Borger regents propose testing

BORGER (AP) — The board of regents of Frank Phillips Community College will meet next week to consider a proposal to test all scholarship students for drug use.

"I hope they make some kind of hard decision on the policy to say to the world that Frank Phillips College takes (drug abuse) seriously and does not approve of drug abuse," school President Andy Hicks told the Borger News-Herald.

Hicks said the policy would show that use of drugs was not acceptable at the college, which has more than 900 students, nor in the community.

At this point, Hicks said no students are currently tested for drugs. There is no policy concerning drug testing.

Hicks said he did not know why scholarship students were targeted in the drug screening plan.

Regents Vice Chairman Gerald Sikes said the proposal was discussed during a work session held at FPC between regents and college officials Monday.

"It was the first time that we had heard about the idea," he said. "I don't know why the proposal targets on scholarship students unless it is a place by which to start. But we are going to have to decide just who will be involved in the testing or screening."

Hicks said various meetings have been held in the dorms with coaches and various student leaders over the past few months.

Volcano kills boy

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Gas and hot rocks spewed today from Mount Etna, Europe's tallest and most active volcano, killing a 9-year-old French boy and his mother and injuring other tourists, officials said.

Col. Silvano Brunchini of the Civil Defense Ministry in Rome said three other members of the family, who are French, were hospitalized.

Brunchini said several other people in the group of French and Italian tourists, who were on the southeast slope near the summit, suffered minor injuries.

Officials said about 25 people were on a guided tour of the volcano when the gas and hot volcanic rocks shot from a crater.

Renato Cristofolini, a volcanologist in Catania who monitors Etna's activity, said there had been other explosions in the same area in recent weeks. "Tourists are warned not to go near the craters," he said.

The explosion occurred 9,900 feet above the ground on the southeastern slope of the volcano, officials said. The area is nearly at the summit of Mount Etna.

In 1979, nine tourists were killed in a similar accident. They had made an excursion to the rim of the volcano, when ash, gas and hot rocks spewed out and showered the group.

Police closed the trails for a while, but they were later reopened.

Mount Etna is one of Sicily's main tourist attractions.

Mario Castro grimaces in pain while a man dressed as a Roman soldier uses a claw hammer to drive a 4-inch nail through his palm in a Good Friday ritual re-enacting the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. Thousands of people flocked to the Philippine village of San Pedro Cutud, 35 miles northwest of Manila, to watch the annual ritual.

Pilgrims walk Jesus' steps

JERUSALEM (AP) — Christian pilgrims singing hymns, reading from prayer books and carrying wooden crosses crowded the Via Dolorosa, walking in the footsteps of Jesus in Good Friday devotions marking the day of Christ's crucifixion.

Israeli soldiers carrying automatic rifles patrolled the winding, cobblestone streets as thousands of visitors crowded Jerusalem's Old City.

The Christian Easter celebrations of both the Eastern Orthodox and Western churches coincided this year with the week-long Jewish Passover observances which brought thousands of Orthodox Jews dressed in black cloaks and fur-trimmed hats to the Wailing Wall.

A long procession made up of groups of pilgrims singing and praying in different languages would pass the 14 stations of the Cross on the Via Dolorosa, marking the route Jesus took to his crucifixion.

The groups included pilgrims from Denmark, West Germany, France, the United States, Italy, Ethiopia, Sweden, South Africa, Ireland and Palestinian boy and girl scouts in uniform.

"It puts flesh on the story we have read so many times," said the Rev. Joe Condren of Gormanston College near Dublin, Ireland.

"This devotion is one of retracing the steps that Jesus made and the images we see here are helpful to a better understanding," said Condren, dressed in a brown robe as he led a group of 15 Irish pilgrims to the fifth station of the cross.

A woman and two men hefted a six-foot long cross made of thick pine as another priest read from the scriptures about Jesus' walk carrying the cross on which he was crucified.

"This is such a contrast to what we are used to back home," said Sheila Miller who together with her sister Fay runs a fabric shop in Gayndah, Australia.

The Via Dolorosa, or "road of suffering" in Latin, ends at the candlelit Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which marks the site of the crucifixion and resurrection.

President declares trade war

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan is slapping stiff tariffs on a wide range of Japanese electronic products, but the U.S. trade representative said today that the dispute over Japan's alleged violation of a trade pact on computer chips could be resolved in a few weeks.

Reagan, who is vacationing in California, was scheduled today to issue a presidential proclamation imposing $300 million in duties on specific Japanese goods. Sanctions on some items were expected to range up to 100 percent, potentially doubling the price of the products.

An initial list of targeted products — since narrowed — included Japanese-made television sets, pocket calculators and computer disks. But the administration predicts little impact for the American consumer.

The duties are in retaliation for alleged Japanese violation of a 1986 agreement to open its home market to American-made semiconductors, or computer chips, and to avoid "dumping" chips at unfairly low costs in other countries.

The United States contends that Japanese semiconductors, or computer chips, have been sold in foreign markets at prices far below their true value in violation of the 1986 pact. The Americans argue the chips then can be resold in the United States at unfairly cheap rates.

Reagan administration officials previously have said that even if the Japanese acted quickly, it would take three months at least for the issue to be resolved and the sanctions lifted, but U.S.

U.S. eyes missile cuts with caution

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan is talking hopefully of a U.S.-Soviet arms control accord by year's end, while pledging no hasty decisions on a Kremlin proposal to eliminate all short- and medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Reagan, after getting a 75-minute briefing from Secretary of State George P. Shultz at his mountaintop ranch near here, said "We've narrowed the gaps a little more" on medium-range weapons.

"I remain optimistic about an agreement this year," said Reagan, standing outside his adobe-style "Rancho del Cielo" with Shultz, who had just returned from a meeting with Soviet leaders in Moscow. The president said he's optimistic that he and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev "can complete an historic agreement on East-West relations at a summit meeting."

Neither Reagan nor Shultz would respond in detail to reporters' questions about whether America's NATO allies would be upset over an accord that essentially rids Europe of missiles.

Shultz, however, did say, "I don't think that at all... The opportunities before us... are all very positive."

And Reagan promised to "consult personally with our NATO allies on further negotiations and plans."

The Soviet proposal made to Shultz in Moscow would mean the elimination of about 130 short-range Soviet missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, in addition to getting rid of all U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe.

Gorbachev offered to include those weapons, which have a firing range of 350 to 600 miles, in a treaty to scrap medium-range missiles except for 100 warheads that would be left in Soviet Asia and in the United States.

The allies fear that elimination of these weapons would leave them vulnerable to the Soviet Union's superior conventional fighting capability.

Shultz took issue with suggestions that Gorbachev's proposal

Tamil rebels slaughter 107

Women and children among those yanked from buses and shot

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil militants attacked three buses and two trucks with machine guns and grenades today, dragging out passengers and killing 107 people, the government announced.

Tilak Ratanakara, chairman of the government Media Center, said it was believed most of the victims were Sinhalese.

Other officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Sinhalese were segregated from the Tamils and Moslems and shot.

Ratanakara said many Tamil guerrillas stopped the three buses and two trucks on a jungle road near Aluth-Oya Village, 115 miles northeast of Colombo, the capital. Women and children were among the dead, he said.

The army was called out to protect villagers and retrieve bodies in the area, Ratanakara said.

Most of the victims had been headed home to Colombo from villages in the Trincomalee district after New Year's celebrations with their relatives, Ratanakara said.

The government had announced a 10-day cease-fire for the New Year and said its forces would not attack Tamil militants on land or by air. Tamil groups agreed to go along if soldiers did not attack, but both sides allege violations.

Sri Lanka lies 18 miles off the tip of India at its closest point. Most Sri Lankan Tamils have close ties with Tamils in the southern Indian state of Tamil Nadu.

The country, known as Ceylon until May 1972, has an estimated population of 16 million.

Colonists from northern India subdued the indigenous Veddas about 543 B.C. The conquerors' descendants, the Buddhist Sinhalese, still form most of the population. Rival Hindu descendants of Tamil immigrants from Southern India account for about one-fifth of the population.

The country's chief industries involve plywood and paper manufacturing, milling, chemicals and textiles. The chief crops are tea, coconuts and rice.

Massive land reform and nationalization of foreign-owned plantations was undertaken in the mid-1970s.

The Santa Rosa Press Democrat quoted police as saying Thursday that the family was northbound in a 1984 Honda, when a driver in the southbound lane lost control of her 1976 Plymouth.

The Plymouth, driven by Madeline Hurt, 68, of Santa Rosa, drifted to the right and struck a curb before ricocheting into the northbound lane and slamming into the Honda, driven by Warner-Steinberg, according to the report filed by Santa Rosa police Lt. Nils Olsen. Olsen said both cars were obeying posted speed limits. The Press Democrat reported.

Hurt also was listed in stable condition Thursday at Community Hospital.

The accident occurred at 9:40 a.m. Wednesday. The Warners had been visiting their children in California for about a week.

Clements supports ban

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
 Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — A bill banning late-term abortions has won the support of Gov. Bill Clements, who had been holding out for a provision that would require minors to obtain parental consent before having pregnancies terminated.

"I want the Texas Legislature to pass the strongest pro-life legislation possible," Clements said Thursday. "It is Sen. (Ted) Lyon's position that his proposal banning post-viable abortions is that bill. I am committed to supporting his bill."

Clements said he would encourage senators to leave the provision out when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

"I am also committed to encouraging senators with whom I have influence not to offer amendments that could jeopardize that passage in the Senate," the governor said.

Clements' comments came in response to a request from Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville. Edwards pledged to vote against a bill sponsored by Lyon, D-Rockwall, that would ban late-term abortions following comments by Clements that the bill might be amended on the House floor.

"I appreciate Clements' statement. It makes clear his position on Sen. Lyon's bill and should help accelerate what I've wanted to do, which is prevent this bill from being written on the floor of the House and Senate," Edwards said.

The bill stalled in committee when the governor said during his Tuesday news conference he considered the parental consent provision a vital part of abortion legislation.

He added he wouldn't be surprised if it was tacked on when the bill reached the Senate floor. Lyon dropped the provision Monday in hopes of getting the bill passed out of committee.

Clements' support helps the bill, but doesn't guarantee it will be passed out of committee, Lyon said, adding he expects a close vote.

Edwards said he planned to talk with Lyon and Rep. Mike Millsap, House sponsor of the bill, over the weekend to "get a sense of whether or not there are any senators who want to offer amendments on the floor."

"A number of legislators have commented that this legislation shouldn't be complicated on the floor," Edwards said.

If a senator votes against an amendment on the floor, without the benefit of committee discussion, the vote could be abused by future political opponents, Edwards said.

Millsap's bill still contains the parental consent provision, but Lyon said he has been negotiating with Millsap to drop the provision.

Trade Representative Clayton Yetter said this morning that the dispute could be settled relatively quickly.

The Japanese "can correct it very quickly, almost overnight, if they'll just do so," Yetter said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "They've been arguing this week that they have already corrected it, and I hope that's the case."

"But for us to verify, that's going to take a little time, because we have to gather data that will demonstrate the verification," he said. "We can't back off on this action on the basis of one or two days of compliance. We want to see a pattern of compliance. So, at a minimum, I would say that will take a few weeks."

However, Yetter said it was unlikely the sanctions would be lifted by the time Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone arrives in Washington to meet with Reagan at the end of this month.

"I don't see any practical way to resolve this particular dispute before or during his visit," Yetter said in an interview from Washington.

Makoto Kuroda, Japan's deputy minister of international trade and industry, prepared to leave Washington today after failing in his attempts to head off the sanctions.

"It is regrettable that the U.S. side is going ahead with a unilateral measure, ignoring our explanations," Kyodo News Service quoted him as saying.

The presidential action highlights the most serious trade conflict between the two allies since World War II.

It also marks one of the first times the United States has singled out Japan for punishment, in-probably would divide the United States and its allies.

"If we are placed in a box, it's a wonderful box to be in. It's the box we've been trying to get into," the secretary said. "That is, we have been working from day one to bring about radical reductions in these weapons systems."

He said the question of removing battlefield-type tactical nuclear weapons, those of very short range, is not a part of the super-power negotiations.

As for the conventional force imbalance in Europe, he said the United States has "a negotiation going on right now to set a mandate" for talks that would broaden those that have been taking place in Vienna.

And, he added, "I think the assurance (to NATO allies) comes from the fact that we have troops there... we behave like an ally... we have the same security concerns."

to discuss the proposals.

"The committees have been looking at a possible drug testing program and discussing it thoroughly, but no decision on anything has been made until the regents either approve or disapprove it," he said.

Doug Lewis, a freshman student from Borger and presidential scholarship winner, said he did not recall any discussion about a drug screening program during FPC student council meetings.

"I have no problem with the idea," Lewis said. "As to why scholarship students might be targeted, that could be a means to eliminate the wrong type of students getting a full ride at the school."

"Perhaps some of those donating the scholarship funds want the students to be straight," Lewis said.

The school currently has a drug policy that prohibits drugs or alcohol on the campus.

Hicks said the regents would have to decide how far-reaching the drug testing program would be if they approve the program in their Monday meeting.

Trolin fund begun

A fund has been established at First National Bank of Pampa for the family of Paul Trolin, 39, who died last week at Methodist Medical Center in Dallas.

The fund will be used to help cover remaining medical and other expenses associated with Trolin's illness. He had been on kidney dialysis for some time and had received a kidney transplant.

Trolin was a 1966 graduate of Pampa High School. Surviving family members include his mother and son, both of Pampa.

Anyone wishing to donate to the fund may contact Janelle Cochran at First National Bank.

Clements plans tour against increasing taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, his budget proposals rejected by lawmakers, is taking his pitch directly to Texans in a 17-city tour.

"I need a holiday ... and we will be talking about some big spenders and how much some of these people are in favor of raising a $5.8 billion tax bill, which, as far as I know, no one in Texas wants except some of these legislators," Clements said Thursday.

The governor announced the tour several hours after the House Appropriations Committee tentatively approved a proposed 1988-89 budget that would be about $1.5 billion below the $39.9 billion budget the Senate approved Wednesday.

Both bills top the $36.9 billion bottom line set by Clements, and both would require new revenue for the state.

"If you vote for an appropriations bill of that size, I think you'll be expected to vote for a tax bill of that size," House Speaker Gib Lewis said.

House debate on the appropriations bill probably will be set for the week of April 26, Lewis said.

Clements Thursday reiterated his promise to veto any tax bill beyond the extension of the current, temporary motor fuels and sales tax increases.

"The people of Texas do not want higher taxes, period. So I'm going out on the road, and I'm going to preach the gospel that we're going to live within our means and there are not going to be any new taxes," he said.

Lewis said no one wants to raise taxes, but that it might become necessary.

"There's nothing inevitable. But certainly if we are going to maintain current services, and sometimes below current services, ... I don't see any way we can get through here without some type of revenue enhancement or tax increase," Lewis said.

House Appropriations Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, predicted the bottom line of his committee's bill would probably not change much on the floor, "unless someone made a convincing argument to cut public education in a big, dramatic way."

In approving its bill, Rudd's committee rejected Clements' call for cuts in vocational education, teacher career ladder programs and kindergarten programs.

The governor remained confident his proposals are not dead.

"Everybody's having a little tussle right now with the numbers, and they probably need to go home and talk to some of their constituents and meet with some of the service clubs and chambers of commerce and discuss with them a $3 billion or $4 billion or $5 billion tax increase and see how their home folks like that," Clements said.

Lewis said Clements is serious about vetoing any spending bill that tops his bottom line.

"If that's the case, we'll be here for a long summer," Lewis said.

Famous wrestler believed to have committed suicide

DALLAS (AP) — An autopsy on the body of professional wrestler Mike Von Erich, found zipped inside a sleeping bag with no evidence of injury, failed to establish a cause of death, but officials say it appears to have been suicide.

The body was found Thursday in heavy underbrush near Lewisville Lake, where his abandoned car was found Wednesday night, said Denton County sheriff's Capt. Allen Lewis.

The body was discovered by a police dog sniffing Von Erich's trail.

"He was lying there very peaceful, like you would go out for an overnight, to get away from it all," said Justice of the Peace Hubert Cunningham, who declared Von Erich dead and ordered an autopsy.

The 23-year-old, 210-pound athlete, a member of the famed Von Erich wrestling dynasty founded by Fritz Von Erich, was last seen Saturday when he posted $3,500 bond on drug and alcohol charges.

He had been arrested in Argyle early that day and held briefly for investigation of driving while intoxicated, possession of less than two ounces of marijuana and possession of a controlled substance.

World Class Championship Wrestling referee David Manning said the family first became alarmed Saturday night when Von Erich failed to appear for a scheduled match. A family attorney reported him missing Monday.

Cunningham said pathologists determined that Von Erich, whose real name was Michael Brett Adkisson, died Sunday, probably in the afternoon. He said toxicological tests probably won't be completed until Tuesday.

Lewis said notes found in Von Erich's car and in his Roanoke apartment indicated he had contemplated suicide. Sheriff's deputies had found an unsigned note on the front seat of Von Erich's car, Lewis said.

"In its entirety, it said, 'Mom and Dad, I am in a better place. I'll be watching,'" he said.

Lewis said the Adkisson family had found a note from Von Erich at the wrestler's apartment Saturday night. "Basically, it was a handwritten note telling his brother, Chris, that he could have his scuba gear," he said.

As a 20-year-old, Von Erich was named rookie of the year by a national wrestling publication and was among the best-known wrestlers in the country.

"It's tragic because he's such a young boy," said Cunningham, who for years has known the Adkissons, who raised their family in the Denton County community of Lake Dallas before moving to Chandler, near Tyler.

Mike Von Erich suffered toxic shock syndrome in August 1985 after surgery on a separated shoulder and was in critical condition for several days. He was also involved in an automobile accident in 1985 in which he suffered head injuries when his car went out of control and overturned.

"Mike has suffered since his bout with toxic shock syndrome and has been in poor health and pain continually," according to a statement released by the Von Erich family Thursday.

Von Erich's funeral was scheduled for 11 a.m. CDT Saturday at the First Baptist Church of Dallas. Burial will follow at Grove Hill Cemetery in Dallas.

"The Von Erichs are very conscious of their fans and very much want them to feel a part of the family," the Rev. Gary Holder said, noting that the funeral will be open to the public.

The wrestling Von Erichs, including brothers Kevin and Kerry, attracted a following that includes many young women who flock to their matches.

A fourth brother, David Von Erich, died in 1984 at age 25 of an intestinal ailment.

Community fasts for 24 hours

ELECTRA (AP) — Members of 10 churches in this hard-hit oil and agricultural community participated in a 24-hour prayer and fast as a way to get themselves "right with God."

"We are not trying to twist God's arm, but merely getting ourselves right with God," the Rev. Mike Gresham, pastor of the First Baptist Church, said Thursday.

Residents have many material needs because of the depressed oil and agricultural industries, he said. But the 24-hour period of fasting and prayer isn't aimed only at getting God's help with more jobs and better wages and prices.

"We have vast spiritual needs that all the money in the world wouldn't overcome," he stressed.

Periods of fasting and care are uncommon in today's times, Gresham said. The 24-hour fast began at a Wednesday night service.

The Rev. Richard Safford, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, said the community has a strong Ministerial Alliance of 10 churches, and that when Gresham recently proposed the fast, ministers of all 10 churches accepted it as an excellent proposal.

"This brief period of fasting and prayer is for the people in this community whose lives have been disrupted by the economic conditions of North Texas," Safford said.

Children and those with medical problems were told not to fast.

Two failed banks to reopen

By The Associated Press

Buyers have been found for the two latest Texas banks that collapsed in a rising tide of financial failures, federal regulators say.

Poor management and bad loans led to the failure of First Bank of Saginaw, closed Thursday by Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth Littlefield, said Julie Amberson, spokeswoman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The bank north of Fort Worth was to reopen today as a branch of Southwest Bank of Fort Worth, Ms. Amberson said.

In Houston, deposits of First Commercial Bank of Texas, N.A., were assumed by OMNIBANC North Belt, N.A., of Houston, the FDIC said.

The two insolvencies bring to 20 the number of banks that have failed in Texas this year and 62 nationally. A record 26 banks failed in Texas last year.

First Bank of Saginaw had assets of $30.7 million. Southwest Bank will assume about $30 million in 6,400 accounts and will pay the FDIC $752,000 to purchase the bank, Ms. Amberson said.

Littlefield said the failure stemmed from losses on loans to a variety of commercial and real estate borrowers outside the bank's market area.

The losses were caused by liberal lending practices and the board of directors' inattention to the lending function, said Littlefield, adding the board's attempts to recapitalize the bank were unsuccessful.

Later Thursday, First Commercial was declared insolvent by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency office and FDIC's board of directors approved the assumption of the bank's assets by OMNIBANC, FDIC spokesman Bill Olcheski said.

OMNIBANC was to assume responsibility for the $4.7 million in 800 First Commercial deposit accounts, for which it agreed to pay a premium of $1,100, Olcheski said.

First Commercial's one branch was to reopen today as a branch of OMNIBANC, North Belt, and will become part of OMNIBANC once the arrangement is approved by the appropriate court, Olcheski said.

Psychiatrist says woman needs care

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A rich woman who gave away thousands of dollars in cash and gifts needs treatment in a mental institution before she can improve, a psychiatrist says.

Leslie Negley, 37, has been battling her family's attempts to have her temporarily committed to a mental institution. She is the granddaughter of George Brown Sr., one of the founders of construction giant Brown & Root Inc.

Ms. Negley's family says she has been taken advantage of by people she met at a religious encounter. A Bexar County probate court jury must decide if Ms. Negley needs to be committed to a mental institution for a maximum 90-day treatment.

Dr. Charles L. Bowden, a psychiatrist who treated her in 1985 and saw her again last week, said she needed to be hospitalized between two and 10 weeks.

"She doesn't deal where she has a problem which requires any professional treatment," he said.

Ms. Negley's mother, Nancy Brown Negley Wellin, wants her son to manage her daughter's estimated $3 million estate during her daughter's hospitalization.

David Ramos, 25, testified earlier Thursday that he met Ms. Negley two months ago and that she gave him and his wife, Elisa, $20,000 each. He also testified the four cars Ms. Negley bought were used primarily by himself, his wife, her sister and his mother-in-law.

Ms. Negley testified earlier that she was spiritually motivated to purchase the four cars. "I bought it out of the kindness of my heart," she said about the purchase of one car for a woman. "He put it in my heart. He wanted her to have that car."

Cruising for a good haircut

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

I got my hair cut last week. It's not something I look forward to with great anticipation. Nonetheless, it is something that has to be done with regularity.

I used to wear my hair long. Lately, thanks to my wife's advice, it's been short.

I always know it's time to get my hair cut, or designed as they call it now, when I start looking like a television evangelist.

The young lady who cut my hair the other day did a wonderful job.

I made the mistake of telling her I liked the way Tom Cruise, he of Top Gun fame, wore his hair. So she set forth to cut mine like his.

You've seen my picture. Is there ever any hope for me looking like Tom Cruise?

Unfortunately, I have been blessed with the looks of Les Nesseman, the news announcer on WKRP in Cincinnati.

My hair could easily be made to look like Barney Fife's, but why would I want it to?

Never will I look like Cruise. Or even Michael J. Fox.

I am destined to look like hundreds of character actors on television.

But at least my hair looks better now than it did before the cutting I received.

One day, my wife bought some mousse. It's the stuff the teen-agers put on to make their hair have that wet look, or to make it stand up.

I tried some of it, but my hair was too long. When I tried to make it stand up, it just limply fell back over.

With scissors in hand, I commenced cutting. And cutting.

When I thought I had cut enough I looked in the mirror.

I did not look like a youthful teen.

A tumbleweed with a flat-top came to mind.

I don't need mousse for my hair. If I want the wet look, I can just go to the water fountain once every hour and wet it down myself.

So, Tom Cruise needn't worry about me looking like me. But, watch out Bill Murray.

Not related to haircutting, here are some things I have noticed lately, that you may have wondered also:

☐ Why does your car always seem to run better after it has been washed?

☐ Why does the car wash always cycle off when you have cleaned everything but the hood?

☐ Why do sports announcers have to add a "y" to players' first names to make it sound like they're personal friends with them?

☐ When cows walk through a pasture, do you think they ever really know exactly where they're headed?

☐ If highly paid chemists can devise a way to put fizz in a can of soda pop, why can't they come up with a way to make it still be there a day after you've opened it?

☐ And for that matter, why can't they invent a two-litre bottle of pop that you can stand up straight on the top shelf of your refrigerator?

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Washington porkers wallow in same pen

The lesson most dramatically illuminated by President Reagan's ultimately unsuccessful attempt to have his veto of a highway spending bill sustained is how thoroughly Washington runs on goodies and favors distributed to the politically influential and well-connected at the expense of taxpayers.

All the masks politicians wear — about devotion to principle, loyalty to party, friends or convictions, concern for public policy or wise governance — came off in public. Washington is a grand bazaar dealing in stolen goods. The rest is persiflage.

The White House would no doubt like citizens to come away with an image of a president above the logrolling, opposed in principle, to the pork-barrel politics that dominate the capital, trying in vain to get the petty politicians in Congress to rise above self-interest and almost succeeding. The image won't do.

In the final flurry, the White House pork-barreled with the worst of them. Pennsylvania's John Heinz and Arlen Specter (whose state stands to get $500 million from the bill as it passed) were asked about more favorable funding formulas for mass transit.

Missouri's John Danforth and Christopher Bond (four and a half "demonstration projects" including a bridge over the Mississippi to be shared with Illinois) were approached about "agriculture pork" grants to state universities.

And so it went. All 13 of the Republican Senators who opposed Reagan were approached and pressured and tantalized. "We tried everything. I mean everything," said Alan Simpson of Wyoming, the chief Republican head counter. But it was too late. Sen. Pete Wilson of California preferred the bird-in-the-hand of $870 million to be taken by force from taxpayers all around the country and poured into the bottomless maw of the L.A. Metro Rail, an instant white elephant. Others had already made their pens and preferred to wallow in the familiar stench of road pork.

Then there were the face-saving assessment switches, performed deadpan. Minority Leader Robert Dole before the final vote: "This is a very critical vote for Ronald Reagan. It may be a historic vote. This may determine the strength of his presidency for the next 21 months." And after the president had lost? "In the final analysis, it's money in the bank for Ronald Reagan. He came up here, he went into the lion's den. He's made it a little easier for the next time. And it also got the Iran thing off the front page for a day." Right.

Well, we do hope the president will veto more budget-busting bills, and we hope he wins a few. We don't entertain many illusions, however, that principles or convictions will play much of a role on any side in Washington. The president needs some confrontations to appear masterful and tough — and he's more than willing to pay for small victories with some of your money spent in less obtrusive ways. If the end result is slightly less money wasted by the porkers of Washington, perhaps that's the best we can expect.

There's wisdom in numbers

The arrival of spring brings the annual rebirth of nature's glory, from budding trees to blooming flowers. It also heralds another almost equally miraculous man-made event: The publication of the Statistical Abstract of the United States.

Whoever said the only things governments do well is wage war and debase currency never saw this book. It proves that in the noble task of compiling huge stacks of numbers, the U.S. government has few peers. Few activities undertaken by Washington provide such unambiguous blessings as the Statistical Abstract, produced each year by the Census Bureau.

Anyone coming across this 1,000-page volume for the first time may regard it as a forbidding collection of arcane information that should be avoided by anyone except, say, an economist — once defined as someone good with numbers, who has insufficient personality to be an accountant. The initial impression is mistaken. Like a long Russian novel, this book can't be appreciated without effort and stamina, but those who persist are rewarded.

Imprecision is the enemy of understanding. Our opinions are often wrong not because we have drawn the wrong conclusions from the evidence but because our evidence is faulty. What we "know" may be nothing more than an undigested smattering of misimpressions about the world around us. What appears obvious may be fatally misleading — after all, to the untutored, it's "obvious" that the sun revolves around the Earth.

The Statistical Abstract inoculates against such errors. It provides concrete measures against which casual assumptions can be tested, acting as a stern discipline on careless thought. True, as Mark Twain said, statistics can be just another way to lie. But looked at honestly, they also can yield insights. This volume offers a revealing portrait of the nation, achieved not through broad brushstrokes but by a painstaking mosaic of tiny details.

Simple numbers can be an antidote to extravagant political rhetoric. When Ronald Reagan talks about his success in pruning the government, it's useful to know that in his first term, federal civilian employment grew from 2.72 million to 2.9 million and that the federal budget grew from $678 billion to $946 billion.

On the other hand, when you hear his critics protest the unconscionably high unemployment rate, it's worth considering that the percentage of the adult population that is employed stands at a modern high of 64.8 percent, compared with just 58.9 percent in the boom year of 1965.

One valuable byproduct of perusing the Statistical Abstract is a sense of historical perspective. Americans hearing news reports about the plight of the nation's farmers, for example, may think the farm crisis is something new. Most probably would be surprised to learn that the farm population has been shrinking steadily for years — and that the decline was slower in the past decade than in the preceding one. Are corporations swallowing up agriculture, as we always hear? In 1982, the last year for which figures are available, they owned just 13.6 percent of all farmland, up modestly from the 1978 figure of 12.5 percent.

Other tables, far from documenting continuity, dramatize the rapidity of social change. In 1940, we learn, 25 percent of Americans older than 25 had high school diplomas. In 1985, 74 percent had them. For blacks, the percentage rose from 7 percent in 1940 to 60 percent in 1985. Life expectancy at birth has risen from 60 years in 1930 to 75 today. The number of homes with color TV sets quadrupled between 1970 and 1986; the number with videocassette recorders nearly doubled in 1985 alone.

Some of the Statistical Abstract's surprises strain credulity. Chicagoans don't need to be told that their winters are brutal, but few of them realize that their Januaries are colder than those in Juneau, Alaska — with an average daily temperature of 21.4 degrees, compared with a balmy 21.8 in Juneau. This chart furnishes grounds for sympathy toward residents of Duluth, Minn., where the average January temperature is (brace yourself) 6.3 degrees.

Only a fool would assume that the only events that deserve attention are those that can be reduced to numbers. Life's most important matters stoutly resist quantification — the love of spouses for each other, the religious devotion of believers, the taste of linguine with clam sauce. For comprehending those innumerable subjects that are susceptible to measurement, however, the Statistical Abstract is highly useful. It doesn't substitute for wisdom, but it does facilitate it.

Faithful set sights too low

I was 17 when a prominent radio minister was revealed to have clay feet. It was a shattering experience.

I was years getting over the disillusion — using it as an excuse for rebellion — until one day I realized that the disillusion was my own fault. I had set my sights too low.

Recent years on several occasions Paul Harvey News has expressed reservations about the high-flying, jillion-dollar media ministries.

My remonstrance, never intended to be anything but constructive, doubtless reflected some lingering hurt from that long ago.

The recent cacophony of infighting among the electronic clergy (what my colleague Joe Holstead calls "Pearlygate") has to be dreadfully distressing to the Christians who set their sights too low.

Billy Graham's ministry has been accused of being too "simplistic."

It is with purpose that he keeps it that way.

Purposely he keeps the focus off himself and on the 24 words of John 3:16: "For God so loved the world, that He gave his only son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

When Oral Roberts first proclaimed his do-or-die quest for another $8 million he reinforced the contention of the skeptics that "they're all in it for the money."

Then when a dog-track operator bailed him out, rounded out the $8 million, Roberts promptly announced that he needed more. He did not say how much more, he just said the faithful should keep it coming.

Then evangelist Jim Bakker, about to be exposed, exposed himself as having been an unfaithful husband.

He implied that evangelist Jimmy Swaggart intended to use blackmail to seize control of the many-million-dollar Bakker empire — but evangelist Jerry Falwell raked in those chips while evangelist Swaggart was calling Bakker "a cancer on the body of Christ."

Now Bakker is threatening to tell "secrets" about Swaggart.

And Swaggart is being sued by another evangelist, Marvin Gorman, for allegedly stealing his ministry.

Respected theologian Carl Henry calls it a "civil war" among the clergy.

In the spreading darkness, self-righteous bush leaders are compounding the skepticism. Evangelist Jim Gillies calls himself a missionary to American college campuses. According to one news story, while Gillies was on campus at the University of Southern Mississippi he told his student audience that the campus is "a cesspool of lust" with some of its "wild women wearing clothing that says, 'Rape me!'"

Then he passed out copies of his book and signed several: "Repent, you cigarette sucking sinner!"

In all you've just read the only thing worth repeating is this: "Many Christians set their sights too low. They tend to deify men. And no man can measure up to that."

Insurance for nuclear plants may lapse

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The beleaguered nuclear power industry faces a new crisis that could further undermine public confidence in the troubled technology.

The federal law governing the industry's unique insurance program expires at the beginning of August, and there is a very real possibility that Congress will not act in time to renew the legislation.

The insurance plan would remain in force for all nuclear power plants that received construction permits or operating licenses from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission before the law expired.

But many industry officials are legitimately concerned that the lapsing of the statute will reinforce the public's uneasiness about nuclear power. The law is the Price-Anderson Act, first enacted by Congress in 1957 and renewed every 10 years since. Its most notable feature is that it limits the industry's financial liability to members of the public harmed by accident — a special waiver granted to no other business.

The law requires every electric utility company that operates a nuclear generating station to carry $160 million worth of liability insurance. In addition, the owners of each nuclear power plant can be assessed up to $5 million after an accident to pay damage claims.

With 109 commercial nuclear units now in operation, that formula provides $705 million to cover all insurance payments — but the potential for damage is far higher.

An Atomic Energy Commission study in 1965 predicted 45,000 fatalities and $7 billion worth of property damage in a "worst case" accident. A 1975 NRC study doubled that damage estimate to $14 billion.

In 1982, the Sandia National Laboratory in New Mexico produced a "worst case" scenario in which there were in excess of 100,000 deaths and more than $100 billion worth of economic damage.

When several congressional committees last year attempted to fashion an extension of the Price-Anderson Act, the industry grudgingly agreed that the current legal ceiling should be increased but insisted upon a new cap of $2.5 billion.

The consensus on Capitol Hill now is that the ceiling should be $6.5 billion.

The industry might reluctantly accept that cap in return for extending the law for perhaps 20 to 25 years, as opposed to the usual 10 — but its critics reject that on the grounds that the future holds too many uncertainties.

Those critics also note that the annual premiums paid by utility companies for each nuclear power plant are $400,000 for their public liability insurance but about $5 million to insure their own property and equipment. Thus, the industry is spending 12 times as much to insure itself as it is to insure the public.

Moreover, members of the public cannot purchase supplemental insurance to protect themselves. Virtually all standard insurance policies specifically exclude nuclear-related damage, according to a report issued last year by the Environmental Policy Institute, U.S. Public Interest Research Group and Union of Concerned Scientists.

"To allow companies to escape responsibility for the performance of their products is to sanction standard safety practices," says one industry critic.

FCC wants to clean up nation's airways

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a decade after George Carlin's "seven dirty words" shook the airwaves, federal regulators are issuing their own words to clean up obscene and indecent broadcasts.

In actions Thursday against three radio stations, including one with controversial morning-show personality Howard Stern, regulators sent word that they will be holding the nation's broadcasters to higher standards.

The Federal Communications Commission is hoping its crackdown on broadcast obscenity will tame the airwaves, but until the agency details its new guidelines, Stern is planning no changes in his New York-based radio program.

The FCC plans to publish its new guidelines soon in the Federal Register to put all broadcasters on notice that it will no longer limit its definition of indecency to the "seven dirty words" broadcast in 1975 in a monologue by comedian George Carlin. The broadcast led to a 1978 Supreme Court decision, which set an indecency standard for the airwaves.

The FCC has interpreted the standard narrowly, and since the Carlin case arose in 1976, the agency has taken no action against a station for indecency or obscenity.

FCC General Counsel Diane Killory said the FCC had to advise stations about the new standards before it takes action, which could include fines and the revocation of licenses.

Mel A. Karmazin, executive vice president of Infinity Broadcasting, owner of WYSP-FM, PHILADELPHIA, WHICH AIRS Stern's program, called the FCC position a victory despite a written warning against Stern's sexual-excremental talk on the airwaves.

"Clearly, we've won," Karmazin said. "What they've said is that they're not taking action against us."

Stern, 32, at a news conference in New York where his show is aired on WXRK-FM, said, "When the FCC makes a statement and says what it will do, I'm the first one to abide by it."

"I never thought that I pushed anything to the limit. I go on the radio in the morning to have fun. We make a lot of people laugh. Maybe some people in Mississippi are offended," Stern said.

"A bunch of 65-year-old men don't like the show, I'm offended," he said.

The FCC took even stronger action against Pacifica Foundation Inc.'s KPFF-FM, Los Angeles, sending the case to the Justice Department for possible prosecution for broadcasting a program allegedly containing graphic depictions of homosexual sex acts. The commission found the program was clearly indecent and "may have crossed the line" to obscenity.

Tarabu Betseal, general manager of KPFF-FM, said the FCC failed to consider the material it aired in its proper context — a discussion about a play running in Los Angeles about safe sex and the disease AIDS.

"It's frightening that a group of people who can be swayed by political pressure can determine what is appropriate for broadcast," he said.

The FCC also issued a written warning to KCSB-FM, licensed to the University of California at Santa Barbara, which broadcast a rock song with sexually explicit lyrics.

The station's manager, Malcolm Gault-Williams, said the action marked "a sad day for the electronic media."

In the future, the FCC will apply a broader definition of indecency than was embodied in the Supreme Court decision which said: "Language or material that depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

Wall Street workers are led in chains following Thursday arrests

Cocaine became a currency on Wall Street, feds charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Some Wall Street brokers arrested in an undercover investigation used cocaine "as a regular method of exchange," dispensing it to employees and customers and trading it for stock tips, authorities said.

"Cocaine became an integral part of the personal and professional lives of these people," Robert Stutman, special agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in New York City, said after the arrests Thursday of 19 people, including at least 16 financial workers and two alleged drug suppliers.

"We don't believe this case is an aberration," he said.

Federal authorities described a cocaine subculture in which the drug was snorted in bathrooms, stairways and boardrooms on Wall Street and purchases were made in neighborhood bars.

Those arrested included Wayne D. Robbins, a senior partner in the firm of Brooks, Weinger, Robbins & Leeds Inc.

Authorities also filed suit to seize assets of the firm, which has offices in nine cities. U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani told a news conference he believed it was the first time the government tried to seize part of a brokerage's assets because of a narcotics violation.

"Cocaine was used as a regular method of exchange, allegedly in the business of this firm," Giuliani said.

But its lawyer, Bert Gusrae, said the principals of the firm have "no knowledge of any widespread drug distribution or drug network inside the firm."

According to Giuliani, a Brooks broker once sent a free sample of heroin via the firm's messenger service, information on stocks was traded for cocaine, a person was hired because he was a trusted source of the drug, and accounts were steered to brokers who returned the favors with cocaine.

He said that on one occasion, "a principal of a company whose stock Brooks was about to offer to the public was given cocaine in exchange for $10,000 worth of the stock."

The prosecutor said Brooks has been involved for some time in manipulating the issues of "penny stocks" — shares in new companies that trade at a very low price.

Further charges and arrests are expected, he said.

Ten of those arrested were brokers and five were professionals in the field, said Robert Strang, a DEA spokesman. One other person may have been a broker, he said.

In addition to the Brooks firm, Stutman said, those arrested worked for Prudential-Bache, The New York Depository Trust, Advent Corp. and Allied Capital, all financial institutions with offices in the Wall Street area. The DEA said the arrests stemmed from a three-year investigation that included an undercover agent working at Brooks since mid-March as a broker's assistant.

Philadelphia Inquirer wins three

NEW YORK (AP) — A series about drug abuse and dangerous medical problems among airline pilots won The Pittsburgh Press the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for public service, while The Philadelphia Inquirer won three awards.

The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times each won two Pulitzers, while playwright August Wilson won the drama prize for "Fences," about a black garbage collector robbed by racism of a chance to play major league baseball.

The general non-fiction prize went to New York Times reporter David K. Shipler for his book "Arab and Jew: Wounded Spirits in a Promised Land." The fiction prize went to 70-year-old Peter Taylor for his novel, "A Summons to Memphis," about an elderly widower's remarriage.

Other journalism winners included the Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal, the Chicago Tribune, The Washington Post, The Tribune of San Diego, the San Francisco Examiner, The Des Moines (Iowa) Register and The Miami Herald.

Winners of the Pulitzers, journalism's most prestigious award, were announced Thursday by Columbia University. The journalism award carries a $1,000 stipend.

A three-piece band tooted "Happy Days Are Here Again" at the Pittsburgh Press, where the public service prize was its second Pulitzer in as many years. "You don't set out to win them," said reporter Andrew Schneider. "You go out and do the reporting we all do every day."

It was a series by Schneider and Matthew Brelis about the Federal Aviation Administration's medical screening of pilots that won this year's gold medal for public service for the newspaper.

The stories led to FAA reforms, including new procedures for testing flight crews for drug and alcohol use and replacement of a federal air surgeon who allowed more than 250 pilots or co-pilots to return to the cockpit after they were grounded by debilitating or potentially fatal medical conditions.

The Inquirer's John Woestendiek was cited in the investigative reporting category for outstanding prison beat reporting, including stories that helped win a new trial for a man convicted of murder.

An investigative reporting prize also went to the Inquirer's Daniel Biddle, Fredric N. Tulsy and H.G. Bissinger for a series about backroom deals and other shady doings in the Philadelphia court system. The series led to investigations and reforms.

Said Bissinger: "It is the second most wonderful moment of my life next to the birth of my child." Bissinger is studying at Harvard University on a Nieman Fellowship.

The Inquirer's third Pulitzer, for feature writing, went to Steve Twomey for a look at life aboard the aircraft carrier America, which became a launchpad for the U.S. air strike on Libya while he was aboard.

The newspaper now has won 13 Pulitzers, all during the past 15 years.

Publisher Sam McKeel declared it a "great day, great year and the continuation of a great trend" at the Inquirer, where the newsroom was awash in champagne.

In national reporting, the staff of The New York Times was cited for coverage of the Challenger aftermath. The Times' Alex S. Jones won the specialized reporting prize for his story about the sale of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Louisville Times.

The two awards brought the Times' total to 58 Pulitzers.

The Pulitzer Prize Board also awarded a prize in national reporting to the staff of The Miami Herald for "its exclusive reporting and persistent coverage" of the Iran-Contra affair.

Peanut butter and indoor air rank high as cancer-causers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A peanut butter sandwich has 10 times the cancer-causing potential of a serving of bacon, but is 20 times safer than breathing the air in a normal home for 14 hours, according to researchers who developed a scale for measuring the dangers of cancerous substances.

California scientists said Thursday they developed a system for ranking the potential hazard to humans of natural and man-made chemicals that cause cancer in animals.

The scale is designed to help assess the hazards of numerous carcinogens people hear about but don't know how to relate to, they said.

Scientists at the University of California, Berkeley, said their system — which, for example, rates a daily glass of beer as a greater cancer hazard than some pesticide pollution — takes into account real-life exposures to the many cancer-causing substances.

"Our purpose is not to scare people about an occasional raw mushroom or beer, but to help them make sense of the many reports they see about this or that causing cancer in animals," Dr. Bruce N. Ames, the principal researcher, said in a telephone interview.

Ames said the scale, expressed as a percentage of risk over a lifetime of exposure, rates possible cancer hazards to people based upon the known potency of a substance in animals and the likely human exposure.

Under this system, a daily ration of the peanut butter used in one sandwich has a rating of 0.03 percent because of a carcinogen from mold that forms on peanuts.

Bacon, which develops carcinogens called nitrosamines when cooked, has a 0.003 percent rating if eaten each day. And the normal air pollution in a conventional house, breathed 14 hours a day, is rated 0.6 percent.

The researchers, including Renae McGaw and Lois Swirsky Gold, describe their HEP scale, or "Human Exposure dose-Rodent Potency," in the April 17 issue of the journal Science, a special issue focusing on assessing risks.

The scale is an extension of a much-discussed report published in 1983. That study concluded that the most-common carcinogens to which people are exposed are natural substances, such as by-products of mold and fungus contamination of grains and other foods, and not man-made compounds such as pesticides and industrial chemicals.

Merely identifying a substance as a potential cancer agent is not very useful for making health decisions without considering amount and likelihood of exposure, as well as other hazards with which people come in contact, the researchers said.

Ames bases his HEP rating on a ratio between the dose rate that induces cancer in half of the animals tested, called TD-50, and lifetime human daily exposure to the chemical per unit of body weight.

Using this scale, chlorinated tap water had a low HEP rating that still was several times higher than the potential hazard of pesticide residues, the researchers said.

Rocket's flight computer found

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The flight computer of a doomed satellite rocket has been recovered intact and its memory could disclose whether lightning destroyed the booster, as investigators suspect.

The 60-pound metal box containing the computer was pulled from the Atlantic Ocean just offshore Thursday by a fishing vessel. Shortly before the recovery, NASA reported the unmanned Atlas-Centaur rocket may have been hit by as many as nine lightning bolts as it lifted off in a heavy rainstorm on March 26.

John R. Busse, who heads a team investigating the accident, said the flight computer appeared to be intact and sealed. It was cleaned and was to be examined today by engineers at its manufacturer, Teledyne of Northridge, Calif.

Fifty-two seconds into the flight, just after lightning is believed to have hit the rocket, the computer, which was the brains of the Atlas-Centaur, sent a command that swiveled the Atlas engine nozzles sharply, shooting the vehicle out of control and causing it to break up.

Engineers will try to read the memory of the computer to determine if lightning or something else caused it to send the command to the engines.

Jurors find defendant guilty of agent's murder

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A man convicted of killing a federal narcotics agent as they struggled over a gun during a drug bust will be sentenced next month, but prosecutors say the stiffest sentence possible is life in prison.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe says prosecutors did not seek the death penalty for Felipe Molina Uribe because federal statutes are "screwed up."

State law, however, allows the death penalty for such a crime, and assistant U.S. Attorney Christopher Milner said he would discuss the case with state prosecutors to determine whether it should be brought before a state jury.

A federal court jury deliberated 4½ hours Thursday before finding the 29-year-old Mexico City man guilty of first-degree murder in the death of William Ramos.

Ramos, a special agent for the Drug Enforcement Administration, was shot in the chest during a New Year's Eve drug bust in the parking lot of a South Texas grocery store.

The agent's 24-year-old widow, Thelma, sobbed when the verdict was returned and clutched their 22-month-old daughter.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela polled each juror before releasing the panel, and said he would sentence Molina next month.

Molina pleaded guilty to two drug charges before the trial began, and jurors also found him guilty of using a firearm in the commission of a violent crime.

The judge said he believed the proper sentence for the first-degree murder conviction was life in prison.

"The verdict speaks for itself," said Ken Miley, agent in charge of the DEA's McAllen office and Ramos' boss.

Defense attorney J.M. Ramirez said an appeal was being considered, while noting "the jury has spoken. There is no sense in second-guessing the jury verdict."

In their closing arguments Thursday, prosecutors said Ramos was killed by a "big-time dope dealer" while trying to keep drugs off the street.

"It was a simple, brutal, vicious, malicious murder of Agent William Ramos," Wolfe said.

Molina's court-appointed attorneys said he was a victim of "a simple conspiracy of silence" and suggested Ramos was the victim of an assassination by someone other than Molina.

"I'm grateful the jury saw through the most shabby and most underhanded attempt at distorting the facts that I've ever had occasion to witness," Wolfe said after the verdict was returned.

"The defense in this case was in the minds of Joe Connors and J.M. Ramirez."

Ramirez contended jurors were being "flim-flammed" by government prosecutors who relied on DEA informants to identify Molina as the triggerman.

Ramos was shot in the chest as he and DEA informant Roberto Ortiz struggled with a gun with Molina, witnesses testified. The three were in Ramos' car.

Business executives appraise the press

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Must business and the press always be bitter antagonists?

Not necessarily, suggest the results of a recent poll of 100 top executives at large public companies.

While there is still plenty of the traditional strain between these two groups, "a more forthcoming relationship may be dawning," says the management consulting firm of Egon Zehnder International.

The executives, polled in January at Egon Zehnder's behest, faulted reporters more for lack of knowledge and a tendency to sensa-tionalize than for any presumed bias against business.

And while they gave the press grades of C-plus for "identifying important trends" and a straight C for objectivity, they also gave themselves only C's for openness and accessibility in dealing with reporters and for their skill in communicating.

One respondent, the firm reports, complained that "a number of reporters I've dealt with didn't understand my business and expected me to do the work for them."

In contrast, another said: "Businessmen have to take some of the responsibility for how we're treated in the press. If no one else will do it, we should educate reporters instead of crying around about how ignorant they all are."

The question of how each group approaches its dealings with each other is, of course, important to anyone with a financial stake in a given business.

It is common, for example, to hear small investors complain that the general press is prone to emphasizing consumers' or employees' concerns while giving the interests of stockholders short shrift.

On a broader scale, public perception of the business world, as influenced by the press, can exert a significant influence on government policies and legislation that in turn affect the performance of the economy.

B-1B bomber sets distance, endurance records

ABILENE (AP) — A B-1B bomber and its Dyess Air Force Base crew was in the air for 21 hours, 40 minutes and flew 9,411 miles to set distance and endurance records for the aircraft, officials say.

The previous records of 13 hours, 12 minutes and 5,940 miles had been set by a test crew at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., last Oct. 29.

The plane and its six-man crew took off from Dyess at 9:08 a.m. Tuesday and landed on the same runway at 6:48 a.m. Wednesday. The flight included five mid-air refuelings at 20,000 feet.

The farthest the plane ever got from Dyess was the northern coast of Alaska. Part of Alaska is only 55 miles from the Soviet Union, but the plane got no closer to that country than 160 miles, Dyess officials said Thursday.

It was nevertheless the closest a B-1B has ever been to Soviet territory, the Air Force confirmed.

Delighted Dyess officials said the test by the Air Force Operational Test and Evaluation Center was the most challenging yet of the aircraft's "global mission capability."

"It was a solid mission that further demonstrates and confirms what a formidable weapons system we have in the B-1B," said Col. Robert E. Dempsey, 96th Bomb Wing commander.

"The B-1B performed superbly and I'm very happy with the preliminary indications," said Col. William A. Hayes Jr., a test director on the flight.

Commanded by Lt. Col. Larry M. Jordan, the B-1B flew north from Dyess over Seattle, Wash., to the northernmost point of Alaska. From there, the plane headed east and southeast to a turnaround point south of the Victoria Islands in north central Canada.

It flew the same route on the trip home, the Air Force said.

"For duration purposes, the mission could have been routed to the South Pacific or to the Caribbean, but for these test purposes we were interested in how the B-1B can perform its global commitment that might very well one day require flight near or over the North Pole," Hayes said.

Other items tested involved maximum gross weight, human factors and overall aircraft performance.

The average flight speed was about 450 mph. The Air Force anticipated the B-1B would have the capability of flying more than 7,000 miles without being refueled, but computer simulation tests have put the actual capability at closer to 5,800 miles.

First Alive.

A recent Gallup poll revealed that more than 40% of the young people in this great "Christian" nation do not know the reason behind the Easter celebration.

A picture of an empty tomb would be meaningless to them. If you happen to be one of those who didn't know — don't be embarrassed. You are not alone.

We're glad you saw this, because now we have the chance to tell you that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, was crucified, buried, and He rose from the dead to pay the penalty for your sins.

Now that's good news!

Texas Instruments announces stock split, quarterly results

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. will split its stock three-for-one after posting first-quarter earnings of $83.8 million, the company's strongest financial showing since 1984, officials say.

The first-quarter earnings announced Thursday translated to $3.12 per share on sales of $1.27 billion, compared to a loss of $23.8 million, or 98 cents per share, in the year-earlier period on sales of $1.15 billion.

The stock split will be in the form of a 200-percent dividend payable to stockholders of record as of May 15, 1987, the Dallas-based company said at its annual stockholders meeting.

The 1987 results included $108 million from the settlement of patent infringement lawsuits against six Japanese semiconductor producers, said Jerry R. Junkins, TI president and chief executive officer.

"More important than the immediate financial impact of these settlements may be the general recognition by our industry that intellectual property, as embodied in patents, has considerably greater value than has been recognized in the past," Junkins said.

He predicted that "one can expect to see patents asserted more aggressively throughout the industry."

During the 1987 first quarter, increased volume in TI's semiconductor operations brought that business back into profitability from last year's loss, Junkins said. Cost reductions that included layoffs last year also helped the company's performance.

The company's defense electronics business also saw increased volume, while volume on TI's data systems business fell slightly, Junkins said.

He predicted the U.S. semiconductor industry would grow 15 percent during 1987, to about $10 billion, and that the global semiconductor industry will expand to $30 billion, up about 14 percent over 1986.

Growth in the Asia-Pacific region outside Japan should account for about 35 percent of that growth, Junkins said.

Rebels hold out in demand of amnesty for rights abuses

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Rebels led by a cashiered army major accused of helping run a detention and torture center held out at a provincial garrison today in demand of amnesty for officers accused of human rights violations.

President Raul Alfonsin summoned the commanders of Argentina's five Arm. corps to an emergency meeting today to assess the rebellion, considered the gravest crisis of his 40-month-old civil government.

Alfonsin appealed to the rebels at a 500-man paratroop regiment near the western city of Cordoba to surrender in a nationally broadcast speech Thursday night. He declared that "the democcracy of the Argentines is not negotiable."

An estimated 150,000 flag-waving demonstrators gathered outside the national Congress building in Buenos Aires and roared their approval of Alfonsin's speech amplified over loudspeakers. Similar, though smaller, "in support of democracy" rallies were held in all of the nation's major cities, including Cordoba, 440 miles northwest of the capital.

Gen. Antonio Fichera, commander of the Third Army Corps, which is based in Cordoba, issued a communique saying his troops, which include the paratroop regiment, would respond to all orders "except those referring to military repression against other units."

The major, Ernesto Guillermo Barreiro, took refuge in the 14th Paratroop Regiment late Wednesday in defiance of federal judges seeking his testimony regarding atrocities committed at La Perla detention camp near Cordoba during the 1976-1983 rightist military dictatorship. Human rights groups say Barreiro was an officer at the camp and participated in abductions, torture and murder of suspected leftists.

He had been considered likely to be formally charged after providing testimony.

Government officials said Barreiro, who was declared "in rebellion" and cashiered Thursday by the Defense

Ministry, was backed by about 15 officers and an undetermined number of enlisted men.

The rebels issued a communique demanding amnesty for all military officers accused of human rights abuses and the resignation of Army Chief of Staff Gen. Hector Rios Erenu and his replacement by someone meeting their approval. They also demanded an end to what they described as the administration's hostility toward the military.

Alfonsin, who had traveled to his hometown of Chascomus, 70 miles south of Buenos Aires, for Easter weekend, flew back to the capital to chair two emergency Cabinet meetings on the rebellion. He addressed the nation from the Congress, where congressmen, politicians, labor, civic and human rights leaders were assembled.

Argentina has been plagued by military coups for most of the century, with only one civilian government completing its term since 1930.

Alfonsin's election in 1983 ended nearly seven years of military rule that included harsh repression of leftists and other dissidents. An investigatory commission named by Alfonsin shortly after his election concluded that about 9,000 people were abducted, torture for information and killed by security forces during a so-called "dirty war" in the late 1970s. Human rights leaders say the figure is closer to 30,000.

Telephone strike over

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Telephone workers ended an eight-day-old strike early Thursday, agreeing to 56 percent wage hikes.

Most telephone service had continued without serious disruption during the nationwide strike, although repair work was reported to be slow. Cuts on six large cables after the strike began, in what authorities said may have been sabotage, put about 80,000 telephones out of service.

About 32,000 employees of the Mexican Telephone Co. went on strike, but continued to work because the government took over the company under an emergency law that allows it to keep essential services in operation. The government has majority ownership in the firm.

Negotiations reopened after the Mexican Telephone Workers' Union, one of the strongest in the country, withdrew a demand for emergency wage increases of 23 percent retroactive to Jan. 1, when the minimum wage was raised by that amount.

They agreed to a 38 percent increase in the annual contract renewal, 18 percent emergency raises and 2 percent in fringe benefits, retroactive to April 1.

Envoy says Japan will not make concessions to stave off sanctions

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will not make major trade concessions to persuade the United States to lift sanctions against Japanese industry, a special envoy for Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said today.

But former Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, who will go to Washington Sunday as Nakasone's representative, said he would offer "concrete measures" aimed at easing growing trade tensions between Japan and the United States.

The Reagan administration is expected to announce today $300 million worth of punitive tariffs on an array of Japanese electronic products. The sanctions are in retaliation for what Washington contends is Japanese "dumping" of semiconductors, or computer chips, in overseas markets.

Dumping is the selling of a product at a price below its production cost in an effort to open or expand markets.

Japan denies the charge.

The United States has announced a list of items possibly subject to tariffs of up to 100 percent. They include computers, disk drives, television sets, pocket calculators, radio-tape players, communications satellites, surveying equipment and photographic film.

Abe told a news conference Japan will not try to have the sanctions removed by striking deals with the United States on several key issues in U.S.-Japan trade relations — supercomputers, telecommunications, construction and agriculture.

"We are not at all thinking of making a concession here and there in exchange for lifting the sanctions," he said.

He said he was confident the measures he plans to propose to U.S. officials for expanding domestic demand and boosting imports in Japan would help ease tensions.

The United States wants to see a decrease in its trade deficit with Japan.

TABC agent recalls humor in tracking down bootleggers

By CLIFF MCINTYRE
Texarkana Gazette

TEXARKANA (AP) — "What's in the trunk of your car?" Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission Agent Gibson "Hoot" Hadaway asked in his thundering voice.

"Oh, just some water, Mr. Hoot," the suspected bootlegger answered meekly.

"Mind if I look," Hadaway asked. The suspect nodded his permission.

Cases of Gypsy Rose wine were laid bare as the trunk lid popped open.

"Oh, lordy, another of God's miracles," the moonshiner proclaimed, rolling his eyes heavenward.

Hadaway, grinning from ear to ear, swears the story is true and is a matter of court record. It is but one of hundreds of humorous incidents in his 24-year career, 16 of which have been spent in Bowie County.

"The TABC is the police agency over all licensed premises," Hadaway says. That includes private clubs, liquor stores and any other businesses that are licensed to deal in alcoholic beverages.

Hadaway has primary responsibility for three Northeast Texas counties — Bowie, Cass and Morris and assists fellow agents in the 14-county Paris district of the TABC.

There are 16 private clubs in Bowie County, three private clubs in Morris County and five private clubs and two package stores in Cass County. It is Hadaway's duty to make sure all the licensed premises adhere to the law, and to halt the flow of untaxed beverages, including those brought in from neighboring states and the home-grown kind made in a still.

Untaxed alcohol is a big concern of the TABC — which earns more than $348 million per year for the state while operating on a comparatively modest budget of $20 million, he says.

The TABC also works narcotics cases, mostly those that may involve a licensed establishment.

"We would prefer to work narcotics cases with police agencies whose primary purpose is narcotics enforcement," Hadaway says. "We will work it alone when we are not able to get assistance."

"Narcotics is worked the same way as liquor," he says. "It takes time, surveillance and patience."

He has been known to spend as long as two days in the woods to apprehend a moonshiner.

A current focus of his investigations are illegal keg parties, where an adult purchases a keg of beer and charges teen-agers admittance to a party, without charging directly for the beer. "That's the same as bootlegging in Texas," Hadaway says.

A good part of Hadaway's surveillance activity revolves around liquor stores on the Arkansas side of Texarkana, usually on State Line Avenue. Using binoculars, Hadaway watches for possible sales to Texas teen-agers and for large sales.

Special puppets teaching children about handicapped

By SHARON SANDERS
Mount Pleasant Daily Tribune

MOUNT PLEASANT (AP) — Mark has cerebral palsy, Reynaldo is blind. Both are puppets, part of an extraordinary troupe "peopled" by three education specialists.

Martha Collins, a management assistant at Region VIII Education Service Center, was drafted as a puppeteer a couple of years ago by Debbie Porter, an early childhood consultant at the center, and Utley Nowlin, an early childhood intervention program specialist. They needed a third for one of their scripts.

Ms. Porter had seen the puppets at an early childhood meeting, came back and ordered them for Region VIII. Each puppet comes with three or four scripts. There are puppets representing a blind child, a deaf one, one who is mentally retarded, learning disabled, emotionally disturbed. There are several non-handicapped puppets and every script has a non-handicapped child in it.

"We go out to the schools and present our shows, mostly to fourth grade classes, because fourth grade seems to be the optimum age for them to accept us," says Ms. Collins. "The point is to give them information about handicapped children and to show them they are not to be afraid of them."

She says often a teacher will call and say, "I have a blind child in my class. I'd like you to bring the blind puppet." They will take Reynaldo, with his white cane, and some of the non-handicapped puppets as well, "so it won't look too obvious," says Ms. Collins.

"We alter the script if there's anything the teacher particularly wants us to get across," she says.

The puppets were developed by a special education teacher in Washington, D.C., Barbara Aiello. "She had a class with some cerebral palsy children in it and she was getting ready to mainstream this one child into a regular class. It was a failure. She realized she had prepared him for the class but had not prepared the class for him. So she came up with Mark, the cerebral palsy puppet," says Ms. Collins.

Ms. Collins and Ms. Porter presented what they call their "standard script" recently to the children who attended Alpha Chi Delta's Day of Etiquette and Grooming. They dress completely in black clothing, practicing a form of Japanese puppetry called "boon ra choo," in which the puppeteers are visible but become almost "invisible" during the performance.

Ms. Collins introduced Mark, who comes complete with a tiny and authentic wheelchair (it was built by a wheelchair company) while Ms. Porter worked the puppet.

"I'd like you to meet Mark. He has cerebral palsy. It's something he was born with and you can't catch it. He can't talk real well, so you have to listen carefully," she says.

The children do listen carefully, says Ms. Collins.

Service will pay bills - for fee

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Tim O'Neil wants to pay your bills for you — for a fee.

He figures there are two ways to make bill-paying easier — either make more money or find someone to take care of the task for you. Now, he's paying his own bills, along with those of a dozen or so others. O'Neil, 29, and Ed Koontz, 32, started EZ Budget, a bill-paying service, about 18 months ago.

It works this way: The clients change their billing address to EZ Budget's post office box number, and pay Koontz and O'Neil a set amount twice a month.

Traveling artist is 'gun-for-hire for culture'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Sheila Hicks, the world-traveling artist whose tapestries now hang in 39 countries, considers herself a "gun-for-hire for culture."

Described by the Metropolitan Museum of Art as "one of the founders of the contemporary fiber movement," Miss Hicks designs textiles. The Metropolitan chose one of her works, "Linen Lean-to," to hang in the inaugural show when the museum opened its 20th-century wing in January.

"I also design textiles for fashion and furnishing — place mats and 100 other things," she says. "It would seem that artists frown upon making utilitarian things. I've tried to keep a delicate course in walking both tightropes simultaneously, realizing people were taking potshots from both sides."

On the art side, her textiles now hang in many of the world's most-famous museums, as well as government buildings, residences and places like Ford Foundation in New York.

"For the last 20 years I've been a gun-for-hire for culture," says Miss Hicks, who makes her home in Paris.

"In India," she explains, "a hand-weaving factory that's the largest and oldest in the world hired me to design textiles for the export market. The high-style markets had told them their things were well-made but the colors and designs could be better. Why didn't they get somebody like Sheila Hicks to help them?"

"They're now marketed throughout the world and some of the designs we initiated 20 years ago are still in production."

"In Morocco, the government hired me to come renovate their handmade pile carpets. My great bylaw is, do not disturb a culture. We went back to the great and beautiful old textiles and looked for the roots and essence and just strengthened and reinforced that — cleaned up the show."

Hotel architects began recommending her. "Sometimes I create entire environments of things that would go in every room, textiles, artwork," she says. "It became a mission, of wanting to improve our culture, in the sense of finding something I liked to put my cup of coffee on."

"I started publishing more and more, to encourage other people to take up the cause of beauty in the environment."

Though she keeps an apartment and studio in New York, Miss Hicks has lived for the past 20 years in Paris. She has a studio there "where I design the tapestries and assistants help me make them." She also teaches at the Fontainebleau School of Art, Architecture and Music.

Though she leads an international life, her roots are in the Midwest.

Family farm is home for exotic animals

FAIRFIELD (AP) — Linda Red says everybody wants to know how it all started.

"We kept reading about them, and they just looked real different," she said. "We just thought it would be interesting to try some."

So about two years ago, Linda and Curtis Red along with Curtis' parents, Eldred and Lula Mae Red, started the unusual collection.

They bought a pair of ostriches from an Oklahoma man. Then it was only a matter of time before their flightless flock began to expand.

Now the family owns five ostriches, six emu and three rheas.

The exotic birds roam the Reds' pastures on U.S. Highway 84 east of Fairfield and grab the attention of more than a few passing travelers.

"People are always stopping and looking," said Linda Red, who lives with her husband in Grand Prairie. They visit her husband's parents near Fairfield on weekends and help care for the peculiar pets.

Although the ostriches are large — weighing up to 350 pounds and standing as tall as eight feet — the birds basically are friendly.

Sheba and Solomon, a pair of 2-year-old redneck ostriches, often are curious and use their large beaks to poke about.

"She wants to see if you've got anything good to eat — it might be your arm," Mrs. Red said as Sheba extended her long neck. "Of course, if you've got a hat or a cap on, they'll grab it off right away and run across the field."

Sheba and Solomon are now old enough to mate.

The Reds enjoyed their first pair of ostriches so much, they decided to branch out, and in August they bought three young blue ostriches that were just a foot tall.

Two of the three, which now stand more than six feet, allow themselves to be petted.

"They have a personality — they're not just like a chicken," Mrs. Red said. "We just enjoy playing with them and having them around."

The ostriches occasionally take off running suddenly and swiftly. The birds can move as fast as 40 mph.

The Reds also are fond of their emu and rheas, also earth-bound birds, but smaller than ostriches.

One of the family's pair of emus — named Fred and Wilma after the Flintstones cartoon characters — have laid eggs. The female emu lays the eggs, but the male builds the nest and sits on the eggs to hatch them.

The same is true for the rheas, Mrs. Red said. Ostriches take turns sitting on the eggs.

Grazing the pastures alongside the Reds' feathered friends are goats and deer. But not just any deer. Not just any goats.

The deer are fallow and sika and the goats are African Pygmies.

One favorite pair of twin Pygmy goats named Honey and Baby appear destined to remain tame. "I don't know if they'll ever be able to move up to the goat house," Mrs. Red said.

Linda and Curtis Red's 24-year-old son, Michael, also visits the family farm and takes an interest in the animals.

When Curtis retires and they are able to spend more time with the animals, the family plans to raise wallabies.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

ALL NATURE Proclaims A RISEN SAVIOUR

AT EASTER... trees and flowers blossom into a new life. AT EASTER... we celebrate our Saviour's rising to a new life, and the promise that we shall have this new life too. Attend Church Easter Day and join others in celebrating this great victory.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Church planning sunrise service

The annual Easter Sunrise Service of Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd, will again be in the "Shadow of the Crosses." People planning to attend the special service should be at the church around 7 a.m. to be ready for the sunrise meeting. There will be group singing, special music and an Easter message by Pastor John Denton. Doughnuts, coffee and juice will be served in the Fellowship Hall following the service. Church Music Director Dicky McGahan is in charge of a special presentation and will lead group singing. A nursery will be provided in the church facility for children through 3 years of age. For further information, call the church offices at 665-0842 or 665-0843 or call the pastor at 665-5357.

Church of God to hold revival

Revival services will be conducted at the Church of God, 1123 Gwendolen, Wednesday through Sunday, April 22-26. Weeknight services will begin at 7:30 p.m., with Sunday services at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Rev. Otho Stegall from Paris, Texas will be the evangelist. Rev. Stegall served as a pastor in the Church of God in Texas for several years before retiring from the pastorate in February 1986 to enter the evangelistic ministry. Pastor T.L. Henderson said the public is invited to attend the special revival services next week.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Therefore, my dear brothers, stand firm. Let nothing move you. Always give yourselves fully to the work of the Lord, because you know that your labor in the Lord is not in vain. (I Corinthians 15:58 NIV)

Several years ago, my oldest daughter was asked to play her trombone during a church anthem. On the day of her performance, she moved out of her permanent residency in an old pair of oversized, faded overalls, put on a dress and did a lovely job of pretending to be a girl. She was stationed in the balcony of the church with her trombone extended over the balcony rail. Everything was ready as she awaited her signal to play — everything except for the broken spit valve on her trombone. However, she persevered; she played well and the music was inspiring. And the worst that happened was a few Baptist friends seated on the ground floor got baptized by sprinkling!

More seriously, a friend tells of traveling to a small mission in mountain country. Her job was to meet with the children's workers at the mission and explain to them how to use the Sunday school material for children.

The workers' first comment to her when she arrived was, "Our biggest problem is we don't have much to work with."

Intending to use the information as a starting point for their work together, she asked to see what they did have in the way of supplies. She was stunned to find they had been teaching with nothing but a plastic margarine dish containing three broken crayons. In spite of the most abject poverty, the teachers had persisted in God's service. God doesn't require Christians to serve Him with perfection of execution and results. He does expect us to willingly serve with courage and determination.

ATLANTA (AP)—The Georgia Baptist Convention's executive committee has asked Baptist-affiliated Mercer University to expel any student who poses for Playboy magazine after news reports indicated several coeds had agreed to do so. R. Kirby Godsey, president of the 5,200-student university in Macon, Ga., says it has advised students not to pose for the magazine, but that it would violate civil rights laws to expel them for doing so, since they are defined adults at 18. Godsey added: "Obviously, Playboy hopes we will expel a student and bring about a lawsuit, to give them the kind of publicity they seek."

First Baptist Church observing 80th anniversary

The First Baptist Church, 203 N. West, will be combining its Easter services this Sunday with a celebration of the church's 80th anniversary.

Founded in April 1907 with 22 members, the church has grown to more than 2,000 resident members with a Sunday school enrollment of more than 3,000.

During the years since, the First Baptist Church facilities have grown from its first meetings in a school building to a large, multi-storied brick structure and related facilities taking up nearly a whole block near downtown Pampa.

Former pastors, staff and church members have been invited to join with the present congregation in the special services and dinner scheduled throughout the day Sunday. (See related article this page.)

A special historical booklet, entitled Eighty Years of Faithful Witness, has been prepared by Don Egerton for distribution at the special anniversary.

In the booklet, current pastor Dr. Darrel Rains states, "For 80 years members of this church have continued the witness, worship and work of Jesus Christ in this city. This church has been built upon a love for Jesus Christ, a heart for missions and a commitment to serve."

In addition to the regular worship services and Sunday school classes, the church's ministries include a child development center, a special education ministry, church choirs, mission trips, summer camps, television and radio ministries, Vacation Bible School, the Sunshine Club, a bus ministry, a Mother's Day Out, marriage enrichment, singles ministry, a puppet ministry and Bible study.

Dr. Darrel Rains
Present pastor

The church's growth began with a group of 10 Baptists who met in November 1906 to organize a Baptist church in the Pampa community.

On Saturday afternoon, April 6, 1907, they saw their dream fulfilled with the organization of the First Baptist Church with 22 members in Pampa. In September of that same year the congregation called its first pastor, Rev. J.W. Whatley.

The first worship meetings were held on Sunday afternoons since they shared the same building with the Union Church.

In 1910 the first building was purchased and moved to what is presently the site of the Combs-Worley Building. In September 1915 another building, called the "Stone Church," was constructed at a cost of $3200. The church was moved to its present site in the 200 block of West Street.

In 1929, with the oil field boom bringing more members into the church, a new building was constructed at a cost of more than $100,000. In the next 20 years the church continued to grow in membership, with an educational building added in 1949 at a cost of $170,000.

Later another educational building was added in 1961 at a cost of $294,000.

Then, on Dec. 23, 1973 the main building housing the auditorium, church offices, class rooms, choir rehearsal rooms, church parlor and library was totally destroyed by fire on that Sunday evening. The north educational building was extensively damaged by smoke and water, while the west educational building was only slightly damaged.

Continuing their meetings in the Fellowship Hall, the congregation prepared to build a new structure for the sanctuary. Church members cleared and repaired the north educational building. All church records had been saved, though some had been damaged by water, and were kept in temporary offices in the west educational building.

Under the direction of then pastor Rev. Claude Cone, the congregation approved architect plans for a newer and more modern sanctuary area with 32,000 square feet of floor space, a seating capacity of 1,200 and a $75,000 pipe organ.

To finance the project, the congregation entered into a cooperative effort called "Together We Build," a 150-week funding program designed, tested and supervised by denominational personnel in Nashville, Tenn., for just such emergencies as this.

Gifts and offerings far surpassed anything experienced before in the history of the First Baptist Church in Pampa. On Oct. 31, 1976 the new sanctuary and related facilities were dedicated, with the project having cost more than $1.5 million. The entire debt was paid off by Aug. 31, 1978.

Still the church continued to grow and to expand its services. In 1978 property was acquired across the street east of the sanctuary. In 1980 the child development center was instituted, with more than 100 children now involved, including kindergarten and preschool classes. In 1984 the new north educational building was completed, with remodeling of the original educational building also undertaken, at a cost of $2.25 million.

The church has built a medical and dental building at Porvenir, Mexico, and staffed it at intervals with professional personnel from the church membership. A lodge was constructed at Pan Fork Encampment near Wellington in 1980-1981 for camp use.

Harder to measure than the tangible building projects, though, has been the work of the congregation members.

Teams of volunteers were going out to Korea, Spain, Taiwan, Indonesia, Italy, Bolivia, Ecuador, Australia and Brazil to participate in evangelistic crusades. Choirs were going on tours. The church has provided buses to pick up people wanting to attend church and Sunday school. New church and Sunday school programs have been undertaken to reach more people.

Over the years the First Baptist Church has assisted in organizing four missions in Pampa which are now churches: Calvary Baptist, Hobart Baptist, Highland Baptist and Barrett Baptist.

The church has seen 12 pastors: Rev. J.W. Whatley, 1907-1912; Rev. J.W. Barker, 1913-1916; Rev. William Park, 1916-1919; Rev. C.E. Lancaster, 1919-1920 and 1930-1937; Rev. H.R.

Church to hold Easter services

First Presbyterian Church will again host an Easter Morning Sunrise Service this year at the property of Roy and Margaret Sparkman, 4 Meadowlark Lane.

Entrance to the property is at 20th and Holly. The Rev. Robert Graham, interim pastor of First Presbyterian Church, said the public is invited to attend.

Coffee and hot chocolate will be served after the service, to begin at 6:30 a.m.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m., Presbyterians will hold a special observance of Good Friday at the church, located at Gray and Montagu. Special music will be featured.

Rev. Graham said the public is invited to come and be guided by the songs, prayers and scriptural accounts of Christ's death.

"Come give your hearts over to the remembrance of this tragic yet glorious event," Graham said.

A nursery will be provided.

In addition to the Easter service, the church will celebrate Easter at its regular 10:45 a.m. worship time Sunday.

Graham said the emphasis will be on "the resurrection of our Lord and the hope that it sets before us." His sermon is entitled "He Is Risen."

Special music also will be featured during the 10:45 Easter morning service.

Chronology of First Baptist Church

Following is a brief chronology of the history of the First Baptist Church in Pampa:

- November 1906 - A meeting was held for the purpose of organizing a Baptist church in Pampa.
- April 1907 - Twenty-two members organized to create the First Baptist Church in Pampa. In that same year J.W. Whatley was called as the first pastor.
- June 1910 - Land was purchased and plans were made to construct a building where the Combs-Worley Building is presently located.
- September 1915 - The "Stone Church" building was finished and dedicated. Later a service was held to raise the $3200 indebtedness incurred and the entire amount was pledged in one service.
- April 1927 - With the oil field boom making the "Stone Church" inadequate, the church accepted plans for a new structure to be located on the present site of the church.

- 1929 - The $100,000 building was completed. Sunday school attendance reached a new high of 440 and church membership rose to 625.
- October 1949 - The North Educational Building was completed at a cost of $170,000. Sunday school attendance increased to 1,000 in the early 1950s.
- October 1961 - More educational space was added with the construction of a 3-story facility known as the West Educational Building at a cost of $294,000.
- December 1973 - Fire destroyed the sanctuary on Dec. 23. The Fellowship Hall in the West Educational Building was used while plans were made for a new worship center.
- October 1976 - The new worship center was completed and dedicated, with office space, parlor, library, choir room and additional educational space included. The program required $1.5 million. The debt was retired within two years of the building completion.

- August 1978 - The Moore property east of the sanctuary was purchased to ease crowded Sunday school space. Later the west educational space was redesigned and the Fellowship Hall was divided with operable walls to further add Sunday school space.
- March 1984 - The North Educational Building was completed with four floors of educational space housing the Youth and Adult Sunday schools. The project, with a goal of $2.25 million, also led to remodeling of the original educational building.
- 1986 - Resident membership reached nearly 2,100, with Sunday school enrollment at 3,125.

THE DAY HE WORE MY CROWN

Come, see and hear an exciting musical drama, "The Day He Wore My Crown," presented by Briarwood Full Gospel Church, 1800 W. Harvester. Briarwood is formerly Lamar Full Gospel Assembly.

With a cast of sixty-five presenting Christ's Resurrection Story, we believe you will be touched by God's Spirit as you witness the agony of betrayal and crucifixion and witness the miracle of resurrection and assentation by the living Lord.

Pastor Gene Allen and the Briarwood Congregation warmly invite you to share with us in this worship experience Friday, April 17th at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, April 19th at 7:00 p.m. and Monday, April 20th at 7:30 p.m.

An important friend with considerable clout will take a personal interest in you in the year ahead. Under this tutelage, you will become involved in areas that have been barred to you previously. ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have the happy faculty today for doing and saying things that arouse enthusiasm in others. Friends will want to copy your example. Major changes are ahead for Aries in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Something advantageous is developing for you now, but there is only a slim chance you'll learn of it today. An associate is busy putting the pieces together. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Avail yourself of any opportunities presented today to meet new people. Friendships you make in this cycle will prove lucky. CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you use your ingenuity today, no one will be able to outshine you at the marketplace. You'll know how to make your product, price and service the most appealing. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The associations you are apt to enjoy the most today will be with friends who have adventurous spirits. Dullards will turn you off. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you want to get the consent of your family regarding a change you'd like to make, this is a good day to broach the subject. Lay it on the table. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You've got important pluses going for you today: You're a fast thinker, and you have good judgment. More important, you'll know how to implement your ideas. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're in a strong financial trend, so capitalize on all your opportunities. There is money in the pipeline again today. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't do things in half measures today. If you have a recreational activity planned, keep your schedule free from all mundane intrusions so you can truly enjoy it. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, if you apply yourself, you should be able to put the finishing touches on a tedious, drawn-out project. Completion will give you peace of mind. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) In case you're wondering, you will be welcome to drop in on an old friend today without an invitation. Your pal is as anxious to see you as you are to see him. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Be watchful for unusual opportunities. They're more likely to occur in areas that affect your status, career or earnings.

Bear dolls teach dressing skills

By BETH COTTEN

My early parenting philosophy was: They learn best by doing. In other words, let them do what they want.

It was a mistake, but it produced some entertaining moments. I especially enjoyed watching my toddlers get dressed. Eat your heart out, Madonna, these kids had a real flair for fashion.

It was several years later, when I realized the untied shoes were a result of unlearned skills rather than a fashion statement, that I changed my philosophical tune.

With a little guidance, the children learned the skills they needed for the simple task of dressing. It took very little effort on my part — I made some zip, button and tie dolls for them to practice on while playing.

This project, the dress-me bears, is another such teaching toy. Honors go to Julie Stephani, a very talented craft designer from Minnesota.

The bears are cuddly and soft, about 24 inches tall. They wear complete sets of clothing, both outer and under. They are inexpensive to make at home in just a few afternoons.

Our detailed plans include a materials list, full-size patterns and illustrated step-by-step instructions for making the dolls and their clothing.

Also available is our kid's craft booklet, a treat to have on hand when the kids are out of school. It includes 12 unique projects for young people to make, suitable for 6- to 13-year-olds.

To order plans for the dress-me bears, specify Project No. 2132; or for the craft booklet, specify No. 200. Send $4.95 for either item, or save a dollar and receive both for only $8.90.

Mail to: Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. Add $2.95 for a catalog, featuring $16 worth of discount coupons.

To make both bear bodies, all you need is a one-pound bag of fiberfill and 3/4 yard of soft velour or fleece fabric.

For each bear, cut two torsos, four arms (with mitten-shaped hands), four legs (with rounded feet), two round heads and four ears. Assemble the arms and legs, leaving an opening in the seam.

Baste the arms and legs to one torso, and sew the torsos together with the arms and legs sandwiched between. Turn right side out and stuff the arms and legs through the seam openings.

Stitch back and forth through the knees and elbows to make flexible joints.

Fuse a piece of interfacing to one of the head pieces, and embroider the facial features. Glue on a black felt nose and two bright pink cheek spots.

Assemble the two ears and pin to one of the head pieces; then stitch the heads together with the ears between. Turn right side out, stuff and whipstitch to the body.

The girl bear wears purchased socks, panties, a waistline dress with back zipper and half sleeves, a frilly apron and felt shoes. Cut the dress in six pieces: bodice front, two bodice backs, one skirt and two sleeves.

Stitch the bodices together at the shoulders; then gather the sleeves and set them in. Elasticize the sleeve hems and finish with lace or eyelet. Sew the underarm and side seams.

Stitch a 2-inch section of the center back seam of the skirt, from the lower edge upward. Press the remaining seam allowances. Gather the upper edge and stitch to the bodice.

Finish the neck edge with lace trim. Install a 7-inch zipper in the dress back opening, and top with a hook and eye. Hem the dress and topstitch eyelet or lace trim along the hem.

Use a length of wide, gathered eyelet as the apron. Hem the ends and stitch a length of ribbon to the top, leaving long ties.

The panties are bloomer style, with elastic casings at the waist and legs. The felt Maryjane shoes tie on top.

The boy bear wears purchased socks, undershorts, a round-collared shirt, overalls and felt shoes. The shirt has raglan sleeves and self facings along the front placket. Interface the collar and plackets, and make the closure with buttons or snaps.

The overalls are made to fit at the waist, with straps that attach on the front with buttons. Use large buttons, so your children won't be frustrated.

The undershorts are elasticized at the waist and legs, and the shoes are just like the girl bear's except that they have tongues.

With a little practice, your toddlers will learn dressing skills in practically no time, and with no tears. What they choose to wear is another story.

Bears are cuddly teaching toys to make at home.

Baby pageant winner

Cara Marie Pryor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Pryor of Pampa, was named Queen of her division, 1- to 12-month-olds, at the recent 1987 Panhandle Area Baby Pageant in Amarillo. She also placed second in the beauty portion of the pageant.

Don't call off-duty police officers

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Denny) is a police officer, and our neighbors know it. Last week a neighbor called Denny while he was home — off duty — and asked him to meet him about a mile from our house. We thought this neighbor was having car trouble. When Denny got there, he found some guy holding a woman hostage with a gun! Not only was valuable time lost until the police arrived, but Denny was totally unprepared for the situation and could have been killed. Another time, a neighbor lady called Denny and asked him to come over and arrest some guy because he had cashed her pay check without her permission!

Abby, why do people think that because off-duty police officers are armed they are always available? (Cops carry their weapons to protect themselves from criminals who might recognize them as cops and try to "waste" them.)

Police officers are taught in the academy that if they see a crime committed, they should try to be a good witness, but leave the law enforcing to the cops in that jurisdiction. (Most cops don't appreciate outsiders butting in.)

The bottom line is this: If a cop is needed, don't waste time calling one who is home off duty. Call the station.

I hope you think this is important enough for your column.

DENNY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It is. Thanks for the tip.

DEAR ABBY: I identified with

Dear Abby

that long-suffering woman who stayed married to a physically filthy man for 47 years. I was married for 10 years to a man who never showered. He wore his underwear for 24 hours a day for over a month at a time. I finally left him when I had to put a tissue over my nose when we made love. (Yes, he expected lovemaking regularly!)

But do you know what really ticked me off? It was his adoring family — especially his mother and sister — who kept insinuating that his filthy condition was my fault!

Outside of hiring two thugs to throw the clothes off his back and trip him under a shower, I can't imagine what they expected me to do.

We are not married anymore for obvious reasons, and his family still thinks I'm crazy for giving up this prize. What do you think?

HAD ENOUGH

DEAR HAD: I think 10 years with such a man is about 9 years, 11 months and 3 weeks too long.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a gorgeous beard that neither one of us wants him to shave, but it's so stiff it irritates my face, which becomes raw and abraded from the roughness. We've tried hair conditioners, but they don't help.

Can you give us any advice on how to save our love life — short of shaving his beard?
SORE IN LOVE

DEAR SORE: Can you fashion some kind of protective covering on the order of a ski mask? Or perhaps a "snood" to cover the beard? (You may break up laughing in the middle of a love scene, so keep your eyes closed.)

This is no gag, it's a serious problem, so if any of my readers has a solution, I'm open for suggestions. With moustaches and beards in vogue again, how do other lovebirds manage?

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a collection of snappy comebacks for the question, "How come a nice girl like you never married?" The best response I ever heard was: "Because I never found a man who could stand to be as happy as I would have made him."

Heritage Foundation elects board members

Several Pampa area residents were elected to serve a two-year term on the board of directors of the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation during the foundation's annual meeting held recently in Amarillo.

Others are entering the second year of their two-year terms.

Those who were re-elected to serve through April 1989 included Jay Godwin of Canadian, Mrs. D.D. Payne of Pampa and Mrs. Ralph Randel of Panhandle.

Godwin is a financial committee board member.

Board members entering the second year of a two-year term, to end in 1988, included Mrs. Randel as first vice president, Tom Abraham of Canadian, Mrs. W.R. Brown of Wheeler, Mrs. Janie Hathoot of Canadian, Mrs. W. Calvin Jones of Pampa and Eugene M. Phillips of Panhandle.

The Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation is the producer of the musical drama, "Texas," which plays outdoors each summer in Palo Duro Canyon near Amarillo.

"I Love New York" promotion specialist Linda Fisher was guest speaker. She spoke on tourism as an industry.

Reports during the meeting highlighted a $98,000 grant from the Don & Sybil Harrington Foundation for new sound and added light, and another $5,000 donation for other improvements. Another $5,000 was received from an anonymous donor.

A.W. Lair of Canyon, president, announced the awarding of another 25-year contract with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

Area nights, instituted in 1986, were such a success that Margaret Harper, founder, stated they would continue during the next few years.

The 1987 "Texas" season begins June 10, and the show plays nightly except Sundays at 8:30 p.m. through Aug. 22. For reservations, call the "Texas" office in Canyon at 655-2181 or write Box 268, Canyon, 79015.

1880 census soundex is confusing

Using the 1880 census soundex is confusing because it is not complete. It does not list every household in the census, only those that had someone age 10 or under in the house. Occasionally, children were visiting grandparents and will be found on the soundex while their parents were just a short distance away. Do not assume that they were deceased before checking the census. To use the system, you must have a three digit code based on the following:

- 1 — B F P V
- 2 — C G J K Q S X Z
- 3 — D T
- 4 — L
- 5 — M N
- 6 — R
- 0 — No consonants

Disregard the consonants W, H and Y, and the vowels a, e, i, o, u.

The first letter of the given name determines the section of the code. Beginning with the second letter, replace it with the appropriate number or disregard it, whichever is necessary. When you have three numbers, you have the necessary code, regardless of how long the name. Use the code to locate the film and then the names will be alphabetical by Christian name. Watch for all the possibilities for the given name, including initials and nicknames.

Gena on Genealogy

If the middle initial was on the census, it will change the place on the soundex. Most libraries that have the census soundex have the method of indexing posted. Make a copy so that you can code your names at home to avoid using your library time.

The 1900 and 1910 soundexes are complete and do not have the "under 10" rule. Persons that were enumerated within a household other than the immediate family will also be listed on the soundex. This is an excellent way of finding "lost" cousins! Happy Hunting!

USC standout has Pampa connection

Anno spearheaded Trojans' defense

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

When the annual National Football League draft kicks off April 28, a Pampa grandmother will be watching the television proceedings with a keen eye.

Mrs. Lois Robertson's grandson, Sam Anno of Santa Monica, California, is expected to be drafted into the NFL ranks this year. Anno is a 6-3, 235-pound senior linebacker, who completed his senior season starring for the University of Southern California Trojans.

Anno, who was a high school standout at Santa Monica, has made annual visits to Pampa to stay with his grandparents.

"He's been coming here every year since he was four or five. He was homesick the first time he stayed with us and he would come in from playing and lay his head down on my lap," Mrs. Robertson recalled. "He got over his homesickness fast and he just loved to come to Pampa."

Anno, an inside linebacker, was a first-team All-Pac Ten selection and called the plays for USC's defense. Anno has played in four bowl games and Mrs. Robertson saw him play in the 1985 Rose Bowl when USC defeated UCLA 17-13. Anno made a crucial tackle in that victory, hitting the Bruins' Eric Ball at the goalline and causing a fumble.

"He's such a lovely, young man," Mrs. Robertson said. "He's very special to us."

Anno, who was in town right after Christmas for a visit, hopes to go as high as the sixth round in the draft, related his mother, Jackie Anno.

"He doesn't really care who he plays for. He just wants to be able to contribute to the team," Mrs. Anno said.

Anno made the starting team as a junior at USC and is the team's second leading tackler. He's had as many as 14 stops in a single game.

Mrs. Anno, who is a registered nurse, is also looking forward to watching the draft on television.

"I just can't wait!" She exclaimed. "I ride the bus to work and I'm always hearing the other mothers bragging on their sons. Now it's going to be my turn."

When most college football fans think of linebackers, a flaky image comes to mind because of the bizarre antics of OU All-American Brian Bosworth. But Mrs. Anno said her son is cut from a different mold.

"Sam likes to have fun, but he's nothing like 'The Boz,'" Mrs. Anno said. "Sam likes to drive around wearing an oxygen mask because of the California fog, but that's as far as he goes."

Anno does have the competitive nature of a Bosworth on the football field.

"Nothing is funny on the field, but football is great fun," Anno was quoted as saying in a player profile published in the USC football program.

Anno, who is a communications major, says his sports heroes are ex-NFL linebackers Dick Butkus and Jack Lambert, according to the USC football program.

USC Coach Ted Tollner said Anno was one of the dominant inside linebackers in the Pac-10 this year.

Mrs. Robertson, whose husband Jack died three years ago, has fond memories of young Sam and his grandfather playing together during the Pampa visits.

"My husband would always set Sam some little goals to do. He would give him so much money if he could run around the block in a certain time and Sam would be back in no time at all," Mrs. Robertson said. "Sam had some happy times in Texas and Pampa always represented Texas to him because the people are so nice."

Lefors defeated by Borger junior varsity

BY JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

In 1983, a man named Ed Biles was head coach of the hapless Houston Oilers.

Invariably, after every loss, Biles would proudly proclaim to the press, "But it was a good loss."

In the case of the Lefors Pirates baseball team, Thursday's 10-2 loss to the Borger Bulldogs could also be considered one of those good losses.

"We cut our errors down," Pirates coach Brent Fountain said. "I think next week when we play Pampa, we'll improve even more."

The bright spot for Lefors was their defense. The Pirates had only 4 errors, compared with the 8 they racked up against Dumas last week.

There were two factors that weighed heavily against Lefors' chances: Bulldog pitcher Ronnie Smith, and the sixth inning.

Smith pitched like a major leaguer against the Pirates, striking out 13, including seven of the last nine outs. He allowed only four hits and walked five.

There seemed a chance Lefors might come away with its first win of the year until the sixth inning, which buried the Pirates for good.

Borger sent nine batters to the plate and scored five runs on four hits. A home run by Smith in the inning was the only round-tripper of the day.

Lefors pitchers also looked like big leaguers — unfortunately, though, they resembled the Texas Rangers staff.

Kirk Kerbo pitched three innings before being lifted due to a sore right arm.

"It's been hurting for about six years, since I was in Little League," Kerbo said. "I'm just trying to save it for district."

In three innings, Kerbo gave up two runs on three hits. He struck out three and walked two.

He was relieved by Kevin Mayfield, who was out last week with the chicken pox.

When he entered the game, Mayfield was the pitcher of record and was subsequently tagged with the loss.

In his first appearance of the season, Mayfield lasted the final three innings, allowing eight runs on nine hits. He struck out only two and walked four.

Dusty Roberson also saw his first action of the season, after he, too, had suffered from chicken pox last week.

The scrappy shortstop had an almost flawless day, pulling in three sharply hit grounders deep in the hole converting all of them for crucial outs.

Lefors' first sacker John Ledbetter takes the peg on an infield grounder.

call hampered play in the Bulldog half of the fourth.

After Borger third baseman Jason Thurman singled to right, leftfielder Steven Burse stepped to the plate.

Burse hit a slow roller to the pitcher. Mayfield scooped it up, turned and threw to first baseman John Ledbetter. Ledbetter stepped on first then quickly tossed the ball to second for an apparent double play.

The third base umpire, though, would have no part of it.

From over 100-feet away, the ump, standing just inside third base, claimed Ledbetter did not step on the bag and called the runner safe at first.

Because of the umpire's ruling,

Burse went on to score the first of two Borger runs in the inning.

In the long run, the errant call mattered not, as Borger finished the day with 10 runs on 12 hits and only one error.

Lefors had two runs on four hits and four errors.

The Pirates next meet the Pampa J.V. Thursday, Apr. 23, at Harvester Field.

Mavs, Rockets tangle tonight

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP)—Round 2 of the "Lone Star NBA War" between the Dallas Mavericks and the Houston Rockets will be played in The Summit Arna in Houston tonight.

The Mavericks won the first round on a 113-107 decision Wednesday night in a game that featured Derek Harper's career-high 31 points, flying fists and hot words.

Al Wood of Dallas and Steve Harris of Houston were ejected for fighting before a noisy sellout crowd of 17,007 fans in Reunion Arena.

Dallas has already clinched a playoff berth and the Midwest Division title. Houston is in the playoffs but the Rockets' position hasn't been determined.

"It should be another exciting game," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta.

"This game had enough fire and enthusiasm where the fans got their money's worth," said Houston Coach Bill Fitch. "In the old days, you might not have had this kind of a game at this stage of the season."

It was the first meeting between the two teams since Motta accused Fitch of manipulating games to avoid the Los Angeles Lakers as long as possible in the playoffs.

Fitch replied by calling Motta's charges "ridiculous."

Motta was suspended a game by the NBA office for the statement.

"It was a crazy game," Harper said. "The intensity came from the words the coaches exchanged. That's why we were so emotional."

Harper said he was proud of Wood for standing his ground in an exchange of punches with Harris in the second period that cleared both benches.

"I told Al Wood he did a good job," Harper said. "I like to see that kind of stuff. I wished I had been in it."

Wood and Harris were ejected from the game at 5:22 in the second period for exchanging punches. Both benches emptied but none of the blows landed. The players will get automatic fines from the NBA office.

Motta downplayed the incident.

"I thought it was a very dull game," Motta said. "I expected some real excitement."

Fitch said little about the flying punches.

"There were a few short tempers out there but it wasn't much," Fitch said. "It's an intense series. I thought Dallas' bench played great and Harper really hurt us. We'll try to get them back when they come to our place Friday night."

Houston's Jim Petersen also missed most of the first half when he suffered a cut over his left eyebrow from a flying elbow.

"The crowd was in the game from the beginning," Dallas' James Donaldson said. "They were booing the Rockets during the introductions and that started the tempo our way."

Houston's Robert Reid said the Mavs "are more physical now than they used to be because of Donaldson. He's a force to be reckoned with in the middle."

It was Dallas' 14th victory in its last 17 games.

Dallas is 28 games over .500 for the first time in its history.

"We're shooting for 56 wins," Motta said. "And I don't plan to change our playing routine when we get to Houston."

Mets overpower Phillies 9-3

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets and Darryl Strawberry are keeping the home runs coming.

The Mets continued their streak of at least one home run in each game this season as Strawberry's fifth of the season led a 9-3 assault of the Philadelphia Phillies on Thursday night.

"I'm not overswinging or overstriding and I'm waiting for my pitch," said Strawberry, who took over the league with four runs batted in for a total of 15. "I'm just swinging well. I've developed good work habits and good things are happening."

What happened to the Phillies was another poor start that has meant a 1-8 record to open the season.

The Mets took a 4-0 lead with the help of two bases-loaded walks by Joe Cowley, 0-2, who has an earned run average of 48.60 in his two starts. Strawberry's two-run homer came in the second inning off reliever Tom Hume, and it made the score 7-0.

Rick Aguilera went eight innings for the victory, his first of the season, allowing nine hits with eight strikeouts. Terry Letch pitched the ninth.

The Mets team record for consecutive games with a home run at the start of the season is 10, set in 1970 and matched in 1975. The major-league record is 13 by the 1954 Chicago Cubs.

The victory enabled the Mets to sweep a three-game series from the Phillies for the first time since 1972, when they took four-and-three-game sets.

In other NL games Thursday, Montreal beat St. Louis 4-3; Pittsburgh defeated Chicago 6-0, and San Diego needed 10 innings to down Los Angeles 3-2.

Expos 4, Cardinals 3

Randy St. Claire struck out pinch-hitter Jack Clark with two runners on to end the game and earn the save.

St. Louis led 2-0 before the Expos rallied for four runs, three a sixth-inning rally that was capped by Tom Foley's two-run double. Ozzie Smith's eighth-inning single brought the Cardinals within one and brought on St. Claire, who got the final two outs in the inning.

The 26-year-old right-hander gave up consecutive one-out singles to Willie McGee and pinch-hitter Curt Ford before getting Mike Laga to pop out and striking out Clark on five pitches.

"He got it by me before I knew what happened," Clark said of the final pitch, which was clocked at 91 mph.

Neal Heaton, 1-1, was the winner, while Bob Forsch, 1-1, was charged with the loss.

Pirates 6, Cubs 0

Bob Kipper threw a four-hitter for his first complete game and shutout in the major leagues. The 22-year-old left-hander had a career-high eight strikeouts and walked one.

"I got ahead of the hitters and I got my offspeed stuff over," Kipper said. "He (Mike Lavalliere) called a great game and that always helps when you're in cahoots with the catcher."

Lavalliere and Andy Van Slyke, both of whom the Pirates obtained in a trade with St. Louis for catcher Tony Pena, had three hits and two runs batted in each.

Van Slyke doubled home one run in the first off Ed Lynch, 1-1, and tripled in the sixth to touch off a four-run rally, which featured Lavalliere's two-run double.

Padres 3, Dodgers 2

Tony Gwynn had the first five-hit game of his career and scored the winning run in the 10th inning as the Padres won for just the second time in 10 games.

Gwynn led off the 10th with his fifth hit — a single off Matt Young, 0-3. Carmelo Martinez followed with a double inside the left-field line as Gwynn scored from first.

"When I got to the bench everybody was congratulating each other," Gwynn said. "Then Carmelo came up to me and said I had missed the hit-and-run (sign). I said, 'You're kidding me. That's going to cost me $1

Pampa visits Levelland for District 1-4A game

The Pampa Harvesters travel to Levelland Saturday to play the Lobos in a District 1-4A baseball game.

Pampa is fourth in the district standings with a 3-3 record while Levelland is tied with Lubbock Estacado for fifth place at 2-4-1.

Pampa teams enter district track meet

Last season at this time the Pampa High girls' track team was undefeated on the way to sweeping district, regional and state championships.

This season the Lady Harvesters have won three of six meets going into the district meet Saturday at Canyon, but the Pampa girls still have a shot at bringing home the top trophy from Austin.

Even though the track roster isn't as heavy with talent this season, the Lady Harvesters still have two of the best relay teams in the state. The 800-meter relay team of Schivone Parker, Yolanda Brown, Laquita Brown and Tanya Lidy hold the school record in the event. The 400-meter relay team missed breaking the school record by 300ths of a second at the Amarillo Relays.

Lidy ranks as the best in the state in the 200 and has lost her speciality only twice in the last three years. Lidy is also right up there as one of the top jumpers. The lanky junior has won the long jump five times this season and came away victorious in the triple jump in three meets.

Andrea Hopkins, a senior, is set to make another charge to the state meet. Hopkins was second in the discus last season at Austin. She's unbeaten in the shot in six meets this season and has lost the discus event only one time.

Tacy Stoddard and Laquita Brown are other regional qualifying hopefuls. Stoddard has won the 1600 and Laquita Brown came away victorious in the triple jump this season.

Pampa is favored to win the district meet while Borger and Lubbock Estacado are expected to battle for the runnerup spot.

In the boys' division, Pampa returns the defending district 3200-meter champion in senior Willie Jacobs, who owns the school record in the event. Jacobs, along with discus thrower Shawn Greene and hurdler Mark Williams, have an excellent shot at qualifying for regionals.

Jacobs has won the 3200 in five of Pampa's six meets this year and has won the 1600 four times. Greene has won the discus event three times this season and Williams has won the 300 IM hurdles twice.

Billy Butler in the high jump, Derrick Ryan, long jump and high jump, and Derick Smith, shot put, also have a chance at advancing.

Canyon is favored to win the team crown, but Pampa could pull some surprises.

Stephenson among favorites in Santa Barbara Golf Open

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — For Jan Stephenson, competing in the $300,000 Santa Barbara Open brings back memories of a faraway place.

"It's so pretty, it reminds me of Australia," Stephenson said of the Sandpiper Golf Course, one of two public courses to be used in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event. "I grew up on courses just like this."

Stephenson was among 144 golfers entered in the inaugural Santa Barbara Open, a 54-hole tournament which offers a $45,000 top prize.

"The (winning) score won't be too many under par, maybe four," Stephenson said.
