One of Texas' Five Most Consistent Newspapers

We believe that one truth is always consistent with another truth. We endeavor to be consistent with truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

Should we, at any time, be inconsistent with these truths, we would appreciate anyone pointing out to us how we are inconsistent with these moral guides.

Wisdom Of Solomon

In the first Book of Kings, third chapter, is the recitation of one of the earliest recorded instances of moral judicial decision.

Beginning with the 16th verse, the chronicler tells us of the two rival claimants for a single male child, and the wisdom with which Solomon dispatched the issue. This is a favorite of all Sunday schools. The judgment of Solomon is even, on occasion, invoked as an example in the classrooms of our various educational endeavors.

But we have only recently been appraised of a peculiar twist which is being given to interpretation of

Readers familiar with Scripture will recall that two women laid identical claims to motherhood before Solomon. Both had borne sons, one son had died. Now both women claimed the only remaining child. Solomon called for a sword and announced that he would divide the child, giving half to each mother. Whereupon the woman who had laid the false claim agreed with Solomon's pronouncement, concurring that it was better that each should have half a child. However, the true mother could not bear to see her babe butchered in such a fashion and forthwith pleaded with Solomon to relent and, instead, to give the child entire to the false claimant. By this trick, Solomon was able to determine which woman was the real mother. To her he awarded Apparently, stress is being laid on the fact that the wisdom of Solomon is found in his pretense of seeking to cut up a LIVING BABY. Had Solomon been confronted with the job of determining ownership of land, or goods, or other personal property and inanimate things, he could have divided them with impunity, say today's twisters of morals. And thereby the value of the lesson, as a moral example is lost for all time.

The truth of the matter is that if we are to be a moral people, then no judge or king or potentate or president has any right at all to take from one who owns. to give to another who does not. The person who has a child, a ranch, a business, a suit of clothes or a bank account is the owner. He and he alone has a right to

If any person appears and lays claim to any of these things, and the judge or anyone else grants half to that false claimant, then would all moral concepts and precepts have vanished.

The real moral of the tale of Solomon is found in the fact that he awarded the WHOLE CHILD to its rightful parent. And although we are not certain of other judgments of Solomon, if he was as wise as history reports, he would have made similar judgments whether the article in dispute was an acre of ground, a herd of cows, t of armor. In each case the RIGHTFUL would have been permitted to keep EVERYTHING that he owned. The false claimant would have gotten just what he deserved, which was NOTHING AT ALL!

In fact, it is quite possible that the false owner might have been flogged for attempting to get, by a ruse, material advantages which were not his. The ancients had strong moral convictions about private ownership. The Ten Commandments not only speak up about not stealing, but even about not coveting.

The interpretation being given by some so-called modernists to this ancient tale is all that is needed to completely condone socialism and communism. If it is right for a government (judge, president, or county assessor) to take by force from those who have, in order that some who have not may receive, than the Scriptures are wrong and the entire morality of the human race is resting on a false premise.

However, if such taking is wrong, then the entire system of communism, socialism or otherwise titled share-the-wealth schemes is wrong, and must be removed from our everyday lives.

It is not possible to exist with both of these systems in vogue. We must choose. Surely we will be as wise as the true mother of the babe, in realizing that nobody wins, when all that is left is half of a dead child.

Both Sides Of The Question

that I have invariably contended that it is impossible to give what is usually called both sides of some questions. The reason is that there are hundreds of trillions of ways of being collectivistic, or doing things wrong, and only one way of doing things right - that is, getting things on a voluntary basis rather than by aggressive

Believing as I do, I was very much impressed with an article written by Hughston M. McBain that was published in The Freeman magazine. McBain presents a reason that I had not thought of. He contends that newspapers and speaker's bureaus that want both sides presented are not really convinced that there is a right side. They are still leaning towards some form of aggressive force or socialism or communism

This is the way McBain puts it: "You hear it everywhere: 'We believe in presenting both sides.'

"You hear it everywhere: 'We believe in presenting both sides.' That concept is endorsed by the overwhelming majority of persons who arrange the education and information programs for colleges, service clubs, discussion groups, business organizations, and others, They believe in presenting the case for socialism along with the case for the free market. Challenge them and they will reply: 'Objectivity and fairness demand that we present the arguments for government ownership even though we ourselves don't believe in it."

"Do objectivity and fairness demand that they present the case for coin clipping? They say no. Then why do they arrange speakers and teachers who endorse the monetization of debt? After all, the device of monetizing debt is merely a modern arrangement of the old idea of clipping coins.
"Objectivity and fairness aren't the real reasons a person arranges for the presentation of both sides. The primary reason is this: The person hasn't made up his own mind! He doesn't arrange for a defense of coin clipping because he himself has repudiated the idea of coin clipping. He arranges to have the case for monetization of debt presented because he himself has not yet repudiated that method of financing government. "Objective persons have repudiated the ideas of astrology, slavery, alchemy, witchcraft, and the divine right of kings. They no longer believe that the earth is flat. Therefore, no objective person can, in good conscience and fairness, be responsible for having those ideas presented, as valid, In like manner, if a person has rejected the ideas of government ownership and government controls, advocates of those ideas

"The Deacon's Board of a colored Baptist Church," relates Sam Hobbs, Alabama congressman, "called on me in my law office a few days after I had taken office as Judge of the 4th Alabama Circuit.

They wished to employ me to represent their church in an equity suit just filed in my court.

My only possible answer was, "Thank you very much for the honor, rentlemen, but having become the judge of this court I can no longer accept employment in any case."

"Yes. sir." replied the chairman of the distinguished and solemn group, "we knows that; that's the special reason we wants you on our side."
