Tax options could cost states millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raising federal gasoline, cigarette and liquor taxes could help trim the budget deficit, but state officials say the actions would cost their treasuries billions of dollars and would be unfair to the poor.

The proposals are among more than 200 options cited recently by the House Ways and Means Committee as possible sources of $18 billion in new tax money for fiscal 1988.

States are concerned that federal excise tax increases will preempt possible state tax hikes and reduce revenue from the taxes they already impose by reducing sales.

"It's not so much a question of over-taxation as it is a perception," says Illinois Revenue Director Robert Mandeville. "The feds raise it. Then you hear, 'Hey, the tax just went up a nickel and, governor, you want to raise it another nickel?'" Congress has not accepted any of the alternatives yet, but excise tax proposals already are drawing protests from the National Governors' Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures.

"It seems to me the way to cut deficits is to cut spending," Mandeville said.

The Ways and Means Committee said a 10-cent per gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax, now nine cents, would generate $9.3 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, about half the amount needed in fiscal 1988 to comply with the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction act.

Doubling the 16-cents-per-pack cigarette tax would produce $3 billion and doubling the alcoholic beverage tax of $12.50 per proof-gallon would bring in

$2.1 billion, the committee said.

However, states argue that gasoline, tobacco and alcohol are a major source of their revenue and fear higher federal taxes will make it more difficult for them to raise money.

The governors are scheduled to vote during their summer meeting on a resolution opposing the federal excise tax increases and already have published a position paper critical of the proposals.

Trustees to select Lamar principal

A new principal for Lamar Elementary School is expected to be chosen when Pampa school trustees meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert.

The meeting will be the first regular board meeting for new Superintendent Harry Griffith, who took over Wednesday from Interim Superintendent Tommy Cathey. Cathey will go back to being an assistant superintendent for support services.

The board plans to replace Dan Johnson, who retired as principal at Lamar after more than 30 years of experience. Other personnel matters also are expected to be discussed, possibly in executive session.

In other action, a bid for new telephones at Pampa schools is scheduled to be awarded when school trustees meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert.

Griffith has recommended trustees award the bid to Hi Plains NTS Communications of Pampa on a four-year lease at $703.68 per month. A lower bid was received from Consolidated Telephone Co., but Griffith noted that NTS offers lower maintenance costs and is a Pampa firm.

The board also plans to:

- discuss tennis court and track renovation;
- discuss the board's policy with regard to credit be exam for students, and review the board's policy manual;
- award a bid for depository for school funds, after Griffith recommended Citizens Bank and Trust Co.;
- schedule district budget workshops in July and August (the first is set for 6 p.m. today at Pampa High School auditorium);
- grant a land easement off Crocker Street near Horace Mann School to the city of Pampa;
- appoint a delegate to the Texas Association of School Boards convention in San Antonio during September;
- discuss a teacher in-service program for August; and
- discuss medical insurance.

North to tell story beginning Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North will step forward this week, take an oath to tell the truth and reveal to the nation for the first time his version of the Iran-Contra scheme he masterminded and then allegedly tried to cover up.

In what is likely to be the most riveting testimony to date in the congressional investigative hearings, North will be asked what President Reagan and the late CIA Director William Casey knew about the Iran-Contra venture.

Investigators also will ask how private and government operatives armed the Iranians and the Nicaraguan Contra rebels; whether North himself profited from the activity; and how attempts ultimately were made to destroy the evidence.

Equally fascinating as North takes the stand Tuesday will undoubtedly be revelations about the philosophy that drove the 43-year-old Marine who has been described alternately as charismatic, patriotic, conniving, zealous and deceitful. White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker on Sunday denied a report in Washingtonian magazine that North had unlogged, private access to Reagan.

"I do not believe Oliver North ever saw the president by himself, one-on-one, ever," Baker said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"I don't know what he's going to say, but I can tell you this: I look forward to his testimony on Tuesday, and I know the president does as well," Baker said.

In other developments related to North's appearance:

—U.S. News & World Report, reporting on a Roper Organization poll taken June 29-30, says 59 percent of the respondents believe North will not tell the truth. Fifty-seven percent also said they believe Reagan was lying when he denied knowing that money from the Iranian arms sales was going to help the White House-supported Nicaraguan rebels.

Harvesters IV take top talent honors

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Entertainment Writer

A Pampa gospel quartet harmonized its way to a $1,000 first-place victory during the July Fourth talent search Saturday, while a Borger country and western group won an outdoor battle of the bands.

Pampa's Harvesters IV, a group of four male singers, took first place honors in the senior group division with an a cappella version of "We're a Band of Christian Soldiers." They topped second place finishers, the Top O' Texas Cloggers from Amarillo, who precision-tapped their way through Pseudo Echo's "Funkytown."

The four Harvesters and the eight cloggers exchanged hugs after M.K. Brown Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson announced the winners. Last year, the two groups also vied for top honors, with the Cloggers coming out on top.

More than 300 contestants from seven states competed for $13,000 in prize money during the second annual talent search at the auditorium. Preliminary rounds were held Friday afternoon and all day Saturday, with the finals starting at about 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Six judges picked the top five contestants in seven categories. The top five then re-competed for top honors. In addition to the $1,000 first prize, cash was handed to each of the top five in each category, with second place winning $500, third $200, fourth $100 and fifth $50.

The top contestants also had tapes of their performances sent to television's Star Search program.

Parkerson exceeded the event. Plaques were awarded to non-finalists the judges deemed most original, most entertaining and having the best costume.

A large contingent of youngsters from Oklahoma — part of the Oklahoma Kids statewide talent network — were on hand and captured first prizes in the junior group and 3- to 6-year-old divisions.

Breeanna D. Gibson of Yukon, Okla., sang "Hello My Baby" into a telephone to win first prize in the youngest age category, a repeat winner from last year, when she performed the same number.

In the junior group division, Scott Henry and Cym Chaney from Oklahoma City took first with a dance number entitled "My Hero." Despite the large number of dancers entered in the contest, Henry and Chaney were the only dance entry to win a first place.

Another highlight came in the 7- to 9-year old division, when 7-year-old Amber Pennington from Stinnett belted out George Benson's "The Greatest Love of All," sounding like a pro.

Other winners Saturday included: ★ Jennifer McGill of Denison in the 10- to 12-year-old division with "Home"; ★ Todd Rafter of Wichita Falls in the 13- to 17-year-old division with "New York, New York"; and

★ Marion Cooper, a former Dallas Cowboy cheerleader from Irving, with "Inseparable."

But the talent search wasn't the only contest taking place Saturday.

Outside in Coronado Park, six bands battled for a $500 top prize under the hot, Fourth of July sun. Three judges also awarded cash prizes to second- and third-place bands.

Borger's Silverado took first place with an original country and western song entitled "Anywhere in Texas I Call Home." They changed the words slightly to include Pampa in the song's list of hometowns.

Zemira, a progressive jazz band from Canyon, took second place in the outdoor contest with jazzman Michael Franks' "A Place Called Tokyo," while Pampa rockers Kickback took third with an original composition written by guitarist Gary Thrasher, entitled "We Were in Love."

Country Fair plans under way

Planning is already under way for the Pampa Chamber of Commerce's Country Fair in October, with a drive now in progress to get merchandise donated for the auctions.

Bill Harris of Heritage Ford and Richard Stowers of Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet have each donated an automobile to start the drive for the donated merchandise for the Country Fair, according to Don Babcock, Solicitation Committee chairman.

Solicitation Committee members will be contacting businesses during the next few days, Babcock said. Deadline for donations of items to be offered is Friday, July 9.

"We hope that all the businesses who were so generous last year will donate items again this year," said Warren Chisum, general chairman of the Country Fair.

Items will be offered in both a silent auction and a live auction.

Chisum said committees are working to complete plans for the Country Fair, set for Oct. 17 at the M.K. Brown Auditorium. The fair is the chamber's primary fund raising event of the year, Chisum said.

Advance tickets at a reduced rate will be offered during the month of July, he noted. Anyone who wishes to buy the early tickets should contact the chamber office in the Pampa Community Building or call 669-3241.

Quilts will be displayed and judged during the fair this year, Chisum said.

Clean-Up Campaign continues

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

We are still in the midst of the Clean-Up Campaign.

Although the campaign should have been completed last week, due to the weather we still lack about two-thirds of Wards 3 and 4.

The Sanitation Department will be working in Ward 3 all week and hopefully will move into Ward 4 within the next week to 10 days.

I would also request your assistance in helping to keep persons from scavenging or pilfering items from the dumpsters or at the landfill. State regulations and city ordinances both prohibit removing refuse items from dumpsters in the alley or from the landfill.

If you see someone doing this, please call our Code Enforcement Department at 665-1689 and report it so we can respond. This helps us to comply with state law and regulations.

The Summer Reading Program at Lovett Memorial Library is doing well.

The 6-week program is open to children 3 years of age through high school age. As of July 2, we had 533 children registered.

We have passed out 197 pool tickets for those reading 20 books and at least that many hamburger and hamburger and fries coupons from McDonald's for those reading 10 and 15 books respectively. Eighty buttons have been passed out for those reading 25 to 40 books, and 23 posters for those reading 50 books.

Our next class program for those in the reading program is scheduled for 10 a.m. Wednesday at the library and will cover animals and animal control. Our final party is scheduled for Wednesday, July 15, at 10 a.m.

If any of your children are still interested in participating in the Summer Reading Program through the library, please call Lovett Memorial Library at 665-3981.

Both Marcus Sanders Swimming Pool and the M.K. Brown

Swimming Pool are now open seven days a week from 1 to 6 p.m. In addition to these hours, the M.K. Brown Pool is open for Family Night each Monday and Tuesday evening from 7 to 9 p.m.

The M.K. Brown Pool also is available to be rented for private parties Wednesday through Sunday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. If you are interested in a pool party, call Jackie Harper at the Parks and Recreation Department office at 665-0909.

In recent weeks a number of car burglaries have occurred in Pampa.

In most cases, entry into the vehicles have been made by way of a side window. A variety of items have been taken, including guns, radar detectors, stereo equipment, cash and tools, with losses estimated in the thousands of dollars.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for these burglaries.

If you have any information about any of these burglaries or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

Sometime between Saturday, June 6, at 8 a.m. and Monday, June 8, at 7:30 a.m., a red trailer was removed from 200 E. Brown.

The trailer is a 4-wheel, double axle 16 feet in length with brown wood side rails. Total loss is estimated at $800.

Crime Stoppers will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this theft.

If you have any information about this theft or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

Rewards are available for other crimes not reported in this announcement.

The board of directors for Crime Stoppers of Pampa urges citizen involvement in reporting crimes in our community.

Police searching for car stopped by slain officer

SUGAR LAND (AP)—A search was under way today for a small, foreign-made car they believed to be involved in the fatal shooting of a Sugar Land police officer.

A police spokesman said Sgt. Ronald D. Slockett was killed early Saturday following a routine traffic stop, making him the first officer within the department killed in the line of duty.

The officer had radioed that he was stopping a car bearing a license number that turned out to be registered to a Houston leasing company for a light-colored, two-door 1987 Toyota, Assistant Chief Ernest Taylor said. He said the car had been leased to a Houston man.

"We're looking for that vehicle and the occupants of that vehicle for investigation of capital murder," Taylor said.

Anyone who should spot the vehicle to contact local police or Sugar Land police and take no action themselves, he said.

"The occupants of this vehicle should be considered extremely dangerous," Taylor said.

North

The White House refused to comment on a Miami Herald report Sunday that North participated in plans for an unofficial government operating outside the traditional cabinet departments and agencies. The newspaper, quoting congressional and administration sources, said North drafted a secret contingency plan that called for suspending the Constitution during a national crisis.

North's wife, Betsy, said in an interview with Life magazine that her husband is looking forward to his appearance. "He's not bitter," Mrs. North said.

The committees are likely to focus intently on evidence of an apparent coverup attempt, including the so-called "shredding party" conducted last November by North, his secretary and an aide as the Justice Department prepared to examine their White House documents.

Trash being tapped as methane gas source

DALLAS (AP) — The nation's garbage dumps may contain an untapped source of energy in the form of methane gas, according to waste management companies that are drilling for fuel in trash dumps.

"It's like a giant Hefty bag out there, and we're punching holes in the bag," said Charles Fiedler, district engineer for Waste Management, which is planning to drill for methane at a suburban Lewisville landfill in January.

In the process, wells are sunk into clay-sealed dumps in an effort to tap pockets of methane gas produced from decaying garbage. The gas is then piped to a plant where it is generated into electricity.

Waste Management, which also is considering exploration at garbage dumps in Fort Worth, Austin and Houston, is one of four major companies nationwide that is experimenting with converting methane into electricity. The Oak Brook, Ill.-based company contracts with several cities to collect and sell the landfill-derived methane.

In a typical operation, the garbage in a clay-sealed landfill is allowed to decompose for one to two years. Exploratory wells are drilled to determine how much methane is developing. When a sufficient amount is present, the gas is pumped out and piped to a generating plant to be turned into electricity. In many cases, on-site generating plants are built.

In its pure form, methane is equivalent to natural gas in its heating power and is used in exactly the same way, industry officials said. The raw gas when collected contains about 55 percent methane, with most of the rest carbon dioxide and traces of impurities. The methane must be separated before being generated into electricity.

By pumping the gas off, the potentially explosive buildup of the highly flammable methane and the emission of harmful vapors into the air is prevented.

Methane often contains harmful impurities, such as the known carcinogens benzene and vinyl chloride, said Joan Siegal, supervisor of landfill services for GSF Inc., which operates 12 methane-generating plants nationwide and is testing the McCommas Bluff Sanitary Landfill in Dallas for possible drilling.

"It takes a waste product that would normally vent into the atmosphere and creates a useful product out of it," she said.

It takes about 14 million tons of trash to produce 5 million square feet of raw gas, which generates 120,000 kilowatts of electricity per day, enough to supply only 10,000 homes.

"Landfill gas, at best, would probably not meet more than 5 percent of the energy needs of the country," Siegal said. "With today's oil and gas prices, landfill gas is not a very hot commodity, but it was in the late '70s with the energy crisis." Oil prices in the late '70s reached $25 to $30 a barrel, compared with about $19 a barrel in 1987.

Siegal believes OPEC's agreement to limit oil production will benefit the methane gas industry. "We believe the price of gas will go up, and that will help this industry," she said.

Fourth ends with red, white and blue against summer sky

By The Associated Press

Texans celebrated the Fourth of July with backyard outings, fireworks, parades, the country tones of Willie Nelson and the beat of the Beach Boys.

The traditional Fourth of July Willie Nelson picnic bash drew crowds estimated at between 20,000 and 30,000 at a truck-stop city on Interstate 35 called Carl's Corner.

Carl Cornelius, who is mayor and judge of the town he helped create, said the picnic was a total success.

"I think it's a total success (because) everybody's happy," he said. "It didn't cost me anything — except $1,071,000."

Speaking at an impromptu press conference midway through the picnic, Nelson said the crowd was big enough for a repeat performance next year at Carl's Corner.

"I really feel at home here," he said, noting that his hometown of Abbott was only a short drive down I-35.

Nelson also announced plans for Farm Aid III, which will be held Sept. 19 in Lincoln, Neb., and has a tentative lineup of Bruce Hornsby and the Range, Bon Jovi, Neil Young, John Cougar Mellencamp, Waylon Jennings, Kris Kristofferson, Merle Haggard and Emmylou Harris.

Nelson dedicated this year's Fourth of July picnic to the truck drivers of America, who are having the same type of problems as farmers.

Welcoming the crowd to "Willie What's-His-Name Picnic," Nelson, dressed in a black Farm Aid T-shirt, black jeans and a headband, took the stage shortly after 10 a.m., rolling into some of his standards in a 30-minute set.

Concert-goers had to wait until the evening hours to hear some of the big names such as Kris Kristofferson, The Fabulous Thunderbirds and Bruce Hornsby.

Occasionally cloudy skies and a constant breeze made the 90-degree heat bearable for most picnic-goers, picnic organizers said.

Free cups of Gatorade were provided on tables near the rear of the audience, but 150 water spigots drew the biggest crowds, as listeners loaded up cups with free water and doused themselves and neighbors.

Bruce Whitten, a medical supervisor from Allyn Ambulance Service of Houston said that by late afternoon, 110 people had received first aid, primarily for heat-related problems. Four were taken to area hospitals for treatment, one for a drug overdose, one for an ankle injury and the others for dehydration, he said.

The imported California tones of the Beach Boys played on the shores of Austin's Town Lake, dueling with the Austin Symphony who played on the opposite side of the lake.

Ba-ba-ba, Ba-Barbara Ann on the left. Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture on the right. Traffic all around.

A Midland crowd estimated at 15,000 celebrated Independence Day with sun, music from the Charlie Daniels Band, and glittering fireworks provided free by organizers of "Live Again Midland," billed as the Permian Basin's own Fourth of July party.

A few people had to be treated for heat exhaustion in the 101-degree heat, said Sue Jones with the American Red Cross.

Marian Barker, who moved to Midland from Oregon, said she was amazed by the large turnout.

"I'm not familiar with your country music yet, but some of it is very good," she said of the bands which performed, which included Janie Fricke, Mason-Dixon, and The Shades. "But it is a little too hot for me."

Other activities around the state ranged from jet-ski races in Sweetwater to tobacco- and watermelon seed-spitting contests in Clyde.

Abilene had its annual Boomtown festivities, hot air balloon rides and massive fireworks display at the Taylor County Fairgrounds.

In Brownwood there were armadillo and raft races while Snyder held its first Fourth of July music contest.

More than 13,000 thousand Tyler residents filled the city's Rose Stadium and the surrounding area for the city's fireworks display.

The cornerstone of Arlington's celebration was the arrival of more than 100 antique cars racing from California's Disneyland to Disney World in Florida in the Great American Race.

Saragosa struggles to rebuild

SARAGOSA (AP) — Many residents of Saragosa are poor farm laborers unable to recover by themselves from the May 22 tornado that killed 30 and leveled most of the West Texas community's homes and stores.

But volunteers from near and far have vowed to help rebuild the unincorporated rural town. Little by little, it is being done.

Most of the debris has been cleared — the tattered remains of scores of houses, the Catholic Church, the school, the post office, the general store, the community center and battered cars.

A new community center — across the road from the old town — is being constructed on Reeves County land by out-of-towners.

Within two months, once the community is platted and land ownership is determined, houses may cover the bare land that was marred by debris and remembered in grief and pain.

An estimated 70 of Saragosa's 118 houses and other buildings were destroyed when the tornado struck Saragosa, which had a population of about 300.

Venturing into unknown of my past

I'm not here right now. Car and kitty cat willing, I am now well on my way to Oklahoma City to recapture a bit of my lost youth and hopefully tie up some loose ends from 10 years ago.

After a decade of disco, day care centers, oil patch booms and busts, Star Wars sagas and altered ambitions, the Deer Creek Super Soul Seniors of 77 are getting together again.

I admit, though, that I'm looking at the reunion with mixed feelings.

I obviously want to see what my old classmates are up to. I know that our head cheerleader Kathy Hamlet is now an architect or something in Washington, D.C. (Why couldn't she be a motel maid in Washington, D.C.? It's less intimidating.) I know that Loretta, our Christmas Festival Queen, worked for a while at a cemetery and handled the burial of our sixth-grade band director about a year after we graduated.

I know that David, Debbie, Terri, Tim and Karen (who used to deliberately bump me into hall lockers in the ninth grade) ended up going to college with me. I know that Kimi, the basketball captain I used to love to hate, later lived in the same apartment complex with me after college and is now selling houses in the Dallas area.

And I can't wait to tell some of my classmates about life as a small-town newspaper reporter and all the adventures I go on here in the Eastern Panhandle.

Will these "city folks" be able to fathom what it's like in a part of the country where one town is so small, the city office is located next to the courthouse boiler room?

Will they believe it when I tell them how the people here can two-step to anything from the Bangles to Motley Crue and do it so well that it looks like that's how these songs were supposed to be danced to? (And who said they weren't? I'd like to see someone slam dance to the Judds.)

Will they be surprised that the girl who dropped out of basketball class after one week now covers prep-basketball and enjoys it? Will they understand no pass-no play, Cow Calling, double-mugging, Peeking at Pampa, five-person girls' basketball (Oklahoma is the only state that still plays six-on-six; we can't all be civilized), doing ten laps around the whole inside of a shopping mall in 30 minutes?

Then again, will they care? As the days get closer to our Friday night bash,

Off Beat

By Cathy Spaulding

I'm beginning to get nervous.

To put it mildly, let's just say I stayed sober and drug-free through high school. I attribute that to fear as much as high moral standards. I never missed curfew, never had Mom disapprove of my dates, never partied — I never knew there were any parties.

My workmates reassure me that after 10 years, my classmates will all have a change of heart, and I won't feel like I just beamed in from a Klingon vessel. But I still have a gut feeling that — with most of my classmates married or at least attached — I'll spend most of the evening alone milking a drink at my table.

There is also the fear that my classmates have all been more successful in their careers and in romantic encounters than I have been. As nice as the sunsets and the people and the ladybugs are out here, Gray County is not glamorous like Washington, D.C., California or even Iowa. And covering school board meetings is not as exciting as being an architect or a psychologist and raking in those greenbacks.

They'll all look smashing in their Ralph Laurens or Liz Claibornes and I'll show up wearing a Sears special and zits.

After all these years in Texas, will I be able to go to a party where nobody is doing a two-step? This is, after all, the class that grew up with the Hustle and the Bus Stop. They may not know what it's like to scoot boots.

Nonetheless, with a new hair-do and a new knock-em-dead party dress (under $35), I will venture into the unknown of my past. While folks here are rodeoing, hopefully I'll be having a good time at the Edmond Sheraton.

Unless my most nagging fear comes true: What if I didn't get my registration in on time?

An alien runs through El Paso railroad yards Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Wave of aliens continues

EL PASO (AP) — Train hoppers from Mexico aren't about to stop their illegal immigration even though 18 men suffocated in the sweltering heat of an airtight boxcar, a veteran railroad employee said.

"This is a wave. It's a tidal wave," said Bobby Harris, a switchman who has seen hundreds cross the Rio Grande in a single hour during his years in El Paso's freight yards.

"This is the land of plenty for anyone who has lived in Mexico all their lives and we'll always have people coming across to score a good job," the 15-year Southern Pacific employee said Sunday.

William G. Harrington, assistant chief of the El Paso sector of the Border Patrol, said more than 100 aliens were arrested in local freight yards Saturday.

On Thursday, one of his agents found 18 bodies in a blood-splattered boxcar on a routine train stop in Sierra Blanca, 90 miles to the east. One man who had been locked into the Missouri Pacific boxcar the evening before by a smuggler known as "El Chapulin" or the Grasshopper, survived. Two of the dead were believed to be the Grasshopper's helpers.

Family members, many of them traveling from Central Mexico and others from the U.S. interior, arrived at the border through the weekend to view photographs of the dead and identify their loved ones.

Fifteen of the victims had been identified by late Sunday, Harrington said. The names of only 13 were immediately available.

Mexican consulate spokesman Heriberto Spindola said bodies could begin their trip south as early as today.

Mexican government planes will fly the bodies from Juarez to an airport in the state of Aguascalientes, consulate officials said, and from there the remains will be taken by motor vehicle to their respective hometowns.

All of the 15 identified victims are from either Pabellon de Arteaga in Aguascalientes, and the Zacatecas cities of Ojo Caliente and El Saucito, officials said.

The Mexican government is arranging and paying for the return of the bodies because their families cannot afford the expense, said consulate spokesman Beatriz Lopez. A Juarez funeral home donated the caskets, and the government is buying cages to hold the caskets during the trip.

"Even the ones that are not identified will be sent back to Mexico," Spindola said Sunday. "There is no use for them to be here."

"Mostly they were good-looking people," he said. "They do not look like peasants. It's a shame."

Border Patrol Sector Chief Mike Williams said the patrol can't check every boxcar as it leaves El Paso's freight yards, and is doing its best with limited resources.

Harrington said illegal aliens determined to sneak into the country's interior by rail will be undaunted by the deaths.

"It won't change. I don't know why it should. Until there's a better reason than a few fellows getting locked in, I don't see it slowing down," Harrington said.

New waterfall attracts wedding

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — When officials dedicated a new man-made waterfall six weeks ago to replace the natural namesake that washed away 101 years ago, they half hoped it would help make the city a honeymoon capital.

Newlyweds haven't been overrunning the city, but ground-keepers say a wave of waterfall weddings has begun.

Mary Claus, a Wichita Falls waitress, surprised husband-to-be Jay Pierce Saturday by having the best man to drop him off at the 54-foot fall, where the rest of the wedding party was waiting, instead of the church.

"She's come up with some crazy stuff, but never nothing like this," Claus' teen-age son, Keith, said of his mother's surprise decision to move the wedding to the base of the falls.

Several thousand attended the waterfall's May dedication which featured music, speeches, people dressed as cartoon characters, hot dogs from Australia, jet flyovers and a visit from the mayor of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

The visiting mayor poured water from Niagara Falls onto a one-ton rock that was transported from the larger falls as a gift to the city of about 100,000 near the Oklahoma border in central North Texas.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Winds of change blow for Koreans

The disorders in South Korea are particularly disturbing for Americans, whose affinity for that country is based not only upon a thriving trade relationship but in the shared sacrifices of repelling communist aggression in the Korean War. Moreover, 40,000 U.S. troops stand guard in South Korea to enforce an uneasy armistice.

The recurring confrontation between radical students and the police in South Korea has mushroomed into a national crisis during recent days because the protests have been joined by the middle class, including the Roman Catholics.

Still, there is yet no Korean parallel to the mass uprising that overthrew the Marcos regime in the Philippines. Of South Korea's more than 1 million college students, the number of demonstrators is 60,000. With twice that number of policemen and 10 times as many soldiers at his command, President Chun Doo-hwan is in no danger of being overthrown.

Yet the trouble is serious enough, with violent disorders spreading to cities and colleges across the country. The protests began when the ruling Democratic Justice Party endorsed President Chun's choice of Roh Tae-woo, an army crony, as its presidential candidate in this year's election.

What enraged South Koreans was Chun designated his successor after his government suspended electoral reforms. The election, scheduled in December, is so arranged as to assure victory for Roh and the Democratic Justice Party. Opposition leaders Kim Youngsam and Kim Dae-jung threaten to boycott the presidential elections unless a new constitution is in place beforehand.

In any event, Chun and his chosen successor have decided there will be no fundamental political changes until after the 1988 Olympic Games are held in Seoul.

Meanwhile, the cycle of protests and repression continue with more than 2,600 persons being rounded up and 40 opposition leaders being held under house arrest.

Nevertheless, the unpopular Chun is not a corrupt, oppressive tyrant on the Ferdinand Marcos scale. He presided relatively free elections for the National Assembly two years ago and he has promised to step down in February. If this happens as expected, it would be the first peaceful transfer of power in South Korea's struggle for self government since gaining independence from Japan after World War II.

The fundamental issue is whether South Korea can build a responsive form of self government to match its miraculous economic development. The immense assistance the United States might provide at this crucial juncture is not there because the Reagan administration is too distracted to react.

The South Korean disorders contrast wildly with the awful quiet of the prison and the grave in communist North Korea. That in itself is a measure of the freedom enjoyed by South Koreans, who are proving again Winston Churchill's axiom that democracy is the worst and most inefficient form of government except for all the others.

Explaining the 'debt crisis'

"By the end of 1985," says an ominous-sounding editorial in The Washington Post, "the United States had run up a foreign debt larger than Brazil's, Mexico's and Argentina's combined." Scary stuff. The Post says this debt threatens "an erosion of national control and power." Are we becoming the world's wealthiest Third World nation, at the mercy of foreign loan sharks?

Well, not quite. This is a case where terms can be misleading. "Incurring debt" is just another way of saying "attracting investment." In the past few years, the United States has attracted investment from around the globe because its economy has been growing steadily, unlike a lot of other Western nations, and because its outlook for future growth looks bright.

Contrary to popular mythology, borrowing is not an inherently suspicious activity. What counts is not how much money we borrow but what we do with it. The usual picture painted here is of a dissolute America borrowing furiously to finance extravagant consumption. In fact, what has been occurring is an investment surge. Fixed investment of all kinds, according to the economic consulting firm Polycomics, has risen by 11 percent as a share of gross national product since 1980.

Foreigners are financing new plants, office buildings and equipment because they expect to earn a profitable return. When Mazda puts up a factory in Michigan, it doesn't acquire claims on the future earnings of Americans — as the debt worriers imply. It only acquires an opportunity to make money by producing things that consumers want.

Given a choice between factories owned by Americans and factories owned by foreigners, we'd prefer the former, because the earnings would stay here. But foreigners don't impose a burden on Americans by building plants that otherwise wouldn't exist.

Why are the foreign funds flowing here? For the simple reason that our economic vitality creates opportunities for making money that can't be found elsewhere. Investment rates in every other major industrial country, including Japan, have actually declined since 1980. The Japanese aren't saying less than before. They are merely investing in the United States instead of at home. How can that be such a terrible thing for us?

There are explanations for America's new status as a net debtor. One is the phenomenal boom in the stock market since 1982, which has dramatically raised the value of foreign investments. If the stock market hadn't soared, in other words, our foreign debt would be lower. It's hard to make a case that we'd be better off.

At the same time, the value of some American investments abroad has dropped, as it has become clear that past loans to Brazil, Mexico and Argentina aren't going to be fully repaid. If loans like those still were being made at a pace they were made in the 1970s, we'd be less of a debtor, but we'd also be in worse economic shape.

One fear is that our reliance on foreign capital makes us a hostage to the whims of investors abroad. As the Post puts it, "If this country were to slide toward a recession, one traditional remedy would be to drop interest rates. But to keep financing its trade deficit, and to keep those invested billions of foreigners' dollars from fleeing, this country now has to hold its interest rates up."

Come again? If the United States has a recession, it won't have to finance a trade deficit because it won't have one. People without jobs don't buy many imports. Our last trade surplus occurred in 1981, during the last recession.

Recessions also have a way of lowering interest rates by reducing the demand for credit. But if interest rates drop, the foreigners already holding debt will all flee, won't they? No, because they won't have anywhere to go. If the United States falls into a recession, it will drag the other industrial countries along with it. The result will be a borrower's market for capital, leaving few options for foreign investors.

If there is a reason to worry over the latest figures, it is more in what they say about the rest of the world than in what they say about the United States. The U.S. has made itself a magnet for capital by cutting taxes, easing government regulation and slowing inflation. If investment in Japan or Western Europe or Latin America is declining, it is because they are going in the wrong direction on economic policy, which has costs for us as well as them.

That isn't to say that the United States is doing everything right. But if our growing debt were so dangerous, no one would be interested in lending to us. People in the rest of the world are investing here out of confidence in our basic economic health. Maybe they're on to something.

Document demands actions

Col. Oliver North has insisted that his testimony in his behalf be public testimony. He wants you to hear what he has to say.

He does not trust us media people to report, digest or distort what he has to say. Nor would he want pertinent portions omitted.

It happens. Example:

Last June 24, 1987, during the congressional probe of the contra-versy, Rep. Henry Hyde, D-Ill., dropped a bombshell.

And if you didn't hear it, you didn't know about it.

Because there was no mention of it on that evening's prime time news and no mention of it on any of the major wire services.

Thus TV and radio stations and newspapers across the nation had no way to know.

That Rep. Hyde had displayed a document officially designated 22 USCS 1732 relating to the "Release of Citizens Imprisoned by Foreign Governments."

The document is very specific. In essence it says that when any American citizen is held by any foreign government it's up to our president to get them out — whatever he has to do.

To justify my paraphrase, let me quote directly from the document:

"Whenever it is made known to the president that any citizen of the United States has been unjustly deprived of his liberty by or under the authority of any foreign government, it shall be the duty of the president..."

Please note, it does not say the president "may" do so-and-so. It says, "It shall be his duty..."

Back to the document: "It shall be the duty of the president forthwith to demand of that government the reasons of such imprisonment and, if it appears to be wrongful and in violation of the rights of American citizenship, the president shall forthwith demand the release of such citizen. If the release so demanded is unreasonable, the president shall use any means he may think necessary..."

Again, "The president shall use any means he may think necessary... as he may think necessary and proper to obtain or effectuate the release; and all these facts and proceedings relative thereto shall as soon as practicable be communicated by the president to the Congress."

On June 24 this document was grudgingly placed on the record by the committee chairman. This is a code passed by the Congress in 1868 — 120 years ago.

It was Congress that instructed the president to do whatever necessary to free hostages.

Why this document was never a banner headline across our nation I leave to your instinctive perceptivity, but this will help you understand why Col. North insisted that you hear his testimony directly from him.

Many situations require dose of humility

By Sarah Overstreet

I believe every adult needs a healthy dose of humiliation once in a while.

We're usually the ones doing the humiliating, and most often to people younger than we are. We're the ones leaving the bad tips to teenage waitresses because their bosses — other adults, in league with us — understaff their kitchens so badly that Carl Lewis couldn't sprint our lunches to us before they get cold.

When I was a teenager, staffing the front counter at a McDonald's dressed elegantly in mud-brown double-knit polyester, I believed fast food was invented for the express purpose of teaching teenagers how valuable adulthood was, if we could just live long enough to get there.

In fact, I think a lot of us use our vegetables and stayed off motorcycles just so we could get to the stage of life where we'd be the ones doing the humiliating. Someday, it would be us driving a kid up to the front door of school in a '63 Dodge Dart with one door held shut with clothesline rope, and tooting real loud when we discovered the hapless youth had left his sack lunch in the front seat. Someday, we'd be making the kid at the Auto Magic re-vacuum the back floorboards to get up the last of the Cheetos.

It's probably these sporadic shots of humility that keep us from making a teenager's young life so miserable that he comes straight from the Burger King to the liquor store, flips off his stupid-looking cap, bribes a wino into buying him some MD 20-20 and takes up his life's vocation right there between the dumpster and the Coors truck. I've just had my booster dose of humility.

All right, I'll admit maybe I shouldn't have gone into the law library of a major university wearing safari shorts, a denim midriff shirt and high-top athletic shoes. It's not an outfit to inspire awe in a librarian, no matter what the age. And perhaps I shouldn't have chosen as my companion a 38-year-old first-year law student who in a span of nine months had 20 years of "we shall overcome" replaced by "yes, sir."

It took the librarian about two minutes to discover our complete lack of Dewey decimal savvy, and she sent us to the basement like two pet dogs who'd just been discovered licking the neighbor's trash. We stepped over the three mop pails and the floor buffer and gazed up blindly at the moldy texts.

But it was while my friend was in another room failing to access the computer that I met my comeuppance. Standing on a step stool trying to replace the 16 volumes of California Appellate Reports I'd dragged down, one of the volumes tipped sideways and slipped down between the narrow metal bookshelves and the wall. Grabbing for it, the volume I held in my hand flew over my shoulder, and the other volumes on the shelf followed its brothers to where the human arm can't go. "Clunk! Fump! Pow! Ping!" The librarian ran in just in time to see my foot slip off the step stool and me land flatfooted on the ground. "ARE YOU OK?" she demanded, clearly hoping I wasn't.

Democrats: Still time to block Persian Gulf plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Navy warships prepare to carry out President Reagan's policy of protecting Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, congressional Democrats are trying to muster a consensus on how to block or delay the plan.

"I really don't think it's too late yet, but we don't have a lot of time," said Rep. Mike Lowry, D-Wash., as he tried to round up votes for his measure calling for a delay in the plan to protect the 11 tankers.

Lowry's proposal is scheduled for a vote Wednesday as the Democratic-controlled House considers a bill authorizing the Coast Guard budget. Meanwhile, the Democratic-run Senate is set to consider a resolution Tuesday asking Reagan to put his plan "in abeyance" for an indefinite period.

Congressional critics fear the president's plan will embroil the United States in the long-running Iran-Iraq war because Kuwait has aided Iraq. The worries increased after the May 17 attack by Iraq on the Navy frigate Stark that killed 37 U.S. sailors. Iraq says the attack was an accident.

On Sunday, White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker said the administration might reconsider its plan if the Soviet Union also leaves the Persian Gulf region.

"If the Soviets will remove theirs, perhaps we'll take a fresh look," Baker said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley." The Soviets have proposed removal of all foreign warships from the gulf.

Persian Gulf policy will likely dominate an agenda that will also see a third week of Senate debate over a far-reaching trade bill.

Although no starting date has been set for the gulf plan, administration officials have said it is likely to begin around July 15.

Reagan met with leaders of both parties last week and refused to delay the plan, leading Democrats to admit their chances were dim.

After dealing with the Persian Gulf issue, the Senate will again consider the trade bill, particularly key provisions on plant closings.

The legislation would force companies to notify employees of planned plant closings and take other actions to ease post-shutdown problems. Business leaders object to the proposals.

Once the plant-closing fight is resolved, the Senate still has to decide if it wants to increase retaliation against foreign trade practices it considers unfair.

Compromise on AIDS testing eludes insurance regulators

CHICAGO (AP) — State insurance regulators around the country say they are caught between insurers who want to test for exposure to AIDS before writing policies and high-risk groups that fear testing could lead to discrimination.

A Rand Corp. study last month said medical care for AIDS patients in the United States probably will cost more than $37 billion from mid-1986 through mid-1991, and might hit $113 billion under the worst conditions.

Possible solutions include forcing companies to insure AIDS victims and establishing statewide "pools" to insure high-risk groups, including male homosexuals, intravenous drug users and users of blood products.

Those plans could result in higher premiums for everyone or insolvency for some insurers, authorities said.

"It's really a problem of trying to find the proper balance between the legitimate interests of the insurance companies and the concerns of the public and community involved," said Connecticut Insurance Commissioner Peter W. Gillies, vice chairman of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners' committee on health and accident insurance.

Gay rights activists say efforts to control the disease may suffer if people are denied health and life insurance based on a test that indicates the presence of antibodies to acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The test means that the person has been exposed to the AIDS virus, but does not necessarily mean the person has AIDS or will ever develop it.

The insurance industry "uses the test as a weapon instead of a tool and thereby encourages fear about the test," said Benjamin Schatz, a lawyer with the San Francisco-based National Gay Rights Advocates.

The National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine estimated last year that the insurance industry already has paid a significant portion of the health-care costs associated with AIDS, from 13 percent to 65 percent in some hospitals.

The U.S. Public Health Service last year estimated the hospital-care costs per AIDS case at $46,000 to $92,000.

As of June 29, AIDS had struck 37,867 Americans, killing 21,776 of them, according to the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. The CDC estimates that the disease will strike 270,000 people by the end of 1991.

The NAIC, which met last week in Chicago, has issued guidelines for prohibiting insurers from questioning applicants about their sexual preference. Drafted by an advisory group representing both insurers and gay rights groups, the guidelines address some of the privacy and health-status issues raised by both sides.

Audit shows misuse of Army Corps of Engineers aircraft

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army Corps of Engineers has misused its emergency aircraft to fly officials at high cost to meetings and ceremonies around the world, sometimes improperly accompanied by their wives, an Army audit says.

"Virtually all of the flights were for routine matters and could have been accomplished with commercial aircraft," the Army Audit Agency said in a report released by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla.

"The average cost of using corps-owned aircraft was significantly higher than commercial flights ... to the same locations," the auditors said. "The corps should sell their aircraft and use commercial transportation."

The report said taxpayers could gain $6.4 million from the sale and eliminate $1 million a year in corps travel expenses.

The report, which is being disputed by the corps, focused on the three aircraft owned by the corps' civil division, which builds water development projects in this country and provides advice to other nations.

The auditors said the corps' brass told Congress that the aircraft, including a Washington-based, 14-passenger executive jet, are necessary for rapid response to emergencies and natural disasters and for visits to remote projects.

But in 1984, all but one of 254 flights "were for routine meetings, staff visits and inspections, training and ceremonies," according to the report. It said the corps could have cut its travel bills 71 percent by using commercial and charter flights.

And despite an Army policy discouraging use of government planes for overseas travel, the executive jet spent 52 percent of its flying hours winging to places like the South Pacific and Europe, the report said.

"Corps aircraft were improperly used to transport dependents of employees at government expense," according to the auditors, who said the problems cited in the report for 1984 and 1985 "were essentially unchanged" in 1986.

The report said that in June 1984, six dependents who were not authorized to travel at taxpayer expense accompanied five corps employees on an agency aircraft to Helsinki for a conference of the Permanent International Association of Navigational Congresses (PIANC).

At a House subcommittee hearing last week, Synar noted that the itinerary for wives included sightseeing, a fashion show and visits to an old cottage and a candy factory.

A corps official says the wives' presence was justified.

Baker: U.S. might reconsider gulf plan if Soviets leave area

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States might reconsider its plan to escort Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf if the Soviet Union also leaves the region, says a top Reagan administration official.

But White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker cautions that the United States will not allow the Soviets to gain the upper hand in the gulf.

"If the Soviets will remove theirs, perhaps we'll take a fresh look," Baker said Sunday. "But we're certainly not going to cede control of that region to the Soviet Union."

Baker's comments came during an interview on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley" program, two days after the Soviet Union called for withdrawal of all foreign warships from the gulf and condemned the U.S. military buildup there. The statement from the official Tass news agency did not make clear whether the Soviet Union was offering to withdraw its own warships.

The Soviets have leased Kuwait three Soviet-flagged tankers to afford them protection from Iranian attacks. Tass said the Soviet Union, which borders Iran, has a legitimate reason for having warships in the region.

Baker maintained that the United States also has a legitimate reason for a gulf presence.

"It is an unbroken commitment of the United States for many years, for decades, to see that the Persian Gulf does not become a Russian lake and that we do not let anyone interfere with our right of international transit through the Strait of Hormuz and in that region," Baker said.

The White House chief of staff supported efforts in the U.N. Security Council to bring about a cease-fire in the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war. The Soviets, in the Tass statement, also backed those efforts.

Santa Fe police man a roadblock near prison Sunday.

Search continues for escapees

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A multiple murderer who pole-vaulted out of prison with another killer and five other convicts got a lift from a motorist and may be headed for Oklahoma, says a Corrections Department spokesman.

About 200 law enforcement officers using helicopters and dogs today hunted the seven, who escaped from a maximum-security prison Saturday night by pulling a gun on a guard and wounding another, officials said.

Authorities also were looking for three killers who escaped Saturday from the State Prison of Southern Michigan in Jackson.

Roadblocks went up around Santa Fe as authorities conducted a manhunt within 10 miles of the Penitentiary of New Mexico, Corrections spokesman Don Caviness said Sunday night.

"We have no idea where any of the seven inmates are, with the possible exception that perhaps inmate (James) Kinslow is headed toward Oklahoma," Caviness said.

Kinslow got a ride around 2 a.m. Sunday, but the vehicle was involved in an accident about an hour later, Caviness said. The escapee told the driver he was wanted and was going to Clayton, nearly 170 miles northeast of Santa Fe, the spokesman said.

Kinslow, who was serving three life sentences for killing a woman and her two daughters, is from Wynnewood, Okla., and may be headed in that direction, Caviness said. Authorities in Oklahoma and Texas were alerted.

Tracking dogs indicated the convicts initially headed south toward Albuquerque, said Caviness.

The other escaped killer, William Wayne Gilbert, was urged Sunday to turn himself in by former Gov. Toney Anaya, who commuted Gilbert's death sentence and those of New Mexico's four other death row inmates before leaving office.

The escape from the prison began around 9 p.m. Saturday when Gilbert, mopping floors outside his cell, pulled a pistol on a guard, handcuffed him to a rail, and rushed the prison control center, opening the doors of the six others' cells, authorities said.

Guard Todd Wilson, who was in the control center, was shot in the shoulder and was hospitalized in good condition Sunday.

Stuffing bag with man, snakes is delayed

WARDEN, Wash. (AP) — An attempt to stuff a man and a record 250 rattlesnakes into a sleeping bag will just have to wait another year.

"Not enough snakes," Police Chief Bob Beisel said Sunday. Local people came up with only about 100 rattlers for attempt by snake handler Dave Estep of Corpus Christi, he said.

The police chief said Estep would try it next year and bring a passel of Texas rattlers if necessary. Beisel said some people had captured snakes but let them go after hearing that environmentalists had persuaded the state Game Department to withdraw a contest permit for the Warden Lions Club, sponsor of the Fourth of July rattlesnake roundup.

The Lions agreed not to bill the roundup as a contest and the celebration proceeded, with snake handling demonstrations, street dancing and concession stands selling cooked rattler and other fare.

Tuesday, July 7, 1987

Bold new ambitions will be awakened in you in the year ahead. You will try things you never dared to attempt previously, but what's more important, you'll succeed at what you set your mind to.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Two powerful factors that can enhance your earning potential will be enforced today. One is your desire to be helpful; the other is your pride in your work. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Friends will marvel at your organizational abilities today, especially if you're promoting a fun, social activity and there are assignments to be delegated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Present conditions may warrant giving a gentle prod to a member of your family who has been neglecting his duties lately.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If there isn't anything special on the agenda with friends today, don't wait for them to conceive something. Appoint yourself social director and swing into action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Focus your efforts and energies today on situations that could either add to your holdings or enhance your career in some fashion. Both are fertile fields.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're not apt to take a back seat in your involvements today. People who attempt to challenge your authority will discover this for themselves.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Some boldness on your part may be necessary to further your commercial interests today. You'll know if the stakes warrant it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This should be a very pleasant day for you, owing to your faculty for being able to get along with people from all walks of life. You'll find friends everywhere.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even though outside influences might be a trifle disturbing today, they'll have small effect on you and the fulfillment of your ambitions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Participate in some type of activity today that is both mentally and physically invigorating. If it has elements of friendly competition, all the better.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be victimized by present conditions if they displease you. Take the bull by the horns today and make changes to alter the undesirable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Have faith in your judgment today, especially if you have to make a bold decision. Nothing will be resolved if you continue to sidestep a frustrating issue.

Events, technology can help date antiques

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Sometimes events and technology come together to make a new product possible. Antiques can often be dated by this joining of events.

After a heated debate in 1782 the eagle, not the turkey or an Indian maiden, was selected as the official emblem on the United States Great Seal. Soon after the eagle was chosen, manufacturers in Europe began sending dishes to the new country decorated with the American eagle.

Transfer printing became an inexpensive and fast way to decorate porcelain in the last years of the 18th century and the beginning of the 19th century. Yellow-glazed earthen wares were often decorated with appropriate black designs applied by the transfer method.

Political events were often commemorated on pitchers. The eagle, sailing ships, naval and military heroes, and other patriotic symbols were used on many pieces sold to America from 1810 to 1820.

The bright yellow-glazed English wares lost favor by the 1830s, but the eagle as a symbol of the United States remained in style. So to date a transfer decorated eagle design yellow-ware pitcher is easy. It must have been made between 1782 and about 1830.

Q. Was iron garden furniture owned by average home owners, or was it just used by the very rich in the 19th century?

A. Cast iron garden furniture was very popular in America in the 19th century.

There were over 1500 foundries making furniture by 1850. Garden seats, fountains, gates, fences, urns and even large animals were made for the prosperous middle-class home owner.

The iron garden pieces remained popular until the turn of the century when less ornate styles gained favor. The Victorians painted the furniture white, black or dark green.

Q. Over the years our son has collected hundreds of matchbooks. When we moved to our new house the movers would not carry them because they were flammable.

What is the correct thing to do? Does the collectibility decrease without the matches?

A. We checked with some collectors who own hundreds of thousands of matchbooks. They always remove the matches because the staple that holds the matches may rust and spoil the striker. This can lower the value of the cover.

Remove the staple with a pen knife. A staple remover does not seem to work. If you must move soon and do not have time to do this, snip off the top of the matches and remove the lower stapled part later.

It is never a good idea to keep flammable collectibles. Matches, bullets, caps, war souvenirs, fireworks and early movie film should be properly stored or altered.

If you are in doubt about any of these, talk to your local fire department.

Q. My cut glass bowl is marked "Tuthill." Does that mean anything?

A. The Tuthill Glass Company worked in Middletown, N.Y., from 1902 to 1923. They made good quality cut glass. It is in demand with collectors.

Q. My lava lamp from 1969 is almost an antique. We shook it when it was hot and now it will not make moving bubbles. Can I re-new it?

A. Lava lamps are filled with oil. They are still being made. You cannot fix yours but perhaps you could buy a new one.

TIP: Try to rearrange your furniture once a year to avoid nonceable sun fading.

Man wants spanking; needs therapist

DEAR ABBY: My problem is so personal that I have not been able to tell anyone about it. I am a 29-year-old unmarried man in the military. While growing up, my mother seldom spanked me — even when I deserved it. The children I grew up with received more spankings than I did — and I always thought I should have been spanked more than I was. Now that I'm a grown man, this desire to be spanked is still on my mind.

On one occasion, I thought of asking a young woman I was dating to spank me, but I didn't have the nerve. I've heard that there are places where a guy can go to get a spanking, but I can't find any where I'm stationed. Part of me says that although I would not enjoy the pain, I would feel a lot better if I were on the receiving end of a good spanking. Another part of me says the whole thing is off the wall, and I should forget it.

Abby, are there other men who want to be spanked by women? And what do you recommend for this problem?

WANTS TO BE SPANKED

DEAR WANTS: My psychiatric expert tells me that the desire to be spanked is a form of masochism that is often linked with feelings of severe guilt — usually about sexuality. You say you always thought you should have been punished more than you were, strongly suggesting unconscious guilt. A professional therapist can help you understand the source of your guilt, and hopefully resolve it so you will no longer feel the need to be spanked. (You are attacking your problem from the wrong end.)

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Count me among those who prefer to give cash gifts. I have 14 grandchildren scattered around the country, and I have trouble remembering their names, much less their sizes and ages, so I just send them all checks for their birthdays, Christmas, graduation, etc.

A few always write to tell me what they purchased with my check. I've even received Polaroid pictures of "my" gifts. Now, isn't that thoughtful? Some write to say, "Gram, I put your money in the bank for college."

DULUTH GRANDMA

DEAR GRAM: It's a lovely gesture, and a small gift to the giver to know how one's gift of cash was used.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you, Abby, for defending gifts of cash. I am on Social Security, and when I get through the monthly bills, and the holiday, birthday, graduation, shower and wedding gifts, I have nothing left.

When Mother's Day, Christmas or my birthday comes along, a gift of cash looks good to me. Abby, I want to cry when I answer a knock on my door and see a florist messenger with one of those floral arrangements. It will be dead in a week. I can't eat it, wear it, or even find room for it in my tiny apartment.

We senior citizens have plenty of time to shop, we adore bargains, and we don't need any necklaces, sexy nightgowns, perfumes or even magazine subscriptions.

I'd rather have a dollar bill than a useless gift worth 10 times that amount. Please put this in your column. I know I speak for many.

HARD UP AT 72

DEAR HARD UP: You conveyed two important messages. One: Many seniors prefer cash, so adding to their worldly goods may be more a burden than a blessing. Two: Younger readers, start saving now for your golden years. People are living longer, but not necessarily better, unless they have wisely provided for their old age.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Summer fun can mean swimmer's ear

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For many people, the most relaxing summer days are spent lying in the sun, then cooling off with a swim.

Yet these activities can lead not only to sunburn, but also to a painful ear inflammation commonly known as swimmer's ear.

Fortunately, like sunburn, swimmer's ear can easily be treated and prevented, according to Dr. Zaven H. Jabourian, an instructor at Thomas Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia.

Swimmer's ear is caused by increased humidity in the ear canal, Jabourian said. This moisture swells the skin within the ear, resulting in swollen, blocked pores, he said. "The lining of the ear canal is an extension of the skin covering the rest of the body," Jabourian said. "Just as the skin on your hands becomes wrinkled and swollen when soaked in water, the skin in the ear canal reacts to moisture similarly."

As dirt and bacteria collect in the ear, pus forms and causes the painful blockage of swimmer's ear, he said.

Jabourian said people may increase their susceptibility to swimmer's ear by manipulating their ear canals. Maneuvering the ear with a foreign object such as a cotton swab often causes damage that later develops into swimmer's ear, he said.

People who suspect they have developed swimmer's ear probably have it, Jabourian said, because the painful symptoms and drainage are quick to appear and hard to ignore.

A sure test of the ailment is to pull gently on the outer ear lobe, Jabourian said. This maneuver is extremely painful to anyone with swimmer's ear, he said.

At the first sign of pain, the most important thing is to consult an ear, nose and throat specialist, Jabourian said. He advised against self-treatment.

"People often assume that the cause of ear pain is wax, but attempting to clean out the wax may cause more damage. Instead, you should see a doctor," he said.

Usually, a doctor will suction the ear canal to remove the dirt and bacteria, then prescribe antibiotic ear drops, Jabourian said. During this treatment, the ear should be kept dry while bathing or showering, he said. The ear should heal in about 10 days, Jabourian said.

To prevent swimmer's ear, Jabourian advises people to keep their ears as dry as possible, so water does not accumulate. After each swim, water in the ear can be evaporated by putting a few drops of isopropyl alcohol in each ear, he said.

Swimmer's ear also can develop from showering or bathing, so Jabourian advises those who are prone to swimmer's ear to wear a shower cap or earplugs whenever they are in contact with water.

If swimmer's ear is ignored and left untreated, the condition can become severe.

"Symptoms ignored for a long period of time can cause permanent damage, but in most cases swimmer's ear is just a temporarily painful condition," Jabourian said. "Since swimmer's ear is easily prevented and treated, it does not have to ruin your summer."

Mothers talk more with daughters; find raising sons more complicated

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Women communicate more freely with their daughters than with their sons, and find raising sons more complicated, according to an associate professor at the State University of New York at Binghamton.

Linda Forcey, a sociologist who teaches interdisciplinary studies, says there has been little research or analysis on how women see relationships with sons, particularly with sons over the age of 16.

"There is no mother-son equivalent to 'Pornoy's Complaint,' which explores the relationship from a son's point of view," she says.

Her recently published book, "Mothers and Sons: Toward an Understanding of Responsibility," is "an effort to listen, really listen, to what mothers at all economic levels are saying about their view of the responsibility of raising sons."

Although women often are labeled "peacekeepers" within the family, particularly between fathers and sons, Forcey says they are increasingly uncomfortable in that role, and even resent it.

"Women speak in a different voice ... and make moral judgments in a different way than fathers," she says. "They tend to be more conciliatory and compromising."

"They frequently are so concerned about rocking the boat in the father and son relationship that unfortunately, the price they often pay within their families is the loss of any voice at all."

She says mothers of sons feel constrained because they have been conditioned to believe it is their responsibility to raise sons who are "masculine" in the traditional sense of the word.

Many encourage their sons to enter the military, yet Forcey's research indicates women often have ambivalent feelings about those traditional masculine values.

Her study of 120 mothers turned up some "joyous stories" of blossoming relationships between women and their sons, particularly among those who have begun to challenge the traditional mother role, she says.

"Women who have developed their own identities, through education, outside activities and work, are becoming more at ease and communicating better with their sons," she says.

Most important, Forcey adds, "women are questioning the myth that they alone are responsible for the well-being of their sons. This is the necessary beginning of true friendship and more realistic expectations between mothers and sons."

("Mothers and Sons" is published by Praeger-Greenwood, New York.)

BECAUSE HE CARES...

Advertisers make many claims for their products. But the real proof of any product is performance. Many times products don't live up to their billing and all can be replaced by something better.

Jesus, however, is real. The claims He makes are valid. He won't be replaced by anyone better. Of himself He said, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life..." Jesus also said, "I am the bread of life; he who comes to Me shall not hunger, and he who believes in Me shall never thirst."

If we want to believe in something, let's believe in Jesus. He never fails to keep a promise.

WE CARE.

Cash checks Lendl

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — When Pat Cash whispered, "We showed them," into the ear of his coach, it said everything about the Australian's crushing title victory at Wimbledon.

Written off as a youngster and injured for most of 1985 and part of last year, Cash's 7-6, 6-2, 7-5 victory over Ivan Lendl Sunday was a triumph of will over adversity.

"I've been told that whatever happened, I would never make a tennis player out of Pat Cash," Ian Barclay said after his pupil had dispatched Lendl, the world's No. 1 player, with ease on a broiling Centre Court.

"People said his temperament would never allow it. But he's proved them all wrong. We've both proved them wrong," Barclay said.

Barclay has been guiding Cash since the brash Australian was 11 years old.

Once ranked as high as seventh in the world, Cash plummeted on the computer when a back injury kept him off the tour. Then he underwent an emergency appendectomy 17 days before last year's Wimbledon.

"It's extremely disappointing because I worked really hard," said Lendl, who lost to West Germany's Boris Becker in last year's final, also in straight sets. "But I will be back for many years to come. I still have my chance."

In the women's championship Saturday, Martina Navratilova won her record sixth consecutive Wimbledon singles crown, and her eighth overall, by beating Steffi Graf 7-5, 6-3.

It was Navratilova's first tournament title of the year and snapped a 45-match winning streak for Graf, the 18-year-old West German playing in her first Wimbledon final.

Cash gave the strong Czechoslovak a lesson in grass-court play.

Lendl went into the championship match a firm favorite. He had a 4-1 record against Cash, who was appearing in his first Wimbledon final and had never won a Grand Slam event.

But Lendl struggled from the start, saving five break points in the second game of the match.

Cash served brilliantly, returned just as well, volleyed like a demon — even at ankle-level — and exploited Lendl's unpolished grass-court game.

"Obviously, another year is gone," Lendl said. "If I'm running out of time to win here, I don't know. I think I'm still improving and I will be back for many years to come. I still have my chances."

Cash, who was seeded 11th, automatically will move into the top 10 in the world after his victory, which netted him $220,100. He came into the tournament ranked 13th.

He said his feelings about being champion were mixed.

"I am thrilled to pieces obviously but I am just mentally exhausted," Cash said. "But I'm also a little scared. I don't want my life to change too much."

The men's doubles title was won by Americans Ken Flach and Robert Seguso, while Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia and West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch took the women's doubles.

Britain scored a rare success at Wimbledon when Jeremy Bates and Jo Durie won the mixed doubles, the first all-British success since Virginia Wade's singles title 10 years ago.

Strange victory

Curtis Strange holds up the Canadian Open trophy, an Eskimo carving, after winning the $153,000 first prize at Glen Abbey in Oakville. Strange shot a 3-under-par final round 69 Sunday, and set a course record in the Open with a 276.

Astros' Scott wins tenth

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It wasn't one of Mike Scott's better games, but with the help of reliever Larry Andersen, the Houston Astros' right-hander won his 10th game of the season by defeating the Philadelphia Phillies 8-2.

Scott pitched six innings, allowed two runs on six hits and struck out six Sunday. Scott, who has only lost four games this season, also gave up a career high seven walks.

Andersen allowed no hits in three innings, but walked four in a game in which the Phillies left 15 on base.

"Nothing was working real well," Scott said. "My split-fingered fastball wasn't very effective, and I was up in the strike zone a lot. I was fortunate to get away with all those walks against a good-hitting team like Philadelphia."

The Phillies say that's not the only thing Scott got away with.

After the game, Phillies manager Lee Elia showed five baseballs he said had been used in the game. Each ball had obvious scuff marks.

"I don't know how you're going to catch him and we're not going to make a federal case out of it, but there's reality," said Elia, pointing to the baseballs.

"If you talk to the umpires, they just say he has good stuff."

Losing pitcher Kevin Gross, 6-8, agreed with his manager.

"He's been doing it for two years," said Gross. "I used one of his baseballs in the fourth inning, and the ball really dropped down."

"From now on, I'll let him scuff the ball and use it every chance I can."

Scott is getting accustomed to the charges against him, and just shrugs off the accusations.

"If they want to check the balls, let the hitters check at the plate, and tell the umpire, and not bring them (the baseballs) out of the dugout," he said.

Scott left with a 4-2 lead and an RBI single by Denny Walling made it 5-2 in the seventh. In the bottom of the seventh, the Phillies loaded the bases with one out on three walks by Andersen.

Ron Roenicke popped out and Luis Aguayo hit into a force play.

"We were just a base hit away from tying it several times," said Elia, "but that happens. They got the big hit when they needed it."

"Scott didn't have his best stuff," said Houston manager Hal Lanier. "But he only gave up two runs. We swung the bats good today, especially Billy Hatcher," who had four singles and one RBI.

Wimbledon: Exhilarating for some, exhausting for others

By BOB GREENE
AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — A splash of green in southwest London, Wimbledon is a special place for tennis players, one where some dreams are fulfilled and others shattered.

For Martina Navratilova, Wimbledon was redemption. For Ivan Lendl, the outcome of the fortnight on grass was devastating.

Navratilova on Saturday won her first tournament title of 1987. But it came at Wimbledon, the place she calls home and where she has ruled supreme since 1982.

The left-hander from Fort Worth now has won a record six straight women's singles titles on the grass courts of the All England Club and tied a record with her eighth career singles crown.

"I haven't forgotten how to win," Navratilova said after dispatching Steffi Graf 7-5, 6-3 and snapping the 18-year-old West German's 45-match winning streak. "I haven't forgotten how to win Wimbledon."

"I'd rather win this and nothing else than the other way around."

Like Navratilova, Lendl was hungrily seeking a title at Wimbledon.

"You know very well how much it would mean to me and how hard I've worked for it," Lendl said before the final. "I would give up one U.S. Open (title) to win this. The good part is that I don't have to make that decision. I've won two U.S. Opens and I'd settle for one and one."

But he fell short, losing to Pat Cash of Australia 7-6, 6-2, 7-5. It was his second consecutive trip to the final and his second straight loss in straight sets.

And it raised once again the whispers of how Lendl can't win the major tournaments.

He has won the French Open three times. For five straight years Lendl has been a U.S. Open finalist.

But he has lost eight times in 13 Grand Slam tournament finals. And he has yet to win Wimbledon.

Winning Wimbledon "means a lot to me for different reasons," Lendl said, "because it's so much harder for me to play well here and it would be much more of an achievement in terms of tennis."

He will try again. The mystique that is Wimbledon will continue its siren call on Lendl and every other tennis player who has the drive to be the best in the world.

"There's a special feeling when you walk onto Centre Court" at Wimbledon, Graf said. "It's not the same at Roland Garros (site of the French Open). The green, the royalty, it's a big difference."

Rangers pound Yanks 10-4

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Larry Parrish visits New York City, he comes out swinging.

Despite a 4-for-30 slump, Parrish has "felt good since Friday," which happens to be when the Texas Rangers and New York Yankees began a four-game series.

Although he began the season with a career .318 batting average against the Yankees, Parrish has only seven hits in 29 at-bats against them this year. However, three are home runs — including Sunday's game-tying two-run shot, which triggered a six-run fourth inning that powered the Rangers to a 10-4 victory. His 17 career homers against New York and Oakland are the most he has hit against any team.

"We can throw some impressive people out there. There's no doubt we can put a knockout punch on people," Parrish said after the Rangers batted around for the 14th time this season.

"I hit the ball hard even when I didn't get some hits. I figured out what I was doing wrong; now, I just have to wait and get a strike."

Parrish declined to explain what adjustment he made in his swing.

"When I tell you, that's when I get in trouble," he said. "Paralysis by analysis."

Despite the setback, the Yankees maintained a five-game lead in the American League East, although Detroit sneaked past Toronto into second place by one percentage point. Texas remained sixth in the West, 6½ games behind Kansas City and Minnesota, which are in a virtual tie for first.

Parrish's homer made him the first Texas player to hit 20 home runs in four seasons. It also marked the earliest date any Ranger has reached that figure.

"Larry's a happy player now," Manager Bobby Valentine said. "I don't know exactly what it is, but he's finally at ease with himself this year. Whether it's the maturity factor or the big contract he got, I don't know (during the winter, Parrish was given a option year for 1989 at $950,000)."

Texas collected seven consecutive hits, including Mike Stanley's tie-breaking homer, off Rich Bordi and Cecilio Guante in erasing a 3-1 deficit with one out in the fourth.

The Yankees had taken the lead against Edwin Correa in the third inning on Don Mattingly's RBI double and Winfield's two-run homer, his 19th.

But with one out in the Texas fourth, Ruben Sierra beat out a slow bouncer past the mound, Parrish homered, Darrell Porter singled and Stanley hit his fourth home run.

That made it 5-3 and the Rangers chased Bordi, 3-1, making his first start after 12 relief appearances, when Bob Brower tripled and scored on Jerry Browne's single. Scott Fletcher, who had three of the Rangers' 14 hits, greeted Guante with a single and Pete O'Brien's sacrifice fly scored Browne.

The Rangers also got solid relief pitching from winner Jeff Russell, 2-1, Mitch Williams and Dale Mohorcic, who combined for 5 2-3 innings, with Russell allowing a run and three hits. In the last 18 games, the Texas bullpen has a 1.25 ERA.

Meanwhile, the Yankees' bullpen is in need of help from the starters, when it should be the other way around.

"The starters have to start doing the job," pitching coach Mark Connor said. "We need to get more effective innings. The whole problem is that our bullpen is overworked (New York's last complete game was May 10). The bullpen is tired. If this keeps up, they'll either be ineffective or they'll break down. We can't keep going to the pen for two, three and four pitchers a game."

Bordi was given a rare start — his 15th in 168 major-league appearances — because a rainout last week forced the Yankees to play a doubleheader Friday night.

Odessa's Hostetter to meet Foreman in Thursday bout

By MICHAEL BOWERS
The Odessa American

ODESSA (AP) — Punch, move. Jab, move. Dart, move. Swoop, move.

There, in a nutshell, is the plan of Charles "Tuffy" Hostetter of Odessa to beat former heavyweight champion George Foreman on Thursday night when the two enter the Oakland Coliseum ring for their heavyweight bout.

Hostetter, who will put a 16-4 record — and his health — on the line, said there's no way he'll try to match punch for punch with Foreman, who is 46-2 over his career, 1-0 since coming out of retirement.

"There's no doubt about it. There's no way I can knock out George Foreman. I'm not even going to try," Hostetter said. "I'm going to try to box, move around, move in and out."

The key for Hostetter will be to avoid the Foreman haymaker that knocked out 44 opponents en route to what then was a perfect record and the heavyweight championship of the world.

That was before Muhammad Ali handed Foreman his first professional loss in a 1974 title fight. A second loss to Jimmy Young in 1977 sent Foreman into retirement.

But earlier this year, Foreman, now 39 and much heavier, decided on a comeback. He began it successfully with a fourth-round knockout of Steve Zouski in March. Hostetter is next on Foreman's comeback list.

Foreman's best punching days may be long gone, but Hostetter, a former Texas champion, isn't taking anything for granted.

"I'm going to fight the man who's one of the hardest punchers ever," Hostetter said. "This is the biggest fight of my life. I'm just really going to find out what I'm all about, because this man can really punch. I'm going to get hit, I know that."

Hostetter also doesn't mind playing the role of what some might consider a hand-picked opponent.

"I take it as a privilege that they chose me out of all the thousands of boxers in the country," Hostetter said, raising his eyebrows. "You know, this is a big opportunity for me, because a lot of people think I'm going to be a walkover. But I don't mind. It's David and Goliath."

Tuffy even seems to relish the role of underdog.

"I am motivated by people a lot. I am motivated by people who say you can, and by people who say, 'Charlie, you can't.' I'm an underdog. But I have nothing to lose. No venture, no gain."

Hostetter normally competes as a cruiserweight (175-195 pounds) and plans to return to that division after the Foreman fight. However, he wasn't about to pass up the opportunity to fight Foreman.

"How many people can say they fought George Foreman?" Hostetter said with a smile.

"I'm not in it for the name, but if I can beat George Foreman, who knows what I'm capable of? If I win this fight, it's going to open up a lot of doors for me, a lot of opportunities."

Hostetter said he realizes it will take more than words to stop Foreman.

"I just have to fight very intelligently. That's the bottom line. I don't really have control over what he's going to do. I'm going to have to work on conditioning myself. He has power and experience. I hope I'll have speed and determination."

If he can follow his plan, Hostetter likes his chances.

"I have a dream, and I intend to cash in on it. This is what it's all about. This is what I'm boxing for. This is my big chance," Hostetter said.

"I'm so excited, it's like I'm in another world. It's like I'm on a super high."

McGwire homers, nears record mark

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Once rookie Mark McGwire hit his 30th homer in the Oakland Athletics' 80th game, a new pitching strategy quickly became apparent — throwing the ball closer to his body than home plate.

McGwire was hit by pitches twice after he homered and Jose Canseco added two more home runs in Oakland's 6-3 victory over Boston Sunday.

Wes Gardner hit McGwire's helmet in the eighth inning, nearly starting a bench-clearing brawl.

McGwire, now only seven homers short of the AL rookie record set by Al Rosen and eight shy of the major-league mark shared by Frank Robinson and Wally Berger, said Boston players told him that Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 1-2, and Gardner weren't trying to hit him.

Dave Stewart upped his record to 10-7.

Twins 4, Orioles 3

pitch from Tom Niedenfuer, 1-2, over the right field wall.

Bert Blyleven, 8-6, pitched his fourth complete game of the season, allowing nine hits.

Royals 4, Blue Jays 3

Kansas City stayed ahead of Minnesota in first place in the AL West when George Brett singled home the game-winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning against Toronto, which lost its eighth consecutive game.

Mark Eichhorn, 8-4, walked Willie Wilson leading off the 10th and Gary Lavelle came in to give up singles to Kevin Seitzer and Brett, scoring Wilson.

Reliever Dan Quisenberry, 4-0, retired all nine batters he faced for the victory.

White Sox 17, Indians 0

Chicago routed Cleveland in the most one-sided AL shutout since California beat Minnesota 17-0 on April 23, 1980.

Ken Williams and Harold Baines each drove in four runs, pacing a 21-hit attack for the White Sox, who are still in last place in the AL West despite six victories in seven games.

Scott Nielsen, 2-2, pitched a six-hitter and posted his first complete game of the season, while Phil Niekro, 6-8, gave up eight runs on seven hits in three innings for the Indians.

Ex-Met leads Giants over Cubs

By The Associated Press

After being traded for the second time in eight months, Kevin Mitchell was thinking of heading for home. In a way, he did just that.

Mitchell hit a pair of two-run homers and San Francisco rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to defeat the Chicago Cubs 7-5 Sunday at Wrigley Field.

Mitchell, 25, was acquired in a seven-player deal between the Giants and San Diego late Saturday night.

"I'm not mad, but I'm not happy," Mitchell said after his first game as Giants' third baseman. "Two trades in a year was getting to my head."

"I was thinking of going home but some of the (San Diego) players and coaches told me to go over there and do the job."

Joe Price, recalled from Class AAA Phoenix only hours before the game, was the winner in relief. Cubs reliever Ed Lynch, 1-6, took the loss.

Mitchell was a key member of the New York Mets' world championship team last season, hitting .277 with 12 homers and 43 runs batted in as a rookie.

Last December, Mitchell was traded by the Mets to San Diego in an eight-player deal that sent outfielder Kevin McReynolds to New York.

After a mediocre start with the Padres, Mitchell was starting to get comfortable. Last Wednesday, he hit two homers against Los Angeles.

Mitchell, along with pitchers Dave Dravecky and Craig Lefferts were traded to the Giants for All-Star third baseman Chris Brown and pitchers Mark Davis, Keith Comstock and Mark Grant.

Reds 7, Mets 5

Tom Browning won his first start since being recalled from the minors and Bo Diaz had four hits as Cincinnati defeated visiting New York and Dwight Gooden.

Browning, a 20-game winner as a rookie in 1985, was demoted to Class AAA Nashville after starting the season 4-6 with a 7.76 earned run average.

In seven innings, Browning yielded six hits, one walk, and struck out six.

Former Three Way student, NY Jet to be inducted into NFL Hall

COLORADO CITY, Texas (AP) — If Don Maynard didn't receive the football recognition he deserved in high school, it may have been because his family moved around so much.

"I was never eligible to play football (because of University Interscholastic League residency requirements), but I probably earned more B-team letters in basketball than any other kid in Texas," said Maynard, now a financial consultant in El Paso.

The former NFL star receiver attended high school in Three Way, Lamesa and San Angelo — in addition to Portales, N.M. — before landing in Colorado City where he earned letters in basketball and track.

Maynard, whose career ended in 1973 and included a championship with the Jets in Super Bowl III, was recognized at special ceremonies Saturday in honor of his election into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio.

Maynard will be inducted Aug. 8 along with running backs Larry Csonka and John Henry Johnson, quarterback Len Dawson, defensive tackle Joe Greene and offensive linemen Jim Langer and Gene Upshaw.

His ex-classmates presented him with autographed footballs and a plaque during the ceremonies here.

"We're just happy to have had the opportunity to do this," reunion spokesman Leena Marcum said. "Don's done so much and brought so much recognition to our community and our state, it was the least we could do."

Maynard won both the 120-yard high hurdles and the 180-yard low hurdles at the 1953 Texas high school track and field meet for Class 1A — setting a record in the high hurdles and tying the record in the low hurdles.

"This (recognition) is just what small towns are all about," Maynard said. "They're small in size, but they have the biggest hearts in the world."

Maynard said he was more excited about the prospects of seeing old friends during the reunion than being honored by his friends and former classmates.

After Colorado City, Maynard headed to Rice University before ending up as part of the varsity football team at Texas Western (now the University of Texas at El Paso).

Maynard went on to become the No. 7 draft choice of the New York Giants.

"You know, I hadn't thought much about pro ball," he said. "Then, I was drafted by New York. Heck, this kid from West Texas didn't even know where New York was."

"But it was a tremendous indoctrination to the game ... playing with guys like Kyle Rote and Frank Gifford and Charley Conerly and being coached by Tom Landry and Vince Lombardi."

After the Giants, Maynard played for the Hamilton Tiger Cats of the Canadian Football League before being signed by Harry Wismer's "other" New York football team.

The Titans floundered financially under Wismer and were sold to a group headed by Sonny Werblin, who renamed the team the Jets.

In 1969, with "Broadway" Joe Namath at the helm, the Jets set the football world on its ear by upsetting the heavily-favored Colts in the Super Bowl.

"I think that win changed a lot of people's thoughts," Maynard said.

"Here you have this little team from this new league beating up on the big, mighty Colts."

"Then, the next year, Kansas City (the former Dallas Texans) wiped out Minnesota and people started to say 'Hey, there's another league out there,'" he continued.

Maynard finished his career with 633 receptions for 88 touchdowns. Both accomplishments rank second in the all-time National Football League record book.

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, shown here, in an interview Sunday on racism in sports, referred to his team's accountant as "a young black boy."

Walton hospitalized

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran center Bill Walton of the Boston Celtics, who missed most of the last NBA season with a foot problem, could miss most of next season while recovering from surgery, according to a published report today.

The 6-foot-11 Walton is to undergo surgery Tuesday on his right foot and ankle to relieve the pressure that is causing stress fractures in the foot, according to the Boston Herald. The operation will be done in California by Drs. F. William Wagner and Tony Daly.

The newspaper said the surgery means Walton will be sidelined for an extended period of time. Walton is not sure that it will mean sitting out an entire season, which was the case when his left ankle and foot were operated on in 1981.

"I don't think this is as serious," Walton said. "I don't think they have to do as much. The problem is the same, but it's less severe. I don't think the recovery will be as long."

Walton, a 34-year-old backup to starter Robert Parish, played in just 10 regular-season games after missing the first 61 with an inflamed right ankle joint. He played in 12 playoff games, seven of which came after learning that the right navicular (foot) bone was fractured.

Kansas storms

Donna Stover surveys damage to her home in Douglass, Kan., after it was destroyed by a tornado which tore through town Sunday morning. Several businesses were destroyed in addition to extensive tree damage.

Stover, a nurse in Winfield, was at work at the time of the twister. Her son Chad, 15, was asleep in his room and escaped injury by diving out a window just before the house collapsed.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Patty Duke says her managers heightened her deep-seated fear of death by giving her a new first name during her teens.

"I was obsessed, truly obsessed with my mortality," she writes in "Call Me Anna: The Autobiography of Patty Duke," excerpted in the July 13 issue of People magazine. "When people take away your name they are taking away your identity."

Ms. Duke, 40, said Ethel and John Ross felt Anna Marie was not "perky" enough for the 13-year-old girl.

"One day they said, 'OK, we've finally decided we're gonna change your name. Anna Marie is dead. You're Patty now.' Just like that," she said. "What I didn't know was that was ... the beginning of the little-by-little murder of Anna Marie Duke and the rebuilding of the Frankenstein's monster that became Patty Duke."

The name change "touched a major concern of mine, which was a fear of death so powerful it precipitated daily anxiety attacks from the early 1950s to 1983," she said.

Diagnosed as manic depressive in 1982, Ms. Duke, the star of her own TV series during the 1960s, said she has been able to control her periods of despondency with lithium and therapy.

Now president of the Screen Actors Guild, she won an Academy Award in 1963 for "The Miracle Worker" and is working on a new TV comedy in which she plays a divorced businesswoman in love with a younger man.

Her autobiography is to be published by Bantam Books.

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (AP) — The pool at The Grand Hotel will be named for Esther Williams, the swimming actress who co-starred with Jimmy Durante in a 1946 movie filmed at the landmark which marks its 100th birthday Friday.

Miss Williams, who will be guest of honor at the birthday bash, will christen the hotel for its next 100 years by pouring a bottle of champagne into the pool, said the hotel's owner, R.D. Muser.

Miss Williams' films also will be shown at a new theater in the hotel, which recently underwent a $12 million facelift.

Miss Williams co-starred with Durante in the film "This Time For Keeps."

The hotel, which sits atop a 100-foot-high bluff on this island between Michigan's two peninsulas, also was the setting for the 1980 movie "Somewhere in Time," starring Christopher Reeve and Jane Seymour.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Poet Howard Norman's first novel, about a boy coming of age in northern Canada, draws on his experiences with the Cree Indians of the Northwest Territories.

In writing "The Northern Lights," recently published by Summit Books, Norman says he used details based on his encounters with the Cree in lumber camps, on fire crews and in other places he worked.

Norman learned the Cree language and taped and translated the tales of the tribe, previously handed down only orally.

He has published a volume of poems, "The Wishing Bone Cycle: Narrative Poems from the Swampy Cree Indians," and a collection of short prose, "Where the Chill Came From: Windigo Tales and Journeys."

Insurance industry launches ad campaign over sales tax

DALLAS (AP) — The insurance industry has launched a statewide advertising campaign in its battle against a House-approved plan to raise $1.8 billion over the next biennium by extending the state sales tax to insurance.

Thirty-second radio spots urging Texans to contact their state senators and Gov. Bill Clements began running over the weekend, and half-page ads denouncing the tax appeared in daily newspapers across the state Sunday.

The new insurance tax is part of a record $5.7 billion revenue package approved by the House Thursday to help finance a new two-year, $38.4 billion budget proposal that representatives had approved earlier.

Under the House plan, the state sales tax would be raised from 5.25 cents to 6 cents on the dollar and levied for the first time on insurance sold in Texas.

The House also voted to make permanent the 5-cents-a-gallon temporary state gasoline tax. The package now goes to the Senate, where the insurance industry is focusing its campaign to defeat the insurance portion.

Directed by the Insurance League, a coalition of insurance companies and agents, the media campaign will cost about $100,000, according to Wayne Stratton, a lobbyist for the American Alliance of Insurers.

The industry claims the measure would put an unfair burden on consumers and businesses that must carry insurance and also would place Texas insurance companies at a competitive disadvantage.

The tax would add more than $200 a year to the cost of insurance for the typical Texas family, according to calculations by the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas.

Air Force wonders if jets are becoming too hot to fly

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Scientists at Brooks Air Force Base's School of Aerospace Medicine are working to create "super pilots" to match a new generation of jets that are so fast and maneuverable that the planes may be outstripping man's ability to control them.

The latest generation of fighter jets, the F-16, is so fast, Air Force officials say, that violent gravity forces can force a pilot's head into his chest and drain the blood from his brain, sometimes causing blackouts.

Pilots call the F-16s "deadly little ballerinas" that can spin and dip almost as quickly as thought. "Aircraft are getting increasingly complex, and man is staying the same," said Col. Robert Belhar, chief of aerospace medicine at the Tactical Air Command.

The major focus by the researchers is on gravity-induced loss of consciousness — called "g-lock," the San Antonio Light reported. Blackouts are suspected as a cause in 11 fatal Air Force crashes since 1981, when officials first started taking a serious look at the problem. Millions of dollars worth of aircraft also have been lost.

Scientists at Brooks recently requested permission to nearly double the "g" forces that may be placed on humans during experiments. A decision is pending. The goal is to find new ways to counter the potentially deadly effects of "g-lock."

"If you're driving an airplane at 800 feet per second, you don't want to go to sleep for a long time," said Lt. Col. William Parr, an F-16 squadron commander with the 149th Tactical Fighter Group, an Air National Guard unit located at Kelly.

Air Force officials say more than safety is involved. There's also the United States' ability to maintain a military edge.

Unless researchers at Brooks and elsewhere find a way to enable humans to withstand the physical pressures experienced in state-of-the-art fighters, advances in technology that make fighters quicker and more maneuverable will mean little, Air Force officials say.

The next generation fighter — the advanced tactical fighter — reportedly will be capable of producing 12 "g's" — far more than current generation of jets. Research and development is continuing on the plane.

Dr. W. Carter Alexander, head of the Crew Technology Division at Brooks, is responsible for training pilots and developing equipment to prevent "g-lock" and allow pilots to push their aircraft to their limits, or in pilots' parlance, the edge of the envelope.

Alexander, who headed NASA's acceleration research program before coming to Brooks, is optimistic that pilots with proper training and some extra equipment will be able to handle the "g's" that modern aircraft like the F-16 can turn out.

One of the possibilities is the use of drugs that might increase pilots' tolerance to "g" forces. The key will be to find a drug that will raise blood pressure to assist in getting blood to the brain.

Bakkers say they'd do things differently

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Jim and Tammy Bakker said in an interview broadcast today that they may have gotten lost in the prosperity of their television ministry, but that they are different people now.

In the final part of a three-part interview with ABC's "Good Morning America," Bakker said he believes he's been forgiven and is ready to begin again.

The Bakkers lost their PTL ministry in March after Bakker acknowledged a 1980 tryst with a church secretary. It is now run by the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

In the interview, Bakker said that a busy minister "can lose that fresh touch of God on his life."

"I was busy building and busy preparing a place for people — the Heritage Grand (Hotel) and the water park and all that," he said, referring to Heritage USA, PTL's headquarters and theme park in Fort Mill, S.C.

The Bakkers were interviewed at their new estate in this mountain resort, where they say they will make their permanent home as they fight to regain PTL and make tentative plans to start a new ministry. The Bakkers are scheduled to leave Tuesday to pack their belongings at the PTL parsonage in Tega Cay, S.C.

Meanwhile, a Falwell spokesman said the Heritage USA complex can

Oilmen feel domestic industry's problems overlooked

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — While American flags will soon fly over Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, many Texas oilmen complain the U.S. government is doing little to aid their economically struggling industry.

"The administration is willing to use the full force of the U.S. Navy to protect shipments by foreign producers but won't lift a finger to help our own domestic producers," says Oscar S. Wyatt Jr., chairman of Coastal Corp., a Houston-based oil and gas exploration, production and refining company.

Wyatt and others argue that military protection amounts to a U.S. subsidy of foreign oil, ultimately paid by U.S. taxpayers. They advocate more government action to provide incentives for the domestic energy industry.

"I'm concerned that we have such an aggressive military policy and such a weak energy policy," says George Mitchell, chairman and chief executive officer of Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. "The (domestic) energy business has been dismantled; we need to be more self-sufficient."

The Reagan administration has agreed to offer military protection to Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf by sailing them under U.S. flags. The plan is intended to counter Soviet influence in the area and ensure the flow of Mideast oil through the constricted and strategic waterway to Western markets.

"I think the concept, the idea has merit, (but) I don't think we should shoulder the entire cost," says L. Frank Pitts, owner of Dallas-based Pitts Oil Co.

"We are subsidizing the production of oil in that area, and we are letting our allies off with little and in some case, none of the cost," Pitts says. "There is no reason they should not shoulder some of the responsibility."

Mitchell and others have cited statements in May by outgoing Navy Secretary John Lehman that the U.S. commitment to keeping the Persian Gulf open to shipping costs this country about $40 billion per year.

When divided by the 334 million barrels of Mideast oil the United States imports annually, the cost of Mideast oil to America is nearly $140 per barrel, the oilmen contend.

"The least I think the Arabian Gulf producers should do is give those who are protecting the Gulf a preferential price in buying the oil that is being protected," says Wyatt.

From a high of more than $34 per barrel in 1981, prices of crude fell below $10 last summer, causing a dramatic plunge in domestic drilling and production. The United States now imports about one-third of its oil, a proportion expected to grow in coming years.

Virtually all oil industry executives concede the volatile Mideast will be a major source of world oil for decades to come, since the huge reserves of oil in the area can be produced and marketed for an average cost of less than $3 per barrel. That compares to the $10- to $20-per-barrel cost in the United States, which has much smaller reserves.

Many in the domestic energy industry have argued in favor of an oil import fee or price floor, which would ensure domestic producers a stable price high enough to justify long-term domestic drilling and production. The Reagan administration has opposed the plan, noting the benefits of lower oil prices to other segments of the U.S. economy.

Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said last month a disruption of Persian Gulf oil supplies to the world market would affect all consumers of oil. "Although Persian Gulf sources today supply only a small percentage of U.S. demand (about 7 percent), that does not mean we could escape the serious consequences of a partial or total cutoff of those supplies," DiBona said.

"API is strongly urging that the United States move quickly to develop more of its secure domestic energy reserves."

"If our federal government were as interested in our domestic industry as they seem to be in keeping the Gulf open, we wouldn't be in this shape today," John E. Watson, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, says. "A lot of the independent segment has already gone bankrupt."

"I think our own government ought to get off its duffers and eliminate some of the disincentives, and produce some incentive to drill some oil in the United States," Pitts says. "At the rate we are going now, we may lower (domestic) production ever more."

Police commandos check a culvert in eastern Amparai district for hidden explosives. Tamil rebels, who are fighting for a separate Tamil state, have used remote controlled de-

VICES to detonate hidden explosives, which have taken a heavy toll of lives of both security force personnel and civilians in the past.

Explosion blamed on Tamils kills at least 20 soldiers

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil rebels today attacked and blew up a school used as an army camp in Jaffna Peninsula, killing at least 20 soldiers and wounding 20 others, a military official said.

A military official in Colombo and Tamil militants exiled in India both reported the attack. The fighting was the heaviest in the region since the Sri Lankan army wrested the area from Tamil rebels in June.

The military official, who cannot be identified under briefing rules, said a search was under way for more bodies in the collapsed school at Neliaddy, 15 miles northeast of Jaffna, the main town on the rebel-dominated peninsula.

Intelligence sources cited intercepted rebel radio messages as saying 10 Tamil fighters were killed in the battle. But a statement from the exile headquarters of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Madras, India, said only three militants died.

The Tigers statement, reported by the United

News of India, said the rebel fighters destroyed the camp and captured Neliaddy and other nearby villages. It said the camp was littered with the bodies of Sri Lankan soldiers after militants blew up what was once the Neliaddy Central College.

Neliaddy is in the Vadamarachchi region, which the Tamils have vowed to recapture. The region, covering about one-quarter of the Jaffna Peninsula, was seized in an offensive ending June 1 that was the army's most successful action in the four-year Tamil civil war.

The statement from the Tigers, the largest Tamil militia, said fighting near the school began late Sunday night and ended about 2:15 a.m. today. A Tigers statement Sunday also had said several rebels and two soldiers were killed when heavy fighting broke out Saturday around Neliaddy.

Tamil rebels are fighting for an independent nation in Sri Lanka's north and east. They maintain Tamils are discriminated against by the majority Sinhalese Buddhists, who control the government. Tamils, who are mostly Hindus, make up 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million population.

Compact disk material being made in Texas

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — About half the compact audio disks in the world are being molded using a new high-technology plastic manufactured by the Mobay Corp. and its parent company in West Germany, Bayer AG, a company spokesman said.

The plastic known as polycarbonate resin also is being used to make eyeglass lenses, hard hats and baby bottles. The end product is clear, hard and resistant to heat and scratches. It also costs four or five times more than lesser plastic.

Bayer, the company known for aspirin, has become one of the world's largest makers of chemicals and pharmaceuticals. It was the first to develop polycarbonate resin, having filed for patents in West Germany in 1953 and the United States in 1954.

That was about the time Mobay Chemical Co. was formed as a joint venture between Monsanto Chemical Co. and Farbenfabriken Bayer AG.

Mobay has been making polycarbonates in Baytown since 1975. The plant's capacity for all grades of polycarbonates is 160 million pounds per year, while Bayer's is 200 million pounds. Bayer also is opening a plant in Antwerp, Belgium.

"Making plastics is one of the most advanced areas of organic chemistry, in my view, and organic chemistry is one of the more difficult parts of chemistry," said Ron Fuchs, manager of the Mobay plant.

South Korean government frees 177 political prisoners

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government freed 177 jailed political prisoners today in the first large-scale release of detainees since President Chun Doo-hwan agreed to major reforms to halt nationwide protests.

Relatives hugged and kissed the freed prisoners as they walked through gates at prisons in Seoul and eight other cities. Supporters lifted the former prisoners on their shoulders and carried them through the streets.

"Long live democracy," hundreds of people shouted.

About 1,000 students clashed with police today outside Yonsei University in Seoul during a memorial for a student who died Sunday of injuries he sustained in a demonstration last month. Police hurled scores of tear gas grenades to stop a student protest march and students threw rocks in running clashes.

The fighting followed battles Sunday between about 2,000 Yonsei students and riot police, in the first large anti-government protest in the capital since Chun announced concessions last week. The major opposition party, the Reunification Democratic Party, lamented the death of student Lee Han-yul but said it should not stand in the way of negotiations on instituting democratic changes.

The prisoners freed today had all been arrested in huge anti-government protests that broke out June 10 and rocked South Korea for 18 days. The demonstrators demanded direct presidential elections and other reforms, which Chun eventually agreed to implement. A few dozen suspects were released last week.

Released prisoners told cheering supporters that people were no longer willing to accept authoritarian rule.

Ministry of Justice officials, who spoke on condition they were not identified, said 310 other prisoners would be released by mid-week as the government moved to meet its promise to free all political detainees.

A list of some 2,100 people eligible for amnesty and restored rights was being drawn up, they said.

Among those released Monday were Yang Soon-jik, a vice president of the Reunification Democratic Party, and 11 leaders of the National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution, the opposition alliance that started the protests.

Yang was greeted by top opposition leaders Kim Young-sam and Kim Dae-jung, who shook hands and congratulated their beaming colleague.

The government says there are about 1,100 political prisoners, but the opposition says there are some 3,000.

There still was no indication when action might be taken on restoring civil rights to dissident leader Kim Dae-jung, who is under a suspended 20-year prison sentence on a 1980 sedition conviction.

The opposition has long demanded that Kim be allowed to legally resume political activity. Roh Tae-woo, the head of Chun's Democratic Justice Party and a presidential candidate, also made such a demand on June 29, when he threw his support behind political reforms.

Repairs to ambulances delayed

AUSTIN (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has delayed making repairs on eight Austin Emergency Medical Service ambulances with gas tanks that have been found to spew gasoline when the engine is running because the automaker does not have enough trained personnel to handle the repairs, a Ford spokesman says.

The gas tanks on the Ford Econoline vans were to be repaired more than two weeks ago, but corrections were canceled by Ford at the last minute, Bobby Gutierrez, a supervisor at the EMS, says.

"We were all ready to send in some of our units to be repaired, but then they said, 'No... there's been a delay,' so now it looks like it could be a couple more weeks before anything gets done," Gutierrez told the Austin American-Statesman.

Chuck Snearly, public affairs manager for the Ford Parts and Services Division, said repairs were postponed by Ford until personnel could be trained to handle the estimated 15,000 repairs nationwide.

Repairs to Austin ambulances are now scheduled to begin July 14, Bill Coll, manager of operations for the EMS, said.

The faulty tanks on the ambulances have not caused any accidents in Austin, but officials say there have been about 20 reports of ambulance fires throughout the nation. Gutierrez said eight of the 18 ambulances used by the EMS are Econoline vans.

The problem was identified in Virginia about a year ago after about five ambulances caught on fire and Ford officials "began to look into the problem and coordinate our efforts to correct the problem," Snearly said.

Gutierrez said that after the problem was identified, ambulance services "had a hard time getting Ford to admit there was a problem."

"One of the main topics at a vehicle maintenance seminar I went to was the fuel-system problems with the Ford vans," he said.
