

TRICK OR TREATERS TRICKED

The 'spooks' who called at the house of News photographer Tommie Ellis were not only treated but were tricked at the same time and above is evidence of the trick they were in store for. The spooks knocked, the door was opened and all of a sudden a blinding flash caught the spooks in action. Spooks on the left are Kenneth Butler, John Yates and Kitty Butler. Then too some of the spooks were more scared than scary as is shown by two-year-old Sammy Dale Carlton, second photo, in the third photo are Wilbur, Mahota and Eugene Hapeman and Diane and Darla Ellis. In the photo on the right, Debra Ellis is shown handing treats to unidentified spooks that were on the prowl last eve.

Pagent Wants Jails

Since the problem of juvenile delinquency is still with us, Pageant magazine has shoved aside some of its cheesecake and printed a provocative piece entitled 'Time to Punish Delinquent Parents?" The item appears in the October issue. Hugh Sherwood is listed as the Pageant should stick to cheesecake.

Sherwood, instead of presenting an unbiased and objective view of the problem, flings a gauntlet in the face of his reader by suggesting boldly: "Many authoritles on juvenile delinquency feel that parents should be held criminally responsible for the acts of their children." While admitting that JD is a growing problem, and while quoting from a number of eminent persons whose jobs tend to bring them in contact with wayward youngsters, the author reduces the "many" to three.

Justice Wilfred A. Waltemade of New York City's Domestic Relations Court, who in a fit of petulance sentenced three parents to jail on one Friday afternoon; Roger A. Pfaff, Los Angeles Municipal Court judge who is quoted as saying: "Make parents criminally responsible for the criminal acts of their children," and Justice Matthew J. Diserio, also of New York, who apparently doesn't really want to send parents to jail but would would like to scare them into thinking that is where they are going.

Of the three only Pfaff wants to perform that interesting legal maneuver of punishing a person who may be guilty of a sin of OMISSION by holding him responsible for the sin of COMMISSION of another.

To give Pageant due credit, the magazine also printed a letter from Judge William B. McKesson, presiding judge of Los Angeles Juvenile Court, who utters the most sane and sensible words with respect to the problem when he says: "I am apposed to the theory that criminal responsibility for acts of children can be imputed to adults. If a parent is to be criminally punished it should be for the parent's crime and not the child's delinquent conduct. If the parent has contributed to the delinquency of the minor, certainly the parent should be punished. But that is an entirely different matter than punishing parents because their children are delinquent."

However, the article by Sherwood brushes off the logic and argument of Judge McKesson and pumps valiantly for some way to send parents to jail.

Now, If the editors of Pageant magazine and Mr. Hugh Sherwood want to perform a real service, they might spend a little additional space in some upcoming issue revealing that: 1. Since policemen cannot seem to make delinquent juveniles toe the line, it is unlikely that unarmed parents can do much better; 2. That JD springs from a vast feeling of insecurity in the child which insecurity is fostered by our government schools with their emphasis on group thinking, crowd culture, and mass popularity, and their de-emphasis on true morality; individual worth and the spirit of competition; 3. That children learn by example, not only from their parents but from the government. And in this latter case they quickly observe that the compulsions of government tend to make parents evasive, fearful and unctuous. Since these are far from admirable traits, the children learn to disrespect their parents, even as their parents have learned to have disrespect for the law.

If Pageant would help solve the problem of JD, let it: 1. Work to expand private and independent schools so that government coercion is taken out of education; 2. Work to reduce the size and scope of our federal government, thereby freeing the people of the United States, and 3. Let it adopt the philosophy of individual liberty so that self-relience, self-responsibility and integrity can become a regular portion of its contents.

THE NATION'S PRESS

THE LEGION AND UNESCO (The Wall Street Journal)

There is current a great deal of criticism of the American Legion for condemning Unesco on the versive" educational activities. There is, quite possibly, some room for criticism of the Legion itself for adopting the censorial resolution without debate on a special committee report which last spring said Unesco was not harmful. But even Legion critics admit that a debate would not have changed the temper of the delegates; the Legion twice before has gone on record as opposed to Unesco. The parliamentary maneuvers are thus beside the important question. That question is, why is the Legion opposed to Unesco?

The agency's very name United Nation's Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization-marks it as a group with a mission which, if it is to be successful, must engage in propaganda.

Well, any organization that engages in propaganda to sell itself immediately invites counter-propaganda. Unesco has issued manuals for teachers and guides for the revision of textbooks. Half a dozen organizations are busy selling Unesco and its proposals to the public. It is no wonder, then, that opposition has developed in a naon where in a gathering of any ten of its people there is likely to be some debate about whether t looks like rain.

Indeed, it is not difficult to unerstand the Legion's opposition to stands in the way of fuller world understanding. The Legion is composed of veterans who fought for this nation in a number of wars and who are thus disciplined to see in nationalism and patriotism the same dangers advocates of world government see.

One of Unesco's purposes is, of course, to promote sympathy for the United Nations as well as for its own proposals by avowing its intention to go to work on the "minds of men." This also is propaganda, and it also invites the expression of some opposite views.

Anyone the least bit familiar with Unesco's objectives knows that it is engaged in many different controversial fields, and that its programs have met with a lot of opposition. The Economist of London not so long back observed that "Unesco started life eight years ago with the fixed idea that it must have a finge: in almost every conceivable pie . . . and the impression has inevitably been created that it is no more than a happy hunting ground for

The American Legion thinks Unesco is more than that. But each of the views certainly acknowled edges that the agency is imbued with a rather active missionary spirit in a way that is certain to inspire active criticism.

Just now the Legion is being attacked quite bitterly by some people who are convinced that Unesco and the UN are the only answers to all the problems of the world. That, of course, is their privilege; but it is also the privilege of the Legion to say it thinks Unesco is frying to settle the problems in the wrong way.

maxim which obviously embodies this doctrine. Quotes Blackstone

"Do we not continually hear them quote Blackstone's assection that 'no subject of England can be constrained to pay any aids or taxes even for the defense of the realm or the support of the government, but such as we imposed by his own consent, or that of his representative in parliament?' And what does this mean? It means say they, that every man should have a vote. True: but it means much more. If there is any sense in words it is a distinct enuncia tion of the very right now contended for. In affirming that a man may not be taxed unless he has directly or indirectly given his consent, it affirms that he may refuse to be so taxed; and to refuse to be taxed, is to cut all connection with the state. Perhaps it will be said that this consent is not specific, but a general one, and that the citizen is understood to have assented to everything his representatives may do, when he voted for him. But suppose he did not vote for him; and on the contrary did all in his power to get elected some one holding opposite views -what then? The reply will probably be that, by taking part in such an election, he tacitly agreed to abide by the decision of the majority. And how if he did not vote at all? Why then he cannot justly complain of any tax, seeing that he made no protest against its imposition. So, curious ly enough, it seems that he gave his consent in whatever way he acted-whether he said yes, whether he said no, or whether he remained neuter! A rather awkward doctrine this. Here stands an unfortunate citizen who is asked if he will pay money for a certain proffered advantage; and whether he employs the only means of expressing his refusal or does not employ it, we are told that he practically agrees; if only the number of others who agree is greater than the number of those who dissent. And thus we are introduced to the novel principle that A's consent to a thing is not determined by what A says, but by what B may happen to say! 'It is for those who quote Blackstone to choose between this absurdity and the doctrine above set forth. Either his maxim implies the right to ignore the state, or it sheer nonsense "6. There is a strange heterogeneity in our political faiths. Systems that have had their day, and are beginning here and there to let the daylight through, are patched with modern notions utterly unlike in quality and colour; and men gravely display these systems, wear them, and walk about in them, quite unconscious of their grotesqueness. This transition state of ours, partaking as does equally of the past and the future, breeds hybrid theories exhibiting the oddest union of bygone despotism and coming freedom. Here are types of the old organization curiously disguised by germs of the new-peculiarities showing adaptation to a preceding state modified by rudiments that prophesy of something to come-making altogether so chaotic a mixture of relationships that there is no saying to what class these births of the age should be referred.

"As ideas must of necessity bear the stamp of the time, it is useless to lament the contentment with which these incongruous beliefs are held. Otherwise it would seem unfortunate that men do not pursue to the end the trains of reasoning which have led to these partial modifications. In the present case, for example, consistency would force them to admit that. on other points besides the one just noticed, they hold opinions and use arguments in which the right to ignore the state is in-

"For what is the meaning of Dissent? The time was when a man's faith and his mode of worship were as much determinable by law as his secular acts; and, according to provisions extant in statute-book, are so still, Thanks to the growth of a Protestant spirit, however, we have ignored the state in this matterwholly in theory, and partly in practice. But how have we done so? By assuming an attitude which, if consistently maintained, mplies a right to ignore the state entirely. Observe the positions of the two parties. This is your creed,' says the legislator; 'you must believe and openly profess what is here set down for you.' I shall not do anything of the kind,' answers the nonconformist; 'I will go to prison rather.' 'Your religious ordinances,' pursues the legislator, 'shall be such as we have prescribed. You shall attend the churches we have endowed, and adopt the ceremonies used in them.' 'Nothing shall induce me to do so,' is the reply; 'I altegether deny your power to dictate to me in such matters, and mean to resist to the uttermost.' 'Lastly.'

adds the legislator, 'we shall renew in Washington: Sen. Alexander Wiley, the Republican from Chippewa Falls, Wis., observes in his weekly newsletter in commenting on the foreign ministers conference at Geneva: While we constantly look for a break in the cold war, we must remain ever mindful that 'a bear can kill with a hug' and continue to operate from a position of strength."

Another law - maker, Rep Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio, sent her newsletter in from French Equatorial Africa. Mrs. Bolton is the ranking Republican on the subcommittee on the Near East and Africa. She reported that hospital and health conditions in the part of Africa she has seen are pitifully inadequate. In the cities people who are sick line up all day long just to "get looked at."

ONLY IN THE 56 FORD...

THUNDERBIRD POWER, THUNDERBIRD STYLING and LIFEGUARD DESIGN

In the low-price field

You can't buy safer!

And here's why. Ford alone brings you Lifeguard Design, a whole new family of safety features to give you extra protection in case of accident. There's a new Lifeguard deep-center steering wheel to help cushion the driver from the steering post; * new Lifeguard double-grip door latches to reduce the danger of doors springing open under impact; *\psi new double-swivel Lifeguard mirror that "gives," for greater safety; * new optional Lifeguard padding material to cushion control panel and sun visors and lessen shock of impact; * optional floor-anchored seat belts to help hold passengers securely in their seats.

In any class

You can't buy better!

The '56 Ford inherited its beauty from the Thunderbird, It's long and low-a fine car in every graceful line. And you can have the Thunderbird's "lightning," too, at no extra cost for the new Thunderbird Y-8 engine is the standard eight in all Fairlane and Station Wagon models! Here's power that gives you split-second passing ability and hill-climbing "Go." Come in for your Test Drivel You're sure to find many more reasons why you can't buy better than when you buy Ford. New luxury interiors . . . fine exterior finishes ... a quality "feel" throughout ... all add up to make Ford the fine car at half the fine-car price.

It's the fine car at half the fine-car price!

The windows are being manufactured and distributed by Plains Aluminum Industries, P.O. Box 38. Panhandle, Texas, telephone 2021 or 3761, collect, and a representative will call and tell about this sensational window, Mr. Smith invites prospective dealers to contact him

Mr. Smith, who started in the weather stripping business 21 years ago has had the window on his drawing board for years, perfect ing every detail before presenting it to the public. He started out with one man in his shop and now has five working full time, and has put construction on an assembly

The new storm window is weather-stripped, has no inserts, cleans from the outside, fits behind the outer screen so that it is invisible from the street, and works with the wind. When the wind blows the window tightens.

You can keep it on the year round, making your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. And there'll be no sweating of windows and walls

And the best part of it is the cost. You just can't afford not to investigate this sensational new window or door.

Mr. Smith also is distributor for Kaiser Aluminum shade screens that keep out the heat and save on air conditioning costs. He has just completed a job at the Childress tion's highways every year for the until 6 p.m. past 22 years with the exception of when there was gas rationing.
