Pampa Gets Forecast Of Showers

The weatherman is predicting the possibility of showers today and Wednesday, but so far there has only been a trace of moisture in the area the past two days. A dissipated cold front moving in from New Mexico is expected Wednesday to depress temperatures only slightly from today's expected high in the low 60s. The front is expected to carry the prospect of possible showers for the Panhandle.

The thermometer climbed to 65 Tuesday, and today's early morning low was 53. By noon the weatherman reported the mercury at 59. Wednesday's forecast is for mostly cloudy with occasional showers, cooler tonight and Wednesday.

Dense fog enshrouded East Texas and occasional light rain fell in West Texas Tuesday morning as warm, humid air continued to give Texas unseasonal winter weather. Early morning temperature ranged from 44 degrees at Presidio to 64 at Del Rio, Cotulla and San Antonio with most of the state in the lower 60s Monday's highs fell between 50 at Dalhart and 85 at Laredo.

Area Farmer Wins Cotton Acreage Case

AMARILLO — (Special) — Shamrock Farmer Owen B. Harvey has won his fight with the government which involved a $241.33 penalty and nine acres of cotton.

However, U. S. Attorney William B. West III of Fort Worth, said he believed the ruling by District Judge Joe B. Dooley, Amarillo, was based on the peculiar nature of the case itself and will be of little value in affecting future government action in matters of this nature.

Judge Dooley's ruling was mailed to attorneys in the case. He wrote that no notice of the defendant's cotton acreage allotment for the year 1950 was ever sent him as required by the statute.

Harvey's battle with the government began in 1951 when the PMA committee notified him that he must pay a penalty for growing and selling cotton on nine acres of land when no acreage allotment had been issued.

Harvey refused to pay and the government filed suit. The case was heard in Judge Dooley's court in Amarillo last month.

Parr Asks For Change In Venue

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., Jan. 4 —UP—South Texas political boss George Parr sought Tuesday to get a change of venue for his income tax evasion trial because he claimed victimization by local newspapers made a fair trial here impossible.

A motion filed in federal court by attorneys for Parr Monday asked that his trial be moved from Corpus Christi to Laredo. He alleged that a similar "campaign of victimization, defamation and abuse" by local newspapers also existed in Houston, Galveston, Brownsville and Victoria divisions of the southern judicial district.

Fog Grips Central U.S.

By UNITED PRESS

A blanket of fog, drizzle and rain, which closed Chicago's Midway airport and stranded hundreds of travelers, stretched from Kansas almost to the Great Lakes Tuesday.

Planes bound for Chicago were turned back. One of them carried the Harlem Globe Trotters professional basketball team, which had been scheduled to play a game with the Washington Generals in Chicago stadium.

The Globe Trotters had to return to Detroit and the game was cancelled.

The weather bureau said the band of fog and rain stretched from eastern Kansas to just south of the Great Lakes early Tuesday and was from 200 to 300 miles wide.

The blanket also moved into the northern Appalachian areas, causing snow in some northern areas.

Unseasonably mild temperatures accompanied the dank weather and temperatures in the 60s and 50s covered the southern plains and lower Mississippi Valley early Tuesday. Farther north readings in the 40s and 50s were common.

Elsewhere, snow, sleet and rain hit southern New England and the Pacific Northwest a cold snap dropped temperatures to 25 as far south as San Francisco.

A freak hurricane, the first to appear in the West Indies during January, moved into the Caribbean, and western Europe was gripped by a cold wave which caused at least 16 deaths.

At Echo Lake, Calif., the end of a severe mountain storm allowed news to come through of how four skiers were buried alive by an avalanche and survived.

The skiers, three of them noted mountain climbers, said the avalanche buried them as they started out in a snowstorm to climb Mt. Ralston on New Year's Day. Luckily another band of skiers chanced by and rescued the four.

Reds Off Limits In Gray County

Citizens of Soviet Russia may never get a look at the high plains of the Pampa area.

Pampa was included in a large block of land which has been ruled "off limits" to Russian citizens. The ruling was made by the U. S. State Department as a reprisal to a move by the Soviets which barred certain areas in Russia from American tourists.

In playing tit for tat with the Soviets, the U. S. declared more than one-fourth of the U. S. "off limits" to Russian travelers.

The ruling, in effect immediately, applies to all Soviet citizens in this country except about 50 accredited to the United Nations as employees of the U. N. Secretariat. It is estimated that about 400 Russians and their families are affected by the new ruling.

Among the areas declared "off limits" are Panhandle counties including Carson, Gray, Hutchinson, Lipscomb, Ochiltree and Wheeler.

In all, there were 47 of Texas' 254 counties included in the ruling.

Shepperd 'Caller' Is Hunted

Death Threat May Be Work Of Crank

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 4 —UP—A full investigation by Texas Rangers was promised Tuesday after anonymous telephone calls warned Attorney General John Ben Shepperd and a newspaper man of "a bullet through the head" unless they stayed out of a land program probe.

Rangers moved into the case and local police alerted district radio patrol cars to watch closely the homes of Shepperd and Raymond Brooks, a veteran statehouse reporter and Austin American Statesman columnist. Gov. Allan Shivers promised a "full investigation."

Almost identical calls, apparently from the same man, threatened in cryptic telephone calls Monday that death would be the penalty for further investigation of the $100,000,000 Veterans Land Program.

Committee Studies Program — A state Senate committee has been studying the program and Shepperd was in Cuero Monday for a meeting with the DeWitt county grand jury that is looking into the South Texas phase of it.

A Negro maid, Bertha Marie Sneed, took the call at the Shepperd home and Mrs. Brooks received the other call. Mrs. Brooks said the caller was very businesslike and told her: "You tell Raymond Brooks if he doesn't keep his nose out of this veterans land business, I'll put a bullet through his head."

Shepperd said the threat "will not deter me in any way." He pointed out that he received a similar death warning in December, 1952, while he was investigating alleged Communist infiltration into Texas labor unions.

The call a year ago, he said, (See SHEPPERD, Page 3)

U.S. To Pay For H-Deaths

TOKYO, Jan. 4 —UP—The United States has agreed to pay Japan $2 million for loss of life and property as result of its hydrogen bomb tests in the Pacific this year, the foreign office announced Tuesday.

The agreement was signed by Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu and U. S. Ambassador John Allison at a ceremony at the foreign ministry building.

Allison assured the Japanese in an informal statement after the signing that the United States "will take every possible precaution" against a recurrence of the Fortunate Dragon incident in future tests.

"This is not a safe world," he warned. "It is sometimes necessary to make dangerous experiments. But they should be surrounded by the utmost precautions."

Japanese officials hoped the agreement would heal the anti-American feelings which were aroused by the atom bombing of 23 Japanese tuna fishermen near Bikini March 1 last year and end the agitation against further H-bomb tests.

The United States specified that it did not recognize any legal responsibility to compensate the fishermen of the Japanese fishing industry for subsequent losses as a result of the "atomic tuna fishers" which followed the illness of 22 fishermen and the death of one of them.

Grand Jury Indicts 10

The first Gray County Grand Jury of the new year Monday returned 10 indictments and recessed until Monday.

Howard J. Eldredge, 41, of 613 S. Henry, was indicted for the statutory rape Dec. 25 of his 15-year-old daughter. District Judge Lewis M. Goodrich ordered that Eldredge be held in jail without bond.

Hubert K. Adkiam was indicted for assault with intent to murder. His bond was set at $3,000.

Other eight indicted were Roy T. Jennings, passing a forged instrument; Harlan H. Belt, second offense of driving while intoxicated; Harold Lloyd Davis, forging; Charles Alexander Cato and Elmer J. Kilpatrick, burglary; Bryan Combs, passing a counterfeit coin; John Nolan Wise, general; and Marion Vandever, burglary.

City Postpones Contract Action On Legal Ads

The Pampa City Commission today tabled for a week action on the contract for the publishing of legal documents for the City of Pampa.

E Roy Smith, publisher of The Pampa Daily News, appeared before the commission and said it was his understanding that the city a year ago, when it awarded the contract to The Daily Spokesman, intended to rotate the contract each year between Pampa's two daily papers.

Minutes Consulted — City Secy. Ed Vicars, looking back in the commission minutes, found that The Spokesman had been awarded the contract Jan. 12, 1954, for the "municipal year."

Mayor Tom Rose said he personally did not remember the intent of the commission on the matter of rotation. City Atty. Bob Gordon said he figured "municipal year" meant one year from the date of the contract.

As City Commissioner W. D. Varson was absent, action was deferred until next Tuesday morning.

Pass Readings — In other action, the commission:

(1) Passed on the second of three readings proposed ordinances for the zoning of the Red Deer Addition, loading zones for two Pampa businesses and closing the paving hearing for the 100-block of West 20th St.

(2) Heard James Cowan, city director of public works, quote a letter from George C. Hawley, chief engineer for state fire insurance board, to the effect that Pampa should have a second fire zone for industrial concerns.

(3) Okayed estimates on curb-and-gutter work for W. R. Colville, Amarillo, and the transfer of $28,700 of the graveling fund from street improvement fund to the general fund.

Panama Assassins Not 'Local Talent'

PANAMA CITY, Jan. 4 —UP—Military police seeking the murderers of President Jose A. Remon Tuesday reported growing indications his assassins were "trigger-men" sent here from abroad, possibly by the Communists.

The national assembly has proclaimed a 10-day "state of siege" modified martial law to aid the investigation and more than 30 persons are under arrest, but the identity and motives of the tommy-gun slayers are still a mystery.

The entire army has been alerted for a possible revolutionary attempt, but no disorders have been reported in the country since the slaying Sunday night.

In New York, Ernesto de la Ossa, head of the Panamanian delegation to the United Nations, said he believed the assassination was "Communist inspired." He told a radio reporter that Remon was "a vigorous anti-Communist in a country high on the Communist target list" and "I would bet my life it was a Communist plot."

Reports that a mysterious "gun moll" gave the signal for the shooting led to the arrest of two Panamanian women, Thelma King and Olga Yanis. So far nothing has been proved against them except that both were on the scene and both were carrying revolvers in their handbags.

The two women had been known as supporters of ex-President Arnulfo Arias, arrested as a suspect, but both are said recently to have switched their allegiance to the relatively unknown PRI party.

Norberto Navarro, principal leader of the PRI, has been living in Honduras for some months, but he came here for the Christmas holidays.

The lack of revolutionary activity weakened the presumptive case against Arias, whose only likely motive for engineering the assassination of Remon would be to try to seize control of the government.

84th Congress Opens Tomorrow

Two Parties Busy Choosing Leaders

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 —UP— Jubilant Democrats and less cheerful Republicans thronged back to the Capitol Tuesday to choose their leaders for the Democratic-controlled Congress which opens Wednesday.

Both parties in both houses scheduled conferences of all their members to get set for formal election Wednesday of House and Senate officials. Except for some lesser posts in the House, the results were foregone conclusions.

House Democrats scheduled a morning conference to nominate formally Rep. Sam Rayburn (Tex.) as speaker and to elect Rep. John W. McCormack (Mass.) as their floor leader. McCormack in turn will name a whip to be his chief assistant.

Gather for Party Elections — Republican senators gathered for formal election of their leaders. They also planned today nominations for Senate offices such as president pro tempore. The Democrats will vote them when the test comes Wednesday.

Later Tuesday Senate Democrats and House Republicans scheduled their party-wide conferences to name leaders.

Formally the Democratic senators were proposed to re-elect Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.) chairman of their conference, a post which automatically makes him party floor leader, chairman of the policy committee and also of the steering committee which has control over committee assignments.

Sen. Earle C. Clements (Ky.) had no advance opposition for re-election as Democratic whip nor did Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Mo.) to keep his post as secretary of the Democratic Senate conference.

George L. Obvious Nominee — Sen. Walter F. George (Ga.), senior member of the Senate, was the obvious Democratic nominee to succeed Sen. Styles Bridges (N. H.) as president pro tempore. The formal election takes place Wednesday when the new Senate organizes.

The same applies to Rayburn's election as speaker to succeed Rep. Joseph W. Martin (R-Mass.), who will become GOP House floor leader.

Rep. Charles A. Halleck (R-Ind.), present GOP floor leader, probably will be Martin's chief assistant in the new House. But he will hold no formal position. Rep. Leslie C. Arendes (R-Ill.) was in line to keep his post as party whip.

Among Senate Republicans, Sen. William F. Knowland (Calif.) was to continue as GOP floor leader. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.) as whip, Sen. Eugene D. Millikin (R-Colo.) as chairman of the GOP conference, and Sen. Milton R. Young (R-N. D.) as conference secretary.

Double Jeopardy — NEW BRITAIN, Conn. —UP— Two men escaped injury in a highway accident but wound up in the hospital anyway. Police said Frank Bavaro and Warren W. Hills were hurt in a fight over responsibility for the collision.

Seven persons were injured Monday when an electric transformer blew under a busy downtown street in Houston. Three heavy manhole covers were hurled through the air.

Most of the injured were burned by flames that spouted from the manholes. Smoke covered the area. Most seriously injured was Mrs. Dolores Hein, 35, who received second and third degree burns on each arm and leg.

Lowell McCarter, 40, a taxi driver, was hit on the hand by one cover.

MALOUF ABRAHAM ... won't quit

Canadian Mayor Will Keep Post

CANADIAN — Mayor Malouf Abraham will not resign his position and will continue his efforts to secure a city-manager form of government for the city.

Abraham, who announced last Tuesday that he would quit his job after the defeat of his city-manager proposal in an election Friday, told The Pampa News today he had reconsidered and would serve out his term.

The mayor said he had been assured by many prominent citizens that the defeat of the city-manager plan was not a non-confidence vote for the mayor.

Abraham took the blame for the defeat of the plan which failed to pass by 310 to 206. He said he had not worked hard for the plan, not realizing that the general public was uninformed on its virtues.

He said he should have gone out and worked harder for the proposal.

Abraham has long been an advocate of a full-time city manager to replace the part-time council and mayor operations which have guided Canadian's official business.

Abraham's term as mayor expires in April. He said he had no announcement to make concerning his plans after that time, but he said the issue of the city manager (See MAYOR, Page 3)

Ike Domestic Requests To Be Renewed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 —UP— President Eisenhower's State of the Union message Thursday will ask a Democratic congress to approve domestic legislation scuttled last year when his own Republican party was in control, congressional leaders said Tuesday.

The facts of political life being what they are, the President stands a good chance of getting at least some of these measures approved.

A more liberal reciprocal trade agreements program, for example, Mr. Eisenhower plans to ask for a three-year renewal of the program with new authority to cut tariffs. This idea was initiated by the Democrats 20 years ago and it still gets more support from Democratic ranks than it does from the GOP.

The President also probably will find greater sympathy among Democrats than he did among Republicans for additional public housing units and for revision of the Taft-Hartley law.

On the other hand, the Democrats are expected to resist his proposal for higher first-class postal rates, and for Hawaiian statehood without simultaneous Alaskan statehood. The last congress pushed through a bill increasing the pay of federal Civil Service and postal workers without an increase in mail rates. Mr. Eisenhower vetoed the bill.

Democrats succeeded in linking Alaskan statehood with Hawaiian statehood in the last congress. They will be out to do the same thing again. Whether the President would veto a bill providing statehood for both remains to be seen.

Maybe He Can Hire A Child To Do It

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 (UP)—I got what I've always wanted for Christmas—a Stanley Steamer automobile.

This wasn't a real one. It was a 69-cent model you have to glue together. A sort of a quick construction kit. The American Automobile Association headquarters here has some 25 of these tiny models in a show-case in the lobby of their new building.

My Steamer is a 1909 job. Also in the AAA exhibit are 1903 Cadillac, a 1910 replica of the model-T Ford, a 1911 Rolls Royce, and cars the very young among us never heard of, like the 1904 Rambler, the 1910 Pierce Arrow—not to mention a few others like the 1914 Stutz Bearcat, the 1908 Buick Rambler.

All are fine machines, of course. No Workshop Artist.

But mine would be the best of the model lot if I could get the plastic pieces assembled. I'm about as handy as a left-footed elephant when it comes to putting things together. The people who make these pieces tell you that you can "easily build one of these models in an hour." It adds, I hope in fun, that these "authentic 3-8 scale inch cars of bygone days will bring hours of fun for young and old."

Here were some of the instructions:

Place wheels on axles. Hold axle carefully over an open flame. I used a cigarette lighter and over-did it. There went two wheels. Slide steering column into slot in floorboard on right side of body. (See drawing.) The drawing didn't reveal much. And for lack of a slide column, which I didn't recognize on sight, another operation was lost.

Insert rear axle in right side of body. That shouldn't have been too difficult, but somehow it never got done.

And so it went. From front fender to left side of body to position on right side while I applied more and more glue.

Wont Drive It Anyway

Place steering wheel in hands of figure after paint is dry. The instructions wound up. I didn't bother to paint, so I didn't fuss around putting the steering thing year 1954.

"Now your model is complete and ready for the den or office," the instructions say.

Well, my model isn't ready for anything. I have a few missing parts, which I probably lost on the way home. I also have a few things like the rear axle and the sidelamps and the "upholstery" left over.

Houston Police Seize Heroin

HOUSTON, Jan. 4 (UP)—Police intercepted an automobile on U. S. Highway 90 here Sunday night and made the city's biggest heroin seizure in months.

Narcotics squad Capt. J. C. McMahon said five ounces of pure heroin, worth $5,000 but around $80,000 when adulterated, was found in the car.

Three Mexicans were held for questioning.

SAC Gets 1,000 B47s During 1954

OMAHA, Jan. 4 (UP)—The Strategic Air Command has received 1,000 B-47 Stratojets since the start of 1954, the command said Monday.

The SAC year-end report said the command planes logged about 1 million flying hours during the year 1954.

The SAC accident rate dropped to an all-time low of 13 mishaps for every 100,000 flying hours.

The command also said it started full production of the all jet B-52, and also produced its last B-36 during 1954. It said production orders were issued for the Convair B-58 medium bomber and the F-101A Voodoo fighter, both faster-than-sound planes.

Orders also were issued for a third new plane, the C-135 jet transport plane, the command said.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.; Bivalve, N. J., and Bluepoint, L. I., N. Y., all are connected with the oyster industry.

Rogers Talks 84th Congress In First Newsletter Of 1955

Rep. Walter Rogers of Pampa, Tex., in his first newsletter of the new year to a discussion of the 84th Congress, which convenes at noon Wednesday.

The opening of the new Congress will be preceded by Democratic and Republican caucuses and caucuses of the state delegations of each party, Rep. Rogers says.

Rep. Sam Rayburn of Bonham will be elected Speaker of the House by "approximately" 30 votes, the Pampa congressman figures.

After the reconvening of Congress, the representative goes on, there will be President Eisenhower's State of the Union Message, the starting gun of the first session of the 84th Congress.

Predicting there will be some "terrific" scraps on the floor of the House during the coming session, Rogers says. "Most of the fireworks can be expected to come from intra-party fights, rather than from inter-party fights."

The congressman also discusses the removal of a Negro woman leader from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, "because she advocated admittance of Negro doctors on staffs of hospitals in Texas," the pressure being brought on the President to issue directives decreasing against the use of federal funds or guarantees in housing projects where segregation is or might be practiced.

The latter "is of utmost importance in the housing field," he concludes, "and will, no doubt, pose one of the big problems in the coming session of Congress."

HOLLYWOOD TODAY!

MOVIES - TV - RADIO
by Erskine Johnson

HOLLYWOOD—(NEA)—Gays and Dolls: Hollywood's handbook, titled "What Movie Kings Should Avoid," was tossed out the window by Robert Mitchum when he played two black-hearted scoundrels in a row.

He's the heavy in "Night of the Hunter" and "Track of the Cat" and not losing any sleep about it either because:

Most leading men avoid depopulation. I cultivate it.

On the "Not as a Stranger" set, Bob told me:

You come to a time, dad, when you have to work at something other than wading up with the other in every movie. I'm not going to end up in competition with even a romantic leading man in the business. I'd rather follow Humphrey Bogart and Spencer Tracy."

JACKIE GLEASON'S high TV ratings are no eyebrow lifter to the audience survey polls. He's in the "family" comic class—the outsters as well as the kids howl at his antics. A big chunk of his audience are youngsters under 12 years of age.

Hollywood isn't too sure about Betty Hutton sticking to her retirement plans but the "Movie-Queen-Calls-It-A-Day" plot has worked out fine for Anne Shirley. The dark-eyed star quit films 10 years ago and vows she has no hankering to face the cameras again.

Now Mrs. Charles Lederer, housewife and mother, Anne says:

I've had a wonderful life since I left pictures. But I'd die if I weren't around show business. My husband's in it and so are all my friends. The world I live in is still the one I know.

Anne's old movies are on TV now and then "but I only see 'All That Money Can Buy'—I don't want to see the others. Let's be kind and just say they've become dated."

ROD STEIGER won a movie contract after his acting in "Marlowe" and other TV dramatic shows, but he's happier about video winning him a fan following.

"My TV fan mail comes from the heartiest corner," he grinned. "No glamor to it. It's all the more heartening because the TV Plays I've done are off-beat. It proves that TV fans have an instinct for anything original and different."

Rod plays the lascivious "Judd" in the film version of "Oklahoma!" but says: "I don't think he's a heavy and I don't play him that way."

Alexis Smith's long battle against being typed as an icy, statuesque doll is beginning to pay off. She wiped the tears of icicles off her head when she laughed it off with Bing Crosby in "Here Comes the Groom" and then held it against a return to the refrigerator.

But her timing was bad. Hollywood stopped making lighthearted comedies. "I could have given up," Alexis tells it, and gone back to the old roles. Instead I did summer stock for two years and then made a film in England."

Now beaming over her role as the warm understanding wife in "The Admiral Houskins Story," she says:

I'll play anything that isn't hot and stately."

WANDA WEAVER isn't the only ballet-star giving it all up to concentrate on being an actress. Wanda, Finnish ballerina-Taina, is also shelving her dancing shoes to go along with MGM's campaign to build her into a dramatic star.

FRANKIE AND GLORIA

Heiress-actress Gloria Vanderbilt, 30, who earlier announced that she had separated from her husband, symphony conductor Leopold Stokowski, 67, goes backstage with her escort, singer Frank Sinatra, to congratulate the cast of the musical, "House of Flowers," in New York. She denied any romance with Sinatra and blamed the breakup of her marriage on Stokowski's prolonged musical tours (NEA Telephoto)

UN Envoy's China Task Unenviable TOKYO, Jan. 4—UP—United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold faces two big obstacles in his mission to Peiping to seek the release of 11 American airmen imprisoned as spies. UN officials here, both civilian and military, who have dealt with the Chinese Communists in Korea, say the obstacles are: 1. The Chinese Reds in propaganda broadcasts have said repeatedly that the airmen were properly convicted, and have implied that they do not intend to release them. The Reds have said also that the UN has no business interfering. 2. The Chinese Communists have a long record of violations of the Korean armistice. The sentencing of the uniformed American Air Force men as spies was only one instance of a violation. Some UN officials are extremely pessimistic about Hammarskjold's chance of inducing Premier Chou En-Lai to give up the prisoners. They predict flat failure. Some others express belief that a diplomatic "deal" is possible, but express doubt that it will be acceptable to the United States and its allies. The extreme pessimists, on the basis of Chinese Red broadcasts, say that the Peiping government has gone so far in asserting that the airmen are guilty that it would be almost impossible for it to reverse its stand. These officials point out the great volume of "evidence" the Reds have cited against the airmen. Other officials say the Communists can change their course at any time, as Red governments often do, if it suits their needs. They believe the Reds might find an excuse to deport the airmen provided they got enough in return.

McClellan To Be Tough As McCarthy

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—UP—Sen. John L. McClellan warned witnesses Tuesday not to expect soft treatment when he takes over as chairman of the Senate's investigations subcommittee. McClellan, the iron-jawed Arkansas Democrat who once was a county prosecutor, told friends he will be fair to all witnesses who appear before the subcommittee. But he said he will have little patience for those who refuse to testify. McCarthy bowed out as chairman of the subcommittee Monday after a day-long hearing on Communist infiltration into defense plants. He told newsmen: "I step down with both relief and regret. I hope John (McClellan) will proceed to dig out Communists as vigorously as we have in the past. From his statements, he apparently has that in mind." The controversial Wisconsin Republican said he will continue to take an active part in the work of the subcommittee.

McClellan, who headed the subcommittee before McCarthy took it over, said one of the first tasks of the group will be to wind up investigations which McCarthy left incomplete. Materials Delay Lefors School Work The Lefors public school building job is about a month behind schedule. B. R. Cantrell, architect for the structure today said lack of material had been holding up the job. Right now, workmen are laying bricks — that is about 40 per cent done. Once the brick work is completed, he continued, there will be a certain amount of inside finishing to do, including partitions, painting and floors. The deadline on the job is March 15. But "they'll be lucky to make it by April 15," he said. Pampan's Father Dies In Wichita Roy Olson, 66, father of Fred Olson, 1708 Coffee, died at 3 a.m. today at his home in Wichita, Kan. His son was at his bedside when he died. Besides the son in Pampa, Mr. Olson is survived by two daughters. Funeral services will be held Thursday at 3 p.m.

Clubs Given MOD Locations

Pampa civic clubs will put their shoulders to the wheel Saturday with a street drive to help swell contributions to the March of Dimes campaign, which is seeking nationally $24,000,000. Representatives of the civic clubs met recently with Joe Cree, Pampa city drive chairman, to select street locations for the various clubs. The following locations were drawn: Rotary, corner of Cuyler and Francis; Kiwanis, corner of Cuyler and Tyng; Lions, corner of Cuyler and Kingsmill; JayCees, corner of Russell and Kingsmill; Optimist, corner of Cuyler and Foster, and one of the local C.I.O. unions, corner of Francis and Hobart. The drive will run from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Sister Of Pampan Dies In Michigan

Mrs. L. J. Shields of Ludington, Mich., sister of Mrs. Arthur Duket, 805 N. Wells, died at 5:30 a. m. today at her home. Funeral services will be held in Ludington Thursday. MAYOR (Continued from page one) form of government will still alive as far as he is concerned and that he will continue to work for its adoption in the future. Abraham serves on a city council with Furman Williams, who opposed the city manager plan, and Claude Jones, who had allied himself with the mayor on the issue.

Ike Is Becoming 'Bigtime' Politico

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—UP—President Eisenhower is maneuvering to seize the political offensive from Democrats in the 84th Congress and to keep it as the session unfolds. The Eisenhower fan club around town is betting on Ike. The E-F-C is prejudiced and their bets don't guarantee that the President will get away with it. But it is a fact that Mr. Eisenhower is adjusting himself to big league politics. The magazine "Newweek" in its Jan. 10 issue has a run down on White House politics devoted largely to identifying and estimating the horsepower of the President's political advisers. The magazine quotes an unidentified Republican veteran like this: "Ike's a natural-born politician—potentially as good as Franklin D. Roosevelt. He gets along with people instinctively."

Dimes Drive 'Airathon' To Be Sunday

"Merchandise galore" will be auctioned off in the annual March of Dimes "Airathon" over Radio Station KPDM Sunday afternoon and evening, according to Warren Hasse, radio chairman of the drive. All types of merchandise will be sold to the highest bidder. The JayCee-ettes will be handling the telephone operations for the day, with Mrs. Horton Russell, president, in charge. Hasse asks Pampans to contribute merchandise to the Sunday campaign, and "everything will be acceptable and may be brought to the radio station during the week. If the goods are perishable, or alive, Sunday will be the day to donate them as we haven't adequate storage facilities." Numerous Pampa citizens will assist in the "Airathon," aiding with the auctioneering, picking up and delivering items and entertainment. Pampans may call in, and make bids for people participating in the program to perform.

Red Cross Won't Do Blood Typing

At a meeting of the board of directors this morning of the Pampa chapter of the Red Cross it was decided to shelve a proposed blood typing program in view of a policy ruling from national headquarters. According to Mrs. F. W. Shotwell, executive secretary, it was decided to promote by publicity the handling of the program by an outside agency which has not as yet been selected. Frank Stallings, chairman of the first aid program of the Red Cross, gave a talk on first aid and its application to civil defense. First aid instructors, Mrs. Dorothy Station, Herbert C. Love, and Charles Tooker, were special guests at the meeting. The next board meeting is scheduled for Feb. 1 when disaster relief in the Pampa chapter will be discussed. Mrs. J. M. Turner read the chapter financial report to the 14 board members in attendance.

Bard's Notes Said Authentic

LONDON, Jan. 4—UP—Alan Keen said Tuesday he now has "final proof" that a book in his possession is the actual notebook of William Shakespeare and "possibly the greatest literary treasure in the world." An antiquarian bookseller, Keen has spent 14 years in literary detection trying to establish the identity of the young Elizabethan who made marginal notes similar to speeches in the Shakespeare plays in a history book published in 1550. Since 1948 he has been convinced that only Shakespeare could have written the notes and now he believes he has evidence which will confirm this theory beyond all doubt. "I cannot disclose this evidence at this time," he said in his little office in the 300-year-old gatehouse of Clifford's Inn, "but it is virtually irrefutable and it will cause a sensation when it is made public." In 1940 Keen bought the library of an estate in Lancashire and found among the books a shabby parcel containing old books. One of them was Hall's "the union of the two noble and illustrious families of Lancaster and York."

Four Injured In Bus Crash

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Jan. 4—UP—A Southwest Coaches bus and a car collided south of Wichita Falls Monday night, injuring four persons, including three bus passengers. The bus overturned, but there was no fire. Most seriously hurt was Thurmond Oscar Roberts, 37, of Wichita Falls, driver of the car. Authorities said he had head and arm cuts and possible internal injuries. The bus, with 17 passengers, was enroute from Oklahoma City to Abilene, via Wichita Falls. The collision 10 miles south of town, on U. S. 277, caused the bus to leave the highway, jump a ditch, plow through a fence and overturn in a field.

Bank Deposits Increase

DALLAS, Jan. 4—UP—Bank deposits in Dallas' 23 banks jumped 9.5 per cent over a year ago as of the close of business Dec. 31—totaling $2,023,999,286.90, while reserves jumped 10.3 per cent to $2,220,873,213.89. The land program came under study several months ago when Dewitt county attorney Wiley Cheatham charged that several Cuero veterans, most of them Negroes, had protested they were duped by fast-talking promoters into buying land they'd never seen.

Clovis Boxers Even Score

CLOVIS, Jan. 4—The Clovis Boxing Club edged out the Pampa Optimist Boys Club in an interstate duel here Monday night, 5-4. Pampa had earlier won over Clovis, 4-2. The four boys winning for Pampa were Jerry Oliver and James Morse in the 80-pound bracket; Gary Wilhelm, in 128-pound division; and Jesse Ring in the 132-pound weight division. On the losing end for the Pampans were Gary Wills, 95 pounds; Larry Powell, 97 pounds; Rabbit Ramirez, 128 pounds; Don North, 135 pounds; and Ronnie James, 140 pounds. James injured an elbow in his match and the fight had to be stopped late in the third round with the Pampa boy apparently holding a safe lead. The Pampa team will host Dumas Thursday at the Top o' Texas Sportman's Club arena.

Armory Job Still Behind

The new Texas National Guard armory in Recreation Park should be finished — finally — by the end of the month. B. R. Cantrell, landscape architect, said workmen today were putting in the floor in the large drill hall room. After that, only inside painting remains. Original completion date was Oct. 15. Since then, the date has continually been set later. "They might be finished by the middle of this month; by the last of the month, anyway," Cantrell commented.

Hangar To Be Finished Jan. 31

The new hangar at Perry LeFors Field should be completed by the end of the month. Ed Simmons, Perry LeFors Field board secretary, today said he had contacted Star Manufacturing Co., Oklahoma City, the contractor, and had been told the material would "be on the ground" by Jan. 15 and, then, it was only a 10-day job to erect the structure. The first meeting of the new year for the airport board will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday in the office of Hugh Burdette in the Hughes Building, Simmons said. The only items on the agenda are the hangar and routine bills.

Library Preps For Book Move

The Pampa Public Library which closes tonight at 9, begins Wednesday the task of crating some 10,000 volumes for removal to their new home at the Lovett Memorial Library. Mrs. Lillian Snow, librarian, said the books will not be moved until the architect, B. R. Cantrell, approves the premises for occupancy. The approval is expected sometime this week. Returnable books should be left off at the return slot in the old library in the City Hall. The new library is expected to be in normal operation by Jan. 20 following two days of open house.

ANYBODY GOT any four-day-old New Year's resolutions they want to chuck away?

New Year's was four days ago, after all — most Pampanas have no doubt conveniently forgotten their vows for the new year and have gone back to living the way they always do a few days after each Jan. 1.

PERHAPS MRS. H. M. Brown has the right idea on this resolutions thing. Last week she said she makes only one resolution — not to make any resolution she can't keep. And, mind you, that was LAST week. That's foresight for you.

This time of year, however, is for more than making resolutions to do things you think you should do. It's also the time when officials of one kind or another try to take a look into the future and forecast what kind of a year it will be.

A farmer down in the southern part of the county takes a hit in his belt, scans the skies and tries to figure what kind of crop he'll get. An oilman, in the field or in an office, takes a look at a geologist's map and wonders if there is oil or gas down there. A weather-beaten rancher slaps the belly of one of his heads of cattle and questions if the meat will bring enough on the Kansas City market. A businessman tries to figure what the community's buying power will be. And so it goes.

All of them, of course, paint a rosy picture for the coming year. But none of them knows. Not really. Predicting the future in such things is like predicting the weather — you can get caught too easily.

THIS IS MORE than just New Year's Week. It's also Odorous Decoration Week and Universal Week of Prayer.

Now isn't that a combination? You come home New Year's Day morning, after a "night out." And, no doubt, you've made some resolutions, too. That never-again-will-I-do-it-again type of thing. Then they want you to spend the week thinking about how you can decorate your home during the entire year without — and this is the important point — without the usual discomforting odors. Course, they don't explain just how you're going to finance such a deal. But, then, they never do.

Nevertheless, it is still New Year's Week. Wonder what some of our officials in Pampa resolved for 1955?

Did Bill Waters vow to park in his closet his pair of "Adlai Stevenson" shoes, the ones he neglected to use during his campaign for district attorney? Has Frank Dial "sworn" never to mention again the words "six-ply tires" in a city commission meeting? And how about Fred Brook and his no-doubt large supply of colorful sports shirts? Is City Hall never again to view them, the kind he wore when he was assistant city engineer?

Have Charlie Thut and Jack Back resolved to continue their policy of keeping good-looking gals as their deputies? Will Rufe Jordan, Shirley Nickols and Buck Haggard be wearing those sharp ties, and the warm summer months? And Helen Sprinkle, has she vowed to keep on greeting everybody during the year with that big smile?

REGARDLESS, this is a whole new year, a year of promises and disappointments, of joy and sorrow, of calm and confusion.

Let's hope that the confusion this year doesn't reach the point it has for those entering one particular store on the south side of the 300-block of W. Foster. It's a barber shop inside. But a big sign, which hangs over the sidewalk, proclaims it to be a cafe.

On second thought, if the barbers and the cafe operators can get along together, maybe everyone can. At this stage of the game anything's worth a try.

Military Told To Lift Color Ban In Schools

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 —UP— Military officials were under orders Monday to use the quick rather than the gradual approach to ending segregation in schools for children of military personnel. The Defense Department said it will push ahead with plans to lift the color bar in all military post schools "as soon as practicable" and not later than Sept. 1 despite Supreme Court delay on the overall segregation problem.

The high tribunal has not issued a decree yet on how or when segregation of white and Negro public school students should be ended and has scheduled new hearings on the question.

The Justice Department has advocated a local approach with federal courts determining the time and manner of integration. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson last January told the military to end segregation in a directive handed down before the Supreme Court ruled that public school segregation is unconstitutional. Wilson set Sept. 1, 1955, as the deadline.

The 17 schools to be integrated by September are located at: Air Force Bases — Maxwell, Ala.; MacDill, Eglin, Tyndall and Randolph, Sheppard and Lackland in Texas; and Langley, Va. Army — Pine Bluff Arsenal, Ark. Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Bliss, Fort Sam Houston and Fort Hood in Texas.

Social Arbiter Dies In Houston

HOUSTON, Jan. 4 —UP— John Blodgett Davis, Houston clubman and for 20 years the city's arbiter of social elegance, died at his home here Sunday following an illness.

Davis, 60 and a native of Menominee, Mich., was chairman of the Allegro Club, an organization which directs social gatherings each year honoring debutante daughters of its members. Davis was an active patron of the arts and for years was a director of the Little Theater.

Adenauer Is Now The Man On The Spot

By CHARLES M. MCCANN
United Press Foreign Analyst

Tough old Konrad Adenauer is the man on the spot now. The French National Assembly having voted for West German armament, the ratification fight shifts to Germany itself.

It is generally agreed that Premier Pierre Mendes-France was the only man who could have forced the armament legislation through the French Assembly. Adenauer alone, it is also agreed, will be able to get it through the west German parliament.

Adenauer must overcome the stubborn resistance of the German Socialist party to rearmament. He must beat down the opposition of many members of his Bundestag who do not like the French-German treaty on the Saar, which is part of the armament package. He must meet the arguments that ratification will end any chance, in the foreseeable future, of German unification.

And Red Soft Talk Adenauer also must withstand the dire threats which will come in a stream from Moscow — threats which will be mingled with soft talk about happy days to come if West Germany consents to remain militarily helpless.

The betting is that Adenauer will be able to do all this when the ratification legislation comes up for final passage next month. Adenauer has passed his first reading in the Bundestag. The second and third final-readings remain.

If Mendes-France is rightly called "Mr. France" on the Seine in the present situation, Adenauer certainly may be called Mr. Germany on the Rhine.

The 78-year-old "old fox" has been Germany's one outstanding leader since he became chancellor of the new East German federal republic in 1949. He was elected by a one-vote margin and thus, in a sense, elected himself.

Adenauer has dedicated his life to fighting Communist encroachment, to regaining sovereignty for his country, and to ending the centuries-old enmity between Germany and France.

Trusted, Honored Adenauer is trusted and honored by all the Allies, and right now he comes close to being indispensable man in West European politics.

Tall, ramrod-straight, with a tough leathery complexion, Adenauer does not look his age, and he tires out younger men who work with him.

He entered law practice in his native Cologne in his young manhood, became active politically and was made mayor of the city in 1917. The Nazis detested him, and threw him out when they got into power. He was arrested several times during World War II.

After the war, Adenauer started building up the new Christian Democratic Union, and it was as leader of that party that he was elected chancellor in 1949. Only then, at 73, did he become internationally prominent.

Getting Fat? BOSTON —UP— The Metropolitan Transit Authority has asked the legislature if it can increase the width of motor buses by six inches. "They need more elbow room," said the MTA counsel, William B. Downey.

freeing the packet. But they lost two full hours laboring in the broiling sun. Meanwhile Amador was far spriver. Crotch was conscious of someone climbing the Texas ladder, and then Queenie's words came to him against the clamor of men still struggling in the river. "When Jamison picked you to fight he was asking for trouble. You do things alone; you don't need or ask help. It's a habit with you."

He turned quickly to find a half-amused expression on Queenie's mouth. He knew she would enjoy seeing this through until he whipped Jamison or was himself beaten. She was a woman whose blood could be stirred by a good fight. He shot her a swift smile. "I didn't get this hot for myself. Melott was at the engine. Goss had his miners."

But she shook her head. "With your hands you may all three work together. But they don't know how you think. When the end comes you'll still be alone. I hope you'll have no regrets."

SHE had a trick of getting into a man, of reaching his most remote corners. A man could have friends as loyal as Goss and Melott and still plan his own moves and keep his schemes secret, and Queenie understood. "But don't stay too much alone. There are some you should trust."

Queenie said. Duty had been working on her all night, a loyalty that would give her no rest. But Crotch frowned. "You needn't say it. I know Burke means to keep Arizona with the Confederacy."

Her eyes grew wider and Crotch knew he had stolen the words from her. Decision and Burke had not come easily. She said quietly, "You're not by yourself as much as you think, Captain. Some of us would like to share with you. The good and the bad—both. You haven't found out yet that it's sharing that makes life endurable. It's good; try it sometime. But about Burke; he's dangerous!"

He grinned at her faintly. "And you think I'm not?"

Barn Addition Near Completion

The structural frame for the addition to the county dual-purpose barn in Recreation Park was in place today and the tin work was expected to be completed by the end of the week.

Wayland Merriman, engineering consultant to the county commissioners court, pointed out that would mean the addition — 100 feet by 70 feet — would be finished ahead of schedule. Completion date is Monday, in time for the annual Top o' Texas Fat Stock Show, Jan. 24-26.

The addition, of the same material as the barn, is being added to the north end of the barn and will double the inside floor space.

Dam Planned Near Ft. Worth

FORT WORTH, Jan. 4 —UP— Suburban Haltom City plans to build a $1,250,000 dam on Big Fossil Creek, Mayor Virgil Goodman announced Monday.

He said the city council has taken the first step by asking the legislature to create a water district which would have the same boundaries as the community. Plans call for the district to issue revenue bonds to finance construction of the dam.

Goodman said the dam would be less than a mile north of the present Haltom City limits. The earth and concrete structure would be 800 feet long and would form a four-mile-long lake.

"We hope to start construction this summer," the mayor said. "We estimate it will take a year to build the dam. The creek has a deep, narrow channel at the dam site and this will make our work cheaper and easier."

Haltom City recently awarded contracts for $225,000 worth of water wells, mains and storage tanks. Completion of the present project will give the community a daily capacity of 2.2 million gallons — more than present peak needs.

Mayor Goodman said the community is entirely dependent on wells, and the water level of wells in the area has been dropping steadily.

THE STORY: Radioer Burke has planned to take a shipment of Union Army rifles from Captain Crotch's riverboat. Crotch has many other things to attend with, not the least of which is Captain Crotch's rival Navigation Company, Aboard Crotch's General Health in Burke, and a man named Cal Dreyfus, who is a friend of Crotch. Dreyfus is accompanied by General Health's bride to be, Queenie once was in love with Burke.

AT Picacho rock Amador was coming up fast and Crotch was sure Jamison meant to pass them. He had taken the wheel from Goss; now he signaled the engine pit for the full head of steam in the boilers. But the General Health was badly overloaded and made scarcely any extra headway.

Here at Picacho a submerged rock stood in midriver into which a steamer had rammed last spring. Her ripped hull still lay partly blocking the channel. Jamison was a hogish captain who would never allow Crotch to clear the danger point before passing.

Although still small, for the Colorado could navigate no full-size California packets, compared to the Heath the Navigation boat was a palace with twin side-wheels and ornamented chimneys and a large pilothouse perched atop her Texas. Jamison had brought her up the Gulf to capture the river trade. With her he had brought the San Diego and Claremore, all three former gold-coast steamers. But whenever the combine chose to fight, Crotch would drive back blow for blow in a manner Jamison never dreamed. That fight was also now.

Passengers began yelling at each other between the two packets. Crotch sighted the racing Amador coming up on his port quarter, discovered Shelby Calhoon on the Texas. He thought how surprisingly alike Calhoon and Burke were with their black hair and bland eyes and their cold-hearted manner. But Calhoon was basically more forthright than Burke. When Calhoon disliked a man, that man would be well apprised of that hatred.

A pistol cracked, sending a ball through the General Health's chimney stack. Immediately, answering shots banged along the Heath's port rail. A window-sash shattered aboard the Amador. Then Goss was yelling at their passengers to put down their firearms. Calhoon was doing the same aboard the other boat. At this point-blank range, pistol practice could become decidedly dangerous.

AMADOR was surging ahead. The backwash of her starboard paddle was pouring into the General Health, causing her to broach contrary to her helm. They were opposite the rock with its half-submerged wreck. The channel here was narrow, treacherous. Crotch felt reverberations running up from the shallow river bottom, knew Jamison had shoved him into shoal water. A few moments later their scowlike prow lifted on a gravel bar.

Every timber gave a groan as the ship settled motionless in the muddy current. Crotch rang Melott for a shout. Decision and Burke had not come easily. She said quietly, "You're not by yourself as much as you think, Captain. Some of us would like to share with you. The good and the bad—both. You haven't found out yet that it's sharing that makes life endurable. It's good; try it sometime. But about Burke; he's dangerous!"

He grinned at her faintly. "And you think I'm not?"

Long Torso Seen In New Swimsuits

By GAIL DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Most important change in the 1955 swimsuit over the 1954 silhouette is the raised and rounded bustline coupled with closely molded body lines. The banded line straight across the top of the suit is the 1955 look. Often, the suit itself is boned for a long, close, fluid fit. Hiplines are smooth or they may be ruffled, pegged or bloomed.

There are many knits this year, suited utterly to a season in which smooth lines make fashion news. Included in the knit group are mixtures of nylon-and-orlon combined with elastic to produce a one-size suit.

Foam rubber is the chief aid in shaping the new bustline and creating the heightened look. Otherwise, panels curve up over the chest or an unbroken crown line is used to create the wanted effect.

In skirted suits, the princess line is the one best-liked, since it has both slimness and fluidity. Bloomers are pared down this year, are not quite as bouncy and frilly as in the past.

In fabrics, cottons have importance again, look especially fresh in pretty animal prints. These include the white leopard print on black and the tawny jaguar prints. Silver fish appear on pale, watery shades of mauve and green.

San Marino, tiny mountainous country occupying 36 square miles in central Italy, is the world's smallest republic.

Wife Of American State Department Official Learns To Make Chapeaux

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
NEA Staff Correspondent

PARIS — (NEA) — Top pupil of the Helene Corbette School of Haute Mode (millinery) here is an American woman. She is Mrs. Corinne Cox of Miami, Florida, wife of a state-department official in Berlin.

For years, she had dreamed of coming to Paris to learn to make hats that would have a real Parisian look.

"I started out by making hats for my dolls and progressed to hats for relatives," Mrs. Cox explained. "Then I came to Paris six years ago and discovered that my 'creations' lacked the subtle touch."

Then she heard about the millinery school. Every day, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., she sits on a hard little stool, learning how to stretch and drape fabrics she's blocked herself over a stiffened canvas shape. She's also learning to handle a milliner's stubby little iron. This is a complete change from her role as one of the most gracious hostesses in Berlin.

Although her French is limited, she understands enough to follow verbal instructions and gestures. "So much fine sewing goes into even a simple model," she says. "I knew the French were perfectionists but I had no idea that this passion for perfection extended even to minute details. I thought I had enough experience to start making hats right away. Instead,

June Talk

By JANE KADINGO
Pampa News Women's Editor

NOW THAT TALK has died down about the Dior H-line, most of the fashion news is revolving around resort wear. So, if you're planning a winter cruise, or south of the border vacation, or just looking ahead to summer, here are some of the latest trends.

Silhouette changes are news in resort and cruise wear. The light-fitting bodices and waist-pinchings full skirts of last season are overshadowed by an easy-going feeling, gentle and feminine in outline with higher bosom, longer, supier torso lines. An end to waistline pinching and more accent at the hips can be seen in all categories of resort clothes.

In presenting an analysis of manufacturers' resort and cruise wear collections, the fashion editors of Women's Wear Daily note that dresses have long torso treatments with seaming or bands at the hip; necklines are higher and often square; bodices are cut without bustling darts or seaming to accentuate the bosom, and are sometimes as simple as camisoles. Skirts, which start below the hip-line, are either knife-pleated, box-pleated, slim types or gored, gathered or tiered full types.

Fabrics for resort wear grow softer and easier, with lots of drapability and a casual look. Cottons and linens are liked for slim clothes and for permanent pleating, which shows up in skirts — and in unexpected places such as sleeves. More silk prints are evident, most with white backgrounds and either pastel or bright motifs, such as abstracts or brush strokes. Border prints are designers' pets, either in gay cotton prints or Indonesian-inspired Batik types.

OVERBLOUSES dominate separates collections in every conceivable fabric: woolsens, silks, linens, cotton. Fit varies greatly, from the very fitted which are intricately seamed from shoulder to hip, to the semi-fitted and the loose, midly types. Gay, colorful prints make these look new.

Fitted hip lines characterize skirts to accommodate overblosses. From there, the variation is similar to dresses: either slim and pleated or full with gores, gathers or godets. Fabrics are generally softer for these, including wool crepes, jerseys, silks and permanently pleated cotton. In opposition to this are wrap skirts, tied front or back.

Much longer jackets have a slouched, casual air that's very Garbo-ish and very good looking. Favorite trick is to button them just at the bottom, in which case they're snug at the hip, loose at the waist. Newest are double-breasted with buttons tapering to the hem for a long look. These are the perfect coordination for new slim, pleated skirts.

A species of separates blooming for cruise wear, 1955, throughout the sportswear and separates market, are completely interchangeable. Some made for late afternoon or cocktail wear have a new fresh look done in cotton.

These are a continuation of holiday separates, based on the same idea of a bouffant skirt, some with yoked top for a new long torso look, and a flattering bodice that can be separated and worn in many different combinations. Part of their appeal is based upon fabrics that specify cruise wear. Checked gingham and striped seersucker examples.

SEPARATES THAT, literally, are dying to go traveling off to resorts together are increasingly important. These, in leather, wool and knitwear were carefully dyed to match in exactly the same colors. The result is a unified, one-color look that smart women love to have — and will continue to love come time for winter vacations.

The biggest news is dyed-to-match leather, but dyed-to-match sweaters are also slated to continue in popularity. When it's time to go traveling, the customer has a complete costume in fresh pastels which can also be split up for "extras" in the wardrobe.

Your Freedom, Too

Whenever a newspaper sets up a howl for freedom of the press, we suppose some people think: "Oh well, they're just bowling for preservation of a special privilege enjoyed by the press."

We'll freely admit our self-interest. But we'd like to point out that there's more to it than that. The rest of the story is that the press' freedom is intimately bound up with a much more important inalienable right enjoyed by the American people as a whole — the right of being and staying free.

This aspect of the matter was vividly explained recently by President Robert McLean of the Associated Press, in a speech at Drexel Institute, Philadelphia.

Discussing the reasons why the 1st (free speech, press, religion) Amendment was added to the Constitution in 1791, Mr. McLean said: "We know that what we call freedom of the press was not a special provision adopted for the benefit of the newspapers, of which there were few at that time, but was a measure for the protection of all the people to print that which they believed, as fully as freedom of speech was intended to permit them to speak freely what their consciences dictated."

That about wraps it up, we think. While the press remains free, the people will remain free. If the press' freedom ever goes down the drain, so will the people's.

How About The PWs

A fairly influential group called the National Planning Association comes out with a long statement entitled "American Policy in the New Phase of the Cold War," which puzzles us, considerable.

As far as we can make out, the NPA wants the United States to go on arming energetically, but also to recognize that "most of our allies, if not we ourselves, are going to put their relations with the government of Communist China on a more normal basis."

Whenever anybody talks that way, we seem to smell appeasement in the air. In this case, that would mean appeasement of the Chinese Reds who killed, wounded or tortured so many U. S. fighting men in Korea, and are currently holding 11 U. S. airmen in louse-ridden jails on spy charges which are as phony as a $7 bill.

The NPA suggestion seems badly timed, at best. How about an NPA proposal, in plain English, on how to spring those airmen and all the other Americans now detained in Red China? After that is accomplished, talk of a "more normal basis" for our relations with the "Peeping thieves and murderers might conceivably be in order."

Cleveland Financier Plans A Retreat For Thinking Men

By HENRY McLEMORE

Goodbye, everybody. I'm off for the head of cobwebs and put fresh Pugwash.

Sounds like the name of Turkish bath for prizefighters, doesn't it? But it isn't. Pugwash is the home-town of Cleveland financier Cyrus S. Eaton, and up there in Nova Scotia Mr. Eaton is about to launch a most intriguing experiment.

He is busy converting his big estate into a retreat for "thinking men" of the United States and Canada. There in the Evangeline country, far away from any distractions, men will gather to do nothing but ponder.

I haven't received an invitation to Pugwash until now, but I know I'll be welcome. I'm likely to turn out to be the best thinker up there. You see, all the other men at Pugwash will have tired brains, because they have been thinking for years. Not me. I haven't done any thinking for a good twenty years, so my brain stands to be as fresh as a daisy and rarin' to go.

I'm leaving for Pugwash as fast as I can, because I want to get there before the choice thinking spots are taken. I don't care if Barney Beach beats me, because he'll stake out nothing better than an old bench under a tree full of squarrels. But I don't want to get there to find all the good rooms gone, and be assigned a single room with the bath a half mile down the hall.

Neither do I want to find all the rocking chairs taken and have to sit in a straight backed chair on the porch railing. I feel that my brain would function most smoothly in a corner sofa, overlooking the lake, and furnished with a king-size feather bed. It might help too, if Mr. Eaton provided me with a red convertible in which to ride around the countryside when my brain needed ventilation. I imagine I'd think real sharp while fishing and hunting up there on the north woods, so I trust there'll be boats, guns, and guides. And there is nothing like a trip to New York over week-ends to clear

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Will Answer Questions Or Change Beliefs

It seems to me that most of our political and economic trouble comes from accepting means of producing desirable results that will not stand testing — to see if they are in agreement with such great moral principles as The Golden Rule.

In this instance we are concerned about the desirable result of freedom for all and a continued growth and expansion of our civilization in spiritual and material things. The important thing is that the means by which we hope to achieve or approach this goal must be in keeping with the goal or we find ourselves in the position of the Communist who says: "The end justifies the means."

There is one means by which we can promote good will and prosperity that has never been completely put into operation. To the degree that it has been tried it has brought the results expected and to the degree that it has been ignored have men suffered for denying the means. Jesus suggested the means to this goal of liberty and prosperity when He said: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." And to the degree that people have followed this advice they have been both spiritually and materially blessed.

But as the result of human frailty and human nature, this philosophy has not been, nor is it ever likely to be put into practice. For this reason, if proper means are to be adopted, we will have to approach it by the questioning method with an appeal to reason.

I think every possible question on this means has been asked and answered without evasion or contradiction, but possibly there are some questions that have not been clearly answered or the answers have been forgotten. For the reason means are always subject to continual inquiry.

Who Should Be Trusted?
If any person advocates a different means than the above and he has to contradict himself or has to evade certain questions about it, and continues to advocate this means, he should not be trusted and is a very dangerous individual.

If a means is practical and will produce the results of developing character and adding to spiritual and material blessings, there will be no questions about it that can embarrass its advocates. This is true because one moral truth is always in agreement with every other moral truth, just as every physical law is always in agreement with every other physical law.

I cannot think of any other way to develop other than to have one's beliefs tested. And I can think of no better way to test them than to be obliged to answer all questions about them without evasion or contradiction. If an individual advocates a means of bringing about desired results and refuses to answer questions about it, in person is in a condition of stagnation. To continue to advocate a means and refuse to answer all questions about it, is to set oneself up as above moral law and reason and to contend without saying so, as Louis XIV did, that "I am the law."

All Economic and Political Problems Are Moral Problems
Every political and economic question in the final analysis is reduced to an ethical or moral question — that is, to a religious question, not a theological question. Since this is true, any question that makes an individual deny or repudiate moral law becomes embarrassing to him. In fact, the man who is advocating a means that violates such great moral laws as the Coveting Commandment and the Golden Rule is loath to answer questions. As one libertarian said, the only defense a socialist or collectivist has is evasion.

Want My Ideas Tested?
Since I do not want to become stagnant and advocate anything that will be harmful to my fellow man, I want my ideas tested. I want questions asked about what I am advocating or opposing. If I am obliged to evade any question about what I am advocating or opposing, or have to contradict myself, I will admit that I am in error and will then in penitence attempt to compensate for the harm I have caused. Understand I am not saying I will attempt to answer any question. I am only saying I will attempt to answer any question about what I am advocating or opposing. And I want questions asked because I do not want to continue to advocate anything that violates moral law, and which thus will be harmful to someone.

Hiding Behind Positions
One of our great troubles is that too many newspapers and magazines hide behind their editorial chair. Too many politicians hide behind their position. Too many teachers and men who pose as educators hide behind their state certificates to teach. And if they have no desire to learn themselves, it is a mockery and a deception for them to pose as educators. If they are afraid of questions, it is difficult to see how they can instill in the minds of their pupils the belief that they should only believe in human relation programs about which no embarrassing questions can be asked.

Freedom Newspapers Policy
I am quite sure that any of the Freedom Newspapers will attempt

Benson Has Become Trusted Member Of Ike's Team

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Secretary Ezra Taft Benson believes sincerely that he can reduce the $7 billion mountain of surplus food to realistic proportions within a few years, resulting in a more or less permanent stabilization of agricultural production and prices.

He regrets the current excitement over the Wolf Ledejinsky matter largely because it distracts him from solving one of the most important and complex problems facing the Eisenhower administration.

Assailed only a few years ago by cattle men's lobby and caravans to the Capital, Benson has become one of Ike's most trusted Cabinet members. However, in view of the general concern over national defense, foreign affairs and the Russian threat, his current and prospective achievements with respect to such basic questions as food supplies and prices have gone unheralded.

If he can restore stability to the farmers without imposing heavier burdens of retail costs on the housewives and their husbands, his performance will match John Foster Dulles' successes at the State Department. And Dulles has been selected by TIME Magazine as "the man of the year."

The Federal Government's investment in surplus food was approximately $6 billion when Benson took office two years ago. The figure has increased by $1 billion as a result of additional purchases and loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation. But it might have soared to $9 billion or $10 billion if it had not been for Benson's businesslike management.

He has disposed of almost $2 billion worth of varied means. He has contributed vast amounts to schools for luncheons, to organizations shipping Christmas gifts overseas and to the military services. He has given or sold food to foreign nations under Congressional authority. He will trade with the devil himself, which means Moscow and other Iron Curtain countries in this case, if he receives strategic materials in return.

Perhaps the principal reason for to answer any question about anything they are advocating or opposing, and if any question embarrasses them by causing them to evade answering or to contradict themselves, I am sure they will admit their mistake and attempt to make up for the harm done.

Newspapers, magazines, columnists, teachers, preachers, legislators, radio commentators, public speakers and private citizens who advocate means to bring about prosperity and will not answer all questions about what they are advocating or opposing are not worthy of any confidence and, in fact, are dangerous persons who are largely responsible for the moral and economic and political confusion we face today.

Readers of this column can help make it more useful by asking questions to determine whether or not the means I advocate are consistent with such great moral laws as the Commandments and the Golden Rule.

Arkansas Governor-Elect A Radical Like Sid McMath

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Orval Faubus, the governor-elect of Arkansas, and Sid McMath, who served two terms as governor from 1949 through 1952, are violent political radicals and mutually complementary. Faubus was "educated" at Commonwealth College, a Communist institution which struggled along for a few years at Mena, and finally was liquidated in an ignominious trial before the justice of the peace. In comparison with the colossal legal brat in which Harry Bridges, the New York first-string Red, and Alger Hiss were defamed as martyr heroes of the cause, this was an unworthy end of an institution which snarled and scratched along in poverty and, after its demise, has planted one of its alumni in a state capital. Harvard men have occupied higher positions wielding power more dangerous to the American republic. But Harvard has never been adjudged a Communist school.

Faubus does not claim to be a Communist nor even admit that he is one. The fact that he admittedly was a student at a college which was declared by numerous official authorities to be a subversive Communist institution, the fact that an issue of the school's undergraduate paper in 1935 named him as student orator for May Day, are purely coincidental. These facts, however, suffice to characterize him in the estimate of his opponents without resort to epithets. With those facts no longer disputed nobody calls him a Communist. He is what he obviously is and, by fascinating circumstances, not necessarily paradox, the Arkansas Gazette, owned by a rich, old Arkansas family, views him without alarm.

McMath has certain personal distinctions. The most dramatic is the fact his wife shot and killed his father in 1947 just after he had announced his intention to run for governor. He was then county prosecutor in Little Rock, where he had grown up. The grand jury took a chivalrous attitude. Mrs. McMath was not reproached. Certain political opponents were not too noble to refer to Mrs. McMath as "pistol packin' mama." But he was elected governor the next year nevertheless. A variety of versions of the killing are given, but the approved form now is that aman, twice elected governor, repudiated his father as a drunken bum who got what he had coming when his daughter-in-law drilled him. All accounts agree that old man McMath, a barber, while plastered, rode his boy's horse to a lather and that his son's wife killed him after some dispute.

The Common reputation which McMath has created by his deportment are reminiscent of the late Huey Long. To my independent observation of this resemblance, John F. Wells, publisher of a weekly independent political paper, the Arkansas Recorder, replies: "Yes, McMath imitates Long. After he came back from service with the Marines in the Pacific and became governor, reporters noticed biographies of the kingfish on his desk."

The hitch in the Marines in battle was a break with the Long tradition. Huey was not martial. Seymour Weiss, for a long time one of Huey's intimate counselors but now a decorous hotel man, said even when Huey was at the height of his audacity: "I would just as soon hit a woman as hit Huey Long. He has no physical courage whatsoever." This may account for Huey's failure to go to the war of his generation. But it is possible that, like F. D. Roosevelt, he decided that the personal inconveniences and loss of privacy amid masses of men was too much to pay for a service record. Roosevelt was a public official, assistant secretary of the Navy. So was Huey. He was a notary public. Each went far without a discharge. And, in a politico-pagan sense, they are gods, for their graves are seriously termed shrines and occasional murders are mingled among the tourists who go to eat peanuts and eskimo pie.

I am a stranger in these parts and I am reporting on spectacular persons and strange editorial behavior by rich capitalist newspapers in the southern tier with a cautious regard for my veracity.

The conduct of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times and their radio station, altogether a monopoly, in slashing a county attorney for convicting one of their employees of sedition in a bomb conspiracy that might have cost a hundred lives, is no private household problem of the nation's newspapers. It is a public issue and should be covered as such by the press. How can the people of Raleigh look to Jonathan Daniels' News and Observer with confidence when Daniels proudly depicts himself as co-holder to the scurrilous little alumnus of the Pendergast machine who as president of the United States slept the night through as persons unknown blew the vault in the courthouse a few blocks away and stole the documentary proof of the theft of another election?

The details are like threads in a tapestry. There are millions of them to be learned and related to one another. The reason why the rightly, tax-exempt foundations are following against the Reece Committee's expose are apparent in relations between revolutionary politicians, all either Fabian or Marxian; between colleges and newspapers and their editors. The abusive and utterly dishonest attack on the Reece Committee by certain papers is, in every instance known to me, the reaction of a guilty beneficiary or a political accomplice of a mighty campaign to degrade the American people to the status of subjects.

Faubus and McMath seem paltry and ephemeral figures in a commonwealth of acorn-eaters. But they may actually be men of giant significance. Had Huey Long lived he probably would have beaten Roosevelt before 1940 and God only knows what results, whether good or bad for the people of the United States. He was a genius, no worse than the genius who aggrandized Soviet Russia and then, at Yalta, ceded the victory to the enemy. The great foundations missed a golden chance when they underestimated Huey but they are now neglecting the mercenary hacks of journalism eager to be debauched as new Hueys rise in the southern hinterland.

In Spain the Franco dictatorship is seeking legislation which would put control over the nation's press in the hands of the government. The proposal is directed to all of Spain's 72 privately owned newspapers. The 32 organs of the Fascist party would be expected because they already are entirely responsive to the ruling group.

The bill would accomplish its purpose by vesting the government with sole authority to approve the editor in chief of every newspaper and make him responsible only to the government, not to the publisher or owners of the paper. If this decree is put thru, the dictatorship will be able to install its chosen agent in every newspaper office, with full authority. As if that were not enough, he would be required to submit each edition of the paper to a censorship bureau for clearance. Nothing damaging to the government would be tolerated.

It is 15 years since Franco began exercising unchallenged authority over Spain following the civil war. His power has been consolidated by time and no present threat from any opposition can be seen. The press proposal is not only pernicious but unnecessary even from the standpoint of a dictator. Apparently we are offered evidence once more that dictators do not tend to moderate their methods, but instead tighten up the vise even when no reason exists for doing so.

In India Nehru's parliament has passed a bill under which newspapers and reporters can be prosecuted for writing articles attacking public officials. The obvious effect is again to place the government and those who act in its name above the criticism of the people.

The Indian bill revives the ancient and discredited doctrine of libel upon government, and the Turkish statute for press suppression owes its inspiration to that same doctrine. The Turkish law pretends to make a special point that the criticism against the government and its officials must be of a malicious nature to bring an editor under its terms, but it is perfectly apparent that when authority is the judge of what is true, the interpretation will accommodate for secret trial makes the law susceptible of outrageous abuse.

The Peron dictatorship in Argentina is currently engaged in a campaign not only against religious freedom but against the basic civil right of assembly. This measure is directed against open air meetings and can even be stretched to apply to religious processions.

The CRACKER BARREL

The internationalists want us to stop celebrating the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln. But they want us to celebrate a United Nations Day. I'm against it. To me, we should always honor the men who gave us our freedom and the man who preserved it. But I don't feel like honoring the men who want to take it away. It's foolish to be for world government until it shows some interest in preserving self-government.

THE PAMPA HIGH SCHOOL athletic department, along with the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, are to be congratulated for the fine way they put over the 2nd annual Top of Texas Invitational Basketball Tournament.

These two organizations seem to have the theory "if you're going to do something, do it up brown."

The PHS athletic department, of course, ram-rodded the tournament, but the Chamber of Commerce pitched in to help provide special entertainment for the visiting basketball teams during their stay in Pampa.

The dinner the CC held Friday for the visiting cagers and the Harvester, too, was a rousing success. It certainly made the visiting teams feel more at home.

It wasn't just an ordinary dinner. Several of the cities' dignitaries, the mayor (Tom Rose); superintendent of schools (Knox Kinard); president of the Chamber of Commerce (Floyd Watson), among others were on hand to greet the basketballers.

A good meal was served and Miss Jerry Sloan, accompanied by Miss Carol Paxson, provided the group with some fine musical numbers.

Coaches of the four teams in the tournament introduced their players. Watson, CC president, who served as MC, introduced all other invited guests. In other words, everybody got acquainted with one another.

You can take our word for it, a good time was had by all.

Competition in the tournament was keener than the first tournament held last year. The same four schools competed in both tournaments but each team seemed to be much improved this year over last year.

Virtually every scoring record set last year was broken in this year's tourney.

Pampa, as you know, won the tournament 60th years. The other three teams, however, finished in a different order. In the first tournament, Chickasha was second, Ada third and Birdville fourth. This year it was Birdville second, Chickasha third and Ada fourth.

All four games played in the tournament were closer fought this year than last. Two of the four game winners had to erase five-point deficits to emerge victorious. The first night of the tourney, Ada led Birdville by five points on three occasions in the first half before Birdville came back to win the game, 56-51.

Birdville, incidentally, blew the biggest lead of the tournament in Friday's first round win over Ada. The Buffs led the Ada team, 32-22, early in the third quarter, but Ada fought back to take the lead, 43-41, with two minutes gone in the fourth quarter.

Baylor's Bailey One Of SWC's Best Cagers Despite Size

DALLAS, Jan. 4—UP—Baylor's busy Bears may not bustle their way into the Southwest Conference basketball championship, but they've got a slender senior forward who'll deal plenty of misery to the teams that nose out the darkhorse Bears.

Murray Bailey, at 6-2, is comparatively short in these days of towering cagers, but that doesn't keep him from pumping in points at a clip only one other conference player has been able to top.

The Athens, La., youngster who was touted by Baylor by a Baptist preacher conducting a revival in his home town looms as the most improved player in the conference and getting better every game.

He set a new conference holiday tournament scoring record at Houston last week by averaging 29.3 points per game and when it was over and he was voted the most valuable player award he was disgusted with himself.

"Why, I must have missed a thousand shots," he said of his final night's play when he scored 34 points in an easy victory over Texas.

In two earlier losing cause battles against finalist Alabama and fourth-place Rice, he had scored 26 and 28 points respectively. He owns one of the deadliest two-handed push shots in the circuit and it is as effective from way out as it is in close. He dropped one early against Alabama but the Tide wrote it off as luck and didn't press him. Before the first half was over, Bailey had plunked in five more from back of the circle.

Bond was also a unanimous choice for All-District I-AAAA. The 6-5 center made the all 1-A team all three years he was a member of the Harvesters.

Bond scored 875 points in 28 games for the Harvesters in 1954, an average of 31.3 per game. Bond's career total was 1,484 points in 47 games for a 31.3 average.

The Harvesters had three close calls during the 1954 campaign. The Green and Golders came from behind in the last seven seconds to defeat Amarillo, 49-41, for the District I-AAAA title.

McIlvain was the "man of the hour" for the Harvesters that night as he grabbed a rebound off the Amarillo backboard and dribbled the length of the court for a left-handed crisp shot that erased Amarillo's 41-40 lead that sent the

Northwestern, Louisville 5s Win Big Ones

By UNITED PRESS

Under pressure point scoring in the final minutes by a star named Frank Ehmann and a sub named Gerry Moreman, moved Northwestern and Louisville into contention for national recognition in basketball Tuesday with a pair of important triumphs.

Ehmann came through with a basket just 31 seconds before the final gun to give Northwestern a 75-72 upset of highly-rated Minnesota Monday night in the opening game of the Big Ten season for each team.

Moreman provided the key points that gave Louisville a 73-69 victory over Notre Dame's Sugar Bowl champions for a fine record of 11 victories in 12 games.

Minnesota, ranked No. 10 nationally, led Northwestern, 35-32, at halftime and was in front most of the way in their clash at Chicago. Moreover, Dick Garmaker of the Gophers set a new fieldhouse record of 32 points, 19 of them in the second half. But Ehmann's tally in the final minute moved Northwestern in front to stay, 73-72, and the only score after that was Dick Mast's free throw for Northwestern in the final second, Jack Stephens won scoring honors with 29 points but Notre Dame, ranked No. 16 nationally, sank to a 5-5 record.

Four Games in Big 10 The Northwestern - Minnesota game was one of four that opened fullscale league warfare in the Big Ten Monday night. In the other, Ohio State's Robin Freeman, the national leading scorer, tallied 39 points to pace an 83-76 victory over Michigan; Iowa, ranked No. 14 nationally, walloped Wisconsin, 84-69, despite 25 points by Wisconsin's Dick Cable; and All-American Don Schundt scored 30 points to lead Indiana to a 95-77 win over Michigan.

The Pacific Coast conference opened official league play last night with a single game at Pullman, Wash., which resulted in an upset when Washington State topped Oregon, 63-56, after leading most of the way.

Rangers Journey To Shamrock Tonight

PERRYTON, Jan. 4—(Special)—The Perryton Rangers, winners of their only District I-AAA start, will journey to Shamrock Tuesday night for another 1-AAA contest against the Shamrock Irish.

Perryton defeated Dalhart last week in its first district start.

The Rangers won the consolation title in the Hereford Invitational tournament the past weekend. Perryton lost to Amarillo, 33-23, in the first round but the Rangers bounced back to defeat Priona, 63-34, and Brownfield, 67-48, for the consolation trophy.

Don Deer of the Rangers was selected on the all-tournament team at Hereford.

Harvesters To Host P'view Tonight

Upset-Minded 'Dogs Boast Potent Team

By BUCK FRANCIS Pampa News Sports Editor

Upset minded Plainview will invade Harvester Fieldhouse tonight to try once again to snap the Hustlin Harvesters' winning streak that has now reached 69.

The Bulldogs failed in their first attempt to break the streak in mid-December, losing to the McNeelymen, 61-48, at Plainview. But the Bulldogs have a potent outfit that could upset the appetizer tonight.

The Dogs are the defending District I-AAA champions and are favored to repeat this season. Plainview lost by only one point, 59-58, to the state champion Alamo Heights of San Antonio in the state tournament last year.

Several members of last year's Bulldog squad are back this season. Among them is one of the team's leading scorers last year, Hugh Bob Tilson.

Plainview exhibits one of the finest zone defenses in the state. Its zone defense, in fact, has contributed to much of its success in the past year or two.

Tonight's game will be the first of three games for the Harvesters this week. The PHSians will hit the road this weekend when they journey to Oklahoma for a pair of games.

The Harvesters meet Altus Friday and Chickasha Saturday.

Tonight's game, in fact, will be the last home game for the Harvesters until they meet Amarillo here, Jan. 25, in a District I-AAAA game.

Before returning home, the Harvesters will play two games next week on the road, at Littlefield Friday and Portales, N. M., Saturday.

Then the Harvesters will open District I-AAAA play at Lubbock Jan. 21.

Gary Griffin, by dunking in 53 points in the Top of Texas Tournament last weekend, has hiked his scoring total for the Harvesters to 290 points in 12 games—an average of 23.3 points per game.

E. Jay McIlvain's 38 points in the tournament boosted his total to 221 points, second among the Harvester stars.

Point totals for the other Harvester starters are Benny Cartwright (64); Buddy Sharp (53); and Ken Hinkle (126).

A "B" game will precede tonight's Harvester-Bulldog tilt. The B game will start at 8:30.

Olson, Rocky '54 Boxing Standouts

By JACK CUDDY United Press Sports Writer

Champions Carl (Bobo) Olson and Rocky Marciano were redeeming standouts in 1954 as American boxing floundered further toward the possibility of federal control, and foreign competition generally lacked sparkle.

Hawaiian-born Olson of San Francisco stretched his victory string to 18 straight by winning seven bouts this year. They included three defenses of his middleweight crown against Kid Gavilan, Rocky Castellani and Pierre Langlois (TKO 11). He was the busiest of champions and "the fighter of the year."

Rocky Marciano of Brockton, Mass., the only unbeaten champion ever to rule the heavyweight division, finally convinced the skeptics that he could prevail over a good combination boxer - puncher by twice beating ex-champ Edward Charles.

Largest Gate of Year Marciano extended his professional streak to 47 victories as he outpointed Eszard in June and knocked him out in the eighth round in September despite a badly split nose. Their gates of $343,092 (June) and $352,654 (September) were the largest of the year anywhere.

There were 14 title fights throughout the world in 1954 and five title changes. But American interest in those bouts and other important scraps was dulled considerably by investigations, hearings, accusations, charges and counter-charges.

The ultimate in unfavorable publicity was reached when a magazine article accused Jim Norris, the world's foremost promoter, of "fixing" two fights 17 years ago. Norris denied heatedly and announced a $5 million libel suit against the magazine.

George Barton, boxing commissioner for Minnesota, was an outstanding advocate of federal control as the year ended. Adding to the turmoil, the New York Commission and the National Boxing Association were "split" on Dec. 14 over the NBA's withdrawal of recognition from featherweight champion Sandy Saddler because of his failure to defend since he came out of the Army in April. The New York commission continued to recognize him as ruler of the 126-pounders.

A stormy title-change occurred at Philadelphia on Oct. 20, when Johnny Saxton of Brooklyn took the welterweight crown from Kid Gavilan of Cuba on a very questionable decision. A large majority of writers at the ring-side thought Gavilan had won the dull bout. Angel Lopez, Gavilan's manager, shouted "robbery" and "fix."

New Yorker Paddy DeMarco won the lightweight diadem from New Yorker Jimmy Carter on a decision at Madison Square Garden, March 5; but Carter recaptured it from DeMarco at San Francisco on a 15th round kayo, Nov. 17.

Jimmy Carruthers of Australia retired and gave up the bantamweight title in May. Robert Cohen of France won the vacant 118-pound crown by beating Chamroe Songkritart of Thailand on Sept. 19 at Bangkok. And in the flyweight division, little Pascual Pez became Argentina's first world boxing champion by winning the 112-pound title from Yoshio Shirai, Japan's first champ, at Tokyo on Nov. 27.

Moore Defends Successfully Meanwhile, ancient Archie Moore of San Diego, Calif., made two successful defenses of his light heavyweight crown. He outpointed ex-champ Joey Maxim again in their third title fight at Miami, Jan. 27, and knocked out the highly touted Harold Johnson of Philadelphia at Madison Square Garden in the 14th round, Aug. 11.

Incomplete returns disclose only seven fatalities during 1954 as a result of ring injuries among professionals and amateurs throughout the world.

Mr. X and Toro Perez battled to a draw in the 20-minute opener. Next week's card will feature a tag team match.

Duquesne Climbs To 2nd In Poll

By EARL WRIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—UP—Kentucky, ranked by many as one of Coach Adolph Rupp's greatest teams, received only six points short of a perfect score Tuesday in leading the United Press college basketball ratings. Duquesne replaced North Carolina State in second place.

Thirty-one of the 35 leading coaches who comprise the United Press rating board voted the underdog Wildcats tops in the country this week. Two other coaches voted Rupp's men second and two third, giving them a total of 244 of a possible 350 points.

Duquesne, winner of the Holiday Festival Tournament at Madison Square Garden, jumped seven places to second, but trailed Kentucky by 71 points. North Carolina State (12-1), which won the Dixie Classic Tournament only to be upset by Villanova Saturday night, dropped back to third.

Two Others Advance Missouri and Minnesota, two other teams that fared well in holiday week tournaments, made the other major advances among this week's top 10. Missouri (7-2) moved up four places to sixth after winning the Big Seven event, while the Gophers vaulted to 10th place after losing a one-point squeaker to North Carolina State in the Dixie Classic final.

LaSalle (9-3) and San Francisco (8-1) occupied the fourth and fifth rankings, respectively, while Utah (7-2), Illinois (6-2) and UCLA (5-2) were rated seventh to ninth in that order. The coaches based their ratings on games played through Saturday night, Jan. 1.

Kentucky's showing this week was the second best ever made in the four-year history of the United Press ratings. Rupp's 1950-51 team attracted a total of 347 points during the fourth week's voting that season.

Kentucky Takes Over Kentucky took over the No. 1 rating last week after LaSalle had topped the nation for two weeks and Illinois for one. The Wildcats were picked No. 3 in the coaches' pre-season snoop of the college basketball picture, behind LaSalle and Iowa.

Three other teams received first-place votes this week. San Francisco had two, while Duquesne (7-1) and Utah had one each.

On the basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, nine for a second and so on down to one for a 10th place ballot, here is how the coaches ranked the teams behind Kentucky:

Duquesne, 271; N. C. State, 267; LaSalle, 202; San Francisco, 183; Missouri, 110; Utah, 106; Illinois, 94; UCLA, 93, and Minnesota, 83.

Minnesota, with a 5-3 record, was the week's only newcomer to the top 10, replacing Dayton which ranked fifth last week but lost two games in the Holiday Festival in New York. Dayton dropped back to 11th place, only two points behind Minnesota.

Niagara and George Washington followed Dayton among the second 10 teams, with Iowa and Maryland tied for 16th place. Notre Dame came next, followed by another two-team tie for 17th between Cincinnati and Holy Cross. Wisconsin and Alabama rounded out the second 10 group.

Other teams among the 35 which received points this week were Wichita, Southern California, Wyoming, Louisville, Wake Forest, St. Louis, Pennsylvania, Boston Hall, Villanova, DePaul, Western Christian, West Virginia, Weber State, Duke, Houston and Washington of Seattle.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—UP—The United Press college basketball ratings (with first-place votes) were won-lost records through Jan. 1 in parentheses:

Team Points First Place Votes 1. Kentucky (21) (7-0) 271 2. Duquesne (11) (7-1) 244 3. North Carolina State (13-1) 207 4. LaSalle (9-3) 202 5. San Francisco (2) (8-1) 183 6. Missouri (7-2) 110 7. Utah (1) (7-2) 106 8. Illinois (6-2) 94 9. U.C.L.A. (6-2) 93 10. Minnesota (5-3) 83

State Title Easily Highlights Pampa Cage Activity In 1954

(Third of a series of articles dealing with the roundup of sports for the year 1954 in Pampa.)

The Pampa sports world was blessed with another state championship in the year just ended, 1954.

Coach Clifton McNeely guided the Harvester basketballers to their second consecutive Class 4A state championship last March, defeating Crozier Tech of Dallas in the finals at Austin.

In winning their second straight cage title, the Harvesters boosted their winning streak to 56 straight games.

The Green and Gold entered the 1954 campaign with 25 straight victories. They played a 24-game regular schedule and swept them all to run the streak to 52.

Then the Harvesters defeated Bowie of El Paso in two straight games in the district play, 64-52 and 75-66, to run the streak to 54.

Bond scored 875 points in 28 games for the Harvesters in 1954, an average of 31.3 per game. Bond's career total was 1,484 points in 47 games for a 31.3 average.

The Harvesters had three close calls during the 1954 campaign. The Green and Golders came from behind in the last seven seconds to defeat Amarillo, 49-41, for the District I-AAAA title.

McIlvain was the "man of the hour" for the Harvesters that night as he grabbed a rebound off the Amarillo backboard and dribbled the length of the court for a left-handed crisp shot that erased Amarillo's 41-40 lead that sent the

FRED RONER
... he picks pockets

Knife-Fork Speaker Is 'Pickpocket'

The fourth Top o' Texas Knife and Fork Club speaker of the current season has "picked" the pockets of J. Edgar Hoover, Vice President Richard Nixon, Tom Dewey, Herbert Hoover, Charles E. Wilson, Henry Ford II and the late Sen. Robert Taft.

And they all liked it. The "pickpocket" is Fred Roner who will demonstrate his prowess Friday night in the Pampa High School Auditorium, following dinner at 7:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria, Mrs. Clotilde Thompson, club secretary-treasurer, announced today.

The deadline for picking up tickets for the affair is noon Thursday in Clyde's Pharmacy, Mrs. Thompson said. Roner is a quiet, smooth-talking gentleman from Vienna who was a custom shirt-maker and amateur magician before the Nazis took over. He fled the city the day the Nazis arrived, leaving everything he owned behind him. He and his wife later managed to get on the last free train to leave Poland.

When he came to the United States, Roner decided to leave the shirt business behind him and devote his life to various phases of magic. At first, picking pockets was a very small part of his act, but it grew and grew until it became the dominant feature of the entertainment.

'Oscar' Races Competition Running Close

By ALINE MOSSY
HILLYWOOD, Jan. 4—UP—One of the tightest Oscar races in years is under way, thanks to a composer who stubbornly insisted a whistle is a song.

The tune, "The High and the Mighty," recently was ruled out of the Oscar race because it was whistled by John Wayne and not sung in the film of the same title. This left "Three Coins in the Fountain," another top hit from a film score, a sure-fire winner for the academy honors.

But Dimitri Tiomkin, composer of the rejected tune, launched a stiff battle with cries of "Jealousy!" in his indecipherable accent. Tiomkin appealed to Wayne and Warner studio, and the lyrics of "The High and the Mighty" were dubbed hurriedly onto the sound track so the song would be eligible for the Oscar derby.

"I really don't care that much about winning," the triumphant Tiomkin said. "But I just like to see fair play. The music branch of the Academy insisted the song was written. It was not theirs! It was written as song, and the Ned Washington lyrics originally were in the picture. But the director had a good shot of an airplane in the sky so they cut out the lyrics." "I think the music division of the Academy might have been a little jealous," he continued, "after all, a song that was cut out of 'A Star Is Born' was declared eligible."

Although Tiomkin modestly refuses to admit it, it was his "High Noon" from the picture of the same title that started the recent trend of hit tunes from dramatic film background scores instead of musicals. Tiomkin won an Oscar for that number and ever since has been swamped with offers to write film scores that may wind up on the hit parade.

"Studios using strange methods bringing tickets to box office," raved the composer. "Fox using Marilyn Monroe. Other studios using songs."

Tiomkin's "Return to Paradise" theme was another hit, although his "Blowing Wild" title song missed, to his surprise. He recently penned a title tune for a Green Carnation western "Strange Lady in Town," that he predicts will be a cakewalk favorite. He also is writing background music for "Land of the Pharaohs."

"Some day I would like to write an entire musical," he said. "Most critics are knocking me. Sure, I would like to do high political stuff. But movie songs have to be commercial, a little bit sexy and happy."

Men, Women Give Opinions On Resolutions

By UNITED PRESS
In case any men are having trouble with their New Year's resolutions, here are 10 suggestions from famous women.

The resolutions indicate that husbands should resolve to pay less attention to their thinning hairlines and more attention to their wives if they'd have a happy 1955.

1. Resolve to bring home an unexpected gift to your wife from time to time. (Ika Chase suggests. (Nothing expensive. Miss Chase adds. It's the thought that counts.)

2. Resolve to listen to what women have to say. Fay Emerson recommends. (The world would be better off if men listened more to women, from heads of state all the way down, Miss Emerson said.)

3. Resolve to scrutinize the present state of the world that the domination of men has brought about, and then co-operate in giving women more of the strategic spots in government, novelist Fanny Hurst suggests.

4. Resolve to stop being so patronizing to women. Tallulah Bankhead suggests. (Miss Bankhead added that she resents being briefed by men on what's in the newspapers, because "I'm as familiar with what's going on in the world as any banker, baker or bartender.")

5. Resolve to stop expecting the little woman to build up your ego, when actually you should be building up her ego. This resolution came from Barbara Ann Scott, petite ice skating star.

6. Resolve to treat your wife or girl friend better, Zsa Zsa Gabor suggested simply.

7. Resolve to take a lesson from nature, where the male birds always wear the exotic plumage, and take off your gaudy raincoats and dull colors and wear some of the colorful new men's fashions that are designed to restore the male to his rightful place, recommends Mrs. Elsie M. Murphy, president of the Stroock Fabric Co.

8. Resolve never to forget the three most important legal holidays—your wife's birthday, your anniversary and the day the new milk coats come out, advises Melanie Kahane, widely known interior decorator.

9. Resolve to encourage women to go into politics, Mrs. Katie Louchheim, director of women's activities for the Democratic National Committee, suggests.

10. Resolve to stop asking, "What takes you so long?" when a woman arrives a few minutes late for an appointment. Say instead, "You're worth waiting for," says Bess Meyerson, former Miss America and currently a television star.

Women can be pretty complacent about their New Year's resolutions, if their main object is to please men, because a survey of men shows there are few things they would like to change about American women.

Men questioned about women's resolutions for 1955 showed that the males are more timid than females about criticizing the opposite sex, that any change they do recommend is a minor one—and that they like the girls the way they are.

Here are 10 male opinions on women "with all their variations."

1. Resolve to wear more subtle perfume and more fetching aents, Frank Sinatra recommended. (The singer thinks women wear "too pungent perfumes in public places.")

2. Resolve to leave well enough alone, advises Raymond Loewy, industrial designer who has redesigned everything from telephones to automobiles. He thinks women "with all their variations, are pretty good just the way they are."

3. Resolve to do more cooking and less dieting, Burt Ives, famed singer of folk songs, suggests plaintively. Ives is also known to his friends as an expert cook and a hearty eater.

4. "As a bachelor, I wouldn't know," Rep. Joseph Martin (R-Mass.), said, dodging the issue like a politician.

5. Resolve to make up their minds as prettily, but not as often, as they make up their faces, David Niven suggests.

6. Resolve to learn more about our economic system and the rewards, and risks, involved in owning their share of American business, G. Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, suggests.

Criminal Aliens Get Boot By US

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—UP—The Immigration and Naturalization Service sent 1,486 foreign-born criminals back to their native lands during 1954. That was more than twice as many as 1953.

The service, in its annual report to Attorney General Herbert Brownell, also said 61 subversives were deported and 102 more had deportation proceedings started against them. Brownell also received a report from the Justice Department's anti-trust division that action on 54 anti-trust cases was completed last year. Sixteen of these were criminal prosecutions and 38 were civil actions.

Godfrey Tells Of Near-Death On Operating Table In 1953

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4—UP—Radio and television star Arthur Godfrey almost died during his hip operation in May, 1953, and hesitates to undergo more surgery because it would be a life or death gamble. Despite great pain, Godfrey said he is reluctant to get a date for another operation because "I might go into a state of shock and never come out of it. Or I might come out of it with only half a brain, or with my liver shot."

"I haven't told this to many people, but in that first operation, for the first 24 hours, they almost lost me during that shock period," Godfrey said in a copyrighted interview printed in TV Guide magazine.

Godfrey said he is not afraid of surgery because "God knows, I've had as much as anybody." "The only fear I have in the whole world is being a helpless invalid," he said. "I have to decide whether I should stay on these crutches or gamble again."

Godfrey revealed that he suffers agonizing pain when he walks without crutches on his television shows. He described his hip joint as "no good" mechanically and added that "one day I'll have to have the operation done again."

Italian hair cut and let hair grow long again, Rocky Graziano, ex-fighter and now NBC television performer, suggests.

9. Resolve to include at least one tight-fitting skirt split up both sides in your wardrobe, Clark Gable recommends. The movie idol said he got the idea from his recent trip to Hong Kong, where he admitted the native version of the slit skirt called the "cheongsam."

10. "No gentleman would dare to rush in where the angels tread," Robert Taylor, recent bridegroom, said nervously.

Texas Paper Accuses Hospital Of Negligence In Man's Death

HOUSTON, Jan. 4—UP—An influential East Texas newspaper, accused a Houston hospital of negligence in the death of a Lufkin man and hospital officials Monday promised a complete investigation.

H. G. Fonville, business manager of Jefferson Davis hospital, said "we can't bring the man back alive but when we have the facts, we'll see what we can do."

The victim was Lewis R. Perry, a welder. He died in the hospital Dec. 26 after being jailed for drunk driving following a minor auto accident here. An autopsy disclosed death was caused by a skull fracture and multiple brain hemorrhages.

The Lufkin Daily News, published by W. R. Baumier, one of the state's best known newspapermen, carried the charge on Page 1 of its Sunday edition. It said, in part: "Inefficiency on the part of members at the Jefferson Davis hospital in Houston appears to have been indirectly responsible for the death of Lewis R. Perry of Lufkin in that hospital on the morning of Dec. 26."

The newspaper charged that an ambulance driver left Perry lying in the street at the time of the accident Dec. 23 in belief that Perry was drunk rather than injured. When police arrived, he was taken to the hospital and an intern said he had only minor bruises. He was again jailed.

The news said a police alcoholism blood test showed Perry was not intoxicated. He was returned to the hospital the following day when fellow prisoners told a jailer Perry was "acting funny." After his death, Perry was found to have a fractured skull, head bruises, multiple brain hemorrhages, and leg bruises.

The News also charged that Perry, while still alive, was kept under guard at the hospital and police refused to allow his family to see him.

Fonville said "nobody has complained to us about this yet but
