Canadian crowd jeers physicians' Medicare review

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Congressman Beau Boulter visited Canadian Saturday to see if residents there are as angry as he is about the way their doctors are treated by the Texas Medical Foundation.

Boulter got what he was looking for when a crowd at the City Hall auditorium — including a placard-waving delegation from Edward Abraham Memorial Nursing Home — cheered his condemnation of the TMF and its executive director, S. Robert F. King.

The 13th District Republican charged that the TMF is unfairly treating rural doctors with its Peer Review Organizations, which determine doctors' eligibility to treat Medicare patients.

"The fact is that in Texas, we had 23 doctors sanctioned, more than all other 49 states," Boulter said. "And of that 23, no doctor who lives in a town of more than 12,000 people has been sanctioned."

One such doctor was Dr. Claude Betty of Perryton, who was sanctioned in December. The TMF is considering a sanction against Dr. Ted Darocha of Canadian, but no final decision has been reached.

"In all other states, PROs use sanctions as a last resort, in which the PROs found the physician put the patient in imminent danger," Boulter said. "The other 49 states put their emphasis on educating their doctors, not punishing them."

"I have said this to Mr. King eyeball-to-eyeball," Boulter said, adding that in their last meeting, "he walked out of the room."

Boulter also charged that King is "not a truth teller" when he says TMF physicians are interested only in safeguarding the health care of Medicare patients.

Iran threatens U.S. over gulf shipments

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran told the U.S. military Saturday to stay out of the Persian Gulf as both the United States and the Soviet Union moved to keep gulf shipping routes open.

"How can (President) Reagan, who has even taken his own bed to the Venice summit, dispatch American troops to fight in the Persian Gulf, whose waters are full of sharks?" said Deputy Foreign Minister Mohammed Javad Larijani in Tehran, the Iranian capital.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency (IRNA), monitored in Nicosia, also quoted him as saying at a news conference that Arab gulf states should offer no facilities for U.S. forces.

Larijani spoke after returning to Tehran from a tour of West European capitals, where he sought to dissuade America's allies from joining any intervention in the gulf to protect shipping.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980. In 1984, Iraq began air strikes on Iran's main oil exporting facility on Kharg Island in the northern Persian Gulf and tankers going to and from the island. Iran retaliated by striking at shipping in the southern and central gulf, saying the vessels were aiding Iraq, and since 1984 about 250 foreign merchant ships have been attacked in the gulf.

In Vienna, Hossein Sheikholeslam, another Iranian deputy foreign minister, said Iran is open to regional mediation but warned it would retaliate immediately against an attack.

"As soon as our ships are attacked, and we cannot export our oil, we will not permit any other country to export it," he said. "It does not matter what flag such ships sail, which super-

Residents party to celebrate 100 years friendship

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Centennial celebrations only come once every hundred years or so, and Miami residents wanted to do theirs up big this weekend at their annual Cow Calling Contest.

So they paraded their loudest cow callers, their beefiest barbecue, their fanciest floats and their scruffiest beards in front of metropolitan newspapers and television stations for the annual festival.

But it was longtime resident Gladys Teague who set the celebration in perspective when she recited a poem declaring that the truest glory comes through "First Name Friends," Friday at the Centennial Follies.

This was a commemoration of 100 years of friendships that crossed generations and grew stronger through the years.

They shared free barbecue under elm trees at Roberts County Park. They traded memories with old classmates at class reunions. They danced with old flames at the celebration's two dances. And they will gather today for worship at the annual cowboy church service.

The century-old spirit of friendship peaked early when present and past Miami residents performed in the Centennial Follies Friday. This year's show featured performers from past Follies singing songs of faith, friendship and fun. Starlet Bright, Scott and Kay Smith and Rhonda Gill shared their faith in three hymns. Kay Quast, Barbara Daugherty and Barbara Ross entertained with traditional and country songs.

Miami High School speech teacher David Thweatt paid tribute to Miami's heritage with an original song.

Dollars fly at county airport

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Depending on the point of view, the $800,000 spent on the county airport last year is either a needed economic boost to Pampa or a high-flying waste of taxpayers' money.

Nearly $821,000 was spent on Perry Lefors Field north of Pampa in 1986, most of it on a runway overlay project, paid for by the Federal Aviation Administration and Gray County. Federal funds paid for 90 percent of the project, while the county kicked in 10 percent.

More than $500,000 was spent from 1982 to 1985 in county-FAA projects that former County Surveyor Gene Barber said lengthened runways and strengthened the overall facility so it would qualify for the $800,000 overlay project.

The improvements have made Perry Lefors Field "better than any other airport in the Panhandle, except for Amarillo International," Barber said.

Absent the federal funds, county spending on the airport in 1986 amounts to about $100,000.

By contrast, Gray County earned roughly $16,500 in taxes, rental of space for airplane hangars and a 2½-cent surtax on fuel sold at the airport. Pampa schools gleaned an additional $22,000 in taxes from aircraft and hangars, valued at about $2.74 million. FAA figures reveal 24,600 flight "operations" at the airport from September 1985 to September 1986, meaning county and federal taxpayers paid almost $32 per flight at Perry Lefors Field during the period.

The money spent in 1986 was unusually high due to the overlay project, and Barber said no immediate major projects are planned.

But, airport supporters say, you can't put a dollar value on what the airport means to Pampa's efforts to attract and keep business and industry.

"There are still people here who believe that money takes the train," said airport base operator Ron Fernuik. "It doesn't. It doesn't go anywhere it has to be inconvenient."

Fernuik, a pilot for Leonard Hudson Drilling Co., took over operation of the airport late last year after he purchased Pampa Aircraft Inc. from Colleen and Blackie DeVore. The county contracts with Pampa Aircraft to run the airport.

"A lot of people just don't understand 'just what can the airport do for me,'" Fernuik said.

He said having a local airport could mean the difference between industry coming to Pampa or going elsewhere. And, once here, companies rely on the airport to bring in the businessman with the fat contract, Fernuik said.

"He isn't going to drive," he said. "He isn't going to fly to Amarillo, then drive an hour to get here."

But, Fernuik said, there's another advantage to having business prospects fly into Pampa rather than drive. Pampa — or any other city — looks better from the air, and air passengers can get a literal bird's-eye view of the town in a matter of minutes.

"Like anyplace else, you can't just walk in and say 'This is a hell of a place to live.' You've got to convey that," Fernuik explained. "You give a different picture of the community (from the air). You can't do a better job selling than you can from the air."

The airport has also aided in roughly 30 medical Contacted at his Austin home Saturday, King said he takes "total exception" to Boulter's charges.

"He, his aides and I met in my office to discuss peer review problems," King said. "I have no idea what he's talking about. I would not stalk out of my office on a member of Congress."

King said his policy is to "tell the story as factual as I can. Even though that may not be the story people want to hear."

Boulter said PROs were designed to hold down Medicare costs and to insure the quality of care given to Medicare patients.

That, Boulter said, he has no problem with.
"We do not want to be treated by a negligent doctor," Boulter said.

But, Boulter added, doctors in Texas are not treated as fairly as doctors in other states. This is why he has co-sponsored House Resolution 2116, a bill which he believes would give doctors a protection from TMF scrutiny.

He says his bill will give doctors due process from the TMF.
"Doctors have less due process than criminals," Boulter claimed. "Under the TMF, doctors are presumed guilty until proven innocent."

Boulter said that although his bill is aimed at the TMF, it is getting support from other states.

"We have 40 co-sponsors, last I counted," he said, admitting that when he first introduced the bill, he felt like a voice in the wilderness.

But King said Friday that doctors do have due process under the TMF system and that a recent compromise among health organizations would extend due process.

King explained that under the compromise — reached May 12 by the American Medical Association, the Health Care Financing Administration, the American Association for Retired Persons and the Office of Inspector General (which handles sanctions) — doctors are granted representation by an attorney at sanction hearings, are allowed a transcript of the hearings, may bring expert witnesses to the hearings and are allowed five extra days after the hearing to submit additional documentation.

Canadian's four physicians, who have threatened to stop sending their Medicare patients to Hemphill County Hospital if the regulations are not eased, are not impressed by the compromise.

"It all sounds fine on paper," said Dr. Malouf Abraham. "But actions speak louder than words. The TMF is acting differently than what it is saying."

Abraham said he and the other physicians — Drs. Williams Isaacs, Valerie Verbi and Darocha — will lift their threat if Boulter's bill, now tied up in a House subcommittee, is passed.

"And we want to see the sanction dropped against Dr. Darocha," Abraham said.

King said Friday that it is too early to determine any progress on the threatened sanction against Darocha. The Inspector General has "just received the case" and has 120 days to reach a decision, King explained.

Boulter was scheduled to conduct another town meeting in Perryton Saturday night.

Employment office to check for immigration compliance

Effective Monday, June 15, local Texas Employment Commission offices will begin certifying the employment eligibility of job applicants for employers under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA).

Local TEC office manager Charles Vance said that, according to new TEC procedures, employers who hire job applicants through TEC for jobs lasting longer than three days will receive employment verifications as soon as the employer notifies the TEC office that an applicant has been hired.

"This will insure that employers are in full compliance with the provisions of the IRCA," Vance said.

For jobs lasting three days or less, employers will be responsible for their own verification of the employment eligibility of job applicants, Vance said.

All individuals registering for work with TEC after June 1, 1987 need to provide evidence of identity and employment eligibility. Documents used to establish identity must contain a picture of the applicant; a Texas driver's license will satisfy this requirement, Vance said.

power protects these ships."

The Soviet Union has loaned Kuwait three oil tankers. The Reagan administration has said it would allow 11 of Kuwait's 21 tankers to fly the American flag, assuring them of U.S. protection, but the offer has run into congressional opposition.

Iran accuses Kuwait of supporting Iraq in the war and has made Kuwaiti tankers its major targets. Kuwait and most Arab nations support directly or indirectly Arab Iraq in its fight with Persian Iran.

Arab and Western diplomats in Manama, Bahrain, said Saturday that the Soviet Union has offered to lease Kuwait as many tankers as it needs to protect its oil shipments against Iranian attack if the U.S. offer falls through.

"Nothing has been written (in response) as far as we understand from the Kuwaitis," said one diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "But given the speed with which the Soviets rushed three tankers to Kuwait, there can be no doubt the Soviets will not hesitate to meet any additional request."

Meanwhile, U.S. warships in the gulf closely monitored Iranian air activity.

"God help any plane, any pilot, regardless of what nation he belongs, and it could be a very friendly nation, if they come in a pattern that may show hostile intent," said Sam Zakhem, the U.S. ambassador in Bahrain.

The U.S. Navy's gulf task force was placed in a heightened state of alert after an Iraqi jet fired a missile at the USS Stark on May 17, apparently mistaking the U.S. frigate for an Iranian warship. The attack killed 37 American sailors, and Iraq apologized.

White House National Security

Adviser Frank Carlucci said Saturday the U.S. six-ship force in the gulf is a deterrent, not a threat. But he said attacks against the ships would provoke a response.

The United States is expected to send three more warships to the gulf and the Soviets are reportedly dispatching three minesweepers to reinforce their two warships in the waterway.

Carlucci, in Venice, Italy, with President Reagan who is to attend an economic summit conference, spoke with reporters about the Chinese-made Silkworm missiles sold to Iran. The land-based missiles could be particularly dangerous at the narrow Strait of Hormuz at the southern tip of the gulf. He noted the Chinese "say they are not doing it" — selling the missiles to Iran.

He refused to say whether the United States would make a preemptive strike to destroy the missiles.

Falls return to Wichita Falls

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Water began flowing over a $400,000, man-made waterfall, restoring part of Wichita Falls' heritage after a century-long absence.

The original falls were washed away more than 100 years ago. The mayor of Niagara Falls, Michael O'Laughlin, was on hand Friday to help commemorate the beginning of the new, three-tiered falls.

Water flowed over the bank of the Wichita River at 2:45 p.m. But the pump that will recircu-late water from the river through the waterfall is not working properly because of heavy flooding last week.

Workers instead dragged fire hoses to the top of the falls and water was pumped through them.

Several thousand spectators, including people dressed as cartoon characters, attended the ceremony. Also present were hot dogs imported from Australia, balloons and music. Four T-38 jets from the 80th Flying Training Wing at Sheppard Air Force Base flew in formation overhead.

"Today the people are showing the nation what the community of Wichita Falls is doing," James D. Lonergan, master of ceremonies and publisher of the Wichita Falls Times and Record News, said.

"Creating a falls or the rebirth of the falls in Wichita Falls is something new and different from any other place in the world," O'Laughlin said.

Area officials ought to tape secret talks

Texas media organizations are waiting with baited breath to see if Gov. Clements will sign into a law a so-called "tougher" Open Meetings Act. The new law, they say, will greatly aid the media's watchdog function by requiring government bodies — including city and county commissions and school boards — to keep either a tape recording or certified agenda of what they do in secret "executive sessions."

I hope my fellow journalists don't hold their breath too long. And I hope that my profession hasn't become naive enough to actually believe that this law, as written, will make one bit of difference.

This bill may well provide Texas citizens with a new watchdog. But if it does, it will be a watchdog with no teeth.

Current Texas law allows most elected officials to meet behind closed doors for three reasons: To discuss personnel problems, pending litigation or land acquisition. In the case of the school board, student discipline is a fourth reason.

The idea of the law is that as much of the public's business as possible should be done in public, under the skeptical eye of voters and taxpayers who are ultimately responsible for whatever goes on anyway. The exceptions to the law — those items allowed to be discussed away from public scrutiny — are intended to protect rights of privacy and enhance the bargaining power of the community or school system.

But the law has always contained a Catch 22-type loophole. If no one but elected officials are allowed inside the secret session, who's to say what they are talking about when they get behind closed doors?

Who's guarding the chicken coop while the foxes convene inside?

Enter the wonderful world of tape-recorded technology.

The law now before Gov. Clements originally would have required officials to tape their secret sessions. Responsible journalists weren't asking to hear the tapes — that would defeat the purpose of executive sessions — just that the tapes be kept available so that a judge could decide the issue in case questions arose concerning what was discussed.

That provision was watered down after groups lobbying for Texas school districts, cities and counties protested loudly to legislators that tape recordings would take the secret out of secret sessions.

The Legislature buckled under the pressure, and what Gov. Clements now has on his desk is a once-important, now-toothless bill that represents time that would have been better spent working on the state budget.

I wonder what these groups — and those who support them — have to hide from their voters and taxpayers?

Sure, elected officials will still have to keep "certified agendas" of what they do in executive session. But surely our legislators aren't naive enough to believe that someone who's already breaking the law is going to stop and write down what he's doing!

Those who burglarize your home aren't going to let a slip of paper stop them, and neither are those who secretly play fast and loose with taxpayer dollars. But if they know a recording is being made of their activities, they just might behave themselves.

Locally, our county, city and school officials are on record as saying they will have no problem abiding by the proposed law because they discuss only what they're supposed to in secret.

Let's hold them to that and request — no, demand — that they begin taping their executive sessions, regardless of whether Gov. Clements signs the new law.

Judge Cave leaves courthouse Friday. At right is chief prosecution witness, Cave's former fiancée and prostitute Rachel Tallent.

District judge convicted of felonies

Cave cleared of sex for favors charges

FORT WORTH (AP) — State District Judge Tom Cave, cleared of sex-for-favor charges, still faces a maximum 15 years in prison for mail fraud convictions and possible loss of his position.

He was acquitted Friday by a federal jury of accusations by prostitutes and drug users that he reduced their sentences in exchange for sex, but convicted on three counts of mail fraud. Cave could be assessed up to 15 years in prison and a $750,000 fine.

Cave's co-defendants, bail bondsman J. Dorsey Adams, 80, and attorney Ronald Aultman, 71, were found innocent of charges they arranged sexual liaisons for Cave.

The "sweet-and-sour" verdicts, as Cave's attorney called them, were delivered the day before the judge's marriage to Cheryl Vaughan, a former Tarrant County adult probation employee.

Plans for the wedding were made in December, when the trial was scheduled for April, the Dallas Morning News reported. The trial was reset for May and lasted longer than expected, leaving Cave wondering if he would be waiting for a verdict on his wedding day.

The trial featured almost half-a-dozen weeks of testimony that included steamy tales of sex scandals and an airing of tactics used by a special Fort Worth police unit known as The Project.

Officers kill drug suspect in shootout

DALLAS (AP) — Two Department of Public Safety undercover officers shot a suspected drug dealer to death in a grocery store parking lot after he fired at them while trying to escape, authorities said.

In an operation described by DPS Capt. Wesley Crites as a "drug bust gone sour," the two officers fired four times, killing a man identified as Edward Dominiques, 44, of Dallas.

A second man, Lasaro De La Paz, 38, was charged with aggravated delivery of a controlled substance and was being held in Lew Sterrett Justice Center Saturday in lieu of $25,000 bond, officials said.

DPS officials and Dallas police are investigating the shooting at Hodges grocery. DPS spokesman Ray Ward said Saturday. The grocery usually is crowded on Fridays, and several bystanders criticized officers for firing at a public place.

Angela Smitherman, 18, testified the unit questioned her for 18 hours without letting her call an attorney, but police refuted her statement, saying she called her boyfriend several times and never asked for an attorney.

Bob Flowers, director of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, said earlier this week that Cave would lose his $75,587 annual salary if he was found guilty. A hearing to remove him from the bench would follow, he said.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson ordered a pre-sentence investigation of Cave be completed in a month. Sentencing would be scheduled after completion of the investigation, she said.

If that happens, "I'll have to go to work," Cave, 57, told the Morning News. Cave adamantly denies he will resign.

"You know better than that," he said. Cave said he would fight back "always and every day" but refused to explain how.

"It's not easy to get back to everyday life when you've been convicted of three felony counts. Of course, the counts that matter are the ones I was acquitted of," Cave said.

Prosecutors relied on testimony from several women convicted in Cave's court of prostitution, drug and theft charges. Cave's former fiancée, Rachel Perez Tallent, was the prosecution's star witness. She was twice convicted of prostitution during 1981 and served a five-year probation for cocaine possession.

Defense attorneys tried to discredit Tallent's testimony by saying she manipulated the judge, but Tallent testified that she became involved with Cave because she feared going to the penitentiary. Cave is the first Texas district judge convicted of federal felony charges, a spokesman for the State Commission on Judicial Conduct said.

Texas law provides four ways for a district judge to be removed from the bench, said Bill Horning, general counsel for the state judicial conduct committee.

The four ways are impeachment by the Legislature and removal by the state Supreme Court after verified charges of misconduct from 10 lawyers in the affected court, by the governor after a two-thirds vote in each house of the Legislature and by the judicial conduct committee after conducting a tribunal.

The mail fraud convictions stem from letters and money Cave sent during 1985 to Tallent.

"It was a sweet-and-sour verdict," said Tom Hill, Cave's attorney. "The good part is he was vindicated of all the bizarre sexual charges that were made. The counts they convicted him on were the very novel and creative way they said he used the mails to defraud, which will give us a fertile area to appeal."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Terence Hart said he was not disappointed with the verdict.

"We felt like we could and did prove the counts just as they were alleged. But the trial was very long, an unusual amount of evidence and took the jury a long time to sort through that," Hart said.

Cave stepped down from his $75,000-a-year post four days after his November indictment, but remained on the payroll. Visiting judges have filled in for him in the meantime.

Airport

emergencies during the past six years, flying victims to far-away hospitals for needed treatments. Officials also used the airport to search for snow-bound victims of March's blizzard.

Fernuik said airport opponents don't realize the facility's medical value until it's needed.

"A lot of things are just difficult to put a price on," he said. "If it were their daughter that was burned, or their son, they'd spend a million dollars out of their own pocket. It's not needed until it's needed."

Chamber of Commerce Manager Bruce Barton agreed that a strong local airport is a necessity when trying to attract industry. Barton said he has not visited Perry Lefors Field since arriving in Pampa in April.

"A lot of business people use their own or corporate aircraft," he said, especially in Texas and the Southwest. "It's not an everyday thing that you see — most people — because they're not out there."

But some citizens, including at least one county commissioner, think the airport should start paying for itself — and soon. And one local industry that used its own plane to bring in customers — IRI International Corp. — has parked its plane due to sluggish economic conditions.

"I'm sure that it helps us, and I'm glad that it's there," said local businessman Ray Velasquez, a frequent critic of county spending. "But at some point, it's got to start paying for itself. If I can do it, and if a whole mess of other businesses are doing it, why should the airport business be any different?"

"It just never ends. It seems to be a never-ending money-hole out there."

Velasquez has urged commissioners to make improvements to the airport only as funds become available, instead of subsidizing the facility on the backs of taxpayers. He said he doesn't totally buy the economic development arguments.

"Anybody who has a business downtown could argue that," said Velasquez, who runs the Little Mexico restaurant on East Craven. "You could argue about the same about anything — even my little place of business."

County Commissioner Gerald Wright said there's no question that an airport is vital to a community like Pampa, but "from time to time, I have been concerned about the amount of money that has been spent out there."

"I think someday we may be proud that we did that work out there," Wright said. "I would like to see now that we've got it in fairly good shape — now with the slowdown in the economy — that we slow down out there with our spending."

Wright said that, although most of the airport improvements have been financed with federal grants, those still constitute tax dollars.

"It all comes out of the same pot," he said.

AIRPORT BUDGET

The following lists income and expenditures involving Perry Lefors Field in 1986.

The airport's operating budget showed a $15,000 decrease from 1985. Roughly $500,000 was spent from 1982 to 1985 on projects financed jointly by the FAA and Gray County, but officials say no major spending projects are planned for the immediate future.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Gang of attorneys gouges taxpayers

An elite gang of local lawyers and judges has created a good sideline racket in the recent handling of criminal cases in which defendants couldn't afford counsel.

District judges appoint attorneys in such cases, and after a certain amount of justice falls upon the clients, the lawyers submit bills for the same judges' approval.

Lately, in Gray County, those judges have signed the bills without question and have sent them to the county — and taxpayers — for payment.

Since 1984, commissioners had refused to pay many of the more outrageous bills compiled by attorneys in court-appointed cases.

The rare stand was bound to fail. After all, the question of how much to pay court-appointed lawyers was decided by the attorneys' brethren in the black robes.

After the county rejected the lawyers' unreasonable charges, the attorneys filed suit and made threats of additional lawsuits. That placed the issue in the hands of the jurists' big brothers on the appeals court.

Naturally, the appeals court judges sided with their lawyer friends, ruling that the county must pay every dime demanded by the court-appointed attorneys.

Figuring that the county and taxpayers couldn't win against such a racket, commissioners recently gave in and paid more than $50,000 in disputed fees.

That ought to make a few payments on the Mercedes.

State law says defense lawyers in court-appointed criminal cases must receive a "reasonable" fee of not less than $50 per court appearance.

One attorney involved in the dispute sent Gray County a $13,000 bill for handling a murder case (the defendant got life) and another $7,000 bill for handling the appeal of the same case (the killer lost again).

The lawyer later billed the county $2,200 for a probation revocation hearing that required a single court appearance. He also billed the criminal's family $2,500 for handling that same case. Most of the charges in the lawyer's $2,100 bill to the county involved time spent in "telephone conferences" with the defendant's parents. Those dozens of phone calls with mom and dad cost the county $75 an hour — a bargain rate, the attorney maintains.

We weren't aware that repetitious phone calls to parents were required to prepare a defense, certainly not part of a "reasonable" fee confiscated from taxpayers. The lawyer's few "telephone conferences" with potential witnesses were billed under separate entries.

Others among the half-dozen defense lawyers involved in the fees dispute had charged the county thousands of dollars for cases they handled only for a short time, then were dismissed before seeing the charges to their conclusion. New attorneys were appointed to mop up, and those cohorts also got a piece of the action — and fees — on the same cases.

Texas case law on compensation for court-appointed attorneys is scarce. An attorney general's opinion says a county must prove that a district judge's award of fees was "so unreasonable, arbitrary and capricious as to amount to an abuse of discretion" to refuse the ordered payment.

The 7th Court of Appeals in Amarillo, in ruling against Gray County, said the time a lawyer spends in court is "but the tip of the iceberg" in determining reasonable compensation in a court-appointed case.

The lawyers involved used heavy artillery to squeeze their money from the county. They threatened to refuse to defend suspects, raising the prospect of halting prosecutions and seeing criminals go free.

Backing the attorneys have been the county's two district judges, who approved their bills. The judges remained silent throughout the dispute, refusing even to meet with commissioners to discuss the issue. Those who think the lawyers' bills are out of line should put much of the blame on the district judges.

The lawyers say they really aren't making a killing off of court-appointed cases. To hear them tell the story, they go broke at $75 an hour. The attorneys also maintain that they already perform enough "pro bono" work — freebies done in the furtherance of justice.

Funny, we didn't see any attorneys jumping up to handle any of the contested cases after compensation was withheld.

While the involved attorneys have submitted one outrageous bill after another, the county's payments to them have almost tripled since 1984. In 1985, the county budget for the lawyers' booty was $25,000, but the county actually paid about $45,000. In 1986, the county budgeted $40,000, but spent more than $82,000.

This year, the county budgeted $75,000. With seven months to go in 1987, the county has shoveled more than $65,000 into the lawyers' pockets.

The commissioners' repeated errors in estimating the funds resulted from their failure to budget for greed.

Benefits trap poor blacks

Black progress has been no less than phenomenal. According to "Closing the Gap: Forty Years of Black Progress," a Rand Corp. study by James P. Smith and Finis R. Welch, blacks have made gains unthinkable as late as the eve of World War II.

"In 1940, the typical black male earned around $4,500 (in 1984 dollars); a similarly employed black male earned almost $19,000 by 1980." Another way of putting it is that a typical black male worker earned 43 percent as much as his white counterpart; by 1980, he earned 73 percent.

Comparably educated black men used to earn 50 percent of the wages of white men. "By 1980, comparably educated black men earned 75 to 82 percent as much as white men." In 1940, only 8 percent of black men earned incomes higher than the average white. By 1980, 29 percent of black men earned more than the median white.

Smith and Welch also report that "by 1980, black intact families earned 82 percent as much as white families, more than double the income ratio of 1940."

What explains this dramatic closing of the racial income gap? Smith and Welch say that "affirmative action cannot be the whole story nor, for that matter, a very large part of it," because the major portion of black gains over the last 40 years occurred before the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Narrowing of the racial income gap was a result of other factors. Smith and Welch point to black migration both from rural to urban areas and from the South to the North in the quest for higher wages. More important than migration were improvements in the length and quality of schooling received by blacks. Blacks also benefitted from rapid economic growth between 1940 and 1970 and elimination of gross forms of discrimination.

Young black college graduates who received wage bonuses by firms scurrying around to meet "goals and timetables" were the main beneficiaries of affirmative action. These blacks received short-term, now dissipated gains from affirmative action, but gains in professional and managerial positions covered by federal contract compliance are exaggerated. Smith and Welch found evidence that firms have been reclassifying jobs held by blacks into the professional and managerial categories, in order to inflate overall minority representation.

The jubilation over black gains has to be quieted a bit because of some disturbing patterns that Smith and Welch identify: "The deterioration of the black family, the decline in American economic growth, rising black unemployment, and a confused and unfocused public policy debate on race."

In 1940, 18 percent of black and 10 percent of white families were headed by females as compared with nearly 50 percent of black and 12 percent of white families headed by females today. If black family stability continued, black poverty would be one-half its current rate of nearly 35 percent. A full 45 percent of the reduction in black poverty since 1940 has been due to economic growth. Between 1970 and 1980, confused federal policy yielded real GNP increases of less than 3 percent. Since 1970, the economic progress of blacks has been offset by large increases in black unemployment.

A major obstacle to further progress is the confused public policy debate. Safety net programs cannot serve as vehicles for long-term poverty reduction, because they do not teach skills and may even trap blacks into a culture of poverty. Smith and Welch say poor blacks need more of the standard cure for poverty. Eighty percent of the reduction of black poverty occurred before 1965. That ought to tell us something about quotas, busing and safety nets.

Put preachers in black hole

During all the mess concerning the television evangelists, I kept wondering what's the Rev. Ike up to these days.

You remember the Rev. Ike? He is a dynamic, suave black man who preaches how God is going to make all his believers rich.

Rev. Ike, with headquarters in Boston and New York, says if you want a new car, send him a few bucks and he'll pray for you, and you'll soon have a new car, compliments, I suppose, of Holy Spirit Autos.

Anyway, I now know what the Rev. Ike has been up to lately. The same old thing. Send cash, the Rev. Ike is still saying, and you will receive "help, happiness, love, success, prosperity and more money."

A friend of mine, Roy Brady, got this message in a letter he received from the Rev. Ike. Mr. Brady, who had no intention of sending the Rev. Ike the time of day, passed the letter on to me.

Here was the deal the Rev. Ike was offering Roy Brady.

In the letter, the Rev. Ike sent along what he described as a "blessed, red token string."

Mr. Brady was instructed to hold the string in his hand while reading the Rev. Ike's letter.

"My eyes are filled with tears of joy as I write this letter to you," the Rev. Ike went on.

"I was working and praying for you this morning in the prayer tower and I felt in my heart you needed some extra help this month."

The Rev. Ike further instructed Mr. Brady to put his red token string into his window as soon as possible and to leave it there overnight.

Then, he was to mail the string back to the Rev. Ike along with, you guessed it, a "faith donation."

The Rev. Ike said that when he received the red string from Mr. Brady, he would put it in the prayer tower, and in no time at all Mr. Brady would get his health, happiness, love, more money, etc.

This was interesting, too.

"Do not keep this blessed, red token string longer than overnight," the Rev. Ike warned.

"Get it out of your home tomorrow, no later than 8:37 p.m."

What, God closes shop at 8:37 p.m. and doesn't handle any more miracles until the next morning?

We've all had a lot of fun over the last few weeks with Jim Bakker and Tammy Faye and the boys. But do you know how many people are out there, old and ignorant and desperate, who believe the kind of bull the Rev. Ike and his ilk send out to them?

I still don't understand why the sort of letter the Rev. Ike sent to Roy Brady doesn't constitute mail fraud.

We're chasing inside stock traders while overlooking the people who are in their prayer towers.

You want to send your money somewhere it will do some good, don't send it to these people.

Give it to your church. Give it to the poor and homeless, give it to the hungry of the world.

Give it to the American Heart Association or the American Cancer Society or to any number of reputable charities.

When the Charlotte Observer began coming down heavy on Jim and Tammy Faye and the PTL Club, Jim came up with a motto around which his followers could rally against the heat of criticism.

"Enough is enough," was that motto.

Damn right, enough is enough. It's time to run these money changers back into the black holes from whence they sprang.

EPA overstates cancer risk

To millions of people living in mobile homes, the Environmental Protection Agency delivered a spring-time shocker. Formaldehyde causes cancer in humans, the agency said, and as many as two in 1,000 people who stay in mobile homes and breathe formaldehyde vapors for 10 years may be at risk.

Mobile homes aren't alone in relying on such components as particle board and plywood that contain formaldehyde. Most housing does. Exposure tends to be greater in mobile homes, though, because of limited interior space.

So should mobile-home owners panic? Not yet. They might instead consider how the EPA arrives at such conclusions. Warnings of cancer risks issue from a regulatory never-never land where science often slides into raw, arbitrary judgment.

Simply put, the EPA is required by law to function as if it could assess risk far more accurately than it can. Faced with overwhelming scientific uncertainty, the agency invariably tends to play it safe.

Take the manner in which evidence is weighed. The EPA says excess cancers were reported in nine of 28 studies of humans exposed to formaldehyde. That seems ominous, of course, yet why should the other 19 studies count for less?

Or, as one epidemiologist wrote several years ago: "Should one positive study outweigh the negative, irrespective of quality? Should two (or five or 10) negative studies outweigh one positive? Present law tends to ignore such subtleties..."

The EPA is equally confident that conclusions from animal studies (which were also invoked in the formaldehyde case) can be readily transferred to humans. It believes that swamping animals with nearly toxic doses of a chemical provides a clear measure of whether the substance will cause cancer at very low doses.

Yet both of these assumptions have also prompted sporadic expert dissent, some of which was provocatively documented by Edith Efron in her 1984 book "The Apocalypses."

As Efron notes, John Higgenson of the International Agency for Research on Cancer once remarked that "there is no rational biological method of extrapolating from animals to man."

If male rats develop cancer from a particular chemical at 1 percent the dose required to affect mice (and this has happened), which result is relevant to humans? Or is either?

The EPA's exposure goal for any suspected carcinogen is zero, and its enforceable standards are set as close to that mark as possible. This means the "safe" dose for some substances is a level not even detectable a few years ago.

This is not to ridicule the regulators, but it is to insist that as far as the cancer risk of many chemicals is concerned, everything is compelling except the facts.

Parking hogs take our needed spaces

To the editor:
My letter is to those who improperly park in spaces reserved for the handicapped.
We who need these spaces must have a doctor sign a form that we are handicapped. We then pay $5 for a card to put in our car window.
Many times, I haven't been able to shop because these parking spaces were taken by cars without these stickers.

He's just a pervert with a sharp knife

To the editor:
This concerns a letter in the paper last Sunday. How can anyone deny that Troy Grimes is guilty?
Everything the little girl described is typical of Grimes.
I should know; he said some of the same words to me as he held a hunting knife to my throat. I thank God I got away from him before he raped me.
If something would have been done years ago when this happened to me, these little girls would not have been victims.
Grimes, who has a history of drug use and crime, should have been put behind bars when he was a teen-ager. Instead, he was allowed to run free and harm other children.

The man, if he can be called that, is a sick pervert.
Whoever wrote that letter was right; justice was not served. They should have given him the chair for what he did to that poor, innocent baby.
I have known the fear she felt as he threatened her life, but I can only imagine the physical and emotional pain she suffered as he forced himself on her.
The jury was accused of having one less black to worry about. I could understand, or at least try to reason, the fact that a member of his family could think that—if he didn't have the record of crime he has, or even if the victim were not also black. The person who wrote that letter took the coward's way out. (Blame it all on prejudice.)
With the testimony of the child, the evidence, and my personal experience with this maniac, there is no doubt in my mind that he is guilty.
Too bad his attempted suicide (if it really was that) didn't work. Maybe some of the prisoners in Huntsville will finish the job.

Vietnam veterans deserve apologies

To the editor:
I thank The Pampa News for publishing my son's letter.

Even though his mother and I now are divorced, we have always been family-oriented.
I am also a veteran of World War II. I am proud to have served my country and just as proud that my two sons served and put their lives on the line for the good old USA.
We veterans came back from World War II as heroes and were welcomed by big parades and treated like kings.
What disturbs me is how the veterans of the Vietnam Conflict were treated. They were asked to serve the same as we were, yet they were kicked, cursed at, spit at and called murderers. Thousands of Americans should be ashamed, and they owe an apology.
I am proud of every living veteran and those who gave their lives in all our wars. I am also very proud of all the boys and girls now serving their beloved country.
A proud veteran and dad.

of Texas to abolish the death penalty for all offenses in law. AI notes with regret that Texas has had the highest number of executions since 1976, compared with other states in the United States.
AI is concerned that there are six juvenile offenders currently under the sentence of death in Texas. The minimum age at which the death penalty may be imposed is 17 years. This is in contravention of agreed international treaties and safeguards, in particular Article 6 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and Article 4 of the American Convention on Human Rights.
There is serious concern about evidence that suggests that the death penalty is being applied in a way that systematically discriminates on grounds of race.
Further, AI is concerned about evidence that suggests that defendants with court-appointed lawyers in Texas are more than twice as likely to receive a death sentence as those with a privately retained counsel.
Also, the criteria for granting clemency in Texas appear to be very narrow, and mitigating circumstances such as the youth of the offender and other factors affecting the fairness of the sentence are not taken into account when deciding on clemency.

Rights group hopes to abolish execution

As a member of Amnesty International, I address myself to you to draw attention to Amnesty's concern about the death penalty in your country.

Sick of hearing about ailments

Texas guest columnist

By ODIE ARAMBULA
Laredo Morning Times

LAREDO (AP) — Ever notice what most people will talk about after a casual meeting? The initial topic generally depends on the nature of the liaison between the two or more parties.
If they are engaged in the same business, the lead question usually is, "How are you doing?"
Either one or both usually will start bragging about how little they do and how much they make. At some point, it becomes a liar's contest.
If the occasion marks a chance meeting of longtime acquaintances, the greeting can generate into lengthy verbiage about the job, the family, some other immediate family member or friend, or even a local issue.
However, whenever the encounter is purely family, the meeting on the sidewalk or at the department store often develops into a one-on-one summit. I just marvel at the untimely conversations between sisters or childhood friends, now mothers or grandmothers, even competitors.
The stories they exchange at times are as dull as cold steel, but at other times they are absolute thrillers. Things tend to get out of hand when one sister tries to outdo the other sister. I become overly interested in some of these tales because, in some instances, I have personal knowledge of the subject.

The stories get taller and taller with the progression of the conversation and often resort to outright fabrications. I don't blame them for one minute, believe me—they don't mean to put one over. It's just that they are not going to miss a chance to brag a little.
"My daughter's son is about to graduate. He's going to be an engineer," this mother was telling her sibling. "He's going to start working with this very important company next month."
What the mother was not explaining was that her son was about to complete a terminal technical course and had taken a job with an asphalt outfit. The other grandmother, on the other hand, was not to be outdone.
"Well, my daughter's son has just been given another important promotion," the other grandmother volunteered. "He's 'numero uno' for this big refinery near Houston. All his children are going to the best schools in a place near Angleton."
The son in question holds some kind of maintenance job with the refinery.
When they start comparing notes on the home, the car, travels and acquisitions of whatever nature, it's time to pull out the recorder. Young people tell me they prefer not to be around when their mothers start telling stories.
These young people do not necessarily mind the bragging. There's an element of truth to the stories. However, when it's a straight put-down, they leave the room or take off for the friend's home across the street. I don't know how many times I've heard this young girl's expression, "Mother!"

However, nothing beats the traditional summit meetings on illness. There's got to be one in every family. It's generally a beleaguered woman who forever badgers the male companion for his lack of understanding. One of my all-time favorites has to be the never-ending saga of a friend's sister-in-law. The friend confides that his circle of friends and family try hard to avoid discussions with the woman because her principal topic is health. The friend figures that the woman has suffered from every conceivable illness in medical journals. Furthermore, he swears the woman's medical cabinet at home has prescribed and un-prescribed medication for anything which comes to mind.
The conversational battle of who's had the most misery goes on forever, he explains. He swears one time he officiated at a raging argument between these two sisters over who had undergone the most surgical pain. He laughs as he quotes one sister as having survived all this terrible pain in surgery for gallstones.
"The other sister would not quit," he says. "She told the story of how she nearly slugged this doctor for pulling part of her in-grown toe nail without the benefit of local anesthetic."
What to do? Best thing is to sit there and listen, and make the best of it. Don't volunteer an opinion. If someone invites your views on the topic of debate, confuse the issue by agreeing with both sides, diplomatically. Otherwise, leave the room and hide under the hood of the nearest car.

City takes registration for summer recreation

Registration for the city's Summer Recreation Program will open at 8 a.m. Monday and continue through 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Parks and Recreation Department office, 816 S. Hobart.
Recreation Supervisor Jackie Harper said registration will be available from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.
The classes will begin Monday, June 15, and continue for four weeks through Friday, July 10.
Harper said the program is open to all school-age students from the first grade through senior high levels. There is also an adult tennis class.
Kay Crouch is the Summer Recreation Program coordinator. The staff is made up of Pampa school teachers, coaches and high school students.

Activities scheduled this summer include softball, tennis, adult tennis, basketball, gymnastics, cheerleading, weight lifting, arts and crafts, soccer, volleyball, children's aerobics, track and computers.
Though tentative schedules have been prepared, final schedules will be determined after registration, dependent on the numbers enrolling for each activity.
Crouch said the classes are organized to teach basic rules and fundamentals for each recreational activity. All classes are for instruction only, she said.
Harper noted that the Pampa Summer Recreation Program, though sponsored by the city, is a financially self-supporting program organized to provide recreational activities for school-age students and for some adults. The program is funded through the fees paid for the classes.

She encouraged all students and parents interested in the classes to be sure to enroll this week so they can participate "in an exciting summer of activities and fun." Though the classes are basically instructional in aim, there will still be a lot of fun in them, Harper said.
Registration fees are $20 per student for the first class, which also entitles the participant to an official blue Summer Recreation Program T-shirt with the city logo imprinted in white. Each additional class is $15.
The T-shirts will also serve as identification for students officially enrolled in the classes.

Doctors contract for ER

Doctors Steve Davis and Earl Hoffer have begun providing emergency room coverage at HCA Coronado Hospital during evenings and weekends, Administrator Norman Knox announced Friday.
They replace Coastal Emergency Room Services, which provided coverage during the past year. Coastal's contract lapsed and was offered to the local physicians, Knox said.
Members of the hospital's medical staff provide emergency room coverage from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Dr. Davis has announced that he is closing his private general practice to assume his emergency room duties. Davis came to Pampa from Groom in 1977.
Hoffer, who has been director of the emergency room, will continue to maintain a family practice in Panhandle. A board-certified family practice specialist, Hoffer came to Pampa from Denver in 1977.

Money issues pushed aside in summit talk

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

VENICE, Italy — President Reagan on Saturday urged his summit colleagues to build on a "solid record of accomplishment" when they meet Monday at a summit designed to demonstrate economic harmony but already overshadowed by current events.

U.S. leaders indicated in advance that they expect no major new monetary or fiscal initiatives to emanate from the economic summit.

Instead, the Reagan administration was emphasizing an emerging U.S.-Soviet agreement to remove hundreds of nuclear-tipped missiles from Europe and Soviet Asia, and protection of navigation lanes in the Persian Gulf.

Nonetheless, leaders of the United States, Japan, Britain, West Germany, France, Canada and Italy will spend a considerable amount of time discussing the international economy — even if no major new agreements are expected.

President Reagan, in his weekly radio address on Saturday, emphasized past successes in the economic arena — rather than breaking new ground.

Declaring that the 4½-year-old U.S. recovery, the longest peacetime expansion since World War II, helped pave the way, Reagan declared: "The world leaders in Venice next week can look back on a solid record of accomplishment."

"Today, inflation remains low while interest rates are moderate and prospects are favorable for growth to continue for a fifth year," he added.

The summit, to be held at a former 8th century Benedictine monastery on San Giorgio Island, one of the 117 that make up Venice, gets under way on Monday and runs through Wednesday. Two large Italian naval vessels were moored just offshore and tight security was being imposed throughout the city.

Italian Navy frogmen probed the waters around San Giorgio Island, which was closed for 12 hours Saturday night so troops and police armed with 300 metal detectors could search it. Officials said several hundred troops and police would patrol the island during the summit.

Although Reagan has been in the area since last Wednesday night, other heads of government were expected to begin arriving on Sunday.

Reagan made a brief trip to Rome on Saturday for an audience with Pope John Paul II at the Vatican.

After the session, the pontiff said world peace can only be achieved by ending the arms race and that "mere lip service" to that goal falls short of God's expectations.

Reagans return to Venice airport Saturday.

Reagan responded that he, too, wants "a world of peace, where armaments are reduced and human rights respected; a world of justice and hope, where each of God's creatures has the means and opportunity to develop to his or her full potential."

Amid the talk of peace, Frank Carlucci, the president's national security adviser, talked to reporters about the Persian Gulf situation and the Chinese-made Silkworm missiles sold to Iran. The administration views them as a threat to oil tankers in the Persian Gulf and has protested to Peking about the sale.

Pope asks Reagan to end arms race

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II appealed anew to President Reagan in the Vatican today to work to end the arms race and said whoever gives "mere lip service" to that goal falls short of God's intentions.

Reagan, calling on the spiritual leader of the world's approximately 800 million Roman Catholics before next week's seven-nation economic summit, praised the pope as setting an example for the world with his efforts on behalf of mankind.

Reagan, in an exchange of remarks after a private meeting at the Vatican, assured the pontiff that he, too, wants "a world of peace, where armaments are reduced and human rights respected; a world of justice and hope, where each of God's creatures has the means and opportunity to develop to his or her full potential."

The president's trip to Rome and a luncheon at a country estate with Italian President Francesco Cossiga and Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani provided a brief interruption from his seclusion at an elegant villa near Venice, where he arrived Wednesday night to prepare for the seven-nation economic summit that opens Monday.

Meeting for the third time since 1982, Reagan and the pope greeted each other with open arms and retired to the privacy of the papal library, which dates back to the 17th century and is ringed by frescoes along the walls near the ceiling.

Swiss guards, wearing colorful uniforms designed by Michaelangelo in the 14th Century as he painted the Sistine Chapel, stood at attention throughout the pontifical palace, carrying long pikes topped by a combination sword and battle ax.

The pope presented pontifical medallions to Reagan, his wife, Nancy, and members of their entourage, including the president's military aide, Maj. Ron Thomas, who carried the ever-present suitcase containing the secret codes authorizing use of American nuclear weapons.

After their 55-minute meeting, Reagan and the pope sat alongside each other behind microphones to deliver their statements. Mrs. Reagan, who toured a Vatican exhibit during their talks, attended, wearing a floor-length black gown and pillbox hat with a black veil.

Reagan offered the pope good wishes on his pilgrimage to Poland, beginning Monday. Mrs. Reagan had a 10-minute audience with the pope and was encouraged to continue her fight against drug abuse.

Moscow itches for action in Persian Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Russia will lease Kuwait as many tankers as it needs to protect its oil shipments against Iranian attack in the Persian Gulf should a rival U.S. deal fall through, Arab and Western diplomats said Saturday.

Word of the Soviet offer comes amid congressional opposition to the Reagan administration's pledge to afford 11 of Kuwait's 21 oil tankers military protection.

The diplomats, demanding anonymity, said the understanding between the Soviet Union and Kuwait was verbal and apparently would become operative if Washington reneges on its commitment to reflag the 11 tankers and give them military escorts.

Reagan says putting the tankers under the Stars and Stripes is needed to keep gulf shipping lanes open and the flow of oil to Western allies unimpeded.

Iran accuses Kuwait of supporting Iraq in the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war, making Kuwaiti tankers a target of Iranian attacks in the gulf. Both superpowers are seeking to increase their influence in the strategic, oil-rich gulf and Kuwait's predicament has provided the opportunity.

Said one diplomat of the new Soviet offer: "Nothing has been written as far as we understand from the Kuwaitis. But given the speed with which the Soviets rushed three tankers to Kuwait, there can be no doubt the Soviets will not hesitate to meet any additional Kuwaiti request."

In April, the Soviets lent the Kuwaitis three oil tankers at the gulf state's request.

One, the 38,000-ton Marshal Chuiikov, hit a mine in the gulf May 16 while bound for Kuwait.

Thatcher still leads British campaign

LONDON (AP) — Britain's election campaign roars along in its final week with Margaret Thatcher still favored to fend off challenging socialists and win a third successive term as prime minister.

The main opposition Labor Party has narrowed the gap in the polls, but not yet enough to end eight years of rule by the Conservative Party leader whom many Britons dislike — but still think is best for the job.

In the middle, the Social Democratic-Liberal Party Alliance has fared badly with its passionately moderate plea to break the grip of the two big parties.

The latest polls showed Mrs. Thatcher sometimes getting near but never slipping below the crucial 40 percent level she needs to be reasonably sure of surviving with overall control of the 650-member House of Commons when the votes are counted Thursday night.

In the remaining days of campaigning by Mrs. Thatcher and Labor's Neil Kinnock, she has the edge with the cameras.

The prime minister is due to make a quick visit Monday to the seven-nation summit in Venice — a stroll across the world stage by Mrs. Thatcher alongside her good friend President Reagan and other Western leaders.

The Conservatives, meanwhile, hope to get more mileage out of Labor's controversial pledge to scrap nuclear weapons.

Passenger tries to hijack plane

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A passenger dressed in U.S. Army fatigues who attempted to hijack a seaplane to Cuba that was bound for San Juan surrendered to police early Saturday after a seven-hour standoff at the San Juan airport.

The prisoner was identified by police and newspapers as Eduardo Ramon Mena of St. Croix, one of the U.S. Virgin islands, and a former policeman and veteran of the Vietnam War.

He had allowed the two crew members and 16 other passengers to leave the twin-engine Grumman Mallard unharmed after it landed from St. Croix at San Juan's Luis Munoz Marin International Airport at 5:40 p.m. Friday and then threatened to blow up the plane if he was not flown to Cuba.

He had a briefcase he said was filled with explosives.

The FBI did not say if they found any explosive, disclose any biographical information on Ramon Mena or say what charges might be filed. A spokesman said the bureau would issue a statement Monday.

A San Juan newspaper, El Nuevo Dia, said Roman Mena was 34, a Vietnam War veteran, unemployed, divorced and the father of two children.

Police officials in the U.S. Virgin Islands told the Virgin Islands Daily News that Roman Mena was a policeman on St. Croix until a few years ago.

The seaplane was about 20 miles outside San Juan when Ramon Mena walked to the cockpit, tapped co-pilot Mitch Mayborn on the shoulder and said, "I want to go to Cuba," the director of flight operations for the Virgin Islands Seaplane Shuttle Co., Louis Harris, told the Associated Press.

Hakim was given top secret papers

WASHINGTON (AP)—Private businessman Albert Hakim, a man with no official government sanction or security clearance, was given top secret documents and allowed to negotiate on behalf of the United States with the government of Iran, according to testimony before congressional investigators.

Hakim and his business partner Richard V. Secord, a retired Air Force general, even promised the Iranians during their talks last year that the United States would defend Iran against Soviet attack and would help depose the president of neighboring Iraq, with which Iran is at war. "To say it is stranger than fiction is an understatement," said Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair, as Hakim completed his testimony Friday. "This has been a sad two days for me."

Those details came out as the committees also heard:

■ That Hakim and Secord, the private managers of the Iran-Contra dealings, had plans to divert to their own enterprise most of a $10 million gift solicited by top U.S. officials from the sultan of Brunei.

■ That so many doubts have arisen about Secord's earlier sworn testimony, including new evidence that he profited from his Iran arms dealings, that he likely will be called back to testify again, perhaps in a private session with investigators.

Even Hakim finally admitted he had not been able to figure out every aspect of the business setup he and Secord knew as "the enterprise," describing it as "a monster sitting there with a few heads."

"Obviously, it is a corrosive influence on people in (government) office to be dealing with private individuals with all this money floating around," said

Hakim

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the Senate panel.

The first phase of the investigation, which has focused primarily on the Contra aid aspect of the story, concludes next week with testimony from Fawn Hall, North's former secretary, and Bretton Sciaroni, counsel to the U.S. Intelligence Oversight Board, who wrote legal opinions on the Boland amendment and on aid to Nicaragua that North cited as justification for his activities.

Anti-Klan protesters march against planned group rally

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—About 600 anti-Ku Klux Klan protesters marched through downtown Greensboro on Saturday singing "We Shall Overcome" in a demonstration to counter a Klan march planned for Sunday.

The Klan march would be the first major Klan activity in Greensboro since the 1979 confrontation with Communists Workers Party members that left five CWP members dead.

The anti-KKK protesters marched inside a police cordon for about 10 blocks, using the same route that will be used by the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in their membership march.

Carroll Crawford, grand dragon of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, predicted about 200 people would attend Sunday's march and rally.

City Manager William Carstarphen, who had drawn criticism for issuing a parade permit to the Klan, was one of those leading Saturday's march. City Councilman Earl Jones, also in the march, said the Klan's decision to march in Greensboro had backfired by drawing the city together in opposition.

The marchers included groups representing unions, people opposed to U.S. involvement in Nicaragua, socialists and many people unaffiliated with political groups.

During the Klan march, about 1,000 people are expected to attend a Greensboro Peace Festival and Love Rally for Racial Unity in a park about two miles from downtown, organizers said.

Have wheels, will marry

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Passers-by who peer through the windshield of an orange-striped motor home parked outside City Hall may find that it's occupied, by a man and woman standing with their backs to the steering wheel.

Facing them, next to the stove, will be a man with one hand on a Bible and the other on the button to start a cassette tape of "The Wedding March."

The 19-foot Winnebago is the Rev. William H. Montgomery's "Wedding Chapel On Wheels."

Until two years ago, Montgomery and several other ministers gathered at the door of the Marriage License Bureau in City Hall and conducted weddings there. But the public safety director kicked them out because they were fighting over business.

Montgomery, pastor of the New Pilgrim Missionary Baptist Church and former owner of Monty's Rib Station, stayed on to preside over the information desk in the City Hall rotunda. He sees that job as an offshoot of his ministry.

Miami

When 29 young Miamians modeled costumes dating back 100 years. Some of the models wore clothes originally worn by their great-great-grandparents. The fashion show, directed by Diane Locke, featured riding habits, party clothes, wedding gowns, pajamas and sportswear from the 1800s, Gay '90s, Roaring '20s and, one wedding gown, the mid-1950s.

The Follies ended in a flourish of patriotism as the chorus, under the direction of Max Presnell, sang a medley of patriotic songs and waved small American flags — except city council member Monett Jenkins, who waved a Confederate flag.

Following the follies, celebrants literally danced in the streets and got away with as much revelry as they could in front of the Roberts County Sheriff's Office. Music was provided by the Fencewalker band members who played rock and country songs. The 1988 Senior Class served concessions.

Saturday morning dawned as Mary Slavin assembled her crew of riders for a trail ride northeast of Miami on U.S. 60. Artisans and Junior Class concession stand workers gathered in the 4-H project center for an arts and crafts show.

Miami's first and, according to Cow Calling emcee Charles Bailey, best parade pulled from Miami school, plowed across the crowded streets and circled the courthouse. Most floats reflected Miami's and some, such as the First State Bank and the Betty's Beauty Shop entries, featured such relics as an old tellers' window and a torturous hair-permanent setting machine. Another, somewhat unfriendly, relic came when a white peaked hooded figure resembling a Ku Klux Klansman rode by, evoking sarcastic snickers from some of the parade watchers.

First place parade winners were Shawn Thompson, children; second grade, senior 1998, school; Miami Lumber, commercial; Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, non-commercial; Skeet Wagner's 1914 Ford, classic cars; Bill Watson, beard; William Clark, scruffiest beard; Liz Carr, pioneer dress; Otto Mangold, wagon; Coors Riding Club, riding club; and Sherry Graham, best individual horseback rider.

After 2,300 plates of pit barbecue were chowed down, contestants limbered their tonsils for the Cow Calling Contest.

The contest, in which calls are judged by men standing about 250 yards away from the contest stand, drew an extra-large slate of contestants this year with 23 women, 26 men and 12 "grandmas."

Miami native Wiley Bailey was the top bellower in the men's division, with Bob Minor of El Paso a runner-up. The women's award went to 1984 MHS graduate Haley Clark with Oklahoman Dana Glasby as the runner-up. Doris Wilkins of Perryton and Miami's Jane Bright won the grandma's competition.

MHS National Honor Society President Karie Bailey presented Charles Bailey (no relation) with a collection of letter jackets, school pictures and other mementos to go into a time capsule to be opened in 2087.

The celebration continued with an air show, a roping demonstration and another dance.

A community church service is set for 10:30 a.m. today at the MHS auditorium, with a cutting horse contest following at 12:30 at the arena.

leaky pipe

THE EFFICIENT WAY TO WATER LAWNS, GARDENS, ORCHARDS, ATHLETIC FIELDS and MORE

Leaky Pipe is the sub-surface watering system that cuts costs, eliminates evaporation and run-off.

Leaky Pipe is a porous, flexible rubber pipe which sweats when placed in the ground. Soil draws water from the pipe to be used by trees, plants and turf. Leaky Pipe delivers water, oxygen and nutrients directly to roots and requires only a fraction of the water used by conventional irrigation systems.

Leaky Pipe helps stabilize foundations. Spring rains and summer drought cause some soils to expand and contract. A single line of Leaky Pipe will stabilize soil around the house and eliminate this foundation damage.

Austin bound! Lefors upsets Gunter; Mayfield gets game ball

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

VERNON — Coach Brent Fountain stopped worrying as soon as Kevin Mayfield told him he could it.

And, he did it. What Mayfield did was seal the Region One championship for Lefors Friday as the Pirates stunned a somewhat overconfident Gunter team. Lefors defeated the 1-A powerhouse 4-3 in an eight-inning game, thereby giving the Pirates the right to charter yet another bus. This bus, though, will reach its final destination in Austin where the Pirates will take part in the 1-A baseball finals.

Mayfield was inserted as catcher after starter Kent Kerbo left the game following a disputed call at first.

"He was the only one who had caught," Fountain said. "He came up and said, 'Coach, I can catch. I caught in Little League. I had faith in him after that.'"

Mayfield's gem came when Gunter had runners on first and second with two outs in the bottom of the eighth.

Thinking they could take advantage of Mayfield's rookie throwing arm, Gunter's man on second, pitcher Chuck Hesstam, attempted to steal third.

He wasn't even close. "He was out by five feet," Lefors third baseman Richard Hernandez said. "I just made sure to hold on to the ball."

As expected Mayfield, holding his prize game-ball, was elated at his defensive feat.

"I jumped straight up in the air," Mayfield said. "It was great."

Hernandez got to the nerves of his team members and coach earlier in the game when he gunned down a player after a sharply hit ball to third. On the throw, Hernandez suffered a slight muscle pull in his throwing arm.

"It didn't feel too good," Hernandez said. "But, I'll make it feel good by next week."

Hernandez was referring to the Pirates' sudden and somewhat unexpected berth in the semifinal. The opponent and game time has not yet been determined, but they will play at either 1 p.m. or 3 p.m., Thursday.

Gunter was one of the top ten 1-A teams in the state, and went in to Friday's game with a staggering 18-1 record. Several of their wins were against more powerful 2-A clubs.

The game Friday moved quickly and going into the top of the seventh—their last chance at bat—the Pirates were down 3-1.

Jamie Wariner's second single of the day drove in Kirk Kerbo to put Lefors within one.

Then, Jimmy Hannon stepped to the plate—his fourth appearance of the day after striking out his first three times at bat—and belted a single to drive in John Ledbetter. That tied it at 3-3.

"I had been overstriding a bunch," Hannon said of his three strikeouts. He did, though, pick up the game's second most important hit.

In the top of the eighth, Lefors struck again for the game winner.

After reaching base on a single and advancing to second on a Gunter throwing error, Hernandez stole third. The winning run was only 90-feet away.

Kirk Kerbo hit the first pitch for his second single of the day.

Hernandez scored, making it 4-3, and Kerbo was given the game winning RBI.

Kerbo also was a mound marvel, dazzling and baffling Gunter hitters with his combination.

Kerbo allowed the lumberjack-like lineup only five hits. Eleven Gunter-types fell to his strikeouts.

"Everything was going great," Kerbo said. "My fastball and knuckleball were working, but, if I hadn't had the help of the defense, I couldn't have done it."

"It was a total team effort,"

Fountain said. "All 15 players have accepted their role. When asked to do something they do it. They're not in the lineup, they're always in the dugout firing up the team."

The team effort and sportsmanship was clearly evident in the victory. After having gone in as the underdog in almost every game this season they probably will again be the underdog in Thursday's semi-final game.

But the role of the underdog is a label the Lefors Pirates may quite likely overcome once again.

6-5 victory over Oklahoma State in the College World Series, Friday night.

Bet Twice spoils Alysheba's triple

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

Gone West, was scratched before the race.

NEW YORK (AP)—Bet Twice, runner-up in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, ran away with the Belmont Stakes on Saturday and ruined Alysheba's bid to become thoroughbred racing's 12th Triple Crown winner.

Instead, Alysheba became the 11th 3-year-old to win the first two races of the Triple Crown and meet defeat in the 1 1/2-mile Belmont.

Bet Twice's runaway victory also foiled trainer Woody Stephens' bid to win a sixth straight Belmont. The Stephens-trained Gone West finished sixth in the nine-horse field.

Bet Twice, beaten by 3-4 lengths in the Derby and 1-2 length in the Preakness, took the lead on the final turn and after he straightened for home there was no doubt that he was the winner.

Alysheba was fourth going into the clubhouse turn and fourth turning for home. It was as close as he would get on a sunny, warm afternoon at Belmont Park.

Bet Twice, who could have joined Alydar, Alysheba's sire, as the only horses to finish second in all three Triple Crown races, completed the 1 1/2 miles in 2:28 1-5. He picked up the winner's share of $329,160 from a purse of $584,600, plus a $1 million bonus offered to the colt that could compile the most points in the three races.

On a point system of five for a win, three for second and one for third, Bet Twice ended up with 11 points, one more than Alysheba.

Bet Twice finished 14 lengths ahead of Cryptoclearance, who was a nose ahead of Gulch, who had won four previous starts at Belmont. Alysheba was another neck back.

Completing the order of finish were Shawklit Won, Gone West, Avee Copy, Manassa Jack and Leo Castelli. Conquistador, who would have run as an entry with the Hall of Fame trainer said.

For some reason, Alysheba did not resemble the colt who had stormed to victory in the Kentucky Derby and was so impressive in the Preakness.

McCarron said Alysheba collided with Gone West about 5-16ths of a mile from home. "It was probably my fault," McCarron said.

The jockey said there was no evidence that Alysheba bled. The colt had raced on Lasix in his four previous starts, three after he had undergone throat surgery March 24 to correct a breathing problem.

Alysheba was the first 3-year-old to bid for the Triple Crown since Pleasant Colony in 1981. Pleasant Colony finished third in the Belmont.

The winning jockey said, "If Alysheba was 100 percent, he might get him (Bet Twice). But he wasn't."

Despite woes, Celts hope for better showing

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—One of the Boston Celtics' big problems is that they are not the same team they were last year. Another is that the Los Angeles Lakers are not either.

The Lakers take a 2-0 lead, great confidence and exceptional skills into Sunday's third game of the NBA finals against the Celtics, last year's champions and this year's underdog.

"Last year was completely different," Boston forward Larry Bird said. "We were on a roll. Most of the games we lost were because we didn't execute or we got cocky."

Last year, the Celtics' 67-15 record was the NBA's best. They were healthy. This year, they were 59-23. Bill Walton and Scott Wedman were out for most of the season and Robert Parish and Kevin McHale have played in the playoffs with foot injuries that limit their effectiveness.

Last year, the Lakers were 62-20 and were beaten by Houston 4-1 in the Western Conference finals. This year, their 65-17 record was the NBA's best and they have lost just one of their 14 playoff games.

"Houston at that time was playing very well, better than we were," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said, adding that the loss played a big part in Los Angeles' success this year.

So did the addition of backup center Mychal Thompson, the emergence of second-year forward A.C. Green and the improved all-around games of Johnson, Michael Cooper and James Worthy.

In 1971-72, Laker Coach Pat Riley was a player on the Los Angeles championship team that set an NBA record with 33 straight victories.

"Teams like that, the more you win, the tougher you get," Riley said. "The Celtics had that last year. I think we've got it this year. I said to (assistant coach) Bill Bertka back in March, 'this is a special team.'"

That became clear to the Celtics last week when they were routed in Los Angeles 126-113 and 141-122 in the first two games of the best-of-seven series. The Lakers ran at will against the slower Celtics and shot brilliantly from outside.

"I just don't think Robert and Kevin are getting back quick enough (defensively) right now," Bird said of Parish and McHale. "It's not because they don't want to, it's because I don't think they can."

"There's not much we can do about it with two guys with broken feet. You can't call Oral Roberts up and have him come and heal us overnight."

Mavs' owner Carter: MacLeod will not be a ho-hum coach

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP)—New Dallas Mavericks head coach John MacLeod says he wants to field the kind of team that would peak when it got into the NBA playoffs.

"Everybody keeps asking me if I can win 55 games like this year's team did," said MacLeod, 49, who was hired Thursday night to replace Dick Motta. "If we win 50 games or 49 games, fine, but the most important thing is that we be ready to play in the playoffs."

Dallas was eliminated in the first round of the NBA playoffs this year by Seattle after winning the Midwest Division.

MacLeod came aboard as new coach Friday. He was hired in a handshake agreement with Mavericks owner Donald Carter, who flew to his home in Phoenix, Ariz., Thursday night.

MacLeod was fired in the middle of his 14th season with the Phoenix Suns. He is expected to make $300,000 per year on a contract that is renewed by mutual agreement each year.

"I asked him some real tough questions. In fact, I wasn't real nice in Phoenix," Carter said at the press conference welcoming MacLeod to Dallas. "I said some things in his house that might get you flattened. I got his dander up and if I hadn't of, I wouldn't have hired him."

"I challenged the heck out of him and I can tell everybody we won't have a ho-hum coach in John," Carter said.

MacLeod said that Carter had asked him "if I was tough enough. I told him flat out I was and I guarantee you I will respond to this challenge."

The toughest thing MacLeod has to do is improve the Mavs' mental concentration, he said.

"I want to build on the tradition here and this team looks like it could use a little more mental toughness," he said. "It's most important that we be ready to get to a higher level of the NBA playoffs. I want a team attitude where if you get knocked down, you bounce back up."

Motta resigned May 20 and has yet to give Carter a reason why. "I was in shock the day he resigned," Carter said. "This team will always have a part of Dick Motta in it. John just wants to build on it."

"There will be no ghost of Dick Motta that John has to be concerned about. I won't be looking over his shoulder."

Dallas moved toward the unemployed MacLeod after Don Nelson resigned as coach in Milwaukee and decided to join the front office of the Golden State Warriors.

MacLeod said he would keep Assistant Coach Richie Adubato.

"Richie did a great job with the defense this year and I feel fortunate and pleased to have him back," MacLeod said.

Behavior modification needed

In My Corner

By Jimmy Patterson

We have just crossed the half-way mark in the 1987 Pampa Optimist Baseball season. So far, the season has been marred by two things: weather and behavior. While the weather is not controllable, the behavior most certainly is. And, it is definitely time some attitudes about competition be corrected. On Wednesday, April 15, a Bambino coach told me the following: "Teamwork and sportsmanship are the lessons they'll hopefully learn from us. If we have a good influence on the kids, then we've done our job." That's what I was told. That's not what is happening. Ridiculous protests are being filed or threatened, sudden outbursts occur from time to time. I've actually heard parents curse umpires after what they thought was a lousy call. I'm not talking about the Babe Ruth games, whether in the 13-15 or 16-18 age bracket. I'm talking about the Bambino Leagues, where kids who play range in age from 10-12 years old. I have written several kind articles concerning the leagues and that great feeling you get out of the ballpark. I apparently have been glossing over the truth. The kids are the ones acting like adults. A handful of the adults, sad to say, are acting like kids.

And that is not the lesson the kids need to be taught. I want to stress that I am not talking about the majority of parents, but only a handful. In one game early in the year, an umpire made a controversial call at the plate. A parent in the stands challenged the umpire's decision. In making a huge mistake, the ump turned around and said to the dissatisfied parent, "If you think you can do a better job, then come down here and do it yourself." So, down traipsed the parent, ready to take the ump up on his challenge. It was not until the parent reached the gate to the field that his wife abruptly put him back in his place. A near confrontation. A distasteful incident. There have been others. One coach has been seen ignoring his players after they strike out. Most of these incidents happen in those ever so important "crucial" games. But, when a 10-year old strikes out, an incredible feeling of dejection must come over him. It is then when the kid needs the greatest amount of support. It is then that they are not getting it. Another incident occurred when a team was ahead by a healthy score, but suddenly their prize pitcher was knocked out by an injury. The coach was forced to use other players who had not had experience pitching. The team that had been winning proceeded to lose the game. A couple of the parents turned on their own team after it had lost. We have been told in the past, "It's not whether you win or lose, etc. etc." But, sportsmanship is not the lesson these impressionable youngsters are being taught. "Win at almost any cost and maybe we'll get 'em next time" is the lesson a lot are learning. But winning is not the most important priority.

Gooden's return helps Mets win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets were happy Dwight Gooden won and even more encouraged by the way he did it. Using a sharp-breaking curve to set up his fastball, Gooden won his first major-league start since cocaine rehabilitation by pitching four-hit ball for 6 2-3 innings Friday night in New York's 5-1 victory over Pittsburgh. "Last year, he was a one-pitch pitcher," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "Last year he was cutting too many fastballs and not throwing his curve." Gooden threw 121 pitches against the Pirates. He threw 91 fastballs, 28 curves and two changeups. He admitted he was tired when he left the game. "I figured hitters would be sitting on my fastball," Gooden said. "Early in the game, I started them off with a fastball and once I did that, I started them with a curve." The Mets say opposing batters can expect to see a more complete pitcher when Gooden takes the mound this season.

"He was throwing 3-2 curveballs. It's a great sign when he does that," Mets pitching coach Mel Stottlemyre said. "He has the confidence to do that. Last year, he never had the confidence to do that. And I was impressed with the life he had on his fast pitch." Not all of the Pirates were similarly dazzled. "I thought he threw a good game, but his ball is not overpowering," said Sid Bream, who hit a hard single, lined out to deep left-center and grounded out against Gooden. "His fastball was straight, and sooner or later the boys are going to start teeing off on it if he doesn't mix it up." Throughout Gooden's month-long preparation period in the minor leagues prior to rejoining the Mets, he worked on his curve. After having trouble controlling it in his first few outings, he began to throw it for strikes. "The key was keeping ahead of the hitters," Gooden said. "Overall, I felt I did a pretty good job." Said Johnson: "That was the best I've seen Doc throw in a year." Gooden began the game by throwing a rising fastball past Barry Bonds for strike three, triggering a thunderous ovation. Gooden wound up with five strikeouts and four walks, and the only hit he allowed through the first five innings was a pop-fly single by Andy Van Slyke in the third. No one had known exactly what to expect from Gooden in his 100th major-league start. He gave himself, the Mets and a loud sellout crowd of 51,402 everything it hoped to see. "It was only one game, but it was a big one," reliever Roger McDowell said in a jovial Mets clubhouse. "Even if he's so-so, he's going to be good." Gooden said Friday night's outing will give him something to build on. "The next one should be easier," he said. But, Gooden surely won't get the same rousing support when he pitches again Wednesday in Chicago versus the Cubs. The Bleacher Bums always give visiting players a rough ride at Wrigley Field, and Gooden probably won't be an exception.

Astros' Jackson a hit

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros rookie Chuck Jackson is learning to expect the unexpected in his brief major league career. Jackson started the season with the Astros' Class AAA Tucson Toros but got the word while sitting in an airport that he'd been elevated to the major league team. He quickly changed travel plans and joined the Astros on May 24. Five days later he got his first major league hit, a double, and Friday night he found himself suddenly in the starting lineup when first baseman Glenn Davis suffered from back spasms shortly before game time. Denny Walling moved from third base to first and Jackson became the starting third baseman. He may remain there for awhile. "He went up there playing aggressively tonight," Manager Hal Lanier said. "That's what you like to see in a young player." "Until Glenn gets back, you'll see the same lineup we had tonight." Jackson hit a single and drove in a run with a ground rule double in his first two at-bats, helping the Astros beat San Francisco 6-1. Jackson also completed an acrobatic play in the second inning, fielding a slow roller and throwing out pitcher Mike Krukow. Jackson hit .176 with the Astros during spring training and was sent back to Tucson with instructions to become more aggressive as a hitter. "I didn't realize that I could be this aggressive," Jackson said. "It's not supposed to be this easy." Jackson has five hits in his first 11 major league at bats and went into Saturday's game against the Giants batting .455. Minor league hitting instructor Gene Clines tutored Jackson first and Astros hitting coach Denis Menke has continued the project. "The pitchers don't know me right now so I'm getting ahead in the count," Jackson said. "For me, aggressiveness is pretty much everything. When I get behind, I don't do as well."

Seaver to join Mets once again

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver, a three-time Cy Young Award winner, answered the New York Mets' plea for help and rejoined his old team Saturday. "I hope in two weeks I can prove that I can pitch," said the 42-year-old right-hander who has 311 victories. "And if not, I'm going to retire." Seaver, a free agent who had not found a job, said he had been planning to announce his retirement when he was called by the Mets after they had lost three starting pitchers to injuries. "Fate played a big part in this and I'm glad to be back," said Seaver, who signed "a good-faith contract" for the remainder of the 1987 season. Mets General Manager Frank Cashen told a Shea Stadium news conference that a formal contract will be signed when Seaver is ready to play. Terms were not announced. Cashen also said if Seaver wanted he also could sign for the 1988 season. Seaver set June 20, when the Mets play at home against the Philadelphia Phillies, as the date for his first appearance. The Mets, defending World Series champions, have been crippled by a series of injuries to their pitchers, with Bob Ojeda and David Cone being lost for the year and Rick Aguilera sidelined for eight weeks. "I thought we had a good staff, but it has become decimated," Cashen said. The Mets started out with five starters: Dwight Gooden, Ron Darling, Sid Fernandez, Aguilera and Ojeda, then added Cone. Gooden, the mainstay of the staff, did not pitch until Friday night; he had undergone drug rehabilitation for a month. The Mets had a chance to sign Seaver in 1985, but Manager Davey Johnson said he vetoed the deal at that time.

Seaver

This time, Johnson welcomed back the veteran. "The decision came down to whether or not he was going to be better than (John) Mitchell or (Tom) Edens ... and would bringing him here set back Mitchell or Edens." Johnson said of the two young pitchers recently brought up from the minors. "I don't feel it will.

scrutiny. Canyon HS star catcher Trey Dewey, who graduated 12th in his class academically, has received an appointment to West Point, the third year in a row an Eagle athlete has been so honored. Dewey will play in the North-South All-Star Baseball Game at the Astrodome June 21. Not surprisingly, Jimmie Clark, who won the Chamber of Commerce trip to San Diego for his efforts in the new member drive, is scheduling the trip around the Chicago Cubs next visit to that California city. Relative Ryne Sandberg is a pretty fair country ballplayer for the Cubs. All four finalists for the position of executive director of the NCAA hold degrees from Big Ten schools, none from the SWC, where they could truly have gotten on-the-job training. Expect John R. Davis, presently associate athletic director at Oregon State, to get the job. Thirteen of the nation's top 20 graduating high school seniors (10 girls, 10 boys selected by a panel of educators for USA Today) participate in some form of high school athletics, some in more than one sport, and several in extra-curricular activities. Baseball is still strong at that beautiful little Elk City, Okla. park where the Oilers once played a series with Abilene when consideration was given to moving the team to another city. Well-lit, it marks quite a contrast to the defunct stadium in Amarillo. The reason you don't see any green cars in the Indy 500 is because drivers think green is unlucky. Which reminds me of the story concerning Danny Ongais, who seems to crash his car annually at the 2 1/2-mile oval. Pit row racers say that D.O.A. has taken on a new meaning at nearby Methodist Hospital where wreck victims are taken. They say it means "Danny Ongais Again." Does anyone ever really buy any of the 'art' paintings for sale on truck stop and other highway eatery walls? Those fish ties former Milwaukee Bucks coach Don Nelson wears are priced from $16 to $24 bucks in the city's stores. After buying one, a fan reports, "I put it on one day and now I can't get rid of the terrible craving for worms." Former Amarillo sportscaster John Fedko was in a meeting, so, asked if I'd like to leave a mes-

The hard life of being "Mrs. Coach"

By MIKE TOWLE
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — If Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine needs an extra baseball brain to pinch hit, he knows where to look.

Behind the screen in back of home plate at Arlington Stadium is a box seat usually occupied by baseball superfan Mary Valentine, wife of the manager. Mary has a panoramic view from which to anticipate her husband's managerial moves and contemplate solutions to the knotty problems of baseball.

Is it time to change pitchers? Will a squeeze bunt work here? Can a hit-and-run work in this situation? Is there a God?

"I'm more right than wrong when I think of what he's going to do," Mary Valentine said. "I really understand the game and like it a lot. It never gets old and every game is different."

Few managers' or coaches' wives carry the professional clout of a Nancy Reagan. They don't have final say in the hiring and firing of coaching staffs nor do they write out starting lineups.

In most cases, a coach's wife has her hands full helping to raise a family, smiling through the loneliness of her husband's frequent absences, providing an understanding ear and a shoulder to lean on.

Some wives, however, have a strong influence on decisions ultimately made in the dugout, on the bench, or along the sidelines.

When Texas Christian football coach Jim Wacker was head coach at Texas Lutheran College, he once faced a dilemma that needed domestic assistance. A rash of injuries had sidelined all of the team's running backs.

Wacker was stymied. He finally told his wife, Lil, about the problem.

Lil Wacker reminded her husband that tight end Steve Bohnert had been a running back in high school. The next day, Wacker huddled with his assistant coaches and moved Bohnert to running back.

"He rushed for over 100 yards in each of our next two games," Wacker said. "This is a people business, and it's nice to be able to go home and have a sounding board. It varies from coach to coach and wife to wife. I know I've gotten a lot of valuable insight."

One of Valentine's hardest decisions last year was releasing veteran pitcher Burt Hooton. Valentine and Hooton are longtime friends and former teammates. Although Hooton's release seemed inevitable as part of Valentine's youth movement, it was painful. That's where Mary helped out.

"Bobby hashed that over with me for a week or two and didn't feel good about doing it," Mary said. "He brings a lot home with him. Each game, he really discusses it with me to air it out."

"When he has to cut young players, he sometimes asks me, 'Would you like to do my job today while I take care of little Bobby and ride the horses?'"

Mary Valentine has been along for the ride long enough to know that her box seat is the next best thing to being there.

"She understands the strategy of the game — the hit-and-run, the bunt, the missed-tag play, the appeal play," Valentine said. "This is no foreign language to her. We can use part of our social life to talk baseball, and it always is a good conversation."

"She could probably do everything that had to be done (to manage the team), except some of the teaching aspects," he said.

"I'll leave the managing in the dugout to my husband," she said. "I would get too nervous because there's high pressure in that dugout to make the right moves. But I guess I could do the easy games, like when we get staked to a nine-run lead."

Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry says of his wife, Alicia, "We discuss things I wouldn't discuss with anyone else... personal things. It's not something you go out of your way to seek, but it does come up a lot in conversation."

Alicia said she is content being a football fan.

"What he (Landry) knows about football is so much greater than what I know. I don't give any tips," she said. "I don't know most of the positions players play and don't want to know who's competing against who for a position."

"I do know that the officials are sometimes wrong. I wouldn't say I'm a strategist, but sometimes at games I hear comments I know are utterly ridiculous."

Wacker said he talks frequently with his wife about football.

"I don't ever ask her if we should run or pass on third-and-short, but yeah, we do a lot of sharing on the human aspect of the game. She's my No. 1 confidante in this respect."

After having been married to a football coach for 25 years, Lil Wacker said, "People tease me about being an assistant coach, but I'm not. I was a little bit when we started out, as Jim did a lot of his thinking through me. If I have a suggestion now, it's just a reminder of what he has done before."

Joltin' Joe says today's baseballs might be souped-up

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe DiMaggio thinks bouncy baseballs, not bigger biceps, are the main reason home runs are being hit at a record pace in the major leagues this season.

"No one can tell me the ball isn't livelier," said DiMaggio, who hit 361 home runs in his 13-year career with the New York Yankees.

"I know the players are stronger today, but that can't be the whole reason."

Why is it happening so suddenly? Did they all get stronger over the winter? Maybe some of the players did.

The Baltimore Orioles set a major-league record by hitting 58 home runs in May, one less than St. Louis hit as a team in all of 1986. Eric Davis, Andre Dawson and rookie Mark McGwire each have 19 homers and are ahead on Roger Maris' pace when he set a major-league record with 61 homers in 1961.

DiMaggio, whose 56-game hitting streak in 1941 is still a major-league record, said he was impressed by Robin Ventura's 58-game streak in college baseball this season.

"I don't care what league you're in, it's not easy hitting in 58 games in a row," he said Wednesday during a promotional appearance for the Franciscan Sisters of the Poor Foundation.

DiMaggio hit in 61 straight games as a minor leaguer, but he knows his major-league mark is the one people remember.

"The major leagues is the pinnacle, the tops," he said. "No one remembers what you did in the minors."

DiMaggio's record is one of the best-known in sports, but even he has a hard time explaining its mystique.

"I know people still talk about it, but I'm not sure why," he said. "There are other records that have lasted as long, like Lou Gehrig's (2,130 consecutive games played) and Johnny Vander Meer's (two straight no-hitters). But they don't seem to get the same attention."

Cincinnati's Pete Rose challenged the record in 1978, but his streak was stopped at 44.

"The way he was going, I thought he would do it," DiMaggio said. "No record is going to stand forever, and that includes mine."

DiMaggio, who remains an avid baseball fan, is pleased to see the Yankees atop the American League East.

"I think they can win the pennant," he said. "They've got an excellent offense and a pretty good defense. Their pitching may not be the best, but how many teams in the league have great pitching staffs?"

A grand night for O'Brien

Texas Rangers Pete O'Brien, right, has plenty of hands waiting to congratulate him after his sixth inning grand slam in Friday night action against the Minnesota Twins. O'Brien, who also had a two-run homer in the first, helped lead the Rangers to walloping 15-8 win.

Warner-Horton runs record to 5-0

Warner-Horton added two more wins to improve its season record to 5-0 while Malcolm-Hinkle dropped a pair in in Pampa Junior League girls' softball.

Warner-Horton polished its game against First Landmark Realty, winning 31-2.

Melanie Lee picked up the win for WH, striking out 8 and yielding only 3 hits.

Kristin Becker led all hitters with a homer, double and single for WH; Meredith Horton picked up a double and single and Melanie Lee chipped in with 3 singles.

With the loss, First Landmark falls to 1-3.

In their second game, WH defeated Moose Lodge 13-1.

Kristin Becker struck out 17 and allowed only 1 hit for WH.

Rhonda Been had a double and single for WH; Andree Lowrie and Lori Crawford each had two singles.

Moose's record is now at 1-2.

Western Sizzlin defeated Malcolm-Hinkle 30-11. Kelly Haines picked up the win for Sizzlin. She allowed only 2 hits, but walked 15.

Tabitha King had a home run, double and single for Sizzlin. Angela Heiskell picked up 2 doubles and a single; Carmen Nowka had two singles.

For Hinkle, Casey Bowers had a double and Jennifer Kidd looped a single.

Sizzlin ran record to 4-1.

Hinkle got a bit closer in the second game, losing to The Tradin' Okie 17-12.

Katie Hamilton won for Okie, while Tausha Summers pitched 3 innings for the save.

For Hinkle, Casey Bowers was tagged with the loss, although she struck out 8.

For Okie, Sherrie Uzman had a triple and Toni Martin and Tausha Summers each had a pair of singles.

At the plate for Hinkle, Alissha Earl and Bowers both had two singles while Jennifer Kidd added another single.

Okie is now 3-2; the loss dropped Hinkle's record to 2-3.

In girls' Senior League softball, Randy's Foods outlasted McCarty Hull 11-5.

Tara Hamby struck out 10 and pitched a no-hitter through 4 1-3 innings. Gia Nix picked up the save, allowing the only hit of the game for McCarty-Hull.

Rocky Strplin, Nix and Hamby

each picked up a single for Randy's.

Randy's is now 4-0 on the year; McCarty-Hull falls to 2-1.

In Bambino League action, Dyers defeated Deans 4-3.

Clarence Reed picked up the win with John Donnelly suffering the loss.

Reed gave up 5 hits, including a home run to Donnelly, who also knocked in 2 runs. Donnelly also had a double and single.

Jason Downs added a double and Jeremy Morris a single for Deans.

Dyers had 11 hits. Lamont Nickleberry led Dyers hitters with 2 doubles and a single. Ross Johnson and Duane Nickleberry each had a double and a single. Clarence Reed and Jason Stillwell both had singles.

In the bottom of the sixth, Scott Johnson picked up the game winning RBI when he singled to right allowing Duane Nickleberry to score.

A case for Gustafson

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

There's Tom Landry, Darrell Royal, Jody Conradt, Jim Kilginsworth, Gerald Myers, Grant Teaff and Shelby Metcalf.

But the best coach or manager may be that bantam-sized battler down in Austin — Cliff Gustafson.

How does an 83 percent winning record over the last 20 years sound?

His Texas Longhorn baseball teams have not only won nine straight Southwest Conference titles but have appeared in the NCAA playoffs 18 times. On 14 occasions, Gustafson's clubs have advanced to the College World Series in Omaha.

Before Texas' most recent visit to Nebraska this week, the Longhorns had won two national titles, finished second twice, third on five occasions and fourth three times.

He has coached 25 first-team All-Americans and almost 100 of his players have gone into professional baseball. He's also turned out doctors, lawyers and business executives.

Roger Clemens, the 1986 American League Cy Young award winner, was in a club that included former teammates Calvin Schiraldi and Spike Owen.

Gustafson might never have had a chance for success if Darrell Royal, Texas athletic director at the time, hadn't taken a chance and hired Gustafson away from his South San Antonio High School job.

"I had a lot of names for the job but I kept hearing about Gustafson," Royal said. "It was an easy decision." Gustafson said he had never "daydreamed" that he would coach at Texas.

"I was not presumptuous enough to believe they would offer a job to a high school coach," he said.

His success formula is simple. Fundamentals, fundamentals, and more fundamentals. He keeps statistics on every player at every practice to make sure their intensity level is high.

Infielders take a minimum of 100 ground balls at every practice. Video tapes are used for hitters and pitchers.

Did you know there was once a man who led the major leagues in home runs one season—yet never hit one ball out of the park or over the fence all year... His name was Tommy Leach and he played for the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1902... He led the National League in homers that year—but every one of his home runs was an inside-the-park homer... He never hit one over the fence—yet he wound up being the home run champion.

Ever wonder how far a golfer walks when he plays 18 holes? ... Someone has figured out that the average golfer walks between 5 and 6 miles during an 18-hole round.

Cy Young won more games than any other pitcher in big league baseball history - 511 - but who holds the record for losing the most games of all-time in the majors?... Answer is that same Cy Young... He lost 215 games, and no one else is close to that record.

Texas signs bridge pact with Okies

DENISON (AP)—The Republican governors of Texas and Oklahoma signed agreements at the Denison Dam site where a $7 million bridge will be built in a gesture of bi-state cooperation.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements and Oklahoma Gov. Henry Bellmon were made honorary citizens of Denison and Durant, Okla. They smoked a peace pipe with the Chief of the Choctaw Nations, Hollis Roberts.

The governors also donned 6-foot Indian headdresses and signed an agreement on the two states' use of water from Lake Texoma. They ended the hour-long session by making a wager on the Texas-Oklahoma football game in the Cotton Bowl next October.

Clements called the signing of the bridge contract "a historic first for (me). I have never before signed anything without reading it, but if Henry says it is all right, then I'll sign it."

"It should be OK because a University of Texas lawyer drew it up," retorted Bellmon.

Both governors lauded the spirit of cooperation between the two states, saying it should be the first of many more such events.

The governors signed two pacts, one on the bridge that will span the Red River between Denison and Durant. It will take at least 15 months before construction actually begins.

The signing of the water pact acknowledges the right of Oklahoma and Texas to divert or im-

Lewis to lay out 'agreed-to' budget

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — House Speaker Gib Lewis wants to have a spending and tax plan ready when legislators return to work June 22 to break the deadlock that saw the regular session end without a budget for the first time since 1961.

"We're hoping we're going to have a proposal to lay out on the 22nd that, hopefully, is going to be an agreed-to proposal," Lewis said. "I know I'll have one that, whether it's agreed on or not, I feel very confident in. Hopefully, it will be acceptable to all parties concerned."

Following a two-day special session to pass several civil justice reform bills, lawmakers finally left Austin Wednesday for a 19-day break instead of the prescribed 19 months between regular sessions.

But Lewis says budget work will continue in the interim. That will include meetings with Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, even though those two weren't getting along that well when the regular session ended.

"It might be surprising to many people, but I've been visiting with the governor, the lieutenant governor. We're starting to find some middle ground on these things," Lewis said.

Clements has insisted he will veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion, although the House and Senate approved considerably larger budgets for 1988-89.

During interviews last week, Clements said he stands ready to make another no-new-taxes tour of the state to rally public support if needed to hold the line on taxes. He visited 17 cities during a three-week period in April and May.

Meetings involving the governor's aides, the staffs of legislative leaders and other officials are aimed at finding a set of budget numbers all will agree to work from.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, said the governor is willing to go to $27 billion on major funds, up about $1.1 billion from his February proposal.

Commander urges caution during summer motoring

Motorists should prepare themselves for summer driving, according to Major V.J. Cawthon, regional commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

With summer approaching, many people are preparing for their vacation, and Cawthon warned drivers that accidents can and do spoil vacations.

"Texans and tourists from all over the world will be traveling throughout Texas to enjoy our parks, lakes, scenery and the wonderful hospitality that Texas has to offer," he said.

For the urban driver the expressway can become a bore, luring the weary into a false sense of security, he said.

"Drivers who normally drive on quiet country roads can panic in the confusion of the multi-lane mix of car and pedestrian city traffic," Cawthon cautioned.

He suggested that everyone inspect his vehicle prior to leaving on a trip in order to eliminate the possibility of a minor breakdown miles from nowhere. Check out the tires, fan belts, hoses and cooling system, air conditioning and electrical system, he advised.

"Just one small accident can ruin a vacation for everyone," Cawthon said.

"Make this summer and your vacation a pleasant experience to remember, not a bad one. To help insure this, wear your safety belt, obey existing laws, and don't drink and drive," he advised.

Stradivarius copy stolen in Odessa

ODESSA (AP)—A woman who kept a 200-year-old violin in a battered black case so no one would detect it was valuable said she has an idea who took it from her home, but added the thief may not know the instrument's worth.

Frances Bender said Friday the family heirloom is valued at between $35,000 and $40,000. It was taken from her late Thursday.

"It's just heartbreaking," said Bender, 44. "It's a very good copy of a Stradivarius... that was passed down to my Mom and down to me."

GOD'S OWN POSSESSION

"For the grace of God hath appeared, bringing salvation to all men, instructing us, to the intent that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world; looking for the blessed hope and appearing of the glory of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a people for his own possession, zealous of good works" (Titus 2:11-14.) One of the plainest teachings of the New Testament is the distinction made between the followers of Christ and the rest of mankind. Members of the Lord's Church are not different just for the sake of being different, but of necessity they are different because they belong to Christ (I Corinthians 6:15-20.) God's ways and thoughts are not the ways and thoughts of man (Isaiah 55:8-9.) Therefore, the people of God are not as the rest of men.

Jesus taught His disciples that they must be willing to leave all in order to be His disciples (Luke 14:25-33.) He did not teach this in order to insist upon difference, but in order to impress upon them that the world and the ways of the world would pass away. Therefore those who were influenced to be worldly would perish but those who do His will would endure forever (Matthew 7:24-27; I John 2:15-17.) This would have to be one of the most difficult of all Jesus' teaching for man to accept. Man is so unwilling, many times, to give up the things of the world in order to realize eternal salvation.

The apostle Paul told the Roman brethren to change their minds and lives in order to please God (Romans 12:1-2.) He told the Colossians to center their attention upon things eternal and not upon the things of this world (Colossians 3:1-11.) He told the Corinthians that the things temporal were of little consequence as compared to the reward for faithful service to God (2 Corinthians 4:16-18; 5:1-10.) When one purifies his soul in obedience to the truth (I Peter 1:22), he then is set apart for the service of God.

Act I presents —

It's "Carnival" time for Pampa's Area Community Theatre Inc., known to theatergoers as ACT I.

Pampa's community theater closes its fourth season Friday and Saturday with a dinner theater production of A Thurber Carnival, a collection of the works of mid-20th century humorist and cartoonist James Thurber.

The play will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the M.K. Brown Heritage Room with the homemade Italian spaghetti dinner served at 7 p.m. Tea and coffee will be served, but theatergoers are welcome to bring a favorite wine or beverage.

Reservations may be made by calling 665-7212.

Director Kayla Pursley has assembled one of ACT I's wildest casts yet in this romp through the wit of James Thurber. The cast features both familiar and fresh ACT I faces, with each player doing a variety of roles.

The play opens with Kelly Beesley, last seen as half of last year's Same Time, Next Year cast, remembering a humorous moment in "The Night the Bed Fell."

Then, diners will be treated to morality in "Fables for Our Time," narrated by ACT I's resident "psychic" (in Blythe Spirit and Deathtrap) and Pampa News staff writer Cathy Spaulding. Miami native Christie Searl, Pampa News sportswriter Jimmy Patterson, Bud Behannon, advertising representative John McKeon and ACT I newcomers Jean Deitrich and Loyd Mays will be acting out the tales. McKeon, a man who sees a unicorn in his garden, has been active backstage.

In "If Grant had Been Drinking at Appomattox," Thurber explores how history could have changed if U.S. Grant (newcomer and mail carrier Curtis Haynes) had tipped one too many bottles during the Civil War. Also appearing are Patterson, backstage worker John Wright, Windo-coat owner and crew member John Potts and Cabot employee Calvin Lacy, all new to the ACT I stage.

Then, Patterson and Behannon go shopping in "Gentleman Shoppers." Karen Patterson, Jimmy's wife, makes her debut as a bar girl, and Beesley and McKeon play store employees.

Beesley and Pampa News ad representative Danny Cowan discuss the merits of Macbeth in another scene. Cowan was last seen in Appointment with Death and is popular with character roles.

Behannon offers advice to pet owners in "The Pet Department." He will be assisted by Mrs. Patterson and ACT I's Chataqua dance hall girl Bettany Cisneros.

City of Pampa parks department supervisor Bill Hildenbrandt introduces diners to James Thurber in "File and Forget." Here, Thurber is not too happy with his treatment of book orders.

Then Mr. Preble, played by ACT I's Next man and Pampa Post Office worker Skip Summers, "Gets Rid of his Wife," Dietrich, to run off with his secretary, Cisneros.

McKeon and crew worker Sharon Brock teach a touching lesson in warfare in "The Last Flower." Patterson, Cowan, Searl and Spaulding update literary classics in "Take Her Up Tenderly."

The play closes with Thurber's most famous character, Walter Mitty, (Cowan) who ventures into a variety of fantasies to escape the nagging of his wife (Cisneros).

'A Thurber Carnival'
Dinner: 7 p.m.
Show: 8 p.m.
Friday, Saturday

M.K. Brown
Heritage Room
Reservations:
665-7212

Evil Executioner

Behannon, a familiar face on the ACT I stage, plays a variety of roles, including this evil Nazi executioner, who tries to put hero Walter Mitty to death.

The executioner is one of the roles Behannon has in A Thurber Carnival.

Other roles include a drunken Christmas shopper in "Gentleman Shoppers," a worried airplane pilot in "Walter Mitty," a television veterinarian in "The Pet Department" and a psychiatrist in "The Unicorn in the Garden."

Behannon comes to A Thurber Carnival fresh from a lead role in ACT I's Valentine production of Romantic Comedy. He has also appeared such Pampa productions as Mary, Mary, Wait Until Dark and the Agatha Christie mystery, Appointment with Death.

A chemist with the Pampa Texaco plant, Behannon has also been busy backstage.

Carnival cutups

A play like A Thurber Carnival invites all sorts of silliness with the cast and the crew. They can't even take a group shot seriously.

Henpecked husband

Poor Walter Mitty! Day in, day out with a henpecking wife. No rest from reality. Small wonder he occasionally ventures off into a different world.

In A Thurber Carnival, we follow Mitty (Cowan in picture, Cowan in play) as he takes his wife (Cisneros) to a needed trip to the hair dresser. The hag even has the nerve to ask our hero to do her shopping for her.

But Mitty takes trips on his own, too.

At one moment, he's the brave fighter pilot, heroically guiding his plane crew through a turbulent storm.

Later, Mitty is the calm, ingenious doctor, relaxed as he and his international team of specialists operate on a dying man.

Finally, he's the courageous commander, facing sure death at the gunpoint of a firing squad. How does he get out of this one?

Only his imagination knows for sure.

Food for Grandma

Little Red Riding Hood (Searl), makes her way through a dark forest on her way to her grandmother's house. Ultimately, she runs into a big bad wolf (Patterson) who has other ideas.

Searl has another encounter with Patterson the wolf in "The Wolf at the Door."

Searl and Patterson — both ACT I newcomers — have their work cut out for them in A Thurber Carnival.

Searl, 15, gets the little girl roles. But she also manages a winsome secretary in "File and Forget" and a revisionist poet in "Take Her Up Tenderly." As a Miami High School drama student, she earned numerous acting awards. She will be a junior at Pampa High School.

Patterson plays a corporal in "If Grant Had Been Drinking at Appomattox," a pilot in "Walter Mitty," a drunken shopper in "Gentleman Shoppers" and a revisionist poet.

HOT WEATHER HINTS
Warm-weather brides have special considerations. Planning ahead for the weather can help you keep your cool on your special day. Here are some tips:

- Many people's feet tend to swell in hot weather, or when they spend a lot of time standing. To help keep you from feeling footsore, buy your wedding shoes a half-size to large, and insert a good pair of foam insoles. The insoles will help keep your feet dry and comfortable, and if your feet do swell, they can be discreetly removed to give more room.
- Hands can swell too. Tell your bridegroom not to force the wedding rings past your knuckle; you'll be able to work it down yourself more easily. A little bit of hand lotion will also help lubricate the ring finger so that your ring will slide on more easily.
- Invest in a good anti-perspirant, and see if your bridal shop advises underarm shields (they can sew them in place for you). Sprinkle a little talc on your body before dressing, to absorb perspiration and keep your dress feeling fresher.

WTSU to host New Student Registrations

CANYON — West Texas State University will host five one-day New Student Registration sessions for new students and parents in June and July.

New Student Registration is an early registration program for beginning freshmen and transfer students who plan to enroll in WTSU. Each session lasts from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Session I for freshmen will be held Friday, June 12.

Session II for freshmen will be held Saturday, June 20.

Session III for freshmen and transfer students will be held Monday, July 6.

Session IV for freshmen will be held Saturday, July 25.

Session V for freshmen will be held Friday, July 31.

The days are divided into three parts, said Bob Graves, assistant director of admissions. In the morning, students will attend informative workshops and learn about organizations and activities, financial aid and scholarships, counseling, testing and careers.

After lunch, students will meet with faculty advisors, work out their schedules and register for their fall courses, Graves said. The days conclude with tours of the campus and residence halls.

Students wishing to take College Level Examination Program (CLEP) tests can take them on June 19 or July 24. Scoring will be done in time for students to schedule classes during the New Student Registration session the next day.

Admissions Office director Lila Vars said New Student Registration gives students "a head start; not only because they reserve their classes early, but because they meet other students."

While students prepare to register, parents attend their own orientation. They receive suggestions on how to parent a college freshman, like "Write, even if they don't write back." During "Parent Adjustment Hour," a student panel will talk about university experiences.

Also as part of their orientation, parents will eat lunch with deans and administrators.

Cost for New Student Registration is $10 for students and $7 for each parent. On-campus housing will be available at $9.50 per person.

More than 700 students attended New Student Registration in 1986, Graves said.

Students who attend the registration will find their books pre-packaged when they arrive in the fall. Students who do not attend will register Aug. 25 at a registration for new students and transfer students, or on Aug. 26.

For more information, contact the Admissions Office at 656-2541.

Pampans celebrate a bushel of birthdays in May

June! The wonderful month in which the sore backs and aching muscles of May are forgotten! Green grass and beautiful blossoms emerge to allow us a few minutes to relax and catch up on the bright moments about town.

Several members of the Palo Duro Sams Motor Home Club closed the gap between the bad weather and school-is-out travel with an early May trip to Arkansas. Motor home travelers were Wenona and James Goodwin, Pauline and Frank Totty, Ann and Red Weatherly, Betty and Bryan Buck, Ann, Red, Betty and Bryan added an extra lap to Alexandria, La.

Faye Watson was one of three sisters-in-law who went island-hopping on a Hawaiian tour. The most exciting part of the trip for Faye was a helicopter ride.

Belated 85th birthday wishes to Margaret Nichols! Her daughter Joyce Roberts and her son Jim Taylor and his wife Blackie hosted a come-and-visit birthday party, attended by oodles of friends. Margaret, a bright-eyed, warm, caring, up-to-the minute lady, could easily pass for a much younger person.

There was a birthday party for Shirley Stafford at the Pampa Club with brightly colored balloons, streamers, cakes, dancing and dining. Celebrants were Shirley and Don, Koelle and Rex McKay, Charlene and Roy Morris, Donna and Dean Burger.

Another birthday party at the Pampa Club honored Mike Keagy on "A" birthday. Black arm bands worn by the guys added a somber note to the past 50, over-the-hill party featuring black balloons. Attending were Virginia and Jimmy Wilkerson, Margaret and Ed Sweet, Leona and D.L. Hale, Mike and Bob. Not to be outdone, Mike "displayed" a black garter. Cheer up, Mike!

Frank Hogsett celebrated his 89th birthday with a party at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, Derrel and Jean Hogsett. Ice cream and cake were served to his daughter and son-in-law, Joan and Jess Graham; granddaughter and children, Cynthia Price and Christy, Kathy and Steven II; niece and family, Vickie and Dick Taylor and Megan. Frank's birthday was May 31. He was born in Beaver County, Okla.

Speaking of Derrel and Jean, they have been to Fort Worth, where they visited their son and family, Donald and Jeanne Elmore and Gary in their new home. They visited in Arlington with their son and family, Danny and Nancy Hogsett and Wally and Will and 2-month-old Hal. Little Hal is a very cheerful baby who smiles and talks to everyone!

An all-important first birthday party was held recently for little Michael Martinez, son of proud Charlene and Joe Martinez and little brother of 2½-year-old Danielle. A carnival theme for the party included booths where partygoers could buy things. Lovett Library helped make the event a success with music taped from their collection. The library had also provided luau music for a Hawaiian-theme party for little Danielle at a previous birthday party for her. Lovett Library has much to offer!

Pampa's population remained constant with incoming and outgoing travelers balancing it all. Vicky Caldwell attended a family wedding in Brownwood. Donna and Dean Burger went to San Francisco for a family celebration. Vera and Herman Whatley returned a few days ago from a European tour.

Visitors in the Wenda and Roy Eckerdt home were their daughter and family, Connie and Ed Johnson, Michael, Krista and Bret of Vernal, Utah, and another daughter, Kathy Trout of Dinosauro, Colo. They were here to see young Roy graduate from Pampa High School and to receive his Eagle Scout award.

Visiting in the home of Norma and Frank Slagle were their son and wife, Roger and Robin Baggerman of Lubbock, and Norma's sister and family, Lavada and Tom Finney of Littleton, Colo., and of course, Diann and Earnest Baggerman.

Cecelia, David and Tracy Campbell of Ardmore visited Cecelia's parents, Ywachetta and Bill McDonald.

Jo Potter, former Pampian, came from Las Cruces to attend the graduation of her daughter Pally.

Visitors in the Sylvia and Sam Porter home were Sam's parents, Lois and Sam of Dighton, Kan., and Sylvia's sister and niece, Jeannette Thae and Sheila Coil, both of Ochelata, Okla., all who attended the graduation of Sylvia and Sam's daughter, Deanna Mogus.

Susie and Dean Spoonemore visited their son, Dr. Randall Spoonemore, in Wylie, Texas. Carolyn Hall and Wanda Watson attended the graduation of their nephew, Mark Lam, at A&M in College Station.

Vela Mae Jones, with daughter Christy Drake, granddaughters Tricia and Courtney, have enjoyed the fun and sun of Florida. Jan Colby and Brittin East of Yukon, Okla., visited with their great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Noel Louthern. Mom Sabrina enjoyed sharing their busy activities!

Need a bright spot in your day? Goby the lovely ladies' wear shop in the Mall—Wanda Talley is one neat lady!

The Golden Kiwanis have donated a big, shiny popcorn machine to Coronado Nursing Center. Ned Pryor and Carl Lawrence did the presenting to the center. Coyle Ford and Joe Autry frequently come by to make sure there is plenty of corn to pop and colorful bags to put it in. "Humpty" Matheny enjoys it all, and comes once a week to play the piano. What a spiffy dresser he is!

One of the busiest groups about town is the Pampa Singles Organization. First there was a hamburger cookout at the home of Ruth Busse, vice president. Tuesday evening, Jean Hopson hosted the monthly birthday and game night. Later Joyce Roberts hosted a potluck supper.

"Best wishes!" "Good luck!" "We'll miss you!" to the Bernie Fritz family as they move TOMORROW to the Bishop Plant of Hoechst-Celanese Plant at Corpus Christi, where Bernie will serve as a process engineering superintendent. Bernie, Tricia, Chris, Lauren and Katie will be greatly missed by friends, neighbors, fellow churchmen at St. Vincent's Catholic Church and fellow employees at the Pampa plant.

Virginia and Fred Brooks attended a Cabot Company picnic at St. Louis where they lived for several years before returning to Pampa.

A report on Peggy and Don Loshier, former Pampans now living in St. Louis: Their son, Jay Loshier, and wife are serving as missionaries in Indonesia, where their baby was born. Another son, Lee Loshier, and his wife live at Yellowstone in a house high in the mountains.

Pat and Bob Johnson spent last weekend in Hobbs, N.M., where they visited their son and family, Larry, Tracy and little Jennifer. Jennifer returned to Pampa with them for a week of grandparent fun.

More proud Pampa grandparents are Ora Lee and Preston Cox, whose granddaughter, Kasi Kubiak of Houston, won out over 200 other entrants in a contest for the telephone company's 911 system logo. Kasi, 13, is the daughter of Lawrence and Linda Kubiak, with Linda being Ora Lee and Preston's daughter. Congratulations, Kasi!

See you next week, Katie.

Make jams and jellies with no added sugar

By ELISA MALONE
County Extension Office
Summer Intern

Serve tasty, tantalizing jams and jellies made without sugar. Preserve fruit from your own backyard or unsweetened frozen fruit to bring fresh flavor and color to your low-calorie menus for many months.

Both fruit and juice should be canned or frozen unsweetened. Fruit should be canned in its own juice or with only a small amount of water.

Sugarless jams and jellies must be refrigerated or frozen unless they are made by the long-boil method of preparation. They are well worth the use of your freezer storage space because these items found in the dietetic section of the grocery store are very expensive.

Jams and jellies made without sugar are more like a gelatin product than true jams or jellies. But they can have an acceptable taste and help cut down on your sugar intake.

Gelling products now on the market contain a low methoxyl fruit pectin which doesn't require sugar to gel. However, the sugarless jam or jelly made this way will be somewhat cloudy, may weep after opening and during refrigeration and may become firmer and less spreadable after refrigeration. The "mouth feel" of the sugarless product will be different and the flavor more tart.

Some brands of low methoxyl pectins give instructions for making jams and jellies without any additional sugar. With this method, use very ripe fruit which has a high concentration of natural sugars.

If the recipe calls for artificial sweeteners, use them under the direction of a physician. Carefully read the nutrition information on labels of the products you purchase.

Homemakers' News

Elisa Malone

If you plan to substitute liquid sweetener for sugar in a recipe, ¼ teaspoon of liquid sweetener equals the sweetening power of one teaspoon of sugar. If other forms of sweeteners are substituted, read the label to determine calorie content.

Jelly is better when prepared in small quantities. The amount of fruit needed to yield the amount of juice called for in the recipe will vary with juiciness of the particular fruit used.

The method of juice extraction will differ with different kinds of fruit. Juicy berries may be crushed and the juice pressed out.

Heating is needed for firmer fruits to start the flow of juice. Usually some water is added when the fruit is heated.

Put the prepared fruit in a damp jelly bag or fruit press to extract juice. Pressed juice should be restrained through a double thickness of damp cheesecloth or a damp jelly bag.

Prepare fruit for jam by sorting and washing fully ripe fruit. Remove any stems, caps or pits. Peel fruits such as peaches and apricots. Crush the fruit.

The method of combining ingredients for jams or jellies varies with the form of pectin used. Powdered pectin is mixed with the unheated crushed fruit; liquid pectin is added to the cooked fruit and sweetener mixture immediately after it is removed from heat.

Cooking time is the same for all products — one minute at a full boil. The full-boil stage is reached when bubbles form over the entire surface of the mixture.

Jams made without added pectin or gelatin require longer cooking than those with added pectin. Cook the mixture to a temperature of 221° F.

If you do not have a thermometer, cook products without pectin or gelatin until they have thickened slightly. Remember to allow for the additional thickening as the product cools.

Jams made without sugar are thinner than jams made with sugar. Jams contain fruit pulp or pieces which tend to stick to the kettle during cooking. Constant stirring to prevent scorching will be necessary.

The natural color and flavor of sugarless jellies or jams are best maintained if they are stored in the freezer. Leave at least ½-inch head space in containers before freezing for expansion.

For additional information on sugarless jams and jellies, contact the Gray County Extension office at 669-7429.

Wronged wife happy with arrangement

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 26 years has had the same mistress for eight years, and I'm all for it. Here are my reasons: I am able to spend a lot of time alone (which I prefer), and anything I do is fine with him, because he's able to spend more time with her. He is not aware that I know what's going on and he treats me like a queen because he has such a guilty conscience he feels compelled to make it up to me.

He's an excellent provider, and I have total freedom. I figure he will die at a much earlier age due to the constant stress he is under trying to hide his affair from me. Also, he doesn't take care of his health. (He averages about three hours sleep a night.) When he finally drops dead, I stand to collect several hundred thousand dollars in insurance money, and all of our assets will be 100 percent mine.

The other woman is doing me a great favor.

LOVE BEING CHEATED ON
DEAR L.B.C.O: The lovely scenario you have written in

Dear Abby

your head may, in reality, have a surprise ending. For example: He could lose his money. Or, instead of dropping dead, he could have a stroke or heart attack, leaving him incapacitated for many years. Or, you could drop dead or become incapacitated.

Last time cannot be replaced, so why not tell him you know what's going on, then see a lawyer and make an honest man out of the guy? That way all three of you can be happy.

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes I wish I didn't have to take piano lessons.

It's hard to find time to practice, or I just don't feel like it.

My mom keeps saying, "You'll be glad I made you practice." I don't understand why she makes me do something I don't feel is necessary.

DEAR TROUBLED: How old are you? Do you have any special talent or are you wasting your mother's money and your time? All children are "made" to do things they don't think are necessary — like go to sleep, and wake up, study, practice, bathe and brush their teeth regularly. If you're over 15, ignore this answer. If you're under, hang in there, and go along with your mother.

DEAR ABBY: I know that I have a tendency to talk too much, but I can't seem to control it. I would appreciate any hints on how to remind myself not to talk so much. I just don't seem to know when to stop.

I know I'm a pest at times. Maybe some of your readers who have had this problem and solved it can offer some suggestions.

MOTORMOUTH IN DENVER

DEAR MOTORMOUTH: Rejoice. Your problem is half solved because you admit it's a problem. Consider a few rules: Don't talk just for the sake of talking — talk only if you have something to say. Say what you have to say in as few words as possible. After you've said it, be quiet.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Some resale homes defective

BOUND BROOK, N.J. (AP) — Two out of five homes for sale this year will have at least one serious defect, according to a study by Housemaster of America, a national home inspection service. A "serious defect" is one that will cost a new homeowner at least $500 to repair, according to the company.

The most common problem found in resale homes is poor plumbing, according to data compiled from more than 65,000 inspections across the country.

Other problems following in frequency include heating and cooling deficiencies, poor roofing, electrical system defects, faulty kitchen appliances and structural deficiencies.

While foundation or "structural" problems are not as common as some of the others cited, they often show up in the form of horizontal cracks or bowing, the study showed. Though less common, the company says, they are often among the most serious and costly to repair.

Check for insects on trees

By JOE VANZANDT
 County Extension Agent

For Horticulture

Joe VanZandt

I hear reports that a few bagworms are beginning to hatch. Also, a few elm leaf beetle larvae are hatching as well. Homeowners would do well to start checking for the presence of these insects on their trees.

For bagworms, use a spray mixture containing one of the following insecticides: Sevin, Dursban, Dylox, diazinon, orthene, malathion or B.T.

For the elm leaf beetle larvae, use sprays with one of the following: Sevin, methoxychlor or orthene.

FLEA BEETLES

During the last few weeks, we have had several calls about these black beetles about 1/8-inch long that jump or hop around when you touch them.

Flea beetles are general plant feeders and are frequently found on the foliage of vegetable and flower garden plants. They chew small holes through the leaves from the underside, producing a shot-hole or sieve-like appearance.

These insects derive their common name from the fact that they are provided with well developed hind legs and, when disturbed, jump in a manner resembling fleas.

Several insecticides should control them, such as Sevin, malathion, or methoxychlor. Be sure to read and follow label directions.

PINE TIP MOTH

Several calls have been received about pine tip moth larvae. The larvae cause the tips on pine trees to die—merely retarding new growth from developing from the tip. The best control is to use Orthene® as a spray or to use Di-Syston® as a soil-applied systemic.

When applying an insecticide, you are hoping to prevent spread of the larvae to unaffected tips. Once a tip has been fed on by the pine tip moth larvae, it will not green back up this year. However, next year it should put out new growth, probably from two or three growing points. This may serve to thicken up the tree's foliage.

For prevention, sprays should be applied around May 15 and July 10 each year.

FREEZE DAMAGE

Seems like more freeze damage to trees and shrubs are showing up. More calls are coming in about dead or dying limbs, particularly on fruitless mulberry.

Many of these I attribute to the hard freeze in late March. Trim out the dead or dying limbs.

Now I am also getting calls about leaves that show the effect that looks like scorch as well as maybe some of the newer leaves showing a wrinkled appearance. Some of these are attributed to weed or grass killer herbicides that may have been applied during the last year or so.

Sometimes these herbicides work in strange ways. Homeowners need to be careful about what and where they use certain herbicides, particularly those containing 2,4-D and dicamba (Banvel).

PLANT VINCA FOR SUMMER COLOR

Vinca, or periwinkles, are one of the most heat and drought tolerant bedding plants available and are popular among Texas gardeners.

The "Little" series of vinca has been selected by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service as the outstanding performer for 1987. These plants reach a height of 10 to 12 inches with bright green foliage. "Little Bright Eye" (white with a red eye) and "Little Pinkie" have proven to be the best two varieties for Texas gardens.

Vinca range in flower color from white to lavender. Some low-growing varieties are available.

Vinca are excellent for garden beds or areas of mass color in the landscape. They thrive in almost any soil condition and seem to flower best in the heat of summer.

These plants are also well adapted to container culture and make a nice accent for decks, patios and porches.

Most vinca are grown from transplants which are placed in the garden after the danger of frost has passed. These plants may also be grown from seed and should be started six to eight weeks before the desired planting date.

Vinca require full sun for best growth but will tolerate some shade.

Men should own seven suits

NEW YORK (AP) — A man's wardrobe should include at least seven suits, suggests Marvin A. Blumenfeld, head of a merchandising consulting firm that represents men's clothing stores throughout the country. Four of them should be all-weather suits that can be worn all year long, says the president of April-Marcus Inc. Two of the others should be all-wool winter suits and one should be a lightweight summer suit, he says. A navy blue suit is a must, he adds, because it can be used for both business and more formal occasions.

Russian concerts next

American pop and rock singer Billy Joel sings to sold-out concerts on a recent tour in Australia, with six in Sydney gaining capacity crowds. Joel is warming up for his next slate of concerts, a tour of Russia, where he will be the first major solo American rock act to perform in Moscow concerts.

Actress thinks new comedy is real, 'not like the Cosbys'

JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Katey Sagal, who made the transition from rock 'n' roll singer to actress, says the new Fox comedy Married ... With Children shows what life is really like, unlike the Bill Cosby Show.

In fact, she says, the working title for the new series when it was being developed was Not the Cosbys.

"I don't know anybody like the Huxtables," Sagal said. "That's one reason I don't watch much TV. It's so boring. Everybody's so nice."

Sagal had her own band and was singing in clubs around Los Angeles when she broke into television.

"I was a Harlette with Bette Midler for five years," she said. "For years I made my living as a background singer for people like Bob Dylan and Etta James. I had no idea this would happen."

It happened when Sagal was doing a rock opera at the Mark Taper Forum called My Beautiful Lady.

"It was my first big stage show," she said. "Mary Tyler Moore's casting people saw me in it and cast me as Jo Tucker in her show. I'm not sure why they brought me in. The character I was doing on stage was the opposite of Jo and she didn't even speak."

She starred as Moore's hard-bitten co-worker on a Chicago newspaper in the short-lived CBS comedy Mary. She was a cynical, chain-smoking journalist.

"I adored her, she was great," Sagal said. "Her function at first was to pop Mary's balloon, but they ended up becoming good friends."

She and Ed O'Neill star as the battling couple in the new comedy series from the Fox Broadcasting Co. Al and Peggy Bundy, who have two teen-age children, have been married 15 years. The show skewers the television myth that all is peace and harmony on the home front.

Their relationship harks back to The Bickersons, the combative couple played by Don Ameche and Frances Langford.

Sagal was called in to audition for Married ... With Children when Sharon Leavitt, the wife of co-executive producer Ron Leavitt, saw her on Mary.

"The show's sort of based on their life," Sagal said. "She said, 'I want her to play me.' They've been married 11 years and have two younger kids. I think they have a way of communicating that's similar to Al and Peg. They're very happy, but so are Peg and Al."

Sagal says she sees Peg as a woman who knows what she wants.

"She likes being a housewife," she said. "She complains, but it's her way of communicating. I think she's happy. She's not an '80s professional woman. Peggy's got what she wants. To me, she's very liberated. She's been married a long time and the way to stay married is to speak your mind. I think Al and Peg are like real people."

Sagal grew up in a show business family, but never had any notions about becoming an actress. Her father was director Boris Sagal, who was killed in a helicopter accident while scouting locations for a miniseries in 1981. Her late mother, Sara Zwilling, had been a singer, a writer and was the first woman assistant director in live television in the 1950s.

Her younger twin sisters, Liz and Jean Sagal, starred in the NBC comedy series Double Trouble. A brother, Joey, is an actor, and another brother, David, is a lawyer.

"My father always told me I should act because I was an emotional child," she said. "I went to Cal Arts and studied theater for a semester. But I liked singing. I could sing from the time I was a little kid."

"I was in a movie when I was 16 that was directed by my father. It was a movie of the week called The Failing of Raymond. Jane Wyman and Dean Stockwell were in it. I had a few scenes, but I remember not liking it. There was no continuity to the way they filmed. It's interesting the opinions you have as a kid, then change. I'm so grateful to be in this business."

'The Untouchables' De Palma's back on track

By BRAD POPE
Guest Entertainment Critic

On a first impression, the new Untouchables movie by Brian De Palma seems like a hard sell.

Here we have a standard movie opening with basic exposition, comic relief and cardboard characterization. But, unlike other suspense movies, The Untouchables diverts wildly and imaginatively from basic plot structure and locale and becomes a fantastic and ingenious thriller.

Eliot Ness, played by Kevin Costner in his first major star turn, is a treasury officer working in conjunction with the Chicago police to crack down on vice and murder in the Prohibition year of 1930. The main object in Chicago is, of course, Al Capone, played by Robert De Niro.

Ness decides to end Capone's reign after a little girl is blown up in a drugstore.

His first attempt unsuccessful, Ness decides to recruit a cocky Irish police officer, Malone (the film's strongest performance), played by Sean Connery; an Italian tough (Andy Garcia), and a fumbling bookkeeper, played by Charles Martin Smith.

Malone gives them the leads and the group makes the busts, never faltering. This continues until murdering gets out of hand and a confrontation between Capone and Ness is inevitable.

This is just one of the taut moments in the film.

A dazzling rooftop sequence, a claustrophobic scene where the viewer is an assailant and, the centerpiece of the film, which will live on, the train station segment — all had me on the edge of my seat, and I have not done that since Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom.

Playwright David Mamet has crafted a script of characters that the audience loves, and Mamet manipulates the audience when fate happens. This is the only movie this year when this reviewer was touched or moved by anything the characters have to say or their actions.

This is quality screenwriting, and any aspiring student should take lessons.

Kevin Costner not only plays but commands his cop with a conscience role. This kind of role is widely regarded as cliched, but Costner pulls it off with brilliance and skill, putting the viewer in his shoes. Costner will be a major talent to look out for.

De Niro is still one of America's greatest actors, but he seems underused in the film. He does, however, make the best of the time he gets, as do every other member of the flawless cast.

Malone may seem a bit overused, but Sean Connery has crafted a lovable character out of a tough, no-nonsense cop.

This will certainly be a year

that lands Connery an Oscar nomination. Unlike most supporting characters, he really supports the other actors and he knows when it is time to get out of the spotlight. He is the most crucial character in the film, and Connery calls it like he knows it. hat really holds the film together, though, is Brian De Palma. After a string of veritable losers like Scarface, De Palma has finally made a great American movie.

It is wonderful to see him in stride again, and his ability to bounce off his losers is incredible. His use of camera is hypnotic and claustrophobic, and the way he works with his ensemble is nothing short of phenomenal. As always, though, his camera and pacing is a little slow for my tastes, but he is still back in full force.

The Untouchables could be the movie to see this summer. But stay away if violence makes you uneasy, as it does me. The violence here, though, is justifiable. And even though there is more gore than in Beverly Hills Cop II, the violence moves the story along and fits the time period when the underground was ruthless. It is done for emotional effect, not ketchup quota.

The Untouchables is a hard sell, but I'm buying.

Sheshunoff poses in his Austin office recently. (AP Laserphoto)

Company banks on information

By KIRK LADENDORF
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP)— By several standards, Sheshunoff stands as a banking industry heavyweight.

First there are some physical dimensions: The company's black-bound Banks of Texas 1986 volume runs more than 1,400 pages and weighs 8 pounds, 4 ounces. It contains roughly 1 million numbers that rank and describe banks by nearly every financial category imaginable: earnings, assets, non-performing loans, capital, five-year performance.

The company publishes similar volumes for banks in every state of the union. The volume on Texas is the biggest because nearly one out of every seven banks in the country is located in the state.

Second, comes business media recognition: the Wall Street Journal quotes the company's analysts regularly. Inc. magazine identified Alex Sheshunoff in a headline as "Banking Guru."

Third, and more importantly, is the assessment of John Adams, a crusty Corpus Christi banker who could speak for hundreds of executives at small and medium-sized financial institutions throughout the country.

"He's the best-known name in banking," Adams said of company founder and chief executive, Alex Sheshunoff. "He helped the bank industry, more than anyone else, recognize the good and the bad things they could do."

Sheshunoff (pronounced SHESH-un-off) has plenty of imitators, but no single strong competitor. The company says close to 10,000 banks buy at least one of its information products or services.

But the company, which employs 130 people, remains a mystery to much of the Austin business community.

Sheshunoff recently recalled that his company had spent two years in its high-rise offices without receiving a visit from the banker doing business on the ground floor.

But the situation is changing, Sheshunoff says, as some local banks have started to run into earnings problems.

Alex Sheshunoff, at 47, continues to be the company's foremost idea man and its marketing leader. His gentle-mannered, self-deprecating style sets the tone for the company and its products.

Robert Walters, who heads the company's investment advisory business, said: "Alex has always stressed, 'Let's be sincere; let's be honest; let's care; let's stress quality; let's don't be condescending; let's help.'"

The founder only reluctantly admits he is a graduate of Yale University, lest the Ivy League be put off someone. Sheshunoff went to Yale after growing up in Magnolia, Ark. He came to Austin in the early 1960s to go to law school at the University of Texas, but left school just short of receiving a law degree.

His wife, Gabrielle, works from an office next door as the company's executive vice president and chief operating officer. "She really runs the place," Sheshunoff says.

Since the beginning, Mrs. Sheshunoff has ramrodded the day-to-day production and quality control process. She is the company's No. 1 "implementer," a key word in the Sheshunoff lexicon.

"The implementation of this is what makes them happen," Sheshunoff said, referring to his wife's pivotal role. "Lots of people have wonderful ideas, but the reality is we get the books out and get them out on time and so on."

Gabrielle brought a strong background in business to the Sheshunoff family. Her family, the de Kuypers of the Netherlands, has produced and sold liqueurs since the 1600s, and she was an executive with the company's Canadian operations.

The Sheshunoffs began their service in the mid-1970s, with the onset of deregulation. While the biggest banks, the Citicorps and Chase Manhattan of the world, did their own research and forecasting, thousands of small and mid-sized banks lacked access to the research and rethinking of the business that confronted them.

Sheshunoff saw the banking turmoil as a way to spread the word about his company's data and services. For five years in the late '70s, Sheshunoff spent about half his time on the road, giving 100 to 150 one-day seminars on high-performance banking.

Industry anxiety spurred Sheshunoff's growth since its first comprehensive state bank performance volume — of Texas — was published in 1974. Part of the message Sheshunoff spread to bankers was the need to start charging for what they had previously given away for free or for very little — consumer checking, bounced checks, check stops.

That first industry survey outlined how much more the new accounts would cost banks and what sort of limits ought to be placed on them. The product list continues to grow relentlessly, spurred on by customer requests for new information.

"He's probably done more than any other individual in America to raise bank fees," said William Ford, a former president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, who now runs a large savings association in Cleveland. Ford and Sheshunoff were pioneers and collaborators in developing the principles of "high-performance banking" in the mid-70s.

Bankers talk about studying their "Sheshunoff book" when they want the definitive information on precisely how their institution performs against its peers and its competition.

Contest draws many theater groups from across country

By JUDY GIBBS
Associated Press Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)— Oklahoma has something of a reputation among community theater buffs around the nation — and not because of the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical by the same name.

Three community theater groups from the Sooner State have captured top honors in the American Association of Community Theaters annual festivals, the most winners from any state.

In recognition, the AACT chose Oklahoma as host of this year's national festival, a kind of Olympics for community theater groups. The festival runs Wednesday through Saturday at the University of Oklahoma.

Organizers are expecting between 400 and 600 unpaid actors, actresses and theater personnel from across the country to attend the festival.

"There's a real large theater movement here that no one else in the state knows about outside the people involved in the movement," says Leslie Radford, coordinator for the Oklahoma Community Theater Association, which is hosting the festival.

"People, I think, often believe Oklahoma is not a cultural center. This, I think, will change that perception. Not only are we the only state to have more than one winner on the national level, we have one of the strongest bases for community theaters," Ms. Radford said.

In 1971, the Tulsa Little Theater became the first Oklahoma group to win the national festival. Ten years later, another Tulsa group, Theater Tulsa, followed suit. And in 1985, the Mummies Theater from Oklahoma City won the top honor.

Oklahoma's shot at a fourth national title this year rests on the shoulders of the Black Liberated Arts Center of Oklahoma City, but the weight doesn't bother artistic director Al Bostick.

For one thing, BLAC will have the home-team advantage.

For another, Bostick says, it's BLAC's turn to be in the spotlight.

"Our attitude is: It's about time," said Bostick, noting that BLAC has been the alternate winner in regional competitions for the past three years.

The winners of the AACT's nine regional competitions, which involved 49 community theaters around the country, take part in the national festival. Two winners from the large southeast region go to the national festival to make a field of 10 finalists.

The other groups participating this year are the Hamden Community Theater of Hamden, Conn.; Phoenix Players of Indianapolis, Ind.; Winter Haven Community Theater of Winter Haven, Fla.; Circle Players of Nashville, Tenn.; Wichita Community Playhouse of Wichita, Kan.; Moulton Playhouse of Laguna Beach, Calif.; the Players Club of Swarthmore, Pa.; Shwayder Theater of Denver; and Spokane Civic Theater of Spokane, Wash.

Each of the 10 groups will present a one-hour segment from a play before a panel of judges. BLAC is presenting Athol Fugard's "Blood Knot," a play about two racially mixed brothers in South Africa, one who looks white and the other who looks black.

The festival winner will go on to the Canadian Multi-Cultural Festival in Montreal July 6-19.

Ms. Radford said the festival represents the best of community theater, which is the only live theater in much of the country.

Considering community theater groups consist of unpaid volunteers who rehearse after putting in a full day on another job, "they're usually surprisingly good," Ms. Radford said.

"I think this festival will reveal that to anyone who cares to attend. Community theater is as good and sometimes better than a lot — I won't say most — professional theater. The commitment level is there."

Oklahoma has 50 community theaters across the state in towns as small as Okeene and Guymon, Ms. Radford said.

The major career change you've been hoping for has a good chance of becoming a reality in the year ahead. You'll be glad you've been patient.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's an objective you'll want to achieve today, and it doesn't appear to be too big a problem. However, if you meet opposition, you might back off. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today, you'll be comfortable in situations with people familiar with your credentials. Where your abilities are unknown, you might feel ill at ease.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't covet something today that another has justly earned. The only share to which you should aspire is what you are able to produce yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your outlook may be a trifle Pollyanna-ish today. If it is, you could get a bit unruined when you are forced to make judgments on cold, hard facts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may only collect a portion of what's owed you today if you fail to speak up and claim your rights. Don't pussyfoot around and let others take advantage of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Instead of trying to make others over into your mold today, appreciate them for their good qualities. Any other approach could lead to unpleasantness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Negative imaginings will dilute your effectiveness today. The result could be feelings of depression that have more basis in fantasy than in fact.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Although you'll be inclined to treat others in a noble fashion today, your good intentions could go by the boards when you have to deal with real-life situations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you follow your instincts in career matters today, the results should please you. But this may not be true if you are guided by other considerations.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Important judgments should not be made today without serious deliberation. Hasty decisions could get you into situations that may be difficult to unwind.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your sense of security may be shaken today if you encounter someone who can make you feel poor in accomplishments and cause you to humble yourself accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even though you'll want to, you might have difficulty complimenting associates today. Rather than praise them, you may say something sarcastic.

NORTHEAST: Crops and livestock are in good shape due to recent rains. Wheat harvesting and hay making has been slowed by the rains. Vegetables are making good progress although early blight is a problem in some tomatoes and watermelon mosaic has been reported.

may have to be replanted due to heavy rains.

While the rains were beneficial for farmers and ranchers in some locations, livestock and young crops were victims of heavy deluges in parts of South and South Central Texas. Some crop losses also resulted in western areas and in the plains. Flooding caused heavy damage to rural roads and bridges in some locations.

Where field conditions permit, farmers in the plains and western areas are still planting cotton and sorghum. Improved moisture conditions in many western sections should take some pressure off early crop irrigation.

SOUTH PLAINS: Rains of 2 to 10 inches in southern counties caused heavy damage to the cotton crop that was about 50 percent planted. The excessive moisture as well as some hail has been detrimental to crop conditions. A lot of cotton will have to be replanted, and cotton seed is already in short supply.

FAR WEST: Most of the region has good soil moisture due to recent rains. More than 4,000 acres of cotton and vegetables were destroyed by hail. Cotton planting has been slowed by rain; farmers are replanting some cotton due to weather losses.

EAST: Crops and pastures are in good shape due to recent rains. Producers are continuing to fertilize pastures, and hay making is active as the weather allows. Diseases are infecting some vegetables due to recent rains.

Much of the state is now saturated with moisture, which should help crops, pastures and ranges make good progress, Carpenter said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture. In low areas with poor drainage, some fields are under water and crop losses are likely, he said. On the other hand, a few dry spots remain in some southern and western counties.

Plenty of stock water is now available for livestock over most of the state, and grasses on pastures and ranges should make rapid growth in the coming weeks, Carpenter said.

ROLLING PLAINS: Up to 10 and 12 inches of rain fell in some locations the past week although a few locations are still dry. The heavy rains halted wheat harvesting and cotton planting; hail and high winds caused some damage to mature wheat. The heavy rains also washed out terraces in some counties. Vegetables, watermelons and cantaloupes were damaged by heavy rains in King and Knox counties.

WEST CENTRAL: Rains of up to 6 inches fell over parts of the region this week, causing some scattered flooding. Harvesting of wheat and oats is at a standstill; some wheat was damaged by hail. Cotton planting also is making little or no progress due to wet conditions; some early fields may have to be replanted due to the heavy rains. Livestock have plenty of grazing.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Heavy rains of 8 to 10 inches caused widespread flooding in some counties and resulted in some crop damage. Some hay cuttings were lost and some young crops were washed out. Some cotton is starting to square and corn is silking. A light crop of early peaches is being harvested.

Wet conditions have hampered field operations, such as crop cultivation, Vegetables in the Winter Garden and Rio Grande Valley were damaged by the heavy rains, particularly the onion crop in the Winter Garden that has been ready to harvest for the past two to three weeks. Watermelons and cantaloupes suffered heavy damage in many locations. Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

NORTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture ranges from short to adequate over the area, with some recent rains. The rains halted wheat harvesting in a number of counties. However, some fields of young corn, sorghum and cotton are in poor shape due to lack of moisture.

SOUTHWEST: Excessively wet fields are causing rotting problems in the onion crop; harvesting has been delayed for several weeks due to wet conditions. Many other crops also have been damaged due to heavy rains, and there has been some loss of livestock. The 1987 wheat crop has been almost a total loss due to the earlier freeze damage and now the extensive rains.

Farm Bureau wins backing for farm credit system plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four major grower and livestock groups have joined with the American Farm Bureau Federation in seeking government aid for the financially ailing Farm Credit System.

Association and the National Pork Producers Council, according to Farm Bureau spokesman Joe Fields.

The farm groups are hoping to have legislation in the hopper by the end of the week to rescue the $70 billion network of cooperatives that together make up the nation's largest farm lender, officials said Monday.

The Farm Credit System itself has called for a $6 billion cash infusion to stave off its burgeoning financial problems.

The legislation is expected to follow the 21-point outline unveiled April 21 by the Farm Bureau, proposing that the Farm Credit System be given a cash infusion of $3 billion to $5 billion.

The Reagan administration several weeks ago circulated an outline it termed acceptable. The blueprint contains a line of credit to the Farm Credit System but the money would be considered a loan rather than a cash infusion.

Groups joining in support of the plan are the National Cattlemen's Association, the American Soybean Association, the National Corn Growers Administration officials told lawmakers that they did not want to become involved in the bill drafting process at the moment but would merely present an outline of what was acceptable.

and health, and will focus on the concern of where beef fits into the American diet. Experts from the health and medical professions and from consumer activists groups will address these issues. The program that afternoon will center around the issue of meeting consumer demand and how the industry can advance to that point. A banquet that evening will feature several key beef leaders.

Major thrust of the Aug. 1 meeting in A&M's Kleberg Center will be producing cattle that fit consumer demand.

A lot of wheat was cut for hay and was still in the windrows when all of our wet weather hit. Most of this has suffered a lot of damage and some is going to be lost as far as hay is concerned. BINDWEED PROGRAM

The short course is being planned by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, two agencies of the Texas A&M University System, in cooperation with livestock breed associations and other industry groups.

More information is available by writing Dr. Dan Hale, Extension meats specialist, 114 Kleberg Center, College Station, Texas 77843 or by calling him at 409 845-2052.

The Texas Highway Department plans to spray bindweeds along their rights-of-ways with Roundup®.

The program is being planned for producers, feeders, packers, retailers, consumer and health professionals.

On Monday, Aug. 10, a review of U.S. beef breeds will be conducted in the Pearce Pavilion. Time also will be made available throughout that day for breed association activities and meetings, and various breed associations will set up exhibits in the Pearce Pavilion. At 1 p.m. short course participants will have an opportunity to evaluate five head of live cattle, including four steers and hoes heifer, which will be placed and then discussed by a panel of experts. Breed reviews also will continue that afternoon. A reception will begin at 8 p.m. at the College Station Hilton.

Farmers, who are working at controlling bindweeds on farmland adjoining state highways, need to sign up in the county Extension office at the Courthouse Annex.

Come by the office this week and certify the highway, section, survey and block numbers. Also, the location of your land needs to be marked on a county map. If you can't get by the office, call us at 669-7429 and give the needed information.

Federal fish inspection being urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee chairman says the time has come for the federal government to start inspecting seafood as part of a campaign to upgrade and modernize the fight against food-borne illnesses.

"It is clear that current inspection procedures fail to detect bacterial and chemical contamination of meat and poultry," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Thursday. "The potential problems associated with fish consumption are of equal concern."

It was the latest development in a controversy that flared last year following charges of unsanitary conditions in the poultry industry.

Food-borne ailments affect an estimated 6.5 million Americans annually and kill about 9,100. A recent report from the National Academy of Sciences held that visual inspection of poultry in the slaughtering and processing plants cannot catch salmonella and other bacteria because they are invisible.

It recommended random sampling techniques designed to isolate the sources of bacteria that contaminate the birds. The Agriculture Department estimates that 37 percent of chickens emerge from inspection with salmonella on them.

Professor: Vietnam perfect execution of imperfect plan

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — America's humbling defeat in Vietnam is a still-raw wound that has been soothed by blaming the loss on a series of tragic blunders or a hobbled military.

But in a new book, Southern Methodist University sociologist William Gibson shoots down those explanations, saying the war was the full-strength execution of "technowar," a new style of fighting that took a businesslike approach to killing.

"The Perfect War: Technowar in Vietnam," (Atlantic Monthly Press, $24.95), has been compared to the movie "Platoon" for its clear-sighted look at the question: "How could a nation of peasants on bicycles defeat the United States?"

The answer, according to Gibson's book, is that the U.S. military machine viewed North Vietnam as a mirror image, albeit a poorer one, operating under the same principles and motivations.

"There were no 'mistakes' made during the Vietnam War. Nor was there a failure of will; the self-imposed restraints were only on official paper, not in Technowar practice," Gibson writes.

Under technowar, the chief objective is driving the enemy "bankrupt" of manpower. Bombing targets were evaluated in economic terms of kill ratios, and quarterly reports recorded the body counts as debits and credits.

The concept was responsible for the United States never coming to grips with its enemy, ignoring the years of social struggle against invaders in Vietnam and accepting inflated body counts in the search for a better bottom line, Gibson says.

The corporate concept, with enlisted men taking the guise of shift workers while officers sought upward mobility, led to the breakdown of loyalty in the ranks, he says.

One wall of Gibson's SMU office is lined with books about Vietnam, ranging from the gritty memoirs of foot soldiers to the technical prose of the Pentagon Papers.

Gibson, 35, was not drafted because of a progressive eye disease. He spent more than seven years researching the book, discovering the businesslike aspect of the war while reading the Pentagon Papers.

"When I saw that they were writing in terms of a productive system, then I thought, 'Well, why don't I try to reconstruct the war as a society,'" he said. "Once I came up with that model, I just decided to see how far I could pursue it."

A drawback to fighting the war like a business was that it viewed the third world society as similar to the United States, but poorer.

For instance, the United States bombed strategic roads and oil depots, overlooking the fact that few people in the country owned cars and the military transported supplies in small, hard-to-spot trucks.

"The American war managers simply could not get outside their own assumptions about the nature of power," Gibson says.

Under the corporate approach to war, officers saw themselves as business managers and enlisted men were seen as a kind of migrant labor force, according to Gibson's book.

Incidents of "fragging," officer assaults, occurred. Gibson cites statistics showing 126 assaults on officers in 1969 rising to 321 incidents in 1971.

"A callousness toward the well-being of the troops was simply too evident and was part of the corporate mentality," he said.

Because of the importance of balance sheets, body counts were all-important. Gibson quotes extensively from soldier memoirs that detail the confusion and inflation surrounding the body count process.

From that evolved the "Mere Gook Rule: If it's dead and it's Vietnamese it's VC (Vietcong)," part of the relentless move to improve "profits," he writes.

Gibson gives a rare defense of Lt. William Calley, who was sentenced to life imprisonment, but later pardoned, for his role in the My Lai massacre.

"The critique of Calley as a management error does not lead to the truth of the military system," Gibson writes.

Gibson doesn't believe technowar ends with the fall of Saigon.

The next step is Central America, where the same anticommunist mechanism is being set up with warnings that failure to intervene could set off a domino effect north to the Texas-Mexico border, he writes.

Mariner recalls days at sea

By CAROL RYAN
The Brazosport Facts

FREEMONT, Texas (AP) — Years after hanging up his sailor's cap, W.D. Gilbert, 76, still has the restless heart of a seaman.

Gilbert first signed on board a ship as a merchant marine in 1942. His first time on the Atlantic, he was part of a convoy that endured five days of enemy fire en route to England with a load of supplies for Allied forces preparing for D-Day.

The Lufkin native made it back home, married his wife, Josephine, and settled in Freemont, working for the Dow Chemical Co. until he retired in 1972.

But he still yearns to taste salt air from the bow of a ship or at least to relive his glory days with some of his crewmates on the American Merchant Marine.

The shipping company that employed Gilbert more than 40 years ago has gone out of business; he remembers a Lt. Luftowitz and Mr. Moore, the Navy man who had seen so much action he was placed on Gilbert's merchant vessel for a rest, but he has no way of tracking them down.

"If I could just find some of these guys, we could go to New Orleans or New York or Tampa for a reunion," Gilbert said.

Sitting in his Freemont home, the third he's lived in since he retired, Gilbert recalls the adventures of his younger days: shore leave in Cuba and Puerto Rico, wild nights in wartime Liverpool, the five-day seige on the Atlantic.

Raised a Texas farm boy, Gilbert was unaware of the vastness and power of the sea: "Back home, we didn't have enough water to water a horse," he said. "I didn't know the sea could be that rough."

Although he served in the merchant marine for two years, he spent most of that time traveling along the Eastern Seaboard on short trips.

When he boarded the American Merchant Marine in New Orleans, he heard rumors that the craft might be crossing the Atlantic. The ship steamed up to New York Harbor, but with no dock space available, Gilbert and his shipmates remained moored two miles out.

"Man, I wanted to go to town that night," Gilbert recalled.

Once out at sea, one of the sailor's duties involved watching for enemy submarines from the ship's bow. Despite the naval escort his convoy received, German submarines torpedoed transports.

"There were ships as far as I could see," Gilbert said, noting that when a craft became disabled, it could be repaired because of the slow speed at which the convoy was moving.

Finally, the convoy arrived in Liverpool. Longshoremen went to work unloading supplies. England, too, was under siege at the time, so all outdoor activity came to a halt at night, when lights were blacked out.

"The only way to find a ballroom was to walk right up in front of it," Gilbert said. "You had to wait for someone to come out to see it."

Those were the days, Gilbert recalled; life was lived in the fast lane because it had to be, in an era when no one knew if they would see another day.

"I am a restless type of feller ... I'd go back if they had a war," he said.

After a mad fortnight in Liverpool, Gilbert and his mates made the mad dash back to the docks. Even on trips within the United States, some sailors pressed their luck.

"I always made it back to the ship, but some fellas lost track of time," he said. His captain would call the cops, who tried to round the crewmen up, but some inevitably would miss the boat, left behind to find passage on another vessel.

"We'd always have enough sober hands to get 100 miles down the Mississippi River," he said.

As a wartime sailor, Gilbert was eligible for a free ride home via Uncle Sam. Paid "a couple thousand in $100 bills," he set off for St. Petersburg, Fla., where Josephine was working as a nurse — but not before he stopped off at a saloon.

"I was too drunk to remember I put that money in my sock," he reminisced with a grin. "I thought I'd done lost the whole trip ... I thought I was broke. That'll sober you up."

Entertainer loses round in court

HOUSTON (AP) — Country-western singer Mickey Gilley was denied a temporary restraining order to remove his name from the nightclub made famous by the movie "Urban Cowboy."

The issue now will go before a jury trial.

State District Judge Reagan Cartwright refused to make a ruling after two days of testimony that ended Thursday.

In seeking the order, Gilley asked that his partner, Sherwood Cryer, be barred from using Gilley's name for the club.

The entertainer also is seeking to end his business relationship with Cryer, with whom he entered a 10-year management contract in 1975. Gilley claims his contract with Cryer lapsed in 1984, because Cryer did not exercise an option to extend it.

Cryer, however, claims he notified Gilley of the extension, remains Gilley's manager and still has the right to use Gilley's name in promoting the nightclub.

"I hope that he comes to his senses," Cryer said of Gilley.

Gilley said he hopes to get the issues resolved during the trial.

"I'm kind of disappointed but now we'll take it into a full trial and we'll get everything out that we want to get out when we parade the people into the witness stand and get them to testify what Gilley's (nightclub) is all about," he said.

Attorney Bob Bailey, who represents Gilley, said his case centers upon whether the management contract is still in effect.

Gilley's nightclub in neighboring Pasadena gained national attention when "Urban Cowboy," starring John Travolta, was filmed at the club in 1980.

Congress urged to repeal taxes that penalize petroleum industry

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Reagan administration, concerned about growing U.S. reliance on imported oil, urged Congress Friday to repeal tax provisions that penalize the petroleum industry, but rejected calls for boosting tax benefits for oil.

Several senators, in proposing increased incentives for domestic production, cited the attack on the USS Stark as evidence of the uncertainty of supplies from the Persian Gulf.

"U.S. oil production fell by 800,000 barrels per day in 1986 back to 1981 levels," William F. Martin, deputy secretary of energy, told the Senate Finance subcommittee on energy taxation. "As a result, U.S. imports of foreign oil have increased by 1 million barrels per day.

"If present trends in the United States and elsewhere continue, the world will become increasingly dependent upon insecure sources of oil," Martin said.

O. Donaldson Chapoton, deputy assistant secretary of the treasury for tax policy, outlined three tax changes the administration has proposed to help increase U.S. production: repeal of the 1980 "windfall-profits" tax on the oil industry; repeal of a limitation that bars the depletion-allowance benefit on wells that are sold by a major oil company, and removing a net-income limitation that further restricts use of depletion.

"The domestic oil industry paid its dues through windfall-profits-tax payments of about $50 billion between 1981 and 1986," Martin said. "Now the industry needs relief from unjustified and discriminatory taxes."

The administration's proposals "are the most responsible and effective means of improving our energy security," Chapoton said, and, because of budget limitations, "the administration is opposed to changes in the taxation of oil and gas beyond" those recommendations.

Several energy-state senators, including David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the subcommittee, said the president's proposals are not enough.

"We need an oil-import fee," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., referring to an oft-mentioned idea of raising taxes on foreign oil in an effort to discourage consumption and boost incentives for domestic production.

Most of the increase in imported oil is from the Middle East, "one of the most politically sensitive areas in the world," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Finance Committee. "The very fact that we have several warships in the Persian Gulf, and the tragic loss of so many of our servicemen in that region recently, demonstrates that we cannot rely on excess production capacity from that part of the world."

"The recent attack on the USS Stark brings into focus the dangers of a national policy that ignores our growing dependency on oil supplies from the Middle East," said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla. "In 1986 we imported more than twice as much oil from Arab OPEC countries as we did in 1985."

Oil-state lawmakers have introduced bills to increase the oil-depletion allowance; give a special tax credit to "wildcat" drillers, and allow preferential tax treatment of geological and geophysical exploration costs.

But the first priority of the industry is to repeal the "windfall" tax, which actually is a tax on oil-price increases above a certain level.
