Panhandle contends for supercollider

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Dallas Fort-Worth area's super-collider site emerged as the No. 1 selection, but a Panhandle site will accompany it in the national competition for the project.

The Texas National Research Laboratory Commission chose the location south of Dallas that rings Waxahachie by unanimous voice vote Tuesday, but it took a ballot vote to decide between Austin and Amarillo for the second choice.

"The Dallas proposal and the Austin proposal are very similar in my view," said commission chairman Peter Flawn. "The Amarillo proposal, on the other hand, offers a different kind of site, a West Texas kind of site, if you will."

As the state's runner-up site, Amarillo received five votes compared to Austin's three.

"We're ecstatic," said Steve Howerton, chairman of the Dallas-Fort Worth Superconducting Super Collider Authority. "The site won on its technical merits."

Howerton said many things, such as a major airport and the area's amenities, led to commission's top choice. The proposals are to be shipped to the U.S. Department of Energy by Aug. 3.

The decision to include a Panhandle site would assist the state in getting proposed $500 million in bonds to support the project approved by voters, Flawn said.

"We have to pass a bond election or I tell you we won't win. I think we need broad support in the state and with the selection we'll have West Texas support."

Pampa Mayor David McDaniel said he was pleased to hear of the Amarillo site selection. "I think it's great for them," he said. "I think it's excellent," he added, noting that it was a topic of conversation this morning at work.

"Even if it goes no further, it was a good exercise for them," McDaniel said. He said if nothing else, it helped the Amarillo officials to show they can make a good presentation for economic development goals.

If the Amarillo site is finally selected for the project, "Our benefit (in Pampa) is going to be a bit more indirect," the Pampa mayor said. There is a possibility of increased rail service from shipment of materials through Pampa, he said.

But the Happy site "is so far away" there would probably be no direct benefit to Pampa in employment or construction, he said.

But the placement of the super-collider in Happy would strengthen Amarillo's airport position, McDaniel said, and "that might benefit us" from

Reagan offered thanks for aid

By JIM DRINKARD and DAVID ESPO Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's private diary indicates he thanked Saudi King Fahd for his country's secret contributions to the Nicaraguan rebels when the two men met privately at the White House in February 1985, sources said today.

These sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said Reagan's personal notes say that it was Fahd who raised the subject of donations to the Contra cause.

Reagan on Tuesday denied seeking contributions from Fahd for the Contras at a time when U.S. military aid was banned, even though former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, testifying Monday at Congress' Iran-Contra hearings, suggested that the president may have done so.

Saudi officials have denied giving aid to the Contras, or that the president and the Saudi king discussed the subject. But portions of Reagan's handwritten diaries have been made available to congressional investigators probing the Iran-Contra affair, and investigators have said that Saudi Arabia gave a total of $32.5 million to the Contras in 1984 and 1985.

The disclosure came as McFarlane testified for the third day at the joint House-Senate hearings on the Iran-Contra affair. Under questioning from Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., he conceded he did not volunteer to Attorney General Edwin Meese last fall the information that proceeds from arms sales to Iran had been diverted to the Contras, even though he had known about it for months.

Meese was conducting a fact-finding inquiry into the affair at the time at the direction of the president.

Centennial proclamation

Miami Mayor Tom Stribling, atop left horse, posts a city proclamation honoring Miami's 100th Anniversary on a tree in the Roberts County Courthouse lawn. Joining him are Miami Centennial Committee representatives Cecil Gill, on foot, and Robert and Peni Clark. Stribling signed the proclamation at Tuesday's City Council meeting.

Miami adopts auto tax

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

MIAMI — Before Tuesday's City Council meeting, a city automobile tax was just about unheard of.

Now it's official, thanks to the council's 4-1 vote Tuesday.

Starting with its May 26 tax notices, the city will levy a personal property tax on residents' vehicles. Vehicles tagged as farm implements will be exempt. The city tax rate for automobiles will be the same as the tax rate for real property, which is now 29 cents per $100 valuation. The rate will create a city tax of $14.50 on a vehicle valued at $5,000.

Mayor Tom Stribling said Tuesday that he hated to raise taxes so drastically. But with major paving projects demanding attention, the dump filling up and state water officials pushing for a new sewer pond, Stribling said, "The citizens of Miami are fixing to pay more taxes."

Stribling told the council that the tax could bring roughly $5,000, but he stressed that was only a "ballpark" estimate.

The mayor added that city's other option would be to raise taxes by more than an 8 percent, which would subject the city to a roll-back election. An 8 percent tax increase would raise about $5,000, Stribling figured.

"My feeling is that if we take this step now, then we can look at it when we start doing our budget next month," Stribling said. "I can see where we're going to have to have some increase. Our revenue sharing money is gone, so that's definitely out."

But council member Royce Bailey — the negative voter in the city's decision — said he did not want to levy a new tax without giving residents prior notice. He added that voters should appreciate it even less.

An agenda listing for "discussion and action: automobile tax," was the only official prior notice the city gave for the tax increase.

But Stribling defended his sudden call for action.

"We need to make a decision quick, so we could go through the process to get it done," Stribling said, explaining that the appraisal district will have put automobiles on the city tax roll and calculate the cars' taxable value. The board of review will then have to conduct hearings on the valuations.

City hears pitch for air museum

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

Richard Peet took his seat as Ward 2 city commissioner Tuesday night during one of only two business items on the agenda.

But he had to wait nearly half an hour until after discussion of a proposed Pampa Army Air Field museum during the citizen's request period.

Peet was elected during the May 2 runoff election but was unable to attend the special called meeting last week for canvassing of votes and his scheduled swearing-in at that time.

The Pampa High School government teacher was the top vote-getter of four candidates in the April 4 municipal elections to fill the one-year unexpired term created by David McDaniel's resignation to run for mayor.

But he had to face opponent W.A. Morgan in the runoff election, which he won handily with 58 percent.

He was administered the oath of office by Deputy City Secretary Barbara Van Houten.

Boy charged with shooting parents on Mother's Day

HOUSTON (AP) — A 10-year-old boy remains in juvenile detention after being charged in the Mother's Day shooting that left his father dead and wounded his mother, authorities said.

A hearing is set for today to determine if the boy will remain in a juvenile detention center for an additional 10 days, Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Godwin said Tuesday.

The boy was charged Tuesday with delinquent conduct in the slaying of his father and shooting of his mother, she said.

Because of the boy's age, it is unlikely he will be certified to stand trial as an adult, Godwin said. The worst punishment he can receive, she said, would be incarceration at a Texas Youth Commission until the age of 21.

His mother, Mary Ann Simon, 47, remains in good condition at Ben Taub Hospital with wounds to the chest, abdomen and legs.

The boy's father, Edward Simon Sr., 45, died after being shot in the head.

On Sunday, the boy removed a family gun hidden in a living room loveseat and began firing after he was told he could no longer play in an apartment complex sandbox, police said.

According to Mrs. Simon, Mother's Day began with an expression of love, as the boy presented her with a card he had made that said: "Happy Mother's Day. I love you."

Early in the afternoon, she said she told the boy to come inside from playing in a sandbox because she did not want him playing alone.

When the boy returned to the apartment, he was visibly angry, Mrs. Simon said.

The boy then went into his sister's room briefly, where police said he told the girl he was going to shoot his parents.

Statue honors Panhandle pioneer Perry LeFors

City Commission members have been encouraged to attend Saturday's dedication of a statue to one of the area's first ranchers and pioneers.

Assistant City Manager Frank Smith, addressing commissioners at Tuesday night's meeting, said the dedication ceremonies for a statue of Perry LeFors will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the statue's site, east of Coronado Inn at the Hobart and Somerville street intersection.

The pioneer's son, Emmett LeFors, 97, will be on hand to dedicate the statue in memory of his father.

The statue was sculpted by Rich Muno, a western artist who has been associated with the National Cowboy Hall of Fame for more than 20 years. The statue arrived in town Saturday in preparation for its mounting on the monument base.

Also participating in the dedicatory ceremony will be City Manager Bob Hart, who will make the introductions; Billy T. Jones, Westside Church of Christ minister, invocation; Sheriff Rufe Jordan, guest speaker; artist Muno, who will discuss the work in creating the sculpture; and Mayor David McDaniel, who will make the acceptance for the city.

Immediately following the dedication ceremony, a reception open to the public will be held in the Starlight Room at Coronado Inn until approximately 4 p.m.

Friends of the LeFors family and the general public are invited to attend the dedication.

Perry LeFors had passed through the Panhandle area while on a cattle drive on the route between San Antonio and Dodge City in 1876. He liked the area so much he later decided to live here and invited other family members and friends to join him.

Working as a foreman for the million-acre Diamond F Ranch, he lived at the ranch headquarters at Mobeetie. Later he built a camp between Tascosa and Mobeetie on the North Fork of the Red River for a stage stop and a rest stop for cattle drivers. The camp later became known as LeFors in 1892 after a post office was located there.

In 1887 LeFors married Emma Lang of Switzerland, sister-in-law of Henry and Anna Thut, who had settled at the stage stop area. Their wedding in Mobeetie, where they bought a house, was one of the biggest social occasions of the day.

In 1902, after more people had moved to the area, LeFors was instrumental in gathering support to petition for an election to organize Gray County, separating it from Wheeler County. The county election was successful, and Gray County was formed on May 27, 1902.

In 1909 a typhoid epidemic swept through the county, taking LeFors and four of the couple's five daughters. He and his wife are buried in Miami. She died in 1958.

Their only son, Emmett, still lives in Pampa, where he has kept busy in the ranching business.

City

After taking his seat Tuesday night, Peet heard a brief report on a planned statue dedication and then joined others in voting to adjourn.

Prior to the swearing in, representatives of the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association used the citizen's request period to ask commissioners to help them in their efforts toward a proposed museum at Memorial Park.

Executive Secretary Nina Spoonemore presented the commissioners a letter briefly giving a history of the association and its proposal for the museum.

"We have a museum committee, and we've been anxious for quite some time to locate a suitable place," she said.

The letter, written by association First Vice President Blake Laramore, notes the association, formed in 1972, now has 700 members and is still growing, with reunions held annually in Pampa.

"For 15 years notable officials — generals, Thunder Bird commander, astronaut, etc. — have come to Pampa as speakers, always going away with praise for the Reunion Association and the Pampa people . . ." Laramore writes.

"Last year Pampa had the biggest air show ever held in this part of the country, with World War II aircraft and other planes numbering almost 100. It was attended by thousands, resulting in estimated gross benefits of almost $200,000. We are sure you will agree this is a great asset for Pampa," the letter states.

"When the reunion committee was appointed, they understood the property at Ward and Hobart streets had been designated as a Memorial Park," Laramore continues. "The brick building on the property would make an ideal museum, including ground space for a B-25 to be permanently installed and secured on a brick foundation."

The association representatives claim the museum would become a "valuable tourist attraction" with Air Force museums being very popular and profitable investments.

Spoonemore said the museum concept has the support of the association members, who are willing to help with its development.

Mayor McDaniel asked Spoonemore if she was aware of the city's contract with Rural-Metro Corp. for leasing the building at Memorial Park for its ambulance service in Pampa.

Spoonemore said she was aware of that, but she said the letter and request could be kept on file "so that in case the time ever comes" the city can consider the association's request for the use of the building as a museum.

McDaniel asked if any other alternative sites have been considered, including perhaps Recreation Park.

Association Treasurer Thelma Bray said she's aware of a similar building at the pump station near Hobart Street Park but understands the building is being used now.

Spoonemore said the Memorial Park location would give more visibility to the museum because of its central location and the amount of traffic passing by daily.

Association board member Roy Kay said one of the best assets of the park site is that it would allow a 67 by 54 foot long

B-25 to be placed outside.

Main Street Project Manager Lyn Moulton asked if the plane could be disassembled and then reassembled inside a large building. Bray said that could be done but some of the assembling would have to be done outside unless it was a very large building.

Local realtor Walter Shed then questioned the commission concerning the status of Rural-Metro's building lease, suggesting taxpayers' money would be used for any renovation. Assistant City Manager Frank Smith said if any city money was used, it would certainly be reimbursed by the ambulance company. But presently there are no plans for expending any tax money on the project, Smith said.

Shed and association members then raised questions about the possibility of the city incurring any financial liability in case the ambulance company pulled out of the city or in case another ambulance company replaces Rural-Metro.

Smith said any liability would be between Rural-Metro and any financial institutions from which they might obtain a loan for any renovations or building of a proposed garage. If the company pulls out or otherwise loses its lease, the facility reverts to the city, Smith explained.

McDaniel invited Shed and the association members to review the contract.

McDaniel suggested that the association let city staff review all its information concerning the museum proposal and determine if any alternative museum sites might be available.

McDaniel and other commissioners indicated support for the museum but said presently the city is obligated to uphold its contract with Rural-Metro.

Collider

having Amarillo become a more major transportation center.

The commission chose two sites after the Legislature approved a measure allowing them to hire a private consultant to assist in preparing the proposals and mandating the commission to choose two sites.

Earlier Tuesday, four of six finalists in statewide competition for the $6 billion atom-smashing project made their final bids before the commission.

The group proposing the site near Amarillo told commissioners during its presentation to consider choosing "an attractive smaller city" instead of two big cities.

"In the beginning God created this site for the SSC," said Amarillo National Bank President Richard Ware.

The massive super collider project would include a 52-mile underground tunnel from 20 to 30 feet underground in which atomic particles would be accelerated and then smashed together to probe the building blocks of matter.

At least 45 states are in the scramble to land the project, which would mean thousands of construction jobs, long-term work for 2,500 scientists and technicians, and an annual budget of about $200 million per year.

"We're pretty excited," said Waxahachie city manager Bob Sokoll said. "We're looking forward to challenging in the national finalist competition. There's still lots of people around here who don't really know what it is, but we've had very little negative reaction."

The Ellis County seat is within the underground ring of the super collider, and the laboratory and campus of the facility would be southwest of town, he said.

The Texas site finalists also included areas near the Sam Houston National Forest north of Houston and Lubbock and a Permian Basin site.

Dave Dorchester said the West Texas Council of Governments, which coordinated the Permian Basin proposal, would discuss whether or not to submit its proposal to Washington independently.

"We felt that we had a very viable site. It'd be very competitive on a national standpoint," said Dorchester. Dorchester's group was one of the signers of the legislative measure agreeing to support the commission's choices.

But Dorchester said the measure says they will support the choices, "if properly justified."

News Editor Larry Hollis and The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following traffic accidents for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

TUESDAY, May 12
An unknown vehicle collided with a properly parked Chevrolet, registered to Yvonne Collins Whitten, 2230 Lea, in the 1200 block of West Somerville. No injuries or citations were reported.

WEDNESDAY, May 13
A 1962 Mercury, driven by Clifford Addison Roth, 83, 817 Ruth, collided with a stop sign at Crawford and Gray, after Roth had a major heart attack behind the wheel. Roth was treated at the scene and transported by Rural Metro Ambulance to HCA Coronado Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Tax

"It takes about a month and a half to two months to get it done," Stribling said.

Stribling said he decided to propose an automobile tax after talking with his wife, Roberts County Chief Appraiser Debbie Stribling, about what can be done to raise city revenue.

Mayor Stribling told the council that the city will have to build a new landfill plus an evaporation pond at the sewer plant.

Both projects would cost $15,000, which the city would not be able to afford with its current budget.

Said Stribling, "We're going to have to dig another hole for the dump because it's filling up and will have to be covered and another one dug." The mayor added that the Texas Water Commission has asked the city, verbally, to build a new oxidation pond for its problem-plagued sewer system.

But Bailey was still not moved. Agreeing that the city needs to raise its revenue, Bailey insisted the better option now is to raise the tax rate, despite the threat of a roll-back.

"I'd rather raise an old tax than make a new one," Bailey said.

Stribling said Roberts County and the Miami school district tax automobiles.

Bailey conceded that the automobile tax could pull in taxpayers who do not own property — including college students living with parents.

City Secretary Betty Anderson observed there's not that many people in Miami who do not own real property.

"We need to raise revenue," Bailey said. "But you cannot hit them with both (the auto tax and the steep tax hike) at once."

Observed council member Brent Cowan: "Any way you go (auto tax or tax hike), it's not going to amount to enough money."

Council member M. J. Allison lamented what he felt was inaction by previous city councils to raise taxes or to buy the water system from Consolidated Utilities when the company offered it for sale two years ago.

Allison said the water system's current owner, High Plains Natural Gas of Canadian, is reaping quite a profit.

"We made a mistake not buying the water system," Allison observed.

Council members looked at a newspaper clipping listing Miami with the second lowest tax rate of any town in The Pampa News circulation area. Only McLean, with a 28-cent-per-$100 valuation, is lower.

"Our tax rate is awfully cheap, and it's beginning to show up in our services," Allison observed. "We're levying 1950s taxes in 1987."

Stribling said state officials "laugh at us when we told them we had such a tax rate."

"People don't realize the shape we're in," Allison said.

"They don't care," Bailey exclaimed.

According to Mrs. Stribling, the tax would apply to vehicles that are not farm implements or otherwise tax-exempt. However, the council may pass a resolution extending the tax to other "personal property."

Mrs. Stribling explained that when she puts the vehicles on the tax rolls, she'll go to the motor vehicle registration file and "all I have to do is add one more taxing jurisdiction."

"I'll bet half the people won't ever notice," the mayor said. "But those are the options we have, and neither one is any good."

Aid

McFarlane's testimony about Reagan's meeting with Fahd, coupled with the disclosure about the president's handwritten diaries have raised fresh questions about Reagan's involvement in the entire affair.

McFarlane, testifying before Congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair, on Monday raised the possibility that Reagan may have solicited the aid from "Country 2," the code name in the hearing for Saudi Arabia. The country gave a total of $32.5 million to the Contras in 1984 and 1985.

Saudi officials in Washington have denied that Reagan and the king discussed Contra aid and said they had "nothing further to add" to previous denials that they had aided the Nicaraguan guerrillas.

Members of the committees said Tuesday they do believe McFarlane is trying to tell the truth to Congress but seems unable to come completely clean.

"There's something writhing inside," Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., a member of the House investigating panel, said Tuesday following McFarlane's second day of sworn testimony.

"This is an individual who really wants to tell it all," Rodino said. "I think he's been tortured by his inability to say what he wants to say."

McFarlane acknowledged to the committees that he had used "tortured language" in past testimony to Congress, in which he denied the Reagan administration had gone to foreign countries to finance the Contra war against Nicaragua after Congress shut off aid to the rebels.

"I think the effect of all the testimony so far is to make it clear the president was more deeply involved in these events, more aware of them as they occurred than was previously believed," said Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine.

Annual legislative sessions approved by Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a proposal that would, for the first time in 14 years, allow Texans to vote on whether they want annual legislative sessions.

In a 1973 statewide election, voters rejected a proposed constitutional amendment that combined annual sessions with a legislative pay raise.

A proposed constitutional amendment to authorize 60-day sessions in even-numbered years on the budget, as well as emergencies, was sent to the House on a 21-9 vote Tuesday.

The Legislature now meets in odd-numbered years every other year for 140 days, starting in January. The new session would begin in April.

"This is not the same state it was when we first adopted—in 1876—biannual sessions, when it took two weeks for the representative from El Paso to get here by horse," said sponsoring Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth.

"The truth is, in Texas we have annual sessions of the Legislature, and we have had them for quite a while," Parmer said. During the past 11 biennia, legislators have met 17 times in special session.

Parmer said now the state comptroller must project over two years in the future what the financial picture in Texas will look like. He said the comptroller and state treasurer support the annual-session proposal.

"It is clear to me, and I think to many Texans, that we have outgrown the present process of meeting only every other year," Parmer said.

If the proposal is approved by two-thirds of the House, it would be submitted to the voters at a statewide election on Nov. 3. A bill that would implement the proposed amendment was sent to the House on voice vote.

"I don't really support it all that strongly," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

"I'm really more interested in preserving the part-time Legislature, though we haven't been doing a good job of that this past year."

Hobby said he favored a part-time Legislature, "Because it's a better concept. It makes us look less like Congress, and I think the work product of the Texas Legislature is considerably better than that of the U.S. Congress."

Senators also passed and sent to the governor a House-approved bill that would require school districts to establish programs for "gifted and talented students" by the 1990-91 school year. Up to $500,000 in state funds would be allocated for the special programs.

In other action Tuesday, the Senate approved and sent to the House measures that would:

- Direct the Texas Education Agency to help school districts set up attendance policies for students who are chronically ill.
- Exempt nursing homes from state license inspections if the nursing home is accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.
- Allow the videotaped testimony of children under 12 to be used in administrative hearings, such as day-care license revocations.

Pampa to observe 'Diamond Jubilee'

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa's 75th "Diamond Jubilee" anniversary and the nation's 211th birthday will be celebrated July 3 and 4 when M.K. Brown Auditorium hosts the city's second annual old-fashioned Fourth of July bash.

Co-organizers Floye Christensen and Danny Parkerson have released the schedule of events for the celebration, entitled "City of Pampa 75-Year Diamond Jubilee."

Christensen said organizers have planned an "old-time fair and carnival atmosphere, celebrating our nation's birthday and Pampa's 75th anniversary." She said the city hopes to make the event bigger and better than last year by adding several attractions, including a chuck wagon breakfast and a parade.

The two-day bash will also include the second annual Fourth of July Talent Search, with $15,000 in prize money available.

Festivities will get under way Friday, July 3, with the two-day Golden Spread Porcelain Art Show at the Coronado Inn. Also Friday, preliminary rounds for the group competition of the talent show are scheduled for inside the auditorium.

That night, a free street dance, featuring continuous music provided by live bands and disc jockey Onyx, will be held in the auditorium parking lot.

July 4 activities will kick off Saturday morning with a chuck wagon breakfast, sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, and a parade.

The talent show will continue inside the auditorium while outside activities will include booths, games, a flea market, cake walks, buggy and antique car rides, a city band, an old-time medicine show and a classic and antique car show and swap meet.

Also outside on the Fourth, a live band contest is scheduled, also offering prize money.

Auditorium Manager Parkerson said the city is trying to keep prices down "like in the good old days."

Christensen said the cost for those wishing to set up a booth is $25. Booths will be furnished with a table and electricity, but displays must construct their own booths, she said.

Entry fees for the talent search are $35 for individuals and $60 for groups. Parkerson said the entry fee for the outdoor band contest is also $60.

Organizers decided to hold the outdoor band contest separate from the indoor talent search this year to give bands a chance to perform longer and to provide outdoor entertainment. Parkerson said response has been "overwhelming."

Top prize is $700.

The indoor talent search is open to all acts. Age categories for single acts are 3-6, 7-9, 10-12, 13-17 and 18 and over. For group acts, the categories are 3-17 and 18 and over.

A $1,000 cash prize will be awarded the winner in each category, with cash prizes also to be handed out to first runners-up through fourth runners-up.

Parkerson said there will be no individual categories such as vocal or dance; all acts will compete against each other in their age divisions. Contestants may enter as many times as they like, provided each entry is a different talent, he added.

The five finalists will compete for top prizes the evening of July Fourth.

Parkerson said 50 percent of last year's talent search contestants have contacted him about returning this year. The cut-off date for entries is June 30.

Those seeking more information can contact Parkerson at the auditorium at 665-4841. For information on outdoor activities call Christensen at 665-3618.

House advances no-parole life sentence

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has voted to let juries send capital murderers to prison with life sentences that would not let them out until they had served 25 years and passed their 65th birthday.

The measure that won tentative approval on Tuesday's voice vote is a variation of life-without-parole bills that have failed in previous legislative sessions.

The sponsor, Rep. A.R. Ovard, R-Dallas, said the senior citizen parole provision helps his bill's chances.

"There's always been the feeling with a life without parole that you're locking someone up and throwing away the keys," Ovard said. "That's been objected to by many people. They feel there still should be that little glimmer of hope out there."

"Statistics prove that those that have served long terms and have attained the age of 65, at that point they probably are no longer a menace to society when they come out," he said.

Under current law, jurors have only two choices — life in prison or death — in capital murder cases. The state's parole laws allow the release of murderers, sometimes too soon, Ovard said.

"The general public knows that this person is only going to serve probably as little as eight years, maybe as much as 10 or 11. They feel that because of the severity of the crime the defendant should certainly serve more time in the penitentiary," he said in an interview.

His bill faces another House vote that would send it to the Senate.

"It's not intended to take the place of the death penalty at all," Ovard said.

The measure is opposed by the Texas Civil Liberties Union and the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association.

Also Tuesday, the House killed a bill, which it had tentatively approved Monday, that would allow the Department of Public Safety to regulate trailer hitches and other towing devices.

Sponsor Jerry Beauchamp, D-San Antonio, said his bill was a safety measure to protect Texans against unsafe towing devices. But Rep. Jerry Clark, D-Buna, said it was the kind of bill that upsets Texans.

"It's these little things that worry a lot of people," he said.

Clark's motion to kill the Beauchamp bill was approved 94-50.

The House gave tentative approval, on a non-record vote, to a bill that would require people who petition for a non-binding city referendum to pay for the election.

The bill is sponsored by Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, who also is pushing a bill that would bar nonbinding city referenda on illegal activities, such as casino gambling.

Pro-casino forces in Galveston are gathering signatures on a petition for another casino referendum in that city.

Clements, Hobby, Lewis meet privately

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's three top leaders went gunning for a compromise spending plan that would end the budget battle.

"It was probably one of the most productive meetings we've had since the (legislative) session started," House Speaker Gib Lewis said after spending Tuesday afternoon talking and skeet shooting with Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

"We did not agree on anything. We agreed to continue working towards a solution to the budget," Lewis said.

The three, with a few aides, left the Capitol and spent several hours talking and shooting at the Cypress Valley Preserve on a ranch west of Austin. Lewis said arrangements for the outing were made by Don Adams, an associate of Hobby's.

Clements was less talkative about the meeting.

"We had a good time. We thoroughly enjoyed the outing," he said. "We needed to be able to get away."

The leaders have been negotiating on and off for more than a week about ways to balance the state budget.

Hobby and Lewis say more taxes must be raised than Clements has said he will approve. The Senate and House have approved budgets totaling more than $39 billion, while Clements has said he thinks $36.9 billion is enough.

That impasse has threatened to drag the Legislature into special session, because its 140-day regular session ends June 1.

But their meetings at the Capitol have been dogged by news reporters. After Clements last week told reporters that he might allow more than a $2.9 billion tax increase, his fellow Republicans protested. The governor then insisted he hasn't changed his position.

So Tuesday, they decided to meet in private.

Lewis said he thought the change of scenery did them good.

"You can get a lot done in those type of conditions," the House speaker said.

Lewis said they discussed a budget plan he has been working on and agreed to further talks.

No ultimatums — such as Clements' earlier threat to veto any tax increase larger than $2.9 billion — were made, Lewis said.

"We're trying to work together, trying to work out a compromise position we felt we all could live with that wouldn't be damaging to the future of the state," he said.

"We did not talk about vetoing anything. We talked about trying to do what was right for the state," he said.

Lewis said the three also talked about several other issues, such as trucking deregulation and tort reform.

"It was a wash," Lewis said, laughing. "I think we all shot about the same."

Convicted couple say future in God's hands

GILMER (AP) — A couple jailed for violating the state's compulsory school attendance law say they've put their fate in God's hands.

"The Lord alone will lead us. We have placed our future in his hands and I am confident he will deliver us from this," Dianna Howell said Tuesday from her Upshur County jail cell.

"We were commanded by God to educate our children at home," Mrs. Howell said of the couple's decision to remove her son and daughter from the Gilmer Independent School District. "This was the word of God, and now the state says we don't have the right to obey the word of God."

Mrs. Howell, 33, and her husband Jack Lee Howell, 46, were jailed late last week after they said they couldn't pay about $8,000 in finances and court costs resulting from their January 1986 conviction for violating the attendance law.

Sheriff Dale Jewkes said the Howells face up to 265 days in jail. Each day served will reduce their fines by $15. Court records indicate the Howells will remain in jail until their fines are worked off.

Jewkes said he has the authority to cut the sentences by one-third for good behavior and that could reduce the terms to 177 days in jail.

The Howells' case was initially heard in Upshur County's justice of the peace court in October 1985. The court ruled that they violated the state's attendance law and fined them $5 each.

The couple refused to pay the fine and appealed their case to the Upshur County court, where they were again found guilty and fined $7,600.

That conviction was upheld in December by an appeals court.

However, in another case, a Tarrant County judge ruled last month that Texans can legally teach their children at home as long as they use an organized curriculum.

"Throughout this ordeal the Lord has told me what to do," Mrs. Howell said. "He speaks to me personally. I do hear him and I do recognize him as the Lord almighty. He has pointed out scripture in the Bible for me to read and follow, and I believe he will take care of us while in jail and my family."

Mrs. Howell said even after the appeal failed, her children, Tony Sustaire, 13, and Farah Sustaire, 10, still will not attend public school.

Backers: The lottery should pass Legislature this year

AUSTIN (AP) — With favorable public opinion mounting, the Legislature should find the winning number to pass a lottery bill this session, lottery supporters say.

"The people are for it and we're for it and we're hoping lottery will be (placed) on the ballot either in August or November," Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, said Tuesday.

A proposed constitutional amendment that would allow Texas to begin a state-run lottery has been introduced in both the House and Senate. Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, a House sponsor, said he expects the proposal to be debated by the full House, possibly on Thursday.

Senators approved a lottery proposal last year, but that measure died in the House. Wilson said he expects a different outcome this year, largely because of state government's continuing financial crisis.

"Once you get down to a choice between higher taxes or a lottery, you usually go with a lottery. That's been the experience in other states," Wilson said. "I expect that to repeat itself here in Texas."

More than two dozen other states currently operate lotteries, with the proceeds going to a variety of government purposes.

Wilson said more than 90 House members have favored the plan in the past, but 100 votes were needed to put the amendment on the ballot.

"We haven't had to swing many (votes). The fiscal situation in this state is getting worse and worse ... The lottery looks like a pretty viable alternative," Wilson said.

Wilson and other lottery backers noted that recent opinion polls have shown public support for a state lottery in the 70 percent range.

"When the people of Texas speak this loud, speak this clear and give this kind of message to the Legislature, it is certainly our responsibility and our obligation to allow them to have the opportunity to participate in an agenda like this," said Rep. Chip Staniswalis, R-Amarillo.

Staniswalis said his district's residents gave him instructions when electing him to the House.

"They're sending me down to Austin saying, 'Staniswalis, there's two things we want you to do: no on taxes and yes on lottery,'" he said.

Wilson said other factors contribute to what he believes is the necessary legislative support for a lottery.

He noted that Gov. Bill Clements has said he wouldn't oppose a lottery if voters want it, and that a lottery has been discussed by legislative leaders as a way to raise upwards of $600 million a year without new taxes.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said such a proposal might belong on the ballot.

"I think under the financial crunch that we're under, we probably ought to submit it to the voters," he said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Duarte should view citizens as assets

Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte may push the United States into doing the right thing for the wrong reasons. Duarte has appealed to President Reagan to give at least temporary refuge to Salvadorans who have been living illegally in this country, but who may not qualify for amnesty under last November's immigration bill.

His apprehension reflects a wrong-headed philosophy. The danger here is that as president of El Salvador, Duarte is able to convert his fear into policy, turning false apprehension into a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Duarte believes that the return of the 400,000 to 600,000 Salvadorans who have entered the United States illegally since 1982 (the amnesty cut-off date) would constitute an economic burden on his country, which is in the midst of a civil war, a continuing economic crisis, and the aftermath of a destructive earthquake. Such a concern logically suggests an underlying attitude that people are a burden rather than a resource, that they must be cared for rather than left free to care for themselves and build for others.

Granted, Duarte is hardly the only person in the world with such an attitude; in one variation or another, it is shared by most advocates of a powerful, paternalistic government. Those who view people as problems rather than as assets generally also believe that problem people need lots of regulation and guidance to keep them in check.

Those big government advocates often believe also that the economic "pie" is only so big, and that adding more people to a society means sharing the same amount of goodies among a larger group, so everybody will get less. And, sure enough, when they institute policies of centralized control and micromanagement, they slow down economic growth and development, making their prior beliefs about finite resources seem almost plausible.

Since El Salvador's economy is rife with centralized government controls (many put in place at the behest of misguided American bureaucrats administering U.S. aid), Duarte may be correct in his belief that sending half a million Salvadorans back all at once would impose burdens. Centralized bureaucracies are usually too inflexible to deal intelligibly with rapid social changes. Furthermore, Salvadorans presently working in the U.S. now send between $350 million and $600 million per year to relatives in the home country. That's more than the U.S. government sends the Salvadoran government in aid.

President Reagan should work out something with President Duarte — not because Duarte is correct about what a terrible burden these refugees would be in El Salvador, but because he has come to recognize that they constitute an asset to the United States.

In a reasonably free economy, people who are willing to work and compete are an unmixed blessing; the more freedom they have, the more likely they are to contribute to making the economic pie even larger for all of us.

Congress meddles in news

The most depressing thing about the cutback in the news budgets of the three major television networks is the opportunity it offers for sanctimonious posturing. Demanding that journalistic standards be preserved whatever the cost in profits, we have no less an authority than Andy Rooney, who makes huge sums of money doing things that have as much to do with journalism as "Police Academy IV" has to do with art.

Thanks to the belt-tightening ordered by new President Laurence Tisch at CBS — which led to a writer's guild strike, which led to Rooney's refusal to cross the picket line, which led to his temporary suspension from "60 Minutes" — viewers were able to avoid Rooney for a while. But members of Congress aren't so easy to ignore — particularly if you're a TV network, and they want to grill you about your news coverage, which is what a House subcommittee wanted to do the other day.

The pretext for this exercise is a bill regulating hostile takeovers of corporations, including networks. Both NBC and ABC have entered into mergers in the past two years, and CBS fought off a takeover bid by Ted Turner.

But the real point of the hearing was to browbeat the networks about their news coverage. The self-promoting committee chairman, Massachusetts Democrat Edward Markey, said the members wanted to know if the networks will "reassert their historic and unique commitment to network news as a sacred trust, or are they going to succumb to bottom-line concerns?"

So the three network news presidents got to spend the better part of a day responding politely to presumptuous inquiries — why Diane Sawyer gets paid so much money, how they can cut costs without damaging quality, why NBC has hired a consulting firm. An especially shameless Dallas congressman had the nerve to complain about cutbacks in CBS' Texas bureau, which he feared might reduce the "economic help" Congress provides his home state. Markey himself advised the executives to push local stations to air hour-long news shows in the early evening.

All these elected officials are entitled to express their opinions. But when they use their position to try to intimidate news organizations, they have overstepped their bounds. By doing so, they dramatize the dangers of government control over broadcasting.

If the editors of the nation's three biggest newspapers had been summoned to justify their budgetary and editorial decision before a congressional inquisition, the response would have been a curt "get lost." Congress, after all, has no power to enforce its preferences on newspapers. The framers of the Constitution adopted the First Amendment precisely because they didn't want politicians telling the press how to do its job.

But the framers neglected to foresee the invention of broadcasting, an oversight that allowed the government to intrude into matters that ought to be off-limits. That's why the network executives stoically endured this humiliation, even though all three news presidents expressed reservations about its propriety.

Broadcasters can't ignore Congress without risk, because the federal government holds the ultimate power over their licenses and those of their affiliate stations. That power, more than specific regulations like the Fairness Doctrine, is what circumscribes their decisions. For the networks to assert their independence too vigorously is to invite unwanted scrutiny from those who control their right to operate.

When members like Markey demand that the networks meet some arbitrary standard of adequate news coverage, they claim to represent the needs of the public. In fact, they are trying to overrule the public. Broadcasters provide the quantity and quality of news that viewers as a group want — neither more nor less. They have a strong inducement to do so, in those dreaded "bottomline concerns."

Markey might prefer that broadcasters voluntarily lose money in order to subsidize the sort of news coverage he likes. But that — like the anti-takeover bill he is pushing — would harm the very people, the corporation's shareholders, who make the entire operation possible.

The usual response to criticisms of federal regulation in broadcasting is that the airwaves are public property that are lent to broadcasters for public purposes. But it is political purposes that are more likely to be served when journalists are subject to congressional interference. As the hearing suggested, letting the government meddle in journalism makes for bad journalism and bad government.

U.S. should question motive

Our Secretary of State Shultz in Moscow got a tentative agreement with head red Gorbachev.

The Soviets would withdraw short-range nuclear missiles now aimed at the Western Europe. With the understanding that we will remove our short-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe which are aimed at him.

Such an agreement, Gorbachev implied, would open the door to a superpower summit meeting between them and us in the autumn of this year.

Secretary Shultz promised promptly to discuss the proposal with out NATO allies.

Gorbachev pretended not to understand why the powerful United States would have to "consult" with anybody on a matter of such importance.

Secretary Shultz excuses the Soviet leader by saying, "He is not familiar with the way the NATO alliance works."

He knows how it works. But he also knows that the United States casts the decisive vote.

Gorbachev at home and Reagan at home can use a summit meeting right now to make themselves look good.

Dutifully, Secretary Shultz went to Belgium to "consult" with the foreign ministers of 10 NATO nations, to try to convince them that such an agreement with Moscow is a viable first step in reducing tensions.

But Western Europe's foreign ministers said, "Wait a doggone minute! You're giving away your trump card!"

Western Europe is suddenly, if tardily, realizing that without nuclear missiles, the vast conventional forces of the Soviet Union could squash Europe like a toad under a tractor.

But the day we go back to fighting wars with bopower and bayonets again, Asia has more of those than anybody.

Also implicit in Gorbachev's magnanimous offer is the understanding that our president would abandon his SDI for a period of seven years.

In effect, that would kill our president's proposal for a "star shield" to defend the West against long-range nuclear missiles. And the USSR also has more than enough of those.

For all his smiles, this Communist dictator has not abandoned the ultimate object of his predecessors: To expand the Soviet capacity to project military power throughout the world.

Gorbachev is aware that he has the support of the liberal left in the United States for anything he proposes. He's counting on them to pressure our president for concessions.

As long ago as May 19, 1931, Will Rogers recognized Soviet negotiation strategy.

He said, "Soviet leaders love to stick a thumb in the soup and then watch to see if the guests notice it."

Dry Arizona learns to conserve water

By Robert Walters

PHOENIX, Ariz. (NEA) — "Water," former Gov. Bruce Babbitt notes succinctly, "is Arizona's future."

Yet despite the state's desert location and an average annual rainfall of less than 10 inches, many of its residents long have viewed water "as a free resource, something that had no cost of production and therefore no incentive to save," says Babbitt.

"But that mentality is reflective of the past and it won't work in the future," he adds. "We are going to have to get much, much more serious about management and about conservation — and indeed in Arizona we've already begun that... for the use of groundwater."

Although depletion and degradation of groundwater have been particularly severe in Arizona, the quality or quantity of water in underground aquifers is seriously endangered in three-fourths of the 50 states.

Aquifers — permeable, saturated layers of rock, sand or gravel — are the source of household drinking water for more than 50 percent of all Americans and 97 percent of the country's rural residents. Groundwater consumption nationally has tripled since 1950 and now stands at more than 90 billion gallons daily.

A number of states have taken action in recent years to control contaminants in the water or to limit groundwater shortages caused by withdrawals that exceed the natural recharge rate.

Those states include Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Florida, Wisconsin, Montana, Texas, New Mexico and California — but none of them matches Arizona's ambitious program to protect groundwater.

Although this state's reliance upon groundwater dates back to the 1930s, efforts to fashion a statewide policy on it were repeatedly frustrated — even though Arizona was exhausting more than 2.2 billion gallons of groundwater daily by the late 1970s.

In 1977, the Arizona Groundwater Management Study Commission was established. Its 25 members included 14 state legislators and 11 representatives of Indian, agricultural, mining and municipal interests.

The commission proceeded at a desultory pace for several years, but in 1979 the federal government threatened to halt funding of the Central Arizona Project, a 333-mile-long diversion of the Colorado River to provide additional water, unless Arizona developed groundwater controls.

"We had our backs to the wall," recalls Babbitt, who convened selected members of the commission in marathon negotiating sessions. "We closed the door and shed blood for about six months," adds the former Democratic governor, who is now running for president.

After more than 400 hours of meetings, including late-night and weekend sessions, the negotiators produced almost 200 pages of proposed legislation that was endorsed by the full commission on June 6, 1980.

Five days later, on June 11, the legislature met in a special session called by Babbitt. "This issue," he told the lawmakers, "is too important to be debated in the legislature — pass it."

Indeed, the proposed law was presented under extraordinary rules that allowed no committee hearings and no amendments — but it was approved overwhelmingly within a few hours by both houses of the legislature.

Reagan, Congress head for defense showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and the Democrats who control Congress are heading toward another confrontation over arms control restrictions and "Star Wars" cuts.

The House voted deep reductions Tuesday in the budget for Reagan's Star Wars program to develop a high-tech shield against Soviet nuclear attack.

The decision came as the chamber worked on its version of a bill authorizing the defense budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. The Senate is scheduled to take up its version of the bill this week and is also likely to cut Star Wars and add arms control restrictions Reagan opposes.

At the White House, Reagan met Tuesday with a group of Republicans and renewed his argument that the Democratic-proposed restrictions hurt U.S. efforts to negotiate a U.S.-Soviet arms reduction treaty.

"The House already has attached to the defense authorization several unacceptable provisions," Reagan said. "The Senate bill is equally troublesome on the strategic defense issues."

"I simply can't go along with those who would hand the Soviets, free of charge, what they can't win at the bargaining table. This is no way to run America's foreign policy and I would be compelled to veto any legislation that endangers our arms reduction efforts or undermines our national defense."

Reagan sought $5.8 billion next year for the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is formally known. But the House voted 219-199 on Tuesday for a $3.1 billion figure, which would be below the current $3.6 billion level. The bill before the Senate proposes $4.5 billion.

Overall, the House measure authorizes $288 billion for defense, compared with the $303 billion level in the Senate measure. Both figures are less than the $312 billion Reagan asked, but the House budget is also a reduction from the current $289 billion defense budget. The House still faces decisions on a number of major issues, including the MX nuclear missile, the Midgetman nuclear-tipped missile, anti-satellite weapons, chemical weapons and testing of U.S. nuclear weapons.

The House has added two amendments requiring Reagan to adhere to the unratified SALT II treaty and to the restrictive version of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile pact, a view which would ban most SDI tests.

Foot-dragging charged in ATV safety standards implementation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industry, government and parents are pointing at one another in an effort to place the blame for the rising toll of deaths and injuries from all-terrain vehicles.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission drew criticism at a congressional hearing Tuesday as a "wimp" agency, dragging its feet on the dangers of these three- and four-wheel off-road vehicles.

The commission's chairman, however, pointed to the vehicle manufacturers, claiming they have been disappointingly slow in developing voluntary safety standards.

Both a representative of the ATV manufacturers and a member of Congress contended that proper parental supervision could have prevented many of the injuries.

And the mother of a seriously injured teen-ager said it's also unfair to lay on parents the entire responsibility for keeping their children away from dangerous vehicles.

The focus of the hearing of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on commerce, consumer protection and competitiveness was the thousands of all-terrain vehicles which have become increasingly popular in recent years.

Their growing sales have been accompanied by a sharply rising death and injury toll, including nearly 700 fatalities and hundreds of thousands of hospital visits in the last five years, according to the safety commission.

Subcommittee chairman James Florio, D-N.J., opened the hearing by saying that while the safety commission has done extensive studies of ATV safety, its inaction has led some to suggest it has become "the biggest wimp agency in government."

Mary Ellen Fise, product safety director of the Consumer Federation of America, charged that the CPSC has "shirked its responsibility, has dragged its feet and acquiesced to industry's timetable for the development of a voluntary standard."

Dr. Mark D. Widome of the American Academy of Pediatrics expressed "dismay" that the vehicles are still being sold.

Alan Isley of the industry's Specialty Vehicle Institute of America told the subcommittee ATVs are safe when ridden properly.

The industry has resisted the suggestion that it abandon small vehicles designed for children, contending that would only increase the injuries as youngsters turned to the larger models.

Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, told the subcommittee the deaths and injuries associated with these widely popular vehicles are not the fault of the manufacturers.

What is needed is safety information and training for riders, Craig said, not "improperly placed government intervention."

The responsibility for this is not that of industry, but of parents, Craig said.

But Gary Leigh Pleasants of Clarksburg, Md., responded that "it is unfair that the burden is on the parent to protect the child from the machine."

Mrs. Pleasants said her 13-year-old son Billy had been close to death after an ATV accident last year in which he suffered a neck injury.

More evidence that chlorofluorocarbons destroying protective ozone

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's new evidence that man-made chemicals are responsible for the collapse of the protective ozone layer over Antarctica every September.

But backers of alternate theories say chemicals may not be the entire story.

Ever since the 1985 discovery of the annual drop in ozone levels above the South Pole, scientists have sought to link it with the chlorofluorocarbon, or CFC, chemicals known to destroy ozone — or to pin the cause on something else.

Competing theories say increased sunspot activity or changing wind patterns cause the drop. But an interagency expedition to Antarctica last year reported finding evidence against sunspots and winds.

Data collected then, only now being reported, directly support the chemical theory, congressional subcommittees were told Tuesday in the first of three days of joint hearings. The environmental protection subcommittee and the hazardous wastes and toxic substances subcommittee of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee are conducting the hearings.

Even if CFCs are not eating Antarctic ozone, causing 40 percent of the ozone to disappear every September, many scientists believe they are slowly destroying the high-altitude ozone that protects life from the sun's ultra-violet rays.

The major industrial nations are discussing whether reductions in CFC emissions are necessary, and have tentatively agreed to try to write a treaty imposing a 50 percent cut.

The committee today is exploring possible substitutes for CFCs as refrigeration fluids, blowing agents in the manufacture of plastic foams, solvents and, outside the United States, aerosol propellants.

The Environmental Protection Agency on Tuesday released a statement from an advisory committee of eight experts from the United States, Britain, Japan and West Germany saying there are no technical or environmental barriers to use of substitute chemicals, and governments should provide incentives to commercialization.

But substitutes for the two chief CFCs could cost two to three times as much when first brought to market, which could happen in six years, the panel said.

CFCs, invented in the 1930s, are cheap, non-toxic and non-flammable, but hard to destroy. It takes them decades to reach the high-altitude ozone.

Any chemical theory that says CFCs are destroying Antarctic ozone means that chlorine monoxide should be present in the layer where the ozone declines — at 40,000 feet to 66,000 feet.

That is just what he found, one part per billion of chlorine monoxide, "about 100 times more chlorine monoxide at (that altitude) than is present in other parts of the world," Solomon said.

Artists cringe at new color

WASHINGTON (AP) — The misty shadows of "Casablanca" cut through with "cheesy, artificial" color? Frank Sinatra's famous blue eyes turned a deep brown? "Gone With the Wind" to a rock beat?

Those were the prospects that Woody Allen and other film artists raised as they implored Congress to halt what they called the "monstrous practice" of adding color to the black and white movies of the nation's past.

"The issue can no longer be swept under the table," Allen testified Tuesday. "It's got to be settled finally in some legal fashion to give some protection to American film artists."

Beginning a day of lobbying on Capitol Hill, Allen joined actress Ginger Rogers and directors Sidney Pollack, Milos Forman and Elliott Silverstein in asking a Senate subcommittee to give filmmakers protection under the nation's copyright laws.

No action is planned in the Senate, but Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said he would introduce legislation today that would expand copyright laws by giving "artistic authors" the exclusive rights to any changes in their works.

The coloring of old movies has been hotly debated in the film business since last year.

About 20 movies have received the treatment.

Former Gestapo chief says he does not hate the Jews

LYON, France (AP) — Former local Gestapo chief Klaus Barbie, accused of sending scores of Jews to Nazi death camps during World War II, testified today that he does not hate Jews or other minorities.

The 73-year-old Barbie, speaking German slowly and softly, answered questions from Judge Andre Cerdini, president of the court trying him for crimes against humanity, about his past and his attitudes concerning Nazism.

Barbie, who was the top Gestapo officer in Lyon from 1942 until 1944, is charged with arresting, torturing and deporting Jews and French Resistance fighters to German concentration camps. He has been called the Butcher of Lyon.

Among other things, Barbie is charged with sending to death camps 44 Jewish children and seven adults from a children's home in Izieu, 47 miles east of Lyon; arresting 86 Jews in 1943 at the Lyon headquarters of the General Union of the Israelites of France; and sending out the last rail convoy from Lyon to the death camps, carrying about 600 Jews and Resistance members.

Barbie has said his job during the war involved a legitimate German fight against French Resistance members.

"I have no hatred for these minorities," he said in court today. He noted that people of many races and nationalities live in Bolivia, where he spent most of his life after the war.

Cerdini asked Barbie for his "conception of the Nazi world in 1940" just before the German defeat and occupation of France, and his opinion of racial problems involving Jews, Gypsies and Slavs.

"These are questions from more than 40 years ago," the defendant said, speaking through a French interpreter. "I cannot answer."

"I did my work under the direction of my superiors. Until the war, I never had to give my opinion on minorities."

Businessman turns over Contra money

GENEVA (AP) — A Swiss businessman has given judicial authorities $10 million destined for Nicaraguan rebels and mistakenly deposited in his account, a Geneva investigating judge said today.

U.S. officials had said the unidentified 60-year-old businessman faced criminal charges for withdrawing the money.

Congressional investigators discovered the money, intended as a gift to the Contras from the wealthy sultan of Brunei, an oil-rich country in Southeast Asia, Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said Tuesday.

Inouye, chairman of the special Senate Iran-

Contra committee, said the Brunei money was "the last substantial donation to the Contras unaccounted for."

"What we know now is that the $10 million was transferred into the account of an individual at Credit Suisse, and that this individual withdrew the funds," Inouye said. "The money was apparently transferred to this individual's account by mistake."

Credit Suisse is a bank in Geneva. Belnick said the case may not be brought to trial if the judge determines the businessmen made an honest mistake.

Peres calls for Israeli government breakup

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres asked Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today to break up the coalition government after the divided Cabinet deadlocked on a proposed Middle East peace conference.

Shamir rejected the demand, saying, "The national unity government can and must continue to govern."

Both leaders summoned their party colleagues to emergency meetings.

Immediately after the 3½-hour Cabinet meeting, Peres, the chief proponent of the U.S.-backed plan, postponed his trip to Washington in order to muster support for new elections. He had been scheduled to leave later today for talks with Secretary of State George Shultz.

The 31-month-old partnership between Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc and Peres' leftist Labor Party was in its most severe crisis, with the two sides bitterly divided over a peace plan calling for an international conference to precede direct talks between Israel and its Arab enemies.

Peres said he had not asked the 10-member inner Cabinet for a vote on the issue because "the result was known in advance." The forum is evenly split along party lines.

Peres accused Shamir of trying to torpedo the peace process and added: "The correct way out is to appeal to the nation. The people will decide. There is nothing more honest."

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, a Peres ally, concurred, saying: "We have reached a point where we are basically and thoroughly divided on the most crucial issues. Let's go to the people and bring about elections."

But Peres acknowledged he did not yet have the majority necessary to dissolve the 120-member Parliament, the first step toward elections.

Man donates heart and lives to talk about it

BALTIMORE (AP) — A man who underwent a heart-lung transplant after apparently becoming the first living person to donate his own heart was happy he could give as well as receive the gift of life, his mother says.

In a historic series of operations at Johns Hopkins Hospital, two teams of surgeons transplanted Clinton House's healthy heart into John Couch — with his own heart remaining — then gave the heart and lungs of a brain-dead accident victim to House.

"He said if someone could help him, he should help someone else," Joyce Plesic, House's mother, said Tuesday.

"It's a real nice feeling to know that a person is alive and that my husband will get to meet him," said Peggy Couch, of Yardley, Pa., whose husband suffered from congestive heart failure.

"We're very grateful and pleased and thankful. And without him, my husband would still be home without the heart that he needed to live," she said.

Although House, whose lungs were destroyed by cystic fibrosis, had what doctors described as a healthy heart, they said they gave him a new heart along with new lungs because such dual transplants appear to be more successful than simple lung transplants.

The complex feat, completed Monday and announced Tuesday, appeared to be the first application of what doctors call the "donor domino theory."

"We've talked about it many times. And now they've done it," said Dr. Norman Shumway, a Stanford University cardiologist who helped pioneer heart-lung transplants.

Others, however, questioned the wisdom and necessity of the procedure.

House, 28, and Couch, 38, were reported in critical but stable condition today, which doctors say is typical for transplant patients.

The surgery began when the heart and lungs of the automobile accident victim who died Sunday were removed at University of Maryland Medical System and transported on ice across town to Hopkins, where House was waiting.

Surgeons removed House's heart and quickly implanted it in the chest of Couch, who was waiting in an adjoining operating room.

Cockfighting bill presented to Senate committee

AUSTIN (AP) — Cockfighting may be a tradition in this country — but so were slavery and public hangings, a Humane Society official says.

Bill Mead of Corpus Christi, regional director of the Texas office of the Humane Society of the United States, was among several people who testified Tuesday in support of a bill to strengthen enforcement of the law prohibiting cockfighting.

Also appearing at a meeting of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee were numerous people opposed to the bill, sponsored by Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas.

Leedom noted that cockfighting is a crime under both state and federal law, and added, "The most effective tool to stop cockfighting is to provide for seizure of animals and fighting equipment."

His bill would authorize seizure and destruction of equipment, but only after there had been a final conviction for cockfighting.

Fighting may come naturally to gamecocks — but that does not justify placing them together "in bloody fights to the death just so people can get their kicks and be entertained," Mead said.

"The cockfighter will argue that cockfighting is a tradition, that cocks fight naturally and they are only allowing nature to take its course," Mead said.

"All of these are simply attempts to rationalize why a violent blood sport should continue," he said. "Cockfighting may be a tradition, but we have had many cruel traditions in our past, including gladiators fighting to the death, slavery, public hangings, dog fighting, burning at the stake and child labor. Tradition does not always mean that something is good."

Bob Leach of Flint, president of the United Gamefowl Breeders Association, described the raising of gamecocks as a multimillion-dollar business, with most sold out of Texas — in Mexico, Puerto Rico and the Philippines.

Leach said cockfighting is not inhumane and that a person could see "more cruelty to animals at a bass tournament" and more bloodshed on an East Texas deer hunt.

Hooking a fish is inhumane, Leach said, "but it's widely accepted ... so it's all right."

Cathedral of the Osages celebrating centennial

PAWHUSKA, Okla. (AP) — It was a day like many spring days in Oklahoma, with clouds and sunshine checkering the community at the prairie's edge, as the youngsters approached the altar for confirmation.

As friends and family watched the Roman Catholic ceremony at Immaculate Conception Church, bright sunshine suddenly strobed through two dozen stained glass windows and set the vaulted interior ablaze with color.

"There wasn't a dry eye in the house," said the Rev. Joseph Mazaika. "They still remember that here... And that was over 30 years ago."

The red brick church celebrates 100 years of such memories next month as one of the oldest Catholic parishes in Oklahoma. A wood-frame predecessor was built for the Osage Nation in 1887, Mazaika said.

Even now, Mazaika estimates that 80 percent of the 300 families in the parish are Osage.

The Osages trace 300 years of Christianity to Jacques Marquette, a French Jesuit missionary and explorer who came into contact with the Osages as part of the Sioux Nations in the 1600s.

Beginning in 1919, with funds donated by Osage tribal members newly rich from proceeds of the huge Burbank oil and gas field, the church installed one of the largest collections of stained glass windows in the Southwest.

Mazaika returned to lead the parish in 1983 after serving as assistant pastor in the 1950s. During the past four years, he has guided a loving restoration of the unique collection of windows and the entire church.

He said experts estimate it would cost more than $1 million to build and install such windows today.

"It's an art treasure," Mazaika said, standing on red carpet at the center of the ornate, cross-shaped church. Even light from a cloudy day pours color into the interior from the holy scenes depicted in the windows.

Mazaika points to nine windows surrounding the circular sanctuary on the east side of the church. They show Jesus and other biblical figures.

"You come in here in the morning and those are just on fire," Mazaika said.

Parochial school students from Bartlesville come to see the inspirational windows and the church architecture. Busloads of senior citizens sometimes arrive from Kansas to view the artistic depictions of the Pentecost, the immaculate conception, and events from Jesus' life.

But few tourists know of the windows' artistry, and the pulsing patterns of orange, yellow, red, blue, green, violet and gray are there mostly for the parishioners in the community of 4,700.

The two largest windows, 9 feet wide and 36 feet tall, show scenes significant to the largely Osage congregation.

One shows Columbus meeting a party of Indians, representing the introduction of Christianity to the New World. The other shows prominent Osages of the era gathered around the black-cassocked Rev. John Schoenmakers.

The church sought special permission from the Vatican to depict living tribal members in a stained glass window.

"There's no window like this in the world, anywhere," Mazaika said.

The Rev. Schoenmakers, a Dutch priest whose name came to represent any priest in the Osage language, built an Osage school and chapel at St. Paul, Kan., in 1846 and kept the church's link to the tribe alive when the Osages moved to Oklahoma in 1870, Mazaika said.

Even though the government restricted missionary work among the Oklahoma Osages to Quakers, the tribe remained loyal to the Catholic faith, Mazaika said.

In 1887, the Pawhuska parish joined active parishes in Krebs, Atoka and Purcell as the earliest in Oklahoma, Mazaika said.

An early frame church is gone. The current structure was built over a period of years beginning in 1910 by the Rev. Edward von Waesberghe, another Dutch priest who laid much of the brick himself.

"He wanted to build the cathedral of the Osages and that's what he built," Mazaika said. Von Waesberghe added spaces for huge windows, although at the time there wasn't enough money for the stained glass.

"There were no windows in the chapel and the birds used to fly through," Mazaika said. "After the Osages came into the oil money, a lot of things got accomplished."

Artisans in Munich, Germany, crafted the windows and shipped them in sections to Pawhuska. The largest two cost $5,000 apiece in 1919. Mazaika says they would cost $250,000 apiece now.

Passage of decades had caused the window frames to deteriorate by the time Mazaika returned to the parish in 1983. The Osages' oil money also had returned with the boom years of the early 1980s, and Mazaika embarked on a restoration campaign.

A Joplin millwork company crafted new frames for some of the windows and craftsmen repaired others. New plexiglass shields were added to protect the windows on the outside. The church was reroofed, repainted and brick was repointed.

Eastern cuisine features chicken, citrus

Chicken from the Casbah has fresh orange along with spices and herbs in this fascinating dish.

Chicken and chunks of orange are skewered in this Indonesian Skewered Chicken dish and served with a pungent peanut sauce.

Mediterranean dishes add exotic flair

Cooking chicken in a less familiar ethnic style is an excellent way to give yourself a change of pace and could provide for some interesting conversation at the dinner table.

Simply introducing different seasonings and using unfamiliar ingredients make one concentrate on the taste of a dish. And by using chicken, you have a familiar base on which to make comparisons.

So when you can't get away for a few days and want to shake the doldrums, spice up the menu and dream away the dinner hour. You might put on a caftan, light some candles and treat yourself to a Moroccan feast.

Serve chicken on a bed of couscous, redolent of saffron and cinnamon, along with chick peas, prunes and slices of fresh orange. Add some pita bread, a pot of mint tea and fill the air with Casbah magic.

Or let the coast of Spain beckon from across the Mediterranean with Stuffed Chicken Espana. Olives, raisins and diced orange stud the stuffing. Oranges, found in Spain centuries before they were brought to the New World, are common in classic Spanish dishes. In this recipe oranges are used to baste the chicken and flavor the gravy. The perky entree will brighten up the dreariest day.

Adding variety to your menu is a simple way to refresh your senses. Let exotic countries inspire excitement to transport you from routines.

CHICKEN FROM THE CASBAH

- 2 teaspoons ground cumin, divided
  - 1 1/4 teaspoons ground cinnamon, divided
  - 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 teaspoon ground pepper
  - 1 chicken (2 1/2 to 3 pounds), quartered
  - 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
  - 1 large onion, sliced (1 cup)
  - 1 1/2 cups orange juice
  - 1/2 cup chicken broth
  - 1 cup pitted prunes
  - 1/4 teaspoon saffron threads
  - 3 cups cooked couscous
  - 1 can (16 ounces) chick peas, drained
  - 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
  - 3 oranges, peeled and sliced
- Combine 1 teaspoon cumin, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, salt and pepper; sprinkle on chicken. In large skillet heat oil; brown chicken on all sides; remove and set aside. In same skillet saute onion 2 minutes. Stir in orange juice, broth, prunes, saffron, remaining 1 teaspoon cumin and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Return chicken. Cover. Simmer 20 to 25 minutes, until chicken is tender. Add chick peas and parsley; heat through. Spoon couscous onto serving platter; pour chicken mixture over couscous. Serve with orange slices.

Yield: 4 servings.

STUFFED CHICKEN ESPANA

- 1/4 pound bulk sausage
- 1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
- 4 cups fresh bread crumbs
- 1 cup orange juice, divided
- 1 orange, peeled, diced
- 1/2 cup chopped pitted green olives
- 1/4 cup raisins
- 1/4 teaspoon dried leaf thyme, crumbled
- 1 roasting chicken (5 to 6 pounds)

Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
2 tablespoons water
2 teaspoons cornstarch

In medium skillet brown sausage, breaking up sausage as it cooks; remove and set aside. In same skillet saute onion until tender. In large bowl combine bread crumbs, sausage, onion, 1/4 cup orange juice, diced orange, olives, raisins and thyme; mix well. Wash and dry chicken, sprinkle inside and out with salt and pepper. Stuff chicken with bread mixture; secure opening. Place chicken on rack in shallow roasting pan. Combine butter and 1/4 cup orange juice; brush on chicken. Roast in a preheated 350°F oven about 2 hours, basting occasionally with butter mixture and pan drippings, until chicken is done (juices run clear and leg bone moves easily). Remove chicken to serving plate; keep warm. Skim fat from pan drippings. Pour 1/4 cup pan drippings into a small saucepan; add remaining 1/2 cup orange juice, salt and pepper. Bring to boiling.

Combine water and cornstarch; stir into saucepan until mixture boils and thickens. Serve with chicken.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

Indonesian food offers variety of tastes

Indonesian food is some of the most delicious in the world. It's not subtle but an awakening for the taste buds! Not that every dish is hot or pungent, but there's always a combination of sweet, sour and salty tastes.

Sauces are often mild and sweet to offset spicy entrees, and the result is food with exotic looks and taste. To give foods that characteristic sweet-tart taste, Indonesians use a great deal of citrus, both in sauces and desserts.

One example of such a unique citrus creation is Indonesian Skewered Chicken, a form of satay — small pieces of chicken or meat threaded on a skewer and cooked over hot coals. The marinade for this version is redolent of orange juice, and contains peanut butter, soy sauce and myriad spices. It complements the chicken pieces and fresh orange chunks, cut with the peel intact for greater depth of flavor.

Served on a bed of cool, julienned cucumber, this dish will let your palate know that you've had an exciting experience in tempting foods.

Malaysian food is almost identical to the Indonesian — the spices, ingredients and cooking methods are similar — but there are subtle differences. Malaysian Spiced Chicken also calls for oranges, coriander, cumin and garlic, but here, nutmeg, cardamom and cloves lend a different tone to the blend and the dish is stir-fried.

These two excellent chicken dishes may be kissing cousins, but you will want them both in your family of favorite foods.

INDONESIAN SKEWERED CHICKEN

- 1 1/2 cups orange juice
- 1/2 cup peanut butter
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 2 teaspoons ground coriander
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon ground cayenne
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned, cut in 1 1/2-inch pieces (1 pound)
- 3 oranges, unpeeled, cut in chunks
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 large onion, chopped

- (1 cup)
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 large cucumber, julienned

In a large bowl combine orange juice, peanut butter, soy sauce, coriander, cumin, sugar, cinnamon, cayenne and salt; mix well. Remove 1/4 cup mixture, set aside. Add chicken to remaining mixture. Refrigerate 2 hours, stirring occasionally. Alternate chicken and orange chunks on 8-inch skewers. Place on rack in shallow pan. Broil 4 inches from source of heat 10 minutes. Turn, brush with marinade; broil 5 minutes longer. Meanwhile, in medium saucepan heat oil; saute onion and garlic 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in reserved 1/4 cup orange juice mixture. Cook 2 minutes, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens. Arrange skewers on bed of cucumbers on serving plate. Serve with sauce.

Yield: 4 servings.

MALAYSIAN SPICED CHICKEN

- 1 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon turmeric
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cardamom
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg

- 1 1/2 pounds boneless chicken, cut in strips
- 2 tablespoons peanut oil
- 1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh ginger
- 2 teaspoons grated orange peel
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 1/4 cup cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 3 oranges, peeled, sliced and halved
- 1 medium cucumber, unpeeled, seeded, sliced

In large skillet combine coriander, cumin, turmeric, cloves, cardamom and nutmeg. Shake over medium heat until lightly toasted, about 1 minute. Sprinkle over chicken; let stand 30 minutes. In same skillet heat oil; saute onion, garlic, ginger and orange peel 2 minutes. Add chicken. Stir-fry 5 minutes. Add orange juice, vinegar, sugar and salt. Simmer 5 minutes longer. Stir in orange pieces and cucumber; heat through. Serve over rice.

Yield: 4 servings.

Macaroni, cheese make cold pasta salad

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Give new flavor to ready-to-fix macaroni and cheese. The first step is to combine yogurt and herbs with the cheese sauce from the macaroni and cheese mix. Then add boiled ham or salami, beans and vegetables.

Tomatoes and snipped parsley garnish a cold pasta dish that gets its start from a macaroni and cheese mix.

ITALIAN MACARONI AND CHEESE SALAD

- 7 1/4-ounce package macaroni and cheese mix
  - 2-3rds cup plain yogurt
  - 1 tablespoon snipped parsley
  - 1/2 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
  - 4 ounces salami or boiled ham, cut into strips
  - 2 small tomatoes, cut into wedges
  - 1/2 of a 16-ounce can garbanzo beans, drained
  - 1/2 cup pitted ripe olives, halved
  - Lettuce leaves
- Cook macaroni from the mix in boiling water; drain and rinse. Cover and chill. Stir together yogurt, cheese sauce packet from mix, parsley and basil. Cover and chill. To serve, toss together chilled pasta, salami, tomatoes, beans and olives. Toss with dressing. Turn into lettuce-lined bowl. Makes 5 servings.

Pudding makes many desserts

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

For a tempting dessert that goes together like magic, start with pudding. You can use regular or instant pudding mix or ready-made canned or deli pudding.

Parfait: Layer pudding and pieces of fresh, frozen or canned fruit, beginning and ending with pudding. Sprinkle with granola.

Tarts: Stir toasted coconut; fresh, canned or dried fruit pieces, or cereal into pudding. Chill. At serving time, spoon into individual graham cracker or pastry tart shells and dollop with whipped cream.

Cake: Slice a pound cake horizontally into three layers. Spread your favorite pudding between layers to make a torte. Try two pudding flavors if you like. Chill before slicing.

Marbled pudding: Swirl whipped dessert topping or an ice cream topper into any flavor of pudding to give a marbled effect.

Teen's love for sister is unnaturally strong

at some statues.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a boy in my mid-teens. I have a sister who is a year younger than I, and very good-looking. Ever since I can remember, I've thought she was very pretty for a sister, but about two years ago I started thinking about her in a different way.

I find myself looking at her a lot, and trying to spy on her when she's undressing. I spend much of my time daydreaming about her. (I guess you could call it fantasizing.)

She has a lot of boyfriends and this makes me angry. I fantasize that she has the same kind of feelings for me, but I know it's wrong and I want to stop. My parents would be disgusted if they knew. We are a Christian family and they are very moral people.

Is it normal for a boy to have these kinds of feelings for his sister? What can I do to get over this?

TROUBLED IN DELAWARE

DEAR TROUBLED: Your sexual curiosity is normal, but you must control it. You need to talk about your feelings with a trusted older person. Your father has undoubtedly experienced the same kind of adolescent sexual curiosity (all men have), but if you aren't comfortable discussing it with him, talk to your minister or a school counselor.

In the meantime, stop spying on your sister. It's sneaky and childish. And if you really don't know what a naked lady looks like, go to the museum and look

DEAR ABBY: My fiance was killed in an accident shortly before our wedding day. We had been together for years and his family members are already like in-laws to me.

What should I call these people who are like family to me? We weren't quite married, so his mother isn't my mother-in-law, but she, his father, sister and brothers are much closer to me than just friends.

Abby, do people really survive this? I'm just beginning my career as a physician and Army officer, and my beloved had planned to accompany me on my duty assignments. I find it inconceivable that there could be another man who would enthusiastically follow a lady doctor around. On the other hand, I'm only 26, and I'm not sure I can face the next 50 years alone. Perhaps you have some advice for...

A 'WIDOW' WHO NEVER SAW HER WEDDING

DEAR CHILD: Continue to call the family of your late fiance whatever you called them while your beloved was living. And, yes, people do survive such tragic losses because they must—in order to go on and live productive lives.

You chose a profession to heal mankind. Physician, heal thyself. Good luck and God bless.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064.)

Recital to feature students of Fagan

Music students of Mrs. Lois Fagan of Pampa will be presented in a recital at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Tarpley Recital Hall, 155 N. Cuyler.

The program will feature piano solos, duos and quartets. Parents are scheduled to perform with some of the children. Students from grade school, junior high and high school levels will play compositions of master and contemporary composers and classic, romantic and modern periods, including Rachmaninoff, Glover, Burnam, Strauss, Pankow, Gillock, Senneville and Palmer.

David Foreman, 7, first-grade student at Horace Mann Elementary School, will be playing Chop Sticks with his mother, Debra Foreman, and solos Big Chief Wahoo by Flatau and A Walk in Space by Palmer.

Becky Pletcher, 16, junior honor student, will perform America Forever by Frank Sanucci. America Forever was composed by Sanucci in 1976 and dedicated to Mrs. Fagan, president of Pampa Music Teachers Association, and association members. Pletcher is active in choir, church and sports activities.

Dean Bright, 14, a freshman, will sing Lonely Voices by Billie Hanks, Jr., accompanied by Mrs. Fagan. The voice student is active in choir and softball and is a church quartet member.

Jerrie Douglas, 13, will perform Just a Closer Walk with Thee by Glover. She will accompany Mrs. Fagan as the teacher recites There's Magic in Those 88 Keys, written by Cheryl Jayner, 11, a Guild student. Douglas is a member of Pampa Middle School choir, is active in sports and plays music for her church.

Karen Brass, 9, of McLean, will perform Changing Places by Burnam with her mother, Pattie Brass. She will also sing Cats by Palmer. She attends First Baptist Church, sings in choir and solos and performs on piano in church.

Other students performing are Melody Lamb, Christy Thomas, Anne Bingham, Regina Bright, Melody Denis and Charlene Quillion.

Slesick to exhibit artwork at museum

LEN SLESICK

Amarillo artist Len Slesick will exhibit a series of landscape paintings at Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle through the month of May.

A reception for Slesick is planned for 3 to 4:30 p.m. May 17 at the museum.

"We see the landscape change through the cycle of the seasons. Yet a greater change takes place each day and may go unnoticed in our routine pattern of living. This series of paintings may take us physically from the Texas mountains of Colorado to the Yellowstone of Wyoming, but more so, they take us through the haze of a spring morning to the cacophony of color in an autumn afternoon.

"With a painterly approach, objects may become secondary. Even light and dark give way to color in importance for evoking a mood in light and atmosphere," he said.

Slesick was reared in the Midwest and left Illinois in 1965. By profession a meteorologist since his days in the U.S. Navy during the Korean War, he is a staff meteorologist with KVII Television in Amarillo.

He has a high interest in archaeology, serving as past president of Panhandle Archaeological Society. He has presented papers on both meteorology and archaeology at state and national levels.

Slesick developed an interest in art through studies with Amarillo artist Ben Konis. Continued studies included a variety of drawing and life drawing classes at Amarillo College and Amarillo Art Center, along with related art courses in ceramics. He studied under Dord Fitz at the Fitz Gallery in Amarillo for four years.

One-man shows include previous exhibits at the Square House Museum; Panhandle State University, Goodwell, Okla. in 1976; Webb Gallery, Amarillo, 1980; Amarillo Art Center Gallery 302, 1981; and Roberts County Museum, Miami, 1982.

Head injury group to meet

Panhandle Chapter of Texas Head Injury Foundation will meet at 10 a.m. Saturday at Amarillo Speech and Hearing Center.

Speakers will be Barry W. Rath, Ph.D., clinical director, and Judith P. Levy, M.S., clinical evaluator-associate, both of New Medico Rehabilitation Center of Texas.

The two will speak on "Community Re-entry" and "Services for the Head Injured."

Knights of Columbus plan awards banquet

LOUIS S. PARKER JR.

Frank Keim Council 2767, Knights of Columbus in Pampa, will hold an honors banquet and awards night on Saturday at Columbus Hall, Ward and Buckler Streets.

Social hour will be 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., with dinner served at 7:30 p.m. The program will follow the dinner; reservations are required.

Keynote address will be given by Louis S. Parker Jr. of Austin, state executive secretary for the Texas State Council, Knights of Columbus, Feb. 21, 1966 to Nov. 1, 1983. He has been a member of Knights of Columbus since 1947.

Parker was appointed by Governor Bill Clements to the Texas State Board of Examiners of Professional Counselors, and has served on the board since March of 1982.

He retired from the military with 27 years active service, 10 years U.S. Navy and 17 years U.S. Air Force, as a pedagogist (Pd.D.). He taught pedagogics, psychology, counseling, human relations and the art of communication at the Air University and the USAF Academy, and he served as commandant of schools at Lackland Air Force Base from 1964 to 1966.

Parker has been married for 47 years. He and his wife have five daughters, one son and 11 grandchildren.

He is Knight Commander, and his wife Dorothy is Lady Commander Equestrian, of Order of the Holy Sepulchre, of Jerusalem, by Pope John Paul II. They have been converts to the church since 1947.

Active in Texas Research Society on Alcoholism, he is a lecturer, writer and world traveler since 1983.

Bishop LeRoy T. Matthiesen, bishop of the Amarillo diocese, will address members and their wives on Pope John Paul II's visit to San Antonio on Sept. 13.

Invocation will be given by Chaplain Reverend Gary C. Sides. Bishop Matthiesen will give the benediction.

The program will include a number of awards of appreciation to members for exceptional service to the Order.

Highlight of the evening will be presentation of the "Knight of the Year" award, given annually to the Knight demonstrating exceptional service to the Council and the Order.

McCray sparks Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics were seeing triple (double) after Rodney McCray finished with 24 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds in a do-or-die performance for the Houston Rockets.

McCray took it upon his shoulders to carry the Rockets a step farther in the NBA playoffs Tuesday night, leading them to a 112-107 victory over Seattle, avoiding elimination in their Western Conference semifinal playoff.

"He was an inspiration to his teammates, he made them play better as a team," said Seattle guard Dale Ellis, who was paired defensively against McCray.

Seattle still leads the series 3-2 and could clinch a spot in the division finals with a victory Thursday night in Seattle. A Rocket victory Thursday would return the series to Houston on Saturday for the seventh game of the best-of-seven series.

Houston jumped in front quickly in the first quarter and held a 21-point lead at 59-38 with 5:25 to go in the second quarter before the Sonics shut off the Rocket running game and pulled to within 66-56 by halftime.

"I thought we played well at the start, but Seattle wouldn't settle for that," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said. "The individual effort of Rodney McCray was outstanding. The mistakes he made were from fatigue."

McCray played all but one minute of the 48-minute game.

"There's only one month left in the season, I'll get plenty of rest later," McCray said.

Seattle cut Houston's lead to 89-86 going into the fourth quarter and took its first lead of the game with 7:11 left to play on a 3-point basket by Tom Chambers that put the Sonics in front, 97-96.

But the Rockets regained the lead for good moments later.

"We allowed them to get in the driver's seat and didn't match them in overall play," said

Chambers, who had 6 points at the half and finished with 15.

Akeem Olajuwon, who led the Rockets with 26 points, hit a basket with 4:15 left in the game and the Rockets never trailed again.

"I was nervous at the end, I was praying for them to take a shot and miss, and that's what happened," Olajuwon said.

Ellis, who scored 19 of his 27 points in the second half, missed a 3-point shot with two seconds left and the Sonics trailing 110-107.

"I was open, we were down, and I wanted the shot," said Ellis, one of the league's better 3-point shooters. "I had the shot but it didn't go in. I'm disappointed."

The Rockets grabbed the rebound and added two free throws for the final margin.

Allen Leavell scored 11 of his 15 points from the free throw line for the Rockets, Robert Reid added 14 points and Ralph Sampson hit 13, all in the first half, for the Rockets.

"We didn't want the season to end," McCray said. "When it came down to the last three minutes the fans were on their feet and they pulled us through."

"They wouldn't let us die."

The two teams couldn't agree as to who has the most pressure.

"The pressure shifts," Sampson said. "We've got the home court advantage. We can come back here for the seventh game."

The pressure factor doesn't matter to Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff.

"We'll accept the pressure," Bickerstaff said. "I thought they made the shots and played a great game. We just didn't get it done."

The Rockets are trying to become only the second team to lose the first two games of a best-of-seven series at home and rebound to win the series.

Los Angeles accomplished the feat in 1969.

Optimist barbecue scheduled

The Pampa Optimist Club will hold its annual opening day barbecue Saturday, May 16. The meal will be served from noon until 6 p.m.

Most of the 49 participating Optimist Baseball Clubs are scheduled to play starting at 10:00 a.m. Saturday.

The Optimist Club invites families and friends of the players to accompany them to their games and join in the meal.

All athletes will be provided tickets to the barbecue. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children (12 and under) and may be purchased at the serving line on Saturday.

Also as part of the opening day ceremonies, Optimist ball teams will present their Queens at 6 p.m. at the Babe Ruth Park.

Optimist Queens work with their team to help raise money for the Optimist program.

Optimist roundup

Grant Supply outlasted the Lions Club, 10-9, Tuesday in Babe Ruth baseball action at Optimist Park.

Grant won without collecting a hit as all the runs were scored on either walks or errors.

Jason Becker pitched a three-hitter to record the mound win while striking out eight and walking four. Chris Morris struck out five to pick up a save.

Losing pitcher Barry Coffee struck out five and walked nine.

Top hitters were Kelly Whitson and Zack Thomas, each with two doubles and two singles, for the Lions.

It was the opening game of the season for both teams.

First National Bank defeated Pampa Hardware 11-5 in one other Babe Ruth game played last night.

Winning pitcher was James Bybee, who also had a pair of singles.

Mike Cagle led the Bank's hitting attack with two doubles and a single.

Mike Bridges, Mark Wood, Scott Lucas and John Clark each had a base hit for Hardware.

In Bambino League play, Ivan Langley knocked in Justin Johnson with a single in the bottom of the seventh inning to give Celanese a 12-11 win over Duncan in a National League game.

Others with base hits for Celanese were Russell Tyler, Justin Johnson and Bryan Sims. Tyler Kendall had a triple and Kirk McDonald a double for the winners.

Winning pitcher was Justin Johnson.

In an American League game, Jerry Don Belt singled in the winning run with two outs in the sixth inning to give Keys Pharmacy a 3-2 win over Rotary.

Mark Woelfle was the winning pitcher and also helped his own cause with a pair of singles. Woelfle gave up four hits while striking out 12 and walking two.

Eddie Hernandez also had a single for Keys.

Jason Brantley pitched an outstanding game for Rotary despite the loss. Brantley and Dave Davis each had a base hit for Rotary.

Holmes downed Chase, 10-3, in another AL game.

Winning pitcher Sean Hardman allowed eight hits while striking out 10 and walking three. Holmes has a 1-0-1 record.

Lakers eliminate Warriors

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Add another name to the list of those who believe this is the year of the Los Angeles Lakers.

"They're a great team," Golden State Coach George Karl said after the Lakers beat his Warriors 118-106 Tuesday night to win their NBA playoff series.

"I've got to go along with what everybody else is saying, the Lakers are the team to beat."

The Lakers, who took the second-round series with the Warriors four games to one, advance to the Western Conference final, where they'll meet the winner of the Houston-Seattle series.

The SuperSonics hold a 3-2 edge in that best-of-seven series despite a 112-107 loss Tuesday night.

The Lakers, who had suffered their first loss of the 1987 playoffs at the hands of the Warriors two days earlier in Oakland, came back with a vengeance Tuesday night.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 19 points and 13 assists, James Worthy had 23 points, and A.C. Green had 20 for Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, Michael Cooper, honored prior to the game as the NBA's Defensive Player of the Year, helped hold the Warriors' Eric "Sleepy" Floyd to 18 points on 7-for-17 shooting from the floor. Cooper also scored 17 points.

Floyd had scored 51 points, including an NBA playoff record of 29 in one period, the fourth, as the Warriors rallied from a 14-point deficit to win 129-121 on Sunday.

Larry Smith was a standout for Golden State Tuesday night. He had 23 rebounds, 18 of them in the first half, and added 16 points.

The Lakers moved ahead to stay late in the first quarter and continued to build their lead until both teams substituted freely in the final minutes.

"We got embarrassed in the fourth quarter the other day," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "We came back."

Most of the Lakers said they didn't care whether they played Houston or Seattle in the conference final, the last step to the NBA championship series.

Houston beat Los Angeles in the conference championship series a year ago.

Tri-State Association seniors love their golf

DEDICATION TO THE Tri-State Senior Golf Association was evidenced last week as board members gathered for the final meeting prior to this summer's tournament. That affair, the 53rd in the history of the fun event for golfers age 55 and over, is scheduled for late July at the Pampa Country Club.

Several of the directors, including the current president, are from Pampa. Of the 32-member group, seven are from here, the rest from all over Texas and Oklahoma. The third member of the "Tri-State" organization is New Mexico, and currently unrepresented on the board, a matter that is being studied. And the interesting part of last week's session was that gathering of golfing eagles (plus a few birdsies, pars and bogeys) was at their own expense, on their own time, from various points of the Sooner State and as far distant as Dallas in the Lone Star. These men love the sport of golf, but more than that, the Tri-State Association. Some, for one reason or another, can no longer play in the event but they still offer their services to be used in any way possible.

In addition, a strong, solid, caring group of Pampa women serves as an unofficial auxiliary group providing gobs of hospitality for the golfers, and more especially for their wives who generally accompany them. The Pampa ladies have designed several new events this year to make the week-long stay at the Top O Texas even more enjoyable. In addition to the usual style shows, bridge parties, shopping tours, golfing dates, putting contests, the ladies will also have available to them a tour of the Panhandle Plains Museum and a night in Palo Duro Canyon to enjoy the musical TEXAS at the outdoor amphitheatre, to be joined there by their golfing husbands.

Not overlooked this year will be widows of deceased former members. Special invitations will go to those ladies to become part of the activities, reuniting them with friends they used to meet annually as their husbands competed.

Sports Forum

Warren Hasse

All of this under the leadership of Dr. Joe Donaldson, serving as president this year, and with the cooperation of and thanks to the Board of Directors of the PCC for permitting use of the facilities by this considerate group.

What does it mean to Pampa? It is a great shot in the arm economically, and will be more so this year. Tournament format changes have made it possible for all golfers (160) to play at least five days as part of the event. This means, of course, one or two extra days of motels, restaurants, shopping excursions, service stations, etc.

It is a great event for Pampa in many ways, a chance to showcase the community in a low-key, positive, enjoyable manner. And a great big THANK YOU goes out to all the local men and women, all volunteers, who work year 'round on pulling it off.

Along the same line, a group of 60 Celanese Corporation employee-fun athletes carried the Pampa banner to Amarillo last Saturday and represented their employer, themselves and the community in which they work and live very admirably. With Berinda Turcotte coordinating everything, the Celanese runners joined Phillips Corporation of Borger as one of two non-Amarillo based firms (out of 38 corporations) to participate in the Fifth Annual Corporate Cup competition benefiting the youth-serving Campfire organization.

Divided into teams bearing such exciting names as Hard Hats and Legs, Texas Coolers, We Luv Donuts, Slow Movers to China, The Pacemakers, Reliability III Plus I, and GBUS (The Good, The Bad, The Ugly, and Sam) the Celanese group came away with several honors, companywise, teamwise and individually.

Team efforts provided the Celanese Shifters Plus Two team (Chris Hansen, Teresa Derington, Donnie Bennett, Berinda Turcotte) first place in the Mixed Division team competition, while The Slugs squad (John Haesle, Glenn Schafer, Dan Morrison, Kevin Lombardozzi) finished third in the Men's Division. Other individual honors were earned by Hansen, who had the fifth best time in the Men Under 36 Division; Derington, who finished fifth in the Women Under 36 Division; and Linda Anderson, who won fourth in the Women Over 35

Division.

And to climax the day's events, the Celanese Corporation Team won the Spirit Award for the enthusiasm and team support generated from 6:30 a.m. until the conclusion of activities at 1 p.m. All are to be congratulated for their volunteer, sweaty, breathtaking efforts. As the giant flag which waved over their team section in the stands proclaimed: Celanese Quality!!

A couple of former Harvesters also did well, running for Amarillo organizations. Gary McCarrrell, insurance man running for his wife's brokerage firm, easily won the Men Over 35 Division crown. And Lamar Lively, under his employer's Amarillo Independent School District banner, where he serves as an assistant superintendent, competed in the Executive Mile run. Lively quarterbacked the Harvesters back in the late 1940s for Tom Tipps and Aubra Nooncaster.

Once an athlete always an athlete, even if only at heart.

Outstanding athletes honored

Among the athletes honored at the Pampa High School all-sports banquet Monday night were (l-r) Jon Roe, most improved, football; most valuable player, baseball; Joel Farina, outstanding defensive lineman; Mark Williams, outstanding offensive and defensive back, football; outstanding performer, boys track; Lonnie Mills, Hustling Harvester, most valuable player, free throw and rebound award, basketball.

Lefors blanks Briscoe 19-0

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

BRISCOE — Lefors pitcher Heath Keelin pitched a perfect game as the Lefors Pirates once again dominated the Briscoe Broncos, 19-0, Tuesday afternoon.

Keelin, who struck out the first six batters he faced, said he wasn't throwing anything particularly special.

"I threw fastballs and curves," Keelin said. "I threw them stuff they could hit, they just couldn't hit it."

The game, due to the 15-run rule, was called after three innings.

Keelin looked like he might strike out the side again in the third. But, with a 1-2 count, Briscoe first baseman Shawn Everett grounded to second for the first out.

Kirk Kerbo's two unassisted put-outs at first base ended the game for Briscoe.

"This'll give us some more experience," Briscoe Coach Ron Van Vranken said.

The Broncos were playing without four team leaders — Eldon VanHooser, Sam Watson, Robert Hall and Billy Hardin — who, according to Van Vranken, were unavailable for the game.

"With those four, we're an improved team," the always optimistic Van Vranken said. "These kids out here are just inexperienced."

That inexperience showed in the first inning after Lefors center fielder Marshall Keys struck out. Bronco catcher Shawne Goad dropped the third strike and failed to throw to first for the out.

"That's the first game he's ever played at catcher," Van Vranken said. "He just didn't know he was supposed to throw to first."

Needless to say, with a final of 19-0, the Lefors bats were very much alive. The Pirates knocked out a total of twelve hits in the three innings.

The damage was done after the first, though, as Lefors batted around not once, but twice. The first seven batters of the game all scored.

The eighth batter in the lineup, leftfielder Jamie Wariner, then struck out for the first out of the inning.

That strikeout did not phase the Pirates as a team, as they came back to score six more first-inning runs.

Third baseman Richard Hernandez, who went 3-for-4 with two doubles, again led the hitting attack. Hernandez is now batting an even .500 after five games.

Shortstop Dusty Roberson was not given an official at bat, but scored four times thanks to two bases on balls and two errors.

Ironically, the only Pirate to not connect for a hit was Keelin, who went 0-for-2. He did, though, score once and reach base twice after receiving two free passes.

Keys was the games RBI leader with four. The only Lefors player to not score was Wariner.

Other extra base hits for Lefors came from Kent Kerbo and Keys who both had doubles. The final line score for the Pirates read 19 runs on 12 hits and five Bronco errors. For Briscoe, no runs, no hits, no Lefors errors.

Lefors will travel to Follett Friday, May 15, for a contest with the district favorite Panthers. Briscoe's next scheduled game is at home, also against Follett, Friday, May 22.

Story Patch players get kids, parents into the act

By ORVILLE HANCOCK
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH (AP)—The actress was dressed as a rabbit and was hiding out in the audience composed of children. Someone on stage was looking for Peter Rabbit.

"Where can that rabbit be?" said the actor on stage. "He better come home or he's in trouble."

A little boy, hardly 5, ratted on Peter Rabbit.

"Here he is," the little boy yelled. Then shaking his finger at the startled actress, he said, "You better go home, Peter Rabbit, or you'll be in trouble."

That wasn't part of the script and it called for some improvising. But the unexpected is what the "Story Patch Players" expect in their plays.

It's all part of participatory theater, a new acting style that has been established in Fort Worth.

The players are composed of six women, all of whom write plays and outlines, all are actresses and all know each part in the play.

There's a dance teacher who lives in a federal prison, a woman who lives under a made-up name, a singer, and teachers in drama, speech, and instruction for deaf children.

"This is theater unlike any of us have done before," said Pam Chernick. "We start with an outline for action and then improvise as we go. We may provide different words for each performance."

It has gone over well so far. It was founded a little over a year ago by Judy Braddy of Crowley with headquarters at the Reggie Turnbo Dance Studios.

Concept of the Story Patcher's art goes back to Greek Theater and to the Shakespeare plays in England. The audience is part of the play.

"We started out as part-time players, because we all have other jobs, but our troupe has grown to almost full time," Mrs. Braddy said. "We began with one show a month and now we give several."

The six women make their own costumes and they specialize in shows based on children's stories, mostly classical fairy tales. They perform at schools, churches, libraries, YWCA, birthday parties, Mayfest, Octoberfest, and they are strolling players when they do shows at shopping malls.

It has become a business for profit.

"It's not a living," said Ms. Chernick, "but we make more than most actresses in this town."

All the players credit Mrs. Braddy's organizing ability and her energy with making the Story Patch Players a successful operation.

Reggie Turnbo, whose dance studio is headquarters for the group, said that Mrs. Braddy is always busy and always in a hurry.

"My son, Jeff, says that Judy could build a city in 30 minutes with a hot glue gun and foam core," Mrs. Turnbo said.

Mrs. Braddy moved to the Fort Worth area two years ago from Wichita, Kan., when her husband, Bob Braddy, became a producer and writer of films for General Dynamics. She teaches speech and business communications at Tarrant County Junior College.

She taught creative arts and theater in public schools for 16 years. In Fort Worth, she has taught courses for preschoolers and their parents at the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History and she has taught drama at the Six Flags School of Performing Arts.

Mrs. Braddy has developed a program called Kinderarts for children from 2½ years old to 8. It is a Mom's Day Out program which stresses creative training for children.

A Story Patch Players troupe is being started by Mrs. Braddy in Wichita Falls and another in Austin.

"I'm hoping to get a television show," she said.

In auditioning actresses for the troupe, Mrs. Braddy said she looks for women who "sparkle and have an excitement for life."

She added: "I look for women who love children and understand how to keep them from being afraid."

Reggie Turnbo fits those specifications perfectly. Besides, she had a place where the troupers could rehearse at her dance studio.

A dance instructor for 20 years, Mrs. Turnbo teaches ballet, tap and jazz at her studio on Camp Bowie, which has been open a year and a half.

She lives at the Federal Correctional Institution in Fort Worth, but she's not an inmate. She's the wife of the warden, Charles Turnbo.

At her dance studio, she has classes for the deaf.
