: simply flouting the law, believing a noble purpose vindicates ignoble methods. As if that weren't enough, we are now treated to accounts of documents being shredded, stories being revised, records being altered, all to conceal stupidity and arrogance.

The result is a deserved loss of public confidence and a general resentment at an abuse of trust. Can Reagan overcome the damage done by this scandal? Certainly not without publicly confronting his full culpability, and maybe not at all. What is true of disease is also true of political scandals: It's easier to prevent than to cure.

News is hazardous to health

Today's mailbag includes a verse written by Mary Pitts of Nipomo, Calif. It needs no embellishment from me.

"Attention Surgeon General, there is something I have to say.
As you ban drugs and drinking, sex, smoking and thinking,
Let me give you a thought for the day.

Your warning appears more and more,
It influences welfare and wealth;
Let me state for a fact — poor discretion and tact —
Makes news hazardous to your health!

Now let me explain my position. I don't use drugs nor am I gay;
Smoke and drink — moderation,
I love freedom, our nation,
And I fear we are losing our say.

Our nation was founded on freedom;
Freedom of speech and freedom of thought.
But for sake of sensation we're becoming a nation
Of children mis-guided, mis-taught.

I wake up in the morning smiling.
The day is bright, sunny and cheery,
But the radio's playing and the news voice is saying

That the world is dark, dismal and dreary.

I smile and say, 'As you wish, Sir,
But my life is happy and bright!'
Then the voice says 'beware — there's danger out there —
Strange things occurred during the night!'

Someone famous is tragically dying
Of a new germ for which there's no cure.
Someone has died, someone has lied,
Our leaders are far from pure.

The air we are breathing is harmful,
The food we are eating is, too.
The world is a mess, the dollar's worth less,
We are damned if we don't or we do.

Some country somewhere is rebelling,
Their leaders won't listen to reason.
We must send them some aid while justice is weighed;
Or 'til someone's convicted of treason.

Someone said someone said something,
'The White House is obviously wrong!'
Total lack of respect for each party or sect:
Personal freedom is sold for a song.

Someone wealthy spent too much money,

Indignantly states the news voice.
'What a dread, selfish deed, there are people in need!'
What happened to freedom of choice?

We are told of the crime and corruption.
Of sickness and hunger and strife.
There is no news that's good? Is it not understood,
We are what we think in this life.

Sensationalism and violence; those dominate the air,
This makes great news as camera crews
Put our safe, secure homes right there!

The voice is full of malice, distrust, criticism and fear;
We are told what to think, how to live, eat and drink,
There goes my sunshine and cheer!

I was so happy and cheerful this morning
'til I turned my radio on.
Now my head is aching, my spirit is breaking,
My optimism is gone.

To the news voice nothing is sacred,
Our actions, our thoughts, our wealth.
My blood pressure's rising as I'm realizing News is hazardous to your health!"

CIA contra puppet qualifies as dictator

By Don Graff

"Basically he is not a democrat. He's an authoritarian, a dictator." "He" is Adolfo Calero, El Numero Uno in the CIA-created Nicaraguan Democratic Front (FDN) and the contra leader who has now pulled out of what was supposed to be a united anti-Sandinista front.

The description comes from Edgar Chamorro, once a contra himself who bailed out in disgust in 1984 after he had gotten a good look at the opposition movement from the inside.

It was most recently repackaged less than a year ago, emerging as the United Nicaraguan Opposition (UNO), in which Calero's FDN was to be the military arm subordinate to a political directorate that included Calero and, most notably, Arturo Cruz.

Cruz is by leagues the most respected figure in the Nicaraguan opposition, the only one, according to Chamorro, who many Nicaraguans in Nicaragua believe is an acceptable alternative to the Sandinistas.

But he has long objected because what was supposed to be a joint resistance effort continued to be Calero's one-man show. FDN runs UNO, not vice versa. Rather than allies, Cruz supporters charge, they are treated like enemies by Calero's people.

Ironically, Calero was a relatively late recruit to the cause. Once Coca-Cola's man in Nicaragua, he was no friend of the Somoza dictatorship. But after going into exile in 1979, he waited until 1983 to join the front against Somoza's Sandinista successors. Even then, he may have been forced into it. According to Chamorro, someone started a rumor that Calero was about to join the opposition. The Sandinista response was predictable.

"They confiscated his home. He couldn't go back. The CIA tricked him," says Chamorro. "He has said that."

Hail the new leader. But, it must be noted, Arturo Cruz was also not a contra founding father. A prominent banker, he worked for the Sandinista revolution and played a key role in gaining foreign support. He was its ambassador to the United States, until he resigned to protest the Sandinista drift toward the authoritarian left.

But Cruz has never disowned the revolution itself. He has remained open to a political settlement. And he was almost the opposition candidate in Sandinista Nicaragua's 1984 presidential election.

Calero says three former U.S. officers helped Contras

WASHINGTON (AP)—Three former U.S. military officers helped the Nicaraguan rebels buy more than $18 million in military equipment during the period when direct U.S. arms aid was suspended, a rebel leader says.

At a news conference Thursday, Contra leader Adolfo Calero said about $9 million in equipment was purchased with the help of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, a close associate of former National Security Council staff member Lt. Col. Oliver L. North.

Calero said more than $5 million in weaponry was channeled to the Contras by John K. Singlaub, a former Army major general and head of the World Anti-Communist League who also raised humanitarian aid for the Contras.

The third officer was identified as Col. James McCoy, who was said by Calero to have funneled less than $3 million in equipment to the Contras.

"Why did I use these people?" Calero said. "I never bought more than a shotgun in my life." Calero is leader of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the largest of the rebel groups fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

Calero said the weapons were purchased from $32 million in donations contributed anonymously between July 1984 and March 1985, a period encompassing a ban on all U.S. aid to the Contras.

The $14 million in donations not spent on military hardware was used to buy food, clothing and other supplies, Calero said. At the time of the U.S. aid cutoff in 1984, Calero said the rebels were in desperate shape and would not have survived without the contributions.

Calero has said all along the rebels received no money from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran. He came to the news conference armed with copies of Contra bank records which indicated there was no correlation between the timing of the rebels' bank deposits and the period when the Iran arms sales profits were generated.

Calero acknowledged that some of the $32 million may have been provided by a foreign official who was referred to by former National Security Adviser

Robert C. McFarlane when he testified before the Tower commission.

McFarlane said the official, whom he did not identify, used "personal funds" to provide the rebels with about $1 million a month starting in the summer of 1984 and subsequently increased that amount, contributing $25 million in 1985 alone.

There have been unconfirmed reports that the official was King Faud of Saudi Arabia.

Calero conceded that McFarlane's testimony might be accurate but had no way of knowing.

In August 1985, the rebels began receiving the $27 million in non-lethal aid from the United States and last fall, $100 million in military aid and other assistance was approved by Congress.

Calero spoke to reporters after discussing the Contras' finances with a federal grand jury which is attempting to find out whether the rebels received any money from the Iranian arms sales.

He said he sought assistance during the aid cutoff period from Taiwan, Israel and Egypt but that he never learned whether those countries ever acted on his requests.

Israel, which cooperated with the United States in the Iran arms sales, has denied sending weaponry to the Contras, but a number of news accounts have indicated Israel may have assisted the rebels in other ways.

Children's art shows anguish caused by alcoholic parents

WASHINGTON (AP)—In poignant words and pictures, the children of alcoholics are revealing their private world of fear, anger, guilt, loneliness and shame.

An exhibition of their original art — more than 500 crayon drawings, watercolor paintings, poems and letters scrawled in pencil — is stirring emotions among visitors to the marbled rotunda of the Cannon House Office Building on Capitol Hill.

"I'm sad but I pretend I'm happy," an 8-year-old girl writes. Another girl, aged 5, titled her drawing, "My Mom taking a drink and me crying."

In their crude pictures sometimes captioned with misspelled words, parents are fighting, passing out, driving cars into trees, chasing and striking their children, drowning in monstrous bottles of booze, trapped in cans of beer.

A 16-year-old girl with two alcoholic parents painted a red and blue heart, severed down the middle, and wrote: "Alcohol ruins pretty things."

There is hope in 8-year-old Jaime's inscription for a cartoon of his father: "My Dad is doing real good at stopping alcohol. My dad is going to special meetings. We had to move out because my dad got to carried away with drinking. Now he is getting better at stopping. My dad is nicer to us. We have moved back."

The exhibit, organized by the privately financed Children of Alcoholics Foundation Inc. of New York, arrived on Capitol Hill this week, ending a national tour that began in New York in October 1983 and continued through Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Texas and California.

Mrs. Migs Woodside, founder and president of the foundation, said the art exhibit is part of her organization's effort to make the public aware of a "huge but hidden" minority in America, the 28 million children of alcoholics.

Sons of alcoholics are four times more likely to become alcoholics than other children, the foundation says. The 7 million youngsters of alcoholic parents may suffer emotional detachment, dependency and low self-esteem, and have physical problems ranging from tiredness to asthma and unusual sensitivity to heat and cold.

Besides promoting public education and research into the problems of children of alcoholics, Mrs. Woodside said, the foundation is embarking on a privately financed program to package the art exhibit as a classroom teaching tool to alert school children to the dangers of alcohol and drug abuse.

She says that because parents' alcoholism is a "family secret," children are reluctant to express their thoughts and feelings for fear of betraying their parents and exposing themselves to the stigma of alcoholism.

Therapists encourage these children to express their hidden emotions in drawings, poems and stories, letting their art reveal what they dare not verbalize.

Meese creates office for Walsh to void North suit impact

WASHINGTON (AP)—Attorney General Edwin Meese III says he is protecting the investigation into the Iran-Contra affair by appointing Lawrence E. Walsh to a new office of independent counsel.

Meese's action amounts to an end-run around a lawsuit by Lt. Col. Oliver L. North that could have torpedoed Walsh's criminal probe.

Meese's legal maneuver raises questions about Walsh's independence, but the attorney general says the independent counsel will maintain the wide scope of his investigation and that he retains all the independence he had previously when appointed by a panel of three federal judges.

Meese and the Justice Department came up with the new arrangement, which the attorney general on Thursday called "an insurance policy" to ensure that Walsh's inquiry into the Iran-Contra affair will move forward.

North's lawsuit, raising constitutional questions about the 1978 Ethics in Government Act under which Walsh was appointed, "places a question mark over ... Walsh's activities," the attorney general said.

Without protecting the independent counsel's position, "witnesses might refuse to testify because they questioned his (Walsh's) ability to grant immunity," Meese told a news conference. "Grand juries might be questionably constituted."

Also on Thursday, the Justice Department filed a motion to dismiss North's lawsuit, but the department invoked only narrow procedural grounds, refusing to join Walsh in asserting that the independent counsel statute is constitutional.

The department simply said North had no legal basis for challenging the legitimacy of Walsh's investigation. Department officials have long had doubts about the constitutionality of the 1978 law.

A number of Republican and Democratic congressmen, including Senate Judiciary Committee member Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and the committee's chairman, Joseph Biden, D-Del., urged Meese this week to defend the constitutionality of the independent counsel statute.

Meese plans to meet with other independent counsels about the possibility of his appointing them to new independent counsel offices. There currently are counsels investigating former White House aide Michael Deaver, former White House political director Lyn Nofziger and former Justice Department official Theodore Olson.

Deaver has filed a suit similar to North's, and Meese said he "will be discussing ... how we might be of help" with the counsel in that case, Whitney North Seymour Jr.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Meese also had asked a three-judge panel to block independent counsel Alexia J. Morrison from expanding her investigation of Justice Department handling of a 1983 Environmental Protection Agency controversy to include two former Justice Department officials.

Meese, according to sources the Post did not name, argued it may be unconstitutional for the judges to expand Morrison's mandate without the attorney general's approval.

Morrison's is investigating allegations that former Assistant Attorney General Theodore B. Olson gave false testimony to Congress in a confrontation over EPA "Superfund" documents.

Unemployment is holding at 6.7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's unemployment rate held at 6.7 percent in February — its third month at the lowest rate in nearly six years — as 290,000 married women found new jobs, the government said today.

In all, the economy created 370,000 jobs last month, according to a Labor Department survey of households.

Added to the gains in previous months, nearly 1.2 million Americans have found work since October. The proportion of the civilian population at work edged to a record 61.2 percent last month, the department said.

Over the last year, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said, the nation's workforce has grown by 2.2 million people, with adult women accounting for nearly three out of five new job holders or seekers.

The greatest job gains last month, seasonally adjusted, were in retail trade, with 130,000 jobs created. Nearly half of the growth was in department and general merchandise stores.

Service employment rose by 115,000 jobs, with large gains in business and health services. Factory employment grew by 50,000 after a gain of only 3,000 in January.

"But most of the increase represented the return to work of people who had been involved in labor-management disputes," said Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics in remarks to the congressional Joint Economics Committee.

She was referring to the end of a lockout at USX by steelworkers and the end of strikes in the machinery industry.

The number of Americans listed as officially unemployed fell by 56,000 to 7,967,000 in February, only the second month in the last 5½ years that that number has dipped below 8 million.

In December, the number had dropped to 7.95 million. But it jumped back to just over 8 million in January.

The number of jobholders reached a record 113,122,000 last month. More people are working part-time, however, because they cannot find full-time jobs, today's report said. The number of people working part-time for economic reasons jumped 275,000 to 5,780,000.

Ms. Norwood said that blacks have been entering the labor force at almost twice the rate of whites over the last year. But she did not say what portion had found work.

The labor force growth rate among Hispanics is even greater, she said.

"Although the comprise only 7 percent of all U.S. workers, Hispanics accounted for 23 percent of the overall increase in employment," she told the committee.

The jobless rate for Hispanic workers fell a full percentage point in February, to 9.6 percent.

Man cried over decision to receive grandson's heart

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—A man who received the heart of his grandson after the 16-year-old was killed in an accident had to be persuaded to go through with the operation, his daughter says.

Teri Nielson Simper said the first time she ever saw her father cry was when he learned her son Jonathan had died as a result of a car-train accident and his heart was available for transplant.

"Dad didn't ever say he would not accept Jonathan's heart, but his own heart was broken and he just kept looking at me and sobbing that he just couldn't do it," she said.

"By the time doctors had assured him that the heart was an excellent match, our family had also convinced him that this is what Jonathan would want."

Thomas A. Nielson, 61, of Logan, Utah, was believed to be the first recipient of a relative's heart, said LDS Hospital spokesman Tim Madden. Nielson was in critical but stable condition in the Salt Lake City hospital Thursday after surgery.

Historic discovery made at Canadian observatory

TORONTO (AP) — A 29-year-old Canadian stargazer who lives alone on a Chilean mountaintop and earns less than $15,000 a year has elated astronomers worldwide with his discovery of the explosion of a dying star — one of the most important celestial events observed in centuries.

The finding was made by Ian Shelton, a bachelor from Winnipeg described as a "self-denying sort," who is employed by a small observatory that operates on a shoestring.

In fact, the University of Toronto observatory almost had to shut down two years ago when the government slashed its grant by 30 percent.

At 11 p.m. on Feb. 23, almost by accident as Shelton waited for a comet to race across the southern hemisphere, he suddenly glimpsed an exceptionally bright star on a routine photograph. It hadn't been there hours before.

Shelton dashed outside the observatory at Las Campanas in northern Chile to take a clear-eyed look at the naked sky and confirmed his discovery.

Within hours, astronomers around the world were in a state of high excitement.

Shelton — followed a few hours later by a New Zealand amateur astronomer — had stumbled upon a supernova, the celestial explosion of a dying star.

The importance comes from the star's proximity in the Large Magellanic Cloud, a satellite of the earth's galaxy, about 150,000 light-years away, very close by astronomical standards.

That makes it the brightest supernova since 1604 and the only one visible to the naked eye since 1885.

"This is really big for astronomers and incredibly exciting to be a part of," said Dr. Robert Garrison, director of the University of Toronto observatory.

He said the supernova is expected to fade within a month as it turns into a neutron star or black hole.

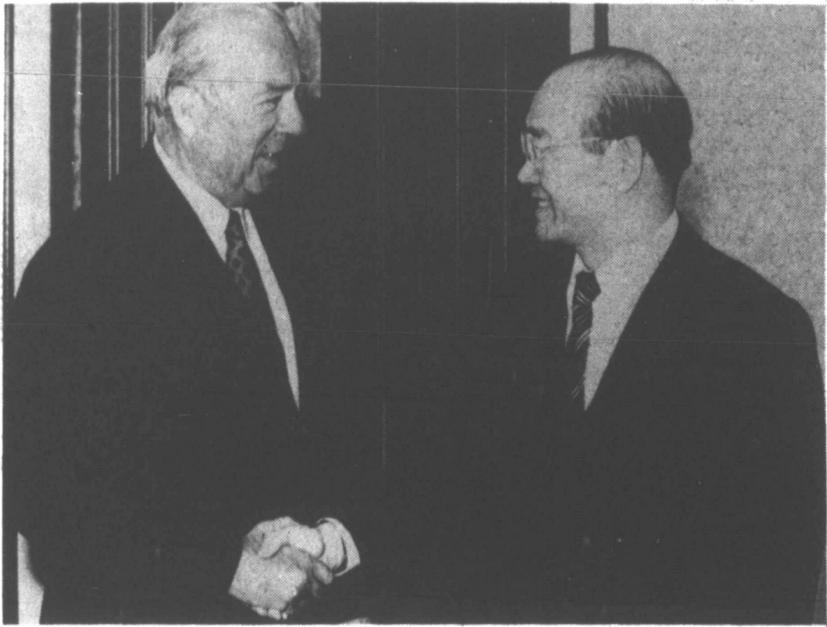

"It's been hard to get him to sleep and eat," Garrison said of the young astronomer who volunteered for the star-watching job in the Andes after collecting a bachelor's degree in physics from the University of Manitoba.

"He's a pretty self-denying sort of person," said Garrison, who talks with Shelton twice daily by shortwave radio and visits the observatory regularly.

Among Shelton's rewards will be having the supernova named after him.

Shultz meets with South Korean leaders before leaving for Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived in Japan today, following a stop in South Korea, where he urged President Chun Doo-hwan to ease political restrictions and carry through his plans to step down next year.

During his two-day stay, Shultz is scheduled to meet with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and with Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari.

Before departing for Tokyo aboard a special plane, Shultz met with Chun and Foreign Minister Choi Kwang-soo and inspected the Olympic Stadium, the main venue of the 1988 Seoul Olympics, in the southern part of the capital.

Shultz, who had flown to South Korea from Shanghai at the end of a six-day visit to China, also briefed Chun on discussions with top Chinese leaders held in Beijing earlier in the week.

Before meeting Chun, Shultz conferred with Choi, his South Korean counterpart, and discussed "matters of mutual concern" that can affect bilateral relations between the two close allies, according to South Korean and U.S. officials.

Shultz briefed Choi on the outcome of his just concluded China visit and reviewed the latest developments in Sino-Soviet relations, officials at the South Korean Foreign Ministry said.

In a luncheon meeting with Chun at the Blue House, the official South Korean presidential mansion, Shultz said Chun's stepping down next February and the election of his successor "will be the first time that such a peaceful change of power will have occurred in Korea."

At a news conference in Seoul, Shultz described his talks with Chun as "very interesting," and said they included the issue of constitutional revisions.

Shultz also said the United States supports free elections and "basic human rights" but did not indicate whether the human rights question came up in his talks with Chun or other Korean government officials.

Chun and his fellow generals are pushing for a parliamentary form of government, in which the cabinet would select a prime minister. U.S. analysts say such a system could help perpetuate the military oligarchy which is dominated South Korea for decades.

Leaders of the opposition, prominently Kim Dae-jung, favor a constitution allowing a popularly elected president.

Musician is used to comebacks

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP) — Jazz musician Dexter Gordon, nominated for an Academy Award for his acting in "Round Midnight," says he never expected his performance or the movie to gain such acclaim.

"I don't think that anyone did," he said, throwing out his hands in an expansive gesture and laughing robustly. "The whole world is quite interested, electrified, dumbfounded."

Then he imitated the public reaction when the Oscar nomination was announced — the first time a musician has been nominated for the top actor's prize.

"What? Who?" Gordon joked.

Gordon, 64, one of the great jazz tenor saxophonists and whose work helped define bebop, has made comebacks into a virtual art form.

"Resurgences," he calls them. "I can't explain it."

He was a fixture on New York's 52nd Street in the 1940s when it was the jazz capital. After drug problems, he was jailed for a time in the 1950s.

Gordon went to Europe for a job and stayed for more than a decade. "the mayor of Copenhagen," before returning to New York, recorded hit jazz albums like "Sophisticated Giant" and received widespread acclaim in the 1970s.

The attention had calmed somewhat when he starred in French director's Bertrand Tavernier's "Round Midnight," a movie about expatriate black American jazz musicians in Europe.

"It wasn't just a jazz film, but the human element of the creative artist," Gordon said, relaxing on the patio of the home he has been using as a winter retreat with his wife and 8-year-old stepson for the past few years.

"These are guys that more or less have been through the mill."

He said that, although there are resemblances between his character and his life, he was playing a role in his acting debut.

"The story is dedicated to Bud Powell and Lester Young, and that was the basis of the script," he said. "We made a more composite of the character, rather than just one- or two-dimensional."

Gordon said he especially tried to make sure that the language in the script gave an accurate impression of the jazz world, without resorting to the jive talk outsiders might expect.

"They're not talking slang. We're speaking vernacular, rather than what is supposedly the jazz language" he said, pausing carefully to consider each word before delivering it in a weathered, rumbling voice.

Consuls seek to ease worries

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican consuls working in the United States sought to ease worries here about the new U.S. immigration law, according to accounts carried Thursday by local newspapers.

The officials have been meeting privately at the Foreign Ministry since Monday to discuss the effects of the Simpson-Rodino law on Mexicans working in the United States.

Edgardo Flores Vivas, director of consular services for the Foreign Ministry, was quoted as saying to local reporters that the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service will collect names and addresses of Mexicans seeking residency in the United States under the law's amnesty provisions.

He described the information as "strictly confidential" and said American officials have promised not to use it for initiating deportations.

The new U.S. law grants amnesty to aliens continuously in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, provided they are not excluded by criminal convictions or other disqualification provisions.

It also imposes heavy fines against employers who give jobs to undocumented workers.

The newspaper El Universal quoted Enrique Buj Flores, Mexico's consul in El Paso, Texas, as saying that one proposal there calls for a "free zone" where undocumented workers could go without fear to initiate their residency petitions.

The legalization centers being set up nationwide in the United States by the INS carry the pledge that all information gathered will be kept confidential.

This may be Reagan's final chance

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—As Ronald Reagan struggles to emerge from the Iran-Contra affair, there is renewed hope for an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union. But his long-held suspicions about Moscow's good faith could deprive him of his first major treaty.

The agreement, for which there already is a general understanding between Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev, would eliminate all U.S. and Soviet medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe. Each side could retain 100 warheads — the Soviets in their Asian territories and the United States at home, possibly in Alaska.

Jack Mendelsohn, the deputy director of the private Arms Control Association, sees such a treaty as primarily a political and not a security accord. If everything works out, he says, 1,500 warheads will be taken out of commission — a mere 3 percent of the 50,000 nuclear arms stockpiled by the two superpowers.

Still, it would be the first weapons reduction agreement with Moscow since President Carter signed the SALT II treaty in Vienna in 1979 with the late Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

That's the same treaty candidate Reagan denounced as "fatally flawed" and last year decided could be abridged by the United States if it served U.S. security interests to surpass the ceilings imposed on various kinds of long-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan based that decision partly on his allegations that the Soviets had violated the unratified accord. He claimed in a report to Congress they developed an illegal intercontinental ballistic missile, disguised telemetry information from missile tests and exceeded the overall limit on missile launchers and bombers.

The Soviets disputed the charges, and a number of arms control experts agreed with them.

James P. Rubin, of the Arms Control Association, said the administration has not provided persuasive evidence for any of the three allegations and is relying on an ambiguous interpretation of extremely complex provisions.

For example, Rubin said, "The reason the Soviets are being charged with exceeding launcher limits is that the Reagan administration refuses to discuss procedures for converting 45-year-old bombers into allowable fuel tankers."

An AP News Analysis

"This is a way of creating a compliance issue instead of seeking to resolve it," Rubin said.

Reagan, meanwhile, is in the midst of deciding whether to authorize new experiments with "Star Wars" anti-missile technology. A number of arms control experts worry that such experiments could imperil the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with the Soviet Union.

While candidate Reagan campaigned against all the major arms control accords, and as the president challenged the Soviets' compliance record, he is in principle in favor of eliminating medium-range missiles from Europe.

Still, in light of the president's view of past treaties and of Soviet behavior, it would be ironic if a new U.S.-Soviet arms control agreement helped reverse his political misfortunes. And a treaty may not emerge that quickly.

Reagan credits Gorbachev with removing "a serious obstacle to progress" by agreeing to separate the medium-range missiles question from tangled disputes over longer-range arms and a Star Wars defense.

But Reagan says "strength of purpose" by the United States and its allies brought negotiations to their present position.

John D. Steinbruner, director of foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution, has a somewhat different view.

Disagreeing with Mendelsohn, he sees strategic importance — to Moscow — in a Euromissile treaty with the United States.

Steinbruner says the Soviets are worried about the 108 Pershing 2 missiles the United States has deployed in West Germany. These very accurate weapons are aimed at Soviet territory along with 160 slower-moving cruise missiles now in Belgium, Britain, Italy and West Germany.

Steinbruner says the Soviets see the Pershings as a "spearhead" of a potential U.S. pre-emptive attack.

"Removing Pershing 2 and giving up the SS-20 is a very good deal strategically, from their point of view," he says.

Mendelsohn says while getting rid of the Pershings would be a bonus, Gorbachev wants a Euromissile treaty to sow dissension in allied ranks and to build political momentum "to make it more difficult for Reagan to trash other aspects of arms control."

West Germany and Britain, the two most important NATO allies, already have raised questions about a U.S. plan to demand on-site inspection of Soviet medium-range missile plants.

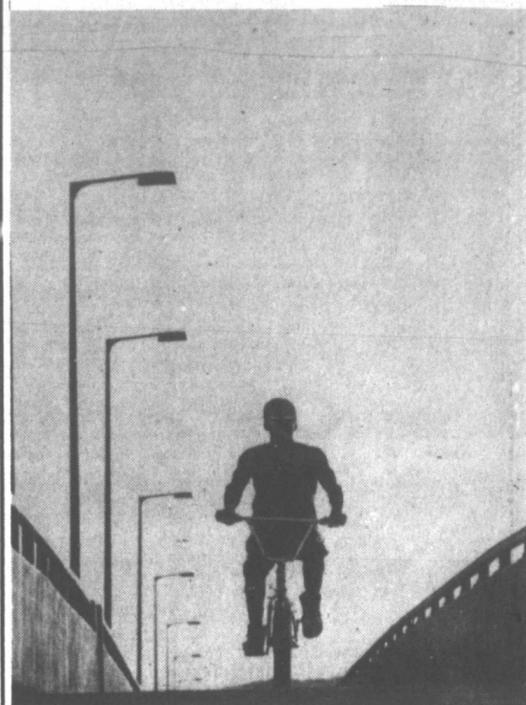

This is causing the administration to reconsider the details — but not the thrust — of its verification proposal.

Spurgeon M. Keeny Jr., a former U.S. negotiator who now heads the Arms Control Association, doubts that on-site inspection is necessary to monitor a Euromissile pact.

Keeny says current U.S. surveillance methods had kept track of the Soviets' SS-20 missiles and any violations "would be readily apparent."

But Reagan says important issues remain to be resolved, and that "none is more important than verification."

Stacy Dam construction bids being reviewed

BIG SPRING (AP) — Houston-based Brown and Root Inc. has submitted the low bid to become the prime contractor for the Stacy Dam, submitting a bid almost $7 million less than officials had estimated it would cost to build the project.

The contract will not be awarded until after the bids are reviewed, officials say.

"It was a surprise to me — but a good one," Owen Ivie, director of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, said of the Brown and Root bid. "This is a major construction company, and it's certainly capable of doing the job."

The company's bid of just over $31 million was roughly $5 million lower than its nearest competitor, San Antonio based H.B. Zachry Co., which bid $36.3 million. Sunmount Corp. of Roanoke turned in the highest bid at $65.5 million.

West Texas businessmen didn't waste anytime making their first attempts to capitalize on the prosperity that could be reaped by the city that can lure the construction headquarters. Shortly after the bids were opened, businessmen from two competing counties handed about 1800 job applications to Brown and Root officials.

About 200 workers will be needed to build the two-mile long dam and the 542,000 acre foot reservoir. In addition, officials expect hundreds of spin-off jobs will be created in order to feed, cloth, and provide services for the dam employees.

Don Bethany, vice president of the Ballinger Chamber of Commerce said the reservoir is expected to more than double the 4,200 population of Ballinger.

"This will change the face of Ballinger — and it's about time, after our oil price slump," Bethany said. "A lot of people have banked on this (the reservoir) for several years."

A new strip shopping center, a major department store and a large grocery store will be built in the next couple of years, Bethany said.

Coleman city officials are also competing for the jobs and business that would be created. But regardless of who wins the initial battle for business, the reservoir is expected to draw business for years to come.

Comedian to sell West Texas home

ABILENE (AP) — Comedian Steve Martin, who once called this West Texas city "the most nowhere place in America," has decided to sell his home in Abilene's posh Fairway Oaks subdivision, a realtor says.

Realtor Don Holloway said Martin recently purchased property in Beverly Hills and also owns a ranch in the Los Angeles area and has decided to consolidate his holdings.

Martin purchased the Fairway Oaks home in 1980.

Glenn Martin of Corona Del Mar, Calif., the comedian's father, said Steve Martin originally had intended to make Texas his permanent residence, but his plans changed.

"He got into these big movie contracts," Glenn Martin said, "so it would be impractical to live in Texas."

"He did three movies last year, so that kept him busy," Glenn Martin said.

The comedian and film star is also selling an Aspen, Colo., property, Holloway said. He said Martin plans to stay in California.

Coal company joins Indiana in an unusual wildlife plan

By KEN KUSMER
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — George Seketa said it was almost too good to be true.

AMAX Coal Co., worried about the liability problems that could result from hunters trespassing on their Sullivan County mining property, decided to lease 12,500 acres to the state for 20 years at $100 per year. For the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, it meant a prime hunting ground for deer, quail, dove, rabbit and other game in an area that sorely needed one.

The result was the Minnehaha State Fish and Wildlife Area, which while completing just its first full hunting year, already has been drawing hunters from across Indiana and other states such as nearby Illinois, Kentucky and Ohio.

"It sounds so doggone good it scares you," said Seketa, chief of properties for IDNR's Division of Fish and Wildlife. "Everyone in the department is tickled to death with it."

"We couldn't have had better cooperation with big industry. You couldn't find a better example of industry, government and conservation working together."

Minnehaha, located along Indiana 54 midway between Sullivan and Dugger, opened in November 1985, just six months after the state and AMAX signed their agreement. The largest of 17 fish and wildlife areas managed by the state, it represents more than an eighth of the division's 95,000 acres.

The Wabash River, which flows by just 15 miles west of Minnehaha, serves as a prime migratory route for waterfowl, and the park includes 23 separate bodies of water. The area already is loaded with deer and quail. The state has established a decent goose flock there, Seketa said, and good potential exists for turkey.

"Minnehaha's future lies ahead of it. Because of its size and location, it has the greatest potential. Nobody really knows what it's going to be 10 years from now," Seketa said.

The partnership was more than 30 years in the making. In 1954 the Division of Fish and Wildlife signed a 20-year wildlife management lease covering 7,000 acres of former surface mining land from three coal companies — AMAX, Old Ben and Peabody. Ten years later, AMAX donated 2,500 acres it was leasing out.

AMAX also donated 453 acres near Brazil in Clay County that became the Chinook Fishing Area.

Then three years ago, the division leased 1,800 of the Sullivan County acres to create the Busserson Bottoms deer-hunting grounds.

"AMAX (had) started to have a problem with major trespassing of deer hunters," Seketa said. "It worked out so well in 1984 that their staff said, 'Hey, how would you like to lease the whole area — 12,500 acres?'"

"We needed an area in the west-central part of the state. AMAX needed some relief from trespassers. It was a good deal for everybody."

Jeff Weber, an AMAX spokesman, said the coal company once had tried issuing fishing licenses on some of its mining lands, but with poor results. It soon realized it didn't have the staff, time or expertise to manage such an operation. That's where the state came in.

"We look at it as a good opportunity to keep the land productive and let the public use it. We're in effect done with it," Weber said.

Rope distributor all tied up

By CHUCK McCOLLOUGH
San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — No matter how busy she gets, no matter how hectic things become, Mary Lou Wood refuses to tell people on the phone she is tied up.

After all, that would sound as bad as a psychiatrist telling someone things were getting "crazy" around the office, or a produce manager saying he was going "bananas" at work, or an overloaded alligator hunter saying he was "swamped."

Ms. Wood is the owner of Realta Ropes, a wholesale distributor of ropes and twines.

She got into the rope business indirectly in 1981. That year she moved to San Antonio to work for a Houston-based industrial supply company.

Ms. Wood labored as a salesperson with the firm for about a year until the company decided to close down its San Antonio operation.

"The company sold a variety of industrial items including rope. I've been interested in ropes and other things that deal with the Old West for a long time," Ms. Wood said.

"I discovered there wasn't a rope and twine wholesaler in San Antonio or Austin, and I felt there was a need for one," she added.

Ms. Wood purchased the list of customers who bought rope from the old company and decided to go into business in October 1982.

In January she took on a partner but bought him out about five months later.

In May 1983 Chris Archibald became a minority stockholder in the company.

"Once we got rolling I was really surprised to learn how many different people and different professions use cordage (ropes and twines)," Ms. Wood said.

Realta sells lots of rope and twine to the San Antonio military bases, especially Kelly Air Force Base. Cordage is used to tie down aircraft parts and other military hardware shipped from here to other places, she said.

Her firm sells almost 20 miles of rope and twine a month, mainly to commercial and industrial firms.

"The average person probably doesn't realize how widely cordage is used," she added.

In 1984 Realta sold 5,000 feet of a strong, yellow rope. The cordage was used to line the motor route of Walter Mondale when he campaigned for president in the Rio Grande Valley. "The Secret Service and local law enforcement agencies used it as a line to keep crowds in place," she said.

The company's name is the result of a bureaucratic mixup.

"I sent the name Realta Ropes Inc. to the secretary of state for registration in 1983. Realta means rope or rein in Spanish. Somehow they added a letter to it and it came back Realta. I decided to leave it that way," she said.

Ms. Wood says she was no expert on ropes when the business started. "I'm still not an expert, but I have learned a lot about them," she said.

There is a lot to learn. Ms. Wood's company handles more than 200 types of cordage and sells to groups ranging from Baptists to Boy Scouts.

"In addition to our commercial customers we sell to a lot of individuals. I recently sold some rope to a preacher who used it for scaffolding necessary in the repair of his church's roof. We sell a pretty good amount to scouts, boys and girls, and other campers also," she said.

The Jefferson High School pep squad purchased jumping ropes from Realta for use in its halftime skits.

"We even sold Sea World rope to raise the giant flag pole they have in front of their park," she added.

The firm handles decorative rope, used for hanging plants, as well as very specialized cordage.

"Tree trimmers have their own special rope. It is very strong, and they won't use anything but that type. After all, they are hanging by this rope high off the ground," she explained.

"The variety of customers never fails to amaze me. I have one customer near Austin who buys twine from us to use in puppets he makes," Ms. Wood said.

Realta also carries special yacht ropes for sailors, including the kinds used on the Stars & Stripes that just won the America's Cup races in Australia.

"We have to keep a wide variety of rope and twine on hand," she said, swinging her hand over the rolls of different rope in her warehouse. "Most of our customers want the cordage they have in mind right away," she added.

Realta uses five rope mills for the variety of cordage customers demand. "We can usually get the type someone wants in a day or two if we don't have it in stock," she said.

The company has a fairly constant demand for cordage, but does have especially busy times.

A press operator at John H. Harland Co printing plant in Chicago watches a press run of personal checks. The Payment Systems Education Association (PSEA) estimates Americans write 40 billion personal checks per year and that it continues to be the most popular method of payment. One reason for the popularity of the personal check being the typical "float" period before the check clears an individual's account, typically one to five business days, according to the PSEA.

Professor writes history of black steelworkers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dennis C. Dickerson said that when he began researching a history of the black steelworker, he had no idea what his own father, grandfather and great-grandfather before him had gone through.

"They never complained, they were not bitter," said Dickerson, 35, author of "Out of the Crucible," a history of black steelworkers in western Pennsylvania from 1875-1980. "I had no appreciation for what they were going through as I grew up and for all of what they had seen and lived through," he said. "But when I finished my research, I was surprised."

"And what surprised me most was the depth of resistance to black steelworkers making significant progress."

Even his own experiences in U.S. Steel's Duquesne Works during the late 1960s, as he worked his way through college, did not prepare him.

"That job was quite a boon to me. The industry was very kind," he said as he recalled those summers spent as a pit-sealer, water treatment pump helper and general laborer.

"I made good money," he said, but not good enough to keep him out of school. Dickerson now counts that as extremely fortunate because both he and his father were able to escape the bleakest years of the steel industry when mills went idle and the unemployment lines grew.

The decade of the 1980s will be remembered by all as a time of deep economic recession in its early years. For Pennsylvania's King Steel, it was a time of collapse as recession and inflation teamed to send business overseas. The giant mills faltered, then closed.

Even the Duquesne mill, once a top producer in western Pennsylvania's Mon Valley, is silent. Dickerson's father, Carl, retired from the mill in 1970 and moved to Philadelphia's Germantown section.

Dickerson finished his four-year degree at Pennsylvania's Lincoln University and decided to follow an academic career. He is now on the faculty of Rhodes College in Memphis, Tenn. It was while he was at Washington University working on his doctorate that he decided to write his thesis on the black steelworker.

He found little had been organized and he was reduced to going through obituaries in the Duquesne paper to find a beginning. The thesis grew into a book manuscript as Dickerson uncovered more and discovered how little was being saved.

"A lot had happened, but we didn't really have much to show for those decades, and what I did find was on the brink of being lost," he said.

A letter to President Roosevelt by one Alvin Nunley, a furloughed black employee at Crucible Steel's Pittsburgh plant, told best the pattern that developed as steel companies wooed the blacks in times of labor strife and boom, then dumped them when things were going well, Dickerson said.

Unions, too, alternately sought and ignored the blacks, Dickerson added. He said his own father's union activism contributed to his own positive recollections of his youth and his father's work. It was during that period that blacks made their greatest strides in the fight for equality.

Nunley's letter was written in January 1938, just after Crucible signed a new contract. Dickerson said he found the document in the National Archives in Washington.

"They put me in hot places all summer, where not many men will stay; when it gets cool, they layed me off; white men get my job ... I have went to see the employment manager of the mill (and) all he says is their is no call for colored men."

"He has sent me to place I have worked as good as any other man, but I can't get a job steady, on account of I am not a white man. I don't think it fair. I have a right to a living as well as anyone else, no matter what color I am."

"There are experiences here that need to be on the record. They should not be trivialized," he said. "Possibly in knowing what happened, this will help all of us begin to understand the consequences."

The consequences, he said, are the state of the industry today, when, finally there is absolute equality among the black and the white steelworkers.

"Oh, yes. It's there now. In the unemployment line," he said.

Islands have French accent

ST. PIERRE, St. Pierre and Miquelon (AP) — A passenger ferry is about to dock in a bit of France two hours after leaving Fortune, in Canada's province of Newfoundland. It is coming into the French Overseas Department of St. Pierre and Miquelon, the three-island tidbit that France salvaged from its fights with England in the late 18th century.

Here the French tricolor flies. French gendarmes whose hometowns may be Paris or Lille or Marseille are on duty — to be rotated home after their tour of service.

Because St. Pierre and Miquelon are French, not Canadian, the islands enjoyed one of their greatest periods of prosperity during Prohibition — as a transshipment point for alcoholic beverages being smuggled into the United States. (Canada, under U.S. pressure, had banned export of liquor to countries where prohibition was in effect, notes J.P. Andrieux in his book "St. Pierre and Miquelon").

The islands' status as French territory caused some concern on this side of the Atlantic in World War II, when the Vichy government of France capitulated to Adolf Hitler. Charles de Gaulle's Free French took care of that. They sent three corvettes and a submarine from Halifax, Nova Scotia, to take over the islands. De Gaulle himself visited years later, in 1957.

Jacques Cartier claimed St. Pierre and Miquelon (and the third island, Langlade, or Little Miquelon) for France in the 16th century. People from Brittany, Normandy and Basque Country settled here. Their traditions persist in festivals, in jai alai and Petanque bowling — and what is still a major occupation, fishing.

Many visitors to Nova Scotia and Newfoundland make a quick excursion to St. Pierre and Miquelon, by plane or boat.

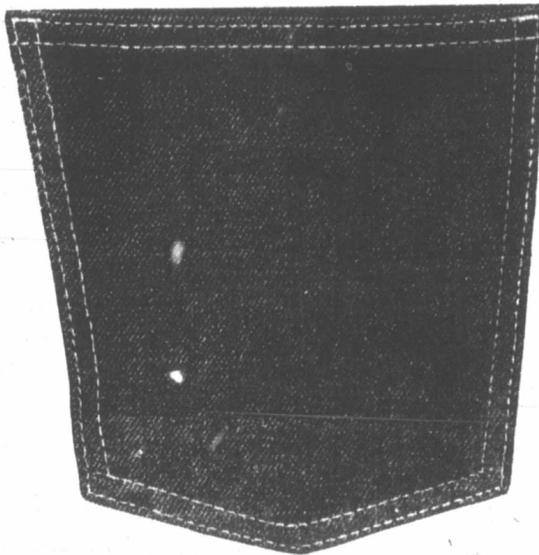

They land in St. Pierre, the 5-by-6-mile island where most of the population of 6,000 lives, and if they arrive by boat, they walk to their hotel or guesthouse in the small town.

They dine in one of the numerous French restaurants — up a flight of stairs in a frame house, perhaps, with Madame at the stove and daughter serving. They visit the stores selling French perfumes, French culinary equipment, French wines and liquors. They may take in French nightlife — cabaret or discotheque.

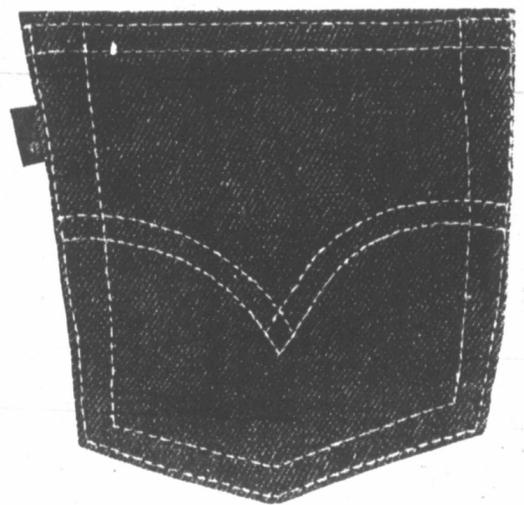

A boat and jeep will take them to Langlade with its trees and lush vegetation not shared by the other islands, its seals, wild horses, deer, puffins and beaches, and Miquelon with its fishing village.

Or they may be folded in fog. But exploring in fog can be fun, at least for a while. And a motorized dory will take one to the Ile aux Marins (Sailors Island) just outside St. Pierre harbor. Fishermen used to live there, but it's largely uninhabited now, as crumbling houses attest.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

FOUNDATION

Our nation is witnessing a building boom, such as has never before been seen. Every day new foundations are being dug and laid. Any builder will tell you that it takes a firm foundation to support today's skyscraper.

Our Lord, in His sermon on the mount, compared those that heed His word, to the wise man that built his house upon a rock, and those that did not heed His word to the foolish man that built his house upon sand and it was washed away.

Build your house upon a rock... Attend church regularly.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: For you created my inmost being; you knit me together in my mother's womb. I praise you because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; your works are wonderful, I know that full well. (Psalm 139:13-14 NIV)

While doing research on the history of a particular zoo, I ran across a newspaper article printed in November of 1920. The article told an appalling story of the brutalization of a lion which belonged to the zoo.

The male lion was captured in the jungles of Africa when eight weeks old and was taken for a tour with a tent show. The animal was fed through the bars of his cage, and no attempt was made to tame him.

The tent show became stranded and was forced to sell the lion to the zoo. The zoo keeper was warned the cat was completely wild and had to be fed through the bars; and the keeper did so for awhile.

Eventually finding it necessary to clean the animal's cage, the keeper determined to subdue the now adult cat. Armed with a revolver, three pellets filled with soap and powder, three regular shells and a four-foot long, sharp, pointed tamer's spear, the keeper entered the 12 foot by 10 foot cage and closed the door behind him.

Trapped in the small cage with no other recourse, the animal lunged and was speared in the side. Again he pounced, and was shot in his open mouth with a soap pellet and again speared in the side.

For 45 minutes the desperate, tortured animal was repeatedly speared in his shoulders and sides and shot in the mouth. He was weak and panting, and his tongue was far extended from his burned and torn mouth.

Finally, the once mighty beast collapsed in a pool of his own blood, his body and natural wild spirit broken.

Believe it or not, the story was proudly told in grisly detail by the zoo keeper. And his actions were rewarded with full front-page newspaper coverage praising his heroism and expertise!

Sounds too horrible to be true, doesn't it?

But similar treatment not only exists today but is habitual, perpetual and common to everyone! However, the object of the abuse is not a poor, trapped animal but is our own bodies.

Our "tamer's weapons" consist of tobacco, alcohol, unnecessary drugs, too much food, too little food, too little exercise, too much exercise, and even sexual promiscuity.

When our bodies, trapped in the confines of physiology, react to an abuse, we select a different weapon from our arsenal with which to subdue the molded matter which so stubbornly aspires to good health.

Not only do we abuse our bodies, we brag about it; and advertisers, promoters and the media give us full coverage praising us for our intelligence and good judgment in so doing!

A healthy body is the most valuable and personal physical gift God gives individual.

We may carefully care for the bodies He has so fearfully and wonderfully made; or we may brutalize ourselves until we collapse, our bodies broken by abuse and our natural free spirits broken by addiction.

'Revivaltime' on KSZN radio

Revivaltime, the international radio voice of the Assemblies of God, can now be heard each week over Radio Station KSZN Country 1340 in Pampa.

This worldwide broadcast will be presented each Sunday from 8 to 8:30 a.m.

Originating in Springfield, Mo., Revivaltime is heard on more than 550 radio stations around the world. Speaker for the broadcast service is Rev. Dan Betzer, preacher, writer and evangelist.

Music is provided by the Revivaltime Choir under the direction of Rev. Cyril McLellan. Narrator of Revivaltime is Rev. Lee Shultz, national director of the Division of Communications for the Assemblies of God.

Religion Roundup

BOSTON (AP)—The Unitarian Universalist Association says it takes no position on whether the distribution of condoms to a Williamsville, N.Y. congregation was appropriate. But the denomination's president defended reasons for the action.

The Rev. William Schulz said if it was "provocative," that was because necessary steps have not been taken, including schools educating children on dangers of sexually transmitted disease and providing health clinics to distribute condoms.

Religion

Speaker to discuss blood covenant

Claude C. Hargis of Midwest City, Okla., will minister this weekend at the Spirit of Truth Church, 2115 N. Hobart.

With services beginning at 7:30 p.m. today and Saturday and at 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Hargis will speak on "The Blood Covenant," which he considers to be one of the central themes of the Bible.

Highlighting the meeting will be a special Passover presentation on Sunday evening. Hargis will show the traditional Jewish Passover as celebrated by Jesus and his disciples.

Hargis will show the fulfillment of God's covenant with man through the Lord Jesus Christ through the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus.

"The scriptures come alive with new meaning as a person understands the power in the meaning of Jesus' words about the bread being His body and the wine being His blood," Hargis claims.

Hargis

On Friday and Saturday nights, Hargis will begin his presentation with the traditional Jewish welcome to the Sabbath

Day and the farewell to the Sabbath.

At 10 a.m. Saturday, Hargis will hold a praise and worship workshop. He will teach from the scriptures regarding the Restoration of the Tabernacle of David and sharing concerning the emphasis being made by the Holy Spirit today on Hebraic and Davidic worship in the church.

He will give Biblical teaching on the use of dance, banners and pageantry in worship services. After the Bible teaching, Hargis will teach Hebrew folk dances done to contemporary praise choruses.

Pastors, teachers, praise and worship leaders, and those desiring to learn more about Davidic praise and Hebrew dance are especially invited to attend the workshop, said Pastor Mark Zedlitz.

Zedlitz invited the public to attend any of the special services and the workshop this weekend.

Evangel College Concert Choir

1st Assembly to host concert choir

The Evangel College Concert Choir of Springfield, Mo., will appear in a sacred concert at First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler, at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 12.

Rev. Herb Peak, pastor, said the concert choir is currently on its spring tour with concerts in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

"These college musicians, coming from all parts of the country, have traveled extensively throughout the United States to share their faith in Christ through music," Rev. Peak said.

Director of the 38-voice choir is Mrs. Sharon Wilkins, assistant professor of music at Evangel College. Mrs. Wilkins, a graduate of Evangel College and Drury College, has spent 19 years in public school and church music.

Post graduate hours have been earned at Wichita State University, University of Missouri at Kansas City and Georgia State University. Her most recent singing experience was with the Atlanta Symphony Chorus under director Robert Shaw.

Among selections to be performed by the choir will be "Alpha and Omega," "It Is Well With My Soul," "Upon This Rock," "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" and "Let There Be Praise." Spirituals, solo and ensemble pieces will add even more variety to the choir's presentation.

A recent recording of the choir will be available at the concert. Evangel College at Springfield, Mo., is a four-year college of arts, sciences and humanities. It is the national college of the Assemblies of God.

With an enrollment of more than 1600, Evangel is accredited by the North Central Association, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education, and the National Association of Schools of Music.

Phillips University Concert Choir

Oklahoma choir to be at 1st Christian

The Phillips University Concert Choir of Enid, Okla., will present a concert of traditional choral music at 7 p.m. today at First Christian Church, 18th and Nelson.

Under the direction of Dr. Jerry Blackstone, the 36-voice choir will perform a variety of pieces ranging in style from Renaissance motets to 20th century works to rousing settings from favorite spirituals.

The Chamber Singers, a select group of 12 vocalists from the choir, will also perform. They will sing Victorias' "Vere Languores," Vaughn Williams' setting of the Bunyon Text "Valiant-for-Truth" and Scott Wilkerson's "Little David."

Blackstone is in his first year as associate professor of music and choral activities at Phillips University. Previously he taught at Huntington College in Illinois, Westmont College in Santa Barbara, Calif., and the University of Southern California.

He is a graduate of Wheaton (Ill.) College and received his master's degree from Indiana University School of Music and his doctorate from the University of Southern California.

Phillips University is a private coeducational university affiliated with the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). Located in Enid, the school is one of two in the state to be selected for inclusion in "Peterson's Competitive Colleges," placing it among the top 300 colleges in the nation.

Churches form alien operations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Churches across the country are setting up operations to guide thousands of undocumented aliens through the complicated process of seeking to become legal residents under new federal immigration law.

Monsignor Nicholas DiMarzio, director of the U. S. Catholic Conference's Migration and Refugee Service, says most of the nation's Roman Catholic dioceses have appointed "legalization directors."

He estimates that up to 3 million people will apply for legal status under the law, which allows it for those who can prove that they have lived in this country since before Jan. 1, 1982.

Episcopal President Bishop Edmond L. Browning has dispatched information on the new law to bishops across the country, and a national "working group on migration concerns" was set up.

Religion Roundup

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Baltimore's Roman Catholic Archbishop William Borders has launched a pilot project as part of efforts to develop alternative ways to staff parishes in the face of declining numbers of clergy.

As one step, he assigned the Rev. Edward Hemler to be pastor both of St. Anthony's parish in Emmitsburg, Md., and Our Lady of Mount Carmel parish in Thurmont, with a permanent deacon to assist him.

Efforts also are being made to develop the roles of laity and religious personnel to take greater responsibility for the church's ministry.

Last December, the archdiocese assigned Sister Jane Coyle to administer Corpus Christi parish without a resident priest-pastor.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Union for Traditional Conservative Judaism says it "strongly opposes" the decision by the Jewish Theological Seminary to ordain women cantors, saying it flouts Jewish law and implies "women can only be equal to men if they do exactly what men do."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The president of the American Lutheran Church says an "organized effort" is being made to stop that denomination from merging with two other Lutheran bodies this spring.

However, Presiding Bishop David W. Preus told a meeting here he expected that more than the required two-thirds majority of his denomination's 4,950 congregations will approve the merger.

Ballots will be counted after a March 16 deadline.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Should material stakes become an issue today, do not be too complacent or easygoing, if you hope to come out advantageously, maintain a firm stance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Several people upon whom you are counting might not be able to come through for you today. Don't let the loss of their support overwhelm you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You won't mind lending assistance to others today, provided it's your idea. However, if demands are made upon you, you might react in a contrary manner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Innately you may be feeling a trifle anti-social today, but the real you will emerge, and grumpy feelings will flee once you get involved with pals you like.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Associates are apt to have more faith in you today than you will have in yourself. Focus on their positive assessments and not on your negative ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There may be two sides to your personality today. One is happy-go-lucky and self-assured; the other is apprehensive and overly sensitive to the slightest provocation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Treat others equably today, but be careful regarding one who expects too much. He or she could deplete your resources as well as your emotions.

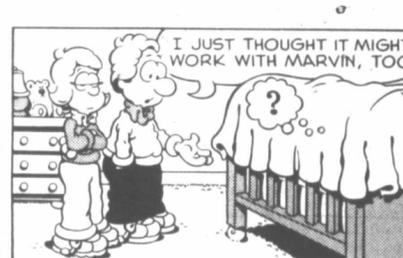

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take time to study the motives behind your mate's behavior before rendering judgment today. You may not think so harshly of him or her if you know all the facts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You won't mind attending to chores today if you also do tasks that you find gratifying. Create a happy, productive balance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A social involvement with friends today could get a little disorganized. Take control if you think you can run things better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Guard against tendencies today to set unrealistic goals for yourself. If you are reasonable about what you hope to accomplish, you'll do so without frustrations.

Chorus in concert

(Special Photo)

Amarillo Civic Chorus, under the direction of Richard Nance and accompanied by Jim Rauscher on piano, will present a concert at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Sanctuary of First United Methodist Church, Foster and Ballard Streets. The chorus will perform a new major choral work, Requiem, by the young English composer John Rutter. Instrumental accompaniment will include flute, oboe, harp, cello, timpani, glockenspiel, piano and organ. The concert program will also include Rene Clausen's "All That Hath Life and Breath" and William Mathias' "Alleluia, Christ is Arisen." Admission is free and open to the public.

Parents wonder if son who stays out should move out

DEAR ABBY: Our son, who will soon be 21, is a full-time college student living at home. He has a part-time job that pays well, but not well enough for him to live independently in his own apartment, which we would prefer. "Earl" has started spending many nights away from home, and we're sure he's sleeping at his girlfriend's. She's 22, also a college student, and shares an apartment with two other college girls.

My husband and I expressed our disapproval of Earl's all-night absences. We've also told him if he chooses to continue his relationship with this girl, it's up to him to take responsibility for birth control. (He neither admitted nor denied sleeping with her.)

Should we kick Earl out? His father thinks we should; I am against it, but I don't see any other solution, do you?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Solution to what? If you think you can control your son's sexual behavior at this stage of the game, you are kidding yourselves. Earl is a man — not a boy. Your job is done, for better or worse. Kick him out if you want to, but control his sexual behavior? Don't count on it.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I own and operate a restaurant. (Don't say where, please.) We work 14 to 16 hours a day, seven days a week, and make a good living out of this place because we are always here and work hard. The problem: Our married children have developed the habit of bringing their children (ages from 3 1/2 to 9 years old) here, and leaving them with us when they want to go somewhere.

We love our grandchildren and do not mind having them here once in a while for a few hours, but lately we have been baby sitters for them five and six hours at a time, and we can't handle it. A busy restaurant is no place for children, and some of these children have to be watched carefully or they might get hurt. Also, they are in the way when we get real busy on weekends.

Is there some nice way to tell our children that they should either stay home and look after their kids, or hire a baby sitter? Maybe if they see this, they will get the hint.

DAD AND ME

DEAR DAD AND ME: Don't look for a "nice" way to tell your children that your restaurant is not a day-care center. Just get the message across. And don't expect them to see this in my column and take the hint. If they see it, they'll think it's meant for somebody else. Be firm. They cannot take advantage of you without your cooperation.

Readers seek information on relatives

Agape group seeks helpers

Agape Volunteer Assistance is still seeking volunteers for office work and to aid homebound residents.

The group held their second organizational meeting recently at Pampa Senior Citizens Center.

There have been four to five calls daily to the volunteer office from persons seeking assistance, according to Suzie Wilkinson. The office has been open from 8 a.m. to noon daily since mid-February, staffed by Brenda Lewis, Lorene Kuhn and Lodema Mitchell.

Approximately 25 volunteer calls had been made as of Feb. 26. Volunteer services included changing beds, delivering food and medicine, transportation to see physicians, bereavement visits, visits to social security office, delivering hot meals to a diabetic, visiting bedfast patients, giving family members some free time, small home repairs, and visits and calls to check on residents who live alone.

The office is located at 422 Florida St. Anyone who is interested in assisting the housebound may volunteer. For more information, call 688-1023.

Videocassette now available on youth drug, alcohol abuse

Lovett Memorial Library has a videocassette on the drug and alcohol crisis available for check-out by groups, thanks to a donation from a local chiropractor.

Dr. Louis Haydon, D.C., of the Haydon Chiropractic Clinic, has purchased a copy of the cassette film Mentors—The Power of Example and donated it to the public library for groups wanting a program on drug and alcohol abuse among young people.

Dr. Haydon said the 26-minute sound and color film cassette takes a very different approach in dealing with the drug and alcohol crisis plaguing young people.

"Unlike other films that deal in scare tactics, Mentors takes a positive approach," he said. "Instead of generating fear, it motivates; instead of preaching, it inspires."

Mentors features several television, recording and sports celebrities talking to young people on their level about the problems they had growing up, facing the same peer pressures and fears that youth today are going through.

Featured in the production are Kim Fields, "Tootie" in the NBC series, Facts of Life; Steve Garvey, first baseman for the San Diego Padres; Steven Young, All-American quarterback for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers; Laura Branigan, top rated pop-rock singer; Jennilee Harrison, actress in Three's Company and now in Dallas; and Steve Sax, second baseman for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mentors is sponsored by members of the chiropractic profession in association with the nonprofit Motion Palpation Institute in Huntington Beach, Calif.

Haydon noted that while the film was created for young people, the important lessons of life it contains will be appreciated by audiences of all ages.

The videocassette is designed to be shown in classrooms or small groups to stimulate meaningful discussions among those in attendance, Haydon said.

In addition to the copy at Lovett Library, Haydon also has previously presented a copy to the Pampa Middle School Library for use in schools.

The public library copy is available for check-out by other groups, Haydon noted. He said these could include church youth groups, Boy and Girl Scout groups, 4-H and other youth groups, civic organizations or other similar associations.

Groups interested in using the video should contact Lovett Library.

West Germany's Graf stuns Navratilova

International Championships

By JOEY HOLLEMAN
AP Sports Writer

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. (AP)—Steffi Graf could be making history in Florida, but she hopes history doesn't repeat.

Graf served noticed to the tennis world that she has arrived by stunning Martina Navratilova, the world's top-ranked women's player, 6-3, 6-2, Thursday in the semifinals of the $1.8 International Players Championships.

Navratilova never broke Graf's serve and had break points in only three games in the 56-minute match. Graf scored an early service break in each set and cruised.

"There's no doubt in my mind that sooner or later she will (be

(AP Laserphoto)

West Germany's Steffi Graf upsets Navratilova

No.1," Navratilova said. "It's just a question of when."

Graf now has a chance to make that time come much sooner.

In Saturday's final, the third-seeded 17-year-old West German has an opportunity to back up her recent rise to No.2 in the world rankings against the player she overtook, Chris Evert Lloyd.

Lloyd prevailed in a tight first set and then rolled over fourth-seeded Hana Mandlikova 7-5, 6-0 in the other semifinal. Lloyd, who is seeded second here because the new rankings came out halfway through the tournament, beat Graf 6-4, 6-2 in the final here last year.

In the men's semifinals today, top-seeded Ivan Lendl plays sixth-seeded Jimmy Connors at 1 p.m. EST in a rematch of their momentous semifinal meeting here last year. Connors was defeated in the fifth set of that one after storming off the court to protest a line call.

In the other men's semifinal at 7 p.m., fourth-seeded Yannick Noah is scheduled to play ninth-seeded Miloslav Mecir, who knocked out second-seed Stefan Edberg of Sweden in the quarterfinals.

But Noah's status is in question. He pulled out of a doubles match Thursday because of a shoulder injury suffered in his quarterfinal victory over Mats Wilander. A release from the Association of Tennis Professionals said Noah hopes his sprained right shoulder will respond to treatment and he will attempt to play.

For Graf, the challenge will be coming down from the high of beating Navratilova for only the second time in seven career meetings.

"She played flawless tennis today," Navratilova said of Graf.

"Today she was the best player in the world."

Graf's basic strategy was to play to Navratilova's forehand, thus preventing her from chipping her slice backhand and coming to the net. What made the plan work so well was the sudden flaw in Navratilova's forehand.

Navratilova, who lost to Mandlikova in the finals of the Australian Open in January, has lost in two straight tournaments for only the third time in the last five years. Last year, she had only three losses, but two came back-to-back in the German and French opens. She lost the Canadian and U.S. opens in 1985.

But when the next rankings come out, Navratilova will still be on top. That's just the way Graf feels it should be.

"I think she's still Non1," she said. "We'll see how it goes next time."

Horned Frogs team to beat in SWC post-season classic

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP)—The Texas Christian Horned Frogs are big favorites to whip the Texas A&M Aggies today and move to within two games of their first Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic title.

But TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth says winning the tournament will be harder than winning the regular-season title.

"We've lost a little bit of edge," Killingsworth said Thursday. "We have a senior team that dominated some of the younger teams early. Those young players have matured a lot. We could have some big problems."

The 15th-ranked Horned Frogs claimed the regular season title by the widest margin of victory in 20 years — four games. TCU was also the talk of the other seven coaches going into the 12th annual classic.

"They are the class of the conference," said Baylor Coach Gene Iba.

"TCU should be the favorite because the team has great composure at money time," said Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf. "They probably learned that from playing poker and shooting dice with their coach."

Metcalf's Aggies are the No. 8 seed and were to meet the top-seeded Horned Frogs at 2:08 p.m. CST today after No. 4-seeded Texas Tech and No. 5-seeded Arkansas tangle in the 12:08 p.m. quarterfinal opener.

Parrish faces a challenge

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP)

—Texas Rangers designated hitter Larry Parrish is healthy, has a guaranteed contract through 1988 and hasn't heard any trade rumors lately, but he still faces a challenge this season.

The challenge: Can he survive all the tranquility?

"It might get kind of dull around here, waiting for the season to start," Parrish said between turns in the batting cage.

Last season was typical of the distractions Parrish has faced during his five seasons with the Rangers. He came to the Rangers 1986 camp with trade rumors ringing in his ears and still recovering from knee surgery.

He suffered pulled muscles in his rib cage and went on the 21-day disabled list. But when he returned June 18, Parrish's fortunes turned around, along with the rest of the team.

The Rangers were the surprise team of the American League, finishing second in the AL Western Division, and Parrish rebounded to lead the team with 94 runs batted in and a .509 slugging percentage.

He hit .276 and had 28 home runs.

"He's a major asset to the Rangers, no matter where he plays," Manager Bobby Valentine said. "He's among the best power hitters in baseball."

In the off-season, the Rangers guaranteed the option year of Parrish's contract, so he's signed through the 1988 season at $525,000.

"It's a calm spring so far compared to the last few years," Parrish said. "Trying to build the team, the past few years there have been a lot of trade talks. That's behind us now. This year is almost boring getting ready for the games to start."

Parrish is even talking like he's found a home after all those seasons of trade rumors and trade requests.

"Who knows, I may even finish my career here," said Parrish, who is starting his 13th major-league season. "The organization has turned around. We've got a lot of young talent and now it looks like we'll have a good team the next three or four years."

Sixers, Mustangs claim Optimist tourney games

Led by the potent southpaw shooting of the Nickelberrys, the Sixers rolled to a 51-38 win over the Knicks Thursday night in the boys' division of the Optimist Basketball Tournament.

The Sixers advance to meet the Suns at 10:15 a.m. Saturday in the semifinals.

Dwight Nickelberry tossed in 20 points while Duane Nickelberry contributed 12 for the Sixers, who outscored the Knicks 27-17 in the second half.

The Sixers had led by only four points (24-21) at halftime.

Kurt West led the Knicks in scoring with 11 points, followed by Will Winborne and Chadd Giles with 10 points each.

Chris Poole added 10 points for the Sixers.

In the girls' division last night, the Mustangs downed the Longhorns 18-8 and will meet the Owls at 9 a.m. Saturday in the semifinals.

The Mustangs held the Longhorns scoreless in the fourth quarter to clinch the victory.

Andree Lowrie and Susan Wood were high scorers for the Mustangs with 6 points each. Meredith Horton, Tarah Johnson and A. Earl had 2 points each.

Heather Wheeley, Katie Hamilton, Ashley Martindale and Audra Baumgartner all had 2 points for the Longhorns.

In action tonight in the boys' division, the Spurs meet the Knicks at 7:15 p.m. while the Celtics go against the Sonics at 8:30 p.m. In the girls' division, the Bears meet the Cougars at 6 p.m. The Bears are the only unbeaten team in either the boys' or girls' division this season.

The finals are scheduled for Saturday at 3:15 p.m. in the girls' division and at 4:30 p.m. in the boys' division.

Former Pampa coach may have team in NIT tourney

ALSO NOTED: Good to see the Old Coach and Old Referee Otto Mangold up and about after a serious hospitalization.

The Big Bear, Don Haskins, continues to amaze. Picked to finish third in the Western Athletic Conference this season, his Miners fooled everybody by grabbing the fifth consecutive conference crown for the former Dumas HS head coach. And speaking of UTEP, it appears that Dick Tamburo, who has hop-scotched his way through athletic director posts in the Southwest, will be named to that position at the El Paso school.

Former North Texas State basketball coach Bill Blakely is the agent for the NBA's exciting slam-dunking dwarf, Spud Webb. "I've got more endorsement contracts for Spud than he's played games this year," says the irrepressible Blakely, who once coached the Eagles while dressed in a tuxedo. Webb was injured after the 13th game Atlanta played, and has been sidelined since.

Trivia: What player holds the Class 5A Boys State Basketball Tournament record for most points in a three-game tournament series? (His team also holds the record for high score in the series).

Look for Robert McPherson's UNC-Wilmington team to be selected for the National Invitational Tournament early next week, following the NCAA Tourney picks. Incidentally, the championship game of the Final Four will begin at 8:12 p.m. EST March 30 to avoid going head-to-head with the Academy Awards telecast. Estimated payoff is $200,657 for first round games and $1,003,375 for each Final Four school.

Expressing an interest in playing for the Philadelphia Eagles, the egomaniacal Boz said: "Then I'd have a chance to play against Dallas and the (New York) Giants twice a year."

Reggie Ramey, who holds the West Texas State career records in both scoring and rebounding, is about to receive his masters degree in education, college teammate Maruice Cheeks reports. Ramey lives at Lawton, Oklahoma.

Who's No. 1? Bully, the Mississippi State Bulldog was named College Mascot of the Year in national collegiate competition.

Good luck to Borger Bulldogs and Levelland Loboettes this weekend as they continue to represent District 1-4A in the basketball championship playoffs.

Former West Texas State assistant coach Rick Starzecki's Colorado Springs Rampart HS squad is the only undefeated boys team in the state of Colorado.

Answer: Mack Carter of Borger HS scored 75 points in the 1952 state tournament, still the record. Although then 4A, the largest classification, the UIL lists it as the current 5A (big school) record.

And do you know the most points Wilt Chamberlain ever scored in a single game as a member of the Philadelphia 76ers?

Mike Zuffuto, third major school coach to inquire about the Pampa football opening in early January, has been hired as head coach at Richardson Lake Highlands HS, 1981 5A state grid champions.

Only District 1-4A football player nominated for the Fina Academic All-State Football Team is Clarence Walker of Lubbock Dunbar HS. Only Crown of Texas area player is Tracy Walker of Vega. The 11 honor team members each receive a $2,000 scholarship, as Stefan Hacker of Hereford HS did last year.

"If we are weak anywhere, it is in public relations," President Charlie Johnston of the Texas HS Coaches Association writes his membership.

Borger Bulldog head coach Duane Hunt explains and diagrams his fast break basketball offense in the current issue of Texas Coach, must reading for all other 1-4A cage mentors.

WTSU football coach Bill Kelly and Plainview's Greg Sherwood are among the featured speakers at the Capitol of Texas Football Clinic in Austin this weekend.

Best NFL rumor: He'd rather head the Cowboys, but Bear Coach Mike Ditka will be in Detroit after his Chicago contract expires next season.

Already recognized as an outstanding motivational speaker, PHS basketball coach Robert Hale will address the annual banquet of the Hereford HS Office Education Association students in April.

Boston sportswriter Bob Ryan who has covered the Celtics for years, writes in his syndicated column: "Maurice Cheeks is the best two-way point guard in basketball, one of the two or three best small man defenders ever, and good open shot, the floor leader with a computer brain and one of the great 'gamers' in the NBA today."

Wilt Chamberlain scored 68 in a single game, a Sixer record. His alltime 100-point game record was as a member of the then Philadelphia Warriors. Oddly, Chamberlain and Cheeks share the team single game record for assists, 21.

Something for colleges to think about: former Yale president A. Bartlett Giamatti, new president of baseball's National League says: "The federal government is about three years away from stepping into the mess that colleges and universities have created for themselves in athletics."

TCU dominates All-SWC basketball team

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

Texas Christian, which won the Southwest Conference regular season basketball title by four games, also swept the individual honors, including Player and Coach of the Year and the Defensive MVP award on the 1986-87 Associated Press All-SWC team.

Versatile Carven Holcombe, who averaged almost 16 points per game, five rebounds and shot over 50 percent from the field, was the unanimous Player of the Year in balloting by the conference coaches.

Holcombe played both forward and guard and was TCU's high scorer 19 times as the Frogs compiled a 23-5 ledger and a Top Twenty ranking. The durable Holcombe averaged playing over 33 minutes per game.

The 6-5 senior from Houston is expected to pass Dick O'Neal for the second spot in all-time Horned Frog scoring in this week's SWC Post-Season Classic.

Jim Killingsworth, who took a team favored to win the title, but did even more than the experts predicted with a 14-2 SWC record and a runaway title, was named Coach of the Year by his peers over Baylor's Gene Iba, who took the surprising Bears into second place. Iba's Bears were generally picked for a second-division finish.

TCU's Larry Richard, a 6-7 senior forward, averaged almost 11 rebounds per game and blocked almost 50 shots to win Defensive Player of the Year honors.

Richard and Holcombe led the AP's top five players with Frog guard Jamie Dixon, who set school assist records, narrowly missing out on the first team balloting that would have made it a TCU first-team trio.

Baylor had two first teamers, guard Michael Williams and center Darryl Middleton, both juniors, who brought Baylor its highest finish in the SWC in the

A&M's Darryl McDonald named to All Newcomer Team.

1980s. Middleton was the leading SWC scorer, averaging almost 20 points per contest.

The other first teamer was Greg Anderson of Houston, one of the SWC's leading rebounders, scorers and shot blockers.

Arkansas' Ron Huery, a freshman from West Memphis, Tenn., was named Newcomer of the Year and headed the All-Newcomer Team.

Listed below is the 1986-87 Associated Press All-Southwest Conference basketball team:

FIRST TEAM

Carven Holcombe, 6-5, 200, TCU, Sr., Fort Worth; Greg Anderson, 6-11, 200, Houston, Sr., Houston; Michael Williams, 6-2, 175, Baylor, Jr., Dallas; Larry Richard, 6-7, 200, TCU, Sr., Baldwin Park, Calif.; Darryl Middleton, 6-9, 230, Baylor, Jr., Queens, N.Y.

SECOND TEAM

Jamie Dixon, 6-4, 190, TCU, Sr., North Hollywood Calif.; Sean Gay, 6-3, 162, Texas Tech, Soph., Houston; Winston Crite, 6-7, 225, Texas A&M, Sr., Bakersfield, Calif.; Kato Armstrong, 5-11, 160, SMU, Soph., Garland, Texas; Carlton McKinney, 6-5, 190, SMU, Jr., Nixon, Texas.

MVP — Holcombe, TCU.

Defensive MVP — Richard, TCU.

All Defensive Team — Michael Williams, Baylor; Gay, Texas Tech; Andrew Lang, Arkansas; Richard, TCU; Robert McLemore, Baylor.

Newcomer of the Year — Ron Huery, Arkansas.

All Newcomer Team — Huery, Arkansas; Travis Mays, Texas; Rolando Ferreira, Houston; McKinney, SMU; (tie) Mario Credit, Arkansas, and Darryl McDonald, Texas A&M.

Coach of the Year — Jim Killingsworth, TCU.

Player's private war resumes in WAC Tournament

By PETE HERRERA
AP Sports Writer

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Fennis Dembo's private war with the basketball community at Texas-El Paso resumes tonight in the semifinals of the Western Athletic Conference Tournament.

Dembo's role of antagonist with the UTEP fans was insured when teammate and unlikely hero Reggie Fox hit a bank shot with three seconds left Thursday night, giving Wyoming a 56-54 victory over Utah in the opening round of the tournament.

UTEP, 24-5 and the league's regular season champion, advanced to its next showdown with Wyoming by routing hapless San Diego State 85-65. The other semifinal pairing will see host New Mexico, 24-8, taking on Brigham Young, 21-9.

New Mexico rallied to defeat Colorado State, 92-77, while Brigham Young was forced into overtime before prevailing, 82-79, over Air Force.

Seconds after Utah guard Gale Gondrezick hissed an off-balance desperation shot that would have forced an overtime, Dembo paraded in front of the UTEP fans, pointed a finger at them and yelled "we want UTEP."

UTEP settled its game with San Diego State so quickly that by midway through the first half, the Miners' cheering section was responding to Dembo's verbal volley.

"We want Dumbo, we want Dumbo," became UTEP's rallying cry.

A brash performer with enough basketball talent to back it up, Dembo single-handedly pulled Wyoming out of a shooting slump in the first half against Utah.

Wyoming, now 20-9, went scoreless for more than nine minutes, but Dembo rallied the Cowboys from a 25-18 deficit by scoring 11 straight points. He finished with 21 and teamed with junior center Eric Leckner — who got 16 of his 20 points in the second half — to provide most of Wyoming's offense.

Utah, 17-12, failed to put the Cowboys away during Wyoming's first half drought, and it came back to haunt the Utes.

Wyoming Coach Jim Brandenburg, whose team lost back-to-back games to New Mexico and UTEP at the buzzer in the final week of the regular season, said he played a hunch on Wyoming's game-winning play.

With starting point guard Sean Dent having fouled out and reserve Turk Boyd out of the tournament with a broken collarbone, Brandenburg decided to let his team improvise rather than go with a set play in the final seconds and the game deadlocked 54-54.

"I just had a hunch that because of our guard situation, we should go to our motion game and take the ball to the hole," said Brandenburg.

With the Utes expecting Dembo or Leckner to take the last shot, Fox found a gap through the lane, beat his defender and put up a soft jumper that hit the backboard and went through.

"We've played four straight games that were decided on the last possession," said Brandenburg. "It was about time we won one."

Mitch Smith with 18 points and Gondrezick and Albert Springs with 11 each led Utah.

UTEP beat Wyoming 74-72 in the final regular season game last week in El Paso, the game in which Boyd broke his collarbone and Leckner emerged a much battered and bruised Cowboy.

Less flamboyant than Dembo, Leckner provided a touch of diplomacy in his views of the impending rematch.

"I don't hold any grudges," Leckner said. "I'm just going to go play my game. They've got some pretty strong guys. We'll see what happens."

UTEP used its muscle and deep bench to rout San Diego State in a game that was decided in the opening 10 minutes. UTEP, which now has won its last nine games, outscored the Aztecs 20-4 early in the first half en route to a 40-19 halftime lead.

The Miners, with guard Jeep Jackson leading the way with 20 points, scored virtually at will. The Aztecs were willing victims, committing 27 turnovers.

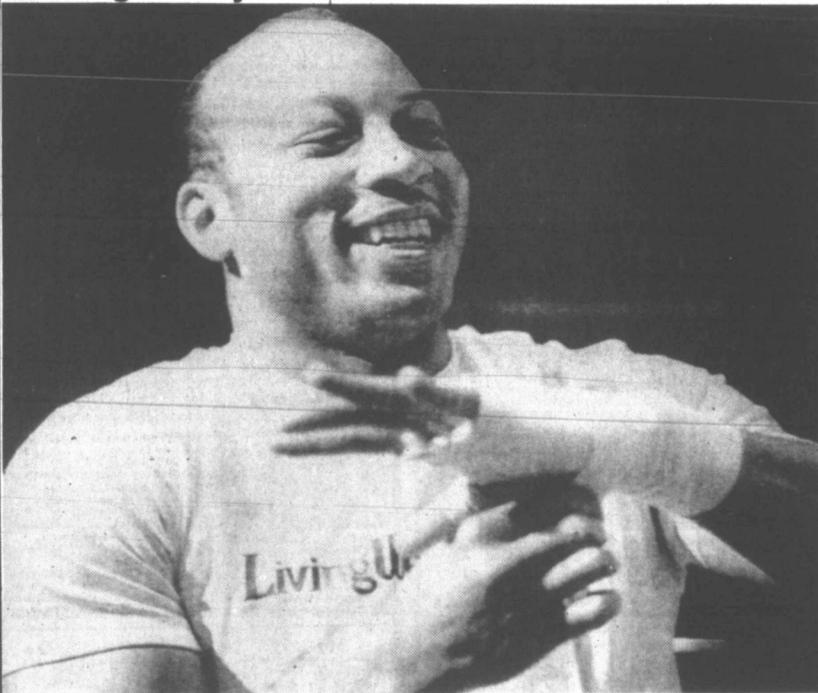

San Diego State finished the season at 5-25, and the game also marked the end of David "Smokey" Gaines' coaching career at the California school. Gaines, who coached the Aztecs for eight years, announced his resignation last month in the midst of a school record 17 straight losses.

Forward Rodney Hawkins scored 13 points to lead the Aztecs.

Brigham Young dodged Air Force's upset bid behind the clutch shooting of sophomore forward Michael Smith. Smith scored 29 points, including eight in the overtime. His two free throws with 22 seconds left gave BYU an 82-77 lead, and the Cougars survived two turnovers in the final seconds to hold off the Falcons.

Air Force, which got 23 points from forward Eric Kjome and 20 from guard freshman Ray Dudley, had a final shot to force another overtime. But the Falcons' inbound play broke down and they couldn't get the ball to Dudley or Kjome.

Rangers may be sold

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — A group of New York bankers and an Albuquerque, N.M. company are expected to present offers to buy the Texas Rangers baseball club, sources close to the negotiations report.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that the New York bankers, believed to have contacted the Rangers through the baseball commissioner's office, are thought to be the front-runner. The other group was identified as Maloof Co., a family concern from New Mexico that owned the Houston Rockets basketball franchise from May 1979 to June 1982.

Both groups will meet with Rangers majority owner Eddie Chiles within the next two weeks, the newspaper reported.

The asking price is $80 million for the American League franchise and its Arlington Stadium property.

They are said to be the first practical offers Chiles has received since September when American League owners rejected the proposed sale of the baseball team to Gaylord Broadcasting.

Sources said the new owners would not likely attempt to relocate the club because baseball's antitrust laws prevent a move from the Dallas-Fort Worth area without approval of major league owners.

Chiles said Thursday he is not in a bargaining mood for the sale, but said financial situations could force him out of baseball. In fiscal years 1984 and 1985, Chiles Western Co. of North America, an oil and gas firm, lost $81.9 million. Third quarter losses for 1986 amounted to $233 million.

Dart tourney slated

The Pampa Dart Association is sponsoring a benefit tournament at 7 p.m. Tuesday night at the Lancer Club.

Entry fee is three dollars per person with all proceeds going to the Panhandle Chapter of Multiple Sclerosis.

The dart tournament is open for anyone and the winner will receive a trophy from the Lancer Club.

Soccer season here

Pampa Soccer Association begins its spring season March 21 at Sawatry Complex.

Soccer official Miles Cook said about 450 players signed up to compete in six age divisions.

Age divisions include under 6, under 8, under 10, under 12 and under 14. Pampa will also have a 19 and under team playing in an Amarillo League.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should spend its time adjusting tax laws to benefit mothers who stay home, rather than consider legislation that would guarantee unpaid leave for working parents, conservative activist Phyllis Schlafly said.

Mrs. Schlafly told a House subcommittee hearing Thursday that the bill sponsored by Reps. William Clay, D-Mo., and Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., was "a foolish approach to the problem of job security" and would favor "highly paid, two-earner yuppie couples."

She said parental leave — "the current trendy issue promoted by the feminists" — is a job benefit that should be left to negotiations between employers and their workers.
