

Fhursday Witness discloses fund for Norths

By JIM DRINKARD Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A surprise witness testified today that Iran-Contra banker Albert Hakim's lawyer said he was "looking for a cover" to pay $70,000 to Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's wife as a reward to the former White House aide. David M. Lewis, a Washington lawyer who volunteered to testify before the joint House-Senate investigating committees, said his advice was sought during a luncheon meeting last Oct. 10 in Geneva with lawyer Willard I.

Zucker, who was Hakim's financial manager

Zucker, Lewis said, was looking for a "mirror transaction" in which money intended for North would be channeled to his wife, Betsy, possibly in the form of a commission from a real estate broker. He said the broker would simultaneously be reimbursed by Hakim with a deposit in a bank anywhere in the world the broker chose. Lewis said nothing came of the conversation, and he did not pursue the matter.

After half an hour of testimony from Lewis, the House and Senate panels headed for separate meetings to discuss whether to grant North limited immunity from prosecution in exchange for his testimony on the Iran-Contra affair. The House panel's meeting broke up after an hour without any resolution of the North question, in part because some members were absent, House Chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said. The House was to resume its discussion of North later today.

At a closed lunch meeting Wednesday, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, who is running a grand jury investigation of the affair, strongly urged the committees to reject or at least delay any immunity for North. But the Senate chairman and vice chairman, Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said Walsh has had plenty of time to develop any criminal case against North and promised to call the fired White House aide as a public witness in July.

A Freedom

Lewis' testimony served to corroborate Hakim's disclosure Wednesday that he used proceeds from U.S. arms sales to Iran to establish a $200,000 trust fund in Switzerland for North's family shortly before the former National Security Council deputy undertook a risky secret mission to Tehran in May 1986

June 4, 1987

Hakim said he never told North directly about what Hakim called a "death benefit" account for North's family, and denied he had intended to compromise North.

But he did tell North not to worry about his family's financial security and did arrange for Zucker to meet with Mrs. North in Philadelphia to learn the financial needs of the four North children

Bribes Machine shop operation nets congressman in indictments By JOHN M. DOYLE Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - Wedtech Corp. transformed itself from a machine shop into an acclaimed, multimillion-dollar defense contractor through fraud and briberv, according to a racketeering indictment naming a congressman and six others

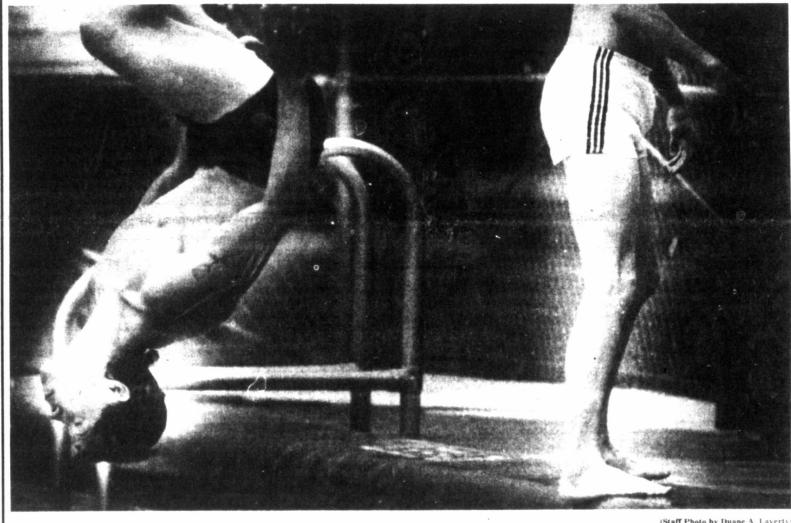

Wednesday's 58-count federal indictment accused Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., his eldest son and five other people of turning Wedtech into "a vehicle for making illegal payments to public officials" to win government contracts Wedtech has been the focus of five federal, state and local criminal investigations into how it grew practically overnight into a $100 million-a-year defense contractor, largely through no-bid government contracts. 'Wedtech was presented to the public as the proverbial American success story," said U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani. "This indictment now alleges that much of Wedtech's success was based on its being run as a racketeering enterprise. In Washington, special prosecutor James C. McKay is investigating links between Wedtech and Attorney General Edwin Meese III and Lyn Nofziger, a former top political aide to President Reagan. Giuliani said he has forwarded to McKay all evidence pertaining to Meese and Nofziger. Federal investigators, meanwhile, are exploring whether Wedtech money bought the silence of Jessica Hahn about her 1980 sexual encounter with Jim Bakker that led to the PTL founder's downfall, the Daily News reported today. Law enforcement sources the newspaper did not identify said part of a $265,000 fund set up for Ms. Hahn may have come from Wedtech money donated by founder John Mariotta, a bornagain Christian, to the Rev. Aimee Cortese, a PTL board member and sister of Rep. Robert Garcia, a target in the Wedtech case. The News reported Wednesday that prosecutors had temporarly shelved plans to seek charges against Garcia, D-N.Y., and his wife. Jane Lee Garcia. in order to pursue additional evidence. Cortese may have passed the money to Hahn without Mariotta's knowledge, it said. The investigators reportedly said they have been unable to account for $60,000 Ms. Cortese allegedly received from Mariotta and Wedtech Wednesday's indictment accused Biaggi, an 18-year congressman from the Bronx, of tax evasion, making false statements on financial-disclosure forms and extorting $3.6 million See BRIBES, Page 2

Liability Head over heels changes enacted

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas legislators have closed out a two-day special session Wednesday by approving civil justice reform and liability insurance measures that failed in the 140-day regular session.

It took the House less than 10 minutes to complete its work Wednesday and adjourn. The Senate adjourned a few minutes later

'The quickness to which tort reform moved in the special session is an indication of what can be done when legislators work together," Gov. Bill Clements said. Clements said he hoped the same spirit of cooperation would be present June 22 when he calls lawmakers back for a second special session on the state budget and tax revenues. With little debate, the House gave voice-vote approval Wednesday to the "tort reform" and insurance bills and sent them to Clements. The Senate approved the package Tuesday night, less than 24 hours after the same measures died at the Monday midnight deadline for the regular legislative session.

Miami set for cow calling, three-day Centennial party

By CATHY SPAULDNG Staff Writer

MIAMI — The Sweetheart of the Plains turns 100 this week, and residents here will spend the whole weekend celebrating.

The Miami Centennial Celebration Friday, Saturday and Sunday will include two dances, a Cowboy church service, a glitzy parade, a fashion show of historic costumes, crafts demonstrations, an air show, rodeos, 3,000 pounds of barbecue beef and cattle take notice - the annual National Cow Calling Contest.

Penni Clark of the Centennial Committee is ready

We're in a final countdown and holding pattern in preparation for the celebration," Clark said

Clark and her husband, Robert Clark, have been working since before the start of the year to get Miami residents excited about their heritage and to have fun doing it.

And the pride shows on the faces of nearly 100 Miami men who have sprouted beards for the fete. Those clean-shaven males who don't have an exemption certificate will be thrown into a bareface jail in front of the Roberts County Jail. And to show their commitment to enforcing this temporary "law" Roberts County Sheriff Lando Brown and his Hakim added that he had asked Zucker to find a way to make an "anonymous" fund diversion to North's family, because he knew it was illegal to make a payment directly to a U.S. government employee.

These efforts were taking place during a twoyear congressional ban on U.S. military aid to the Contras.

In other developments:

Walsh has subpoenaed arms dealer Al Schwimmer to testify before the grand jury investigating the arms sales to Iran, according to a source familiar with the case who spoke today under condition of anonymity. Schwimmer, who holds dual U.S. and Israeli citizenship, has been an adviser on technology to the Israeli government and is said to have helped arrange for Israeli arms sales to Iran in 1985.

Members of the investigating committees called Wednesday for the resignation of Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, who acknowledged having misled Congress and the public about U.S. government involvement in the weapons resupply effort for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. Abrams vowed to stay on, but one senator said the hardnosed State Department official was only denying the inevitable.

The implications of Hakim's assertion about money for North remained unclear. Hakim said he did not know whether North ever was told that money generated by the operation he was running might be used for the benefit of his family. Hakim said he was motivated by a fondness for North and by concern that the National Security Council aide's driven work style led him to neglect his family.

He said he once told North, "Ollie, you are a part of the family for as long as one of us is alive. You need not to worry about your family.

Hakim said he originally conceived the $200,000 account earmarked for North as a "death benefit," a sort of life insurance policy for his family. The account was created on May 20, 1986, just before North and other officials traveled to Tehran in an unsuccessful attempt to free U.S. hostages.

A Centennial parade, the first to cross Main Street in years, be-

"My intention was only to help," Hakim said in answer to a question from House counsel John Nields on whether he had sought intentionally to compromise North by funneling money to him without his knowledge.

Hakim also testified, as expected, that he is holding an account named Korel Assets for the benefit of Richard V. Secord, the retired Air Force general who is Hakim's business partner. Secord has testified that he has renounced all profits from his business dealings in the Iran-Contra affair, and Hakim confirmed that Secord had told him that in early 1986. But he said he continued to put money aside for Secord anyway, and the account now contains more than $1.5 million.

In all, Hakim's books show the Iran-Contra dealings netted $9.6 million that has been distributed into various accounts, payments and investments for the benefit of himself, Secord, North and another partner, ex-CIA agent Thomas Clines. Clines was credited with $990,000, and Hakim with a total of $6.8 million, although at least $4 million of that was reinvested for the benefit of "the enterprise," as participants called the Iran-Contra initiative.

While Hakim provided the most detailed accounting so far of the money in the Iran-Contra transactions, the information came only from his ledgers and not directly from bank records. Hakim and Secord still are fighting investigators' efforts to obtain those records through Swiss courts.

Hakim said he had entered the initiative more than two years ago hoping both to make a profit and to help the United States, where he became a naturalized citizen in 1984, and Iran, where he was born

He said he understood that both the effort to aid the Contras and the later effort to free U.S. hostages through arms sales to Iran had been undertaken at the behest of President Reagan. Hakim said Secord gave him that impression.

Investments firm must pay $25 million for inside deals

NEW YORK (AP) - Kidder Peabody & Co. will pay the government more than $25 million in fines and illegal profits from insider trading to settle civil charges against the prestigious Wall Street firm, Dow Jones News Service reported today.

The settlement would be the second-largest in history and stems from a widening federal probe that began more than a year ago into insider trading, the illicit use of nonpublic information to gain unfair advantages in securities deals.

Dow Jones quoted a Securities and Exchange Commission civil complaint filed in U.S. District Court as saying that Kidder Peabody would turn over $13.67 million in illegal profits and pay $11.62 million in penalties

As part of the settlement, Kidder neither admitted or denied the charges but said it would never again violate federal securities-fraud laws, Dow Jones said

Kidder Peabody spokesman Hugh Covington did not return two telephone calls seeking comment. SEC spokesman Mary McCue in Washington had no comment.

The SEC's complaint stemmed from admission of an insider trading scheme by Martin A. Siegel, formerly Kidder Peabody's top merger specialist, who pleaded guilty to criminal charges in February

Open meetings bill awaits governor's decision

AUSTIN (AP) — Backers of a bill to close loopholes in the Texas Open Meetings Act are awaiting the decision of Gov. Bill Clements, who aides say hasn't yet made up his mind.

"He's very supportive of openness in government. But he hasn't indicated yet whether he's signing or vetoing,' press secretary Reggie Bashur said Wednesday

The bill would require governmental bodies to keep a record of what they do when meeting in closed-door sessions. Its passage capped efforts that have been made since 1977 to strengthen the state law aimed at making certain the public's business is done in public.

The legislation was praised by Texas Media, a coalition of seven state news media groups interested in freedom of information issues.

"I think it's a significant improvement in the open meetings law that will result in better government and increased opportunity for people to in-teract with government," said Jeff Bruce, Texas Media's chairman and managing editor of the Austin American-Statesman.

Current law allows governmental bodies to meet in private, "executive" sessions to discuss a variety of matters. The bill would require them to keep certified agendas or tape recordings of those meetings.

Under the legislation, the tape or agendas could be made available to members of the public who challenge action by a committee, and any action taken by public officials who violate the law could be voided.

The bill also would guarantee that television stations could take cameras into governmental meetings and videotape the sessions. The original act guarantees meetings can be covered by reporters taking written notes or using tape recorders or still cameras.

Bruce said another advantage of the legislation is that "it makes it easier for government officials to abide by the law.

He said that, pending the governor's decision on the open meetings bill, the 1987 Legislature was a good one overall for open government.

"The session's not over until the governor's had an opportunity to make a final decision. As far as the Legislature goes, it was a very good session for the public's ability to have access to the governmental process," Bruce said.

Thunderstorms still threatening the rain-soaked Hill Country

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A slow-moving thunderstorm system blamed for two deaths after it ravaged a rain-soaked area continued to threaten the Hill Country today, officials said.

About 150 people evacuated from their homes in D'Hanis remained overnight at the National Guard Armory in Hondo, said Donna Keiner, a Medina County Sheriff's dispatcher.

Larry Eblen, a forecaster with the National Weather Service in San Antonio, said another 5 inches of rain was possible today west of San Antonio.

"There's an upper-level disturbance sitting over the Hill Country, just rotating around," Eblen said. "It's not moving. That's what has us so concerned. We don'at feel the situation is over yet." Sandra Rodriguez, 20, died about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday when high waters swept her car into a drainage ditch northwest of downtown San Antonio, fire department spokesman Tom Garcia said. The submerged car traveled about 100 yards through the canal before speashing to a stop.

"She couldn't get out of the car and rescuers couldn't get to her," Garcia said.

Patrick Alan Roddy, 32, was killed about 9 a.m. when he stepped off a city bus and attempted to cross a rain-slick street in front of the bus, police spokeswoman Romana Lopez said.

A motorcyclist tried to avoid Roddy as he was trying to cross the street but lost control of the vehicle and hit him, Ms. Lopez said. The motorcyclist, whose vehicle was hit by oncoming traffic, was taken to Wilford Hall Medical Center at Lackland Air Force Base, Ms. Lopez said.

San Antonio, which received about 1 inch of rain Wednesday, has received 23.7 inches of rain since January, including 12.87 inches in May, weather service officials said.

Wednesday's torrential rains swelled creeks beyond their banks in San Antonio, parts of South Texas and the Hill Country, where some areas reported more than 8 inches of rain

We've had so much rain that my memory is not that good any more about how many days it has rained," said weather service meteorologist Bill Hare in San Antonio

In D'Hanis, people living near the Seco Creek were evacuated after the creek began to overflow its banks Wednesday morning, said Medina County Sheriff's spokesman John Franklin

Sixty people were summoned to appear for jury duty on Monday and prosecutors and Tucker's attorneys trimmed the number to 32 on

Mayor Henry Cisneros, City Manager Lou Fox and other former and current police officials have been subpoenaed to testify in the trial that is expected to last three weeks.

Tucker has been on suspension since his indictment last October.

School keeps 'Death of a Salesman

SWEENY (AP) — English teachers at a local high school will continue using "Death of a Salesman" despite a parent's claim that the play undermined the proper education of youth through excessive use of profane language.

The Sweeny Independent School District Board also set up a committee of teachers and administrators to review the play, written in 1949 by Arthur Miller, and other books used as supplemental class reading. The action came Tuesday at a special meeting.

Last month Sammy Golden, a lay minister for Christian Center Church of West Columbia and a Sweeny resident, asked the school board to remove the text from the curriculum. He said requiring juniors in high school to read the play would be a detriment to their moral fiber.

Golden said the school district, by insisting the students read the play, depicting the life and eventual suicide of a lifelong traveling salesman, not only condones the use of profanity but advocates it.

Another committee of teachers, administrators and residents, which had studied the text to determine its educational value, recommended last month to allow the play to be used due to the valuable lessons it contained.

A splendid time is guaranteed

It was twenty years ago today, Sgt. Pepper taught the band to play They've been going in and out of style But they're guaranteed to raise a smile. Lennon-McCartney

It was about 20 years this week, late spring of 1967, that I was walking to my home on Frost Street from the news office one sunny day. On the way, I strolled into the downtown area and decided to stop into M.E. Moses just to look around.

As usual when I enter any store, I headed over to the record section. Thumbing through the selections, I glimpsed a cluttered, tacky yet colorful album cover, crowded with flowers and a large group of people. In the middle were these guys -long hair, mustaches - wearing these brightcolored band uniforms.

'Hmmm, must be a new group," I mused. I picked up the album. Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. "Must be one of those vaudevil-le-revival groups," I thought, thinking of the New Vaudeville Band and Sopwith Camel.

But looking more closely at the cover, I thought the guys looked familiar. "Looks like the Beatles." I thought, though I wasn't quite sure since they didn't quite look like the shaggy-mopped group I was familiar with. Then I saw the flowers on the ground, a group of red blooms spelling out "Beatles.

"Is this a new album by them?" I thought. I hadn't heard of a new one coming out. But, then, this was Pampa, so it wasn't unlikely that they'd have a new album out without anyone here hearing of it until weeks later.

I pondered buying the album, then put it back. then picked it up, looked at it again. "It just has to be the Beatles," I thought, though the only word indicating so was that red bunch of flowers. Even the album spine just said Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. Finally, I decided to take a risk and purchase it.

Arriving home, I immediately opened it and began to play it. The record began with the sounds of an orchestra tuning up, crowd noises in the background, then moved into some growing guitar chords. "It was 20 years ago today . . ." I sat back and listened to it, trying to figure out what was going on. "Well, it kind of sounds like the Beatles, but it sure is different," I thought. When the album ended, that strong last piano chord fading away, I initially found myself a little disappointed

The last song had sounded familiar. Then I recalled having heard "A Day in the Life" a few weeks earlier on a Lubbock station while I was at Texas Tech. A disc jockey had introduced it as a new song by the Beatles. I had waited to hear it again, thinking it was a new single, looking for it on the survey. But it never appeared, though its sounds had continued to haunt me.

But otherwise, there was nothing that really reached out and grabbed me at first. No harmonically screeching "yeah, yeah, yeah" like "She Loves You." No mesmerizing feedback opening like "I Feel Fine." No impelling melody, rhythm and chord changes like "We Can Work It Out."

Maybe I missed something," I thought, knowing that if it was a Beatles album then, by gosh, it had to be good!

So I turned the album over and played it again. "Sounds better," I thought. I turned it over and played it again. "Much better." Then I turned it over and played it again. And yet again. I didn't leave the house, just sitting back for three or four hours and enjoying the growing pleasure of listening to new sounds, hearing a new direction for rock music, seeing music full of variety, of life, of hope, of fear, layers of texture. And it was "seeing," with the songs and sounds throwing out images and pictures into the mind.

In a short few hours, my perceptions of what pop and rock music could achieve had changed forever.

That was 20 years ago today, give or take a few days. And 20 years later, I'm still listening to the album, along with millions of others. I don't know that it's the Beatles' best album, though only Abbey Road, The White Album and Revolver can equal or exceed it. But it's definitely my favorite, the one I keep going back to the shelf to drag out --I'm on my third copy, with a compact disc version now out to look forward to acquiring - and to listen to, again and again.

And those songs! - "With a Little Help From My Friends," "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds," "Getting Better," "Fixing a Hole," "She's Leaving Home," "Being for the Benefit of Mr. Kite," "When I'm Sixty-Four," "Lovely Rita," "Good Morning, Good Morning" — and the masterpiece, "A Day in the Life." And, of course, the title song.

It's more than music. It's a picture of its times, bringing back memories and dreams and hopes of a new day that never came. The innocence of a generation that would change the world has disappeared, but its chords still resound.

I don't really want to stop the show, But I thought that you might like to know That the singer's going to sing a song, And he wants you all to sing along.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Push made to grab greater sales taxes

There's more than a simple lust for money behind the spate of bills in Congress seeking to subject catalog and shopping-club sales to state sales-tax collection requirements. But not much more.

In 1967, the Supreme Court ruled that a retailer may not be required to collect taxes on sales unless the company has a business presence in the home state of the purchaser. The ruling didn't relieve customers of the obligation to pay the sales tax — it just meant that it wasn't up to the merchant to be the state's collection agent

The practical effect, however, was that taxes went uncollected on mail-order sales since most customers weren't about to send the government a check after every purchase and the states had no alternative method for collecting the taxes. Twenty years later, they still don't. Instead, they've come crying to Congress, hoping to force the mail-order houses into the tax-collection business.

Speaking recently before the House Ways and Means subcommittee on traditional businesses. Illinois Gov. James Thompson tried to paint the issue as one of fairness to local merchants, who do have to act as tax collectors. According to Thompson, directmarketing companies currently represent about 14 percent of the nation's retail sales, a figure expected to grow to 20 percent by 1990. "It clearly is now a signifi-cant threat to our local merchants," the governor testified

To be sure, there is a definite attraction to avoiding the sales tax on high-priced items such as furniture. A number of mail-order outlets make that a part of their sales pitch. But the recent boom in these kinds of sales has more to do with the increased use of toll-free television numbers, credit-card promotions, and television shopping clubs than with sales-tax avoidance.

The potential for increased sales-tax revenue is, however, a big issue with state governments. According to the advisory Committee on Intergovernmental Relations, state and local governments lost out on an estimated $1.5 billion in mail-order sales taxes that went uncollected in 1985. The issue is really more a matter of state and local governments feeling greedy than of fairness or the inability of local merchants to find ways to compete with modern mail-order technology Bills by Reps. Byron Dorgan of North Dakota and Jack Brooks of Texas, both Democrats, would try to overrule the Supreme Court's decision, turning mailorder businessmen into collection agents for all 50 states.

Nation's soul stays cleaner

WASHINGTON - In a dull week not long ago, when hard news was dawdling at an ebb tide, Time magazine put together the kind of cover story that is known in the trade as a thumbsucker. Such articles, the desperate resort of editorial writers everywhere, also are known as evergreens and think pieces. Time's contribution to the art of omphaloskepsis had to do with "America's search for its moral bearings."

James J. Kilpatrick

Concluded Time's Walter Shapiro: "Hypoc-risy, betrayal and greed unsettle the nation's soul. . . America finds itself wallowing in a moral morass.

That reference to "the nation's soul" identified the piece instantly as a thumbsucker, but this was something more. What it was, was mostly hokum.

"Once again it is morning in America," the elegy began. But in this scandal-scarred spring, it is a bitter and despondent morning: "Lamentation is in the air, and clay feet litter the ground." At every hand Time sees moral laxity and uncontrolled avarice. The Reagan administration holds the view that "wealth is the measure of all men." A sleaze factor has infected society. Time paints "a portrait of impropriety on a grand scale." In brief, the nation has lost its moral compass and is headed for the ultimate bowwows. Farewell to all that has been honorable, virtuous and wholesome! Degradation abounds! Let us hand Mr. Shapiro a towel.

Sure, plenty of things are wrong in the United States today. There has never been a time in our history when a litany of woes could not be sung. One would have to be deaf, dumb and blind not to pregnancy, persistent poverty, racial tensions and the shortcomings of American education. Conservatives especially are disappointed and disgusted by the sorry behavior of many Reagan appointees. As the Prayer Book used to say, we bewail our manifold sins and wickedness, and there is no health in us.

But Time's perception of a "moral morass" needs to be put in perspective. None of our contemporary failings approaches those offenses that have stained the American past. As Justice Thurgood Marshall recently reminded us, the very Constitution that we are venerating this summer gave its explicit sanction to human slavery. A century and a half ago, Americans engaged in the systematic slaughter and forced expulsion of the Indian tribes.

Moral morass? For decades after the Civil War, states both North and South maintained public systems of racial segregation. Legislators and public officials conspired to deny black people a right to vote. In the South, Jim Crow was king; in the West, we shuffled off Indians to reservations and let them rot. Against this wretched record, James Watt's pathetic racial jokes of 1983 can scarcely be heard.

Time cites examples of contemporary venality and supposes that these are measures of radically declining values. Bosh! The greed of an Ivan Boesky differs only in degree, not in kind, from the greed of the Vanderbilts and Morgans. Theodore Roosevelt long ago warned against a life of "swollen, slothful ease." He condemned "malefactors of great wealth" and be concerned today about drug abuse, teen-age denounced "government by plutocracy." What can be said for the nation's soul in an era of sweat shops and child labor?

Much of Time's dismal diagnosis is based upon citation of illegality or impropriety in high places. You will find no defense of perjurers and peddlers in this corner, but perspective is everything. Some of us went through our formative years in the long dark night of prohibition. The examples of our parents and elders were examples of pervasive scorn for the law. It was a period of rampant corruption. The petty frauds and shady deals of Time's lament are bound to pale by comparison.

Yes, there is some empirical evidence of changes in some moral values. During the '60s and '70s, the Census Bureau found a fourfold increase in the number of common-law marriages. Bastardy has soared, and the bearing of illegitimate children has lost its stigma. Chastity and fidelity seem no longer to be widely revered. But it is a fair inquiry to ask if adultery is more prevalent today than it was in the time of Grover Cleveland. There is reason to believe that the more things change, the more they stay the same

As a newspaperman, I have been worrying over the nation's soul for nearly 50 years. Believe me, I know no more than I knew as a cub reporter. What I do know is that America is blessed by millions of good, honorable officials, kind neighbors and loving parents. This is a better America than the America I was born in, and the best is yet to come.

The last thing we need is more tax collectors.

If we had another chance

back to work after a stroke, and that was big news all over the country.

The Cubs, and Harry, are on cable and they've got fans in all the four corners.

Harry, who is 70, has that devilish grin, the great voice, and when he does a beer commercial, you immediately want to go out and buy a case of what he's advertising

Even President Reagan called Harry in the Cubs broadcast booth on his first day back, which is indicative of Reagan's appreciation of Harry's work

Reagan is up to his ears in congressional hearings and Iraqi jets, but he still had time to call Harry Carey

I ran into Harry's son, Skip, the other night in Atlanta. Skip followed his father into broadcasting. He is an announcer for the Braves, who also are on cable. The two Careys reach untold millions each day and night of the baseball season. There are some similarities in their styles, but Harry's got something I'm not certain Skip has - the ability to sing.

Watch a Cubs game on television, if you ha-

Harry Carey, the voice of the Chicago Cubs, is ven't already. During the 7th-inning stretch, Harry gets on the Wrigley Field public address system and leads the crowd in the singing of Take Me Out to the Ball Game.

> It's a nice homey touch in these days of huge salaries, crooked agents, and the shadow of drug use that is on nearly all professional sports.

> Over the years, I've always taken notice of father-son relationships.

> It's something that I mostly missed in my life. My daddy, who left home when I was 6, died when I was 23.

The last 17 years of his life we might have been together a total of three months. I spent a large portion of my youth missing him.

Skip Carey was telling me about the day he went to Chicago as guest announcer, filling in for his dad during his recuperative period.

"I'm in a cab three or four blocks from Wrigley Field, and I suddenly said to myself, 'Hey, this isn't going to be easy. I could crack up on the air

"I got out of the cab and had a little talk with myself and made it through somehow.

"Sitting in that booth filling in for him made me appreciate him even more."

I listened to Skip and wondered, as I often have, what it would be like if my father were alive today.

I'm sure we would go to some ball games together, and he would be an incredible source of column material. The man had some stories, and he told them relentlessly

I could do some things for him now I couldn't do for him before.

I could bring some comfort and stability to his life. I could take him on trips and I could introduce him to my friends, and I could, on occasion, put my arms around him and tell him how much love him.

I said to Skip Carey, "You ought to get down on your knees every day and be thankful you've got your dad. Fathers and sons are special.' Skip agreed

I went home that night and couldn't get to sleep for a couple of hours. I kept thinking of an old soldier a long time gone

Holy cow, as Harry would say. What I'd give to have him back

Let blacks choose their political agenda

By Chuck Stone

Black conservatives evoke two reactions from me.

First, the term itself is an oxymoron.

'Any Negro who is not a Democrat or a Baptist," a distinguished black scholar impishly told me 40 years ago, "has been tampered with."

Not only have black conservatives been "tampered with," their burgeoning respectability in the American political dialogue is enhancing their ability to tamper with their ebonyhued landsmen.

My second reaction, however, is that all Americans benefit from their efforts.

One new effort is an 80-page pamphlet, "Critical Issues: A Conservative Agenda for Black Americans."

Published by the Washington, D.C., conservative think tank, The Heritage Foundation, the pamphlet is an excellent analysis that is bound to generate some light, but, I suspect, a lot more heat.

Black conservatives are like excommunists, ex-whores, and bornagain Christians. They think the whole world should be reordered in their image

Yet "Critical Issues," as they say in the ghetto, "is sayin' somethin."" Order a copy and read it.

Edited by Joseph Perkins, a black editorial writer for The Wall Street

Journal (you were thinking, perhaps, The Nation?), the pamphlet features articles on the need for a moral revival, dealing with black-on-black crime. getting back to basics in black education, empowering poor neighborhoods and creating a climate for black business.

Few will disagree with those priorities.

But black conservatives lose both black and white support when they call for a reduction in the federal government's role in education and business and paring minority set-aside programs.

An even larger obstacle to the influence of their ideas is the tone of their spokespersons.

Their current guru is Harvardeconomist, Glenn C. Loury, whose obsessive bellicosity is exceeded only by his capacity for polarization.

Yet, Loury, as all the writers in "Critical Issues," appropriately focuses on one theme - self-help. Blacks must do more for themselves.

But for now, the black community. represented by over 5,000 over-whelmingly Democratic black elected officials (congresspersons, mayors and state and municipal officials), isn't paying much attention to them.

If black conservatives want a challenge, let them stop what the slaves called, "talkin' at the big gate." Let them run for public office.

The essential difference in the U.S. and Iraqi versions of what occurred in the attack on USS Stark concerns the exact locations of both the Iraqi Mirage F-1 and USS Stark throughout the attack," the Pentagon said Wednesday in a report on the May 17 attack that claimed the lives of 37 U.S. seamen.

"The Iragis maintain that their aircraft fired two missiles at a maritime target located in the Iranian-Declared Exclusion Zone. They consider maritime shipping in this zone to be legitimate targets. ...

"The United States remains certain that the wealth of position data ... confirm that the Iraqi F-1 struck USS Stark while she was approximately 12 nautical miles (13.8 statute miles) to the west of the Iranian-Declared Exclusion Zone" - up to 28% miles away from the position reported by the Iraqis.

The dispute over the ship's location was spelled out in a four-page report that compares the U.S. and Iraqi chronologies of the attack on the guidedmissile frigate.

The Pentagon said the document was part of a much broader, classified report prepared by Rear Adm. David Rogers, who headed a team of U.S. officials that recently returned from Baghdad.

In related developments:

-Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., chairman of the House armed services subcommittee investigating the Stark attack, said some of the ship's crew members eventually could face charges.

Based on five Pentagon briefings on the attack, "I would not be at all surprised if there might not be charges against one or more members of the crew," Nichols said.

Nichols said he and Rep. Les Aspn, D-Wis., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, may cancel a trip to Bahrain to interview Stark crewmen because four of the ship's officers, including the captain, have retained attorneys and refused to answer questions from committee staff members.

Nichols said that following a briefing from the committee staff and Rogers on Wednesday, he's convinced the Stark could have reacted to the Iraqi plane had the captain chosen to do so. He said he has heard nothing to suggest a serious equipment failure on the ship or to indicate the ship's orders prevented it from responding to an attack.

-National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci told reporters traveling with President Reagan to Venice, Italy, that the president will press the U.S. allies attending the economic summit "for greater coordination, cooperation and support in the Persian Gulf."

The Iranian exclusion zone cuts the Persian Gulf roughly in half, running diagonally from the gulf's top to its bottom, and includes the eastern sections of the waterway closest to the Iranian coast. Iran attacks commercial shipping outside the zone, while Iraq concentrates its attacks on ships inside the line.

Although it does not say so explicitly. the Pentagon report contains nothing to dispute Iraqi claims that the attack on the Stark was an accident and a case of mistaken identity. The Reagan administration has accepted that explanation

The report offers no judgments about the performance of the Iraqi pilot. It notes only that he was "experienced" and relied solely on his radar and navigation systems during the night flight to conclude the Stark was a bona fide target.

Rogers' report also did not attempt to assess the performance of the Stark's crew or the ship's equipment. That is the subject of a separate military board of inquiry

thwarted by Reagan administration

WASHINGTON (AP) - Business leaders and the Reagan administration say they do not agree with the Rev. Leon Sullivan's dramatic call for all U.S. companies to pull out of South Africa within nine months.

Sullivan, a General Motors board member whose 10-year-old principals of racial equality for U.S. businesses operating in South Africa have been adopted by 125 companies, said Wednesday that it is time for stronger action.

"In spite of appeals and protests and cries for change and justice within South Africa, repression against blacks grows," said the Baptist minister from Philadelphia

His impassioned plea was hardly embraced by a council of businesses operating in South Africa, which said their continued presence remains the best hope for social change.

"We owe a great debt to Leon Sullivan, but we will now have to carry out the Sullivan principles without Sullivan," said Allan Murray, chief executive officer of Mobil Corp. and co-chairman of the U.S. Corporate Council on South Africa.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said that while the United States has 'enormous respect for Rev. Sullivan and the work he has done," the administration opposes his call for U.S. companies to pull out of South Africa.

Sullivan said it is time to go beyond the principles he laid down, which included integration of company facilities, equal employment practices, equal pay, training for nonwhites, an increase in black managers and improved living conditions for employees.

He said the U.S. government should impose an economic embargo against South Africa.

In a telegram to President Reagan, he asked the United States to sever diplomatic relations "until statutory apartheid is ended and blacks have a clear commitment for equal political rights."

More than 100 American companies have sold their South African subsidiaries over the last 18 months

The business council, composed of 104 chief executive officers of companies that signed the Sullivan principles, expressed "profound regret" that Sullivan had proposed complete disinvestment.

However, the group issued a steering committee statement that said member companies would continue to comply with his principles.

Sullivan, a minister with a quick wit and a booming voice, in 1971 became the first black member of an auto manufacturer's board. He sought immediately to have General Motors withdraw from South Africa, but settled instead for having GM and 11 other companies sign his corporate code of conduct, later adopted by other companies.

At the State Department, Redman said, "Despite the difficulties on the ground in South Africa, we firmly believe that it is now more important than ever for U.S. firms to stay and work for an end to apartheid."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The primary federal program for helping U.S. workers and companies adapt to foreign competition is being prevented from "fulfilling its potential" by Reagan administration efforts to abolish it, according to an independent government agency.

ing, from about $200 million a year to $2 billion, the technology assessment office said.

The Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program was enacted by Congress in 1962 but received scant attention until the United States began running trade deficits in the 1980s. The Reagan adminstration — arguing that the developing global economy makes determination of eligibility increasingly difficult and arbitrary has been trying to abolish the aid program for businesses since 1982 and the one for workers since 1985. Congress has rejected repeal of the programs every year.

The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment said today that Trade Adjustment Assistance could provide the long-term retraining and indepth technical advice needed by workers and by small and medium-sized manufacturers losing out to imports.

But to do so, the agency said, Congress will have to force the Labor and Commerce departments to provide the aid in a more timely manner and pay greater attention to the needs of indiviudal workers and companies.

savs he will beat myth Bush

LOS ANGELES (AP) - An optimistic Vice President George Bush is predicting he will beat what he calls "The Martin Van Buren myth" during his quest for the presidency.

'The Martin Van Buren myth is going to fall in 1988," Bush declared Wednesday night at a $1,000a-plate fund-raising dinner attended by Gov. George Deukmejian and actor George Hamilton.

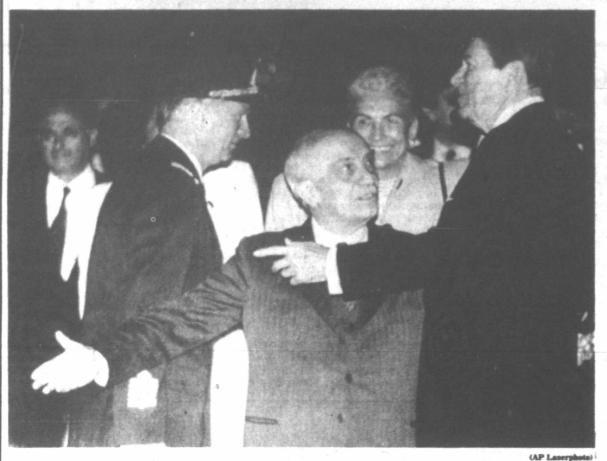

Van Buren, whose term ran from 1837 to 1841. was the last vice president to wage a winning campaign to succeed the president he served with Bush, who is riding a growing front-runner status in the Republican field, told about 600 supporters at the Century Plaza Hotel that not enough vice presidents had tried to get the big job.

The vice president said he will base his campaign for the presidency on the accomplishments of President Reagan, his would-be predecessor.

'In the Bush family, loyalty is not a liability," he said.

Reagan relaxes near Venice in preparation for summit

VENICE, Italy (AP) - President Reagan, on the first day of what was to have been a state visit to Italy, relaxed at an elegant villa, looking forward, like any tourist, to seeing fabled Venice.

Following an eight-hour flight from Washington aboard Air Force One, Reagan arrived with his wife, Nancy, just before midnight Wednesday local time and was welcomed at a brief ceremony by Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani and a military honor guard.

Afterward, the Reagans were flown by helicopter to the 45-room, luxury Villa Condulmer in Venice's countryside which has been reserved exclusively for the White House entourage for five nights.

Aside from a Saturday trip to Rome to meet with Pope John Paul II, the president will not leave the villa before he moves into Venice on Monday for summit talks with the leaders of Britain, France, Canada, West Germany, Japan and Italy.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Mrs. Reagan had visited Venice once before, as a 14-year-old girl with her parents, but that it was the president's first trip to the lagoon city of 117 islands.

'The president said he looks forward to seeing Venice and sharing the canals with Mrs. Reagan," Fitzwater said.

After the collapse of Italy's government, officials in Rome indicated they did not want Reagan to make a full-blown state visit, with a lot of fanfare, in the closing days of a national election campaign.

So Reagan scrapped the state visit entirely and came to Venice instead of Rome, with little to do except rest, adjust to the six-hour time difference with Washington and prepare for next week's summit.

Responding to stories that have gotten a lot of attention in Italy, Fitzwater acknowledged that a queen-sized bed made for the Reagans for a state visit to Portugal had been taken out of storage in Lisbon and sent to Venice for the president and his wife.

"The Reagans were not aware of that and did not ask for any special accommodations," Fitzwater said.

Similarly, presidential aide Bill Henkel denied reports that horses had been shipped from the United States for the Reagans to go horseback riding. "No riding," he said emphatically.

Given the change in Reagan's agenda, top aides delayed their trip. White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. and Treasury Secretary James Baker III will not arrive until Friday, while Secretary of State George P. Shultz is not expected before Sunday.

Popular big band leader Sammy Kaye dead of cancer at

RIDGEWOOD, N.J. (AP) - Sammy Kaye, who took a "Swing and Sway" sound from campus night spot to become one of the most popular leaders of the big band era, has died of cancer. He was 77

Kaye, who was famous for such hits as "Harbor Lights" and "There Will Never Be Another You" in his 50-year career, died Tuesday night at Valley Hospital here, his publicist Gary Stevens said.

A wake was scheduled for today in New York City and funeral services will take place Friday at St. Jean Baptiste

Roman Catholic Church, also in New York City.

Kaye's biggest hit might have been something he composed on the spur of the moment.

The day was Dec. 7. 1941, and Kaye and his band were performing their weekly "Sunday Serenade" show on NBC Radio when the program was interrupted by the news flash of the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor.

"Everyone was listening to Sammy's music when the news of the attack was made," said Stevens. "Sammy was so touched by the news of the attack that he went home and wrote the song "Remember Pearl Harbor."

The song, which Stevens described as the first American war song of World War II, was released eight days later and sold more than one million copies, Stevens said.

Kaye had came to New York in 1938 and immediately gained popularity with an act that was called "Swing and Sway with Sammy Kaye," Stevens said.

An Ohio native who became a longtime resident of New York City, Kaye also was host of half-hour musical programs on all three television networks in the 1950s. "The Sammy Kaye Show" had a yearlong run on CBS beginning in 1951, aired on NBC from August to September 1953, and moved to ABC from 1958-59

In 1954, Kaye appeared on ABC's game show "So You Want to Lead a Band." Members of the studio audience were chosen to lead the band and the winner was selected by the audience.

Kaye, born Samuel Zarnocay Jr. near Cleveland, excelled as an athlete. After graduating from Rocky River High School in 1928, he won a scholarship to Ohio University as the state low-hurdle champion.

Besides "Harbor Lights", in 1950, his other major hits included "Daddy" in 1941 and "There Will Never Be Another You" in 1942.

Britain closes Iranian consulate

LONDON (AP) - Britain closed an Iranian consulate today and ordered five diplomats to leave, bringing to a head a sharp dispute with Tehran over the abduction of a British diplomat in the Iranian capital.

Britain had accused Iran of trumping up charges against Edward Chaplin, 36, its No. 2 diplomat in Iran, who was abducted and held for 24 hours last Thursday. It repeatedly expressed impatience at Iran's failure to explain why it held Chaplin. British authorities say the diplomat was beaten by his abductors.

The top Iranian diplomat in London, Charge d'Affaires Mohammad Akhoudzadeh Basti, was summoned to the Foreign Office today and told that the Iranian consulate in the northern city of Manchester would be closed and that its five staff members had a week to leave Britain.

The five ordered to leave include Ali Qassemi, a vice consul who was to have appeared in court in Manchester next Thursday on charges of shoplifting, reckless driving and assaulting a police officer who was trying to arrest him. Instead of appearing in court, Qassemi will have to leave Britain.

Sir Patrick Wright, the permanent undersecretary in the Foreign Office, told Basti that the government was gravely concerned at the treatment of Chaplin in Tehran, the Foreign Office said.

Wright told Basti the Iranians were trying to link legal action against Chaplin with the case against Qassemi in Manchester.

"This is as unacceptable as it is futile," the Foreign Office quoted Wright as telling Basti. 'The Iranian government must bear the full

Governors to sign bridge contract on dam

DENISON (AP) - When the governors of Texas and Oklahoma meet atop the Lake Texoma dam to sign a contract for a new bridge over the Red River, the giant border lake will be at its highest level in three decades.

Ironically, Texas Gov. Bill Clements and Oklahoma Gov. Henry Bellmon's meeting Saturday is on the 30th anniversary of the only time Lake Texoma has crested over the dam spillway.

Heavy rains on the giant lake's watershed have filled it to its second highest level in history and it is expected to rise within 4 or 5 feet of the spillway Friday, Army Corps of Engineers officials said.

"Our meeting is indicative of the cooperation and friendship that exists between our states," Clements said in a statement released in Austin. 'Indeed, this bridge not only will benefit our respective citizens, but it will literally reinforce the link between our two states."

The bridge will span the river north of Denison and south of Durant, Okla., on U.S. Highway 75. said Howard Smith, Texas Department of Highways and Transportation resident engineer for Grayson County.

'We've been considering it for a year," Smith said, noting that the new bridge will be erected about 12 feet west of the existing structure about a mile downstream from the dam.

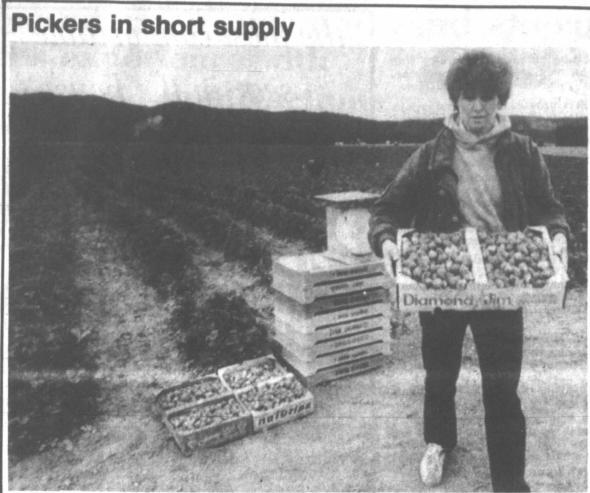

Final building plans are subject to approval by Oklahoma and the Federal Highway Administration. The cost of the structure will be split between the two states.

Lake Texoma's water level continued to rise Wednesday as flood waters from the swollen Red and Washita rivers poured into the lake.

The flow slowed to about 160,000 cubic feet per second from a 320,000 cfs rate Tuesday, said George Robbins, a hydrologist in the Tulsa District Corps office.

"Unless we get more rain, there is no chance at this time that Texoma will reach the 640foot spillway elevation." he said.

PAMPA NEWS-Thursday, June 4, 1987 7 Does a falling dollar attract or scare foreign investors?

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - In day one of the post-Volcker economic age, the stock and bond markets opened "unexpectedly" higher, bringing a sense of relief to many market commentators and investors.

But some other theorists wondered why the influx of buy orders should have excited anyone, suggesting there is a huge difference in perception about how free markets work.

On one side of the great gap is an extremely popular view that a dollar whose price is falling relative to other currencies scares away both domestic and foreign investors in U.S. securities, and threatens recession.

In fact, say those who hold the view, a jolt to dollar stability, such as the decision by Paul Volcker to retire as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, conceivably could cause investors to dump their securities.

Wait a minute, say those on the other side of the gap. Doesn't a weaker dollar make U.S. exports more competitive, and foreign exports to the United States less competitive? Isn't that good for shares of American companies?

Adherents of this view suggest a lower dollar is likely to attract, not repel, foreigners. Doesn't it make American companies stronger? And doesn't it mean shares in American companies can be bought at lower prices?

Commenting on dollar economics earlier this year, Morgan Guaranty Trust, highly regarded in currency matters, called attention to several popular myths and misconceptions about how the marketplace works.

"Sloppy reasoning has been all to prevalent," its economists stated in the Morgan Economic Quarterly. It classified as myth the notion that a declining dollar would cause foreigners to abandon American securities.

In most markets, it reminds us, a price decline increases demand and reduces supply. That is, buyers move in when prices drop. And a dollar decline would, of course, makes dollar assets less costly to foreigners.

Why, therefore, should they abandon the U.S. securities markets, or abandon any U.S. investments of any sort?

"The far more likely development is that investor appetities for dollar assets would increase as dollar assets become cheaper in foreign currency terms," said the Morgan economists. "That is the way markets work."

Investment analyst John Dessauer, publisher of Dessauer's Journal, argues that history demonstrates markets work as depicted by Morgan.

8 Thursday, June 4, 1987-PAMPA NEWS Baby gorilla keeps adoptive parents busy

By CATHY CORMAN Brownsville Herald

BROWNSVILLE (AP) - In a world where having one mother who cares is a blessing, having nine devoted parents would be nothing short of miraculous.

Six months ago, zookeepers decided to terminate parental rights for Katanga, the only female lowland gorilla at the Gladys Porter Zoo, because she wasn't taking care of her newborn daughter. And instead of one negligent gorilla mom, Penney, the baby gorilla, got nine human parents in the trade-off.

"She wasn't real attentive," Jerry Stones, curator of mammals at the zoo, said of Katanga. "She'd get a little rambunctious, and there was just too much at risk."

The risk was that Katanga would kill Penney. Neglect and rejection aren't uncommon problems with newborn animals, but in this instance, the zookeepers decided the baby's survival was crucial.

Gorillas have disappeared from many of their natural habitats around the world because of illegal paoching and human encroachment

Currently, 106 facilities around the world hold 212 male and 259 female gorillas in captivity, said Becky Faulk, development assistant at the zoo. As of 1985, 42 of these facilities were in the United States.

There are no accurate estimates of how many gorillas exist in the wild. However, in the early '70s, primatologists calculated there were approximately 10,000 lowland gorillas and 600 mountain gorillas out of captivity. Experts believe the numbers have dropped appreciably since then.

Primate specialist Dian Fossey was murdered by poachers in December of 1985 in Rwanda, where she had spent 19 years in relative seclusion studying a community of mountain gorillas. Ms. Fossey had fended off poachers in their attempts to kill "her gorillas," infuriating them with her less-thanorthodox tactics

"We're fighting for the same thing," Stones said. "We're just dealing in different atmospheres. We're both trying to see that 100 years from now there will be gorillas on earth ... Penney's our future as far as raising gorillas.

Penney's "atmosphere" is a 4-by-4-by-8 glass-walled incubation unit in the children's zoo. Soon after she was born, she spent her days in the unit and her nights with Stones and his wife, Cindy, who supervises the children's zoo.

For her first four months, Penney would go home in the car with the Stoneses at the end of their working day. Once home, Penney would receive her bottles of Isomil formula and have her diapers changed on schedule. She would also watch TV and cuddle with the Stoneses.

"It was a big responsibility," said Mrs. Stones. "It wasn't any different from a human baby. All she could do was eat, sleep and make messes in her diapers.

"She's like my own kid," said Stones, who has two grown sons from a previous marriage. "If anything happened, I'd cry. I'd fall apart. I'd stayed up late with her nights ... She's my pride and joy.

Stones admits he has a soft spot for all primates, but he is especially fond of gorillas. Gorillas were the first animals he worked with in his first zoo job, and he eventually came to stay with a pregnant gorilla for a month until she gave birth. "She had it and came over and laid it on my chest," he said. 'Then she came back and got it. ... They're very gentle, gorillas.'

The Stoneses aren't the only ones who are so attached to Penney. Whenever she staved in the zoo nursery, and as soon as the Stoneses began leaving her overnight, a team of adoptive parents - Rita Guerra, Manuel Garcia, Sergio Ramirez, Ruben Hernandez, Alfredo Pizzinia, Reyes Martinez and Hipolito Leija - began feeding and changing her.

Guerra, who works in the nursery with Mrs. Stones, and Garcia, a night watchman, agree that Penney is just like a daughter.

Guerra has grown children and enjoys playing with, feeding and exercising the baby. Garcia also has two toddlers at home, but he says Penney is just one more, just the same as his own.

He gives her afternoon and evening feedings every four hours, and he says that she is often alert and waiting for him at feeding time. He, Guerra and the Stoneses have no doubt that Penney recognizes them all and can discern one from the other.

Guerra held the active gorilla adoringly in the crook of his arm and made faces at her as he tipped the bottle into her mouth. Penney looked up at Garcia's face and stroked his head with her feet. He rocked her gently and cooed.

The adoptive parents say they wouldn't give up their time with Penney for anything, despite the lengthy precautions they have to undertake to care for her.

Before entering the nursery area, they must wash their shoes in a foot bath. They wear clean white lab coats before holding Penney, and they have to make sure that everything they give her is kept separate from the other animals' possessions.

Germs are a big problem for baby gorillas, who are susceptible to all human infant diseases. Penney has been vaccinated against polio, tuberculosis, tetanus and diptheria. She can easily catch viral infections, so anyone with a cold or flu who comes into contact with her needs to wear a mask.

"Never" is when the Stoneses say Penney will become immune to human ailments. "Flus and TBs will kill a gorilla," Mrs. Stones said. So far, Penney has been healthy except for occasional diarrhea due to teething.

Beekeepers find their hobby brings money along with honey

O'FALLON, Ill. (AP) - Jim Hendrickson isn't sure why he keeps bees. All he says is that bees are his hobby, bees make honey, and he makes a little money.

"They're fascinating," he said.

A few other people in the area are fascinated with the small insects. Although honey is not a major agricultural commodity, many hobbyists are raising bees and giving or selling the honey to friends and relatives.

Mike Hardimon, University of Illinois extension adviser for St. Clair County, says most county honey producers are hobbyists, although the number of hives seems to grow each year.

Larry Eckert. The orchard also buys honey from local producers for resale

Hendrickson, vice president of the St. Clair Beekeepers Association, said the hobby took a lot of equipment to get started, but also tive, dues-paying members in the area.

You heard it right: Cubs beat 'Stros 22-7

By MARIO FOX AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - Chicago Cubs Manager Gene Michael says he didn't mean to rub it in, even if that's what his batters looked as if they were doing.

"You don't want to rub it in, but you can't stop swinging the bats," Michael said after the Cubs got 21 hits, including six homers, and nine walks to beat the Houston Astros 22-7 Wednesday.

Chicago's Keith Moreland, teammate Brian Dayett and Houston's Billy Hatcher hit grandslam homers to set a National League record, tying the major-league mark when Baltimore and Texas had three bases-full homers last season.

Moreland said the homer derby at Wrigley Field reminded him of the 23-22 Cubs' 10-inning loss in Chicago to Philadelphia in 1979, when the third baseman was a member of the Phillies. That was the last time the Cubs scored 22 runs in a game.

Moreland said he was glad nobody was calling him one of the "Slump Brothers" anymore, but he wished the Cubs could have saved some of their hits for the first-place St. Louis Cardinals who open a four-game series today.

Dayett said the slugfest - in which the Cubs scored in every inning at bat, including nine runs with three homers in the first inning - reminded him of high-scoring sandlot games of his youth.

"I thought my mom would call me home when it got dark," Dayett said.

Three of Dayett's four home runs this season have been off Houston starter Bob Knepper. "Poor Bob," said Dayett, who had no explanation of his success against the Astro left-hander. "It's just one of those things I guess."

Winds, blowing at 12 mph toward right field, were not a factor except to help Astro Bill Doran's two-run homer in the first inning land in the rightfield stands.

For Astro Manager Hal Lanier, it was a long, frustrating afternoon.

"Anytime you give up runs in every inning, it looks like you're not even trying," said Lanier, who held a closed-door team meeting after the game, which saw the most runs ever scored by an Astro opponent.

Lanier said he told his hurlers they needed to throw more inside pitches.

Hatcher, whose bases-loaded blast was off Rick Sutcliffe, the league's first pitcher with eight wins, said. "The homer was nice, but it was embarrassing to lose like this."

Andre Dawson tied a team record by hitting his fifth homer in three days for the Cubs who had 35 runs and 39 hits in the past two games. They beat Houston 13-2 Tuesday.

Sutcliffe, 8-2, gave up seven runs and seven hits in five innings. Ed Lynch and Dickie Noles each pitched two innings for the Cubs.

The Cubs went ahead 11-2 in the second when Jody Davis scored on a wild pitch and Dayett dashed home on a Moreland's sacrifice fly.

Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Two ironinan pitching performances, three comebacks by Florida State and the 10th-inning heroics of Scott Coolbaugh made an impression on Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson, a veteran of 14 College World Series.

"We've been involved in some great games here and I've seen a lot of great games here," Gustafson said following his team's 6-4 victory Wednesday night. "But for sheer drama and thrill after thrill, I don't think it'd be very easy to top this one."

In Wednesday's other elimination game. Louisiana State beat Arkansas 5-2. Oklahoma State and Stanford, the only teams without a loss in the doubleelimination tournament, play tonight.

Т

On Friday, Louisiana State plays Stanford and Oklahoma State faces Texas.

The top-rated Longhorns' Curt Krippner, who pitched nine innings Tuesday in a 6-1 loss to Stanford, threw three innings of shutout relief against Florida State to raise his record to 14-1.

"Once I got in there I didn't even care if I was hurting or not." Krippner said. "I was going to keep throwing, because I think I was all on adrenalin. I wanted to win that game pretty bad."

Krippner replaced starter Mark Petkovsek with nobody out in the eighth inning and the tying run on third. That run scored on a passed ball, but Krippner checked the Seminoles on one hit and one walk the rest of the way.

'I wanted the guy that had been our workhorse and ace all year out there," Gustafson said.

Longhorn pitcher Mark Petkovsek.

"He's a strong-armed guy and likes to throw. After loosening up he said he felt good and wanted to pitch.

The Longhorns, 60-10, overcame a 13-strikeout performance by Richie Lewis, 15-4. The 5-foot-10 Lewis lost two College World Series games in the 10th inning and threw more than 150 pitches each time

"I think you'll see the little man in the big leagues." Florida State Coach Mike Martin said. "Richie has proven to me that he is the best pitcher we've had in our program in the 13 years that I've been here." Coolbaugh doubled homed the lead run in the top of the 10th and scored on a double by Mike Patrick. In the bottom of the inning, Coolbaugh made a nice pickup at third base to start a double play that ended Florida State's last comeback attempt.

The Seminoles, 55-18, aided by solo homers from Ed Fulton and Edwin Alicea, had rallied to tie the game at 1-1, 2-2 and 4-4.

Lewis escaped a none-out bases-loaded jam in the fourth. Petkovsek duplicated the feat an inning later.

Cabot's Tarin Peet rounds first.

play Perryton in a double bill. In Babe Ruth (13-15) action, Cree defeated Grant 6-3 behind the 4-hit pitching of Heath Summers.

Summers struck out 9 and walked 3. All 3 runs were charged to Summers.

Jason Gauger had a single and double for Cree. Chuck Jones also pitched in with a single.

In Senior League Girl's Softball action, Citizen's Bank and Trust beat C & C Hydrocarbon 19-10.

Aprille Epperson picked up the win for Citizens, striking out 3 and walking 6.

Sheila Whitaker had 3 singles and a double; Joley Briggs and Carmen Santacruz each added 2 singles. Additionally, Briggs knocked out a double.

For C & C, Cindy Lang, Andrea Haines and Shannon Harper each had 2 singles.

Citizen's ran its record to 1-2: C & C drops to 0-4.

Tribble found innocent in death of Len Bias

By DAVID GINSBURG Associated Press Writer

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — A friend of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias has been acquitted of supplying the cocaine that killed the all-American whose death led to a national outcry against drug use by athletes.

Brian Lee Tribble, 24, was found innocent of distribution and possession of the drug in connection with Bias' death, and of conspiracy to distribute cocaine in the months before a party where Bias died

"I'm just overwhelmed," Tribble said after a Prince George's County Circuit jury announced its Wednesday night verdict that followed more than six hours of deliberations. "I'm glad to know the system works.

Bias died early June 19 after snorting cocaine in his dormitory at a party celebrating his selection as the Boston Celtics' No. 1 draft pick.

Prosecutors alleged that Bias helped distribute cocaine in a drug ring run by Tribble.

Former Maryland basketball Coach Lefty Driesell, who resigned as coach amid the controversy after Bias' death, said he wanted to talk to his lawyers before commenting. "I've got a lot of reaction. I just can't say it," Driesell, who testified for the prosecution in the case, said in a telephone interview from his home in suburban Washington, D.C. "You figure out your own reaction.'

Had Tribble been convicted of all charges, he could have been sentenced to 20 years and fined $25,000.

Two counts of obstruction of justice still are pending against Tribble in connection with destruction of evidence in the dorm room where Bias collapsed.

Defense attorney Thomas Morrow said it would amount to "prosecutorial vindictiveness" if the state refused to drop those charges.

Prosecutor Robert Bonsib said no decision has been made on the charges.

Morrow said he thought the key to the case was the "lack of credibility" of the prosecution's key witnesses, including 17-year-old Terrence Moore, who said he sold cocaine for Tribble.

"When you pin all your hopes on a guy like Terrence Moore, the jury's got to wonder," Morrow said Bonsib acknowledged, "It's a problem. If you want to make a case against a drug dealer, you have to turn to those who use drugs. You can't get a priest to testify.

David Gregg and Terry Long. who were in the room with Tribble and Bias when the All-American suffered the fatal seizure, testified after being assured that charges against them would be dropped. While both said they snorted cocaine with Tribble and Bias, neither claimed to know where the drug came from.

In his closing statement, Morrow called his client a "whipping boy" and the proceedings "a whitewash to divert attention from the University of Maryland to somebody who the state thinks is nothing.

Thomas makes peace with Bird following disparaging remarks

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Isiah Thomas concedes his joke about Boston's Larry Bird went sour, but the Detroit Pistons star says what he views as media stereotyping of black and white athletes is even less of a laughing matter.

Thomas said Wednesday he has made peace with Bird, the target of disparaging comments in the wake of Boston's victory over Detroit in the NBA Eastern Conference finals.

But Thomas said the Celtics forward, who is white, remained the symbol of media double standards in comparing athletes of both races' respective abilities.

'When Bird makes a great play, they say it's his thinking and his work habits," Thomas, who is black, told the Detroit Free Press in Wednesday

"When black players excel, it's referred to as God-given talent ... It's like, with us, if we don't practice we'll be good anyway, you know?'

The controversy erupted Saturday, after Boston defeated Detroit, 117-114, in the seventh game of the Eastern Conference final.

Detroit rookie Dennis Rodman called Bird overrated and said Bird has won the NBA's Most Valuable Player award three times because he is white.

Thomas, asked afterward to comment on his black teammate's remarks, said: "I think Larry is a very, very good basketball player. An exceptional talent, but I have to agree with Rodman. If he were black, he'd be just another good guy.'

Thomas called a news conference Wednesday to clarify his reaction to Rodman's remarks, saving his comments were meant sarcastically.

Thomas "In print, you don't get the laughter," said. "In print, you don't get the sarcasm. In print, you get what you get."

Thomas said he spoke Wednesday morning with Bird, whose Celtics lost to the Los Angeles Lakers a night earlier in the first game of the NBA finals. Bird told him not to worry about the comments voiced after Saturday's game, Thomas said.

Bird said he had no hard feelings.

"I like Isiah. I never really held it against him," Bird said Wednesday from Los Angeles, where the Celtics were preparing for Game 2 of the NBA finals tonight. "He put his whole heart into winning that series. He thought they should win it and I can understand how he could be frustrated.

"I don't know if he said a lot of the things or if somebody came and said, 'Rodman said this and do vou agree.

Thomas also told the Free Press that Bird is "the best in the league at his position, without a doubt. I think Magic (Lakers guard Earvin Johnson) is the best player in the game today. And Bird is second.

Thomas said he remained concerned about racial stereotyping even if the Bird controversy was to die down.

"I have heard the media refer to a black athlete as a player with 'natural ability' while performing a great play," Thomas said in a statement released by the Pistons.

"For someone to make that comment, they are not taking into consideration the rigorous training schedule and numerous hours of practice it takes to reach that level.

'It is time the media and the public stop focusing on the race of the athlete or anyone else, stop stereotyping people and start recognizing an individual's achievement," he added.

Rangers bamboozle White Sox

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -Two Texas Rangers newcomers, whose arrivals had been awaited with great anticipation, made their appearances Wednesday night and had a telling impact on the Rangers.

Shortstop Scott Fletcher became a father for the first time three hours before the Rangers' game with the Chicago White Sox and he celebrated the event with four hits and three runs batted in as Texas beat Chicago 14-3.

And Mickey Stanley, who was tearing up the American Association, made his 1987 debut and also had four hits, including a home run and three RBI as the Rangers totaled a season-high 20 hits.

"I came to the park directly from the delivery room," said Fletcher, who arrived 40 minutes before gametime and missed batting practice. "I hated to leave the hospital and it was hard getting my mind on the game."

His wife, Angie, gave birth to a girl at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon. "I couldn't have asked for a better start," said Stanley, who was batting .335 with 13 homers and 54 RBI in 46 games at Oklahoma City before getting the call Tuesday night. "Of course, I can't expect to get four hits in a game very often. But it's just great to be here.'

Stanley made an out in his first at-bat in the first inning, in which the Rangers scored four runs to take a 4-1 lead against Chicago starter and loser Floyd Bannister. 3-4.

"It's kind of ironic," said Stanley, "because after I made an out in my first time up, someone said,

"So what, go 4-for-5." And I did." He singled and scored in the third, singled home a run in the fourth, hit a solo home run in the sixth and singled home a run in the eighth.

"I had a good night, but so did everyone else," said Stanley, who appeared in 15 games for the Rangers late last season. "I didn't win the game. It was a team effort."

Beneficiary of the 20-hit attack was Jose Guzman, 3-5, who won in relief of starter Mike Loynd. Guzman went 4 2-3, allowed two hits and struck out four.

"With all the hitting, Guzman was the bright spot of the night," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "He should have his confidence back now."

Four different players each drove in three runs for the Rangers, who hit seven homers and scored 30 runs in the 3-game series with the White Sox. Pete Incaviglia hit a 3-run homer - his 12th of the season - in the first inning, and Steve Buechele drove in three with a solo homer - his fifth - and a 2-run double.

"The guys came out smoking tonight," said Valentine. "It sure is good to have a big lead."

In three of their last four games, the White Sox have been beaten 10-9, 11-9, and 14-5, prompting manager Jim Fregosi to say:

'Our bullpen has been beaten up for a couple of days. We are not the kind of club that can afford to have our starters go out early because our long relievers haven't done the job.

PAMPA NEWS-Thursday, June 4, 1987 13

An early choice to challenge Eric Davis for the NL MVP, Dawson hit for the cycle April 29.

On Tuesday, he drove in seven runs and fell just a double short of becoming only the second player in the history of the majors to hit for the cycle twice in one year.

In the game against the Astros, Dawson had a single, triple and two homers.

I'd trade a double for an extra homer any day, so it ought to be worth something even though it's not an official cycle.

Indian actor in 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest' dies

HOUSTON (AP) -- Will Sampson, the 6-foot-7 actor who played the silent Indian in the film "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest,' died of complications 41 days after undergoing a heart-lung transplant. He was 53.

Sampson suffered from scleroderma, a chronic degenerative condition that affected his heart, lungs and skin. During his lengthy illness, his weight fell from 260 pounds to 140 pounds, causing a malnutrition problem, said Methodist Hospital spokeswoman Brenda Blake.

He died Wednesday morning with his former wife, Jill, and eldest son, Tim, at his bedside, Ms. Blake said. Sampson underwent the transplant April 23.

Sampson's body was to be returned for burial in his childhood hometown of Okmulgee, Okla., Ms. Blake said.

Dr. E. Clinton Lawrence, who treated the actor, said Sampson's wife and son took the death well.

'They had been prepared that we could lose him at any time over the past 10 days," Lawrence said. "I think they are relieved it is all over."

He said the family planned to hold a private Indian ceremony. in which an all night wake would be followed by burial the next day

A Creek Indian, he was best known for his portrayal of Jack Nicholson's mute friend in the film version of Ken Kesey's acclaimed novel.

"I will miss a great friend," Nicholson said Wednesday through his agent, Sandy Bresler in Los Angeles.

Sampson's agent, Dan Wolff of Artists Agency in Los Angeles, said the actor was a long-time supporter of Indian causes. "He was always giving of his time and money when any Indian group called," Wolff said.

Besides "Cuckoo's Nest" in 1975, Sampson appeared in "The White Buffalo" in 1977, "Orca" in 1977 and "Alcatraz: the Whole Shocking Story" in 1978. More recently, he appeared as the demon-battling Indian in "Poltergeist II: The Other Side."

While the transplant was successful with the heart and lung functioning well, Mr. Sampson succumbed due to a combination among them malnutrition, kidney failure and a post-operative infection.

Sampson lapsed into a coma 10 days ago, and the cause of the kidney failure was not known, she

ARLINGTON (AP) — Detectives used laser equipment in their investigation of the bludgeoning deaths of a mother and two small children but have been unable to find a weapon or a reliable witness to the crime, a police spokesman said.

Kanglesh Shah, 38, a native of India, found the bloody bodies of his family when he returned to his southeast Arlington town house at about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday from the video store he owns in nearby Duncanville, police spokesman Dee Anderson said.

Shah found 4-year-old Amit's body in the home's front entry, his daughter Anal, 6, in a downtstairs bedroom and his 32-year-old wife Medahvini in a bathroom

Wednesday's search produced "some leads." Anderson said. Authorities have no suspects in the case, but investigators "feel it was not just a random, senseless killing," he said, declining to elaborate.

An autopsy revealed that Amit died of a massive cerebral hemorrhage after being hit in the head with a blunt instrument, Anderson said. The Tarrant County medical examiner's office has yet to complete autopsies of Anal and Megha Shah.

Bill Fabian, a spokesman for the medical examiner's office, said his office has been unable to identify the weapon used in the slayings, Arlington's second triple homicide

Anderson said there was no sign of forced entry or a scuffle, and items of value, including a television set, had not been touched. Police used laser equipment to search the Shahs' home for fingerprints and other evidence Wednesday, but found little that was useful, Anderson said.

Police plan to interview an 8-year-old boy who has said he saw an unfamiliar man leave the Shahs' home at 4:30 or 5 p.m. Tuesday. Anderson said police doubt the boy has much to offer.

"It seems like nobody saw or heard anything that's going to be much help," he said.
