The girl was last seen waiting for a bus in front of a university building at about 11:15 p. m. Friday night. Two witnesses said she was talking to a tall Negro.

The murdered girl, who recently won a local Masonic beauty conest, had left her part-time job in he student library at 10 p. m. Her father, an insurance executive, had planned to meet her, but was late. Police have been unable to pin down the time of the slaving, except to establish that Carolyn died minutes after she was shot. The shots were fired at close range, three of them into her side, indicating she may have been sitting in a car when she was killed,

Retreat From Learning

Courage in almost any form has an especial appeal

And our hats are off to the clear-eved former high school teacher, Joan Dunn of New York City, for her daring and truthful betrayal of life as it exists today in government schools.

Author Dunn has penned a scathingly frank treatise on what it is that is wrong with our compulsive bureaucrat-laden, hopelessly inept school system. Her work is called "Retreat from Learning" (McKay, $3.00) and bears the stamp of a brave woman who has faced up to the enemy and been overcome by the odds against her. Still undaunted, though retired from what she had anticipated would be her life work, she has fired this parting salvo at the mincing experts who don't want to teach the subject matter but prefer to teach the "whole

Her retreat from teaching has the classic quality of Roland's last echoing blast on his horn as he endeavored to save the main body of troops by a valiant rear guard action in the Pyrenees. It may prove to be a more effective foray against the collectivist enemy than any frontal attack she might have manned.

Under pragmatic educational urges, she reveals, "Johnny" has become the man of the hour and he knows it. Laws compel his attendance in school. Laws also restrict the teacher to a point of importance bordering on incompetency.

She relates that on one occasion she told a young man in her class to take off his coat. His response, "You can ask me to take off my jacket, but you can't tell me to," is indicative of the contempt many young people feel for the government school system.

Says Dunn: "The school is a clubhouse, a place of amusement, a convenient place for getting cheap lunches, meeting friends . . ." "I think that many children made themselves problem children simply because they saw how important they could become.

Dunn reveals that at the outset, having been warned that she must not have conflicting opinion or she wouldn't get her degree, she was heartily in accord with 'modern educational theories." Her four years at the front of her charges revealed to her that these theories

Students are not taught to seek objective truth. Instead they learn the pragmatists' sliding scale . . . anything is moral if it works. In place of discipline, the student learns that his whim is law. In place of sincerely teaching a child the subject matter she should learn, of the immature fledgling "whose interests center on sex, noise and violence.

This new methodology has raised a breed of children afraid of no one, awed by no rule or regulation. The prevailing idea regarding texts is that if one is too difficult, get an easier, more 'modern' one. The print gets larger, the pictures more numerous, and I fear that the next and final development will be the substitution of pictures for words." (Educational TV?)

"Language faces a similar dissolution . . . and the niceties of thought will disappear with the words to express them and the books in which others have expressed them before. Unfortunately, many educators today are delighted with such developments, for they feel they are getting 'to the people' at last. It is rather the people who are getting at them, with the results that are to be expected. The educational level sinks to the lowest common denominator, and ironically, no one benefits, not even the most ignorant, for he finds his ignorance accepted as the norm.

Those who unthinkingly continue to support government schools in their minds are simply not willing to face the truth of the deplorable decadence in our regimented halls of learning. It is no wonder that sex gangs, sadistic killings, dope addicts and worse come streaming from our bureaucratic, tax-supported, dogmatic, government-dominated child club houses. And the solution, as we have pointed out repeatedly, cannot be reached by a simple revamping of the outrageous collectivized labyrinth of uselessness we call public schools.

THE NATION'S PRESS

DIMITROV TELLS HOW STOOGES PERFORM FOR COMMUNISTS

(The Southern Conservative)

Back in 1951, Scribner's published The Yenan Way by Eudocio Ravines, former Comintern agent, in which he quoted from Georgi Dimitroy concerning infiltration methods of the Communists in countries which they desire to bring into their ranks.

As one reads this dissertation by Dimitrov, the picture of hundreds upon hundreds of highly-placed Americans flashes across the mind and we can understand why these persons act as they do. This is what Dimitrov said: "As Soviet power grows, there will be a greater aversion to communist parties everywhere. So we must practice the techniques of withdrawal. Never appear in the foreground; let our friends do the

"We must always remember that one sympathizer is generally worth more than a dozen militant Communists, A university professor who, without being a party member, lends himself to the interests of the Soviet Union, is worth more than a hundred men with party cards. A writer of reputation, or a retired general, are worth more than 500 poor devils who don't know any better than to get themselves beaten up by the police.

"Every man has his value, his merit. The writer who, without being a party member, defends the Soviet Union, the union leader who is outside our ranks but defends Soviet international policy. is worth more than a thousand party members.

"Those who are not party members or marked as Communists enjoy greater freedom of action. This dissimulated activity which awakens no resistance is much more effective than a frontal attack by the Communists. "Our friends must confuse the adversary for us, carry out our main directives, mobilize in favor of our campaigns people who do not think as we do, and whom we could never reach. In this tactic we must use everyone who comes near us; and the number grows every day."

BETTER JOBS

I want to continue to quote from Muzzey's "A History of Our Coun-

The American Crime Of Crimes

try," which is reputed to be in more high schools than any other history textbook. The last issue brought us up to the Roosevelt administration On Page 556, under the Roose-

administration, Muzzey

"President Roosevelt was sworn into office by Chief Justice Hughes shortly after noon on March 4, 1933. In his brief inaugural address he condemned the evil practices in industry and finance which had brought us to distress in the midst of plenty, and, in words of confidence recalling Woodrow Wilson's inaugural of twenty years before, asked the people to join him in a 'national consecration' to the work of restoring prosperity through united and unselfish ef-

Here, again, Muzzey leaves the impression in the minds of the youth that the depression was due to the practices in industry and finance. It never seems to dawn on Muzzey that the depression and the unemployment were due to laws passed some twenty years before, that Muzzey regarded as reforms and beneficial; that the depression was due to the government passing such laws as the Clayton Amendment to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, the Federal Reserve System and the 16th Amendment that permitted Congress to rob the big producers to buy votes to keep the politicians.

It's certainly too bad to compel children to attend school and then indoctrinate them with hate against men with initiative, to indoctrinate them to believe that the government can plan the lives of the citizens better than the citizens themselves can plan their

On Page 558 he writes: "Even during the prosperous years of the 1920's the poverty of the rural sections of the country had caused the failure of more than five thousand of the smaller and weaker

The cause of the failure of the smaller and weaker banks was because the bankers had bad judgment and made long-term loans on farm prices that were high during inflated war period. And of course, as explained before, due to the Clayton Amendment, that permitted the city workers, by labor monopoly, to rob all those outside of the labor monopoly.

On Page 561 he indorses the welfare state and denies that man must live by the sweat of his brow when he writes: "An immediate crisis faced the country in the millions of men without employment or hope of employment. Private charity and local relief were insufficient to take care of the destitute. So the strong credit of the national government must be put behind the relief efforts?" Then he goes on to relate how several laws were passed that permitted the President to go into business competition with private enterprise under the guise of taking care of unemployment.

Mr. Muzzey doesn't seem to realize that Roosevelt DID NOT enact or recommend any laws to correct the laws that had brought on this great scourge of unemployment, All Roosevelt did was to have the laws enacted that made it impossible to permanently return to full employment.

He got transatory results by going off the Gold Standard and repudiating debts and cutting wages by issuing confetti, irredeemable paper money. But Muzzey never seems to have any conception as to the cause of the unemployment.

Of course Muzzey does, like all collectivists do in their text used to indoctrinate the youth of the land, print a lot of pictures of new buildings built by the government but doesn't explain where the money comes from to build these buildings. He doesn't explain that this money came from people that could have used the money and energy much better than the politicians could use it. He doesn't explain that it teaches the renters of these buildings to believe in a permanent advantage over others: that they are entitled to get things at less than cost by taxing those that had enough initiative to live by the "sweat of

After telling about what he regarded as benefits of government housing, he gives pictures of dams constructed by the government.

On Page 562 he indorses the TVA by saying: "Ir time of war its resources might be wholly taken over by the government. Its work of reclamation, farm and forest reconstruction, and furnishing of electrical power at much cheapened rates was expected to benefit half a dozen or more states in the valley of the Tennessee and its tributaries."

Muzzey doesn't seem to see that because the government interfered with the natural development of land and made irrigation available to farmers at less than cost, we now have $7 billion dollars worth of su dus food that we are paying millions of dollars a day storage on while it rots.

Nor does he enlighten the student that the cheaper rates, if there be cheaper rates, in the halfdozen states in the Tennessee valley was paid for by the tax payers in the 42 other states.

He never really explains how bureaucrats who have never had any experience in producing power can produce it for less than men who spent their own money and had spent years and years in studying the electric power busi-

He simply said that they had the right of every American to engage in politics, but urged them, in effect, to be reasonable, not emotional, in choosing sides. With the Democrats planning a grandstand play to the workingmen, especially if Harry S. Truman and Governor Averell Harriman dominate the convention, this neglect at the Republican "summit" could prove serious.

Eisenhower has seemingly shown the same disinterest in a farm program to halt falling prices. He has not huddled with Secretary Ezra Taft Benson since his return to Gettysburg. It has not been brought up at Cabinet meetings at Camp David.

Benson has promised to submit an agricultural formula at the January session of Congress. So far, however, it contemplates nothing new or striking. He will advocate the old scheme of a "soil bank," which is a palliative rather than a solution. He will favor more exports at competitive prices, especially of wheat and cotton, but the State Department blocked such a surplus disposal effort when he tried it last year.

Meanwhile, the White House will oppose the farm bloc's and the Democrats' demand for a return by free, private enterprise in the competitive system. He doesn't seem to know that all our progress has come from competition and not from government monopo-

When you get right down to it isn't the child whose parents spend most of their evenings at cocktail parites in their striving for social recognition just as underprivileged as the child whose parents spend their evenings in a cheap bar? Isn't a child whose dad is so busy being successful that he has no time to be a father just as much without a father's guidance as the kid whose father is an

Isn't a girl just as under-privileged if her parents let her do whatever she claims the crowd is doing because they want so desperately for her to be popular as is the girl whose parents rarely bother to ask any questions at all?
