MARY M. RODGERS

MERIDIAN - Services for Mary M. Rodgers, 84, of Pampa will be Wednesday in Meridian with burial in Fulton Cemetery at Walnut Springs. Mrs. Rodgers died Monday at Hugley while visiting relatives. She moved to Pampa in 1958 from Walnut Springs. She was a member of the Pampa Rebeccah Lodge. She was the widow of Murry Eugene Rodgers. She was also preceded in death by two sons, Oliver Rodgers and Norman Rodgers. Survivors include four sons, Eugene Rodgers, Vici, Okla.; Travis Rodgers, Albuquerque, N.M.; Jimmy Rodgers, Mansfield, and Cecil Rodgers, Alvarado; 25 grandchildren and 18 grandchildren.

CLAUDE O. TANKERSLY

GROOM - Services are pending with Boxwell Brothers Funeral Directors of Amarillo for Claude O. Tankersly, 73, of Groom. Mr. Tankersly died Monday.

Born in Eastland County, he had lived in Groom for 20 years. He was the manager of the Golden Spread Motel.

Survivors include three brothers, W. Clyde Tankersly and R.E. Tankersly, both of Odessa, and George Tankersly, Lamesa; and two sisters, Camilla Shadix, Abilene, and Gladys Goin, Odessa.

LEWIS MOON

SHAMROCK - Services for Lewis Moon, 34, were at 9:30 a.m. today in Shamrock First Baptist Church with Rev. Reynaldo Garza, pastor of Mexican Mission Church, officiating. Burial will be in Erick Cemetery at Erick, Okla., under the direction of Richerson Funeral Home of Shamrock.

Mr. Moon died Friday in an automobile accident near Lampasas.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, three sons, his parents, two sisters and two brothers.

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following traffic accident for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

MONDAY, July 20

A 1984 Buick, driven by Roy B. Hodges, White Deer, and a 1983 Chevrolet, driven by Lavon Hammon Herndon, 1801 N. Dwight, collided at Kingsmill and Somerville. No injuries were reported. Hodges was cited for failure to yield the right of way at a stop sign.

Police report

The Pampa Police Department reported the following incidents for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

MONDAY, July 20

A 16-year-old girl reported assault in the 2100 block of Hamilton.

A 15-year-old boy reported aggravated assault in the 900 block of South Faulkner; a knife was pulled during a fight.

Marie Brown Lenin, 1101 Huff, reported theft at the address.

Bobby Risner, 701 N. Christy, reported theft of a dog from a fenced yard at the address.

Joann Tice, Highland Mobile Home Park, reported a forged check at Shop-A-Minit, Price and Kentucky.

Frances Gregory, 314 S. Gray, reported a burglary at the address; a cable TV box was taken. Fleeing arrest was alleged in the 900 block of Alcock.

Disorderly conduct was alleged at Neel and Crawford.

A forged check was reported at Safeway, 2545 Perryton Parkway.

Sandra Winegarter, 316 N. Wells, reported a burglary in the 400 block of North Nelson.

John Curry, 721 N. Russell, reported theft of a bicycle from the address.

Alfred Shane Bromlow, 452 S. Pitts, reported being robbed of $12 in the 300 block of West Thud; Bromlow was treated at released at Coronado Hospital for injuries sustained in the robbery.

Arrests-City Jail

MONDAY, July 20

Elvin M. Shippo, Route 2, was arrested in the 400 block of Naida on charges of fleeing and speeding and a capias warrant, and was later released upon payment of a fine and bond.

Thomas W. Brookshire, 41, 209 N. Starkweather, was arrested in the 200 block of West Brown on a charge of public intoxication.

David Lynn Gage, 27, 325 Sunset, was arrested in the 100 block of East Browning on charges of driving while intoxicated, fleeing, running a stop sign, no headlights and driving on the wrong side of the road.

Fire report

The Pampa Fire Department reported no fire runs in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

based on the number of years they worked. Raymond said that with IRI headquartered in Pampa and with the substations being so small, it was not likely that any of the laid-off employees could be transferred.

"There's really no other facility besides us," Raymond said. "The industry continues to be absolutely flat," Raymond said. "There just isn't enough work for the folks we have."

As a result, the company will continue using such erratic work schedules as having employees work for two weeks and collect unemployment for two weeks or to work three weeks and not work one week, collecting unemployment. "This provides employment for our workers and allows us to respond to our customers faster," Raymond said. "When we do get an order, the customer wants immediate delivery, then we can put our 'off' employees back on."

Raymond said there has been "a certain amount of attrition on a normal basis" and that the scheduling depends on the workload. The IRI president said he does see "some promising signs on the horizon."

"It's encouraging to see Texas crude above $20 per barrel," Raymond said. "And we do have orders for foreign sources."

Tornado

the Pampa Sheltered Workshop. Gray County Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard estimated cost of the damage at $850,000.

Ten people were injured, and one woman, Vera Darling, 73, 1706 Aspen Drive, remained at Coronado Hospital in good condition today. Darling suffered a heart attack after being forced by the storm into a bar ditch.

The other injured have been released from the hospital.

Aldrich said Red Cross volunteers have assisted 11 families in Pampa, and seven more in Berger, where a hailstorm also caused severe property damage. Relief came in the form of groceries, rent, medical supplies, minor building repairs, occupational supplies and household furnishings, he said.

Of the stricken Pampa families, Aldrich said, three have chosen to remain with relatives, while the rest have found permanent housing or chosen to remodel.

Aldrich praised quick response by insurance adjusters, some of whom, he said, paid victims' temporary living expenses.

"It was a great help to us, and probably the reason for the low number of requests for assistance," Aldrich said.

Aldrich, a veteran of 10 disasters around the country, also praised Pampans for their response to the crisis.

Another boost can come through diversification, Raymond said. In addition to drilling and workover equipment, the company does specialty steel forging and makes gun tubes for the U.S. Army.

"We are in the development stage for a type of refuse carriers (garbage trucks)," Raymond said, explaining that IRI will make the truck part of the "carrier."

"Of course diversification helps," he said. "We are recognizing there are established people in each industry, and we will be the newcomer wherever we go. But, we have the expertise to get a piece of the industry ourselves."

Help came in the form of Red Cross volunteers, and in efforts by churches and private businesses to help victims.

Other Pampa agencies also chipped in.

At Gray County Community Services, 322 S. Cuyler St., Director Margo Stanley said one low-income family was assisted after the storm and other families were given referrals.

Salvation Army Capt. Bob Clements said he couldn't provide an estimate of how many families his agency had helped with furniture, clothing and grocery orders. Clements also praised local businesses for their assistance in responding to the disaster.

Sales

Groom a July check for $1,038, down about $155 from the $1,193 gained last July. Yearly payments to date total $10,080, dipping 8.03 percent under the $10,960 reported a year ago.

In July 1986, Bullock reported Wheeler as showing a 5.20 percent decline from 1985 sales.

Skellytown had a payment this month of $694, less than a third of the $2,285 check received in July 1986. Its yearly payments to date total $5,591, plunging 35.49 percent from the $8,666 registered at this time last year. A year ago, Skellytown was recording only a 9.84 percent drop.

Similarly, White Deer had a check in July for $884, just over a third of the $2,566 received in July 1986. Its yearly payments to date total $10,240, falling 14.58 percent from the $11,989 gained at this time last year.

A year ago Bullock was reporting White Deer with a 15.68 percent hike above comparable 1985 period sales.

In Hemphill County, Canadian had a check this month for $7,221, dropping more than $810 below the $8,032 payment received a year ago. Yearly payments to date stand at $57,798; down 25.23 percent from the $77,305 recorded in the July 1986 report.

A year ago Bullock listed Canadian with an 11.86 percent decrease from 1985 sales.

In Roberts County, the state sent Miami a July check for $989, just under the $1,019 received at this time in 1986. Its yearly payments to date total $9,431, dipping 4.27 percent under the $9,851 listed a year ago.

At this time last year, Miami was recording a 14.90 percent decline from 1985 sales.

a tax bill that their districts don't want them to vote for.

Lewis, the House speaker, said the failure to act could mean lawmakers will be summoned into another special session when the current one ends tonight.

"I don't see any effort for anybody to change their vote. So therefore, I don't see where we can progress any further," Lewis said.

Failure to pass an immediate tax hike, Lewis said, would reduce the total tax haul by $313 million and keep the budget from balancing, as required by the Texas Constitution. That means the sales tax that would take effect later in the year would have to be 6 1/2 percent, he added.

"Those people who have voted against putting it into immediate effect have, in reality, voted for a (even larger) tax increase," Lewis claimed.

The doomsday plan so angered Gov. Bill Clements that he vowed to withhold his promised support for the tax and spending bills until it was removed.

"It's punitive. It's discriminatory. It's inappropriate and it's in very poor taste. That's wrong," Clements said. "Doomsday's going to come out and then I will go to work."

But the spending-cut plan was retained. Supportters defended it, hoping their weapon would make it clear to tax opponents such as Whaley that they would suffer a direct consequence of failing to vote for the increase.

"They've voted for the spending, but they've never voted for the funding because it's unpopular to vote for taxes. What this does, it allows them to realize that if they don't vote for it, they don't get it," Lewis said.

"There's been proposals and counterproposals flying all day long," said Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, House sponsor of the major tax measure. House members voted to send the tax plan back to a House-Senate negotiating committee, but since the Senate passed the plan that action had little immediate effect, Morales said.

"The Senate has indicated that they do not have an inclination to take the bill back. And I don't blame them," he said. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate, said that chamber "thought it was a good (tax) bill. They obviously don't see any need for changing what was in there."

The tax plan under consideration would raise the state sales tax from 5 1/2 percent to 6 percent. In big cities, where both a city and a mass transit tax also are levied, the rate would jump to 8 percent.

The tax increases must raise enough new money so the comptroller can certify that the $38.3 billion budget will be balanced. It won't certify, it is unconstitutional and lawmakers have to try again.

The prime minister of Kuwait, Crown Prince Saad al-Abdullah al-Sabah, said Monday that the United States will decide how to respond to any attacks on the re-flagged tankers or their escorts. "There is no agreement" between Kuwait and Washington on how to retaliate, he told a news conference.

The first two Kuwaiti tankers appeared ready to sail except for the hoisting of the Stars and Stripes.

as the biggest in the Middle East and about sixth in size among the world's ships, became the Bridgeton over the weekend. The name and technical home port of Philadelphia, which the Al-Rekkah never visited, were painted on its sides and stern.

Anchored about two miles away was the former Gas Al-Minagish, a 46,723-ton liquid petroleum gas carrier newly renamed Gas Prince, also of Philadelphia. Both vessels bear the red "C" funnel insignia of the Chesapeake Shipping Co., their nominal new owners.

Deal

to Iran in the summer of 1985. Vessey was succeeded in October of that year by Adm. William Crowe, who served in the post during the direct U.S. sale of weapons to the Iranians.

Poindexter said Reagan consulted Weinberger before deciding to go ahead with the sales, and said it was "up to the secretary of defense" to make the decision about consulting Crowe on the military implications of the sale.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said Crowe found out "by accident" in late June or early July of 1986 about the sales, after several transactions already had been made.

Poindexter's statement that the weapons sales did not affect the balance of power in the prolonged Iran-Iraq war is consistent with the administration's longstanding position about the weapons shipments.

Poindexter did not say what other weapons the Iranians sought that the administration refused to provide.

But he said U.S. policy was aimed at ensuring that neither side could win the war, and that the United States wanted to make sure Iran did not lose to Iraq.

Working through a secret channel of communications, Poindexter said, U.S. officials stressed to the Iranians that the Soviet Union would never permit a defeat of the Iraqis. He said Reagan authorized the sharing of some secret intelligence information with the Iranians to help convince them of that position.

The first few moments of this morning's hearing were businesslike and lacking in the type of combativeness that Poindexter displayed on Monday.

At that session, the 50-year-old rear admiral defiantly defended every action he took in the Iran-Contra affair.

First victim buried, pastor says short life not a waste

LANCASTER (AP) — A minister at the first funeral for one of nine teenagers who died trying to escape the raging waters of the Guadalupe River urged mourners not to think the life of a 14-year-old girl had been wasted.

"We sorrow because we... think what might have been such a life. But Christ says rejoice because we shared this life with her," the Rev. Ben Jordan said at the funeral of Melanie Ann Finley.

Miss Finley fell to her death as rescuers tried to pluck her from the river after a church bus and van were overcome by a flash flood Friday morning.

Eight others also died in the river and a ninth remained missing Monday. Thirty-three people aboard the two vehicles, bound for Dallas after a week of bible camp near Comfort in the Texas Hill Country, were rescued.

Funerals were scheduled today for three of the victims — two of them sisters and one a 16-year-old boy — and two more were tentatively scheduled Wednesday, said the Rev. Preston Henderson, pastor of the Seagoville Road Baptist Church.

Most of the victims, including Miss Finley, were members of the church and attended the affiliated Balch Springs Christian Academy, sponsor of the weeklong camp.

"When it's a teen-ager like Melanie, you can't help but have questions in your mind — What a waste? What a waste?" Jordan told about 300 people gathered at Miss Finley's funeral in Lancaster, a suburb south of Dallas.

"Melanie hath done what she could and I tell you it was not a waste."

Miss Finley died after falling twice from lifelines dangled by a rescue helicopter, slipping back into the water the first time and then hitting the ground after being swung away from the river.

Witnesses on the river said Miss Finley told them that if she didn't see them in a couple of hours she would see them in heaven, Jordan said.

"She was a help to many, a blessing, an encouragement," said Jordan, senior pastor of the Miller Road Baptist Church in Garland, where Miss Finley's parents attended.

"She was the most patient, wonderful person," said a man who identified himself only as an uncle of the girl.

A young woman who also refused to give her name, but said she was a friend, said after the funeral that Miss Finley was the type of person who if she said something bad about someone "would feel really bad about it and then go tell them."

"She liked to go swimming and go to the movies and that kind of stuff," her friend said.

"Melanie had a full life... she could share your secrets, your dreams, your sorrows," Jordan told the mourners.

"She could share your laughter, your fun at the Taco Bueno. She would write poetry and laugh at some corny joke and she always pulled for the underdog."

"Some runners in athletics are chosen to run marathons. Some runners in athletics are chosen to run relays. And there are those who bring the crowds to their feet. They are called sprinters, and most people remember their names," said Jordan said. "Melanie ran a sprint."

Oilman: Minimum price needed to stem the dependence on imported foreign oil

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — A leading Texas oilman says the state's oil industry is in "chaotic" condition and calls for a minimum price of $25 per barrel of imported oil to stimulate domestic production.

Oscar J. Wyatt Jr. of Houston said the United States has allowed itself to become increasingly subject to control by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Oil imports are up 30 percent from last year, and now account for 40 percent of the total U.S. demand, said Wyatt, chairman and chief executive officer of the Coastal Corp.

"For years now, this country has not had a sound energy policy," he said. "During this period the oil industry has been subject to price and supply volatility orchestrated solely by OPEC, and obviously there have been no objections by our administration."

Wyatt spoke during a panel discussion titled "The Texas Economy: Oil, Agriculture, Hi-Tech," at the Texas Daily Newspaper Association's summer meeting.

An import fee to create a floor of about $25 on the price of oil would revive the domestic drilling industry, Wyatt said.

Such a policy would lead to reduced deficits and healthier banking and real estate industries, within two years, he said.

The United States is "fast approaching the point where our country is in the position of being dangerously dependent on foreign oil suppliers and we see no concern from Capitol Hill."

He predicted natural gas shortages by 1990 if the domestic drilling industry continues to decline.

Agriculture also has suffered in Texas, said Dr. Lonnie Jones, chief agricultural economist with Texas A&M University. He said recent years have brought major changes to the state's agriculture industry "and none of these have been good."

Land values have dropped more than 20 percent in some areas of the state, he said, and world overproduction of commodities has harmed the state's $74 billion agriculture industry.

He said producers need to focus on "value added products," as an area of new opportunity. That would entail processing commodities, rather than selling only raw crops, he said.

"We need to think in terms of exporting shirts, rather than raw bales of cotton," Jones said.

Another growth area is in ornamental plants, he added. Half the ornamental plants sold in Texas are imported, he said.

On the subject of high-technology industries, David R. Tacke, chairman and chief executive officer of Dallas-based E-Systems, said schools are not producing enough engineers and computer science graduates to keep up with demand in the market.

In the Dallas-Fort Worth area, he said high-tech companies needed 28,000 such technically skilled graduates between 1985 and 1990, but only five companies were expected to hire 14,000 of them.

Meanwhile, he said, Japan, with a smaller population, graduated 30 percent more engineers than the United States in 1986.

Tax fight could produce more partisan House

AUSTIN (AP) — The bloody battle on taxes could grow into a lasting rift that forever changes the Texas House into a far more partisan chamber, according to several lawmakers involved in the tax fray.

"It could easily do it," said Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth. "This is something that happened this special session that I predicted would not happen until 1991 (when the Legislature redistricts itself).

"It appears to be more and more partisan," he said.

The Democratic-controlled House has traditionally been a relatively non-partisan body, especially when compared to the purely political set-up in Congress.

In the Texas House, Democrats and Republicans sit together and the speaker — always a Democrat this century — picks members from both parties to serve as committee chairmen.

But with GOP House members, along with a handful of conservative Democrats, blocking the tax bill needed to balance the budget, some lawmakers Monday predicted a new, more partisan, order in the 150-member House, which now has 56 Republicans.

"I think that's unfortunate, but maybe it's inevitable," said Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, the tax bill sponsor.

"What we're starting to do now is divide up into partisan factions and I can't think of a worse way to write law generally and I can't think of a worse way to debate a tax bill in particular," he added.

But Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, a leader of the anti-tax faction, said the party-line rift does not have to be permanent. If it is, he said, it will be the Democrats' fault.

"I would suggest we determine who threw the first punch as far as 'doomsday,'" he said, referring to a Democrat-inspired budget clause that targets Republican districts for spending cuts if the tax bill does not pass.

"We didn't do that. We went through three days of cuts and didn't go after anybody's district. Now they want to get some votes on a tax bill and they target Republicans and conservative Democrats," Toomey said.

Texas Democratic Party Chairman Robert Slagle said a more partisan House would be a result of "Democrats who are tired of Republican House members, the free-lunch bunch, practicing legislative socialism."

The Republicans' "view is you raise the money and we'll help you spend it in equal shares," Slagle said of the GOP anti-tax attitude.

Asked if Republicans, such as Toomey, could lose their committee chairmanships if he is re-elected speaker in 1989, Lewis said, "I think they pretty well know their future when they cast votes."

Out of gas

Dusty Campbell, an honorary messenger in the Texas House of Representatives, and son of State Rep. Ben Campbell, R-Flower Mound, sleeps with his head propped up as the House debates a tax proposal Monday. Lawmakers worked late into the night but failed to hammer out an agreement.

Man suspected of assault ordered to take AIDS test

HOUSTON (AP) — A parolee charged with sexually assaulting two teen-agers must submit to a blood test to determine whether he has been exposed to AIDS, a judge ruled.

Citing the interests of the victims and the safety of employees and inmates at the Harris County Jail, State District Judge Patricia Lykos on Monday ordered Clarence Shelvin to take a blood test to determine whether he has been exposed to AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

Prosecutors said the case was the first in Harris County and a spokesman for the Texas Attorney General's office said it was believed to be the first time in Texas a suspect in a criminal case has been ordered to take a test for the deadly virus.

Shelvin, 26, has been charged with aggravated sexual assault in the alleged attacks on two boys.

He was paroled from the Texas Department of Corrections in May after serving six years of a 16-year sentence for burglary and another case of sexual assault of a child.

Police have said although they have no reason to believe the man has been exposed to AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, they asked for the test as a precaution for the boys, ages 15 and 17.

John Paul Barnich, an attorney for the AIDS Foundation in Houston, criticized the ruling. He said whether Shelvin tests positive or negative, the victims still will have to be monitored for several months because it can take six months or more for AIDS anti-

Random thoughts on leftover drivel

Leftover drivel:

One last recollection from my reunion, and I promise I'll shut up at least until my next piece.

Four of us, all not yet wed, talked about our unmarried lives. Karlyn griped about the singles' scene in Tulsa. Kimi griped about the singles' scene in Dallas. Kathy griped about the singles' scene in Washington, D.C.

I was ready to really show them up with gripes about the singles' scene in Pampa when Karlyn beat me to the punch — "I'll bet it's really bad out there with all those cows."

Gripping about hometowns — even adopted ones — is like gripping about parents. We can gripe and moan all we want about the absence of eligible bachelors, the lack of inexpensive nice places to meet single people and the singles' groups made up of bitter divorcees. But let outsiders put down our hometowns and watch our civic pride well up.

What Pampa needs is a special event where the gals can meet nice eligible bachelors.

A belated "Boo Hiss" to Amarillo radio station KWAS for changing from a contemporary Christian format to country. KWAS had some of the best and uplifting music around before it surrendered to the worldly game of the ratings race. It also featured the provocative "Talk-back with Bob Larson," in which Larson took calls from heavy metal freaks, devil worshippers, drug addicts and Moonies and sometimes turned their lives toward the straight and narrow. He's better than the Church Lady.

Which brings me to a good question to bring up during your next "is rock'n' roll un-Christian" discussion: How come we never hear about any "Christian" swing bands from the Big Band era?

My little sister thinks the Miami Warriors sweat-shirts are "awesome." So, guess what she ended up getting for her birthday. I'm getting her a McLean Tiger shirt for Christmas. She never has given me back my Pampa Harvesters shirt, and I need it before football season.

People, magazine talked to casting directors about their choices to play Ollie North if a movie is made. The top contender was Aussie Mel Gibson, star of the Mad Max trilogy, appropriately enough. Runners-up included Treat Williams, star of the movie about the hijacker who jumped out of the airplane; Harrison Ford, star of Witness and Star Wars and Dennis Quaid, the buckaroo in Innerspace.

My nominee was probably overlooked by the People people, but everyone I talked to seemed to agree that Oliver North's exact double is James Noble, who played Governor Gatling on Benson.

From my "Oh, come off it!" department, the National Organization for Women, which elected a new president on Sunday, has a political agenda that includes protesting the pope's visit to the United States.

The news dispatch didn't give a reason for NOW's whining. But I suspect it's because of the good man's controversial stand against abortion and surrogate motherhood.

Well, what do you expect from ladies who go to work on Sunday?

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Computer chips are excuse for handout

The once-proud American computer-chip industry is the latest industry making the rounds of Capitol Hill with its hand out. It wants a subsidy from Congress. Urged on by a Defense Department that does not want to lag in weapons superiority, lawmakers probably will cave in to this latest appeal for corporate welfare. Congress should turn a deaf ear.

Chip makers want the government to pay half the cost of a six-year, $1.5-billion research and development project to restore U.S. dominance in a field that America invented. The project, called Sematech, would be a cooperative venture among companies willing to make their top researchers available to work in a national lab.

The model for this type of venture, not surprisingly, comes from Japan. It is the Japanese, of course, who have relegated the United States to the No. 2 spot in computer-chip manufacturing.

Today, only two American companies supply the world market with D-RAM's, the tiny memory chips used in products as diverse as missiles and talking toys. Experts say the fight over D-RAM's isn't worth it since they have become commodities and are prone to a glut like steel or soybeans.

The United States cannot afford to subsidize every technological breakthrough. Robotics, biotechnology, supercomputers and superconductors all have put in bids for government aid. Where would we stop?

Panic over Japanese successes is not a reasonable basis for public policy. What's more, IBM and AT&T could match the Japanese in high-grade chip production, and if needed, both firms would turn their production lines to national defense.

Potential members cannot even agree on what Sematech should do. Originally, it was envisioned as a large-scale manufacturer of memory chips, but lately its role is to build the next generation of electronic chips and equipment to produce them. It would be building prototypes, in other words, rather than mass-producing chips. In addition, some companies are reluctant to send their best engineers or share their secrets. A cooperative venture this is not.

Congress should turn down this plea for subsidization from an industry that once epitomized American technological dominance, entrepreneurial spirit and inventiveness. It's a sad day on the Potomac when the computer-chip industry begs for a handout.

"Here's a Personal with an interesting gimmick. The guy claims to be 'NORMAL.'"

Congress weakly slaps wrists

Congressional ethics is one of those terms, like "judicial restraint" or "socialist economics," that sound inherently self-contradictory. Most voters think members of Congress are akin to the shyster lawyer who, it was said, had been acquitted of numerous felonies.

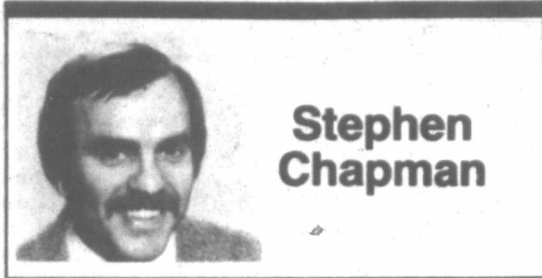

Politicians in a democracy extol their profession as a noble one and resent the popular skepticism. But confronted with lurid examples of venality, members of Congress generally grow so squeamish that they have to avert their eyes. Apparently the only thing worse than being suspected of corruption is being required to do something about it.

Sitting in judgment on one's colleagues is not a task anyone would envy. But there are other ways, which lack the outlandish defects of the existing system, to ensure that ethics laws are vigorously enforced.

What is missing now is a healthy dose of prosecutorial zeal. Congressional ethics committees are famous for carrying out dogged investigations of members accused of wrongdoing, carefully weighing the evidence, mercilessly reporting every transgression for public consideration and then generously letting the offender off unpunished.

Last month, the House committee found that Democrat Mary Rose Oaker of Ohio had paid an aide $45,000 in salary for two years after the aide had moved to New York. Because representatives from Ohio don't need or have offices in New York, that was a violation of House rules and federal law. Her only penalty was having to repay the money.

In April, the same committee had gone to heroic lengths to spare another colleague, New York Democrat Fernand St Germain, who is chairman of the banking committee. In 1985, The Wall Street Journal had documented how he had grown rich from what it called "lots of investment help from people and institutions that have benefited from his official actions."

The ethics committee somehow managed to validate the Journal's case while exonerating the accused. It found St Germain had violated the law in understating his net worth by $1 million on his financial disclosure forms and accepting free airline flights from a savings and loan group.

It also found that St Germain had intervened with federal regulators on behalf of a bank owned by a friend. He later bought a share of that bank — a purchase the forgetful congressman also failed to disclose. The punishment for abusing his office was the same as it would have been for not abusing his office: Nothing.

The handling of Oaker and St Germain is not exceptional. The exception is when unethical practices are actually penalized. Thanks to a Justice Department prosecution, Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, was sent to prison for omitting several hundred thousand dollars' worth of loans and income from his financial disclosure forms. Only after his conviction did the House grudgingly impose a reprimand, though it blanched at censure or expulsion.

A reprimand, mild as it is, was more than the House could hear in the case of Geraldine Ferraro. Her failure to report her husband's assets was based on the improbable claim that she expected to derive no benefit from them. Because she was leaving the House anyway, having given up her seat to run for vice president, the committee obligingly let the violations pass.

It is possible that Congress reached exactly the right result in each of these cases. But given the natural reluctance of members to punish their own friends and associates, and their vested interest in keeping ethical standards comfortably loose, voters have good reason to be suspicious.

True, the attorney general can pursue those offenders whom the ethics committee absolves. But heavy pressures discourage the executive branch from exercising strict scrutiny over the legislature. A Justice Department investigation of a congressman may be answered with a cut in the Justice Department's budget. If the investigation damages a member of the opposing party, it invites accusations of political harassment. If it clears a member of the president's party, it is vulnerable to the charge of whitewashing.

There is a simple way around all these obstacles, which was devised by Congress to remove the dilemmas of having the executive branch investigate its own top officials: Turn these matters over to special prosecutors, as proposed by Rep. E. Clay Shaw Jr., a Florida Republican. That would simultaneously elevate the public reputation of Congress and relieve its members of a burden for which they are demonstrably ill-suited.

The only danger it presents is to members who would rather preach ethics than practice them. But a Congress that is waxing eloquent in defending the rule of law against an overzealous White House is in no position to indulge those members who disdain the laws they have enacted.

Col. Jimmy Stewart licks 'em

It took me about six seconds of watching Lt. Col. Oliver North as he testified before the select committees investigating the Iran hanky-panky arms deal to decide whose side I was on.

Ollie's, of course, and I obviously am not alone. Each day the Marine testified, his public support grew, and I am here to tell you, in my view, some of the reasons why:

■ Most everybody, at one time or the other, has been in a similar situation as Oliver North. We have been called before our parents, our teachers, the board or some other such powerful and frightening bodies to explain what we did and why we did it.

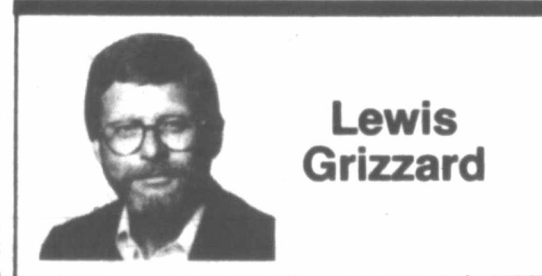

It's never fair. Guilty or not, you sit there like you've got a bull's-eye painted on your forehead and they come at you like piranha.

When I was in high school I lost a library book. I was called before the head librarian and her staff.

I didn't have a chance.

"You vil find this book and vil find it fast or this vil go on your permanent record and you vil never get into college or find a job or father children." I was told by the high tribunal.

Oliver North is going through the same sort of thing, although he would have known what to do if he had found the book. Put it in the shredder. ■ Nobody likes a smart-alecky, pushy lawyer.

Lewis Grizzard

First, North went before House committee counsel John Nields, who had that smirk on his face as he asked North the same question over and over again.

(At one bar, it was reported they switched the channels and watched a baseball game when Nields' questions became so repetitious.)

Lawyer Nields, who is half-baldheaded, not only smirked, he seemed to be making faces at North by pooching his lips from side to side. Nothing worse than a half-baldheaded, pooch-lipped lawyer.

Then, North went before Senate counsel Arthur Liman, who looked like a big toad frog eyeing a fly from his lily pad. Liman wore a sneer, too, one I've seen before in divorce court.

■ Lt. Col. North has testified that he didn't trust the Congress. That's something else most of us have in common with him.

■ The uniform. The closely-cropped hair. The intensity in the eyes. If you were in a bar or a war and a fight broke out, who would you rather have on your side — Ollie North or Arthur Liman?

■ Whereas the committee's counselors seemed heartless and downright mean, North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan, came off as one against many, much like his client.

If you were casting a movie based on all this, you'd want Wally Cox to play Brendan Sullivan. I realize Wally Cox is dead, but let's not get bogged down by details here.

Imagine, if you will, Mr. Peepers vs. Assassin #1 (Nields) and Assassin #2 (Liman). Think what a wrestling promoter could do with that.

And this in relation to all that: You like Lt. Col. North because he sort of reminds you of a young Jimmy Stewart, doesn't he?

Whether he's telling the truth or not he's got that same sort of Jimmy Stewart gosh-darn sincerity about him — and only perverts and pompous liberals could pull against Jimmy Stewart.

If I were Col. North's attorney, I'd find June Allyson and seat her directly behind the lieutenant colonel.

■ Then, you could call in the dogs and douse the fire. The witch hunt would be over.

Washington won't release aviation funds

By Robert Walters

KENNER, La. (NEA) — As in many other cities, New Orleans' principal airport originally was a military airfield that was turned over to the municipal government after World War II. "We even got the old quonset huts," one official recalls.

And like many other cities, New Orleans gladly accepted the gift but never really planned for an era in which commercial aviation would become a major mode of transportation.

Instead, the city relied upon patchwork additions and ad hoc improvements to the field, located in this suburb about 12 miles west of the central business district. As a result, New Orleans has a poorly designed airport that is almost half a century old and rapidly becoming wholly inadequate.

"Our glass is full but it hasn't spilled over yet. We're on the brink," says airport spokeswoman Janie Rhorer. "It's going to become an acute problem in five to six years."

New Orleans, say aviation industry officials, is one of approximately a dozen cities whose congested, chaotic airports ought to be replaced by entirely new, carefully planned fields before the end of this century. Also in that category are Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Phoenix, San Diego, St. Louis and Washington.

Each of the new fields will cost about $2 billion — money few cities have. But billions of dollars earmarked for new runways, navigational aids and other capital improvements languishes unspent in the federal treasury.

Specifically, the Aviation Trust Fund now holds $5.7 billion — and that surplus is projected to grow to $12 billion by the end of this decade if the money continues to be collected and spent at the current rate.

Those funds come from an 8 percent federal tax imposed on every airline ticket as well as a companion tariff levied on users of air cargo services. Federal law explicitly requires that the money be spent only on civil aviation.

But no law specifies when the money must be spent — and recent presidents have found it politically convenient to keep the Aviation Trust Fund flush with assets because it is part of the government's unified budget and thus offsets embarrassing shortfalls in other categories.

But while the money is being hoarded, pressure on the aviation industry continues to mount. Annual passenger boardings, which totaled just under 420 million last year, are expected to grow to 450 million this year, 650 million within a decade and more than 750 million by the end of the century.

Incoherent scheduling by the commercial airlines and inadequate staffing of the air traffic control system are the most frequently cited causes of increased problems such as flight delays and near-misses.

Less obvious are the inadequacies of the infrastructure that supports a sometimes antiquated system. The last major airport constructed anywhere in this country was the field that serves Dallas-Fort Worth. It was completed in 1974.

There currently are 16 major airports operating beyond their capacity and the Federal Aviation Administration predicts that the number will grow to 65 by the end of this century.

The FAA also estimates that at least $24 billion will be needed by 1995 to finance airport capital improvement projects to meet anticipated demand.

Prompt action is imperative because planning and building large airports is a lengthy process. In a typical large city, a major airport project initiated this year would not be completed until the beginning of the 21st century.

Much of the money to finance that work must come, as it always has, from state and local governments — but Washington officials must relinquish their stranglehold on the Aviation Trust Fund that provides the important federal contribution.

U.S. will seek sanctions if Iran ignores resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — With U.S. warships ready to begin escorting Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf, the Reagan administration is promising to push for sanctions if necessary to enforce a United Nations resolution calling for an end to the Iran-Iraq war.

Two Kuwaiti oil tankers flying the American flag will get under way and pick up Navy escorts tonight or early Wednesday Persian Gulf time, according to Pentagon officials who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

The two tankers, renamed the Bridgeton and the Gas Prince, were at anchor Monday in the northern Gulf of Oman, south of the entrance to the Persian Gulf at the Strait of Hormuz.

"Our forces are in place and the authorization has been finalized," one source said Monday.

There is an eight-hour time difference between Washington and the Persian Gulf.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater would not say when the escorts would begin but said the paperwork necessary to put the Bridgeton under the U.S. flag would be completed today.

"There is no change in the schedule," he said when asked if the escorting of Kuwaiti ships would be postponed because of Monday's U.N. vote.

"They are separate issues in the sense that this resolution calls for an end to the war," Fitzwater added. "The reflagging is a measure that can be taken to protect the tankers that are flowing through the gulf and to deter any activity there. Those are proceeding on parallel tracks."

The presidential spokesman said the administration hoped Iran would "take a second look and find reason to abide by this cease-fire."

Iraq supported the resolution, but Iran said in advance it would not heed the U.N. action.

"We are prepared to move ahead with the second resolution calling for sanctions, but we will wait a period of time until we see what their reactions are," Fitzwater said. "We think there is good support to take the next step, which would be sanctions."

He said the administration would be prepared to press for action on the second resolution "in a relatively short period of time."

President Reagan praised the Security Council action as a "historic step toward ending the increasingly dangerous conflict" and added, "We must not let that opportunity slip away."

"I urge all members of the United Nations to (use) their influence with the belligerents to persuade them to bring an end to this tragic war," the president said.

The Navy has assembled eight warships in the gulf in addition to the command ship LaSalle. The eight include three cruisers, the Fox, Worden and Reeves; one guided-missile destroyer, the Kidd; and four guided-missile frigates, the Crommelin, Jarrett, Klakring and Flatley.

Those vessels are backed up by the aircraft carrier Constellation and seven escorts, now steaming in the northern Arabian Sea. That position places the Constellation's planes within range of the Strait of Hormuz.

They will be available to respond if U.S. forces discover any effort by Iran to deploy and fire Silksworm anti-ship missiles.

All 15 nations on the U.N. Security Council voted for the U.S.-sponsored resolution demanding an end to the war.

Justice Blackmun undergoing prostate cancer treatment

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun has an excellent chance of recovering after treatment at the Mayo Clinic for prostate cancer, a clinic spokesman says.

Blackmun, author of the landmark 1973 ruling legalizing abortion, underwent surgery for prostate cancer in November 1977. He has experienced "a small and localized recurrence," clinic spokesman Michael O'Hara said Monday.

"The justice is undergoing treatment which is not incapacitating and is short-term," O'Hara said. "The prognosis is excellent."

Blackmun, 78, was staying at a Rochester hotel near the clinic, a switchboard operator said. He did not return phone messages.

The cancer, in the same area where the earlier malignancy occurred, was detected during a routine examination earlier this month, O'Hara said.

The recurrence was disclosed three days after reporters began inquiring Friday about Blackmun's health after he canceled a scheduled speech at a judges' conference.

Blackmun's Washington office said in a statement Friday that he had undergone minor hernia surgery earlier this month and was recuperating at his vacation home in Wisconsin. The statement did not mention cancer.

Both before and after the clinic's announcement

Monday, the Supreme Court's public information office in Washington depicted Blackmun as maintaining an active regimen of work and recreation.

But neither the clinic nor court spokesmen would provide further medical details. One question that remained unanswered was whether the cancer actually recurred in the prostate gland. The clinic had said in 1977 that Blackmun's prostate was removed.

Dr. Cassius Ellis, a Minneapolis surgeon who is familiar with prostate operations but is not involved in Blackmun's case, said it would not have been unusual for a man of the justice's age to have had an operation called a resection in which the entire prostate is not removed.

Ellis said that surgeons sometimes use the term prostate cancer to mean that a patient has cancer that began in the prostate and has spread to lymph nodes or surrounding bone.

About 1 in 11 men develop prostate cancer at some point, according to the American Cancer Society, which estimates that this year prostate cancer will be diagnosed in 96,000 men and claim 27,000 lives.

If Blackmun's cancer were to force his retirement, his departure would be especially significant because of the controversy over filling the seat of Justice Lewis F. Powell, who announced his retirement last month.

Poindexter: Pardon never offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter says he never was offered a presidential pardon, although the White House says such a step was considered as a means of getting the former national security adviser and his aide, Lt. Col. Oliver M. North, to testify in the Iran-Contra affair.

However, the administration now is not discussing the possibility of a pardon for either Poindexter, who resigned last November when the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contras was revealed, or North, who was fired.

The pardon issue came up in the House-Senate Iran-Contra hearings Monday, when Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, asked Poindexter if anyone ever talked to him about a pardon or if he knew of a Dec. 16 White House meeting last year at which one was discussed.

Poindexter said he had "certainly not" been approached about a pardon and knew nothing about any such meeting.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the White House could find no record of the meeting, which Stokes said was attended by the president, Attorney General Edwin Meese III and then-White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan.

However, Fitzwater said Dec. 16 was the day the White House issued a statement calling for a grant of immunity for Poindexter and North as an inducement for them to testify before the House and Senate investigating committees.

"The White House was considering any number of options for getting the story out and getting North and Poindexter to testify, and among these were granting of immunity and a pardon and ordering them to testify and anything else they could think of," he said.

Fitzwater said the then-House majority leader, Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, who now is speaker, "called for a full pardon at that point and made it a part of the public debate ... and so it was considered in that context."

However, the spokesman added, "The feeling was that granting of immunity was the right way, and the president recommended that in an effort to get the story out."

Terry Eastland, a Justice Department spokesman, said Meese had "no recollection about any discussion of a pardon," but didn't rule out the possibility.

Asked about more recent suggestions by former presidential aide Patrick J. Buchanan and others for a presidential pardon, Fitzwater said, "We have not discussed a pardon and don't think it is appropriate to do so."

The exchange Monday before the congressional committees was as follows:

Stokes: "Admiral, let me ask you this. Either before you resigned or subsequent to your resignation has anyone in the administration at any time discussed with you the question of congressional immunity or presidential pardon?"

Poindexter: "Certainly not a presidential pardon. We never did request congressional immunity. Other people discussed that. I — I haven't discussed it personally with anybody."

Stokes: "Admiral, are you aware of or have you ever been told of a meeting which occurred on the 16th December in the White House before the independent prosecutor was appointed, where a discussion took place between Attorney General Meese, Don Regan and the President regarding giving you and Colonel North either congressional immunity or a presidential pardon?"

Poindexter: "I — I don't know anything about that, Mr. Stokes."

INS says new immigration law not discouraging legalization attempts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 305,400 aliens have sought legalized status under the new immigration law, according to federal officials who deny that applications are down and that people are fearful of seeking legalization.

"We stand by our previous estimates of 2 million applications during the one-year eligibility period" which began May 5, Alan Nelson, director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Monday at a news conference.

He said there is "no basis" for suggestions from some in Congress and opponents of the new immigration law that legalization applications have been slower than expected.

Nelson also said the fact that more than 300,000 aliens have come directly to INS in 2½ months "should once and for all rebut ... allegations" that people are reluctant to seek legalization because of a fear of deportation.

Border apprehensions rose 35 percent in June, but Nelson denied that the increase, coupled with the railroad boxcar deaths of 18 Mexican nationals, signifies that the nation's new immigration law isn't working.

The newly implemented Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 attempts to stem the flow of illegal aliens crossing the border. It seeks to accomplish this through employer sanctions, amnesty provisions for aliens who have been here continuously for the past 5½ years, an agricultural workers program allowing migrant workers to enter the United States during harvest season and allocating increased resources for border patrol.

The June apprehension level of 93,790 illegal aliens was up more than 24,000 from May, but was below the June 1986 figure of 133,400 apprehensions. The June numbers followed two months of sharp decline that marked the lowest level in at least five years in border apprehensions for the spring months.

"We believe this upturn most likely resulted from information which mistakenly led people to believe that the employer sanctions law will not be enforced," Nelson said.

In addition, some growers in the Northwest have been complaining of labor shortages, which Nelson said "may have contributed to the recent upsurge (in apprehensions)."

Woman pleads guilty in murder for hire

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A lawyer says he'll seek probation for a Texas woman who pleaded guilty to federal charges that she used interstate telephone lines to hire someone to murder her husband.

At the request of her husband, U.S. District Judge A.J. McNamara Monday let Carolyn Sue Huebner, 29, of San Antonio, remain free on $5,000 bond until her Aug. 26 sentencing. She faces a maximum punishment of 7½ years' imprisonment.

Standing with his arm around his sobbing wife's waist, Larry Huebner told the judge: "I stand behind her... Both I and our (5-year-old) daughter need her now. I do not fear for my life from Carolyn."

"To a great extent, it's you, Mr. Huebner, who are making the decision," McNamara said.

Her lawyer, George Simno III, said he would ask McNamara for probation on grounds that Mrs. Huebner was confused and overcome by stress as a result of her work with sexually abused children in Texas.

"I never thought I'd be driven emotionally to do what I did. For many reasons, I was confused," she said after Monday's proceedings.

"The reason I pleaded guilty was basically to get this thing behind me, to protect my family from a very lengthy trial.

"I'm glad today's over. I'm tired," said Mrs. Huebner, a nominee for 1987 Woman of the Year in San Antonio and president of Texas Child Search.

The FBI said Mrs. Huebner gave a suburban Gretna man a $500 downpayment on a $10,000 contract to kill her husband, a San Antonio oil company executive, when the couple arrived May 23 on a visit to New Orleans.

The plan was to kill Huebner the next day as the couple walked in the French Quarter, the FBI said. No motive was ever disclosed.

The Gretna man, who has not been identified, was operating as an FBI informant when he allegedly received the money, authorities said.

The payment, in travelers' checks, was made with money Mrs. Huebner withdrew from the Texas Child Search bank account in San Antonio, the FBI said.

Simno has said the Gretna man contacted Mrs. Huebner a year ago and volunteered to do private investigative work for Texas Child Search.

"My husband never did anything to deserve my actions," Mrs. Huebner said after Monday's proceedings.

"Carolyn has experienced things, stressful situations because of her work, that most people never experience," Larry Huebner said.

"I want her home to be with me and my child," he said. "I would have been very upset if the judge had not continued her on the same bond so she could continue to try to piece her life back together."

The couple has been married eight years and has a 5-year-old daughter.

"I think she should have been detained," said U.S. Attorney John Volz.

Postal talks continue past deadline

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Postal Service and its two largest unions talked past a midnight deadline early today in efforts to reach agreement on a new labor contract and head off a costly and complex arbitration process that could reach into the Christmas season.

The law bars postal workers from striking, and negotiators said they were optimistic that an accord could be reached.

Officials of the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers said "conversations" between the two sides still were going on at a Washington hotel early today. Formal talks were cut off last Wednesday.

"Nobody has left the hotel, either side," said Jim Van Loosen, a spokesman for the Postal Service.

The unions, which together represent 579,000 employees, on Monday reduced their wage increase proposals from 6.8 percent to 4.5 percent for each of three years.

The last time postal workers walked off the job en masse was in 1970, before the Postal Service became a self-financed government corporation covered by 1971 laws banning strikes among federal workers.

"It would be counterproductive," postal workers union President Moe Biller said of the possibility of a walkout, particularly with President Reagan's resolve to fire striking government workers, as he did with more than 11,000 air traffic controllers in 1981.

"The ball is in their court," letter carriers president Vincent R. Sombretto said in calling for the Postal Service to come up with a new "fair and decent offer."

The Postal Service on Sunday laid on the bargaining table what Biller called a "Chinese menu" of proposals, including one offering what union officials described as 1.6 percent annual increases above the inflation rate in exchange for greater "work force flexibility."

Postal Service officials said any of the alternative proposals offered to the unions would allow the quasi-government agency to operate within a budget that anticipates approval of an increase in mail rates next year—from 22 cents to 25 cents for a first-class stamp.

The two sides negotiated late into the night Sunday and informal conversations continued Monday.

But neither side appeared willing to be the first to call for a resumption of formal talks.

Jail trusty who killed deputy is captured

ANDERSON (AP) — Grimes County Sheriff Bob Foster says he is to blame for his spare gun being used by a jail trusty to shoot a deputy to death during an escape.

An emotional Foster made the statement a few hours before a large contingent of law enforcement officers cornered James Herbert Mann in an area a few miles southeast of Anderson and captured him without incident.

Foster said Mann, 26, who had been convicted on two robbery charges, shot deputy Wesley Alford to death during the Sunday night escape from the county jail.

Mann was arrested after he confronted a rural Grimes County family and demanded car keys and cigarettes. He was shot once in the leg with a shotgun during the confrontation with the family, but managed to escape from that area.

Mann was taken to a local hospital, but Foster said Mann's wounds were from shotgun pellets and that Mann was not seriously injured.

Mann was arrested about 10:30 p.m. after authorities chased him from the family's home to about five miles south of Anderson. He was formally charged with capital murder late Monday in the slaying of Alford.

Authorities said Mann, once charged with a murder in Harris County, shot Alford, 22, in the face with a .25-caliber automatic pistol.

Foster 42, said Mann, a 27-year-old trusty with an extensive criminal record in Harris County, was being allowed to serve sentences totaling 25 years in the county jail for a 1986 aggravated robbery because he thought Mann was a good worker.

"I don't know what to say. I'll take the blame for it," Foster told the Houston Post, his voice cracking with emotion.

Foster, 42, has been Grimes County sheriff since 1978.

Authorities said Mann, who knew the sheriff was attending a convention in Fort Worth Sunday, fled in the jailer's pickup truck to the sheriff's country home a few miles south of town.

Foster said Mann admitted Monday night that he took a .25-caliber pistol from the glove compartment of Foster's county car parked next to the jail.

Mann later abandoned the pickup Sunday night, but was captured Monday night as he apparently headed back toward it.

Although armed with a rifle and another pistol, officers said Mann offered no resistance when bloodhounds from the Texas Department of Corrections found him cowering in thick underbrush after an hourlong chase by deputies on foot and on horseback.

"No way we ever would have got him without the dogs," Foster said.

Deputies brought dogs into the area after an Anderson family reported Mann had confronted them at their home east of Anderson and demanded car keys and cigarettes.

Someone at the home fired two shots at Mann who before he returned fire with the rifle.

No one at the residence was injured, he added. Lawmen said they were puzzled at the violent nature of Mann's escape.

According to another trusty who witnessed the killing, Mann had been outside the jail, but went back inside and called Alford into the kitchen area.

Foster said Mann ordered Alford, a former military policeman and one-year member of the sheriff's department, to lie on the floor several times. Alford lunged toward Mann and was shot once in the head, Foster said.

Mann then locked the other trusty in a cell and fled in Alford's pickup, Foster said.

One puzzling aspect of the escape, Foster said, was that Mann frequently worked on county property without supervision and could have walked away on many occasions.

Lawmen numbered about 200 and came from as far away as Galveston to take part in the search for Mann. Roadblocks were set up on every road leading out of the Anderson area and as far away as Navasota.

Two young flyers meet in aviation record bid

DALLAS (AP) — A California boy, during one of his stops in a bid to become the youngest aviator to fly across the country, has met a competitor who already claimed the feat.

Christopher Lee Marshall, 10, of Oceano, Calif., was scheduled to leave Dallas at 8 a.m. today for Montgomery, Ala. On Monday, he landed at Red Bird Airport in Dallas, where he was greeted by John Kevin Hill, 11, and Hill's parents.

John's father, Johnny Hill, questioned Marshall and his instructor, Rowe Yates, about their flight.

"After we looked at the pilot, we decided that we wasn't too much worried about this particular one. He didn't impress us," Hill said.

"He (Christopher) never checked with the National Aeronautics Association... so in our books he's just another guy flying across the United States. Just someone who is copying John Kevin Hill."

Attempts to set flight records must be cleared with the NAA, which sets specific guidelines for such achievements, Hill said.

"They claim they're not out to set a record. We don't know what he's doing," Hill said. "We wish him the best of luck and all the success in the world on this thing."

John, who has received offers for endorsements and will appear in an anti-drug abuse commercial, says Marshall's flight bothers him "maybe just a little bit."

But Yates said the trip was "a learning experience, not a record-setting experience."

"We did indeed get the idea (for the flight) from John and there's just absolutely no friction on our part at all. It would be neat if the two kids on down the road worked for the same airline or were both astronauts," Yates said.

The youth already has mentioned that the mountains and terrain is nothing like what he has seen in his geography textbooks, Yates said.

"I hope they both solo on their 16th birthday," he said.

Marshall flew into Childress Airport at 1:45 p.m., saying he enjoyed the trip from Albuquerque International Airport.

Hill and his flight instructor flew in hops from Los Angeles to a July 1 landing at Washington, D.C.

Marshall took off Saturday from his coastal hometown 150 miles northwest of Los Angeles, flying to Bakersfield, Calif. and on to Palm Springs, where he spent the night. He is too young for pilot's license, so he is accompanied by Yates.

Christopher was born with severe club feet and spent three years in leg casts. His mother, Gail, said doctors predicted he would never walk, but two operations performed when he was 3 helped correct the condition.

The young pilot started hanging around his hometown airport when he was 7 years old, Yates said.

"He came to the airport on his bicycle and said he wanted to be around airplanes," Yates said. That's when Yates handed Christopher a broom to sweep airplane hangars.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Tedium tasks might not be your cup of tea today. It's best to focus your efforts on jobs that don't require an intense attention span. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't make heavy demands on a close pal today. This person may not be in the position to comply with your wishes and will resent being imposed on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Care must be taken not to annoy those who are running the show today. Antagonizing authority figures could bring their wrath down on your head.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be open-minded in your thinking today, and willing to listen to what others have to say. Someone to whom you'll be talking might have ideas superior to yours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone with whom you'll be doing business today may try to convince you that he is doing you a favor, when in reality, he needs you more than you need him.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something may occur today that could make you feel you've run into a brick wall, but if you analyze it coolly, you'll see it's an obstacle that can be circumvented.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There is a chance you will be a rather slow starter today. However, if you are persistent and determined, you will pick up momentum and successfully complete that which you begin.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, don't push yourself on groups where the welcome mat isn't out. Instead, spend time with friends who appreciate your company.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The rug could be pulled out from under you today in a situation that you think you have under control. Be prepared to make hasty adjustments.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today, keep individuals who are not directly concerned out of your affairs. Their influence could create confusion that will get you off course.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be stingy today, but, by the same token, use your common sense before lending anything of value to a person who never returns what she borrows.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You won't appreciate having your independence tampered with today. It's best to avoid a strong-willed acquaintance who'd like to arrange your schedule for you.

Basement becomes extra living space

Wish your home were bigger? The space you need may be right under your feet. In fact it is, if you have an unfinished basement.

It's valuable space, too. If building costs in your locale run around $50 a square foot and your basement measures a typical 20 by 30 feet, you've already got $30,000 invested in your basement. But its real value lies in the dividends it pays when it's finished off properly.

Take the basement remodeled for a working couple with two teenage girls (and a son away at college). As completed, the basement contains four distinct but connecting areas: a ballet-aerobics area, an exercise machine area, a comfortably appointed TV area, and a snack center whose mini refrigerator and microwave occupy a nook built into the space under the stairs.

The ballet-aerobics area has a mirrored wall replete with ballet bar. A handy bench placed against the stairwell at the opposite side from the snack center offers a spot to sit and catch your breath, and contains storage compartments for floor exercise mats.

Separating the ballet-aerobics area from the exercise machine area is a long, low planter. The plants are, of course, fabulous fakes that don't require any water or sunlight.

Through with your workout? The TV area has a comfortable sofa, two upholstered chairs and a coffee table. The furniture faces the TV, which sits in a custom-made cabinet whose shape echoes that of the planter. Consistency of colors, shapes and patterns is critical in decorating a large open space.

The color scheme is a refreshing white, pale wintergreen and peach — nice light, soft colors for a naturally somewhat dark basement.

The no-wax floor is white with crisscross wintergreen stripes. Above it, the suspended ceiling (great for hiding pipes, ducts, wiring) repeats the geometric pattern of the floor. The ceiling's 2-foot by 2-foot acoustical panels rest in a crisscross metal grid painted the same wintergreen color found in the floor.

All of the cabinets and built-ins are constructed of top-grade plywood covered with wintergreen-colored laminate. The mini blinds at the windows are wintergreen, too.

The wallpaper pattern consists of alternating stripes of lighter and darker shades of peach. Also peach-colored are the painted sliding wooden doors that close off various storage areas and a laundry room. And peach and wintergreen are the predominant colors in the sofa upholstery.

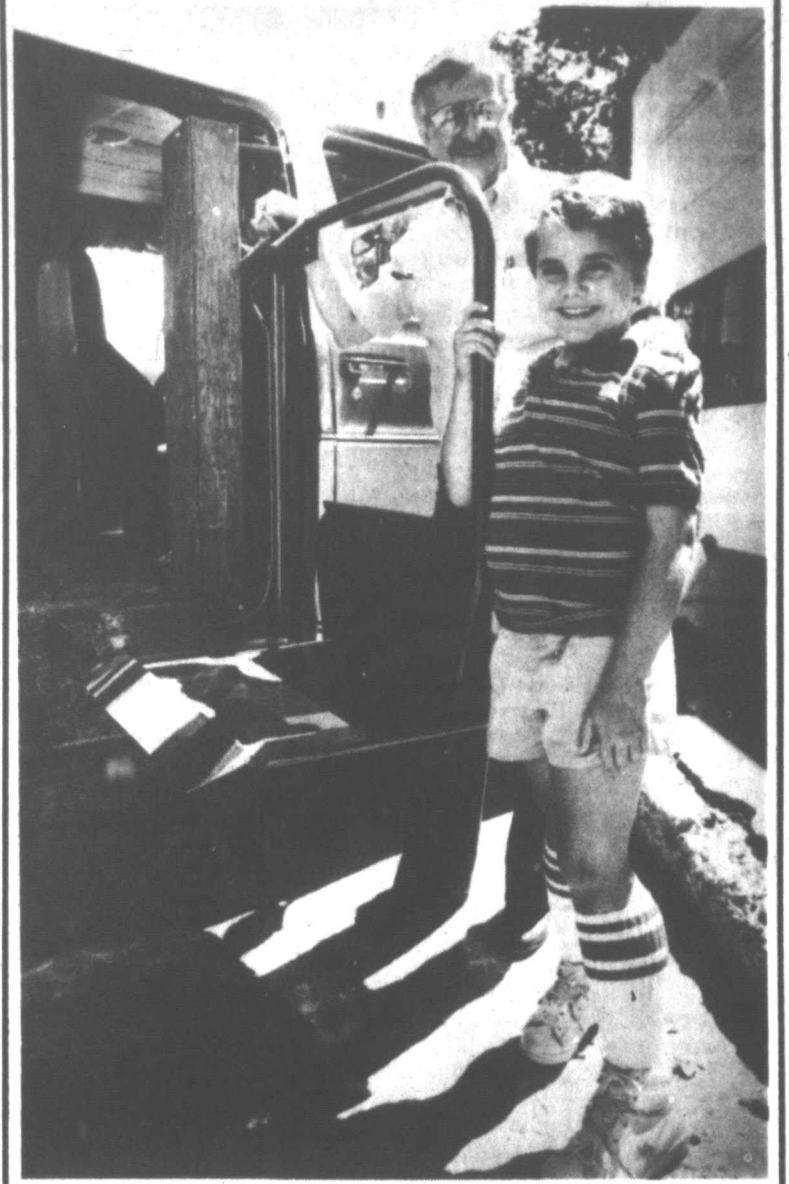

Both practical and decorative, this basement exemplifies careful planning, good taste, consistency and attention to detail. They're the keys to any successful remodeling project.

Beyond the TV area with its comfortable seating are exercise machines and a portion of the ballet-aerobics area. The basement owners' dog, named Hutchins, has his own "pet port" in the stairwell for observing doings below.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Arizona no longer haven from allergies

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man moved from East Texas to the dry, desert climate of Arizona 47 years ago to get rid of his allergies. But, yearning for the pastoral serenity of his former home, the man planted the same lush Bermuda grass and shady mulberry trees that had caused the allergies in the first place.

So did thousands of others who migrated to that part of the country in the last 30 years, and now Tucson, among many Southwestern cities, is fighting the same wars against pollen that are familiar to most Eastern and Northern states.

Neighbors object to man's whistling

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live in a beautiful home alongside another beautiful home. The elderly gentleman and his wife who own it work on their yard all year around, and it looks wonderful. The problem? The man whistles. Oh, my God, how he whistles! From early morning until late at night that insidious sound comes through closed windows, doors and walls. The sound is nerve-racking. When he stops for a few minutes, we hold our breaths and say a silent prayer. But luck is not with us because he starts to whistle again.

We had a cookout for friends on our patio last week and our neighbor started whistling again. By the time the food was served, everybody was snapping at each other. Abby, this walking tea kettle is making our lives miserable.

My husband says there is no way we can stop a person from whistling. Can you help us?

BJ DuBIELE, WELCHES, ORE.

DEAR BJ: Your neighbor whistles! What a joyful sound! Would you prefer neighbors who yelled, screamed, fought and threw things all night? Or neighbors whose kids played rock music from dawn until dark? Some folks have neighbors whose kids practice the tuba in the daytime and drums at night.

And you're complaining about a neighbor who whistles! Hallelujah and praise the Lord, lady. Send him a case of something to wet his whistle, and count your blessings.

What are your thoughts on the subject?

PESTERED

DEAR PESTERED: Same as yours, and it's not a case of one woman supporting another woman. A man is entitled to the same right to privacy. I refer to past "romances" — prison records and children born out of wedlock excepted.

DEAR ABBY: An article in a recent issue of Reader's Digest lays practically all the blame for impoliteness in America on the young. This is nothing new. The older generation has always criticized the younger generation. I would like to defend today's youth.

I have witnessed several instances where an older person showed no consideration for a younger person. For example: An older gentleman pushed ahead of me to pay at a gas station. When I informed him that I was also waiting in line, he said, "I just have to give the cashier my $20." "And I just have to give the cashier my $10," I replied. "Then give it to him!" he said curtly.

Abby, I'm 24, but many people mistake me for a teen-ager because I look like one. Consequently, I am treated like a kid and know firsthand that most adults are very rude to kids. They either think that kids have no rights, or they lump them together as "troublemakers."

The problem of rudeness in this country is not the fault of the young people; it's the fault of the older generation who are responsible for teaching courtesy and setting a good example for the younger generation to follow.

SETTING MY OWN EXAMPLE

DEAR SETTING: Hear, hear!

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064.)

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can settle an argument between my husband and me. He says now that we are married he has the right to know all about everything I have ever done — every boyfriend I ever had, everything we did, every place we went, etc. He says a wife has no right to privacy as far as her husband is concerned. He is driving me crazy with his pestering to tell him "everything." I say that what I did before we got married is none of his business.

Mattingly matches putout record

AL roundup

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

As soon as Don Mattingly stopped tying records with his bat, he started matching major-league marks with his glove.

Mattingly tied the record for putouts by a first baseman with 22 Monday night as Tommy John and the New York Yankees beat the Minnesota Twins 7-1.

"Another record. Just what I need," Mattingly joked. "With two outs in the ninth, I saw it on the board and I couldn't believe it."

"I'm really not doing anything on those, just catching the ball," he said. "The credit goes to Tommy."

Mattingly's night, however, was not all good. He went 0-for-4 and ended his American League streak of extra-base hits in 10 straight games. Moreover, he aggravated an injury to his right wrist and "may have to miss a few games," Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said.

On Saturday night, Mattingly tied a major-league record with a home run in his eighth straight game.

John, 9-3, pitched a seven-hitter in the matchup of AL division leaders at the Metrodome. It was his first complete-game victory since July 8, 1984.

John walked one, struck out one and had Minnesota hitting groundballs, the way he usually wins. John won his 273rd major-league game and tied Red Ruffing for 24th place on the all-time list.

Mattingly got all three putouts in the ninth inning to tie the record that has been accomplished three times, the last by Ernie Banks in 1963.

Mike Pagliarulo broke open a scoreless game with a two-run homer in the fifth off Les Straker, 5-6. Mark Salas, traded by Minnesota to the Yankees this season, hit a three-run homer in the seventh.

In other AL games, Cleveland took Kansas City 9-5, Toronto beat Texas 5-3, Baltimore defeated Chicago 4-1, Detroit edged Oakland 5-4, Milwaukee bruised Seattle 13-11 and California got past Boston 3-2.

Indians 9, Royals 5

Brook Jacoby went 4-for-4 and Cleveland beat Bret Saberhagen and slumping Kansas City.

Saberhagen, 15-4, was tagged for six runs on 10 hits in 3 1-3 innings in his shortest outing of the season. The Royals have lost six straight games and 11 of their last 12.

Phil Niekro, 7-9, won his 318th career game and first since June 20 despite giving up five runs in five innings. Doug Jones finished with one-hit relief.

Orioles 4, White Sox 1

Ken Gerhart hit a two-run single during a four-run fifth inning and Baltimore won its sixth straight game by winning in rainy Chicago.

The game was called in the top of the sixth. It had been delayed twice in the fifth for a total of 77 minutes.

Mike Griffin, 2-3, pitched four innings and Doug Corbett finished for his first save. Neil Allen, 0-4, lost in his first start since coming off the disabled list.

Blue Jays 5, Rangers 3

Garth Iorg homered twice and doubled as Toronto beat Texas for the ninth time in 10 games this season.

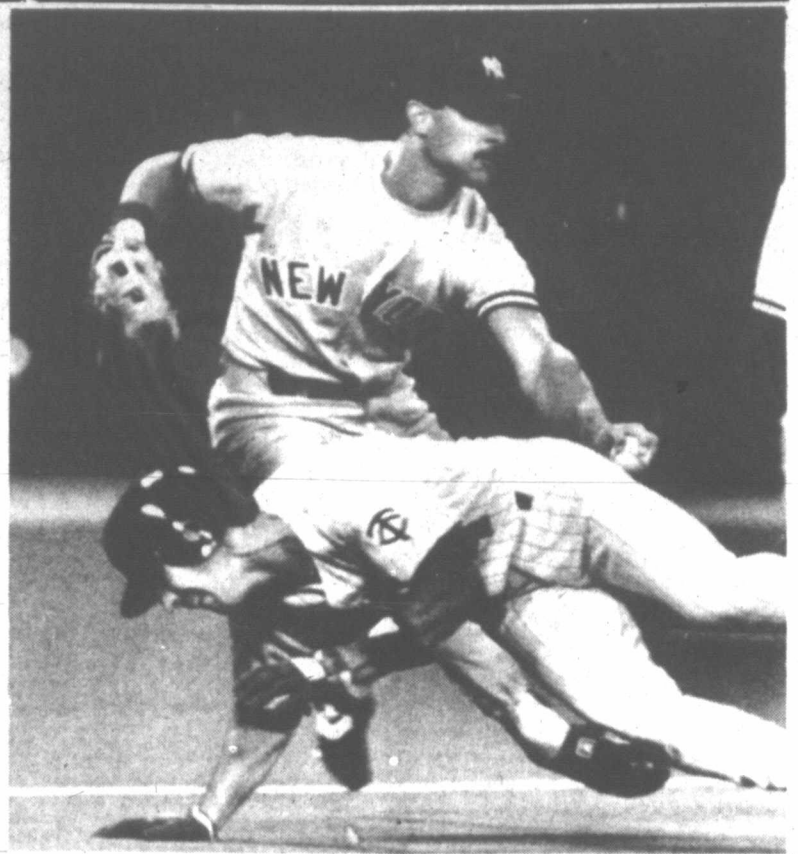

John Cerutti, 6-2, gave up three runs on five hits in 6 2-3 innings. Tom Henke pitched the final two innings for his 19th save.

Charlie Hough, 10-6, took the loss. Larry Parrish homered for the host Rangers.

Brewers 13, Mariners 11

Robin Yount and Glenn Braggs each drove home three runs as Milwaukee won a wild one against visiting Seattle.

The start of the game was delayed two hours, 38 minutes by rain, and it took 3:20 to play.

Pampa wins marathon game

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

A nine inning game can usually be found only in the major leagues.

Occasionally, though, if you look hard enough, you can find one at the younger levels.

Take Monday night's opening round game in the Texas West District Bambino Tournament at Optimist Park for instance.

In nine innings, the Pampa American League All-Stars slipped by the Tulia All-Stars 9-8.

And, a wild one it was.

Pampa's Eddie Hernandez could do no wrong in the contest, going 5-for-5 at the plate, with a homer, double and three singles. Hernandez also scored three runs.

With the game tied at 4-4 in the fifth inning, Tulia pitcher Alvin Martinez stepped to the plate and hammered a three-run homer to deep center field, and Tulia suddenly led for the first time in the game 7-4.

In the Pampa half of the fifth, the AL All-Stars loaded the bases following back-to-back singles by Matt Clark and Hernandez.

Tulia pitcher Dwain Hawthorne, who entered the game in the fifth, walked in Pampa's fifth run and the locals were down by two runs going into what normally would have been the final inning — the sixth.

Pampa had a chance to tie the game in the sixth, but base running miscues accounted for two outs in the inning as runners tried to score from third but were thrown out on two separate occasions.

In the sixth, it was again time for "The Eddie Hernandez Show," as he drove in two runs to tie the game with a bases loaded single.

That's when things started getting weird.

With the game on the line for both teams, Pampa pitcher Clarence Reed hit a sharp chopper up the middle to Tulia second baseman Ryan Prater. Prater scooped up the ball, stepped on second to force out Hernandez and then slung the ball home in time for Steve Saldana to tag out Matt Clark.

By Bambino standards — even by major league standards — it was a magnificent defensive effort by Prater for the double play.

Saldana blocked the plate well all night, stepping two feet down the third base line on at least three occasions to tag out unsuspecting Pampa runners.

At the end of six, the score was knotted at seven apiece.

At the end of seven it was still tied.

Same story after eight innings. Both Tulia and Pampa pitching shined in the first two extra frames. Only Tulia's Hawthorne allowed a base runner, that in the seventh, as Brandon Brashears received a free pass.

In the top of the ninth, Tulia's Ulysses Herrera hit a two-out home run that put Tulia in front 8-7.

It looked bleak for Pampa. But, it wasn't after all ...

A feeling of hope swept over the crowd in the bottom of the ninth, because Hernandez stepped to the plate and proceeded to park an opposite field home run in the right field windshields.

With the score tied at eight, Clarence Reed singled and Sabas Armendarez doubled. Pampa had runners at second and third.

Hawthorne, whose control was erratic throughout the evening, then walked Brashears to load the bases.

Pinch hitter Micah Brooks came to the plate hoping to hit a dramatic shot to win the game for the Pampans.

Instead, he received a shot to the head as Hawthorne's wild pitch hit Brooks. Brooks was credited with the game winning RBI when Reed scored from third.

Pampa was also helped earlier in the game when Matt Clark hit a one-out solo homer in the third.

The Pampa AL All-Stars will meet the Pampa NL All-Stars tonight at 7 p.m. at Optimist Park.

The loser of tonight's game will play Tulia Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Lee named new Canadian coach

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

CANADIAN — The Canadian school board didn't have to look far for a new boys basketball coach to succeed the recently resigned Greg Nichols.

When they looked in their own backyard — wallah! — they found Robert Lee, who most recently served as the Canadian boys track and field boss.

Officials were in a quandary for a while, as the middle of summer is not the ideal time to find replacements in the world of high school coaching.

Nichols resigned in June to accept the basketball post at Coalgate, Okla.

Wildcat athletic director Paul Wilson nominated Lee at the July board meeting, and he was unanimously accepted.

"When we lost Coach Nichols," Wilson said, "I looked for the best I could find and it was Coach Lee."

"Coach Lee's an excellent coach and he'll build our program while improving our program in the lower grades."

Wilson and Lee have been together since their days at White Deer when Wilson was AD and Lee was the boys roundball coach. All in all, the two are embarking on their sixth year together, although Lee was at White Deer several years before Wilson was named to the Buck position.

"I'm excited," Lee said. "I think the kids are gonna be excited and we're gonna have a good year."

"I'm not gonna try to turn the program around, but just build on what we already have."

Lee, a self-described "sports enthusiast-nut" who enjoys all sports, said Canadian has good inside shooters, but added the one thing lacking for the Wildcats is a point guard to help lead the team.

Lee has a proven track record in basketball, having coached the Bucks to a .650 winning percentage in the two years he spent under AD Wilson at White Deer.

Lee coached at White Deer for eleven years before making the move northeast.

In previous years in Canadian, Lee has served as the football team's defensive coordinator. His increased basketball duties, though, will result in a cutback of his gridiron responsibilities. He expects to help out with the freshman team and also work with the varsity offensive line.

In the '86-'87 season under Nichols, the Wildcats advanced to the playoffs, but lost in area action.

Pampa girls advance

DUMAS — Pampa's Little League girls all-star team assured itself of at least runner-up status in the District I tournament Monday by beating Borger 29-24.

Pampa pitchers Andree Lowrie and Kasey Bowers allowed Borger four hits, while walking 26 in the seesaw battle. Lowrie struck out five before being relieved by Bowers in the fifth inning.

Pampa batted around in every inning but the fourth and held an 11-run lead after four. But Borger came roaring back with a 12-run fifth to take the lead 23-22.

The lead was short-lived, however, as Pampa scored seven runs on singles by Lowrie, Bowers and Casie Schmidt — and four walks by Borger pitcher Robbyn Smith — to take the lead for good.

The Pampa effort was aided by a four-for-four hitting performance by Kelly Haines, who also had two throwing assists from left field.

Pampa won the right to play Dumas at 7:30 p.m. today. Dumas has handed Pampa its only defeat in the double-elimination tournament.

If Pampa wins, a championship game is set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday. If the Dumas girls win, they are tournament champions.

The tournament winner travels to Weatherford for a regional tournament.

Palmer seeks financial help

Masters record-holder Wendell Palmer is looking for some help with expenses in traveling to state and national meets next month.

If he can gather enough donations, the Pampa Middle School science teacher plans to enter the state meet Aug. 1 at Dallas and the National Masters meet Aug. 14-16 in Eugene, Ore. Palmer plans to enter eight events at the state meet and seven at nationals.

Palmer, a teacher at Pampa

Middle School, holds the world 1.5 kilo discus record and the American 2.0 discus record in the 55 and over division. He has also earned Masters All-American status in the discus, shot put, long jump, high jump, javelin and hammer.

Palmer also hopes to compete in the Rocky Mountain Games Sept. 6-7 in Denver, Colo.

Persons interested in helping Palmer can contact him at 665-1238.

Canyon wins district

Pampa was defeated by Canyon 13-12 last Saturday in the District 13-year-old Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament at Optimist Park.

The victory gave Canyon the District 13 title and eliminated Pampa from further competition.

Life begins at 84 for Tri-State Senior golfer

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

For Amarillo's Gurney Dodd, life begins again at 84.

He's the Panhandle's own version of George Burns.

Dodd, you see, just got married. On April 25 of this year, Dodd was wed for the second time and he and his wife are as happy as larks.

With no offense to his new bride, one must understand that Dodd's first love is golf.

For 70 years, Gurney Dodd has played the links in and around the Tri-State area. He is in town this week for the 53rd Tri-State Senior Golf Association Tournament at the Pampa Country Club.

The tournament will feature senior amateurs in match and stroke play Wednesday thru Friday with a men's scramble set for today.

Although Dodd is a lover of the game, he lets on that he doesn't necessarily care for his game and more or less changes the subject when asked to discuss it. "It's too lousy to talk about," Dodd said. "I'm just one of those old boys that likes to play golf."

Born in Wichita, Kan., Dodd moved to Amarillo in 1926 and was crowned Amarillo Municipal Champion in 1930 and 1931.

Despite being less than happy with his stroke, Dodd does have a few favorite memories, one of which he recalls after 70 years have passed.

"(In 1917) at the Wichita Country Club, I won the first ever cadie tournament where there was a silver cup awarded.

"A man asked me, 'Do you think you can win?' and I told him yes, so he gave me the silver cup."

He was just 14 at the time. He has had a love affair with the greens and tees ever since.

Dodd has been playing in the seniors tournament in Pampa for 37 years. He first played in the tourney when he was 50 — back when the half-century mark was the minimum age instead of the present 55 — and is very fond of the course at the local country club.

"The Pampa course is in the best shape I've ever seen it in," Dodd said. "They've sure done a lot of improvements in the past year."

In his younger days, Dodd caddied for the likes of Walter Hagen, Joe Kirkwood and John Black, but none of those are his favorite.

"I always said Johnny Munn was the best golfer to ever hit the Panhandle," Dodd said. "But, he's just another golfer friend of mine."

Dodd will be at the Pampa Country Club throughout the week, although not actually participating in the match or stroke play. The reason?

"I haven't played much in the last year," he said. "Maybe three, four, five times. You've gotta play and practice everyday in order to be good."

As a matter of fact the last time

Dodd participated in an organized tourney was at last year's Tri-State event.

Dodd and his first wife were married for 60 years before she passed away.

As with the first wife, his new bride of two months is treating him well. Dodd said the two of them just thought marriage was a good idea.

"She's a nice person and we were both single at the time," he said. "The two of us thought it was a good idea. I'll be married 'til I give up ... and I'm gonna live to be 100 or better."

Nancy Lopez celebrates with her family.

Lopez inducted into LPGA Hall of Fame

By BRIAN TRUDELLE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Having met a career goal she didn't initially set for herself, Nancy Lopez doesn't know what her next target will be. "I guess the only goal would be Kathy Whitworth's 88 victories," Lopez said Monday night when she became the 11th and second youngest player to be inducted into the LPGA Hall of Fame. "But that's a lot of tournaments."

Lopez was given a framed certificate and a got a surprise visit from her husband Ray Knight in a tearful induction ceremony at Tiffany's.

Knight, the Baltimore Orioles third baseman, was to have been in Chicago Monday night for a game against the White Sox but was given the night off to be with his wife.

Lopez cried as she watched a five-minute video presentation that contained congratulations from President Reagan, former President Gerald Ford, golfing greats Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, tennis star Chris Evert, and Dinah Shore, the sponsor of one of the four major tournaments on the women's tour.

Five fellow Hall of Famers congratulated her in person including Betty Jameson, Carol Mann, Betty Rawls, Louise Suggs and Patty Berg.

"My career has been short, it seems, so far," Lopez said to crowd of about 500, "but I have nothing to complain about. It's a wonderful night for me. I feel so special."

The 30-year-old Lopez qualified for the Hall of Fame by winning her 35th tournament on Feb. 8, the Sarasota Classic, then had to wait until July, her 10th anniversary on the tour.

The LPGA Hall of Fame requires 10 years on the tour and victories in 30 official events, including two different major championships; or 35 victories and one major; or 40 victories.

Mickey Wright, who won 82 tournaments, was the youngest to be inducted into the Hall of Fame, 29 in 1964.

"The spirit of the Hall of Fame is so special, that the odds of getting in should not be in everyone's favor," Mann said. "But (for Lopez) the danger is a player may not look at this as a benchmark and think her career is over."

"I warned Nancy, and so did Nicklaus on the tape in a subtle way, that this is not the end and to look at this as a benchmark."

Lopez doesn't worry about that right now. "You want to win," Lopez said. "You want to feel that wonderful feeling of winning a tournament. Of making that putt on the 18th, feeling that pressure."

Lopez began her career in 1977, playing in two events and finishing in the top five both times. In 1978, she gained national attention winning nine events, including an LPGA record five consecutive tournaments.

She was named Rookie of the Year, Player of the Year and won the Vare Trophy for the lowest stroke average, 71.76.

She won eight more events in 1979, but many consider her best year the 1985 season, when she won five tournaments, won the Player of the Year for the third time, set an LPGA record with a 70.73 stroke average to win the Vare Trophy for the third time, won the Mazda-LPGA point series, and set a career earnings mark with $416,472.

She is fourth on the career earnings list, having won $1,796,933, behind Pat Bradley, JoAnne Carner and Amy Alcott.

Muse continues Festival heroics

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Dante Muse and J.R. Reid didn't let the pressure bother them as they continued their U.S. Olympic Festival heroics.

Muse, a 20-year-old roller speedskater from Des Moines, Iowa, won three gold medals Monday, bringing his festival haul this year to five, the same number he won in 1986. Reid, the 6-foot-9 sophomore center from the University of North Carolina, hit five free throws down the stretch, including the decisive point, as the South moved into Wednesday's gold medal basketball game with a 77-76 victory over the East.

Reid's team will meet the North, even though that team lost a 109-103 shootout to the West in the other game. In women's play, the South and West will tangle. The West won 64-50 over the North behind 13 points and 12 rebounds from Pauline Jordan. The South got 14 points from Carla Green in an 85-66 victory over the East.

The hockey competition begins today in Greensboro. Approximately 30 players will be selected from the tournament for the U.S. Olympic team's training camp at Lake Placid, N.Y. Tennis and boxing finals also were on the schedule.

Ticket sales were on a record pace, organizers said, having reached $2.35 million with a week to go.

"I would never have expected us to be at this point," Hill Carrow, president and executive director of the festival, said. "We have gone beyond all expectations."

The record for ticket sales was set in Houston last year. This year's event was only $50,000 shy of the mark with one week remaining.

Muse completed his performances at Dorton Arena in Raleigh with a sizzling show. He won the 500 in the afternoon, the 3,000 at night and then helped the East win the 4,000 relay in a record time of 7 minutes, 9.44 seconds.

On Sunday, he won the 1,000- and 1,500-meter races.

"I really did feel the pressure," Muse said. "People kept asking me if I could win five golds again this year and that causes some pressure."

Reid is accustomed to pressure, having started as a freshman at North Carolina, which was ranked No. 1 for much of the season. But he calmly made his free throws in the final 3:52 and finished with 14 points and eight rebounds.

"I had to make those shots," Reid said. "I wasn't thinking about the pressure."

Tracy Compton of Santa Maria, Calif., had a near-perfect act in softball. She pitched a no-hitter, allowing just one walk in facing the minimum 21 batters as the East beat the West 1-0.

Compton, who fanned 11, walked Elise King leading off the third inning and King was forced at second on a sacrifice bunt attempt by Barb Jordan. Jordan was thrown out stealing.

The East got its run in the first on doubles by Gina Vecchione of Yonkers, N.Y., and Pat Dufficy of Westery, R.I.

Blind boy operates business, urges merchandise handling

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A 12-year-old blind boy who owns a store catering to blind children offers hope along with toys to his customers, who are free to touch the merchandise.

Denny Daughters, who lost his sight as an infant, has been the legal owner and operator of Denny's Please Touch boutique since his parents opened it in 1984.

He buys all his own merchandise, including Braille scales and playing cards; talking clocks; Braille Monopoly and Scrabble games; and footballs and volleyballs that beep in midair so blind players can hear them coming.

"When we went to stores, people kept saying 'don't touch' — and that's the way Denny can see things, by touching," the boy's stepfather, Dan Richardson, said Monday. "We decided to open a store where kids could touch things without being yelled at."

Melody Daughters, Denny's mother, is not surprised at Denny's business acumen, especially considering the variety of his other interests such as skiing, surfing, basketball and horseback riding.

"It's amazing to me that people think it's amazing," she said. "Blind children can do anything they want — they just have to be taught."

Denny earns $10 a week from the non-profit business, plus "all the toys he can handle," she said. "He loves it. He thoroughly enjoys what he does here."

Besides toys, store customers can feel green-and-purple wisteria vines made of paper stretching across the ceiling, stuffed animals and puppets in every cubbyhole, and a scruffy, motorized alley cat that bobs in and out of a beat-up garbage can in one corner.

Melody Daughters said she lined the store walls with pictures of Denny having a good time because she wanted to offer an "emotional support station" for parents of blind children.

"Parents come in with (blind) babies and they're grieving, like I was grieving," she said. "So this is my way of saying to her — it's going to be OK. Your child's going to be great."

Falwell, Swaggart meet with congressman about hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national association of TV preachers is developing an ethics code with "teeth in it" in response to congressional inquiries triggered by evangelist Jim Bakker's fall, say television evangelists Jerry Falwell and Jimmy Swaggart.

"I think open discussions, hearings and things that are of a voluntary nature are certainly in order," Falwell said Monday. His Jerry Falwell Ministries of Lynchburg, Va., took over when Bakker resigned as head of the PTL, or Praise the Lord, television ministry last March.

"But most of us who believe in the 1st Amendment and practice it, want to be very sure that while we do scrutinize ourselves that we don't become answerable to Caesar," said Falwell.

Swaggart said the nation's Christian broadcasters are capable of policing themselves and are going to prove that with their new ethics panel. He operates Jimmy Swaggart Ministries of Baton Rouge, La.

"I don't really see the need for congressional scrutiny," said Swaggart. "We should scrutinize ourselves. We should be the cleanest, the most honorable the most honest on the face of the earth. That's what we preach, that's what we should do."

The comments followed an hour meeting with Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, who last week sent letters to 11 television evangelists asking how they would feel about congressional hearings into their operations.

Pickle, chairman of the Ways and Means oversight subcommittee, said he plans hearings sometime in the near future designed to determine how federal tax regulations apply to television ministries.

"If they are tax exempt, I feel there should be some accountability," said Pickle. "There should be a standard for compliance. There should be disclosure so that the public can see that the money they're giving is going to the purpose to which they gave it."

After the meeting, Falwell told reporters that Pickle's inquiry was both timely and appropriate, but added that any hearings should not touch on the freedom religious organizations enjoy under the Constitution.

To that end, National Religious Broadcasters is preparing a code of ethics to be implemented by a panel to be called the ethics and financial integrity commission, all of which will be in place within 60 days, Falwell said.

"It's going to have teeth in it and we feel that we're going to go further than Congress would have," Swaggart said. "There be financial accountability, because we feel this PTL thing has been a gross embarrassment to us. We don't believe that we should be painted with the same brush that PTL has been painted with."

Jim Bakker resigned after details of a sexual relationship between him and a church secretary were disclosed. Various arms of the federal government are probing his PTL ministry, standing for Praise the Lord or People that Love.

"I don't think anybody here wants to see anybody in prison, but I think everybody here knows that some tough days are ahead for certain people," Falwell said, indicating he feels the Bakkers' problems are widening.

Pickle said the meeting was positive and said the ministers in attendance were cooperative and encouraging regarding his intention to hold hearings into television ministries sometime after the August congressional recess.

Also present at the meeting were Ben Armstrong and Bob Cook of National Religious Broadcasters of Morristown, N.J.; Paul Crouch of Trinity Broadcast Network, Santa Ana, Calif., and attorneys for the NRB.

Names in the News

ATLANTA (AP) — Miss Carter and 14 others, including Hoffman, were arrested in November at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst while protesting activities of the Central Intelligence Agency. They were acquitted of misdemeanor charges.

Hoffman charged Saturday that Miss Carter was dismissed from Brown for political reasons. "Here you have the one person under 30 ... who was making any political waves in the whole country and she gets booted," Hoffman said.

BOSTON (AP) — The Kennedy clan turned out to open a park dedicated to Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy, who turns 97 on Wednesday, and other Gold Star mothers.

All of us in the Kennedy family are grateful ... for the special place you have created here for mother," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said in a keynote speech Monday. The $700,000 Boston Redevelopment Authority project features a rose garden within a one-acre park, and a fountain.

Mrs. Kennedy's first son, Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., died on a combat mission during World War II, when the Gold Star concept originated to recognize mothers who lost offspring in war.

Two other of Mrs. Kennedy's sons, President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, were assassinated.

Relatives at the ceremony included one of Mrs. Kennedy's daughters, Eunice Kennedy Shriver; Rep. Joe Kennedy, son of Robert; Edward Kennedy Jr., his sister Kara, and their cousin, Michael Kennedy, another of Robert's sons.

Also present was Mary G. McNally, of Fitchburg, who lost her only child in Vietnam and is national president of the Gold Star mothers.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Catcher turned comedian Bob Uecker says he probably could have made a better showing during his major-league baseball career if he had worked as hard then as he does now.

"I've never had a problem yet!" making people laugh, he said in the July 25 issue of TV Guide. "And if I ever thought I was bombing, I'd take my clothes off and stand up there naked, see if that'd make them laugh. I never had the same determination about baseball."

Alley designer mixes art and science to light up theater

By CAROLE KEENEY
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP)—Standing on the Alley Theater stage in her Reebok tennis shoes, white baggy pants and striped shirt, Pamela A. Gray raises her hand. The lights go up.

The crew rumbles around on the catwalks above, waiting for her signals. The lights on the stage begin to take shape. Upstage, a bright square emerges, the edges sharp, forming a well-defined box.

"Lock it," Ms. Gray, 32, says to the people above.

The pattern she's created is set into position. She raises her hand again and light moves to the edge of the stage. As she watches, it covers the entire area in front of her.

Her job is creating magic with light. As lighting designer at the Alley, she's the person who spotlights the actors who would otherwise be disembodied voices on stage. The job is a combination of physics, mathematics, geometry and electrical engineering mixed with a large dose of artistic ability.

"It's a talent of perception to be able to visualize a lighting design," Ms. Gray said. "You're either born with it or you're not." But it takes many hours of work to use that talent. When preparing for a show, some weeks she works as many as 110 hours. It all starts with a reading of the script. Beginning there, the vision of her finished product takes shape.

"When I read a play, I see it in my mind as if I were watching a movie. I see the way it's lit depending upon what the characters are wearing, what they are doing, what time of day it is, the whole surface impression," Ms. Gray said.

The next step is to sit down with the director and other designers to discuss color. From the costumes and set colors, Ms. Gray decides what lights she will use to best show off the actors.

The Alley has 280 lighting instruments on the Large Stage. For a recent production of the "Gin Game," she used 240 instruments. Since actors were seen from all sides of the theater, the lighting requirements were demanding.

To decide which lights to use and where to place them takes hours of work, much of it at a drafting board. Ms. Gray unfolds a lighting plot. The 180 lights she will need to do "Shooting Stars," which opened last week, on the Large Stage look like footprints in a large garden.

But getting that garden in shape took time.

Such a lighting plot can take anywhere from six hours to 2 1/2 days, working 10 to 12 hours a day at the drafting board. After the plot is drawn, Ms. Gray then feeds light level settings and timing cues into a computer.

The refinements come as she stands on the stage and directs her crew to tilt and turn each light to get just the desired effect.

When she does, it plays with the audience's mind.

"You can tell an audience where they should be looking, how they should look—that has to do with mood—or upset them, threaten them. To do that, you use light they don't normally run into during the course of the day."

Light shot from beneath the actors creates eerie shadows, suggesting a downbeat mood. To scare the audience, Ms. Gray says fast shifts will do the trick. She puts a dark place on the stage, then instantly reveals something unexpected to the audience.

Dazzling them is easy, she says, and that is done by focusing lights in the audience's face, then flashing them.

"You can get pretty much anything that's required," she said. "What you must remember as a lighting designer is that you shouldn't get obvious about it. If somebody in the audience says: 'Gee, that was interesting lighting,' you haven't done your job."

Ms. Gray's career rise has been rapid. A 1976 graduate of Northwestern University, she received a master's degree in fine arts at the University of Oklahoma. She worked four years at Washington D.C.'s Arena Stage before coming to the Alley in 1982 as a master electrician. She has been involved in about 70 productions at the Houston theater, and became its lighting designer in 1985.

This summer she married Bob Bones, a stage manager for Theater Under the Stars.

Ms. Gray is one of about 35 female lighting designers in the country. She says she plans to stay in the work permanently, eventually combining teaching with theater work.

But she knows she wants to stay near the footlights.

"I think having a 9-to-5 job would bore me senseless in about three weeks," she said. "This is always challenging. You're always coming up with a new set of problems."

Pioneer continues building wagons

By BONNIE LASITER
Palestine Herald-Press

PALESTINE (AP)—Family photos cover the fireplace mantle. A large print of The Stagecoach by Norman Rockwell hangs above the couch. The furniture is made with wagon wheels and is covered with western motifs.

Family and horses. Carl Kruger's living room tells the story of his two loves.

Kruger moved from Kansas to Palestine 10 years ago to be near his daughter, who lives next door. And with him he brought his talent for building wagons.

The sign outside his garage says The Carriage Shop. Inside, Kruger brings the days of horse-drawn transportation back to life.

In all, Kruger has built about 4 carts and wagons—just for his own use. He hasn't kept a count of how many wagons and harnesses he has built for others.

"I've always loved horses and loved to fool with stuff like that," he said.

"It's fascinating to me because I did it for so long. Why, when the wife and I were first married, we went to town in a lumber wagon."

Kruger's family prompted him to build his first harness and wagon in 1941.

"We had three children and it was too much to take them out all on ponies, so I built a wagon as a way to take them all," he said.

From there, he almost built a business out of his hobby. "I do it more as a hobby than to make money—you could get too involved," he said.

Kruger's showcase piece is a stagecoach he built when the nation was celebrating its bicentennial.

The idea for the coach came from a magazine article. From there, the project was his alone. He drew the plans, making the coach on a five-eighths scale so it could be pulled by a team of Shetland ponies.

Another craftsman was going to make the wheels, but he got sick and Kruger had to do them himself.

"Putting the tires on the wheels—that was the hardest part," Kruger said.

It took him 1 1/2 years to build the 1,400-pound coach, steam bending the wooden sides and blacksmithing the frame and tongue. It is authentic down to its seat and window covers and kerosene lanterns for lights. It is pulled by a team of four ponies usually bridled in an elaborate "parade" harness that Kruger made. He uses his wagons and stagecoach mainly for parades.

Inside and out, the stage can carry as many as nine people, cruising at 4 mph. "I usually have it pretty well loaded. It has a lot of miles on it," he said.

Kruger calls on his background in heavy construction for his craft.

"I've always been mechanically inclined. I could always build whatever I wanted."

A recent project is a surrey with a fringe on top for a man in Neches.

Kruger's work is authentic, but sometimes has a few modern touches. One of his wagons has car tires on it so he can pull it behind his truck on the highway.

Because of the death of his wife, he hasn't had his wagons out much this year, but he plans to get a team of ponies and get back on the parade circuit.

"She was with me in everything I did. (Her death) kind of took the starch out of me. But I had to do something, so I got back in it."

"I was going to sell (the stagecoach) when she died, but my son and daughter wouldn't let me."
